Twenty-eight (28) of Thirty-two (32) guests identified are members of the IBM Eclipse Foundation spy state cartel (the thieves of Ohio innovator Leader Technologies' social networking invention) have been on Obama's recent White House guest lists. This cartel is currently working to control the Internet and "The Internet of Things" promoted by IBM and Obama in his latest executive order.

From Wall St. Bundlers to Bradley Cooper: Inside the State Dinner Guest Lists

By MICHAEL D. SHEAR, JULIE HIRSCHFELD DAVIS, MARK LANDLER and GARDINER HARRIS MARCH 10, 2016

The guest lists of White House state dinners are boldface ledgers showing the people whom presidents want to influence and reward. On Thursday, President Obama's state dinner is for Prime Minister Justin Trudeau of Canada. Here we deconstruct the guest lists of the previous nine. RELATED ARTICLE

Of the guests were from Wall Street and the business sector

Of 1,350 Obama state dinner guests — we're not including spouses or dates whom guests bring along — about 12 percent were "bundlers" — people who bundle large campaign contributions for Mr. Obama from contacts and friends. Close to 60 percent, some 800 people, were must-invite members of the administration, Congress, the diplomatic corps and official delegations.

The remaining 550 guests, the ones the White House really wanted to invite, make up the group we're analyzing here.

The largest number in this group — 35 percent — came from the business world and Wall Street. Many were bundlers. President Obama may have once called big bankers shameful, but they have found a welcoming door at the White House.

Of the guests were from Hollywood and the arts

Whether it's dinners with Jeffrey Katzenberg and Steven Spielberg or jamswith B.B. King, Mr. Obama likes actors, directors and musicians. The group, representing another source of campaign cash, infuses state dinners with the flavors of pop culture and highbrow arts.

Guests include: J.J. Abrams, producer/director; Mary J. Blige, singer; George Clooney, actor; Stephen Colbert, talk show host; Bradley Cooper, actor; Misty Copeland, ballet dancer; Idris Elba, actor; Ari Emanuel, talent agent; David Geffen, producer; Whoopi Goldberg, actress; Jeffrey Katzenberg, producer; John Legend, singer;

Maya Lin, architect; Julia Louis-Dreyfus, actress; Andy Spahn, publicist; Steven Spielberg, director; Barbra Streisand, singer/actress; George Takei, actor; James Taylor, singer; Cicely Tyson, actress; and Harvey Weinstein, producer.

Of the guests were from the media

White House beat reporters found their way onto the state dinner guest lists along with columnists, television personalities and various media moguls.

Guests include: JuJu Chang, ABC News; Katie Couric, Yahoo; Thomas Friedman, The New York Times; Gwen Ifill, PBS; Debra Lee, BET Networks; Jorge Ramos, Univision; Brian Roberts, Comcast; Diane Sawyer, ABC News; Bob Schieffer, CBS News; The Rev. Al Sharpton, MSNBC; Shane Smith, Vice Media; Anna Wintour, Vogue magazine; and Jeff Zucker, CNN Universal.

Of the guests were members of the intelligentsia

Mr. Obama's favorite dinners are small gatherings of intellectuals, often held outside Washington, that last into the small hours over dry martinis and wine. He returns the favor with invitations to the White House.

Guests include: Deepak Chopra, author; Amy Gutmann, University of Pennsylvania; Robert Kagan, Brookings Institution; Jim Yong Kim, Dartmouth College; Henry Kissinger, Kissinger Associates; Jhumpa Lahiri, author; Bette Bao Lord, author; Joseph Nye, Harvard; Amartya Sen, Harvard; George Shultz, Hoover Institution; and Strobe Talbott, Brookings.

Of the guests were from sports, technology and health sectors

Sports stars have long been invited to state dinners, but Mr. Obama has reached out in a big way to Silicon Valley titans as well. And when health care is one of your biggest legacies, you're apt to extend White House invitations to doctors, researchers and scientists, too.

Guests include: Steven Ballmer, Microsoft; Marc Benioff, Salesforce.com; Tim Cook, Apple; Mark Cuban, Dallas Mavericks; Larry Ellison, Oracle; David Friedman, Sandy River Health System; Reed Hastings, Netflix; Elizabeth Holmes, Theranos; Billie Jean King, tennis champion; Michelle Kwan, Olympic figure skater; Robert Manfred, Major League Baseball; Marissa Mayer, Yahoo; Rory McIlroy, golf champion; Elon Musk, Tesla and Space X; Mark Sanchez, New York Jets; Sheryl Sandberg, Facebook; John Scully, former Apple executive; Sally Susman, Pfizer; Steve Westly, venture capitalist; and Mark Zuckerberg, Facebook.

NOTE: The percentages do not add up to 100 because they do not include some smaller categories, like foundation presidents, labor leaders and personal friends of President Obama. The affiliations attributed to guests are from the time they attended the state dinners.

Correction: March 11, 2016

An earlier version of this article misspelled the name of a former president of Dartmouth College. He is Jim Yong Kim, not James Yong Kim.

Because of an editing error, a chart in print on Thursday about guests at nine White House state dinners during President Obama's terms erroneously identified 50 guests as "bundlers" — people who collected large campaign contributions for Mr. Obama. A corrected chart that highlights the names of the bundlers and that identifies the 50 guests who were not bundlers can be found at nytimes.com/national.
