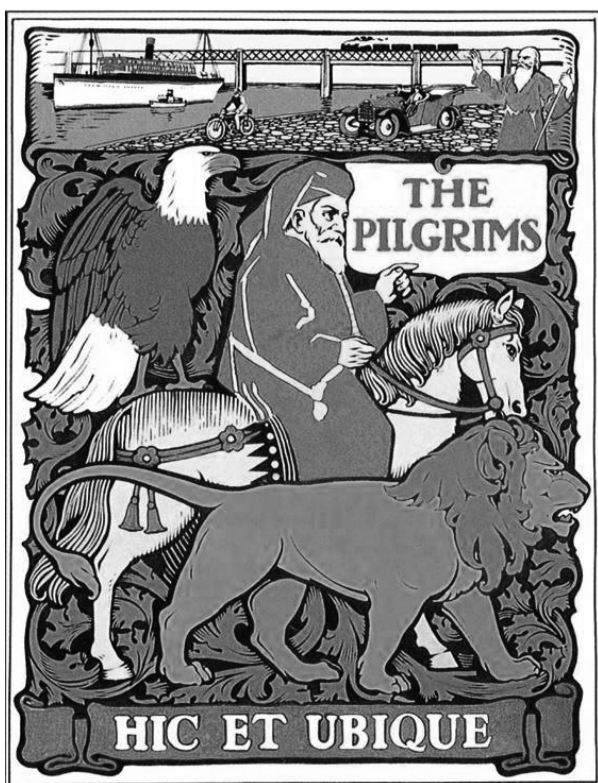

Figure 2: “The Pilgrims Society” name was intentionally adopted in 1902 to deceive Americans by evoking the historic Plymouth Pilgrims and the good, warm feelings of Thanksgiving—not the ruthless abuse of debt-slavery and human trafficking. In reality, it referred to the pagan Babylonian Rādhānites (or “Radknights”) — merchant-bankers documented in ancient Arab histories as well as in the English Domesday Book of 1086 AD — who had migrated from the ancient Silk Road to Britain, founded the City of London in 1066 AD, and venerated Babylonian demon-gods such as Mammon, Ba’al, Moloch, Satan, Lucifer, and Ahriman. This “Pilgrims” title concealed their secret objective to annex America back into the British Empire. Source: Pilgrims Society. Fair Use for critique, commentary, and education. Foreword

Unmasking a Sinister Plot to Steal America's Soul

Few figures in history burn as brightly as Lillian Scott Troy, a relentless warrior for truth whose saga unfolds in Lillian Scott Troy: She Unmasked The British Pilgrims Society Plot to Annex America. This explosive narrative rips open a chilling conspiracy masterminded by Cecil Rhodes and the Rothschild merchant-banking syndicate, the dark architects of the Pilgrims Society's secret executive council that was hell-bent on subjugating the United States to British rule. Lillian, a San Francisco News journalist born in San Francisco in 1882, stumbled into this treacherous web in 1908 while covering the First Imperial Press Conference 1909 in London. What began as a reporting assignment morphed into a fierce crusade to expose the Society's 24-step scheme to crush American sovereignty—a truly Satanic blueprint rooted in Rhodes's vision of a unified Anglo-Saxon empire, powered by the Rothschilds' (and others') unmatched financial and political clout.

The Pilgrims Society, founded in 1902, was a self-styled secret society uniting elitists like Lord Walter Rothschild, one of the financial puppet masters; the Earl of Rosebery, bound to the Rothschilds by a massive inheritance making him one of the richest men in Victorian and Edwardian England; Henry de Worms (Baron Pirbright), a maternal Rothschild; and key figures like yellow journalist William T. Stead, Boer War butchers Lords Alfred Milner and General Roberts, and British-Israel founder Earl Arthur Balfour. The Rothschilds, wielding wealth amassed through stock manipulations and ventures like the British South Africa Company, which dominated global gold, silver, and diamond markets, bankrolled Rhodes's imperial corporate ambitions. Their elitist executive council orchestrated a cunning strategy to control banking, media, education, intelligence, and biological research, targeting America for reintegration into the British Empire.

Lillian's 1912 published exposé of their 24-step strategy, later cemented in the Congressional Record in 1940 by Congressman Dr. Jacob Thorkelson (Montana 1st), unveiled a ruthless plot to erode American independence through media censorship, financial leverage, political alliances, and social engineering. Her scathing articles in outlets like The San Francisco Leader branded American collaborators—she dubbed the “Benedict Arnold Society,” including Andrew Carnegie, J. P. Morgan, Paul Warburg, Elihu Root, and John D. Rockefeller—as Pilgrims Society traitors to America, like Benedict Arnold was during the Revolution. Despite facing secret police harassment, censorship, and deportation in 1919, Lillian's unyielding commitment to truth, the American republic, women's rights, and Irish independence forged her legacy as a defender of liberty.

Lillian's legacy, discovered by researchers Michael McKibben, Tyla Gabriel, and me, traces the Pilgrims Society's grip through seismic events: the rise of the British Marconi Wireless monopoly, the Empire Press Union's creation in 1909, the founding of MI6, the Titanic's sinking in 1912, both the Federal Reserve's and Anti-Defamation League's establishment in 1913, World War I's orchestration (1914–1918), the Bolshevik Revolution in 1917, the League of Nations' founding in 1919, the Radio Corporation of America's formation in 1919, led by Pilgrims members FDR and David Sarnoff, and ARPANET's evolution into the internet by the 1980s. It salutes Lillian's heroic stand, sounding a clarion call to protect American sovereignty from the Society's pervasive political and economic sabotage.

In her final days, cast out and scorned by the Empire's minions, Lillian Scott Troy stood unbowed, her spirit a blazing fortress of defiance, her pen slashing through the lies of tyranny with the fierce brilliance of a warrior who cared not for her own legend but for the sacred fire of American liberty. She laughed in the face of exile, shrugged off the venom of censorship, and poured her genius into a relentless battle against the Pilgrims Society's insidious grip, her heart ablaze with the conviction that freedom's pulse must never falter. Let us weep not for her sacrifices, but for our own complacency if we fail to heed her clarion call—rise, defend the republic, and crush the chains of oppression she so fearlessly exposed, for Lillian's fight was never for herself, but for the soul of a nation unbound.

Preface

Unveiling the British Pilgrims Society and Its American Branch: Exposing the Demonic Dream to Enslave Humanity

History's warning resounds: those blind to its lessons are condemned to repeat its darkest horrors. This book unveils the British Pilgrims Society and its American "branch," the sinister architects of what is generically called "the deep state" and their global network, driven by a malevolent ambition to extinguish the divine spark in humanity (Genesis 1:27). Lillian Scott Troy, a fearless journalist, exposed their audacious plot to enslave America and the world to a reorganizing British-led empire, yet her legacy lies buried in obscurity. Why?

The British Pilgrims Society and its American branch, as they call it in their ballyhooed centennial history, operate in plain sight, cloaking their influence with cunning secrecy. In 1963, after silencing President John F. Kennedy—whose father, Joseph P. Kennedy, a Pilgrim, could not shield his son's defiance—they unleashed a diabolical weapon: the term "conspiracy theory." This insidious propaganda, born of Lucifer's self-delusion, disarms truth-seekers, deflecting scrutiny from their schemes. With irrefutable, judicially recognizable evidence, we unmask the British Pilgrims Society and its American branch as enemies of freedom, their relentless assault—driven by demonic forces centered on Lucifer (self-delusion), Satan (power), Mammon (usury), Moloch (greed, human sacrifice), and Ahriman (scientific materialism)—a direct affront to God's creation. Their greed-fueled agenda, rooted in Moloch's demand for human sacrifice, manifests in their exploitation of media, finance, education, and science, as seen in their 1909 Imperial Press Conference, where the British Pilgrims Society and its American branch fused these forces to dominate global narratives at humanity's expense.

The British People vs. The British Pilgrims

Let me be clear: this book is not anti-British at its root. My family and I cherish our nearly six years (1977–1982) in Malmesbury, Wiltshire, and nearby Lea and Minety, United Kingdom, where I served as European director of Living Sound, an American gospel music group focused on sharing the Good News of Jesus Christ, with a special calling to the communist world. Our first two children were born at Royal United Hospital in Bath, Avon, under exceptional care, and we were embraced with Christian love by the British people with whom we worked. At our peak, we managed two jazz, rock, and pop-style music groups performing across the United Kingdom, Ireland, Western and Eastern Europe, and the then Soviet Union (Russia today), spreading the message of Christ's love and forgiveness. Our board of trustees—comprising a Watford Ford dealer, a Bristol solicitor, a Cheshire architect, a Swindon advertising executive, a Macclesfield entrepreneur, our Anglican parish priest, and a London chartered surveyor—supported us as family. We reciprocated, working interdenominationally with churches, schools, civic groups, media, publishers, producers, prisons, and even holiday resorts, rarely engaging with the British aristocracy.

One notable exception was Raymond Hervey Jolliffe, 5th Baron Hylton (1932–). In 1982, he invited me to his Ammerdown House in Kilmersdon, near Bath. In his vast library of leather-bound gems, he praised Living Sound's work, particularly in Northern Ireland, where he later served as president of the Northern Ireland Association for Care and Resettlement of Offenders (NIACRO) since 1988. He declared, "Living Sound's ministry in Ireland has done more to foster peace, love, and forgiveness than all our efforts in the House of Lords." He also revealed that he was the anonymous contributor of quarterly £300 cash donations (more than $600 US dollars back then), sent in unmarked envelopes for two years, solving a long-standing mystery in our office.

Lillian Scott Troy's story reflects a similar duality: rare support from MPs, congressmen, and aristocrats like Baron von Horst and Rep. Thorkelson, as we received from Baron Hylton, and the occasional American like the US Embassy chaplain in Moscow, as well as Soviet Olympic composer Alexandra Pakhmutova, contrasted with relentless persecution from elitist members of the British Pilgrims Society and its American branch (including Bolsheviks and Maoists), alongside their English-Speaking Union. As Lillian exposed at the 1909 Imperial Press Conference, the Society's agenda—driven by Lucifer's self-delusion, Satan's lust for power, Mammon's usury, Moloch's greed and human sacrifice, and Ahriman's scientific materialism—fused media, finance, and science to control global narratives, sacrificing humanity's well-being for dominance. This book calls balls and strikes, to use an American analogy, exposing these forces, while affirming our love for the British people we served alongside, who suffer under aristocrats inhabited by demonic forces: Lucifer (self-delusion), Satan (power), Mammon (usury), Moloch (greed, human sacrifice), and Ahriman (scientific materialism). Armed with these truth-tools, we are called to forge better, more loving societies across the globe, united in faith and compassion, free from the demonic dream of the British Pilgrims Society and its American branch to enslave us.

Prologue

Lillian Scott Troy's Bold Quest to Thwart a Global Scheme

In 1908, Lillian Scott Troy, a journalist of fierce courage from San Francisco, ventured to London to cover the First Imperial Press Conference of 1909 for her employer The San Francisco News Company. This mission plunged her into the diabolical core of a meticulously crafted plot led by Cecil Rhodes and the Rothschild merchant-banking family, who leveraged their vast wealth to dominate global affairs through the Pilgrims Society.

The Rothschilds, as the co-masterminds of the Society's elitist executive council, wove this shadowy aristocratic network, exploiting Rhodes's vision of a federal, imperial, corporate British Empire to reclaim control over the United States. They seek to turn back the clock on King George III's tyranny—the "Royal Brute of Britain," as Thomas Paine called him in Common Sense—that drove the American colonies to revolt in 1776.

Lillian's dogged pursuit of truth, captured in her explosive exposés and later immortalized in the Congressional Record, stands as a powerful testament to her resolve in defending American sovereignty against this formidable conspiracy . . .

and hers was no theory. She discovered it firsthand, from the mouths of the brutes themselves.

Picture this: all the British and American robber barons, utterly obsessed with dragging America back under the British Empire's thumb, were clustered right there in London—either residing in splendor at her own hotel or just a stone's throw away, a short walk, carriage, or train ride from being grilled by Lillian, that American lioness. Mere chance? Absolutely not!

God's hand was guiding Lillian, His angels clashing with dark powers to safeguard her. The enduring lesson for us today:

“I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me” (Philippians 4.13).

Chapter 1

Fearless Guardian of Truth

Lillian Scott Troy, with her sharp gaze and unyielding spirit, embodied the fire of a true guardian, rising like a phoenix from the ashes of a devastated city to challenge the world's most cunning powerbrokers. Born on May 6, 1882, in San Francisco, Lillian was molded by a city pulsing with resilience after the catastrophic 1906 earthquake and fire, which obliterated 80 percent of its landscape. Her father, Patrick Troy, an Irish immigrant who fled British oppression, instilled in her a fierce commitment to freedom and justice. Her mother, a staunch advocate for education, nurtured Lillian's insatiable curiosity, urging her to probe ideas with unrelenting rigor. Unlike her brothers—Edward, an attorney bent on reforming the legal system, and Robert, a prominent figure in San Francisco's elitist circles—Lillian carved a unique path fueled by her unquenchable thirst for truth. Educated in the city's public schools, she devoured historical, philosophical, and political texts, sharpening an intellect that would later challenge the world's most powerful structures with impressive bravery.

From Rubble to Renown: A Journalism Powerhouse Emerges

By 1906, Lillian Scott Troy had risen to prominence as a trailblazing journalist with The San Francisco News Company, chronicling the city's rebirth from the earthquake's devastation. Her razor-sharp articles in Overland Monthly showcased her knack for dissecting complex

Figure 6: The San Francisco earthquake and fire occurred on April 18, 1906, at approximately 5:12 a.m. local time. The earthquake, with an estimated magnitude of 7.9 on the Richter scale, struck along the San Andreas Fault, devastating the city. The subsequent fires, fueled by broken gas lines and other sources, burned for several days, with the most intense destruction occurring from April 18 to April 21, 1906. social and political issues, exposing systemic injustices, and championing the marginalized.

In November 1908, at age twenty-six, her growing fame secured her a high-stakes assignment to cover the First Imperial Press Conference of 1909 in London. Arriving on November 5, 1908, in Southampton, she took the two-hour train ride to London's Waterloo Station adjacent to the Old Vic Theatre (former Royal Coburg Theatre), and a short carriage ride to the newly-constructed Waldorf Hotel in Aldwych, West End, where her employer billeted her, poised to report on Britain and the news conference for her American audiences. This mission launched her lifelong war against global elitists in Britain and America determined to annex America back into the British Empire.

They meticulously orchestrated a shock-and-awe campaign to promote the virtues of

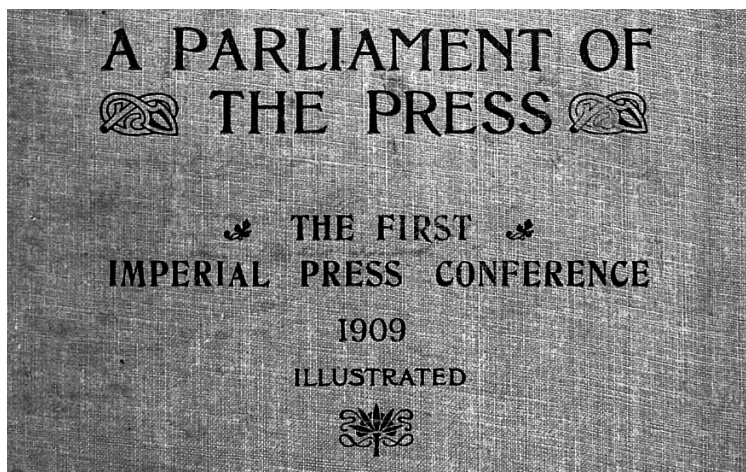

Figure 7: The Waldorf Hilton, opened in 1908 with funding from William Waldorf Astor, reflects the transatlantic influence of elitist families, a theme central to the Pilgrims Society's activities in the early twentieth century. Lillian Scott Troy checked into this new hotel on Nov. 5, 1908, representing her employer The San Francisco News Company to cover Britain for her readers, including the gathering of 650 newspapermen from across the British Empire at the First Imperial Press Conference starting Jun. 5, 1909. the British Empire, featuring lavish wine-and-dine excursions for the delegates to iconic sites such as London landmarks, Oxford University, Parliament, the Foreign Office, Sutton Place, Stratford-upon-Avon, Coventry, and Warwick Castle. These outings also concealed ulterior motives, most prominently the vetting of newspapermen from across the Empire for recruitment into the nascent military intelligence agencies—MI6, MI5, and GC&CS (later renamed GCHQ)—under the direction of Prime Minister H. H. Asquith and Sir M. G. Smith-Cumming.

On another front, lead strategist William T. Stead (W. T. Stead) enticed the delegates during their downtime with his freshly launched Julia's Bureau at Mowbray House on Norfolk Street, inspired by his automatic writing communiqués with spirits of the departed, and drawing them in with compelling enticements such as “Bridge the Abyss: Find Your Loved Ones Beyond,” “Where Love Defies Death's Divide,” “Seek the Truth, Hear the Spirit,” and “Open Your Heart, Hear the Beyond.”

At an even more insidious level, the Pilgrims Society endeavored to expose the delegates' private frailties—including homosexuality, buggery, pedophilia, promiscuity, sorceries, drug and alcohol dependencies, addictions, health ailments, and other vulnerabilities—in a scheme akin to Jeffrey Epstein’s methods, gathering kompromat for possible future coercion through blackmail. to have been the proclivities of many Pilgrims Society members.

Lillian pierced through it all, swiftly dissecting the schemes of these avaricious, power-hungry bankers, politicians, and journalists who presumed to crown themselves rulers of the world from The City of London. Lillian refused to tolerate it.

Chapter 2

The Pilgrims Society— A Sinister Syndicate of Global Control

Lillian's London Odyssey: Unearthing Secrets with W. T. Stead, 1908

In 1908, Lillian, a fiery, attractive twenty-six-year-old American journalist with a stylish bob haircut that turned heads in conservative London, stormed the city to prepare for what promised to be a blockbuster conference of the world's newspaper leaders. Her San Francisco ally, William Randolph Hearst, likely connected her with William Thomas ("W. T.") Stead, a titan of British "yellow" tabloid journalism, spiritualism, and social reform. In April 1907, during the First National Arbitration and Peace Congress, Hearst had met Stead in New York, where Stead educated Hearst on his radical "Government by Journalism” vision, emphasizing the press’s power to shape policy and public opinion. Though Hearst didn’t buy into Stead’s philosophy, he likely gave her Stead’s contact details to help her with her London networking. Stead was probably her first contact upon arriving in The City, where she navigated bustling streets filled with horse-drawn carriages and the ever-present scent of cooking coal.

When Lillian Scott Troy met him, W. T. Stead, at fifty-nine, stood as a towering figure in journalism, his charismatic demeanor and fervent reformist spirit shining brightly amid London’s elitists, making him an ideal mentor for the twenty-six-year-old. Married to Emma Lucy Wilson for nearly four decades, Stead raised six children—four sons and two daughters—with a warm, paternal charm that often sparkled with a mischievous glint during lively debates, drawing Lillian in with a passion that echoed his own youthful zeal. In her 1940 congressional testimony, Lillian fondly recalled their profound professional connection, nurtured over steaming tea in London’s smoky cafes, where Stead’s guidance ignited her advocacy, though she boldly contested his uncritical trust in the Pilgrims Society’s ambitious plans, her staunch defense of American liberty slowly persuading him to reconsider the Society's British hegemony—a testament to her resolute spirit.

Stead was also engrossed in his spiritualist venture, “Julia’s Bureau,” aiming to connect the living with the dead through séances and spirit writing, sessions often held in candlelit rooms filled with the aroma of incense—all the rage in after dinner titillations in Victorian, then Edwardian England. He likely introduced Lillian to his spiritualist circle, including his American secretary, Hugh Robert Moore, who later fathered Oracle founder Larry Ellison out of wedlock. Moore was convicted as a pedophile before starting the First Church of Psycho-Science in Orlando, California. Given Lillian’s staunch Christian values, she steered clear of Stead’s esoteric practices but engaged with his spiritualist community out of professional courtesy, her polite smiles masking inner skepticism.

Through Stead, Lillian was introduced to the inner sanctum of an influential aristocratic and elitist society, uncovering their secret strategic vision amid opulent dinners and whispered conversations in grand halls. She discovered plans for a dystopian future that sought to dismantle the United States, replacing its founding principles with a system of imperial exploitation and financial usury rooted in ancient pagan Babylonian Rādhānite merchant-banking practices. This agenda clashed violently with the liberties championed by America's founders and echoed the oppression endured by Lillian's Irish ancestors under imperial rule, stirring a fire in her heart that fueled more than a few of her exposés and support for suffragism.

In the late-nineteenth century, Cecil John Rhodes—Stead's newspaper financier—a ruthless mining tycoon and devoted imperialist, forged a dark pact with Nathan Mayer ("N. M.") Rothschild (1st Baron Rothschild, 1840–1915), the patriarch of the Rothschild banking influence in the United Kingdom. Their partnership blended Rhodes's obsession to expand British imperial dominance, especially in Africa, with Rothschilds' financial connections. The Rothschilds, wielding significant influence within the Pilgrims Society's leadership, shaped this secretive group to align with Rhodes's vision of a reformed British Empire that would monopolize global resources, cement Anglo-American control, and realize their dream of a one-world British imperialist corporate government. This alliance aimed to extend their financial and political reach across continents, positioning them as the masterminds of a new imperial commercial world order rooted in The City of London.

The British South Africa Company (BSAC), established under a Royal Charter in 1889 by Rhodes with heavy Rothschild political muscle and funding, was the dark cornerstone of their strategy. The BSAC plundered Africa's mineral wealth—gold, silver, copper, and diamonds—in regions like present-day South Africa and Zimbabwe (formerly Rhodes-ia), amassing obscene riches to fuel Rhodes' and Rothschild's quest for power. To maximize profits, the BSAC exploited cheap labor, conscripting impoverished workers from Britain's urban slums through organizations like the YMCA, backed by J. P. Morgan, Elihu Root, and Cornelius Vanderbilt, and the Salvation Army, promoted by journalist W. T. Stead. These workers endured brutal conditions to feed the company's extraction, their sweat-soaked faces a testament to the human cost of imperial greed and the stark absence of brotherly love.

Modeled on the notorious British East India Company, which by 1874 had infiltrated British institutions like Parliament, the Bank of England, and the Fleet Street Press, the BSAC operated as a quasi-governmental juggernaut. It wielded military and administrative might to ravage Africa, the Middle East, Asia, and into South America, always at the expense of local communities, where villages burned and families scattered in the wake of rapacious resource hunts. This profit-driven ruthlessness, devoid of moral scruples, laid the foundation for modern corporate exploitation.

During the Second Boer War (1899–1902), Viscount Alfred Milner, a key Pilgrims Society cofounder, and Field Marshal Earl Frederick Roberts, its first president, implemented policies that birthed the world's first war concentration camps. Parliamentary records confirm over 60,000 deaths in these squalid camps, savaging both white and black populations equally, their cries echoing the Society's bloodstained origins. Thus, the Pilgrims Society's roots were steeped in human suffering, marking its beginnings as profoundly evil and therefore demon-possessed.

These demons are still with us today. Get behind us, Satan.

Figure 12: Stone memorial plaque marking the site of a Second Boer War (1899–1902) concentration camp in Vryburg, South Africa. Public domain.

The Afrikaans term for “Concentration Camp 1902” is “Konsentrasiekamp 1902.” During the Second Boer War, these camps confined Boer (Afrikaner) white civilians—mostly women and children—and Black African laborers as part of a brutal scorched-earth strategy, where their farms were razed to crush Boer guerrilla resistance. Instituted between 1901 and 1902 under High Commissioner Viscount Alfred Milner and Field Marshal Lord Frederick Roberts, commander-in-chief of the British Army, the camps became infamous for their horrific conditions, leading to mass deaths from disease, starvation, and medical vaccine experimentation. Reports in the British Parliament at the time revealed approximately 30,000 Boer deaths and at least an equal number of Black African deaths.

Milner and Roberts, key architects of British imperialism and soon-to-be founders of the Pilgrims Society in 1902—with Roberts as its first president—established concentration camps, effectively pioneering the modern concept 31 years before Adolf Hitler. As coorganizers of the First Imperial Press Conference in 1909, alongside their ally W. T. Stead, they inevitably encountered Lillian Scott Troy. She would have been introduced to these Pilgrims conspirators through Stead’s extensive network and the Conference’s numerous planned and spontaneous networking events and meetings.

Also the barbed wire entanglements ‘L’Assiette au beurre’ from the year 1901. Immediate report from the Boer War on a London street: ‘... The captured Boers find themselves in great distress, treated badly, and there they spend at least 18 months in misery and captivity. An electrically charged barbed wire fence hinders escape. This illustration depicts and at the same time demands a change. The goal is to grant the captured their freedom and to ensure their humane treatment.’”

This text provides a historical commentary on the squalid conditions in the concentration camps during the Second Boer War, as illustrated by Jean Veber in the French satirical magazine L'Assiette au beurre in 1901.

Upon leaving his 2nd Boer War command, Roberts was immediately appointed to be first president of the Pilgrims Society in 1902.

Roberts was a coorganizer of the First Imperial Press Conference, 1909 and most assuredly would have been targeted by Lillian to unmask his evil. It was notoriously known in London (because it was discussed in Parliament) that Roberts was one of the "Butchers of the Transvaal" concentration camps. Public domain.

The Pilgrims Society and the Anglo-American Alliance

Founded on July 16, 1902, the Pilgrims Society forged a diabolical Anglo-American alliance, uniting bankers, financiers, industrialists, and media imperialists. The Rothschilds, alongside Alfred Milner and Lord Roberts, were cofounders, with the Rothschilds steering efforts discreetly and Roberts serving as the Society's first president. Milner and Roberts, key architects

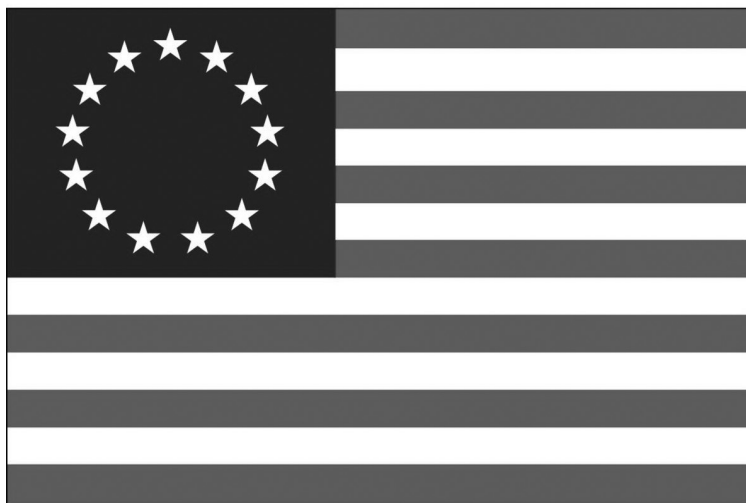

Figure 18: The Betsy Ross flag, with its thirteen stripes symbolizing the original thirteen American colonies, shares a design similarity with the British East India Company's flag, which also had thirteen red and white stripes. However, the colonists' revolutionary spirit, epitomized by the Boston Tea Party, where they dumped East India Company tea into the harbor, likely served as the more dominant motivation, driving a redefinition of this design to assert a new national identity. The Pilgrims Society set out to snuff out this history.

of a new British corporatist imperialism, had earlier established concentration camps during the Boer War, pioneering the modern concept decades before Adolf Hitler. In 1909, the Society coorganized the First Imperial Press Conference with their ally, famed tabloid journalist W. T. Stead, where Lillian Scott Troy likely connected with these figures through Stead's extensive network and the conference's numerous formal and informal gatherings. The Society aimed to dominate global sectors—banking, finance, media, governance, healthcare, pharmaceuticals, chemicals, wireless technology, and explosives—shaping international policies to entrench Anglo-American elitist control, with America positioned as a subordinate to The City of London's influence. The collaboration among the Rothschilds, Rhodes, Milner, Roberts, and their allies marked a pivotal shift, consolidating transatlantic power and reshaping global economic and political landscapes.

The Pilgrims Society's 1902 Executive Council: The Puppet Masters Unveiled

The Pilgrims Society's executive council, with eight of ten on this list Privy Counsellors at the time of the formation of the Pilgrims Society, included key figures who drove its Anglo-American ambitions:

Name	Role and Contribution	Rothschild Relationship
Nathan Mayer Rothschild	Privy Counsellor ; chief bankroller of British banks, offshore banking, and wars; Cecil Rhodes partner.	Family
Cecil Rhodes	Privy Counsellor ; zealous visionary; driven by Anglo-Saxon supremacy and a federalist imperial British Empire; N. M. Rothschild partner in De Beers Consolidated Mines.	Political, business, Rhodes scholarships
Field Marshal Lord Roberts	Privy Counsellor ; Second Boer War commander; invented the modern war concentration camp; sometimes called "The Butcher of the Transvaal."	Political
Leopold de Rothschild	Privy Counsellor ; took Rhodes's mantle after 1902; launched Rhodes Scholarships to recruit Americans.	Family
Earl of Rosebery	Privy Counsellor ; Rothschild by marriage; wielded clout as former prime minister and one of the wealthiest men in the British Empire.	Family
Henry de Worms (Baron Pirbright)	Privy Counsellor ; cofounder; maternal Rothschild; pushed imperial policies as Under-Secretary of State; Pirbright Estate.	Family
William T. Stead (Lillian's mentor inside this conclave of devils planning to annex America; no outside journalist had such access.)	Cofounder; media manipulator shaping public opinion through "yellow" tabloid journalism; collaborator with Lord Walter Rothschild in the "Society of the Elect" concept; Queen Victoria followed his spiritualist writings; published Government by Journalism in 1886; published "The United States of Europe on the Eve of the Parliament of Peace" in 1899; named the First Imperial Press Conference 1909 "A Parliament of the Press;" founded Julia's Bureau in 1909 to communicate with the dead. Arthur Balfour	Privy Counsellor ; cofounder; British prime minister; schemed with Rothschilds on the British Zionist Balfour Declaration to capture Palestine for Babylonian Rādhānites.	Zionist
Albert Grey (4th Earl Grey)	Privy Counsellor ; cofounder; governor general of Canada; fought in First Boer War under Rhodes.	Business

WOULD ANNEX AMERICA.

Suffragette Says This Is Purpose of British Peace Mission.

Figure 19: —Editor. (May 13, 1913). “Would Annex America” [says Lillian Scott Troy], p. 20. The Commercial Appeal (Memphis, Tennessee).

As Lillian prepared to report on the First Imperial Press Conference, held from June 5, 1909, through the month of June, W. T. Stead likely provided her with a copy of The Last Will and Testament of Cecil J. Rhodes with Elucidatory Notes by W. T. Stead, published by his Review of Reviews in 1902. Instead of admiration, she felt deep revulsion at the megalomaniacal schemes for British Empire world domination, including the annexation of America. This inflamed her Irish righteous spirit and 1776 patriotism, fueling her unwavering resolve to disrupt the plan or, at the very least, warn the world. She knew she alone was divinely called to enter this demonic stronghold, wielding her journalistic pen with the Archangel Michael and the heavenly hosts at her side. At no other time before or since would those demonically possessed men be gathered in one place, ripe for picking by a righteous woman.

The British South Africa Company (BSAC): A Blueprint for Global Corporate Tyranny

Founded by Cecil Rhodes and Anglo-German financier Alfred Beit, the British South Africa Company wielded near-sovereign authority, as noted by South African historian Peter Crowhurst: “The British Empire that Edward VII inherited in 1901 was a private enterprise empire created by merchants, investors, migrants, and missionaries, with the government in a support role.”

Backed by Rothschild loans, the company plundered Africa’s resources, amassing wealth for the Rothschilds and dominating global commodity markets—silver, gold, and copper—through Rhodes’s De Beers Consolidated Mines, which still influences markets today. It spans geography believed to include the Mines of Ophir—Solomon’s Mines. 2 Chronicles 8:17–18; 1 Kings 9–10. This fusion of financial power and corporate governance became a model for the Pilgrims Society, established in 1902, extending Rhodes-Rothschild influence into banking, media, politics, wars, pharmaceuticals, railroads, military, shipping, wireless, and intelligence. Rhodes, a Privy Counsellor and coowner of De Beers with Lord N. M. Rothschild and Alfred Beit, secured the BSAC charter (1889) in Parliament with Rothschild relatives Lords Rosebery and Pirbright by blood and inheritance, though Rhodes died just months before the Pilgrims Society’s founding.

Lillian realized she was not confronting mere men, but rather Lucifer (self-delusion), Satan (lust for power), and Mammon (usury)

Rhodes plan: “a scheme to take the government of the world!”

The Rhodes essential: “. . . The seizure of the wealth necessary.”

In his Last Will and Testament (1902, p. 56), Rhodes envisioned a “semi-religious, quasi-political” secret society modeled on Jesuit stealth tactics, calling it “a scheme to take the government of the world!” (p. 74). He declared: “The furtherance of the British Empire, for the bringing of the whole uncivilized world under British rule, for the recovery of the United States, for the making the [sic] Anglo-Saxon race but one Empire. What a dream! but yet it is probable. It is possible.” He added: “. . . it is impossible for one human atom to complete anything, much less such an idea as this requiring the devotion of the best souls of the next 200 years. There are three essentials: (1) The plan duly weighed and agreed to. (2) The first organization. (3) The siezure of the wealth necessary” (76; bold in quotations added). The enduring strength of this megalomaniacal vision clearly points to evil forces bolstering it. Today, Pilgrims Society members require executive committee approval, currently led by Air Marshal Baron Jock Stirrup, president and a Keeper of the King's Royal Sword, to disclose their membership.

“Ruling the world which wealth affords its possessor.”

Lillian undoubtedly pressed W. T. Stead with inquiries about the gravity and consequences of his own commentary in Rhodes' Will: “As a rich man Mr. Rhodes was not in the running with Mr. Carnegie, Mr. Rockefeller, or Mr. Astor. But although there have been many wealthier men, none of them, before Mr. Rhodes, recognised [sic] the opportunities of ruling the world which wealth affords its possessor” (p. 55).

The Rhodes Scholarship: Cultivating Agents for British Influence

Following Cecil Rhodes's death in 1902 at the age of 48, Leopold de Rothschild spearheaded the Rhodes Scholarship at Oxford University. Designed to recruit talented young men from the British Empire, the United States, and Germany, it aimed to advance the Pilgrims Society's goal of uniting English-speaking nations under British dominance. Over time, the program included women and excluded German participants. Scholars were immersed in a curriculum exalting the British Empire's authority, fostering loyalty to the Pilgrims Society's agenda amid Oxford's historic setting, intellectual exchanges, and varied social scene. For over a century, this scholarship has nurtured individuals intended to serve as agents of British interests, many joining the Pilgrims Society's council to maintain its transatlantic hold, particularly targeting the United States. Graduates from institutions like Harvard, Yale, Cambridge, Oxford, London School of Economics, and Columbia (formerly King's College) now dominate the Pilgrims Society, their networks woven with shared strategies to undermine American sovereignty.

[Figure 20: “The Rhodes Colossus” (1892), Punch, by Edward Linley Sambourne, depicts Cecil Rhodes, a pensive, shrewd homosexual founder of the Rhodes Scholarship, governing Africa from Cairo in the north to Cape Town in the south, bolstering the British Empire through banking influence with gold, silver, diamonds, and exotic bacteria and poisons. Though personal sexual habits are generally overlooked, Rhodes openly practiced his, rendering this aspect vital to grasping the man whose impact has damaged humanity so deeply. In that era, many elitists embraced homosexuality as a tool for blackmail, dominance, and a rejection of Christian morals, procreation, and human propagation, suggesting evidence of demonic control rather than human agency.]

Among those recruited as potential traitors to the American Republic are Anthony Kennedy (London School of Economics), Bill Bradley, Bill Clinton, Cory Booker, David Souter, Elena Kagan (Sachs Scholar), George Stephanopoulos, John Lewis, John Paul Stevens, John Roberts (Middle Temple), Joseph Stiglitz (Fulbright Scholar), Ketanji Brown Jackson, Krishna Gupta, Larry Naomi Wolf, Neil Gorsuch (Marshal Scholar), Paul Krugman, Pete Buttigieg, Rachel Maddow, Samantha Power, Susan Rice, and Wesley Clark.

The US Supreme Court is neutered by undisclosed Pilgrims Society conflicts of interest.

The next chapter will expose the 24-step strategy for the Pilgrims Society's scheme to subvert America, as uncovered by Lillian Scott Troy.

Point 2 states: “Supreme Court of the United States to be revised so as to embrace only judges agreeable to absorption by Great Britain, and uniformly hostile to the United States Senate.” As evidence of this infiltration, consider this list of US Supreme Court Justices who are Rhodes Scholars, Marshall Scholars, and British-aligned.

Coincidence or Hidden Hand?

The answer is evident.

To test this claim, we examine the documented pipeline of British academic, legal, and fraternal influence on the U.S. Supreme Court—through generational interlocking institutional ties:

- Rhodes Scholarships: Currently managed by Sir John Antony Hood—a Rhodes Scholar himself, interlocked with Rhodes Trust, Blackstone, WEF, Institute of Bankers in London, BAE (British Aerospace), Urenco Nuclear Fuel (Crown-controlled), BMT Group (shipping), and WPP plc (communications, advertising, public relations, technology, and commerce).
- Marshall Scholarships: UK government funded.
- Fulbright Scholarships with US-UK Commission placements.
- London School of Economics (LSE) founded by British Fabians known to be Marxists, founded by Fabians.
- English Inns of Court: Four ancient, self-governing legal societies—Lincoln's Inn, Inner Temple, Middle Temple, and Gray's Inn.
- American Inns of Court: US affiliate of English Inns of Court under a formal 1988 Declaration of Friendship.
- Temple Bar Scholars: Sponsored by American Inns of Court in partnership with the English Inns of Court.

At this decisive juncture of global influence, every action is carefully orchestrated. Lillian Scott Troy, shaped by her Irish roots and American resistance to imperial dominance, exposed the sinister threat at the core of this agenda. Underestimated as a beautiful, talented young journalist mentored by Stead, who innocently cultivated connections with her employer, The San Francisco News Company—distributors of Stead's Review of Reviews, American Edition—she confronted their schemes with steadfast determination.

In 1940, Lillian revealed that by 1912 she had convinced William T. Stead, a prominent journalist and Pilgrims Society executive committee member, that the society's plan to annex the United States back into the British Empire was doomed to fail. Stead, a vocal advocate for Anglo-Saxon unity, died in the Titanic disaster in April 1912, shortly after this shift in perspective. The timing prompts speculation about whether the Pilgrims Society, sensing his wavering loyalty, viewed him as a threat ahead of their covert planning for the Federal Reserve's establishment in 1913—backed by City of London financiers. The global press coverage of Stead's death, marked by swift, evidently preprepared headlines, echoes the rapid, orchestrated media response following the September 11, 2001 attacks, where the 300-page Patriot Act was passed just six weeks later, suggesting preplanned narratives. By the end of World War I, Lillian's relentless opposition to the society's imperialist agenda led the freshly minted MI6, MI5, and Scotland Yard to expel her from the United Kingdom, deeming her a greater threat to British interests than the era's widespread devastation.

Chapter 3

Lillian's Explosive Revelation— The 24 Steps to Annex the American Republic

Lillian charged into the fray with the intensity of a tempest, her pen a blade that cut through veils of deception to expose the core of corruption. In 1908, she unearthed explosive strategy documents, possibly provided by W. T. Stead, unveiling the Pilgrims Society's covert plot to annex America. Stead may have believed Lillian would seize the opportunity to amass power for herself. Yet, she resisted the temptation, her instinct driving her to publish at once, though Stead advised restraint, cautioning that it could ruin her career. His warning likely arose from concern over revealing his own connections, as the plan's secrecy was vital to the Society, which employed borrowed Jesuit and Masonic intelligence methods often linked to mysterious disappearances overboard (Robert Maxwell? d. 1991), treatable illness

(Hannah Rothschild? d. 1889), car crash (Junius Morgan? d. 1889), fatal falls from the forty-fourth floor of the Pan Am Building in Manhattan (Eli Black? d. 1975), and a Tesla plunge into her own Texas pond (Angela Chao Breyer? d. 2024).

Imagine the improbable scene: Stead, introduced to Lillian through William Randolph Hearst, was disarmed by the spirited American, her laughter echoing in quaint London teahouses. Hearst first met Stead in 1907 at the First National Arbitration and Peace Congress in New York, where Stead pushed his “Government by Journalism” vision. Though Hearst didn’t embrace Stead’s ideas, he was probably glad he could make introductions for her. In London, Stead, charmed by Lillian’s bold presence and stylish bob hairstyle, grew unusually candid. London’s elitists often dismissed Americans as naive, especially if they are beautiful, and therefore not a risk; but Lillian absorbed every detail, her sharp mind cataloging Stead’s revelations amid the clatter of teacups. When she recited the 24-step plan back to him with stunning precision, Stead was floored. He begged her not to publish, citing career risks, but likely feared exposure would jeopardize his ties to the Pilgrims Society, a group that later inspired the secretive Chatham House Rule of secrecy that persists today.

Under the Chatham House Rule, anyone who comes to a meeting is free to use information from the discussion but is not allowed to reveal who made any particular comment. It is designed to increase openness of (and too often unethical, even if not outright immoral and illegal) discussion. The rule is a system for holding debates and discussion panels on controversial topics and is named after the London headquarters of the Chatham House, where the rule originated in June 1927.

Lillian Scott Troy opted to postpone the release of her 24-step plan, strategically holding it for the opportune moment. She delved deeply into researching the Pilgrims Society's Who's Who—focusing on the key organizers and delegates of the First Imperial Press Conference of 1909—conducting meticulous background checks and interviewing participants. Staying at the Waldorf Hotel, a mere twenty-five-minute walk from the British Library, she may have crossed paths with Vladimir Lenin, who was in London in 1908 during one of his sojourns between 1902 and 1912, and who was notoriously known for frequenting the British Library at a time when he and the Bolsheviks were being cultivated by the Pilgrims Society under Viscount Alfred Milner's direction, to overthrow Czar Nicholas II Romanov and seize the Russian Empire's vast resources for the British Empire. This era also featured Lenin's notable 1908 visit to "The Barbers of London," a covert term for the Bolsheviks' activities in London.

Defying the Powerful: Unmasking the Sinister Plot

Two months before W. T. Stead's death on the Titanic on April 15, 1912, Lillian defied his warnings and published the 24-step plan in syndicated US newspapers, laying bare the Pilgrims Society's blueprint for global domination including takeover of America. Her exposé gained eternal significance when, in 1940, Congressman Dr. Jacob Thorkelson entered it into the Congressional Record under the title "Steps toward British Union, a World State, and International Strife." The plan outlined a demonic strategy rooted in the Rothschilds' adaptation of Cecil Rhodes's vision for a British imperial-led world order, with the Pilgrims Society's executive council orchestrating efforts to subjugate the United States—to Make American British Again.

Rep. Thorkelson, a man of many talents and broad interests, was a Norwegian immigrant; he initially navigated ocean-going ships from 1896 to 1907. He served in the Virginia Naval Reserve from 1897 to 1899, rising to the rank of lieutenant commander. He later pursued medicine, graduating from the College of Physicians and Surgeons at the University of Maryland in 1911. Settling in Montana, he practiced medicine in Dillon, Warm Springs, and Butte. As a Republican, he won a congressional seat in 1938.

During his congressional term (1938–1940), he collaborated closely with Lillian to record her findings on the Pilgrims Society and its aim to annex America. He faced accusations of anti-Semitism after inserting Lillian's 24-step plan from The San Francisco Leader into the Congressional Record.

Thorkelson also highlighted the disproportionate number of British aristocrats claiming Jewish identity, immediately prompting attacks from the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) labeling him an antisemite. However, recent DNA research identifies these aristocrats were in fact Babylonian Rādhānites, with Turkic, Persian, Khazarian, Sogdian, and Chinese ancestry—not Semitic. Modern DNA evidence suggests one cannot be anti-Semitic if the targeted group lacks Semitic origins!

W. T. Stead died on the Pilgrim J. P. Morgan-owned Titanic after Stead started having misgivings about his support for the psychopaths in the Pilgrims Society, as Lillian described in her 1940 testimony to Congress:

“The British Pilgrims Society’s 24-Point Plan to Annex America” (word for word from the Congressional Record and San Francisco Leader)

1. Power of the President of the United States to be increased so as to gradually diminish the powers of Congress.
2. Supreme Court of the United States to be revised so as to embrace only judges agreeable to absorption by Great Britain, and uniformly hostile to the United States Senate.

3. Precedents must be established by said Court against the United States Senate in rulings, decisions, etc., (specially prepared).
4. Strong campaign must be waged in the several States and Territories against Congressmen and Senators showing hostility to Great Britain. If unsuccessful in defeating them, they must be continually watched until discovered in some overt act, mainly personal, and under threat of exposure forced to resign [honeypots].
5. When the success of the arbitration treaties is assured, a few unimportant disputes between the United States and Great Britain may arise, in which the preference must be given to the United States [pander].
These apparent victories must be widely advertised in order to create confidence in the propitiousness of arbitration with Great Britain. While the scope of the treaties must be of considerable latitude, care must be taken not to in any way bring such questions as to the fortification or navigation of the Panama Canal, or the Monroe Doctrine, into dispute until the situation is under firm control.

6. As soon as compatible with conditions, the arbitration treaties must be widened into an offensive and defensive alliance.
7. On accomplishment of same, British and American naval officers must be mutually exchanged, but care must be taken that this suggestion is made by an American.
8. Quietly and unobtrusively, American soldiers must be sent to Egypt and India; British soldiers may then be quartered in the United States.
9. English royalty, preferably the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, must be sent to Canada, from whence they must make frequent trips to New York. But great care must be taken not to enter Washington if there is a demonstration against them, or [sic] until they have practically "held court" in New York.
10. The wives and daughters of men controlling great wealth and influence in America must be given preference at these "courts." They must be selected carefully from every State and Territory in the United States. Thus a new "society," through royal favor, must quietly and expeditiously be created [pander].

11. Honors must be conferred on the husbands of women thus given preference in the social circles of America, and a rank or position determined by judiciously distributed decorations [pander].
12. Honor must be conferred on all American officers favoring “peace” [pander].
13. The women of men showing hostility to “peace” must be socially ostracized [shame].
14. When a strong phalanx of influential people in favor of “peace” has been created, and the exchange of British and American naval officers accomplished, and as many as possible of the United States troops transported to India, the King and Queen of England may then visit Washington.
15. Should any demonstration of hostilities to their Majesties occur, the Hindu troops and the British may, in the absence of the American soldiers, quell any disturbances.
16. Men whose wealth prevents their being influenced by money must have honors and position and possibly a title dangled before their wives’ eyes [pander].
17. When newspapers cannot be bought or leased, new publications must be started.

18. Educators must receive special favors in flattering newspaper notices; and wide publicity must not be given to Independence Day celebrations; people persisting in demonstrations must be “cut” and held up to ridicule. Any demonstrations with fireworks must be strongly opposed and discouraged on the ground of protection to life and property.
19. An elaborate celebration must be arranged to take place in the United States in 1915, to commemorate 100 years of peace between Great Britain and America, by which time the object and aim of “peace” will be at the apex of consummation.
20. Education of the masses must be discouraged, in order to create harmony with the desires of the wealthy and the several trusts, who will see in such a suggestion a strong tendency to reduce wages from their now unreasonable heights to the basis of wages paid in Great Britain; also, the suggestion that the ignorant cannot organize so formidably as the educated masses will be widely appreciated as dissension and suspicion of their own leaders can be more easily advanced [deschool].

21. A popular feeling against Irish immigration may be aroused in the United States by giving wide publicity to all individual cases of rejection of immigrants for reasons of acute poverty, insanity or criminality, or disease [dehumanize the Irish].
22. Arbitration, offensive or defensive alliances, and finally peace must be brought about as quickly as possible. For the latter, armed compulsion may be necessary, and it is recommended that the Indian and British troops be altogether confined to the east of America, leaving the protection of the west to the Japanese troops, 80,000 of which are already scattered throughout the Sandwich Islands, Mexico, British Columbia, and California. Reciprocity with Canada can be passed almost unanimously through the American Congress, and then opposed bitterly in Canada on one ground only—that of annexation by the United States. Simultaneously, with the rejection of reciprocity by the Canadian people, a member of the British royal family, preferably the Duke of Connaught, must take up his residence in Canada.
23. With the assistance of some interested and powerful trust, such as the Meat Trust, strained relations may be brought about between Germany and the United States; in such event, and with a defensive and offensive alliance with Great Britain, a casus belli [an act or situation provoking or justifying war] of England would be more easily turned into account by a simultaneous attack on Germany. Great Britain's diplomatic relations with Germany must remain intact until the consummation of the alliances with the United States [dehumanize Germans].

24. It is suggested to embrace France in the arbitration treaties, for the moment, as suspicion must not be created during the initial efforts [placate the French].

Source of the 24-step strategy: Hon. J. Thorkelson, MN. (Aug. 06, 1940). "Part I: Congressional Record, Proceedings and Debates of the 76th Congress, Third Session, Steps Toward British Union, a World State, and International Strife," Vol. 86, Pts. I-IX, Aug. 6, 1940 to Sep. 27, 1940. GPO.

Thorkelson identified the "English-speaking Union," that was established by the Pilgrims Society in 1918. Sir Evelyn Wrench, a 1909 First Imperial Press Conference delegate (A Parliament of the Press, pp. xi, 29, 32), later founded the English-Speaking Union—identified by Lillian and Thorkelson as the Pilgrims Society's public-facing arm.

As Rep. Thorkelson put it, the English-Speaking Union was the retailer to the Pilgrims Society being the wholesaler role. The Union thrives today with 100 office globally and 65 US branches headquartered at 144 East 39th Street, New York, NY, with some Society members holding dual membership and sharing office space.

Congressional Firestorm: Lillian's evidence shakes the nation she exposed: the "Benedict Arnold Peace Society"

Thorkelson's 1940 Congressional Record branded the Pilgrims Society, quoting Lillian's many newspaper articles, a "Benedict Arnold Peace Society," accusing it of betraying American interests, like Revolutionary War general Benedict

Arnold did. Lillian's evidence, drawn from Society speeches, correspondence, and insider accounts, implicated American elitists like Andrew Carnegie, John D. Rockefeller, Woodrow Wilson, J. P. Morgan, Elihu Root, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Paul Warburg, Cornelius Vanderbilt III, Nicholas Murray Butler, Henry Luce, David Sarnoff, and J. Paul Getty in collaborating with British elitists under the Rothschild-led executive council. The plan's multifaceted assault—targeting banking, media, finance, education, military, medicine, depopulation, and social structures—exposed the Rothschilds' cunning manipulation of Rhodes's federalist vision to dominate America, a revelation that sent shockwaves through congressional halls and newspaper offices alike.

Lillian at the First Imperial Press Conference, 1909

On June 5, 1909, the First Imperial Press Conference, 1909 convened at the White City Exhibition Grounds in Shepherd's Bush, London (now the BBC Television Centre), drawing 650 media representatives from across the British Empire, including observers from America, like Lillian.

Chaired by Lord Burnham, owner of The Daily Telegraph, and Lord Northcliffe, as treasurer, owner of The Daily Mail, The Times, Sunday Times, Daily Mirror, and The Observer, the conference pulsed with grand designs. W. T. Stead, the visionary journalist and strategist, granted Lillian—one of the few women present—exclusive press access, championing the theme A Parliament of the Press. A lavish Burroughs Wellcome publication, The Evolution of Journalism Etcetera, celebrated the Empire's newspaper elitists, its pages a glittering vanity mask for darker motives like sourcing poisons.

The conference's stated aim—to unify the British Empire's press—concealed a heavily Rothschild-influenced agenda, orchestrated through the executive council of the Pilgrims Society, to control global public opinion and intelligence. It advanced Cecil Rhodes's vision of a one-world federalist imperial system, and sought to reassert British dominance over America. Lillian navigated the many opulent banquets and heated debates with a disarming smile, her sharp mind attuned to the stakes. In her heart, the Irish in her believed God had placed her there to uncover the Empire's insidious plan to undermine the American Republic.

On Monday, June 7, 1909, King Edward VII and Queen Alexandria hosted a garden party for the delegates at Marlborough House, where Lillian mingled with the "Empire Builders," as the king dubbed them. Introduced by Lord Burnham, who soon became chairman of the newly formed Empire Press Union, the event was a spectacle of imperial power. The official record paints a vivid scene:

"A tent stood reserved for the Royal party, while a three-sided marquee offered refreshments for Their Royal Highnesses' guests. A military band played stirring music, and officers in crimson coats patrolled the grounds. Dames and damsels dazzled in soft, brilliant garments, their hats marvels of millinery. When the Prince emerged with his mother on his arm, followed by the King and the Princess of Wales, men bared their heads, and women curtsied deeply—a breathtaking sight. The band struck up the National Anthem, and the King and Queen, joined by relatives, strolled the gardens, mingling with friends. The Queen’s charm captivated all.”

The grand scene was evidently intended to awe the delegates with visions of power, might, and privilege. Here is some more over-the-top verbiage that they were using:

“Missionaries of Empire”

Former prime minister Lord Rosebery, an obscenely wealthy Rothschild by inheritance, beckoned the delegates in his keynote speech to “return to their homes ‘missionaries of Empire.’”

The eyes are the gateway to the soul.

Figure 25: Lord Rosebery's Eyes Reveal His Soul. This photograph was selected by W. T. Stead for "The Last Will and Testament of Cecil J. Rhodes," p. 53, Review of Reviews (London).

Jesus Christ: "The eye is the lamp of the body. If your eyes are unhealthy, your whole body will be full of darkness. If then the light within you is darkness, how great is that darkness! No one can serve two masters. Either you will hate the one and love the other, or you will be devoted to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve both God and mammon” (Matthew 6:22–24, NIV, bold added).

The devil in Rosebery is evident. He was a man who served demon mammon, as did the Pilgrims Society he championed.

Lord Rosebery, keynote speaker at the First Imperial Press Conference in 1909, married Hannah de Rothschild, despite sharing Cecil Rhodes’ homosexuality. After Hannah’s untimely death at age thirty-nine from typhoid fever (Salmonella typhi), Rosebery inherited her grandfather N. M. Rothschild’s vast fortune. By inference, Rosebery’s call for delegates to become “missionaries of Empire” veiled a darker intent, invoking God deceptively to sway the masses while advancing a Satanic agenda, fueling over fifty British wars since 1909 and claiming more than 188 million souls, not counting children who were aborted and trafficked.

The long lost, now found, record of the month of meetings and events, A Parliament of the Press, is replete with sycophantic “Hear, hears” 188 times, and “Cheers” 282 times. The delegates were showered with the arrogance of a British aristocracy cheerleading for their life of privilege to be established in perpetuity by the delegates.

THE ORIGIN AND WORK OF THE CONFERENCE.

Three weeks earlier, it is noteworthy, Lord Rosebery concluded his speech to the delegates at the Banquet of Welcome given on their arrival, by hoping and predicting that they would return to their homes "missionaries of Empire." It was an "intelligent anticipation," entirely justified by events. The private, equally with the public, utterances of the delegates place that assurance beyond question.

He emphasized “Welcome home” and concluded with a challenge for the 650 newspapermen to become “missionaries of Empire” to foster unity. This is a demonic use of the word “missionaries.” MP Philip Whitwell Wilson, the Pilgrims Society handler for Vladimir Lenin and Bolshevism and later a New York Times editor and writer, attended with a front-row seat.

Lord Rosebery, alongside Rothschild relatives Lord Walter Rothschild and Henry de Worms, Lord Pirbright, secured parliamentary approval for the founding of the Knights of Malta, English Priory, in 1888, later used to offer nonaristocratic (nonblood) honors to entice Americans into the Pilgrims Society and its scheme to annex America—an order later joined by figures such as America’s current Chief Justice, John G. Roberts Jr., Rosebery became a Rothschild by inheritance after his wife, Hannah de Rothschild (1851–1890), granddaughter of N. M. Rothschild & Sons founder Nathan Mayer Rothschild, died of typhoid fever at age thirty-nine, after which he inherited the vast N. M. Rothschild fortune and Mentmore Towers estate.

The garden party showcased Pilgrim Society cofounders, including Prime Minister H. H. Asquith, Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Grey, War Minister Richard Haldane, Colonial Secretary Earl of Crewe, Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, Field Marshal Lord Roberts (Pilgrims Society president), Arthur Balfour (later of the Balfour Declaration), and Percy de Worms, son of Baron Henry de Worms, 1st Lord Pirbright. These oligarchs steered imperial policy; their influence was palpable.

Nearby, at Pirbright near Guildford, the former estate of Baron Henry de Worms came to house a Burroughs Wellcome & Company biological research hub, later The Pirbright Institute. Linked to a 2007 foot-and-mouth disease outbreak traced to its tenant, Merial Animal Health, The Pirbright Institute holds Coronavirus (U.S. Patent No. 10,130,701, Nov. 20, 2018) and related patents on a facility that is replete with state-of-the-art wireless and satellite facilities. Lillian's notes hinted at the global reach of these machinations. Merial's postoutbreak relocation to China, near Wuhan, underscores the enduring influence of the conference.

On July 23, 1909, the conference birthed the Empire Press Union, later the Commonwealth Press Union, and now the CPU Media Trust under Lord Burnham and Lord Northcliffe. This organization recruited journalists as intelligence operatives, laying the groundwork for MI6, MI5, and GC&CS (now GCHQ). Lillian exposed this media-intelligence nexus, linking Reuters, Associated Press, and The Daily Telegraph to the Pilgrims Society's agenda. American journalists, some swayed to British interests, revealed the Society's infiltration of US media, a web Lillian unraveled with relentless questions. Sir Henry Wellcome, founder of Burroughs Wellcome & Co., bankrolled the conference and its publications, tasking journalists with collecting biological specimens, including poisons, to advance his pharmaceutical empire. His lavish book was named The Evolution of Journalism Etcetera. Lillian saw this as another cog in the Pilgrim Society's strategy to fuse media, finance, radio frequency devices, bacteria, and science, bolstering British influence over America, her notes heavy with ethical dilemmas.

The conference drew an elitist conclave, including Arthur Balfour, Austen Chamberlain, C. Arthur Pearson, Evelyn Wrench (later founder of the English-Speaking Union), Harry and Hugh Robert Moore (W. T. Stead's secretary and later Oracle founder Larry Ellison's lecherous baby daddy), hinted at the Society's long-term influence.

Brittain, Lord Rothschild, Lord Alverstone, Lord Warwick, Lord Curzon, Lord Milner, Lord Morley, Lord Rosebery, Sir George Newnes, Sir Gilbert Parker, Baron Alfred Mond, Guglielmo Marconi, and Sir Winston Churchill. Younger attendees, like David Sarnoff (future RCA and NBC leader), J. Paul Getty (oil heir and later Sutton Place owner),

The Conference That Weaponized Newspapers for Banking and the British Empire

The First Imperial Press Conference of 1909 was a pivotal moment in fostering media ties across the British Empire, organized by the Pilgrims Society, established in 1902. Held in London from June 5 to 28, the event brought together newspaper editors and proprietors from Britain and its dominions (unofficially including Americans from The New York Times, Washington Post, etc.) to promote journalistic cooperation, strengthen imperial bonds, impress upon attendees the power and might of the British military, and heavily promote Burroughs Wellcome's medicines, boxes, pills, vaccines, and poisons.

The conference featured a militaristic program designed to impress and awe, including honor guards, displays of the British Navy's new Dreadnought battleships, discussions that often drifted toward war, and the prominent involvement of military figures, most notably General Lord Frederick Roberts, known as the "Butcher of the Transvaal" by critics for his role in creating the Second Boer War concentration camps that killed whites and black equally. Lord Rosebery, a key figure and former prime minister, encouraged attendees to act as "missionaries of empire," urging them to champion imperial unity and propagate British Pilgrims' priorities like annexing America through their newspapers.

Key organizers and participants in the First Imperial Press Conference, 1909 included imperial news, political powerbrokers; and some called the King's "Empire Builders," including:

- Lord Burnham (owner of The Daily Telegraph)
- Lord Northcliffe (founder of the Daily Mail and owner of The Times)
- Lord Rosebery (former prime minister, Privy Counsellor, Rothschild by inheritance)
- Alfred Lyttelton (former colonial secretary and King's Counsel, Earl Arthur Balfour kin)
- Earl Arthur Balfour (former prime minister and Privy Counsellor)
- Sir Winston Churchill (Privy Counsellor, future prime minister, future president of the English-Speaking Union)
- Lord Curzon (chancellor of Oxford, viceroy of India, Privy Counsellor)
- Sir H. H. Asquith (the then current prime minister, Privy Counsellor, Queen's Council; contemporaneous with both

Cecil Rhodes, and Lord Rosebery in the chartering of the British South Africa Company and the formation of the Knights of Malta, English Priory with Lords Rothschild, Rosebery, and Pirbright (Henry De Worms, maternal Rothschild)

Note the common membership of these politicians in the Pilgrims Society and the Privy Council. That pattern continues to this day. The Pilgrims and their City of London merchant-banks are the instruments of Empire. They are the “deep state” hidden hand.

The Conference showcased British military strength and reinforced imperial unity. Additionally, Burroughs Wellcome & Co., a leading drug firm, used the conference to showcase its new compressed tablets—many talc-carcinogen laced—prominently featuring the now iconic “Tabloid” brand pills and portable medicine kits, which were marketed as essential for imperial expeditions and military campaigns, aligning with the event’s emphasis on empire-wide connectivity, preparedness, and the unspoken goal to ANNEX AMERICA, which Lillian was just then discovering.

Among the topics was the emerging field of wireless telegraphy, highlighted as a means to enhance connectivity across vast distances. James Robert Erskine-Murray, an electrical engineer who worked as Guglielmo Marconi's assistant (his technical brain) and authored key texts on wireless technology, contributed to these conversations. Marconi's alleged inventions, now known to be stolen from Nikola Tesla, were presented as a promising tool for real-time information exchange. At that time, they already possessed telegraphy machines and addressing systems remarkably akin to modern email addresses.

The Conference blurred lines between journalism and state interests (some say fused them), positioning the press as a vehicle for promoting imperial narratives, including the endorsement of commercial enterprises like Burroughs Wellcome, and gathering insights on international affairs. Its outcomes included the formation of the Empire Press Union during the last week of the Conference (pp. 2, 131) to coordinate media efforts across the British Dominions. Several months after the Conference, Prime Minister H. H. Asquith established Britain's Secret Service Bureaus MI6 (foreign intelligence), and MI5 (domestic intelligence). In Parliamentary records, Asquith confirmed that spy agents were recruited from Conference delegates. The Government Code and Cypher School (GC&CS, predecessor to GCHQ) emerged to handle signal intelligence, capitalizing on advancements in wireless intercepts already employing David Sarnoff.

Centered on the theme of “peace through unity,” the event also revealed ambitions to strengthen connections with the United States. By the conference’s end, Lillian Scott Troy was likely overwhelmed by the weight of her discoveries, particularly the intent to dismantle the freedoms won through the American Revolution.

British Pilgrims Society’s spy and propaganda leaders focused on silencing Lillian—her truths were like missiles fired into the heart of the Beast!

Lillian’s defiance made her a target. Protected politically by W. T. Stead until 1912, she crossed paths with Sir Gilbert Parker and MP Philip Whitwell Wilson, Pilgrim Society cofounders and architects of the Conference’s covert aims. A June 7, 1909, luncheon photograph on the House of Commons Terrace, hosted by Sir Benjamin Stone, captured their scheming against the glimmer of the Thames' below. Parker, a Canadian novelist and member of Parliament (MP), orchestrated World War I propaganda, compiling a secret list of 260,000 influential Americans to flood with anti-German lies, including the fabricated “German Ghouls” tale of corpse-derived soap and explosives.

Published in outlets like the Sheffield Evening Telegraph (April 18, 1917) and Life magazine (July 25, 1915), these falsehoods, crafted with C. F. G. Masterman, fueled war hysteria. Parker also hyped Wellcome's biochemical empire, glorifying Burroughs Wellcome in a 1918 Lancet article. Masterman was Winston Churchill's nephew and organizer of the Marconi Wireless monopoly and the illegal insider trading of Marconi stock in Parliament.

Philip Whitwell Wilson, a shadowy MP and Pilgrims Society cofounder, wielded significant influence through the YMCA’s Association Men, promoting communist agendas and undermining Christianity. He groomed Lenin from 1902–1912, supported Mao through the YMCA in China, helped found the United Nations, and directed covert operations during WWI as Sir William Stephenson’s handler (codenamed: “Intrepid” — the model for James Bond).

Philip Whitwell Wilson was the Pilgrims Society’s groomer of Vladimir Lenin and the Bolsheviks beginning in 1902. In 1914, Parker was a member of The War Propaganda Bureau (Wellington House) in charge of targeting British propaganda against the United States. Wilson became a writer and editor of The New York Times, then coordinated the grooming of Mao Zedong through the YMCA in China, where Wilson published numerous “wolf-in-sheep’s-clothing” anti-Christian articles in Association Men and used the YMCA—funded by British bankers and serving as an espionage platform—to promote the United Nations. Wilson also directed covert operations during WWII as Intrepid’s handler (Sir William Stephenson).

Lillian exposed the Pilgrim Society’s 24-step American Annexation plan, Carnegie’s sham peace initiatives, and British propaganda in US libraries funded by Pilgrim Andrew Carnegie. After Stead’s 1912 death on the Titanic, Parker’s propaganda machine targeted Lillian and her German-American partner, Baron Louis von Horst, a hops magnate ennobled in 1899. Their ventures in hops and cinemas, and their alliance for Irish independence and suffrage, drew MI6/MI5/Scotland Yard’s wrath. Von Horst’s 1914 arrest for alleged anti-British activities in Ireland, and internment until 1919, marked their persecution openly. Lillian was not silent; she used her ability to syndicate her news across America. Lillian’s 1914 Senate testimony against arbitration treaties enraged her foes, and Scotland Yard hounded her, tracking her visits to von Horst’s Thames-side internment ship, HMT Royal Edward, moored at Southend-on-Sea. In 1919, Parker’s campaign led to her deportation for fabricated “Irish question” disloyalty, a US-British operation she met with defiance, with no actual evidence of the alleged infractions ever produced. On the question of their relationship beyond business, MI5 officers speculated in their official file, available today in an Isle of Man online history archive of WWI internment camps, that Lillian and Von Horst were romantic partners, but could not prove it.

A recently discovered Sydney, Australia, daily newspaper featured a lengthy article titled simply “Lillian Troy” at the time of her deportation, accusing her of being a rabble-rousing gold digger and a “Hun” lover (derogatory term for a German). The article also described the Troy-von Horst relationship as one of the most well-known love stories of the war and noted that Lillian was “a good-looking woman.” The mention of their romance may reflect Empire Press Union innuendo, as no independent confirmation of a romantic relationship exists, though it remains plausible and noteworthy. No ancestry records for Lillian or von Horst indicate a marriage or children. Her advocacy for release, following von Horst’s internment, suggests a deep, marriage-like mutual commitment.

Lillian and von Horst’s resistance to the Pilgrims Society’s globalist agenda—from British Zionism to the League of Nations—fueled their persecution. Her 1924 European travels likely aimed to reconnect with von Horst, who was barred from the United Kingdom, to bolster their Pilgrims Society exposé. Lillian's 1941 writings revealed her 1908–1912 insights, shared with Stead, that Anglo-American reunification was a “fool’s errand,” despised by average Americans but not the Pilgrims Society’s elitist American apparatchiks. She exposed the Empire Press Union’s manipulation of global opinion against Germany and Russia, and Viscount Milner’s role in destabilizing Russia as an economic rival. The severed Germany-US telegraph cable on August 5, 1914 deepened her distrust. Her letters continued to burn with resolve.

Lillian Scott Troy and Baron Louis von Horst stood unyieldingly against British imperial ambitions. Their alliance was a beacon for Irish freedom, women’s suffrage, and resistance to global manipulation and hegemony. Lillian’s spirit, a flame undimmed by propagandists like Parker and Masterman, warned allies in the darkest times; her notebooks, syndicated news, and Congressional Records were testaments to her fight against tyranny.

Chapter 5

The Press King and the Dark Pact in the Rothschild's Web

In 1908, Lillian stormed into the heart of a smug, cigar-filled den of imperial schemers, her fiery spirit and relentless pursuit of truth unveiling the British Pilgrims Society and its American branch as architects of a ruthless plot to enslave humanity. Among her introductions was William T. Stead, a magnetic media titan and yellow journalist, often hailed as the Father of Tabloid Journalism, whose seductive prose and spiritualist obsessions concealed a deep loyalty to the Rothschilds' empire of greed and control.

W. T. Stead: The Press Prophet and Spirit Whisperer

William Thomas (W. T.) Stead was born on July 5, 1849, in Embleton, Northumberland, England and met his tragic end aboard the Titanic on April 15, 1912. Stead was no mere journalist—he was a “press king” whose words reshaped empires. As editor of The Northern Echo and Pall Mall Gazette, he wielded yellow journalism like a sorcerer’s wand, conjuring public outrage with his 1885 exposé, The Maiden Tribute of Modern Babylon, which shamed MPs into legislative reform regarding the trafficking and sexual exploitation of young girls in London, gripping readers like a gothic thriller.

By 1890, his Review of Reviews, backed by Cecil Rhodes’s gold and George Newnes’s (publisher of the Sherlock Holmes series; P. G. Wodehouse; today Elsevier) ambition, became a megaphone for imperialist dreams, amplifying the Rothschilds’ agenda to dominate America through banking and media manipulation. Stead’s audacious claim that his editorials outshone church sermons reflected Lucifer’s self-delusion. He believed he could govern souls through ink, aligning with the Pilgrims Society’s 1909 Imperial Press Conference goals, where media became a tool of Moloch’s greed and subsequent human sacrifice.

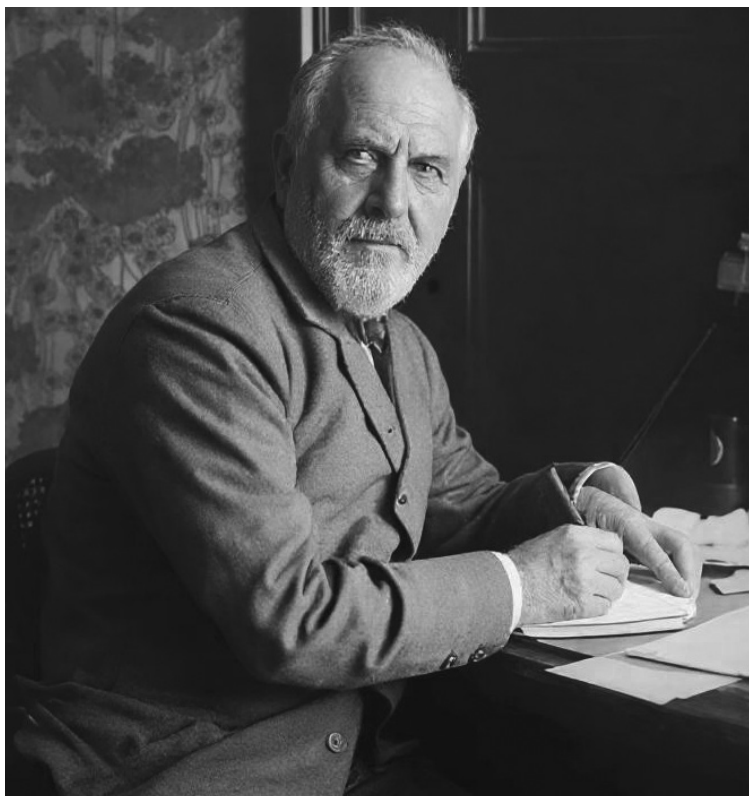

“Government by Journalism”: Stead’s Misguided Vision for Journalism

In 1886, Stead penned his manifesto, “Government by Journalism,” in The Contemporary Review, declaring newspapers more powerful than sermons in swaying the masses. “We write afresh daily the only Bible millions read,” he boasted, revealing a chilling ambition to replace governance with media control. “Every day, a journalist can administer a stimulant or narcotic to his readers’ minds,” he wrote, embracing Lucifer’s self-delusion and Ahriman’s scientific materialism to generate “public opinion, the greatest force in politics.” This vision, steeped in Mammon’s usury and Satan’s lust for power, laid the intellectual groundwork for the Pilgrims Society’s transatlantic schemes, with Stead as its propagandist-in-chief.

The Society of the Elect: Rhodes’ Dream, Milner’s Machinery, Rothschild’s Money

In 1889, W. T. Stead—an electrifying, charismatic imperialist—proposed a secret “Society of the Elect” to advance Cecil Rhodes’s dream of Anglo-Saxon world hegemony, a vision the brooding, homosexual adventurer had outlined in his 1877 Confession of Faith at Oxford and which later found form in the Pilgrims Society.

W. T. Stead. Editor of the Review of Reviews and the Masterpiece Library. Born in 1849. Was Editor of The Northern Echo, Darlington, from 1871 till 1880; editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, 1883–1889. Founded the Review of Reviews, 1890; the American Review of Reviews, 1891; Australasian Review of Reviews, 1894; commenced the Masterpieces Library of Penny Poets, Novels and Prose Classics in 1895. Has issued numerous characteristic publications dealing with public events since 1884.

“It is our duty to seize every opportunity of acquiring more territory . . . for more of the Anglo-Saxon race, the most human, most honorable race the world possesses.”

His call for a secret society, inspired by Jesuit and Masonic tactics, pulsed with Satan’s power and Moloch’s greed, envisioning a “Church for the extension of the British Empire.”

Rhodes’s death on March 26, 1902, at age 48, cut short his plans, but his Round Table disciples—led by fellow Privy Counsellor Viscount Alfred Milner, the cold, calculating strategist—seized the moment. While Rhodes chased dominion with brash ambition, Milner wove intricate webs of bureaucratic control, their combined efforts birthing the Pilgrims Society on July 16, 1902, at London’s Carlton Hotel, mere months after the 2nd Boer War’s end.

The Rothschilds’ Shadow: Financing the Imperial Dream

Central to this unholy alliance was Lord Walter Rothschild, whose vast banking empire fueled the Pilgrims Society’s establishment. W. T. Stead’s “elect,” which prominently listed Lord Rothschild among its top three, drew from politics, banking, finance, religion, and media. Cecil Rhodes, leveraging his status as a Privy Counsellor, alongside Lord Rosebery (Rothschild), Lord Pirbright (Rothschild), and Lord Milner—fellow Privy Counsellors—wielded influence through elitist networks like the Round Table, Milner's Kindergarten, and the Fabian Society collegiums. The 1909 Imperial Press Conference, a Rothschild-backed triumph, saw the British Pilgrims Society and its American branch—bolstered by figures like Joseph Choate, Andrew Carnegie, John D. Rockefeller, J. P. Morgan, and Elihu Root—merge bank, media, finance, and science to dominate global narratives, a scheme steeped in Mammon's usury and Moloch's human sacrifice. The Treaty of Vereeniging (May 31, 1902), which ended the Second Boer War and its brutal concentration camps, marked a victory for Milner and Field Marshal Lord Frederick Roberts, the Pilgrims' first president, whose atrocities in South Africa echoed Moloch's bloodlust.

Lillian Scott Troy: The Feisty Truth-Teller in the Den

Into this cigar-smoked, brandy-soaked maelstrom strode Lillian Scott Troy, a beautiful, unyielding

American journalist, placed by divine providence into the Pilgrims' lair. Her warmth and courage drew confidences from guarded souls, including rare support from MPs and aristocrats like Baron Louis von Horst, yet she faced relentless persecution from the Pilgrims Society's elitists. Lillian's exposés of their 1909 conference unmasked their greed-driven agenda, confronting the demonic forces of Lucifer (self-delusion), Satan (power), Mammon (usury), Moloch (greed, human sacrifice), and Ahriman (scientific materialism). Her battle, waged until her death in 1964, was a spiritual struggle akin to the stubbornness of wealth described in Matthew 19:16–22, where the rich cling to power, fearing divine judgment, yet refusing repentance.

Stead's Spiritualist Seduction: A Queen's Fascination

Stead's obsession with spiritualism—séances, spirit writing, and communing with the dead through his magazine Borderland—captivated even Queen Victoria, who devoured his mystical musings. True clairvoyants note that the elitist fascination with such practices stems from their fear of death's abyss, seeking solace for sins they refuse to relinquish. Stead's spiritualism, a veil of Lucifer's self-delusion, masked his role in the Rothschilds' web, aligning his media empire with their imperialist goals. His tragic end on the Titanic did not erase his legacy as a press king who paved the way for the Pilgrims' global domination.

The Pilgrims' Enduring Shadow: From Rhodes to Stirrup

The Pilgrims Society, born from Rhodes's and Milner's psychopathic ambition, thrives today under figures like Marshal of the Royal Air Force The Right Honourable Baron Jock Stirrup, KG, GCB, AFC, FRAeS, FCMI, current Pilgrims Society president in The City of London. From General Lord Frederick Roberts in 1902 to Stirrup, its Privy Counsellor presidents have perpetuated a demonic legacy. Lillian's fearless fight to expose their schemes—rooted in the sins of Moloch and his ilk—calls us to wield these truths as tools to forge freer, more loving societies, unshackled from the Pilgrims' demonic dream to enslave humanity.

Pilgrims Society Presidents since inception in 1902

Highlighted below are the Pilgrims Society presidents that Lillian Scott Troy herself worked tirelessly to expose until her death in 1964.

The Titanic Conspiracy: A Deadly Plot to Silence a Federal Reserve Dissenter

On April 15, 1912, the RMS Titanic sank, claiming over 1,500 lives, including W. T. Stead's.

J. P. Morgan, a prominent member of the Pilgrims Society, canceled his Titanic voyage at the last moment—a ship he owned along with its sister ship the Olympic. Research by Lillian, corroborated by films, photographs, and Parliamentary records, suggests Morgan arranged to substitute his damaged Olympic for its twin, the Titanic, to secure an insurance payout for prior irreparable damage to the Olympic caused by a captain's reckless (and uninsurable) actions. This move conveniently eliminated William T. Stead, whose increasing skepticism about the Pilgrims Society's goals, as Lillian noted in 1940, posed a threat to its agenda.

It is well known in hindsight that Morgan was financing a fleet of ships that could be converted to troop ships for the coming, planned Pilgrims Society war with Germany (WWI). Indeed, the relabeled Titanic (RMS Olympic) was requisitioned by the British Admiralty in May 1915, designated HMT Olympic (hired military transport), stripped of peacetime fittings, armed with 12-pounder and 4.7-inch guns, and painted in dazzle camouflage. It could carry 6,000 troops per voyage. Olympic (the real Titanic that never sank) transported over 200,000 American troops and personnel, traveling approximately 184,000 miles, to support WWI.

The sinking of the Titanic (Olympic) was followed by the creation of the Federal Reserve in 1913 under Lord Lionel Walter Rothschild's influence, highlighting the Rothschilds' ability to manipulate major events to advance their agenda of reclaiming America, a tragedy that left Lillian grieving her mentor, W. T. Stead, while fueling her resolve.

The following list of passengers missing from the Titanic, revised from last reports from the Carpathia, contains only 214 actual names out of the total of 1,533 lost, but many more are accounted for in the steerage reports under the word "family." Still more of the victims in the steerage have not yet been named, and few, if any, of the names of the missing among the crew have been reported.

Chapter 6

Lillian's Scathing Investigations into the Pilgrims Society's Global Crimes

Lillian poured her heart into every investigation, her empathy for the oppressed turning her words into weapons that struck at the core of injustice. Lillian's probe into the Pilgrims Society, sparked by her 1909 Imperial Press Conference news coverage for The San Francisco News Company, unleashed a torrent of incisive exposés in major US and British newspapers. Her meticulously researched articles unmasked the Pilgrims Society's (Rhodes'/Rothschilds') plot to return America to British rule, tackling the corrupt monarchy, republicanism, women's rights, the financial robber barons, including steel plutocrat Andrew Carnegie (Pittsburg's Pompous Plute [Plutocrat] and The Feudal Andrew), and imperialistic global affairs. Through her ties with W. T. Stead and access to elitist circles, Lillian exposed the Rothschild-led Pilgrims executive council's strategies, resonating with readers wary of foreign influence, particularly Britain, though her work drew British MI6, MI5, and Scotland Yard intelligence scorn and led to her deportation from England. The following articles highlight her fearless journalism and its seismic impact on public discourse:

Even in her youth, Lillian sensed Andrew Carnegie's duplicity when he declared:

“The public may regard trusts or combinations with serene confidence.”

(Andrew Carnegie, New York Times, October 9, 1888).

Truth: When Pilgrims Society members peddle serenity, they cloak a deception masking war and global domination.

In his 1889 essay Gospel of Wealth, Andrew Carnegie argued, with questionable sincerity—evidenced by his ruthless response to the July 6, 1892, Homestead (Pennsylvania) Strike at his Carnegie Steel Company plant, where ten people were killed three years later—that the wealthy are morally obligated to use their fortunes for societal benefit through philanthropy, claiming wealth accumulation is only justified when it serves the public good. His later celebrated funding of US libraries concealed a Pilgrims Society secret agenda, led by Columbia University president and long-time Pilgrims Society US president, Nicholas Murray Butler, to rewrite American Revolutionary history and stock library reading rooms with pro-British propaganda to sway unsuspecting Americans toward reunification with the British Empire, as exposed by Lillian in her numerous articles. Lillian also uncovered Carnegie's duplicity, revealing that he voted in both America (New York) and Britain (Scotland), undermining his professed loyalty to the American Republic.

Lillian's article (below) "Would Annex America" stunned readers by exposing the Pilgrims Society's scheme to reabsorb America into a British Empire, igniting fierce debates in Tennessee about foreign influence.

WOULD ANNEX AMERICA.

Suffragette Says This Is Purpose of
British Peace Mission.

LONDON, May 12.—Miss Lillian Scott Troy, a novelist and magazine writer from San Francisco, who interested herself in obtaining the release from prison of Miss Zelle Emerson, a Michigan suffragette, has written a letter to Senator O'Gorman, which contains some extraordinary charges against Andrew Carnegie and other noted Americans.

Senator O'Gorman should receive the communication tomorrow. In it Miss Troy makes the extraordinary allegation that the annexation of the United States to England is the ultimate object of the peace movement promoted by Mr. Carnegie and others.

The accusations by Miss Troy became known here today. They are not taken seriously.

She names Elihu Root and the late John Hay as prime movers in behalf of the peace propaganda, since the inauguration of which, she declares, the relations between the United States and Germany and the United States and Japan have become strained.

Miss Troy suggests it is to England's interest to see the United States weakened in conflict with Germany or Japan. She asserts that while Theodore Roosevelt was in Africa the duke of Connaught's aid suggested he should influence the United States to hand the Philippines over to Japan; that the idea of the arbitration treaties was not Taft's, but that of Carnegie and King Edward, who sent it to America to be labeled "Made in the U. S. A.;" The Hague tribunal is essentially a British product, instituted simply for the ultimate undoing of the United States, and that Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, and others are rewriting American history to disparage the heroes of the Revolution.

Lillian's "Carnegie Offered a Dukedom." revealed that, among King Edward VII's first acts as the new king, he traveled to Scotland for a private visit with Andrew Carnegie to offer him a noble title if he would hasten to bring America back to the Empire. The exposé sparked transatlantic outrage, exposing the Pilgrims Society's audacious bid to co-opt American industrialists. Publishing in labor and suffragette-friendly outlets, Lillian confronted the Pilgrims' elitist networks head-on.

CARNEGIE OFFERED A DUKEDOM.

Ed. Seventh's Proposition to the Hero of Homestead.

ANNEXATION OF THE U.S.A.

Extraordinary Facts Unearthed by An American Lady.

(Special to the "Daily Herald.")

"Yes. I was offered a Dukedom by the late King Edward, if I would bring about the annexation of the United States."

This is the text of the extraordinary statement furnished by one of the most reliable newspapers on the Pacific Coast, the "San Francisco Examiner," to one of the most prominent millionaires in a land of money-bags.

Andrew Carnegie.

The Laird of Sills—and the hero of Homestead. The man who made his money out of steel—or rather out of the steelworkers. Who dugged his workers by proxy and found salvation through the bullets of hired gunmen, from the destroying monster of Trade Unionism.

The pacifist and patriot, anxious to see swords replaced by ploughshares—made in Pittsburgh?—and equally anxious to shoulder a rifle against the Japanese. At least, so he says.

A great man, Andrew Carnegie.

So great that he turned down the late Ned's offer of the steelworkers' lotteries. This is what he says about it:—

"I replied that I was an American citizen, and that every citizen of the United States is a King."

Whether his late Maj. made the traditional reply of "the crowd," or fainted on the spot, or beat his fancy vest and wept briny tears into his plug hat, deponent sayeth not.

Carnegie refused. That's all we can tell you at present.

Of course, when a man is a king—and every brownie's slave who sweats out his life before the furnaces in the Pittsburgh foundries has a crown he wears somewhere, if Andrew is correct—he would naturally sniff at a mere dukedom.

Still, it's a pity. Andrew should have thought again. After all—Duke of Homestead! It hath a pleasant sound.

Besides, his late Maj. wasn't asking for much! He might have asked Carnegie to arrange for the annexation of Europe, whilst he was about it, in any suiting of Aids. What's worth doing at all—

We hope to give further details of this delicate business later. It appears that Miss Lillian Scott Troy, whose name will doubtless be familiar in many of our readers in connection with the recent imprisonment of Miss Zelle Emerson, the American Suffragist, has written a long letter to Senator O'Gorman on the subject. Therein she states that not only Carnegie, but several other prominent Americans are involved in the alleged annexation scandal.

THE PENNY POLL.

Two thousand five hundred readers have already voted on the Penny Proposition.

We won't divulge the state of the poll for a day or two.

But we would like to urge upon every reader who is here to stick a hellpenny stamp

Figure 45: On May 13, 1913, the London-based Daily Herald published an article titled "CARNEGIE OFFERED A DUKEDOM," revealing that His Majesty King Edward VII, referred to as "Ed. Seventh" and titular president of the Pilgrims Society, offered a dukedom to Andrew Carnegie, the "Hero of Homestead," as part of a plan to annex the United States, as exposed by Lillian Scott Troy.

Alternatively, Edward VII may have proposed a dukedom in the Knights of Malta, English Priory, which he also ruled, to avoid upsetting his titled blood aristocrats, similar to US Supreme Court Chief Justice John G. Roberts Jr., who has not denied his membership and tacitly confirmed it through recent recusal compliance. Lillian Scott Troy's sharp pen and biting sarcasm, evident in her mocking "Hero of Homestead" label, exposed these extraordinary facts, driven by her outrage over Carnegie's Gospel of Wealth deception, the murder of his steelworkers, and his obedience to the Pilgrims Society's directives from The City of London. Nose of One Woman Broken by Prison Attendants Who Continue Feeding Her Through Nostrils, Lillian Scott Troy Says.

Miss Lillian Scott Troy, the talented San Francisco authoress, has written the following article on England's treatment of the militant suffragettes, especially for The St. Louis Star.

BY LILLIAN SCOTT TROY.

LONDON, May 24.—Although I am not a militant, I am firmly of the opinion that neither the Irish nor the women will get what they want from any English party without fighting for it.

My attention was first drawn to the case of Miss Zelle Emerson, the Michigan suffragette, imprisoned in Holloway Jail for window smashing, by the statement of Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, just after her release from Holloway Jail. Miss Pankhurst wrote that the American woman was in a desperate state.

I saw a young girl who had been confined in the cell adjoining Miss Emerson's and questioned her very closely regarding her fellow prisoner. She not only confirmed Miss Pankhurst's allegations, but added other details which cemented my determination to exert every effort, determination and attempts to have mouth are cruelly lacerated."

The precedent being well established that the only aid Americans in trouble in England may expect is from the United States direct, I sent a cable to Senator William Alden Smith of Michigan, advising him of Miss Emerson's condition and treatment.

The morning after I had cabled Senator Smith, a woman called at my hotel and informed me that she was Mrs. Mary Ford of New York. She said Miss Emerson's mother had just arrived in England, and that she was keeping Mrs. Emerson away from the American press representatives.

She had heard that I was very active in trying to obtain Miss Emerson's release, and she proceeded to throw cold water on my efforts by telling me that Mrs. Emerson had been to the United States Embassy and had been informed by Mr. Laughlin, the charge d'affaires, that he could do nothing for Miss Emerson, and had "no intention of making an international matter of the affair."

LONDON, May 21.—An American girl who has covered herself with suffragette glory is Miss Lillian Scott Troy of San Francisco. Miss Troy is a writer and a woman of means. In the campaign for Miss Zelle Emerson's release from jail she took a leading part. She achieved her greatest distinction, however, in the days of the great dock strike. Her heart was moved with pity by the plight of the wretched children of the idle strikers. She gave an urchin his dinner. Within a few minutes there were dozens of hungry mouths to be fed. Miss Troy then began a systematic plan of feeding all hungry children of the strikers. At first it looked as if the strike would last but a few days. As month after month dragged by, however, with the strike still in force, Miss Troy stuck to her self-appointed task. When the strikers gave in she had given their hungry youngsters 96,000 meals.

Historical Context: Skibo Castle, situated four miles from Dornoch, Scotland, spanned an 8,000-acre estate featuring twenty-one rooms, twelve lodges, and a 3,000-square-foot swimming pavilion, serving as the renowned residence of Andrew Carnegie, who was registered to vote in British elections, and where His Majesty King Edward VII visited soon after his enthronement to speed up the annexation of America. The Phrase “‘Is ‘Ighness,” a Cockney London working-class dialect version of “His Highness,” echoes the informal and irreverent way the king was sometimes addressed. The term “Library Peddler” points to Carnegie’s recent commitment of a $100 million donation to construct libraries across the United States, a tactic understood by few beyond Lillian as a cynical element of the 24-Step Pilgrims Society strategy to annex America.

British Home Secretary Intimates That Library Peddler Is Not Unlikely a Loyal Subject of 'Is 'Ighness

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Andrew Carnegie's stay at Skibo castle this summer does not promise to be as uneventful as usual.

Miss Lillian Scott Troy, a Californian, who dug up the fact that Mr. Carnegie's name is enrolled on the list of parliamentary voters in Dornock parish, Sutherland county, Scotland, is still on the laird's trail. She wants to know whether Mr. Carnegie is an American citizen, and, as part of her campaign to demonstrate that he is not, she intends to file a protest against the retention of his name on the voting list in Scotland.

The marquis of Buthardine, the son and heir of the duke of Atholl, also intends to register a protest against Mr. Carnegie's name being kept on the voting list.

Both of these protests must be filed before August 20, and, in due course of time, the revising officer will notify the parties to appear before him and state their cases.

Miss Troy intends to go to Scotland herself. She says frankly that she hopes Mr. Carnegie will be induced to testify, and give her an opportunity to cross-examine him.

When the citizenship question arose Miss Troy got Will Thorne, a labor member of parliament, to write Home Secretary McKenna in regard to Mr. Carnegie's status. One of Mr. McKenna's answers seems to require some explanation from Mr. Carnegie.

It is dated "Home office," and reads as follows:

"Dear Thorne: You wrote me the other day asking whether Andrew Carnegie is a British subject and suggesting that the appearance of his name in the list of Dornock voters is sufficient evidence of British nationality."

"I am afraid I am not in position to reply definitely. The appearance of a name in the lists of voters is not conclusive as to British nationality, as occasionally persons who are not British subjects get on the lists."

"So far as I know, Mr. Carnegie was born in the United Kingdom, and by virtue of this would be a British subject, and unless he has ever done anything to divest himself of his British nationality (and I have never heard that he has), he remains a British subject."

Mr. Page, the American ambassador, and his wife, will soon be guests of Mr. Carnegie at Skibo castle and, if possible, Miss Troy would like the question of the laird's citizenship thrashed out during the ambassador's stay there.

Historical Context: This article coincided with Andrew Carnegie's announcement of his $100 million library donation, a move published two weeks before the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) was formed on October 7, 1913, marking the start of a series of pivotal events. It also appeared just three months before the US Federal Reserve was established on December 23, 1913, backed by The City of London banks that cleverly circumvented laws against foreign bank stock ownership—hindsight shows this as a legal façade, with the Fed's key investors materially controlled through financial ties to The City of London, including the Rothschilds, Barings, Warburgs, Bevens, and Barclays, among others. The juxtaposition of these world-control events is not lost on the reader, defying any notion of coincidence.

DAILY H

CARNEGIE AGAIN.

Pittsburg's Pompous Plute Defies
the Law.

A CITIZEN OF TWO COUNTRIES.

(Special to the "Daily Herald.")

If there is any doubt among the workers that Fat Men are above the law, here is one unmistakable proof at any rate.

Andrew Carnegie is a Fat Man of a particularly odious type. He is a "malefactor of great wealth." And because of his great wealth is so far above the law and Government of the two countries that he claims citizenship in both Britain and the United States. As a matter of fact, he is a citizen of both countries. It is against the law so to be, but then Carnegie is one of the Fattest of Fat Men, before whom statesmen and judges are as mere worms.

So far as America is concerned, however, Andrew Carnegie is an "undesirable citizen." To their credit, thousands of American citizens are ashamed of Carnegie's connection with their country. His wealth has been made out of the blood-sweat of multitudes of wage-slaves, and when these wage-slaves revolted at Homestead he, by the use of the militia and Pinkertons, murdered them.

There is an effort being made in the States to purge the country of Carnegie. It has been pointed out to the authorities that he cannot be an American citizen, because he is a British subject. Carnegie denies that he is a British subject, and so the game goes on. He describes himself as "an American sovereign," and last year he was at great pains to cast his vote for Mr. Taft.

The Feudal Andrew.

Miss Lillian Troy, an American authoress, residing in London, has taken up the fight on this side of the water. Andrew has a castle in Scotland, and is by way of being a feudal baron in Dornoch and district.

Miss Troy discovered that Andrew is on the register of Dornoch as a voter. Now that is against the law of this land. If Carnegie is an American citizen he is an alien. According to the Naturalisation Act of 1870, no alien can qualify "for any office or for any municipal, Parliamentary, or other franchise." Nevertheless, the register of Dornoch reads: "No. 11, Carnegie, Andrew, gentleman, Skibo Castle, proprietor of lands, Skibo." And his two American secretaries, James Bertram and A. C. Barrow, also appear on the register.

Miss Troy obtained the certificate of P. Cooke, deputy chief clerk of the Manhattan Board of Elections, to the effect that Andrew Carnegie appears on the register of electors for the 24th ward of the 29th Assembly District of Manhattan.

Armed with these certificates Miss Troy got Will Thorne, M.P., to trouble our own McKenna about it. McKenna's reply to the question as to whether Carnegie was a British subject was: "As far as is known Mr. Carnegie was born in the United Kingdom, and in virtue of this he would be a British subject, and unless he had ever done anything to divest himself of his British nationality, and I have never heard he has, he remains a British subject."

The answer to McKenna is the certificate from Manhattan. And James Bertram, one of Carnegie's secretaries, declared in New York that "Mr. Carnegie is an American citizen, and became so without naturalisation, because he came here when he was eleven years old, and his father was naturalised before he became of age."

Jim O'Grady, M.P., attempted to get questions through in the House of Humberg, but they were ruled out, "on the ground that no Minister could be held responsible for Carnegie's name being on the register. It was a matter to be tested locally by objection before the revising barrister."

The matter now rests with the local electors of Dornoch. Is there not one among all these with the courage to lodge a protest against the hand of Skibo, an alien, a "malefactor of great wealth," the Homestead murderer, being allowed to exercise the franchise in this country?

The second railway fatality within a week occurred at Carlisle on Saturday, when James Lennie fell from a wagon in the N.E. goods warehouse and was killed.

A movement is on foot for the formation of a Union to comprise all the workers in the bakery trade, other than operative bakers and confectioners. A meeting with this object in view was held at the Co-operative Hall, Little Newport Street, yesterday.

In her article, “Carnegie Again: Pittsburgh’s Pompous Pluto Defies the Law,” Lillian accused Carnegie of illegally voting in New York and Scotland, backed by voter roll evidence. Dubbed the “Laird of Skibo” (Scottish land-owning title) for his thirteenth-century Scottish Skibo Castle, Carnegie’s alleged double-voting resonated with Stockton’s working-class readers, who loathed his industrial dominance. Their scorn unknowingly targeted the Pilgrims Society’s Rothschild-led leadership.

In “Women Object To Ambassador Page, Claim That His Addresses Are Too Pro-English,” American women in London protested US Ambassador and Pilgrims Society member Walter Page’s proEnglish speech claiming America remains “English led and English ruled,” prompting a derisive letter from Lillian Scott Troy to Senator Sherman criticizing Page’s remarks as advancing British annexation efforts led by figures like Andrew Carnegie and Elihu Root. Troy warned that such statements could provoke conflict with Germany, ultimately weakening the United States to become a British colony with Japanese assistance, while mocking the idea of abolishing American institutions for British dominance.

WOMEN OBJECT TO AMBASSADOR PAGE	His Excellency, as the ambassador is called in England, recently delivered an address at Southampton on the occasion of the unveiling of a monument on the spot where the Pilgrim Fathers offered their last prayer before embarking for America. During the course of his remarks he stated that America is still "English led and English ruled" and pointed out the fact that with the exception of Colonel Roosevelt, every president of this country was predominantly English in descent. The writer, Mrs. Lillian Scott Troy, enclosed several clippings from

letter and cablegram to President Woodrow Wilson, sharply criticizing US Ambassador to Great Britain Walter Hines Page for comments made during a London Peace Centenary dinner (“the United States is yet English-led and English-ruled”), calling them offensive to Americans and non-English-speaking nations and labeling him a “sycophant,” “traitor,” and “Benedict Arnold.” Some suffragists opposed her stance, unaware of the Pilgrims Society’s conspiracy that Lillian recognized behind the Ambassador’s remarks. Ambassador Hines is notably celebrated in the Pilgrims’ centennial history, where his quote praising them—“They gather the best and noblest in the public life of the two great nations”—is prominently featured, evidently detested by Lillian as an anglophile sellout to America.

London, April 16.—The deportation from the United Kingdom of Miss Lillian Scott Troy, of San Francisco, an American suffragette is announced.

Miss Troy was a friend of Baron Lewis Von Horst, formerly of San Francisco, who was interned by the British government in August 1914. Miss Troy, it is said, worked indefatigably to obtain the release of Baron Von Horst.

Figure 53: Editor. (Aug. 2, 1919). "Lillian Troy, Deported From England. Dupe of Von Horst. Became Germany Tool. Sydney 'Sun.'" Woodland Star, The Sydney Sun, Woodend Star. Public domain.

This article is a prime example of Empire Press Union propaganda, designed to smear Lillian Scott Troy following her deportation from Britain. Nothing like this ever occurred against Lillian when Stead was alive.

One of the most intriguing aspects of this article was that even her critics described her as "a good-looking woman" and framed her association with Baron von Horst as “one of the great romances of the war.” The piece accused her of “defaming our cause”—referring to the British war effort against Germany—and insinuated she was “actually a German agent,” though it admitted there was no concrete proof, nor was she ever arrested.

The intent was clearly to spread innuendo, portraying Lillian to the general public as a scheming malcontent responsible for a litany of disruptions, including:

- industrial unrest
- militant suffragism
- collaboration with Irish Sinn Féin
- being a dupe of Baron Louis von Horst
- inciting labor strikes including the London dock strike of 1911
- providing “words of encouragement” and financial support to strikers’ and suffragettes’ families—though it omitted her documented purchase of 60,000 meals for the children of striking mothers
- the Ulster troubles in Belfast in 1914, “although it cannot be definitely proved”
- acting as a “female accomplice” to von Horst

- authoring “many inflammatory political articles” (about the Pilgrims Society and the Benedict Arnold Society conspirators) in the English press
- involvement in “the Dublin rebellion of Easter week, 1916” (called The Easter Rising today)
- being “very friendly with James Connolly, the Sinn Féin leader who was executed by order of a court-martial after the rebellion had been crushed.” We have not been able to corroborate this accusation anywhere

The wide range of charges directed at Lillian now appears completely nonsensical in hindsight. These accusations highlight a cunning “gaslighting” tactic crafted by the Pilgrims Society’s Empire Press Union since its inception in 1909, later amplified with Tavistock Institute’s psychological manipulation methods, backed by Pilgrims Society Rockefeller funding. Shielded by the King’s Court’s immunity from defamation lawsuits, critics could tirelessly fling baseless accusations at someone like Lillian, forcing her to perpetually disprove actions she never committed. (Recall: The Trump-Russia Hoax.)

Notably, the article depicted her cinema ownership as intentional “loss leaders”—ventures

typically engineered to operate at a loss to conceal illicit activities such as money laundering, drug trafficking, human trafficking, or political disruption. These cinemas were claimed to run deficits while screening anti-British propaganda films, with the piece labeling them a “criminal plot.” It also commended the British secret police’s detailed monitoring of Lillian and their orchestration of her deportation. This British propaganda surfaced in Sydney, Australia—a location Lillian had never visited—where her public persona was entirely shaped by the Empire Press Union’s Commonwealth-wide spread. Yet, while the King’s Court’s protection left those opposing the Pilgrims Society’s control, as Lillian demonstrated, largely vulnerable and defenseless, her widely circulated writings emerged as a striking exception!

The “loss leader” allegation was particularly telling, as only bankers with enormous, unrestricted resources could sustain such a tactic—a fact well-known to the propagandists behind it, serving as a clear giveaway. No legitimate business can flourish on a foundation of ongoing losses, exposing this as the work of spies and propagandists peddling falsehoods. Consequently, this claim indicated that the Pilgrims Society’s Empire Press Union, in league with British spies, had designed the article to heighten its defamatory impact to the extreme.

Lillian’s Remarkable Ability to Syndicate Her Investigation Findings

Lillian demonstrated remarkable expertise in securing international newspaper coverage, particularly during the critical period in 1912 when J. P. Morgan was directed by the Pilgrims Society to acquire editorial influence in the United States, and Andrew Carnegie was busy establishing a network of compliant librarians eager to promote

FIGHT FOR REDRESS FROM BRITAIN

The case of Miss Lillian Scott Troy, the American citizen, who was deported from England after 11 years' residence here, is to be brought before Congress.

Mr. Julius Kahn, chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, has offered to introduce a Bill demanding an official investigation, and Miss Troy will seek to have read into the Congressional Record several interesting documents.

These (says the New York "Evening Journal") will include an English book, published in 1909, when a serious immigration controversy arose between Japan and the United States. The book, Miss Troy says, was an official anti-American propaganda book issued by England, and for criticism of it Miss Troy incurred the animosity of the British Government.

Discussing the Bill, which Representative Kahn has consented to introduce, Miss Troy said she did not seek to secure re-entrance to England, but wished redress from the British Government.

pro-British narratives and newspapers in their collections. Few publicists today could match such productivity.

Could these directives to Morgan and Carnegie have been a deliberate reaction to Lillian's success in challenging their falsehoods? This seems highly probable, given that our research reveals most of the press then as servile followers of the Pilgrims' generously-funded agenda thanks to Carnegie, J. P. Morgan, and the Rothschilds (Reuters, Associated Press, and United Press).

Impact and Legacy

Lillian's articles electrified diverse audiences, sparking outrage over the Pilgrims Society's agenda. Despite elitist derision and deportation, her exposés like "Would Annex America" and "Carnegie Offered a Dukedom" unmasked the Pilgrims Society executive council's transatlantic ambitions, earning both admiration and opposition.

Her suffragette writings inspired women to tie their fight to anti-imperialism, her personal stories of feeding hungry children of suffragettes struck a chord of sympathy for their mistreatment. Lillian's evidence-based journalism set a towering standard, and her courage in confronting power left an indelible mark on American journalism and the pursuit of justice, a legacy that feels as alive as a heartfelt conversation with an old friend.

Chapter 7

American Traitors— The Benedict Arnold Society Exposed

Lillian channeled her outrage into exposés that humanized the betrayed, her words painting vivid portraits of lives upended by treachery. Lillian branded Andrew Carnegie a linchpin in the Pilgrims Society’s American operations, dubbing him part of the “Benedict Arnold Society.” His 2,500 libraries, funded by his steel fortune, served as conduits for pro-British, anti-American Revolution narratives, reshaping perceptions to favor British reintegration.

This highlights the extent of brainwashing among most Americans, who speak highly of a wealthy individual (Andrew Carnegie) who donated funds to construct libraries, unaware of his cynical agenda to reintegrate America into British control.

The Pilgrims Society today just recently officially confirmed Carnegie’s membership, even though most knowledgeable researchers have assumed this by his behavior and interlocks. At the same time, they removed access to the last fourteen years of their newsletters, which appear to have been posted inadvertently. That full site has been captured and is available at: [https://fbcoverup.com/docs/library/2023-from-2009-The-Pilgrims-\[Society\]-of-Great-Britain-\[and-United-States\]-Website-Newsletters-biannual-2009-2023.pdf](https://fbcoverup.com/docs/library/2023-from-2009-The-Pilgrims-[Society]-of-Great-Britain-[and-United-States]-Website-Newsletters-biannual-2009-2023.pdf)

Pilgrim Andrew Carnegie's $100,000,000 Library Deception

In 1913, Lillian's Daily Herald articles accused Carnegie of negotiating a dukedom from King Edward VII. The headline "Carnegie Offered a Dukedom" ignited public fury, showcasing her fearless exposure of Rothschild-influenced figures. While Carnegie officially turned down the offer, strong evidence suggests that he accepted some sort of "dukedom" in the Knights of Malta, English Priory, as current Chief Justice John G. Roberts Jr. holds. Many Pilgrims-controlled front organizations are directed by Knights of Malta, notably on the Atlantic Council and Council on Foreign Relations.

Infiltrating America's Core

The Pilgrims Society infiltrated American communications and media through AT&T, RCA, NBC, GEC, GE, BBC, Marconi Wireless America, Western Electric, the Bell System, Westinghouse, Cable & Wireless, Western Union, Zenith, United Fruit Company (South American Telephone), RCA-Aegis Combat System, Navy-

Admiralty, CBS, and ABC, while penetrating politics via Woodrow Wilson's The Inquiry. In 1919, then Under Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt, a Pilgrims Society member, ordered all communications companies to share their patents with RCA in order to maintain their contracts with the US government—the fix was in.

Figure 56: In 1919, the Radio Corporation of America (RCA) was ordered formed by then deputy secretary of the Navy, Pilgrims Society member Franklin D. Roosevelt. It was to be a monopoly controlled by the Pilgrims Society to control the airwaves without competition and with Anglo-American government controls. These ideas evolved from the Rothschild control of Reuters, Associated Press, and Telegraphy, and then to integrate wireless telegraphy (then later television, satellites, and now internet). The following companies shared over 2,000 patents with RCA America, and RCA Britain (now SERCO Group plc) in order to retain their government contracts: Aegis, AT&T, BBC, Bell System, Cable & Wireless, General Electric, Marconi Wireless America, Marconi Wireless Great Britain, NBC, RCA, Western Electric, Western Union, Westinghouse, Zenith.

Prime Minister H. H. Asquith—baby grand daddy to Carrie (née Bevan) Johnson, 8th PM Boris wife-paramour—would not defend Lillian, nor would his secretary of state to whom he deferred, according to the Parliamentary Record. US Ambassador Page is featured in The Pilgrims of Great Britain centennial history on page 11.

The Federal Reserve: A Rothschild Financial Coup

On December 23, 1913, three months after US Ambassador Page’s scandalous “We are English-led and English-ruled” remark on September 23, 1913, in London, the Federal Reserve was established by J. P. Morgan, Paul Warburg, and Nelson W. Aldrich—all confirmed Pilgrims Society members. This marked a triumph for the Rothschilds’ plan to merge US banking with Britain’s debt-based fiat system through the Bank of England. Lillian’s 1919 articles exposed the Society’s role, portraying it as a tool for British economic domination over America, her writing evoking demands for resistance by policymakers from families caught in debt-slavery.

Lillian watched as the British banks secretly capitalized the Federal Reserve under the ruse of “American banks-only,” when in fact, she knew that the British banks were overtaking the American banking system by stealth. Here's how they did it, taken from the Fed's first 1914 balance sheet (overview and table following).

Capitalization Table: Top Seven Bank Investors in the US Federal Reserve, 1914

US banking regulations, in theory, restricted foreign ownership of Federal Reserve shares, redirecting British investment towards bonds, notes (including promissory notes and commercial paper), and other cash instruments (such as certificates of deposit and bills of exchange), often handled through nominee banks or London-based trusts. These balance sheets, however, do not disclose offshore connections between British and American banks.

Consequently, while no British bank formally “owned” Fed shares on record, that propaganda was a ruse, their interlocked relationships with US banks that did acquire shares allowed them to exert covert control over American banking. In that era, availability of such financial details was limited to national archives or occasionally published in newspapers, but remained largely inaccessible for practical use. Thus, this Federal Reserve maneuver unfolded in the shrouded secrecy of the Pilgrims Society.

The Hidden (British Pilgrims) Hand Directing the US Federal Reserve

As mentioned earlier, three months before the Federal Reserve was established, Lillian launched a syndicated campaign to have Andrew Carnegie stripped of his American citizenship after exposing him for voting fraudulently in both New York and Scotland. Having studied Cecil Rhodes' Last Will and Testament, which outlined his vision of global hegemony, Lillian was well aware of the ambitions shared by Carnegie's associates—to marshal all available wealth and resources toward the annexation of America.

British banks utilized third-party nominee banks, such as Guaranty Trust and Brown Shipley & Co., along with London trusts, to shape the influence of US investors in the Federal Reserve. While stock ownership is often seen as the key to control, in the realm of high finance, the daily flow of bonds, notes, commercial paper, certificates of deposit, and bills of exchange wields greater power.

These financial instruments frequently feature “most favored nation” clauses, ensuring priority repayment to select parties and leaving shareholders as the last to receive returns. This mechanism allowed banks like Rothschild, The Bank of England, Barings, NatWest, Warburg, Coutts, Bevens, and Barclays to oversee American banking. Their borrowing resembles a huge Ponzi scheme, with one affiliate bank securing funds from the Federal Reserve, then lending to another affiliate to clear previous debts, all obscured by intricate legal language and supportive accounting from firms like KPMG, PwC, Ernst & Young, and Deloitte, which also cater to the banks’ clients, weaving a deliberately convoluted network of interlocked interests.

The evidence that Anglo-American-German banker Paul Warburg led the formation of the Federal Reserve in 1913 with The City of London in his pocket is prima facie evidence of the Pilgrims Society takeover. Additionally, these banks harness their ties with asset managers, including BlackRock, Fidelity, State Street, and Vanguard, to conceal their influence over the Fed.

Chapter 8

Deportation and Unyielding Defiance

Lillian confronted her most challenging moment with a calm resilience that uplifted those around her, transforming personal grief into a powerful call for liberty. On April 9, 1919—11 weeks before the Treaty of Versailles on June 28, 1919—MI5, MI6, and Scotland Yard arrested Lillian Scott Troy, escorting her from London to Liverpool under close guard. Her property and research were seized, and she was compelled to board the RMS Carmania, a just demilitarized Cunard Line ocean liner.

Her deportation dominated headlines, even overshadowing major end-of-war political stories. Coverage appeared in The New York Times, Pine Bluff Daily Graphic, and Stockton Evening and Sunday Record. On April 19, 1919, The New York Times reported, “MISS TROY BITTER ON ENGLISH POLICE; Deported Woman Declares That Scotland Yard Agents Hounded Her, SAYS

NO CHARGE WAS LAID, Alleged Friend of Baron von Horst, Threatens to Bring Up Her Case Here.” On April 15, 1919, a United Press dispatch was carried in The New York Times, Stockton Evening and Sunday Record, and Modesto Morning Herald, among many others.

In subsequent interviews, she defiantly stated that her mistreatment only strengthened her resolve, her voice steady despite the disrespect showed her.

As previously noted, Lillian Scott Troy was subjected to overt character assassination by the Pilgrims Society-founded Empire Press Union, with the smears traveling around the world through the Marconi Wireless Pilgrims Society Down Under to Australia!

Campaign Against Lillian by the Empire Press Union and Allies (Associated Press, Reuters)

In stark contrast, a thorough and impartial investigation would have highlighted the glaring omission in these attacks: the 24-step plan that Lillian uncovered in 1909 and published in 1912, which laid bare the British Pilgrims

LONDON, April 15.—Miss Lillian Scott Troy, 37, of San Francisco, has been deported to the United States for "activities detrimental to the British and allied cause," the home office announced today.

LLOYD-GEORGE HAS REACHED ENGLAND

United Press.]

LONDON, April 15. — Premier Lloyd-George, who arrived from Paris last night, was expected to lay the case of the British peace delegates before the conservative House of Commons today.

The unionist majority in commons recently directed a memorandum to the premier, demanding that Germany be made to pay the full cost of the war and virtually asking why Lloyd-George was evading his pre-election pledges. His speech will be a reply to this memorandum.

Some newspapers professed to see a cabinet crisis resulting from the present situation.

Lloyd-George on his arrival here, gave out a brief statement in which he said "all is going well."

Figure 57: Editor. (Apr. 15, 1919). "The English Deport American Woman For Activity In Ireland." Stockton Daily Evening and Sunday Record (Stockton, California). Public domain.

Society's scheme to annex America, facilitated by figures like the Rothschilds, J. P. Morgan, Warburg, Andrew Carnegie, Paul Warburg, and the Bank of England (entities that effectively received 25 percent of the gold invested in the Federal Reserve by American banks). Unsurprisingly, such damning revelations were entirely omitted from their vitriolic screeds against her.

Lillian's deportation provoked fierce American indignation and was challenged in the House of Commons on 27 November 1919 by Scottish MP Neil Maclean, who declared that Britain's "reputation for justice and fair play" hung in the balance. The Prime Minister—Pilgrims Society co-founder Herbert H. Asquith—brushed it aside, insisting that the Home Secretary (Edward Shortt, a fellow Privy Counsellor and Middle Temple barrister like every Pilgrims founder) "sees no ground for any inquiry." Asquith, fully aware that his own Pilgrims membership—exposed by Lillian herself—required recusal, spoke anyway. He wanted her silenced and banished, ethics be damned.

The Pilgrims Society has tried to suppress Lillian's evidence of a conspiracy to take down the American Republic to this day; this evidence took us years to bring to light, with God's help.

Lillian's Irish roots and outspoken support for the suffragette cause—including personally cooking and delivering warm meals to the children of imprisoned activists—made her a marked woman for the British secret police. The parallel is striking to today's calls to end the slaughter of Christians and Palestinians, where even the slaughter of children fails to stir the consciences of those (demons) in power. Her probing into the dealings of Carnegie, were most telling, uncovering the way he had striking steel workers murdered while lavishing philanthropy on libraries.

One of the clearest cases of historical erasure appears in the work of Georgetown historian professor Carroll Quigley (1910–1977), celebrated for his alleged exhaustive studies of the Anglo-American power networks. Yet in The Anglo-American Establishment (1981), he omits any mention of the Pilgrims Society, the First Imperial Press Conference of 1909, the 24-step annexation of America plot, or Lillian Scott Troy—even while naming Cecil Rhodes thirty-two times, the Rothschilds twenty-six times, and Carnegie twelve times. The same pattern holds in Tragedy and Hope: A History of the World in Our Time (1966), which likewise ignores the Pilgrims Society, the 1909 Press Conference, and Troy, despite referencing Cecil Rhodes fifty times, the Rothschilds nineteen times, and Carnegie eleven times. It is tempting to think Quigley waited until two years after Lillian's death in 1964 to release Tragedy and Hope—knowing full well she would have torn it apart with unflinching precision.

Historians must analyze events firmly rooted in their original temporal and cultural framework, steering clear of out-of-context assessments: Quigley, for example, fell into this error when (not) discussing the Pilgrims Society's control of Anglo-American activities.

This calculated omission by scholars such as Quigley ranks among the most egregious betrayals of public trust and moral responsibility. His choice to conceal the truth in favor of sanitized, tightly controlled narratives has dealt lasting damage to both the American people and the global community, masking the Pilgrims Society's covert designs to reassert control over the United States. Quigley evidently timed his false narrative to evade a devastating rebuttal by Lillian Scott Troy—had the lioness lived, she surely would have wielded her formidable pen against him, delaying the release of these works until after her death.

Financial and Institutional Retaliation

British authorities seized Lillian's Croydon (South London) assets, including her Hops Extract Company shares and her Orpheus Theatre, aiming to cripple her financially. Modesto Morning Herald reports highlighted these measures, yet Lillian's resolve earned widespread admiration, her letters to friends revealed a woman who found solace in small acts of kindness amid hardship.

Return to a Transformed America

In 1919, Lillian returned to a post-WWI America transformed by prosperity and shifting priorities. She continued writing for independent, labor, and suffragette-friendly outlets like The San Francisco Leader, exposing the Pilgrims Society's influence despite declining health, cementing her legacy as a fearless advocate who turned personal pain into public triumph.

Chapter 9

A Legacy of Unstoppable Courage

Lillian Scott Troy, a radiant force of enduring hope and compassionate strength, transformed her trials into triumphs that touched hearts and ignited movement; her legacy is a warm embrace for future generations. In 1940, Congressman Dr. Jacob Thorkelson from Montana's 1st district entered Lillian's research into the Congressional Record on multiple occasions. This action underscored her foresight while earning widespread respect for her veracity and insightful analysis. Similarly, Congressman Paul W. Shafer from Michigan's 3rd district followed suit with his own insertions.

Thorkelson's entries featured detailed criticisms of the Pilgrims Society, repeating Lillian's drubbing of it as "The Benedict Arnold Peace Society," which he portrayed, like Benedict Arnold, as a traitorous organization established in 1902 to cultivate anglophiles within the United States and bolster British propaganda efforts. He quoted directly from a pamphlet describing its origins: “the Pilgrims Society began in London on July 11, 1902, as an Anglo-American club uniting prominent Englishmen and Americans. An American branch formed shortly after on January 13, 1903, at the old Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York.”

Thorkelson elaborated on its stated objectives: “the society aimed to promote brotherhood among nations, with a special focus on fostering good fellowship between citizens of the United States and its dependencies and subjects of the British Empire” to underwrite its treason. He enumerated notable members, including J. P. Morgan, John D. Rockefeller, Thomas W. Lamont, Andrew W. Mellon, and Nicholas Murray Butler—president of Columbia University, president of the American branch of the Pilgrims Society for eighteen years, FBI progenitor, and a cofounder and twenty-one-year president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Banker Thomas Lamont chaired J. P. Morgan & Co. from 1943 to 1948 and was the great-grandfather of current Connecticut governor Edward “Ned” Lamont Jr., a Pilgrims Society member, according to their 2004 membership roster that was uncovered recently.

Ned Lamont and his wife, Ann Huntress Lamont, boast a net worth of roughly $1.05 billion according to Forbes estimates, excluding any potential British offshore accounts. The couple has never engaged in work that wasn't provided through privileged opportunities. The public link to their financial disclosure alone underscores the enduring shadow cast by the Pilgrims Society over American leadership and governance. Jacob Thorkelson denounced the Pilgrims Society as subversive, pointing out its deep infiltration into military structures, government roles, and particularly academia, clergy, and literary circles.

Figure 58: Columbia University was originally named King's College when it was founded in 1754 by King George II. Alexander Hamilton began his studies there two decades later, in 1774. Hamilton later played a key role in establishing America's first four banks, which were primarily capitalized by City of London investors, including the London Assurance Company, the world's largest shipping insurer at the time, surpassing even Lloyd's of London. Public domain.

Rep. Thorkelson: The Pilgrims Society and Her Sister the English-Speaking Union is the Communist Party

Thorkelson drew a stark parallel between the Pilgrims Society—along with its sister group, the English-Speaking Union—and the Communist Party, warning of their shared capacity to erode the foundations of our Republic. Today, the persistent reluctance of American politicians to even call this nation a Republic reveals an intent to replace it with a majority-ruled tyranny, misbranded as “democracy”—the very system the Founders rejected. As Benjamin Franklin famously reminded Mrs. Elizabeth Powel of Philadelphia, when she asked, “Well, Doctor, what have we got—a republic or a monarchy?” he replied, “A republic—if you can keep it.” Lillian’s article, “Union Now Trembles,” published on April 5, 1941, in The San Francisco Leader, was reprinted in the Congressional Record by Representative Shafer. In it, she critiqued the Union Now movement (reuniting American back into the British Empire) spearheaded by Rhodes Scholar Clarence Streit and supported by the Carnegie Foundation for International Peace, which she knew well to be Pilgrims-driven.

Lillian portrayed “Union Now” as a British-Carnegie-Rhodes scheme designed to erode American sovereignty through promotion of a federal union with the British Empire. She pointed to the widespread distribution of anglophile Clarence K Streit’s book, Union Now, via Carnegie’s libraries and J. P. Morgan’s newspaper editorial networks as key evidence. Streit’s radiogram to London boasted over 2,000,000 American voters backing the union, a claim Troy dismissed as fraudulent. Streit’s archives show strong indicators that he was interlocked with the Pilgrims Society via the English-Speaking Union, as well as his confirmed conspiracies with known Pilgrims Society leaders including US Secretary of State Dean Acheson—progenitor of the Pilgrims Society’s Marshall Plan, and the Atlantic Union Committee.

Lillian’s article traced the Union Now movement to deep-rooted historical schemes, notably William T. Stead’s rift with Cecil Rhodes over his unification plan. Stead’s Review of Reviews later merged into World Review, which became the London publication for Union Now—a development he might have opposed had he been alive. This connection highlighted the Pilgrims Society’s clear intent to annex America. Troy warned against the manipulative tactic of using unsuspecting women to gather petition signatures for the Union Now congressional submission, seeing it as a deceptive strategy to erode American sovereignty and align it with British interests. She correctly foresaw that an awakened and energized American public would mount fierce resistance—and it did.

Her earlier articles, titled “Benedict Arnold Peace Society,” appeared on February 17 and 24, 1912, in The San Francisco Leader and were later reprinted in the Congressional Record through Thorkelson’s remarks on “Steps Toward British Union, a World State, and International Strife.” At the risk of repeating what we have already said, in this book, Lillian denounced Andrew Carnegie’s peace initiatives as covert plots to subvert US independence, comparing them to Benedict Arnold’s infamous betrayal in pursuit of realigning America with Britain.

Fueled by immense wealth and proBritish allegiances, Carnegie established a “peace fund” to manipulate influential figures like President Howard Taft (the first president of the Pilgrims’ English-Speaking Union, note that this fact is now censored from their website, but we captured the page before the censorship), Charles Eliot, Joseph Choate, Whitelaw Reid, and Dwight D. Eisenhower (1963–1966). These individuals advocated arbitration treaties that would entangle America in alliances protecting England from Germany, with the ultimate aim of restoring America to the British Empire. Lillian also attacked the group's control over media outlets, libraries, and educational systems. She also highlighted the Pilgrims priority to seize control of US institutions, such as the Supreme Court and the presidency, in her 24-Steps.

Lillian cited Andrew Carnegie's 1893 book, Triumphant Democracy, which urged an Anglo-American reunion to secure economic dominance. She condemned the British propaganda churned out by the Pilgrims Society's Empire Press Union—founded in 1909—for its open contempt toward Americans and its calculated alliances with Japan, France, and Russia. She warned that such efforts, coupled with internationalist movements like the Rothschild-funded British-Israel World Federation, were eroding America's constitutional foundations.

Figure 60: English-Speaking Union, the “retail” arm of the Pilgrims Society “wholesaler” (Th rkelson). Fair Use. Public domain.

These initiatives advanced a banker-backed vision of a world state, intertwined with secret societies. Through her exposés, Lillian became recognized as an unyielding defender of American independence. In the Congressional Record, Representative Thorkelson described the Pilgrims Society as a “Tory operation,” with the English-Speaking Union serving as its public-facing branch. In this context, “Tory operation” referred to British political actors (Pilgrims) pushing for war with Germany and lobbying for US involvement.

The English-Speaking Union is thriving today, with branches in 65 US cities—including Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dallas, Denver, Des Moines, Detroit, Grinnell, Indianapolis, Lake Placid, Lincoln, Los Angeles, Louisville, Milwaukee, New York, Minneapolis, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Princeton, Providence, Richmond, St. Louis, Salt Lake City, San Diego, San Francisco, Santa Barbara, Savannah, Seattle, Sewanee, Spokane, Tacoma, and Washington, D.C. Thorkelson also entered into the record Troy’s 1912 series exposing a 24-step strategy to annex America, as documented in his Appendix Nos. 5118–5172.

English-Speaking Union offices in America—the “retail” arm of the British Pilgrims Society “wholesaler” (Thorkelson)

In 1912, Lillian Scott Troy published the Pilgrims Society’s 24-step strategy for annexing the United States, disregarding W. T. Stead’s 1909 request to keep it secret.

The plan called for creating an “English-speaking union” as a strategic instrument to extend British influence over America. The English-Speaking Union (ESU) was formally established on May 12, 1920, with former US president William Howard Taft serving as its first American president—a fact quietly erased from the organization’s current website. According to the Pilgrims Society’s own centennial history (2002), former British prime minister and Pilgrim member Earl Arthur Balfour served as the ESU’s first British president, while Winston Churchill was both a founding member and president from 1919 to 1925. Even in their sanitized official histories, the deep interlock between the Pilgrims Society and the ESU is unmistakable.

Study the map below, charting the ESU’s sixty-five active US branches, and the weight of Lillian Scott Troy's foresight becomes impossible to ignore.

If you believe the Carnegie Endowment's financial influence has faded, think again—it remains as potent as ever. The uncovering of Hillary Clinton's private email server revealed a key piece of evidence with ongoing significance: an unpublished agenda and participant roster for a secret “Third CPSR Cryptography and Privacy Conference,” held June 7, 1993, at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, 2400 N Street NW, Washington, D.C. The meeting's stated objective was:

“[A] proposal to require telecommunications manufacturers and service providers to redesign their systems to enable FBI wiretapping.”

The confidential agenda named 54 organizations and 63 individuals in attendance, all united in a common objective: to give the FBI, CIA, and NSA (in conspiracy with MI6, MI5, GCHQ) sweeping authority to monitor every American under the pretext of counterterrorism. By reclassifying all citizens as potential terrorists, these actors sought to justify warrantless surveillance on a national scale. The roster of participants reads like a Who’s Who of Pilgrims Society members and interlocked institutions: the White House, FBI, CIA, Qualcomm, NIST, WilmerHale, George Washington University, Mitre Corporation, US Treasury, Hewlett-Packard (HP), The New York Times, Oracle, The Washington Post, Deloitte, Apple, MacWeek, IEEE, US State Department, Privacy Journal, ACLU, Brown, MIT, Harvard, and many others.

My future patent attorney, James P. Chandler III—who alternated between using the suffixes III, II, and Jr.—was then a law professor and director of the Computers in Law Institute at George Washington University’s National Law Center. As chief strategist for the conference, Chandler coconvened the event with John Podesta, the newly appointed Clinton chief of staff, who presided over this evidently fascist secret meeting hosted at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. This event dictated state-required encryption backdoors that thrive today.

Lasting Impact: A Heroine’s Enduring Fight

Lillian’s Later Years

In 1924, Lillian traveled to Germany to visit Baron Louis von Horst, likely in connection with reviving their hops enterprise—a venture that may have provided her with lasting financial security into retirement. In her later years in Los Angeles, she devoted herself to defending parents’ rights, vigorously opposing state-sponsored sex education programs she believed were harmful to children. On October 31, 1951—just six days after the author’s birth—she lodged a formal complaint with the Los Angeles City School Board, as reported by The Los Angeles Times.

Her advocacy carried a distinctly maternal warmth, even though there is no conclusive evidence—beyond MI5’s speculation about a romantic association with von Horst—that she ever married or had children. Whether she did remains uncertain, and any descendants are warmly invited to share their stories after reading this book.

Lillian Scott Troy’s Legacy

Lillian passed away on September 22, 1964, at the age of eighty-two in Los Angeles. Her later advocacy, particularly against harmful educational curricula, received scant attention from the mainstream press. It is rumored that her papers may have been donated to a library, though none have been located; they might also remain in the possession of a relative. Should these documents surface, they could shed significant new light on her life and work. The author welcomes the opportunity to study such materials to enrich Lillian’s legacy in a potential third edition of this book.

The Pilgrims Society's Enduring Influence

Lillian's Prescient Warnings

Lillian Scott Troy's warnings about the Pilgrims Society have proven strikingly prescient. Supported by powerful financiers and industrialists—including the Rothschilds, J. P. Morgan (Chase), Rockefellers, and Carnegies—the Society's influence has remained largely unchecked. Its reach has shaped global events for over a century, from the League of Nations and Lend-Lease to the Marshall Plan, the Korean War, the United Nations, the Vietnam War, and successive US administrations led by Pilgrims-affiliated presidents such as Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan, Bill Clinton, both George Bushes, Barack Obama, and, more recently, events connected to Donald Trump. Traditionally, the Society extends membership invitations to US presidents; John F. Kennedy reportedly declined, despite his father Joseph's involvement, while Donald Trump's membership status remains uncertain. The most current membership roster alludes us.

Manifestations of Influence

The Pilgrims Society's influence is apparent in landmark events such as the 2008 bank bailout—spearheaded by Pilgrims members like Sir Henry Kissinger and former Fed Chairman Paul Volcker, both vice presidents at the time, both deeply connected to the Rockefellers, the British-driven Trump-Russia hoax, and the 2020 COVID-19 crisis attributed to the so-called “bat virus” (read: Pirbright UK). Each of these initiatives channeled enormous resources to aligned corporations, exhibiting unmistakable hallmarks of centralized, authoritarian control.

Control Over Key Sectors

Lillian's exposés revealed the Pilgrims Society's deep control over American media, telecommunications, healthcare, pharmaceuticals, and intellectual property. This influence extended to the seizure of over 50,000 patents from Axis inventors under Roosevelt's “Patents at Work” policy (1942), as well as the ascent of Marconi Wireless, RCA (1919), AT&T, NBC, CBS, ABC, Westinghouse, and Aegis Ballistic Missile Defense—developments she fiercely challenged. Her work stands as a lasting testament to the power of individual courage to illuminate the path forward.

Chapter 10

Dire Warning Unveiled: The Pilgrims Society's Insidious Grip on America

Lillian wove her warnings with threads of hope, offering visions of a free America that inspired those burdened by oppression. The stark truths she uncovered reveal a sinister force infiltrating the heart of the American Republic. Through unwavering faith and courage, Lillian Scott Troy exposed the British Pilgrims Society's malevolent agenda to subvert America, threatening the very ideals of 1776. Astonishingly, this shadowy network proved so entrenched and cunning that it escaped the notice of generations—except for a few, like Lillian, whose piercing insight illuminated its hidden workings.

Insights on Scripture and the Synagogue of Satan

This investigation reveals that the Holy Scriptures are more literal than often assumed. The vivid imagery in St. John's Revelation, particularly the reference to those who "say they are Jews and are not but are the Synagogue of Satan" (Rev. 2:9), takes on striking relevance when viewed through the historical lens of Smyrna, Anatolia (now Turkey). As a major shipping hub along the ancient Silk Road, Smyrna (to whom St. John wrote in Rev. 2:9) was a center for the Babylonian Rādhānite merchant-bankers, a powerful group of pagan merchant-bankers. They were imposters posing as Jews, creating tensions with the early Church in Smyrna, and today in the centers of banking and commerce globally. Note: Jamie Dimon's (formerly, Papademetrio) ancestral home is Smyrna, Turkey—a key shipping city along the Silk Road since ancient days.

The vivid imagery in St. John's Revelation, particularly the warning that some "say they are Jews and are not but are the synagogue of Satan" (Rev. 2:9), takes on striking significance when considered in the historical context of Smyrna, Anatolia (modern-day Izmir, Turkey). Smyrna, a major Silk Road port, was a home to the Babylonian Rādhānite merchant-bankers—powerful pagan traders who posed as Jews, creating tension with the early Christian community. This pattern of influence finds echoes today in global centers of banking and commerce. Notably, Jamie Dimon (born Papademetriou), CEO of JPMorgan Chase, traces his ancestry to Smyrna, underscoring a personal link to this historically significant city. Smyrna was also a key European trading hub for the Boston Brahmins, infamous for their involvement in the opium and slave trades to China and Africa.

When Jesus declared, “You cannot serve God and Mammon” (Matthew 6:24), His listeners would have recognized it as a direct rebuke of the Babylonian Rādhānite merchant-bankers—false Jews whose corrupt dealings were infamous. No further explanation was needed; the evils of Mammon were common knowledge in their world. Christ, like the prophets before Him, condemned the bondage of usurious debt-slavery. Centuries earlier, the prophet Ezekiel had denounced usury itself as an “abomination” (Ezekiel 18:13).

In 1908, Lillian boarded the Teutonic, sailing from New York to Southampton, and arrived at London's Waldorf Astoria to cover what she thought was a routine press conference. Instead, she found herself thrust into a divine mission, confronting the sinister forces of Moloch, Mammon, Satan, Lucifer, and Ahriman—demonic powers woven into the fabric of the British Empire that threatened the fledgling American republic. Her revelations, etched in newspaper archives and the Congressional Record, reflect her unyielding courage. Her personal letters reveal a woman who, amidst a cosmic struggle, found solace in small triumphs.

The Pilgrims Society's treachery emerges starkly through its own members' words. In 1913, Joseph H. Choate, a founding US member and president of the Society (1912–1917), boldly proclaimed America's unshakable loyalty to the British Empire, dismissing sovereignty with disdain: "Now, the people of this country are not going to allow anybody . . . to break their good faith which they have pledged to the mother country."

In 1940, Rep. Jacob Thorkelson, in a fiery Congressional Record entry, condemned this betrayal, exposing Choate's alignment with imperialists like Cecil Rhodes and Andrew Carnegie, who saw America as a mere extension of Britain. Thorkelson pinpointed 1913 as a turning point, when the Federal Reserve Act ceded America's treasury to the Bank of England and global financiers—Rothschilds, Morgans, Barings, and Warburgs—setting the stage for America's entry into WWI, orchestrated by J. P. Morgan & Co. as early as 1910.

Thorkelson's alarm intensified as he cited Nicholas Murray Butler, Pilgrims Society's US president (1928–1946) and Columbia University president, who in 1934 hailed the 1931 Statute of Westminster as the fulfillment of the 1775 Olive Branch Petition. Butler slyly implied that America's grievances with Britain were resolved, paving the way for reabsorption into the Empire. Thorkelson's warning rang clear: "We are just about on the verge of capitulating to the forces which are driving us into the British Empire."

Congressman Jacob Thorkelson's admonition, "Gentlemen, you have been warned—keep troth" [remain faithful], resounds with the admonition of Revelation 2:9, condemning those who falsely claim Jewish identity while serving a deceitful "synagogue of Satan." The Rothschild-funded Scofield Bible Commentary, published in 1909—potentially as an outcome of the Imperial Press Conference that same year—obscured evangelical understanding, conflating the Church as the New Israel with the planned modern, Rothschild-backed British State of Israel. Sir Alfred Mond, a key Pilgrims Society figure and British Zionist, epitomized this manipulation, wielding his Brunner, Mond & Co. empire to further the Society's objectives, as explored in my book, The Hidden Hand: Unraveling the Rothschilds and Israel.

Having myself been an evangelical gospel music leader in a self-defined "parachurch" organization, I can understand the yearning for a community identity that support for the modern state of Israel might provide some. However, since then I have come to understand that the Church of Jesus Christ, as manifest by the Holy Orthodox Christian Church, is that identity for which we yearn, and has been so for 2000 years, despite the gates of hell attempting to destroy her. Our Western history books, and our churches of what's happenin' now left her out of our formation.

Lillian Scott Troy's legacy urges us to stand firm against subtle encroachments on our sovereignty. Her long-suppressed truths, now unearthed, call for unwavering vigilance.

Lillian's Battle Against Modern Robber Barons—She Was Our First General in the Modern Information War

Lillian Scott Troy's story stands as a powerful David vs. Goliath tale in modern history. She fearlessly confronted the era's ruthless Robber Barons and their Rothschild financial backers. More significantly, she challenged the enduring adversaries of the American Revolution, who continue their efforts to undermine the American Republic. Many of today's key figures are directly linked by blood or influence to the British foes of 1776, including the Rothschilds, Barclays-Bevans, Warburgs, Barings, Saxe-Coburg and Gotha (now Windsors), Morgans, Carnegie, Rockefeller, Churchill, Masterman, Asquith, Lloyd-George, Mond, Nobel, Wellcome, Milner, Pattie, Malloch-Brown, Soros, Schwab, Fauci, Clegg, Allan, and Schiffs.

Lillian Scott Troy: A Defiant Spirit Against the Pilgrims Society

A Heroine's Stand

Lillian Scott Troy embodies the unyielding spirit of America, sounding a clarion call against the economic and spiritual enslavement orchestrated by the Pilgrims Society, a force that continues to tighten its grip on global power. Her personal sacrifices lend a profound human depth to her enduring legend. Lillian's fight transcends history; it is a living battle against forces seeking to destroy American sovereignty under the thumb of British tyranny. From 1908 to 1919, she boldly confronted these malevolent powers in London's West End and The City of London, challenging the diabolical forces steering the British Empire and enveloping America.

The Demonic Underpinnings

These forces, cloaked in promises of “peace” and “progress,” are driven by ancient demonic entities—Satan (embodying the seven deadly sins), Lucifer (self-delusion), Mammon (greed and debt slavery), Moloch (human sacrifice), and Ahriman (scientific materialism)—whose influence permeates the Pilgrims Society's actions. Lillian's decade in London ended with MI5, MI6, and Scotland Yard seizing her property and deporting her without charges. Yet, she triumphed, leaving a legacy of truth documented in newspaper archives and the Congressional Record, her letters to America revealing a woman sustained by faith and friendship.

The Pilgrims Society's Agenda— Lillian's Front Row Seat

Founded in 1902, the Pilgrims Society has orchestrated a relentless series of wars under the guise of peace, averaging a new conflict every two years. Lillian's exposure of their 24-point strategy to annex America revealed a chilling plan: manipulating literature, creating cynical "peace" networks, endowing universities, deceiving the public, rewriting histories, and aligning media with psychological manipulation tactics from the Tavistock Institute and Madison Avenue. This deception, rooted in the worship of wealth and power, masks a deeper spiritual corruption. As Rep. Thorkelson noted in 1940, the significant involvement of self-described "Jews" in the Society is no coincidence; they are Babylonian-Rādhānites merchant-bankers—Turkic, Khazarian, Persian, Sogdian, and Chinese impostors, not of Semitic or Hebrew descent—followers of ancient demon gods, as foretold in Revelation 2:9, 3:9. Lillian sensed this dark undercurrent in elitist gatherings, where God granted her a front-row seat.

A Master Problem-Solver

Lillian Scott Troy approached her work like a skilled engineer dismantling a defective machine. In the 1990s, the author transformed social networking by discarding flawed approaches to reveal effective solutions that have been stolen and bastardized. Likewise, Lillian methodically unraveled the Pilgrims Society's deceptions, laying bare their true motives. Her rediscovered work, unearthed through diligent research, acts as a time capsule exposing a spiritual malaise disguised as "wokeness," which muddles and suppresses moral clarity. We owe immense gratitude to the pioneering researchers who faced vilification to uncover these truths. Their vibrant, revelatory histories continue to inspire and guide us. Without them, our work today would have been even more onerous.

A Beacon of Faith and Truth

Lillian Scott Troy's radiant example inspires us to confront darkness with unwavering faith and unyielding truth. Guided by the timeless wisdom of Scripture, we are called to "submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you" (James. 4:7). Like the Archangel Michael, who triumphed over the dragon in Revelation 12:7–9, we are empowered to stand resolute, clad in the full armor of God (Ephesians 6:10–18). A heartfelt prayer—"Heavenly Father, send Your mighty Archangel Michael to shield me from evil"—roots us in divine strength and protection. Lillian, like the disciples, embodied the power of even a mustard seed of faith, which, when united with prayer and fasting, can move mountains (Matt. 17:20–21). Her fervent prayers, whispered through solitary London nights, were a wellspring of comfort and courage, lighting the way for us to follow with steadfast devotion.

A Call to Spiritual Valor

Every earnest soul, yearning for a life of righteousness, can rise as a spiritual warrior by following Lillian Scott Troy's example. Anchor your heart in Christ, proclaim truth with unwavering courage, and rest in the assurance of God's deliverance. When confronted by evil, boldly declare, "Get behind me, Satan," as Jesus rebuked Satan through Peter (Matthew 16:23). Share the truth fearlessly, as Lillian did, trusting that "the truth shall make you free" (John 8:32). Encircled by a great cloud of witnesses (Hebrews 12:1), Lillian's legacy burns brightly as a guiding star, inspiring us to press forward in the divine race set before us. Her story resonates like a heartfelt conversation with a wise mentor, kindling personal courage and devotion in our souls.

A Modern Joan of Arc

Lillian Scott Troy emerges as a timeless beacon, a warrioress reminiscent of Joan of Arc, whose fearless resolve and piercing clarity illuminate the path ahead. Her unyielding stand against the Pilgrims Society's sinister designs emboldens us to unmask deception with truth, champion liberty with steadfast faith, and trust in God's triumphant deliverance. Lillian is more than a historical figure—she is a vibrant call to action, a radiant model of resilience and righteousness for our age, urging us to rise with courage and purpose.

Figure 65: Joan of Arc (1412-1431) Riding Her Battle Horse. Despite the valiant cries of patriots since 1902, the Pilgrims Society's limitless wealth has fueled a relentless march toward a one-world imperial corporatist government, orchestrated from the brandy and cigar clubs of The City of London. This is no mere conspiracy—it is a meticulously documented betrayal, driven by demon-worshipping, Jewish imposters, Babylonian Rādhānite merchant-bankers whose ultimate aim is the annihilation of Christianity and the triumph of darkness over divine light. Lillian's memory endures as a sacred call to uphold the eternal moral truths of the Holy Trinity, and the Spirit of 1776.

Epilogue

Honoring Lillian's Unbreakable Spirit

Lillian Scott Troy's fearless stand against the Pilgrims Society remains a blazing inspiration. Her meticulous documentation of the 24-Step Strategy to Annex America, launched at the First Imperial Press Conference, 1909 exposed a diabolical plan to control global systems and reassert British control over America. The Rothschilds, as the comasterminds of the Pilgrims Society's Executive Council, leveraged Rhodes's vision to solidify their global hegemony. The plan's legacy lingers in modern financial, political, and international institutions.

By preserving Lillian's findings, we honor her unparalleled bravery, ensuring her call to defend liberty resonates in the fight for American sovereignty.

Afterword

Lillian Scott Troy's Relentless Crusade Against the Pilgrims Society's Dark Dominion

In the shadowed annals of history, a diabolical force has orchestrated global chaos since the Pilgrims Society's inception in 1902. Lillian Scott Troy dubbed it "The Benedict Arnold Society," likening its members to General Benedict Arnold, who betrayed the American Revolution and bowed to the corrupt King George III. Under the beguiling banners of "no more wars," "peace now," and a utopian "one world government," this conclave of bankers, lawyers, politicians, alchemists, and propagandists has woven a tapestry of deception, igniting a new war approximately every two years. The blood of untold hundreds of millions of souls are on their hands.

Lillian Scott Troy pierced their veil of lies, exposing eleven damning "peace" points in their 24-Step scheme to annex America. This insidious plan manipulated literature, infiltrated universities, hid in banks, collected taxes for no work performed, drove debt-slavery, and co-opted media, all under the guise of “peace.” It established the English-Speaking Union, honored compliant military officers, and ostracized those who dared resist their so-called “peace” agenda, while plotting to station US troops to be their mercenaries.

“Peace” Means the Opposite to a Seared Conscience

The question burns brightly: if “peace” were their true aim, why does the world drown in conflicts orchestrated by their hands? The answer unveils their true nature—they are instruments of darkness, thriving on lies that benefit their elitist ranks: bankers, media moguls, warmongers, academicians, publishers, and spies. As 1 Timothy 4:1–2 forewarns, these deceivers have turned from faith, peddling demonic teachings as truth.

Trampling On the Demon’s Lair

In the 1970s and 1980s, as European director of the gospel music group Living Sound, I walked

London's historic streets, booked gospel concerts at Trafalgar Square, spoke of God's miracles at Canterbury, and unknowingly retraced the steps of Lillian Scott Troy fifty years later. We sang toe-tapping Gospel songs like "One Day at a Time, Sweet Jesus," "Singing in the Spirit," and "God Can Do It Again [Miracles]" with country music legends George Hamilton IV, Charley Pride, as well as Scottish folk and light opera singer Moira Anderson, and with The Chieftans at BBC TV Centre, Wood Lane, White City, and London in Shepherd's Bush. I stood on the very ground, without knowing it, of the First Imperial Press Conference 1909, where the Pilgrims Society forged a malevolent alliance of bankers, warmongers, propagandists, and spies. Lillian, too, had earlier confronted this unholy nexus, waging war against the demonic forces Satan, Lucifer, Mammon, Moloch, and Ahriman. The lyrics to our song, "Singing in the Spirit" were prescient:

"The Bible says our battle isn't with our fellow man
But it's with the prince of evil wagin' war on every hand

And our strategy is worked out when we're talkin' to God's Son

The devil he just can't stand it so we got him on the run! (Jim Gilbert, Living Sound)."

A Triumph of Gospel Over Empire

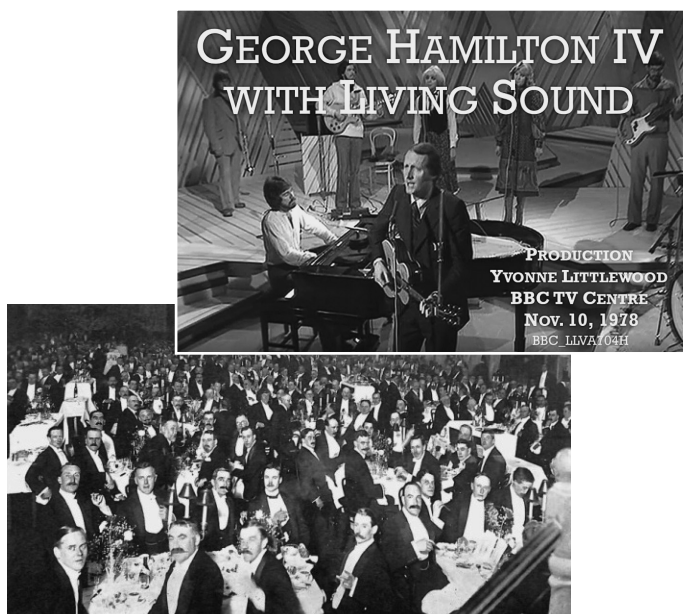

Figure 65: On November 10, 1978, Living Sound, true missionaries of the Gospel, delivered a stirring performance of gospel music on George Hamilton IV and Friends, broadcast nationally from the BBC TV Centre in White City, Shepherd's Bush, London. Their music radiated profound spiritual power, resonating with divine truth. Remarkably, the BBC stage stood directly above the historic site of the First Imperial Press Conference of 1909, where Lord Rosebery, a Rothschild heir, rallied 650 newspapermen to serve as demonic “missionaries of empire.”

That Conference birthed the Empire Press Union (now CPU Media Trust/Reuters, centralizing global propaganda), MI6, MI5, GC&CS (now GCHQ—selecting secret agents from newspapermen), and the globalization of wireless telegraphy, extending even to the United States. In this sacred moment, Living Sound's Gospel message reclaimed the ground, shining as a beacon of faith over the shadows of imperial ambition. Used by permission, with elements in the public domain.

A Figure of Influence at the Imperial Press Conference

In the historic photograph (above) of the 650 delegates at the First Imperial Press Conference of 1909, a mustachioed man sits prominently in the foreground, fourth from the left: MP Philip Whitwell Wilson, a key figure in the Pilgrims Society, Wilson played a pivotal role in shaping global ideologies, notably as a mentor to Vladimir Lenin and the Bolsheviks. Later, he relocated to New York, where he edited for The New York Times for fifteen years, crafting subtle anti-Christian communist narratives for the YMCA and supporting Mao Zedong. His influence helped establish the United Nations, leaving a lasting mark on the course of history.

That First Imperial Press Conference, 1909 gave rise to the Empire Press Union (now CPU Media Trust/Reuters [Rothschilds], consolidating global propaganda), MI6, MI5, GC&CS (now GCHQ, integrating newspaper secret agents), and the global spread of wireless telegraphy, including in the United States—some consider this the Pilgrims Society's origin point for weaponizing banking, news, healthcare, telecommunications, and intelligence against humanity. On that day in 1978, the dark forces tied to that London site were overcome by the radiant Gospel of Jesus Christ, preached with unwavering conviction by Living Sound, just as they were confronted by the devout Christian Lillian Scott Troy in 1909.

A Divine Convergence over a Historic Site

What are the odds that Living Sound and I proclaimed the transformative power of the Gospel in music on the very ground where, 116 years earlier, the Pilgrims Society's megalomaniacal ambitions took root at the First Imperial Press Conference of 1909? There, in White City, Shepherd's Bush, London, malevolent forces conspired to control global communications, manipulate public perception, destroy Christianity, and subjugate humanity. Exorcists say that demons and spectral entities linger in places marked by profound spiritual conflict, such as the site of that fateful 1909 conference, steeped in the trauma of its far-reaching consequences. Yet, on November 10, 1978, at the BBC TV Centre, our Gospel performance stood as a radiant act of redemption, reclaiming that cursed ground with the light of truth and divine hope. Truly, Lillian Scott Troy was cheering that event.

While we have not halted the Pilgrims' relentless advance, did the faith and love of Lillian Scott Troy and our Gospel witness impede their progress? I pray it did.

A Dark Blueprint for Domination

Historical records expose a cabal of corrupt and depraved figures who pursued a demonic vision of a new world order through a relentless series of events and mechanisms. Their agenda unfolded through World War I, the League of Nations, perpetual wars, banking consolidation, debt enslavement, corporatism, communism, fascism, and distorted forms of “democracy.” They exploited human trafficking, abortion, organ harvesting, biowarfare, the New Deal, the Marshall Plan, MK-ULTRA, Project TICOM, Project Ultra, the Great Society, Project Echelon, the Senior Executive Service (SES), the 9/11 attacks, the Dotcom bubble, the Patriot Act, the 2008 financial crisis, the 2016 coup attempt, and the Trump-Russia hoax. Spanning decades, these orchestrated efforts reveal a brazen ambition to control and reshape humanity.

They persist in their efforts, but I believe the prayers of the righteous continue to hinder their plans. “The prayer of faith shall save the sick” (James 5:15a).

“If my people, who are called by my name, will humble themselves and pray . . . I will heal their land” (2 Chronicles. 7:14).

“No harm will overtake you . . . for He will command His angels concerning you” (Psalms 91: 10–11).

“Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven” (Matthew 5:16).

Lillian’s decades-long struggle ripped off the Pilgrims Society’s mask, though it led to MI5-MI6-Scotland Yard seizing her property and deporting her without charges in 1919. Yet, Lillian triumphed, leaving an indelible legacy in newspaper archives and the Congressional Record.

Nearly erased from history, Lillian’s truth was rediscovered through a reference in a George Mason University booklet on internationalism—a breadcrumb leading to her monumental stand. Her revelations unmask a spiritual malaise cloaked as “wokeness,” designed to ensnare the righteous in confusion and silence. As Paul Harvey warned in his 1965 broadcast, If I Were the Devil, the enemy's greatest triumph is convincing the world he does not exist. This demonic sleight of hand, diverting focus to identity politics and race shields the true adversary from scrutiny.

A Divine Call to Spiritual Valor

Scripture equips us with a divine battle plan to confront evil. The Lord's Prayer, a divinely simple prayer Jesus taught us, invokes God's boundless strength to live righteously and shield us from darkness. Jesus' resolute command in Matthew 16:23—"Get behind Me, Satan!"—teaches us to rebuke evil with unwavering authority. With faith as small as a mustard seed, fortified by prayer and fasting in Matthew 17:20–21, we are empowered to triumph over any adversary. Lillian Scott Troy embodied this spiritual warfare, wielding truth as a mighty sword against the Pilgrims Society's sinister designs.

Lillian's legacy resounds as a clarion call to all who pursue righteousness. Anchored in Christ, emboldened to speak truth, and enveloped in God's protection, we are called to stand firm, no matter our station. Like a radiant beacon, Lillian shines as a modern crusader, her fearless pursuit of truth igniting our hearts to rise, resist, and reclaim our freedom under God's boundless grace.

I am certain that when Lillian stood before the Heavenly Gates, the Lord welcomed her with open arms, proclaiming, "Well done, My good and faithful servant. You have been faithful in small things; I will entrust you with greater ones. Come, share in your Lord's joy" (Matt. 25:21).

Pray for us, Lillian, alongside the "great cloud of witnesses" cheering us on as we run our races, our eyes fixed on Jesus, "the author and finisher of our faith" (Hebrews 12:1–2).

Joyously proclaimed by Orthodox Christians on the Eve of the Nativity of Christ, and in Handel's Messiah
(from Isaiah 8:9–18 and 9:2, 6–7)*:

About the Author

Michael T. McKibben— Innovator and Champion of Freedom

Key Points:

- Michael T. McKibben invented social networking technology, holding US Patent Nos. 7,139,761; 7,925,246; and 8,195,714—foundational to modern digital platforms.
- His Christian music ministry in 27 countries faced communist oppression, engaging figures such as Cardinal Karol Wojtyła (later St. John Paul II) and Lech Wałęsa, while shadowed by KGB operatives—including a young Colonel Vladimir Putin—thereby shaping his lifelong commitment to liberty.
- His latest innovation, the MySQLIF™ Message Vault™ Locked Email,™ introduces quantum-proof polymorphic encryption, revolutionizing email privacy.

- In a 2010 patent infringement case, a jury confirmed Facebook violated all eleven claims of Leader Technologies' patent, but a disputed ruling—lacking evidence—claimed McKibben infringed his own patent, fueling his fight against judicial corruption and intellectual property theft.
- His books, Beyond Tyranny and Narcissism and Oriented Leadership, offer a Trinitarian Orthodox Christian leadership model, lauded by business deans and theologians alike.
- His research into usury, Babylonian Rādhānite merchant-banking, the Pilgrims Society, and their ties to the Rothschilds reflects his pursuit of truth and justice.

A Luminary in Innovation and Ethics

Michael T. McKibben, founder of Leader Technologies, Inc. in Columbus, Ohio, is a visionary whose technological breakthroughs and ethical convictions have transformed the digital landscape. His invention of social-networking technology, protected, on paper, by U.S. Patent No. 7,139,761 (“Dynamic Association of Electronically Stored Information with Iterative Workflow Changes”), laid the foundation for modern social media. revolutionized online collaboration through seamless data management. Since founding Leader in 1997, McKibben and his team have pioneered advancements in voice, streaming media, and data systems, creating scalable platforms that underpin modern connectivity. During Hurricane Katrina in 2005, Leader's audio conferencing, document distribution, and alerting services saved thousands of lives in New Orleans' lower wards, Superdome, and Convention Center, demonstrating McKibben's commitment to societal good. This occurred as Facebook, having received Leader's stolen technology from the IBM Eclipse Foundation, solicited Stanford students to build apps on McKibben's innovations.

Michael McKibben's groundbreaking MySQL[™] Message Vault, [™] set to release version 2.0 in early 2026, marks a pivotal advance in Email. Certified as quantum-proof, it employs device-specific polymorphic keys that dissolve after a single use, rendering data-in-motion impervious to interception, even by corrupt legal subpoenas prevalent in today's climate. This grassroots innovation shields users from government and corporate surveillance, empowering individuals to reclaim sovereignty over their digital lives.

McKibben's creation fuses technical ingenuity with a steadfast commitment to justice, establishing him as a visionary leader delivering tools that champion user autonomy. His work stands as a beacon for those seeking to protect their privacy in an era of pervasive privacy abuse.

A Life Forged in Faith, Courage, and Global Impact

Born in Tennessee and raised in Miamisburg, Ohio, Michael McKibben grew up in a vibrant community

alongside two younger brothers. His mother, the first female civil engineering student at the University of Tennessee, Martin, broke barriers, while his father, a distinguished civil engineer, shaped America's infrastructure, overseeing projects like multiple Manhattan Project facilities at Oak Ridge—then including the world's largest building—and two iconic roller coasters at Kings Island. A resilient, compassionate figure, his father, among the first US troops to occupy Japan, at age 19 he witnessed the scorched earth of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, yet lived undaunted by radiation, defined by selfless service.

McKibben graduated in civil engineering from The Ohio State University in 1973, excelling as a trombonist and squad leader in the university's famed marching band. That year, he married Nancy Hoovler, a French and Russian honors graduate, and together they homeschooled six children who thrive in fields like medicine, linguistics, athletics, culinary arts, construction, and design. His early career took a profound turn as European Director of Living Sound, a jazz, rock, and pop gospel music ministry. From the 1970s to 1980s, McKibben performed across 27 countries, spreading faith and hope in oppressive regimes. Hosted by Cardinal Karol Wojtyła (later St. John Paul II) and Lech Wałęsa in Poland, and shadowed by KGB operatives, including a young colonel Vladimir Putin in Leningrad, he witnessed communist persecution in Poland, Estonia, Ukraine, Belarus, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Romania, and Russia.

Courage in Song

Living Sound's performances were bold acts of defiance, carrying music's transformative power into oppressive regimes. Their song "We Can't Live Without Each Other" (A. Pakhmutova, N. Dobronravov, N. McKibben, Living Sound) resonated globally, and were featured in the 1980 Moscow Summer Olympics film. In 1981, they made history as the first American contemporary Gospel group to perform on Soviet television under Leonid Brezhnev's rule. In Poland, guided by Cardinals Wyszyński and Wojtyła, McKibben's music as a part of "Sacrosong" inspired hope among youth, earning Wojtyła's praise for uplifting young and old alike.

Defying Oppression

In Estonia, McKibben's mission confronted Soviet authoritarianism with unwavering faith. His interpreter Herbert, alongside chemistry professor Jüri Kukk, faced imprisonment in Tallinn's Patari Prison, his friend imprisoned for organizing Christian concerts—deemed "anti-Soviet activity." Kukk endured brutal Gulag labor camps, launching a hunger strike to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. McKibben carried out reports of Kukk's brutal murder to the West, evading KGB discovery, later informing Wikipedia entries. Kukk, tortured in a Murmansk-region camp, died a Martyr to Freedom on March 28, 1981. In Leningrad, McKibben faced a harrowing encounter with Putin and his KGB agents monitoring foreigners while carrying reports about Kukk, protected by divine providence. A friend, confined to a Soviet mental hospital for composing Trumpet Call (Matthew 25), a Christian rock opera McKibben helped him record, saw his work broadcast unjammed by the BBC World Service, spreading nationwide via underground cassettes. These acts of faith shone as beacons against oppression.

A Spark for Liberation

Living Sound helped ignite the Baltic “Singing Revolution” (1987–1991), a mass music protest where hundreds of thousands sang for freedom from Soviet rule. Participants credit Living Sound’s 1979–1982 performances as a vital spark for this peaceful resistance, harnessing music’s unifying power to challenge tyranny. These experiences profoundly shaped McKibben’s resolve to champion liberty.

A Technological Trailblazer Facing Adversity

McKibben’s transition to technology began with strategic consulting for IBM, AT&T, and The Ohio State University. In 1995, he led the redesign of AT&T’s AccessPlus 3.0 email interface with Bell Labs as his testers, integrating email with the early internet. This inspired him to found Leader Technologies to solve the “data silo” problem. His 2006 patent revolutionized data management through metadata and scalable collaboration, forming social networking's backbone. Additional patents, including US Patent No. 8,001,000 (metadata tagging) and US Patent No. 8,073,850 (relationship management-wireless), underscore his legacy.

In 2008, McKibben sued Facebook for patent infringement. In 2010, a Delaware jury unanimously confirmed that Facebook violated all 11 claims of US Patent No. 7,139,761. However, the court controversially invalidated the patent under the “on-sale” bar, claiming—without evidence—that Leader sold it too soon, a ruling misapplied from pharmaceutical cases. Upheld in 2012, the decision ignored absence of Pfaff and Group One red lines to prove an alleged sale (which there were none), and judges’ undisclosed financial conflicts with Facebook, drawing sharp criticism as a miscarriage of justice. This fueled global outrage, positioning McKibben as a symbol of resilience advocating for intellectual property reform.

A Theologian and Leader

As coauthor with Benjamin D. Williams of Beyond Tyranny and Narcissism: Jesus Incarnates Leadership, Why Do We Fail to Follow? (2010), McKibben presents a Trinitarian Orthodox Christian leadership model emphasizing vision, implementation, and enthusiasm. Contrasting tyrannical leadership with ethical governance, the book draws on his ministry and business experiences, earning praise from Orthodox and evangelical Christian theologians alike.

Earlier works, Oriented Leadership (1994) and Orthodox Christian Meetings (1990), apply theology to organizational strategy. Father Thomas Hopko, dean of St. Vladimir's Theological Seminary, praised them for addressing "a vital need for effective collaboration within Church communities and beyond."

McKibben's leadership seminars for the Orthodox Church in America blended spiritual depth with practical insights, establishing him as a mentor. His philosophy offers a blueprint for ethical leadership.

A Champion for Freedom and Ethics

McKibben's experiences with oppression and his research into global entities like the Pilgrims Society and their Rothschild controls drive his advocacy for free speech, privacy, and justice. The MySQIF Message Vault empowers users against surveillance, while his Katrina response showcased real-world impact. In a 2013 Eesti Päevaleht Estonian interview, he called for secure social apps, a vision realized with MySQIF. His fight for intellectual property rights inspires inventors globally.

After the US Patent Office and courts failed to protect his patent—despite $32 million invested in what McKibben called "leadership software," later dubbed "social networking" by the thieves—McKibben became a lead investigator. Since 2012, he has uncovered a global scheme orchestrated by the British Pilgrims Society to seize US government control using his stolen inventions, advised by his trusted patent attorney, James P. Chandler III, who betrayed him.

A Thirty-Trillion-Dollar Crime, and Rising—The Free Press Fund

The theft of McKibben's inventions, now valued by Wall Street at over $30 trillion, reveals a staggering betrayal and confiscation. Rooted in his mission to restore moral integrity, McKibben and his investors filed a Miller Act Notice against the US Executive, citing the Fifth Amendment's Takings Clause to challenge this property seizure. Unscrupulous lawyers falsely claim software is excluded from the Takings Clause, despite clear protections in the Constitution's Patent Clause (Article I, Section 8, Clause 8). These lawyers and their Pilgrims Society paymasters are evidently trolls, scoundrels, and enemies of the US Constitution. McKibben and shareholders have pledged a significant share of recovered funds to The Free Press Fund, ensuring lasting support for a diverse, independent press that upholds truth and liberty.

A Legacy of Transformation

McKibben's innovations, faith, and advocacy have reshaped technology and leadership. Despite corrupt legal setbacks, his encounters with the KGB, Vladimir Putin, and persecuted Christians highlight his courage. His Trinitarian leadership model and privacy innovations offer hope for ethical progress. A beacon for innovators and ethicists, McKibben's legacy inspires excellence and integrity, shaping a future grounded in truth and justice.

Tyla@Gabriels_Horn (Gab) posts: “Astonished by the insights in Lillian Scott Troy? You should check out the author’s latest project, MySQIF Message Vault. You may know Michael for his groundbreaking invention of scalable social networking. His invention was stolen by DARPA and the IBM Eclipse Foundation and their handlers, repurposed as ‘open source’ to enable the Pilgrims Society’s covert control over the Internet.”

New Product Announcement:

MySQIF: Revolutionary Email Security

MySQIF introduces the first true advancement in email security since PGP in 1993. Set up your own private email system in minutes, eliminating all data-in-motion vulnerabilities found in current legacy public email platforms.

Key Features

- Unbreakable Encryption: All existing email encryption, including E2EE, is cracked, contrary to assertions otherwise. MySQIF is the only solution that truly secures your communications.

- Expert Development: Crafted by world-renowned experts in messaging, collaboration, encryption, mathematics, and quantum computing.
- Quantum-Proof Polymorphic Encryption: Messages are protected by encryption so robust they cannot be cracked in multiple lifetimes of the universe—a factual claim, not hyperbole.
- Protection from Threats: Disempowers man-in-the-middle attacks, spam, spoofs, trojans, malware, and other privacy invasions.
- Safeguards Sensitive Data: Secures intellectual property, trade secrets, healthcare data, financial information, business plans, marketing strategies, sales plans, inventions, copyrights, and other information that is just none of anyone's business from unauthorized access.
- No more fiddly encryption keys to remember, yet they are the most powerful in the world! The system handles them automatically between the sender and recipient devices.
- Secure File Sharing: Effortlessly send attachments up to 4GB, singly or in multiples, protected by advanced polymorphic encryption. Unlike traditional email with restrictive size limits, this solution removes policy barriers.
- Message Lifespan Control: You can set a timer on any message you send, causing it to automatically expire and disappear at the exact time you choose.

- Unsend: You can unsend a message within about two minutes after hitting Send. It will vanish completely as if it was never sent.
- Reminder: You can send a nudge to recipients who rarely open MySQIF, reminding them to check the app and decrypt any important messages waiting for them.
