OBSERVATIONS

[Richard Price. (Mar. 12, 1776). Nature of Civil Liberty, the Principles of Government, and the Justice and Policy of the War with America, Ninth Edition, 49 pgs. Dilly and Cadell. O N Source: https://oll-resources.s3.us-east-2.amazonaws.com/ oll3/store/titles/1781/0895_Bk.pdf]

5

THE NATURE OF CIVIL LIBERTY,

THE PRINCIPLES OF GOVERNMENT,

A N D

THE JUSTICE AND POLICY OF THE WAR WITH AMERICA.

TO WHICH IS ADDED,

An APPENDIX and POSTSCRIPT,

CONTAINING,

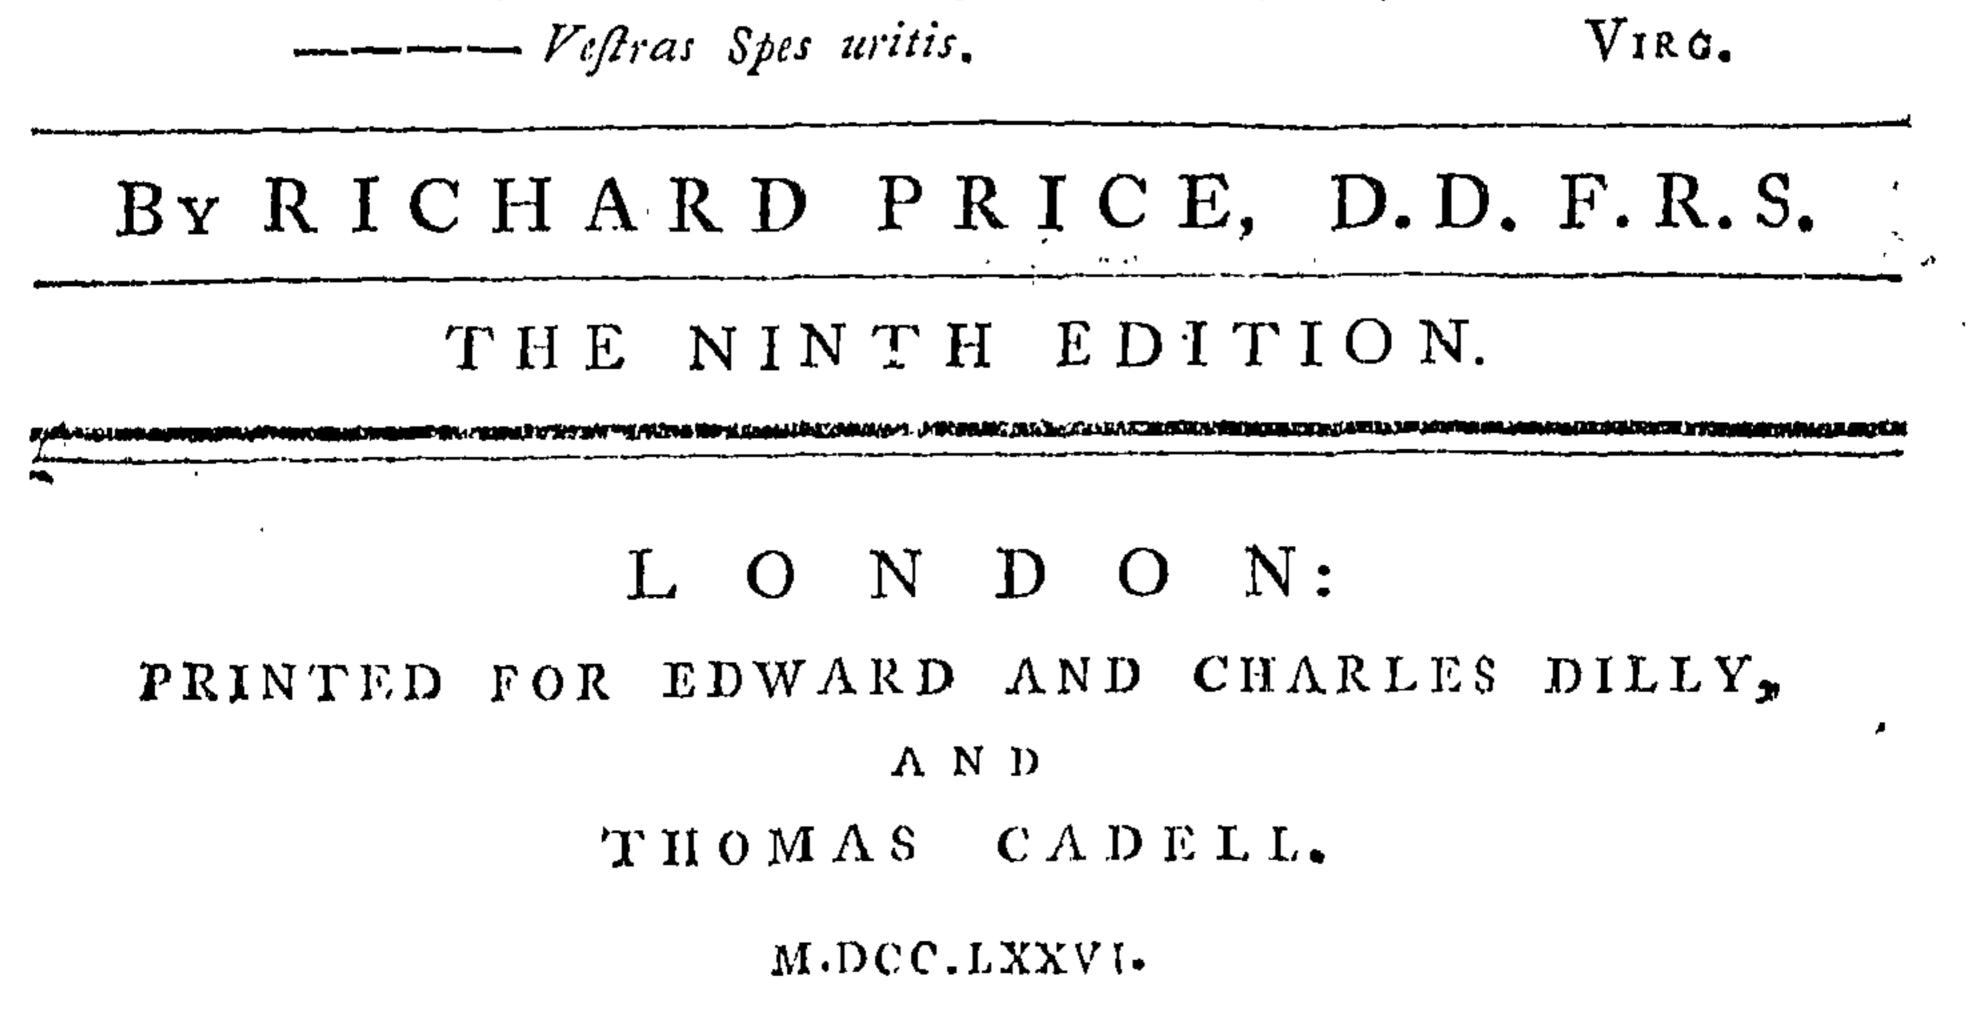

A STATE of the NATIONAL DEBT,

An ESTIMATE of the Money drawn from the Public by the TAXES,

A N D

An ACCOUNT of the NATIONAL INCOME and EXPENDITURE fince the laft WAR.

> Quis furor iste novus? quo nunc, quo tenditis-Heu! miseri cives? non Hostem, inimicaque castra, SAWBRIDGE, MAYOR.

A Common Council holden in the Chamber of the Guildhall of the City of London, on Thursday the 14th day of March, 1776.

RESOLVED, That the thanks of this Court be given to the Reverend RICHARD PRICE, Doctor in Divinity, Fellow of the Royal Society, for having laid down, in his late publication of "OBSERVATIONS ON THE NATURE OF CIVIL LIBERTY, &c." those fure principles, upon which alone the fupreme legislative authority of Great Britain over her Colonies can be justly or beneficially maintained; and for holding forth those public objects, " without " which it must be totally indifferent to the Kingdom, who are " IN, or who are OUT of power."

It is Ordered, That the faid Resolution be fairly transcribed, and figned by the Town Clerk; and by him delivered to the faid Reverend Doctor RICHARD PRICE.

A motion being made, and queftion put, That the Freedom of this City be prefented, in a Gold Box of the value of Fifty Pounds, to the Reverend Doctor RICHARD PRICE, as a grateful ceftimony of the approbation of this Court for his late pamphlet, intitled, " Obfervations on the Nature of Civil Liberty, the Principles " of Government, and the Justice and Policy of the War with Ame-" rica;" and that the Chamberlain do attend him with the fame — the fame was refolved in the affirmative, and ordered accordingly.

This Court doth desire the Right honourable the Lord Mayor to provide the Gold Box upon this occasion.

R I X.

PREFACE to the FIRST EDITION.

I N the following OBSERVATIONS, I have taken that liberty of examining public measures, which, happily for this kingdom, every person in it enjoys. They contain the sentiments of a private and unconnected man; for which, should there be any thing wrong in them, he alone is answerable.

After all that has been written on the dispute with AMERICA, no reader can expect to be informed, in this Publication, of much that he has not before known. Perhaps, however, he may find in it some new matter; and if he should, it will be chiefly in the Observations on the Nature of Civil Liberty, and the Policy of the War with America; and in the Appendix.

Feb. 8th, 1776.

PREFACE to the FIFTH EDITION.

HE favourable reception which the following Tract has met with, makes me abundant amends for the abuse which it has brought upon me. I should be ill employed, were I to take much notice of this abuse : But there is one circumstance attending it which I cannot help just mentioning.

The principles on which I have argued form the foundation of every State as far as it is free, and are the fame with those taught by Mr. LOCKE, and all the writers on Civil Liberty who have been hitherto most admired in this country. But I find, with concern, that they are not approved by our Governors; and that they chuse to decline trying by them their present measures: For, in a pamphlet which has been circulated by government with great industry; these principles are pronounced to be "unnatural and wild, in-" compatible with practice; and the offspring of the distempered

" imagination of a man who is byaffed by Party, and who writes to deceive."

I must take this opportunity to add, that I love quiet too well to think of entering into a controversy with any writers; particularly, NAMELESS ones—Conficious of good intentions, and unconnected with any Party, I have endeavoured to plead the cause of General Liberty and Justice; and happy in knowing this, I shall, in filence, commit myself to that candour of the Public of which I have had so much experience.

March 12th, 1776. A 2

; ,

•

•

C O N T E N T S

PART I.

Page SECT. I. Of the Nature of Liberty in general — 5 SECT. II. Of Civil Liberty, and the Principles of Government 7 SECT. III. Of the Authority of one Country over another — 11

PART II.

SECT. I. Of the Justice of the War with America — 16 SECT. II. Whether the War with America is justified by the Principles of the Constitution — 20 SECT. III. Of the Policy of the War with America — 21 SECT. IV. Of the Honour of the Nation as affected by the War with America — 33 SECT. V. Of the Probability of succeeding in the War with America — 26

A P P E N D I X.

Containing a State of the National Debt at Midsummer, 1775; an Estimate of the Money drawn from the Public by the Taxes, and a Comparison of the National Income Since the last War, with the National Expenditure - 4

OBSERVATIONS,

OBSERVATIONS, Elc.

UR Colonies in NORTH AMERICA appear to be now determined to risk and suffer every thing, under the persuasion, that GREAT BRITAIN is attempting to rob them of that Liberty to which every member of society, and all civil communities, have a natural and unalienable right. The question, therefore, whether this is a reasonable perfuasion, is highly interesting, and deserves the most careful attention of every Englishman who values Liberty, and withes to avoid flaining himself with the guilt of invading it. But it is impossible to judge properly of this question without correct ideas of Liberty in general; and of the nature, limits, and principles of Civil Liberty in particular.—The following observations on this fubject appear to me important, as well as just; and I cannot make myself eafy without offering them to the Public at the prefent period, big with events of the last confequence to this kingdom. I do this, with reluctance and pain, urged by strong feelings, but at the fame time checked by the consciousness that I am likely to deliver fentiments not favourable to the prefent measures of that government, under which I live, and to which I am a constant and zealous well-wisher. Such, however, are my present sentiments and views, that this is a confideration of inferior moment with me; and, as I hope never to go beyond the bounds of decent discussion and expostulation, I flatter myself, that I shall be able to avoid giving any person just cause of offence.

The observations with which I shall begin, are of a more general and abstracted nature; but being, in my opinion, of particular consequence; and necessary to introduce what I have principally in view, I hope they will be patiently read and confidered.

SECT. I. Of the Nature of Liberty in General.

IN order to obtain a more diffinct and accurate view of the nature of Li-berty as fuch, it will be useful to confider it under the four following general divisions.

First, Physical Liberty.-----Secondly, Moral Liberty.----- Thirdly, Re-prehend under them all the different kinds of Liberty. And I have placed Civil Liberty last, because I mean to apply to it all I shall say of the other kinds of Liberty.

By PHYSICAL LIBERTY I mean that principle of Spontaneity, or Self-determination, which constitutes us Agents; or which gives us a command over our actions, rendering them properly ours, and not effects of the operation of any foreign cause. MORAL LIBERTY is the power of following, in all circumstances, our sense of right and wrong; or of acting in conformity to our reflecting and moral principles, without being controuled by any contrary principles.----RELIGIOUS LIBERTY fignifies the power of exercifing, without molestation, that mode of religion which we think best; or of making the decisions of our own consciences, respecting religious truth, the rule of our our conduct, and not any of the decisions of others.——In like manners CIVIL LIBERTY is the power of a Civil Society or State to govern itself by its own difcretion; or by laws of its own making, without being subject to any foreign difcretion, or to the impositions of any extraneous will or power.

[6]

It should be observed, that, according to these definitions of the different kinds of liberty, there is one general idea, that runs through them all; I mean, the idea of Self-direction, or Self-government. — Did our volitions originate not with ourselves, but with some cause over which we have no power; or were we under a necessity of always following some will different from our own, we should want PHYSICAL LIBERTY.

In like manner; he whole perceptions of moral obligation are controuled by his passions has lost his Moral Liberty; and the most common language applied to him is, that he wants Self-government.

He likewise who, in religion, cannot govern himself by his convictions of religious duty, but is obliged to receive formularies of faith, and to practile modes of worship imposed upon him by others, wants Religious Liberty. -And the Community also that is governed, not by itfelf, but by fome will independent of it, and over which it has no controul, wants Civil Liberty. In all these cases there is a force which stands opposed to the agent's own will; and which, as far as it operates, produces Servitude. In the firfe case, this force is incompatible with the very idea of voluntary motion; and the subject of it is a mere passive instrument which never alls, but is always acted upon. — In the fecond cafe; this force is the influence of paffion getting the better of reason; or the brute overpowering and conquering the will of the man.----In the third case; it is Human Authority in religion requiring conformity to particular modes of faith and worship, and superseding private judgment. And in the last case, it is any will distinct from that of the Majority of a Community, which claims a power of making laws for it, and disposing of its property. This it is, I think, that marks the limit, or that lays the line between Liberty and Slavery. As far as, in any instance, the operation of any cause comes in to restrain the power of Self-government, so far Slavery is introqueed: Nor do I think that a precifer idea than this of Liberty and Slavery can be formed.

I cannot help wishing I could here fix my reader's attention, and engage him to confider carefully the dignity of that bleffing to which we give the name of LIBERTY, according to the representation now made of it. There is not a word in the whole compais of language which expresses for much of what is important and excellent. It is, in every view of it, a bleffing truly facred and invaluable. — Without Physical Liberty, man would be a machine acted upon by mechanical springs, having no principle of motion in himself, or command over events; and, therefore, incapable of all merit and demerit. Without Moral Liberty he is a wicked and deteltable being, fubject to the tyranny of base lusts, and the sport of every vile appetite. ---- And without Religious and Civil Liberty he is a poor and abject animal, without rights, without property, and without a conficience, bending his neck to the yoke, and crouching to the will of every filly creature who has the infolence to pretend to authority over him. ---- Nothing, therefore, can be of fo much confequence to us as Liberty. It is the foundation of all honour, and the chief privilege and glory of our natures. In fixing our ideas on the subject of Liberty, it is of particular use to take such an enlarged view of it as [have now given. But the immediate object of the prefent enquiry being Civil Liberty, I will confine to it all the subsequent oblervations. SECT.

[7]

SECT. II. Of Civil Liberty and the Principles of Government.

TROM what has been faid it is obvious, that all civil government, as far as I it can be denominated free, is the creature of the people. It originates with them. It is conducted under their direction ; and has in view nothing but their happines. All its different forms are no more than so many different modes in which they chuse to direct their affairs, and to secure the quiet enjoyment of their rights. — In every free state every man is his own Legislator. All taxes are free-gifts for public fervices. —— All laws are particular provisions or regulations established by COMMON CONSENT for gaining protection and safety. —— And all Magistrates are Trustees or Deputies for carrying these regulations into execution.

Liberty, therefore, is too imperfectly defined when it is faid to be " a Government by Laws, and not by MEN." If the laws are made by one man, or a junto of men in a state, and not by COMMON CONSENT, a government by them does not differ from Slavery. In this case it would be a contradiction in terms to fay that the state governs itself.

From hence it is obvious that Civil Liberty, in its most perfect degree, can be enjoyed only in fmall states, where every member is capable of giving his suffrage in person, and of being chosen into public offices. When a state becomes so numerous, or when the different parts of it are removed to fuch distances from one another, as to render this impracticable, a diminution of Liberty necessarily arifes. There are, however, in these circumstances, methods by which such near approaches may be made to perfect Liberty as shall answer all the purposes of government, and at the same time secure every right of human nature.

Tho' all the members of a state should not be capable of giving their fuffrages on public measures, individually and personally, they may do this by the appointment of Substitutes or Representatives. They may entrust the powers of legislation, subject to such restrictions as they shall think necessary, with any number of Delegates; and whatever can be done by fuch delegates within the limits of their truft, may be confidered as done by the united voice and counsel of the Community.---In this method a free government may be established in the largest state; and it is conceivable that by regulations of this kind, any number of states might be fubjected to a scheme of government, that would exclude the defolations of war, and produce univerful peace and order.

Let us think here of what may be practicable in this way with respect to Europe in particular. — While it continues divided, as it is at present, into a great number of independent kingdoms whole interests are continually clashing, it is impossible but that disputes will often arise which must end in war and carnage. It would be no remedy to this evil to make one of these states supreme over the reft; and to give it an abfolute plenitude of power to superintend and controul them. This would be to fubject all the states to the arbitrary discretion of one, and to establish an ignominious flavery not possible to be long endured. It would, therefore, be a remedy worfe than the discase; nor is it possible it should be approved by any mind that has not lost every idea of Civil Liberty. On the contrary,-Let every state, with respect to all its internal concerns, be continued independent of all the reft; and let a general confederacy be formed by the appointment of a SENATE confisting of Representatives from all the different states. Let this SENATE posses the power of managing all the common concerns of the united states, and of judging and deciding between them, as a common Arbiter or Umpire, in all disputes; having, at the same time, under its direction, the common force of the states to support its decisions, ----- In these circumstances, each separate state would be secure against the interference of foreign power in its private concerns, and, therefore, would possels Liberty; and at the

E 8]

I have observed, that tho', in a great state, all the individuals that compose it cannot be admitted to an immediate participation in the powers of legislation and government, yet they may participate in these powers by a delegation of them to a body of representatives. In this case it is evident that the state will be fill free or felf-governed; and that it will be more or lefs fo in proportion as it is more or lefs fairly and adequately represented. If the persons to whom the trust of government is committed hold their places for short terms ; if they are chosen by the unbiassed voices of a majority of the state, and subject to their infructions : Liberty will be enjoyed in its higheft degree. But if they are chosen for long terms by a part only of the state; and if during that term they are subject to no controul from their constituents; the very idea of Liberty will be lost, and the power of chusing representatives becomes nothing but a power, lodged in a few, to chuse at certain periods, a body of Masters for themselves and for the rest of the Community. And if a state is so sunk that the majority of its reprefentatives are elected by a handful of the meanest (a) persons in it, whose votes are always paid for; and if also, there is a higher will on which even these mock sepresentatives themselves depend, and that directs their voices : In these circumftances, it will be an abuse of language to say that the state possesses Liberty. Private men, indeed, might be allowed the exercise of Liberty; as they might also under the most despotic government; but it would be an indulgence or connivance derived from the spirit of the times, or from an accidental mildness in the administration. And, rather than be governed in such a manner, it would perhaps be better to be governed by the will of one man without any representation : For a representation so degenerated could answer no other end than to mislead and deceive, by difguifing flavery, and keeping up a form of Liberty when the reality was loft.

Within the limits now mentioned, Liberty may be enjoyed in every possible degree; from that which is complete and perfect, to that which is merely nominal; according as the people have more or less of a share in government, and of a controuling power over the persons by whom it is administered.

In general, to be free is to be guided by one's own will; and to be guided by the will of another is the characteriflic of Scrwitude. This is particularly applicable to Political Liberty. That flate, I have obferved, is free, which is guided by its own will; or, (which comes to the fame) by the will of an affembly of reprefentatives appointed by itfelf and accountable to itfelf. And every flate that is not fo governed; or in which a body of men reprefenting the people make not an effential part of the Legiflature, is in flawery.—In order to form the moft perfect conflitution of government, there may be the beft reafons for joining to fuch a body of reprefentatives, an Hereditary Gouncil, confifting of men of the first rank in the flate, with a Supreme executive Magisfrate at the head of all. This will form ufeful checks in a legiflature; and contribute to give it vigour, union, and difpatch, without infringing liberty: for, as long as that part of a government which reprefents the people is a fair reprefentation; and alfo has a negative on all public meafures, together with the fole power of

(a) In Great Eritain, confiding of near fix millions of inhabitants, 5723 perfons, most of them the lowest of the people, elect one half of the House of Commons; and 364 votes chuse a ninth part. This may be seen diffinctly made out in the Political Disquisitions, Vol. I. Book 2. C. 4. a work full of important and uleful instruction, imposing taxes and originating supplies; the effectials of Liberty will be preferved. ——We make it our boast in this country, that this is our own constitution. I will not fay with how much reason.

impoling

[9]

Of such Liberty as I have now described, it is impossible that there should be an excess. Government is an institution for the benefit of the people governed. which they have power to model as they pleafe; and to fay, that they can have too much of this power, is to fay, that there ought to be a power in the state superior to that which gives it being, and from which all jurifdiction in it is derived. Licentiousnes, which has been commonly mentioned, as an extreme of liberty, is indeed its opposite. It is government by the will of rapacious individuals, in opposition to the will of the community, made known and declared in the laws. A free state, at the fame time that it is free itself, makes all its members free by excluding licentiousness, and guarding their persons and property and good name against infult. It is the end of all just government, at the same time that it fecures the liberty of the public against foreign injury, to secure the liberty of the individual against private injury. I do not, therefore, think it strictly just to fay, that it belongs to the nature of government to entrench on private liberty. It ought never to do this, except as far as the exercise of private liberty encroaches on the liberties of others. That is; it is licentiousness it restrains, and liberty itself only when used to destroy liberty. It appears from hence, that licentiousness and despotism are more nearly allied than is commonly imagined. They are both alike inconfistent with liberty, and the true end of government; nor is there any other difference between them, than that the one is the licentiousness of great men, and the other the licentiousness of little men; or that, by the one, the persons and property of a people are subject to outrage and invasion from a King, or a lawles body of Grandres; and that, by the other, they are subject to the like outrage from a lawle/s mob-In avoiding one of these evils, mankind have often run into the other. But all well-conftituted governments guard equally against both. Indeed of the two, the last is, on several accounts, the least to be dreaded, and has done the least mischief. It may be truly faid, that if licentioufness has destroyed its thousands, despotism has destroyed its millions. The former, having little power, and no fyftem to fupport it, necessarily finds its own remedy; and a people foon get out of the tumult and anarchy attending it. But a despotism, wearing the form of government, and being armed with its force, is an evil not to be conquered without dreadful struggles. It goes on from age to age, debasing the human faculties, levelling all distinctions, and preying on the rights and bleffings of fociety.——It deferves to be added, that in a flate difturbed by licentioufnefs, there is an animation which is favourable to the human mind, and which puts it upon exerting its powers. But in a state habituated to a defpotifm; all is still and torpid. A dark and favage tyranny stifles every effort of genius; and the mind loses all its spirit and dignity.

Before I proceed to what I have farther in view, I will obferve, that the account now given of the principles of public Liberty, and the nature of an equal and free government, fhews what judgment we fhould form of that OMNIPOTENCE, which, it has been faid, must belong to every government as fuch. Great ftrefs has been laid on this, but most unreasonably.——Government, as has been before observed, is, is the very nature of it, a TRUST; and all its powers a DELEGATION for gaining particular ends. This trust may be misapplied and abused. It may be employed so detest the very ends for which it was inflituted; and to subvert the very rights which it ought to protect.—— A PARLIAMBNT, for inflance, confishing of a body of representatives, chosen for a limited period, to make laws, and to grant money for public fervices, would forfeit its authority by making itself perpetual, or even prolonging its own doration; by nominating its own members; by accepting bribes; or fubjecting itfelf to any kind of foreign influence. This would convert a Parliament into a conclave or junto of felf-created tools; and a flate that has loft its regard to its own rights, fo far as to fubmit to fuch a breach of truft in its rulers, is enflaved.—Nothing, therefore, can be more abfurd than the doctrine which fome have taught, with refpect to the omnipotence ofparliaments. They posses no power beyond the limits of the truft for the execution of which they were formed. If they contradict this truft, they betray their conflituents, and diffolve themselves. All delegated power must be fubordinate and limited.—If omnipotence can, with any fense, be afcribed to a legislature, it must be lodged where all legislative authority originates; that is, is the PEOPLE. For their fakes government is inflituted; and their's is the only real omnipotence.

[10]

I am feufible, that all I have been faying would be very abfurd, were the opinions just which fome have maintained concerning the origin of government. According to these opinions, government is not the creature of the people, or the result of a convention between them and their rulers : But there are certain men who possels in themselves, independently of the will of the people, a right of governing them, which they derive from the Deity. This doctrine has been abundantly refuted by many (a) excellent writers. It is a doctrine which avowedly subverts Civil Liberty; and which represents mankind as a body of vassals, formed to descend like cattle from one fet of owners to another, who have an absolute dominion over them. It is a wonder, that those who view their species in a light fo humiliating, should ever be able to think of themselves without regret and shame. The intention of these observations is not to oppose such sentiments; but, taking for granted the reasonableness of Civil Liberty, to shew wherein it confilts, and what diffinguishes it from its contrary.----And, in confidering this fubject, as it has been now treated, it is unavoidable to reflect on the excellency of a free government, and its tendency to exalt the nature of man. Every member of a free state, having his property secure, and knowing himself his own governor, possesses a consciousness of dignity in himself, and feels incitements to emulation and improvement, to which the miserable flaves of arbitrary power must be utter strangers. In such a state all the springs of action have room to operate, and the mind is stimulated to the noblest exertions (b).-But to be obliged, from our birth, to look up to a creature no better than ourfelves as the master of our fortunes; and to receive his will as our law-What can be more humiliating? What elevated ideas can enter a mind in fuch a fituation?---Agreeably to this remark; the subjects of free states have, in all ages, been molt diffinguished for genius and knowledge. Liberty is the soil where the arts and sciences have flourished; and the more free a state has been, the more have the powers of the human mind been drawn forth into action, and the greater number of brave men has it produced. With what luftre do the antient free states of Greece shine in the annals of the world? How different is that country now, under the Great Turk? The difference between a country inhabited by men, and by brutes, is not greater. These are reflexions which should be constantly present to every mind in this country. — As Moral Liberty is the prime bleffing of man in his private capacity, fo is Civil Liberty in his public capacity. There is nothing that requires more to be watched than power. There is nothing that ought to be opposed with a more determined resolution than its encroachments. Sleep in a state, as Montesquice says, is always followed by flavery.

(a) See among others Mr. Locke on Government, and Dr. Priefiley's Effay on the first Principles of Government.

The

(6) See Dr. Priestley on Government, page 68, 69, &c.

[11]

The people of this kingdom were once warmed by fuch featiments as thefs. Many a fycophant of power have they facrificed. Often have they fought and bled in the caufe of Liberty. But that time feems to be going. The fair inheritance of Liberty left us by our anceftors many of us are not unwilling to refign. An abandoned venality, the infeparable companion of diffipation and extravagance, has poifoned the fprings of public virtue among us : And fhould any events ever arife that fhould render the fame opposition necessary that took place in the times of King Charles the First, and James the Second, I am afraid all that is valuable to us would be lost. The terror of the standing army, the danger of the public funds, and the all-corrupting influence of the treasury, would deaden all zeal, and produce general acquies fearce and fervility.

SECT. III. Of the Authority of one Country over another.

ROM the nature and principles of Civil Liberty, as they have been now explained, it is an immediate and necessary inference, that no one community can have any power over the property or legislation of another community, that is not incorporated with it by a just and adequate representation.-Then only, it has been shewn, is a state free, when it is governed by its own will. But a country that is subject to the legislature of another country, in which it has no voice, and over which it has no controul, cannot be faid to be governed by its own will. Such a country, therefore, is in a state of slavery. And it deferves to be particularly confidered, that fuch a flavery is worfe, on feveral accounts, than any flavery of private men to one another, or of kingdoms to despots within themselves.-Between one state and another, there is none of that fellow-feeling that takes place between perfons in private life. Being detached bodies that never see one another, and residing perhaps in different quarters of the globe, the state that governs cannot be a witness to the fufferings occasioned by its oppressions; or a competent judge of the circumstances and abilities of the people who are governed. They must also have in a great degree separate interests; and the more the one is loaded, the more the other may be eased. The infamy likewife of oppression, being in fuch circumstances shared among a multitude, is not likely to be much felt or regarded. ----On all these accounts there is, in the cafe of one country fubjugated to another, little or nothing to check rapacity; and the most flagrant injustice and cruelty may be practifed without remorfe or pity.____I will add, that it is particularly difficult to shake off a tyranny of this kind. A fingle despot, if a people are unanimous and resolute, may be soon subdued. But a despotic state is not easily subdued; and a people subject to it cannot emancipate themselves without entering into a dreadful, and, perhaps, very unequal contest.

I cannot help observing farther, that the flavery of a people to internal despots may be qualified and limited; but I don't see what can limit the authority of one state over another. The exercise of power in this case can have no other measure than discretion; and, therefore, must be indefinite and absolute.

Once more. It should be confidered that the government of one country by another, can only be supported by a military force; and, without such a support, must be destitute of all weight and efficiency.

This will be best explained by putting the following case.——There is, let us suppose, in a province subject to the sovereignty of a distant state, a subordinate legislature consisting of an Assembly chosen by the people; a Council chosen by that Assembly; and a Governor appointed by the Sovereign State, and paid by the Province. There are likewise, judges and other officers, appointed and paid in the same manner, for administering justice agreeably to the laws, by the verdicts of juries fairly and indiferiminately chosen.—This forms a constitution seemingly free, by giving the people a share in their own government, and

[12]

and some check on their rulers. But, while there is a higher legislative power, to the controul of which fuch a constitution is subject, it does not itself posses Liberty, and therefore, cannot be of any use as a security to Liberty; nor is it possible that it should be of long duration. Laws offensive to the Province will be enacted by the Sovereign State. The legislature of the Province will remonfrate against them. The magistrates will not execute them. Juries will not convict upon them; and confequently, like the Pope's Bulls which once governed Europe, they will become nothing but forms and empty founds, to which no regard will be fhewn. In order to remedy this evil, and to give efficiency to its government, the supreme state will naturally be led to withdraw the Gowernor, the Council, and the Judges (a) from the controul of the Province, by making them entirely dependent on itself for their pay and continuance in office, as well as for their appointment. It will also alter the mode of chusing Juries on purpose to bring them more under its influence : And in some cases, under the pretence of the impossibility of gaining an impartial trial where government is rekited, it will perhaps ordain, that offenders shall be removed from the Province to be tried within its own territories : And it may even go fo far in this kind of policy, as to endeavour to prevent the effects of discontents, by forbidding all meetings and affociations of the people, except at fuch times, and for fuch particular purposes, as shall be permitted them. Thus will fuch a Province be exactly in the fame flate that Britain would be in, were our first executive magistrate, our House of Lords, and our Judges, nothing but the inftruments of a foreign democratical power; were our Juries nominated by that power; or were we liable to be transported to a distant country to be tried for offences committed here; and reftrained from calling any meetings, confulting about any grievances, or affociating for any purpoles, except when leave should be given us by a Lord Lieutenant or Viceroy. It is certain that this is a flate of oppression which no country could endure, and to which it would be vain to expect, that any people should submit an hour without an armed force to compel them. The late transactions in Maffachusets's Bay are a perfect exemplification of what I have now faid. The government of Great Britain in that Province has gone on exactly in the train I have described; till at last it became necessary to station troops there, not amenable to the civil power; and all terminated in a government by the Sword. And fuch, if a people are not funk below the character of men, will be the iffue of all government in fimilar circumstances.

It may be asked _____. " Are there not causes by which one state may acquire a " rightful authority over another, though not consolidated by an adequate Re-

(a) The independency of the Judges we effect in this country one of our greatest privileges. Before the revolution they generally, I believe, held their places during pleasure. King William gave them their places during good behaviour. At the accellion of the prefent Royal Family their places were given them during good behaviour, in confequence of the Act of Settlement, 12 and 13 W. III. C. 2. But an opinion having been entertained by fome, that though their commissions were made under the Act of Settlement to continue, during good behaviour, yet that they determined on the demife of the Crown; it was enacted by a statute made in the first year of his present Majesty, Chap. 23. " That the commissions of Judges for the time being shall be, continue, and remain in full force, during their good behaviour, not with flanding the demife of his Majefty, or of any of his " Heirs and Succellors;" with a provifo, " that it may be lawful for his Majefty, his Heirs and " Succeffors, to remove any Judge upon the address of both Houses of Parliament." And by the fame Statute their falaries are fecured to them during the continuance of their commissions : His Majeity, according to the preamble of the Statute, having been pleafed to declare from the Throne to both Houses of Parliament, " That he looked upon the independency and uprightness of Judges as " effential to the impartial administration of Justice, at one of the best securities to the Rights and " Liberties of his loving fubjects, and as moft conducive to the honour of his Crown."

A worthy friend and able Lawyer has supplied me with this note. It affords, when contrasted with that dependence of the Judges which has been thought reasonable in America, a fad specimen of the different manner in which a kingdom may think proper to govern itself, and the provinces subject to it.

" presentation ?"

C. MARK

I 3

" presentation?"——I answer, that there are no such causes.——All the causes to which such an effect can be ascribed are CONQUEST, COMPACT, or OBLI-GATIONS CONFERRED.

Much has been faid of the right of conquest; and history contains little more than accounts of kingdoms reduced by it under the dominion of other kingdoms, and of the havock it has made among mankind. But the authority derived from hence, being founded on violence, is never rightful. The Roman Republic was nothing but a faction against the general liberties of the world; and had no more right to give law to the Provinces subject to it, than thieves have to the property they seize, or to the houses into which they break.—Even in the case of a just war undertaken by one people to defend itself against the oppressions of another people, conquest gives only a right to an indemnification for the injury which occasioned the war, and a reasonable security against future injury.

Neither can any state require such an authority over other states in virtue of any compacts or cessions. This is a case in which compacts are not binding. Civil Liberty is, in this respect, on the same footing with Religious Liberty. As no people can lawfully furrender their Religious Liberty, by giving up their right of judging for themselves in religion, or by allowing any human beings to prescribe to them what faith they shall embrace, or what mode of worship they shall practife; so neither can any civil societies lawfully furrender their Civil Liberty, by giving up to any extraneous jurifdiction their power of legiflating for themselves and disposing their property. Such a cession, being inconfistent with the unalienable rights of human nature, would either not bind at all; or bind only the individuals who made it. This is a bleffing which no one generation of men can give up for another; and which, when loft, a people have always a right to refume. — Had our ancestors in this country been fo mad as to have fubjected themfelves to any foreign Community, we could not have been under any obligation to continue in fuch a flate. And all the nations now in the world who, in confequence of the tameness and folly of their predecessors, are subject to arbitrary power, have a right to emancipate themselves as foon as they can. If neither conquest nor compact can give fuch an authority, much less can any favours received, or any fervices performed by one state for another.---- Let the favour received be what it will, Liberty is too dear a price for it. A state that has been obliged is not, therefore, bound to be enflaved. It ought, if possible, to make an adequate return for the fervices done to it; but to suppose that it ought to give up the power of governing itself, and the disposal of its property, would be to suppose, that, in order to shew its gratitude, it ought to part with the power of ever afterwards exercifing gratitude. —— How much has been done by this kingdom for Hanover? But no one will fay that on this account, we have a right to make the laws of Hanover; or even to draw a fingle penny from it without its own confent.

After what has been faid it will, I am afraid, be trifling to apply the preceding arguments to the cafe of different communities, which are confidered as different parts of the fame Empire. But there are reafons which render it neceffary for me to be explicit in making this application.

What I mean here is just to point out the difference of fituation between communities forming an Empire; and particular bodies or classes of men forming different parts of a Kingdom. Different communities forming an Empire have no connexions, which produce a necessary reciprocation of intercs between them. They inhabit different districts, and are governed by different legislatures. On the contrary. The different classes of men within a kingdom are all placed on the fame ground. Their concerns and interests are the same; and what is done to one part must affect all. These are fituations totally different; and a constitution conflitation of government that may be confiftent with Liberty in one of them, may be entirely inconfistent with it in the other. It is, however, certain that, even in the last of these situations, no one part ought to govern the rest. In order to a fair and equal government, there ought to be a fair and equal representation of all that are governed; and as far as this is wanting in any government, it deviates from the principles of Liberty, and becomes unjust and oppressive. But in the circumflances of different communities, all this holds with unspeakably more force. The government of a part in this cafe becomes complete tyranny; and subjection to it becomes complete flavery.

L 14 T

But ought there not, it is asked, to exist somewhere in an Empire a supreme legislative authority over the whole; or a power to controul and bind all the different states of which it confists ?--- This enquiry has been already answered. The truth is, that fuch a fupreme controuling power ought to exist no-where except in such a SENATE or body of delegates as that described in page 7; and that the authority or supremacy of even this senate ought to be limited to the common concerns of the Empire. -----I think I have proved that the fundamental principles of Liberty necessarily require this. In a word. An Empire is a collection of states or communities united by some common bond or tye. If these states have each of them free constitutions of government, and, with respect to taxation and internal legislation, are independent of the other flates, but united by compacts, or alliances, or fubjection to a Great Council, representing the whole, or to one monarch entrusted with the supreme executive power: In these circumstances, the Empire will be an Empire of Free. men.-If, on the contrary, like the different provinces subject to the Grand Seignior, none of the flates possels any independent legislative authority; but are all fubject to an absolute monarch, whose will is their law, then is the Empire an Empire of Slaves.-----If one of the states is free, but governs by its will all the other states; then is the Empire, like that of the Romans in the times of the republic, an Empire confifting of one ftate free, and the reft in flavery : Nor does it make any more difference in this cafe, that the governing state is itself free, than it does in the case of a kingdom subject to a de/pot, that this despot is himself free. I have before observed, that this only makes the flavery worke. There is, in the one case, a chance, that in the quick succession of despots, a good one will fometimes arife. But bodies of men continue the fame; and have generally proved the most unrelenting of all tyrants. A great writer before (a) quoted, observes of the Roman Empire, that while Liberty was at the center, tyranny prevailed in the diffant provinces; that fuch as were free under it were extremely so, while those who were slaves groaned under the extremity of flavery; and that the same events that destroyed the liberty of the former, gaze liberty to the latter. The Liberty of the Romans, therefore, was only an additional calamity to the provinces governed by them; and though it might have been faid of the citizens of Rome, that they were the " freest members of any civil society in the known " world;" yet of the Jubjects of Rome, it must have been faid, that they were the completest flaves in the known world. ------ How remarkable is it, that this very people, once the freest of mankind, but at the same time the most proud and tyrannical, should become at last the most contemptible and abject flaves that ever existed ?

(a) Montesquieu's Spirit of Laws, Vol. I. Book 21. C. xix.

[15]

PARTI.

I N the foregoing disquifitions, I have, from one leading principle, deduced a number of consequences, that seems to me incapable of being disputed. I have meant that they should be applied to the great question between this kingdom and the Colonies which has occasioned the present war with them.

It is impossible but my readers must have been all along making this application; and if they still think that the claims of this kingdom are reconcilable to the principles of true liberty and legitimate government, I am afraid, that nothing I shall farther fay will have any effect on their judgments. I wish, however, they would have the patience and candour to go with me, and grant me a hearing fome time longer.

Though clearly decided in my own judgment on this subject, I am inclined to make great allowances for the different judgments of others. We have been fo used to speak of the Colonies as our Colonies, and to think of them as in a state of fubordination to us, and as holding their exilience in America only for our use, that it is no wonder the prejudices of many are alarmed, when they find a different doctrine maintained. The meanest person among us is disposed to look upon himself as having a body of subjects in America; and to be offended at the denial of his right to make laws for them, though perhaps he does not tural prejudices of this country.----But the time is coming, I hope, when the unreasonableness of them will be seen ; and more just sentiments prevail.

Before I proceed, I beg it may be attended to, that I have chosen to try this question by the general principles of Civil Liberty; and not by the practice of former times; or by the Charters granted the colonies. —— The arguments for them, drawn from these last topics, appear to me greatly to outweigh the arguments against them. But I wish to have this question brought to a higher test, and furer isfue. The question with all liberal enquirers ought to be, not what jurisdiction over them Precedents, Statutes, and Charters give, but what reason and equity, and the rights of humanity give. ——This is, in truth, a question which no kingdom has ever before had occasion to agitate. The case of a free country branching itself out in the manner Britain has done, and sending to a diftant world colonies which have there, from small beginnings, and under free legislatures of their own, increased, and formed a body of powerful states, likely foon to become superior to the parent state-This is a case which is new in the history of mankind; and it is extremely improper to judge of it by the rules of any narrow and part: al policy; or to confider it on any other ground than the general one of reason and justice. — Those who will be candid enough to judge on this ground, and who can divest themselves of national prejudices, will not, I fancy, remain long unsatisfied. _____But alas! Matters are gone too far. The dispute probably must be settled another way; and the sword alone, I am afraid, is now to determine what the rights of Britain and America are. ---- Shocking fituation !-Detefted be the measures which have brought us into it : And, if we however, is not yet impracticable. The duty we owe our gracious fovereign obliges us to rely on his disposition to stay the sword, and to promote the happiness of all the different parts of the Empire at the head of which he is placed. With some hopes, therefore, that it may not be too late to reason on this subject, I will, in the following Sections, enquire what the war with America is in the following respects. 1. In

E 16]

1. In respect of Justice. 2. The Principles of the Constitution.

3. In respect of Policy and Humanity.

4. The Honour of the Kingdom.

And lastly, The Probability of fucceeding in it.

SECT. I. Of the Justice of the War with America.

THE enquiry, whether the war with the Colonies is a just war, will be best determined by stating the power over them, which it is the end of best determined by stating the power over them, which it is the end of the war to maintain : And this cannot be better done, than in the words of an act of parliament, made on purpose to define it. That act, it is well known, declares, "That this kingdom has power, and of right ought to have power to " make laws and statutes to bind the Colonies, and people of America, in all " cafes whatever."-----Dreadful power indeed! I defy any one to express flavery in stronger language. It is the same with declaring "that we have a " right to do with them what we pleafe."-I will not wafte my time by applying to fuch a claim any of the preceding arguments. If my reader does not feel more in this case, than words can express, all reasoning must be vain. But, probably, most persons will be for using milder language; and for saying no more than, that the united legislatures of England and Scotland have of right power to tax the Colonies, and a supremacy of legislation over America. ----- But this comes to the fame. If it means any thing, it means, that the property, and the legislations of the Colonies, are subject to the absolute discretion of Great Britain, and ought of right to be fo. The nature of the thing admits of no limitation. The Colonies can never be admitted to be judges, how far the authority over them in these cases shall extend. This would be to destroy it entirely.-----If any part of their property is fubject to our difcretion, the whole must be so. If we have a right to interfere at all in their internal legislations, we have a right to interfere as far as we think proper.----It is felf-evident, that this leaves them nothing they can call their own,-----And what is it that can give to any people fuch a supremacy over another people ?-----I have already examined the principal answers which have been given to this enquiry. But it will not be amifs in this place to go over fome of them again.

It has been urged, that fuch a right must be lodged somewhere, " in order to " preserve the UNITY of the British Empire."

Pleas of this fort have, in all ages, been used to justify tyranny. ------- They have in RELIGION given rise to numberless oppressive claims, and slavish Hierarchies. And in the Romish Communion particularly, it is well known, that the POPE claims the title and powers of the supreme head on earth of the Christian church, in order to preserve its UNITY. ------ With respect to the British Empire, nothing can be more preposterous than to endeavour to maintain its unity, by fetting up fuch a claim. This is a method of establishing unity, which, like the fimilar method in religion, can produce nothing but difcord and mifchief. The truth is, that a common relation to one supreme executive head; an exchange of kind offices; tyes of interest and affection, and compacts, are fufficient to give the British Empire all the unity that is necessary. But if not ----- If, in order to preserve its Unity, one half of it must be enslaved to the other half, let it, in the name of God, want Unity. Much has been faid of "the Superiority of the British State." But what gives us our superiority ?-Is it our Wealth ?-This never confers real dignity. On the contrary : Its effect is always to debase, intoxicate, and corrupt. Is it the number of our people? The colonies will foon be equal to us in number. --- Is it our Knowledge and Virtue? They are probably equally knowing, and and more virtuous. There are names among them that will not floop to any names among the philosophers and politicians of this island.

[17]

" But we are the PARENT STATE."-These are the magic words which have fascinated and missed us. ----- The English came from Germany. Does that give the German states a right to tax us ?----Children, having no property, and being incapable of guiding themselves, the Author of nature has committed the care of them to their parents, and subjected them to their absolute authority. But there is a period when, having acquired property, and a capacity of judging for themfelves, they become independent agents; and when, for this reason, the autho-3 rity of their parents ceases, and becomes nothing but the respect and influence g due to benefactors. Supposing, therefore, that the order of nature in establishing the relation between parents and children, ought to have been the rule of our Conduct to the Colonies, we should have been gradually relaxing our authority as they grew up. But, like mad parents, we have done the contrary; and, at the V very time when our authority should have been most relaxed, we have carried it to the greatest extent, and exercised it with the greatest rigour. No wonder then, that they have turned upon us; and obliged us to remember, that they are not Children. " But we have," it is faid, " protected them, and run deeply in debt on their " account." ---- The full answer to this has been already given, (page 13.). Will any one fay, that all we have done for them has not been more on our own saccount, (a) than on theirs? ---- But suppose the contrary. Have they done nothing for us? Have they made no compendation for the protection they have areceived ? Have they not helped us to pay our taxes, to support our poor, and to bear the burthen of our debts, by taking from us, at our own price, all the commodities with which we can supply them? ---- Have they not, for our . advantage, fubmitted to many reftraints in acquiring property? Must they likewife refign to us the disposal of that property?-Has not their exclusive trade with us been for many years one of the chief fources of our national wealth and power?—In all our wars have they not fought by our fide, and contributed much to our fuccefs ? In the last war, particularly, it is well known, that they ran Athemfelves deeply in debt; and that the parliament thought it necessary to grant them confiderable fums annually as compensations for going beyond their abilities In affifting us. And in this courfe would they have continued for many future years; perhaps, for ever.-In short; were an accurate account stated, it is by po means certain which fide would appear to be most indebted. When asked as Freemen, they have hitherto feldom difcovered any reluctance in giving. But, in Jobedience to a demand, and with the bayonet at their breafts, they will give us pothing but blood.

It is farther faid, " that the land on which they fettled was ours."-But how mame it to be ours? If failing along a coaft can give a right to a country, then might the people of Japan become, as foon as they pleafe, the proprietors of Pritain. Nothing can be more chimerical than property founded on fuch a reaon. If the land on which the Colonies first settled had any proprietors, they were the natives. The greatest part of it they bought of the natives. They

(a) This is particularly true of the bounties granted on some American commodities (as pitch, mar, indigo, &c.) when imported into Britain; for it is well known, that the end of granting them vas, to get those commodities cheaper from the Colonies, and in return for our manufactures, which we used to get from Ruffia and other foreign countries. And this is expressed in the preambles f the laws which grant these bounties. See the Appeal to the Juffice, &c. page 21, third edition. is, therefore, firange that Doctor TUCKER and others, should have infifted fo much upon. bele bounties as favours and indulgences to the Colonics. --- But it is still more strange, that the me reprefentation should have been made of the compensations granted them for doing more durg the laft war in affifting us than could have been reafonably expected; and allo of the fums we heve spent in maintaining troops among them without their confent; and in opposition to their America."

B

have

[18]

have fince cleared and cultivated it; and, without any help from us, converted a wilderness into fruitful and pleasant fields. It is, therefore, now on a double account their property; and no power on earth can have any right to disturb them in the possession of it, or to take from them, without their consent, any part of its produce.

But let it be granted that the land was ours. Did they not fettle upon it under the faith of charters, which promised them the enjoyment of all the rights of Englishmen; and allowed them to tax themselves, and to be governed by legiflatures of their own, fimilar to ours ? These charters were given them by an authority, which at the time was thought competent; and they have been rendered sacred by an acquiescence on our part for more than a century. Can it then be wondered at, that the Colonies should revolt, when they found their charters violated; and an attempt made to force INNOVATIONS upon them by famine and the fword ?--But I lay no stress on charters. They derive their rights from a higher source. It is inconsistent with common sense to imagine, that any people would ever think of settling in a distant country, on any such condition, as that the people from whom they withdrew, should for ever be masters of their property, and have power to fubject them to any modes of government they pleased. And had there been express stipulations to this purpose in all the charters of the colonies, they would, in my opinion, be no more bound by them, than if it had been slipulated with them, that they should go naked, or expose themselves to the incursions of wolves and tigers. The defective state of the representation of this kingdom has been farther pleaded to prove our right to tax America. We submit to a parliament that does not represent us, and therefore they ought.---How strange an argument is this? It is faying we want liberty; and therefore, they ought to want it.----Suppose it true, that they are indeed contending for a better constitution of government, and more liberty than we enjoy : Ought this to make us angry? -----Who is there that does not fee the danger to which this country is exposed?---Is it generous, because we are in a fink, to endeavour to draw them into it? Ought we not rather to wish earnestly, that there may at least be one FREE COUNTRY left opon earth, to which we may fly, when venality, luxury, and vice have completed the ruin of Liberty here? It is, however, by no means true, that America has no more right to be exempted from taxation by the British parliament, than Britain itself. ---- Here, all freeholders, and burgessies in boroughs, are represented. There, not one Freeholder, or any other person, is represented. ---- Here, the aids granted by the represented part of the kingdom mult be proportionably paid by themselves; and the laws they make for others, they at the fame time make for themselves. There, the aids they would grant would not be paid, but received, by them. felves; and the laws they made would be made for others only. ---- In flort. The relation of one country to another country, whole representatives have the power of taxing it (and of appropriating the money raised by the taxes) is much the fame with the relation of a country to a fingle defpot, or a body of despots, within itself, invested with the like power. In both cases, the people taxed and those who tax have separate interests; nor can there be any thing to check oppression, besides either the abilities of the people taxed, or the humanity of the taxers, ----- But indeed I can never hope to convince that perfon of any thing, who does not see an essential difference (a) between the two cases now mentioned; or between the circumstances of individuals, and classes of men, making parts of a community imperfectly represented in the legislature

(a) It gives me pleafure to find, that the author of the Remarks on the Principal Alls of the 13th Parliament of Great Britain, &c. acknowledges this difference. It has, however, been at the fame time mortifying to me to find fo able a writer adopting fuch principles of government, as are contained in this work. According to him, a people have no property or rights, except fuch as their Civil Governers are pleafed not to take from them. Taxes, therefore, he afferts, are in no tenfe the wife, much left the free wifes of the people. See p. 58. and 191.

[19]

that governs it; and the circumstances of a whole community, in a distant world, not at all represented.

But enough has been faid by others on this point; nor is it possible for me to throw any new light upon it. To finish, therefore, what I meant to offer under this head, I must beg that the following considerations may be particularly attended to.

The question now between us and the Colonies is, Whether, in respect of taxation and internal legislation, they are bound to be subject to the jurisdiction of this kingdom: Or, in other words, Whether the British parliament has or has not of right a power to dispose of their property, and to model as it pleases their governments? — To this supremacy over them, we say, we are entitled; and in order to maintain it, we have begun the present war. ---- Let me here enquire, 1A. Whether, if we have now this supremacy, we shall not be equally entitled to it in any future time? ---- They are now but little short of half our number. To this number they have grown, from a small body of original settlers, by a very rapid increase. The probability is, that they will go on to increase; and that, in 50 or 60 years, they will be double our number; (a) and form a mighty Empire, confifting of a variety of states, all equal or superior to ourfelves in all the arts and accomplifhments, which give dignity and happiness to human life. In that period, will they be still bound to acknowledge that supremacy over them which we now claim? Can there be any perfon who will assert this; or whose mind does not revolt at the idea of a vast continent, holding all that is valuable to it, at the difcretion of a handful of people on the other fide the Atlantic? ----- But if, at that period, this would be unreasonable; what makes it otherwise now ?-Draw the line, if you can.-But there is a still greater difficulty.

Britain is now, I will suppose, the seat of Liberty and Virtue; and its legislature confifts of a body of able and independent men, who govern with wifdom and justice. The time may come when all will be reversed : When its excellent constitution of Government will be fubverted : When, pressed by debts and taxes, it will be greedy to draw to itself an increase of revenue from every diftant Province, in order to eafe its own burdens: When the influence of the crown, strengthened by luxury and an universal profligacy of manners, will have tainted every heart, broken down every fence of Liberty, and rendered us a nation of tame and contented vaffals : When a General Election will be nothing but a General Auction of Boroughs: And when the PARLIAMENT, the Grand Council of the nation, and once the faithful guardian of the flate, and a terror to evil ministers, will be degenerated into a body of Sycophants, dependent and venal, always ready to confirm any measures; and little more than a public court for registering royal edicts.—Such, it is possible, may, some time or other, be the flate of Great Britain.-What will, at that period, be the duty of the Colonies? Will they be still bound to unconditional submission? Must they always continue an appendage to our government; and follow it implicitly through every change that can happen to it? -Wretched condition, indeed, of millions of freemen as good as ourselves !--Will you say that we now govern equitably; and that there is no danger of any fuch revolution ?---Would to God this were true !--But will you not always fay the fame? Who shall judge whether we govern equitably or not? Can you give the Colonies any ficurity that fuch a period will never come? Once more.

If we have indeed that power which we claim over the legislations, and internal rights of the Colonies, may we not, whenever we please, subject them to the arbitrary power of the crown?-I do not mean, that this would be a difadvantageous change: For I have before obferved, that if a people are to be subject to an external power over which they have no command, it is better that power should be lodged in the hands of one man than of a multitude. But many persons think otherwise; and such ought to consider that, if this would be a calamity, the condition of the Colonies must be deplorable. - " A govern-" ment by King, Lords, and Commons, (it has been faid) is the perfection of go-" vernment;" and fo it is, when the Commons are a just representation of the people; and when also, it is not extended to any distant people, or communities, not represented. But if this is the best, a government by a king only must be the work; and every claim implying a right to establish such a government among any people must be unjust and cruel.-It is self-evident, that by claiming a right to alter the constitutions of the Colonies, according to our discretion, we claim this power: And it is a power that we have thought fit to exercise in one of our Colonies; and that we have attempted to exercise in another. — Canada, according to the late extension of its limits, is a country almost as large as half Europe; and it may possibly come in time to be filled with British subjects. The Quebec act makes the king of Great Britain a despot over all that country.-In the Province of Massachusett's Bay the same thing has been attempted and begun. The act for BETTER regulating their government, passed at the same time with the Quebec act, gives the king the right of appointing, and removing at his pleasure, the members of one part of the legislature; alters the mode of chufing juries, on purpole to bring it more under the influence of the king; and takes away from the province the power of calling any meetings of the people without the king's confent. (a) The judges, likewife, have been made dependent on the king, for their nomination and pay, and continuance in office.-If all this is no more than we have a right to do; may we not go on to abolifh the house of representatives, to destroy all trials by juries, and to give up the province absolutely and totally to the will of the king? --- May we not even establish popery in the province, as has been lately done in Canada, leaving the support of protestantism to the king's diference on there be any Englishman who, were it his own cafe, would not fooner lofe his heart's blood than yield to claims fo pregnant with evils, and defiructive to every thing that can diffinguish a Freeman from a Slave? I will take this opportunity to add, that what I have now faid, fuggefts a confideration that demonstrates, on how different a footing the Colonies are with respect to our government, from particular bodies of men within the kingdom, who happen not to be represented. Here, it is impossible that the represented part should subject the unrepresented part to arbitrary power, without including themselves. But in the Colonies it is not impossible. We know that it has been done.

> (a) See Obfervations on Reversionary Payments, page 207, Sec. B 2

SECT. II. Whether the War with America is justified by the Principles of the Constitution.

I Have proposed, in the next place, to examine the war with the Colonies by the principles of the confliction.—I know, that it is common to fay that we are now maintaining the confliction in America. If this means that we are endeavouring to establish our own confliction of government there; it is by no means true; nor, were it true, would it be right. They have chartered governments of their own, with which they are pleased; and which, if any power on earth may change without their content, that power may likewife, if it thinks proper, deliver them over to the Grand Seignior.—Suppose the Colonies of France and Spain had, by compacts, enjoyed for near a century and a half, free governments open to all the world, and under which they had grown and flourished; what should we think of those kingdoms, were they to attempt to deftroy their governments, and to force upon them their own mode of government? Should we not applaud any zeal they discovered in repelling such an injury?—But the truth is, in the present instance, that we are not maintaining but violating our own constitution in America. The effence of our constitution consists in its independency. There is in this case no difference between superfectly the same with ours, the attempt to superfect them to ours would be an attempt to ruin them. A free government loses its nature from the moment it becomes liable to be commanded or altered by any superior power.

(a) See page 12. governments

But I intended here principally to make the following obfervation.

の時間の時間の時間になった。

The fundamental principle of our government is, " The right of a people to "give and grant their own money."---It is of no confequence, in this cafe, whether we enjoy this right in a proper manner or not. Most certainly we do not. It is, however, the principle on which our government, as a free government, is founded. The Jpirit of the conflitution gives it us : and, however imperf. Etly enjoyed, we glory in it as our first and greatest blessing. It was an attempt to encreach upon this right, in a triffing inflance, that produced the civil war in the reign of Charles the First. Ought not our brethren in America to enjoy this right as well as ourfelves? Do the principles of the constitution give it us, but deny it to them? Or can we, with any decency, pretend that when we give to the king their money, we give him our own? (a) ---- What difference does it make, that in the time of Charles the First the attempt to take away this right was made by one man: but that, in the case of America, it is . made by a body of men? In a word. This is a war undertaken not only against the principles of our own conflictution; but on purpose to destroy other similar constitutions in America; and to substitute in their room a military force. See page 12.----It is, therefore, a gross and flagrant violation of the constitution.

SECT. III. Of the Policy of the War with America.

I N writing the present Section, I have entered upon a subject of the last importance, on which much has been said by other writers with great force, and in the ablest manner (b). But I am not willing to omit any topic which I think of great consequence, merely because it has already been discussed : And, with respect to this in particular, it will, I believe, be found that some of the observations on which I shall infist, have not been sufficiently attended to.

The object of this war has been often enough declared to be "maintaining the "fupremacy of this country over the colonies." I have already enquired how far reation and juffice, the principles of Liberty, and the rights of humanity, entitle us to this fupremacy. Setting afide, therefore, now all confiderations of this kind, I would observe, that this fupremacy is to be maintained, either merely for its own fake, or for the sake of some public interest connected with it

(a) The author of Taxation no Tyranny will undoubtedly affert this without hefitation; for in page 69 he compares our prefent fitution with respect to the Colonies to that of the antient Scyribians, who, upon returning from a war found themselves shut out of their own Houses by their StAVFS.

(b) See particularly, a Speech intended to have been spoken on the bill for altering the Charter of the Colony of Massachuset's Bay; the Confiderations on the Measures carrying on with respect to the British Colonies; the Two Appeals to the Justice and Interests of the People; and the further Examination (just published) of our present American Measures, by the Author of the Confiderations, sec.

and

[22]

extension of dominion; and its only motive is the lust of power. All go. vernment, even within a state, becomes tyrannical, as far as it is a needless and wanton exercise of power; or is carried farther than is absolutely necessary to preferve the peace and to secure the safety of the state. This is what an excellent writer calls GOVERNING TOO MUCH; and its effect must always be, weakening government by readering it contemptible and odious. --- Nothing can be of more importance, in governing distant provinces and adjusting the clashing interests of different societies, than attention to this remark. In these circumstances it is particularly necessary to make a sparing use of power, in order to preserve power.----Happy would it have been for Great Britain, had this been remembered by those who have lately conducted its affairs. But our policy has been of another kind. At the period when our authority fhould have been most concealed, it has been brought most in view; and, by a progression of violent measures, every one of which has increased distress, we have given the world reason to conclude, that we are acquainted with no other method of governing than by force.-What a shocking mistake?-If our object is power, we should have known better how to use it; and our rulers should have confidered, that freemen will always revolt at the fight of a naked fword; and that the complicated affairs of a great kingdom, holding in subordination to it a multitude of diftant communities, all jealous of their rights, and warmed with spirits as high as our own, require not only the most skilful, but the most cautious and tender management. The confequences of a different management we are now feeling. We fee ourfelves driven among rocks, and in danger of being loft.

There are the following reasons which seem to make it too probable, that the present contest with America is a contest for power only (a), abstracted from all the advantages connected with it.

is a love of power inherent in human nature; and it cannot be uncharitable to fuppole that the nation in general, and the cabinet in particular, are too likely to be influenced by it. What can be more flattering than to look across the Atlantic, and to see in the boundless continent of America, increasing MILLIONS whom we have a right to order as we please, who hold their property at our disposal, and who have no other law than our will? With what complacency have we been used to talk of them as our subjects?-----Is it not the interruption they now give to this pleafure? Is it not the opposition they make to our pride; and not any injury they have done us, that is the secret foring of our prefent animolity against them ?----I wish all in this kingdom would examine themselves carefully on this point. Perhaps, they might find, that they have not known what ipirit they are of. -Perhaps, they would become fenfible, that it was a spirit of domination, more than a regard to the true interest of this country, that lately led fo many of them, with fuch favage folly, to addrefs the throne for the flaughter of their brethren in America, if they will not fubmit to them; and to make offers of their lives and fortunes for that purpole. — Indeed, I am perfuaded, that, were pride and the luft of dominion exterminated from every heart among us, and the humility of Christians infused in their room, this quarrel would be foon ended.

zdly. Another reason for believing that this is a contest for power only is, that our ministers have frequently declared, that their object is not to draw a revenue from America; and that many of those who are warmest for continuing it, represent the American trade as of no great consequence.

(a) I have heard it faid by a perfon in one of the first departments of the state, that the present contest is for DOMINION on the side of the Colonies, as well as on ours: And so it is, indeed ; but with this effential difference. We are struggling for dominion over OTNERS. They are struggling for SELF-dominion: The noblest of all blessings.

But

[23]

But what deferves particular confideration here is, that this is a contell from which no advantages can poffibly be derived.——Not a revenue : For the provinces of America, when defolated, will afford no revenue ; or if they fhould, the expence of fubduing them and keeping them in fubjection will much exceed that revenue. —— Not any of the advantages of trade: For it is a folly, next to infanity, to think trade can be promoted by impoverifhing our cuftomers, and fixing in their minds an everlafting abhorrence of us.—It remains, therefore, that this war can have no other object than the extension of power.—Miferable reflection ! —— To fheath our swords in the bowels of our brethren, and spread misery and ruin among a happy people, for no other end than to oblige them to acknowledge our supremacy. How horrid !—This is the curfed ambition that led a Carfar and an Alexander, and many other mad conquerors, to attack peaceful communities, and to lay wafte the earth.

But a worfe principle than even this, influences fome among us. Pride and the love of dominion are principles hateful enough; but blind referentment and the defire of revenge are infernal principles : And these, I am afraid, have no small share at present in guiding our public conduct. ------ One cannot help indeed being aftonished at the virulence, with which some speak on the present occasion against the Colonies.——For, what have they done?—Have they crossed the ocean and invaded us? Have they attempted to take from us the fruits of our labour, and to overturn that form of government which we hold fo facred ?----This cannot be pretended.—On the contrary. This is what we have done to them.---We have transported ourselves to their peaceful retreats, and employed our fleets and armies to stop up their ports, to destroy their commerce, to seize their effects, and to burn their towns. Would we but let them alone, and fuffer them to enjoy in fecurity their property and governments, inflead of diffurbing us, they would thank and bless us. And yet it is WE who imagine ourselves ill-lie quietly at our feet; and they have disappointed us. They have risen in their own defence, and repelled force by force. They deny the plenitude of our power over them; and infift upon being treated as free communities. ------ It is THIS that has provoked us; and kindled our governors into rage. I hope I shall not here be understood to intimate, that all who promote this war are actuated by these principles. Some, I doubt not, are influenced by no other principle, than a regard to what they think the just authority of this country over its colonies, and to the unity and indivisibility of the British Empire. I with fuch could be engaged to enter thoroughly into the enquiry, which has been the subject of the first part of this pamphlet; and to consider, particularly, how different a thing maintaining the authority of government within a state is from maintaining the authority of one people over another, already happy in the enjoyment of a government of their own, I with farther they would confider, that the defire of maintaining authority is warrantable, only as far as it is the means of promoting some end, and doing some good; and that, before we resolve to fpread famine and fire through a country in order to make it acknowledge our authority, we ought to be assured that great advantages will arise not only to contest no advantage to ourselves can arise, has been already shewn, and will prefently be shewn more at large.-That no advantage to the Colonies can arife from it, need not, I hope, be shewn. It has however been asserted, that even sheir good is intended by this war. Many of us are perfuaded, that they will be much happier under our government, than under any government of their own; and that their liberties will be fafer when held for them by us, than when trufted in their own hands.--How kind is it thus to take upon us the trouble of judging for them what is most for their happines? Nothing can be kinder except the resolution we have formed to exterminate them, if they will not submit to our judgment. What

L 24

What strange language have I fometimes heard? By an armed force we are now endeavouring to destroy the laws and governments of America; and yet I have heard it faid, that we are endeavouring to support law and government there. We are infilting upon our right to levy contributions upon them; and to maintain this right, we are bringing upon them all the mileries a people can endure; and yet it is afferted, that we mean nothing but their fecurity and happinels.

But I have wandered a little from the point I intended principally to infift upon in this fection, which is, " the folly, in respect of policy, of the mea-" fures which have brought on this contest; and its pernicious and fatal ten-# dency."

The following observations will, I believe, abundantly prove this.

1A. There are paints which are likely always to fuffer by discussion. Of this kind are most points of authority and prerogative; and the best policy is to avoid, as much as possible, giving any occasion for calling them into question.

The Colonies were at the beginning of this reign in the habit of acknowledging our authority, and of allowing us as much power over them as our interest required; and more, in some instances, than we could reasonably claim. This habit they would have retained : and had we, instead of imposing new burdens upon them, and increasing their restraints, studied to promote their commerce, and to grant them new indulgences, they would have been always growing more attached to us. Luxury, and, together with it, their dependence upon us, and our influence (a) in their assemblies, would have increased, till in time perhaps they would have become as corrupt as ourfelves; and we might have fucceed d to our willes in establishing our authority over them.---But, happily for them, we have chosen a different course. By exertions of authority which have alarmed them, they have been put upon examining into the grounds of all our claims, and forced to give up their luxuries, and to feek all their refources within themselves: And the issue is likely to prove the loss of all our authority over them, and of all the advantages connected with it. So little do men in power fometimes know how to preferve power; and fo remarkably does the defire of extending dominion fometimes deftroy it.----Mankind are naturally disposed to continue in subjection to that mode of government, be it what it will, under which they have been born and educated. Nothing roufes them into refiftance but gross abuses, or some particular oppressions out of the road to which they have been used. And he who will examine the history of the world will find, there has generally been more reason for complaining that they have been too patient, than that they have been turbulent and rebellious.

Our governors, ever fince I can remember, have been jealous that the Colonies, some time or other, would throw off their dependence. This jealous was not founded on any of their acts or declarations. They have always, while at peace with us, difclaimed any fuch defign; and they have continued to difclaim it fince they have been at war with us. I have reason, indeed, to believe, that independency is, even at this moment, generally dreaded among them as a calamity to which they are in danger of being driven, in order to avoid a greater.---The jealoufy I have mentioned, was, however, natural; and betrayed a fecret opinion, that the subjection in which they were held was more than we could expect them always to endure. In fuch circumstances, all possible care should have been taken to give them no reafon for difcontent; and to preferve them in subjection, by keeping in that line of conduct to which cuttom had reconciled them, or at least never deviating from it, except with great caution; and parficularly, by avoiding all direct attacks on their property and legislations. Had we done this, the different interests of so many states scattered over a vast continent, joined to our own prudence and moderation, would have enabled us to maintain

(a) This has been our policy with respect to the people of Ireland 3 and the consequence is, that wy new see their parliament as obedient as we can with.

[25]

maintain them in dependence for ages to come.—But inftead of this, how have we acted ?—It is in truth too evident, that our whole conduct, inftead of being directed by that found policy and forefight which in fuch circumftances were abfolutely neceffary, has been nothing (to fay the beft of it) but a feries of the blindest rigour followed by retractation; a violence followed by conceffion; of miltake, weakness, and inconfiftency.—A recital of a few facts, within every body's recollection. will fully prove this.

のないというないないである。

In the 6th of Geerge the Second, an act was passed for imposing certain duties on all foreign spirits, melasses and fugars imported into the plantations. In this act, the duties impefed are faid to be GIVEN and GRANTED by the Parliament to the King; and this is the first American act in which these words have been used. But nerwith flanding this, as the act had the appearance of being only a regulation of trade, the colonies submitted to it; and a small direct revenue was drawn 1. it from them. ----In the 4th of the present reign, many alterations were made Let is act, with the declared purpose of making provision for raising a revenue ir metica. This alarmed the Colonies; and produced discontents and remonnrances, which might have convinced our rulers this was tender ground, on which it became them to tread very gently.---There is, however, no reason to coupt but in time they would have funk into a quiet submission to this revenue act. as being at world only the exercise of a power which then they seem not to have thought much of contelling; I mean, the power of taxing them EXTER-NALLY.—But before they had time to cool, a worfe provocation was given them: and the STAMP-ACT was passed. This being an attempt to tax them INTERNALLY; and a direct attack on their property, by a power which would not fuffer itself to be questioned; which eased itself by loading them; and to which it was impossible to fix any bounds; they were thrown at once, from one end of the continent to the other, into refistance and rage. — Government, dreading the confequences, gave way; and the Parliament (upon a change of ministry) repealed the Stamp-AS, without requiring from them any recognition of its authority, or doing any more to preferve its dignity, than afferting, by the declaratory law, that it was possessed of full power and authority to make laws to bind them in all cafes whatever. ---- Upon this, peace was reftored; and, had no farther attempts of the fame kind been made, they would undoubtedly have suffered us (as the people of Ireland have done) to enjoy quietly our declaratory law. They would have recovered their former habits of fubjection; and our connection with them might have continued an increasing source of our wealth and glory. ——But the fpirit of defpotifm and avarice, always blind and restless, soon broke forth again. The scheme for drawing a revenue from America, by parliamentary taxation, was refumed; and in a little more than a year after the repeal of the Stamp Act, when all was peace, a third act was passed, imposing duties payable in America on tea, paper, glass, painters colours, &c. ---- This, as might have been expected, revived all the former heats; and the Empire was a fecond time threatened with the most dangerous commotions.-----Government receded again; and the Parliament (under another change of miniftry) repealed all the obnoxious duties, EXCEPT that upon tea. This exception was made in order to maintain a shew of dignity. But it was, in reality, facrificing fafety to pride; and leaving a splinter in the wound to produce a gangrene.---For fome time, however, this relaxation answered its intended purposes. Our commercial intercourse with the Colonies was again recovered; and they avoided nothing but that tea which we had excepted in our repeal. In this flate would things have remained, and even tea would perhaps in time have been gradually admitted, had not the evil genius of Britain stepped forth once more to embroil the Empire. The East India company having fallen under difficulties, partly in confeguence of the loss of the American market for tea, a scheme was formed for affifting them by an attempt to recover that market. With this view an act was pailed passed to enable, them to export their tea to America free of all duties here, and fubject only to 3d. per pound duty, payable in America. By this expedient they were enabled to offer it at a low price; and it was expected the consequence would prove that the Colonies would be tempted by it; a precedent gained for taxing them, and at the fame time the company relieved. Ships were, therefore, fitted out; and large cargoes sent. The snare was too gross to escape the notice of the Colonies. They faw it, and fpurned at it. They refused to admit the tea; and at Boston fome perfons in difguise buried it in the sea, ------ Had our governors in this case satisfied themselves with requiring a compensation from the province for the damage done, there is no doubt but it would have been granted. Or had they proceeded no farther in the infliction of punishment, than stopping up the port and destroying the trade of Boston, till compensation was made, the province might possibly have submitted, and a sufficient saving would have been gained for the honour of the nation. But having hitherto proceeded without wildom, they observed now no bounds in their resentment. To the Boston port bill was added a bill which destroyed the chartered government of the province; a bill which withdrew from the jurifdiction of the province, perfons who in particular cases should commit murder; and the Quebec bill. At the fame time a strong body of troops was stationed at Boston to enforce obedience to these bills.

[26]

All who knew any thing of the temper of the Colonies faw that the effect of all this fudden accumulation of vergeance, would probably be not intimidating but exafperating them, and driving them into a general revolt. But our ministers had different apprehensions. They believed that the malecontents in the Colony of Maffachufett's were a small party, headed by a few factious men; that the majority of the people would take the fide of government, as soon as they faw a force among them capable of supporting them; that, at worst, the Colonies in general would never make a common cause with this province; and that, the issue would prove, in a few months, order, tranquillity, and submission. —Every one of these apprehensions was falsified by the events that followed.

When the bills I have mentioned came to be carried into execution, the whole Province was thrown into confusion. Their courts of justice were shut up, and all government was dissolved. The commander in chief found it necessary to fortify himself in BOSTON; and the other Colonies immediately resolved to make a common cause with this Colony.

So strangely misinformed were our ministers, that this was all a surprise upon them. They took fright, therefore; and once more made an effort to retreat; but indeed the most ungracious one that can well be imagined. A proposal was fent to the Colonies, called Conciliatory; and the substance of which was, that if any of them would raife fuch fums as should be demanded of them by taxing themselves, the Parliament would forbear to tax them. ---- It will be scarcely believed, hereafter, that fuch a proposal could be thought conciliatory. It was only telling them; " If you will tax yourfelves BY OUR ORDER, we will fave "ourfelves the trouble of taxing you." They received the proposal as an infult; and rejected it with difdain. At the time this concession was transmitted to America, open hostilities were not begun. In the fword our ministers thought they had still a resource which would immediately settle all disputes. They confidered the people of New-England as nothing but a mob, who would be foon routed and forced into obedience. It was even believed, that a few thousands of our army might march through all America, and make all quiet wherever they went. Under this conviction our ministers did not dread urging the Province of Massachusett's Bay into rebellion, by ordering the army to seize their stores, and to take up some of their leading men. The attempt was made. The people fled immediately to arms, and repelled pelled the attack.——A confiderable part of the flower of the British army has been destroyed.——Some of our best Generals, and the bravest of our troops, are now difgracefully and miserably imprisoned at Boston.——A horrid civil war is commenced ;——And the Empire is distracted and convulsed.

[27]

Can it be possible to think with patience of the policy that has brought us into these circumstances? Did ever Heaven punish the vices of a people more severely by darkening their counsels? How great would be our happiness could we now recal former times, and return to the policy of the last reigns?—But those times are gone.—I will, however, beg leave for a few moments to look back to them; and to compare the ground we have left with that on which we find ourselves. This mult be done with deep regret; but it forms a necessary part of my prefent delign.

In those times our Colonies, foregoing every advantage which they might derive from trading with foreign nations, confented to fend only to us whatever it was for our intendit to receive from them; and to receive only from us whatever it was for our interest to fend to them. They gave up the power of making furptuary laws, and expected themselves to all the evils of an increasing and wait is luxury, becaufe we were benefited by vending among them the matethat stat. The rou with which Providence had bleffed their country, they were required by laws, in which they acquiefced, to transport hither, that our people may he maintained by working it for them into nails, ploughs, axes, &c. And, in teveral instances, even one Colony was not allowed to supply any neighbouris g Colonies with commodities, which could be conveyed to them from hence.But they yilded much farther. They confented that we should have the appointment or one blanch of their legiflature. By recognizing as their King, a king refident among us and under our influence, they gave us a negative on all their laws. By allowing an appeal to us in their civil difputes, they gave us likewife the ultimate determination of all civil caufes among them. ----In fhort, They allowed us every power we could defire, except that of taxing them, and interfering in their internal legiflations: And they had admitted precedents which, even in these instances, gave us no inconfiderable authority over them. By purchafing our goods they paid our taxes; and by allowing us to regulate their trade in any manner we thought most for our advantage, they enriched our merchants, and helped us to bear our growing burdens. They fought our battles with us. They gloried in their relation to us. All their gains centered among us; and they always spoke of this country and looked to it as their home. Not contented with a degree of power, sufficient to fatisfy any reasonable ambition, we have attempted to extend it. ----- Not contented with drawing from them a large revenue indirectly, we have endeavoured to procure one directly by an authoritative feizure; and, in order to gain a pepper-corn in this way, have chosen to hazard millions, acquired by the peaceable intercourse of trade.-----Vile policy ! What a fcourge is government to conducted ?-----Had we never deferted our old ground : Had we nourished and favoured America, with a view to commerce, instead of considering it as a country to be governed : Had we, like a liberal and wife people, rejoiced to see a multitude of free states branched forth from ourselves, all enjoying independent legislatures similar to our own: Had we aimed at binding them to us only by the tyes of affection and interest; and contented ourselves with a moderate power rendered durable by being lenient and friendly, an umpire in their differences, an aid to them in improving their own free governments, and their common bulwark against the assaults of foreign enemies : Had this, I fay, been our policy and temper ; there is nothing fo great or happy that we might not have expected. With their increase our strength would have increased. A growing surplus in the revenue might have been gained, which, invariably applied to the gradual discharge of the national debt, would have have delivered us from the ruin with which it threatens us. The Liberty of America might have preferved our Liberty; and, under the direction of a patriot king or wile minister, proved the means of refloring to us our almost loss confitution. Perhaps, in time, we might also have been brought to see the necessfity of carefully watching and reflicting our paper-credit: And thus we might have regained fafety; and, in union with our Colonies, have been more than a match for every enemy, and rifen to a fituation of honour and dignity never before known amongst mankind.—But I am forgetting myself—Our Colonies are likely to be loss for every. Their love is turned into hatred; and their respect for our government into refertment and abhorrence.—We shall see more distinctly what a calamity this is, and the observations I have now made will be confirmed, by attending to the following facts.

[28]

Our American Colonies, particularly the Northern ones, have been for fome time in the very happielt flate of fociety; or, in that middle flate of civilization, between its first rude and its last refined and corrupt flate. Old countries confift, generally, of three classes of people; a GENTRY; a YEOMANRY; and a PEASANTRY. The Colonies confist only of a body of YEOMANRY (a) supported by agriculture, and all independent, and nearly upon a level; in confequence of which, joined to a boundless extent of country, the means of subfishence are procured without difficulty, and the temptations to wickedness are so inconfiderable, that executions (b) are feldom known among them. From hence arises an encouragement to population so great, that in some of the Colonies they double their own number in fifteen years; in others, in eighteen years; and in all, taken one with another, in twenty-five years.—Such an increase was, I believe, never before known. It demonstrates that they must live at their ease; and be free from those cares, oppressions, and difeases which depopulate and ravage luxurious states.

The exports to all the Colonies in 1744 were 640,1141.—In 1758, they were increased to 1,832,9481, and in 1773, to three millions. (c) And the probability is, that, had it not been for the discontents among the Colonies fince the year 1764, our trade with them would have been this year double to what it was in 1773; and that in a few years more, it would not have been possible for the whole kingdom, though confiding only of manufacturers, to supply the American demand. This trade, it should be confidered, was not only thus an increasing trade; but it was a trade in which we had no rivals; a trade certain, constant, and uninterrupted; and which, by the shipping employed in it, and the naval flores supplied by it, contributed greatly to the support of that navy which is our chief national strength,—Viewed in these lights it was an object unspeakably important. But it will appear still more for if we view it in its connexions and dependencies. It is well known, that our trade with Africa and the West-

(a) Excepting the Negroes in the Southern Colonies, who probably will now either foon become extinct, or have their condition changed into that of Freemen.——It is not the fault of the Colonies that they have among them formany of these unhappy people. They have made laws to prohibit the importation of them; but these laws have always had a negative put upon them here, because of their tendency to hart our Negro trade.

(b) In the County of Suffolk, where Bofton is, there has not been, I am informed, more than one execution there is years.

(c) Mr. Burke (in his excellent and admirable Speech on moving his refolutions for conciliation with the Colonies, P. 9, &c.) has shewn, that our trade to the Colonies, including that to Africa and the West-Indice, was in 1.77 nearly equal to the trade which we carried on with the whole world at the beginning of this Century.

Indies

29

Indies cannot eafily subsist without it. And, upon the whole, it is undeniable, that it has been one of the main springs of our opulence and splendour; and that we have, in a great measure, been indebted to it for our ability to bear a debt so much heavier, than that which, fifty years ago, the wisest men thought would necessfarily fink us.

This ineffimable prize, and all the advantages connected with America, we are now throwing away. Experience alone can shew what calamities must follow. It will indeed be associated by the structure of the str

On this occasion, particular attention should be given to the present sin-GULAR fituation of this kingdom. This is a circumstance of the utmost importance; and as I am afraid it is not much confidered, I will beg leave to give : a diffinct account of it. At the REVOLUTION, the Specie of the kingdom amounted, according to (a) Davenant's account, to eighteen millions and a half.----From the Accession to the year 1772, there were coined at the mint, near 29 millions of gold; and in ten years only of this time, or from January 1759 to January 1769, there were coined eight millions and a half. (b) But it has appeared lately, that the gold specie now left in the kingdom is no more than about twelve millions and a half.—....Not fo much as half a million of Silver Specie has been coined these fixty years; and it cannot be supposed, that the quantity of it now in circulation exceeds two or three millions. The whole specie of the kingdom, therefore, is probably at this time about (c) fourteen or fifteen millions. Of this feveral millions must be hoarded at the Bank.—Our circulating Specie, therefore, appears to be greatly decreafed. But our wealth, or the quantity of money in the kingdom, is greatly increased. This is paper to a vast amount, issued in almost every corner of the kingdom; and, particularly, by the BANK OF ENGLAND. While this paper maintains its credit it answers all the purposes of fpecie, and is in all respects the same with money. Specie represents some real value in goods or commodities. On the contrary; paper represents nothing immediately but specie. It is a promise or obligation, which the emitter brings himself under to pay a given sum in coin; and it owes its currency to the credit of the emitter; or to an opinion that he is able to make good his engagement; and that the fum fpecified may be received upon being demanded.—Paper, therefore, represents coin; and coin represents real value. That is, the one is a fign of wealth. The other is a fign of that fign. -But farther. Coin is an univerfal fign of wealth, and will procure it every where. It will bear any alarm, and ftand any shock.---On the contrary. Paper, owing its currency to opinion, has only a local and imaginary value. It can stand no shock. It is destroyed by the approach of danger; or even the Juspicion of danger. In short. Coin is the basis of our paper-credit; and were it either all deftroyed, or were only the quantity of it reduced beyond a certain limit, the

(a) See Dr. Davenant's works, collected and revifed by Sir Charles Whitworth, Vol. I. Page 363, &c. 443, &c.

(b) See Confiderations on Money, Bullion, &c. Page 2 and 11.

(c) Or nearly the fame that it was in Cromucil's tame. See Br. Davenant's works, Vol. I. Page 365.

30]

paper circulation of the kingdom would fink at once. But, were our paper destroyed, the coin would not only remain, but rife in value, in proportion to the quantity of paper destroyed.

From this account it follows, that as far as, in any circumftances, fpecie is not to be procured in exchange for paper, it reprefents nothing, and is worth nothing.—The fpecie of this kingdom is inconfiderable, compared with the amount of the paper circulating in it. This is generally believed; and, therefore, it is natural to enquire how its currency is fupported.—The anfwer is eafy. It is fupported in the fame manner with all other bubbles. Were all to demand fpecie in exchange for their notes, payment could not be made; but, at the fame that this is known, every one trufts, that no alarm producing fuch a demand will happen, while he holds the paper he is poffeffed of; and that if it fhould happen, he will ftand a chance for being first paid; and this makes him eafy. And it alfo makes all with whom he trafficks eafy.—But let any events happen which threaten danger; and every one will become diffident. A run will take place; and a bankruptcy follow.

This is an account of what has often happened in private credit. And it is also an account of what will (if no change of measures takes place) happen fome time or other in public credit. The description I have given of our papercirculation implies, that nothing can be more delicate or hazardous. It is an immenfe fabrick, with its head in the clouds, that is continually trembling with every adverse blast and every fluctuation of trade; and which, like the baseless fabrick of a vision, may in a moment vanish, and leave no wreck behind. --- I he destruction of a few books at the Bank; an improvement in the art of forgery; the landing of a body of French troops on our coasts; insurrections threatening a revolution in government; or any events that should produce a general panic, however groundlefs, would at once annihilate it. and leave us without any other medium of traffic, than a quantity of specie scarcely equal in amount to the money now drawn from the public by the taxes. It would, therefore, become impossible to pay the taxes. 'The revenue would fail. Near a hundred and forty millions of property would be destroyed. The whole frame of government would fall to pieces; and a state of mature would take place.----What a dreadful situation? It has never had a parallel among mankind; except at one time in France after the establishment there of the Royal Missippi Bank. In 1720 this bank broke (a); and, after involving for fome time the whole kingdom in a golden dream, spread through it in one day, desolation and ruin.----The distress atrending such an event, in this free country, would be greater than it was in France. Happily for that kingdom, they have shot this gulph. Paper-credit has never fince recovered itself there; and their circulating cash confists now all of folid coin, amounting, I am informed, to no less a sum than 1500 millions of Livres; or near 67 millions of pounds sterling. This gives them unspeakable advantages; and, joined to that quick reduction of their debts which is inseparable (%) from their nature, places them on a ground of safety which we have reason to admire and envy.

These are subjects on which I should have chosen to be filent, did I not think it necessary, that this country should be apprized and warned of the danger

(a) See Sir James Steuart's Enquiry into the Principles of political Occonomy, Vol. II. Book 4, Usup. 32.

(b) Their debts confift chiefly of money raifed by annuities on lives, fhort annuities, anticipations of taxes for fhort terms, &c. During the whole laft war they added to their perpetual annuities only 12 millions flerling, according to Sir James Steuart's account; whereas we added to thefe annuities near 60 millions. In confequence therefore of the nature of their debts, as well as of the management they are now using for haftening the reduction of them, they must in a few years, if peace continues, be treed from most of their incumbrances; while we probably (if no event comes foon that will unburthen us at once, shall continue with them all upon us.

which

31]

which threatens it. This danger is created chiefly by the national debt. High taxes are neceffary to fupport a great public debt; and a large fupply of cash is neceffary to fupport high taxes. This cash we owe to our paper; and, in proportion to our paper, must be the productiveness of our taxes.——King William's wars drained the kingdom of its specie. This funk the revenue, and distressed government. In 1694 the BANK was established; and the kingdom was provided with a substitute for specie. The taxes became again productive. The revenue rose; and government was relieved.——Ever fince that period our paper and taxes have been increasing together, and supporting one another; and one reason, undoubtedly, of the late increase in the productiveness of our taxes has been the increase of our paper.

Was there no public debt, there would be no occasion for half the present taxes. Our paper-circulation might be reduced. The balance of trade would turn in our favour. Specie would flow in upon us. The quantity of property destroyed by a failure of paper credit (should it in such circumstances happen) would be 140 millions lefs; and, therefore, the shock attending it would be rolerable. But, in the prefent state of things, whenever any calamity or panic shall produce fuch a failure, the shock attending it will be intolerable.-----May Heaven soon raise up for us some great statesman who shall see these things; and enter into effectual measures, if not now too late, for extricating and preserving us ! Public banks are, undoubtedly, attended with great conveniencies. But they also do great harm; and, if their emissions are not restrained, and conducted with great wildom, they may prove the most pernicious of all institutions; not only, by fubstituting fictitious for real wealth; by increasing luxury; by raising the prices of provisions; by concealing an unfavourable balance of trade; and by rendering a kingdom incapable of bearing any internal tumults or external attacks, without the danger of a dreadful convulsion : but, particularly, by becoming instruments in the hands of ministers of state to increase their influence, to lessen their dependence on the people, and to keep up a delusive shew of public prosperity, when perhaps, ruin may be near. There is, in truth, nothing that a government may not do with fuch a mine at its command as a public Bank, while it can maintain its credit; nor, therefore, is there any thing more likely to be IMPROPERLY and DANGEROUSLY used.-But to return to what may be more applicable to our own state at present.

Among the caules that may produce a failure of paper-credit, there are two which the prefent quarrel with America calls upon us particularly to confider.— The first is, "An unfavourable balance of trade." This, in proportion to the degree in which it takes place, must turn the course of foreign exchange against us; raife the price of bullion; and carry off our specie. The danger to which this would expose us is obvious; and it has been much increased by the new coinage of the gold specie which begun in 1772. Before this coinage, the greatest part of our gold coin being light, but the same in currency as if it had been heavy, always remained in the kingdom. But, being now full weight, whenever a wrong balance of foreign trade alters the course of exchange, and gold in coin becomes of less value than in bullion, there is reason to fear, that it will be melted down in fuch great quantities, and exported so fast, as in a little time to leave none behind; (a) the confequence of which must prove, that the whole fuperstructure

(a) Mr. Lowndes in the diffute between him and Mr. Locke, contended for a reduction of the ftandard of filver. One of his reafons was, that it would render the filver-coin more commenturate to the wants of the nation; and CHICK HAZARDOUS PAPER-CREDIT. Mr. CONDUIT, Sir ISAAC NEWTON'S fucceffor in the mint, has proposed, in direct contradiction to the laws now in being, that all the bullion imported into the kingdom should be carried into the mint to be coined; and only coin allowed to be exported. " The height, he fays, or Paper-credit is the strongest ar-"gument for trying this and every other method that is likely to increase the counge. For whilt " Paper32]

For many years before 1772, the price of gold in bullion had been from 2 to 3 or 4 per cent. higher than in coin. This was a temptation to melt down and export the coin, which could not be refifted. Hence arofe a demand for it on the BANK; and, confequently, the necessity of purchasing bullion at a loss for a new coinage. But the more coin the Bank procured in this way, the lower its price became in comparison with that of bullion, and the faster it vanished; and confequently, the more necessary it became to coin again, and the greater loss fell upon the Bank.----Had things continued much longer in this train, the confequences might have proved very ferious. I am by no means fufficiently informed to be able to affign the caufes which have produced the change that happened in 1772. But, without doubt, the state of things that took place before that year, must be expected to return. The sluctuations of trade, in its best state, render this unavoidable. But the contest with our Colonies has a tendency to bring it on foon; and to increase unspeakably the distress attending it. All know that the balance of trade with them is greatly in our favour; (a) and that this balance is paid partly by direct remittances of bullion; and partly by circuitous remittances through Spain, Portugal, Italy, &c. which diminish the balance against us with these countries. --- During the last year, they have been employed in paying their debts, without adding to them; and their exportations and remittances for that purpose have contributed to render the general balance of trade more favourable to us, and, alfo, (in conjunction with the late operations of the Bank) to keep up our funds. These remittances are now ceased; and a year or two will determine, if this contest goes on, how far we can fustain fuch a loss without fuffering the consequences I have described. The second event, ruinous to our paper circulation, which may arise from our rupture with America, is a deficiency in the revenue. As a failure of our paper would destroy the revenue, so a failure of the revenue, or any confiderable diminution of it, would deftroy our paper. The BANK is the support of our paper; and the support of the BANK is the credit of government. Its principal securities, are a capital of near eleven millions lent to government; and money continually advanced to a vast amount on the Land-tax, Sinking fund, Exchequer Bills, Navy Bills, &c. Should, therefore, deficiencies in the revenue bring government under any difficulties, all these securities would lose their value, and the Bank and Government, and all private and public credit, would fall together. ----Let any one here imagine, what would probably follow, were it but suspected by the public in general, that the taxes were fo fallen, as not to produce enough to pay the interest of the public debts, besides bearing the ordinary expences of the nation; and that, in order to supply the deficiency and to hide the calamity. it had been necessary in any one year to anticipate the taxes, and to borrow of the Bank.——In fuch circumstances 1 can scarcely doubt, but an alarm would ⁶⁶ Paper-credit does in a great measure the business of money at home, Merchants and Bankers are ⁶⁶ not under a necessity, as they were formerly, of coining a quantity of specie for their home trade; ⁶⁶ and as Paper-credit brings money to the Merchants to be exported, the money may go away in-⁶⁶ fensibly, and NOT BE MISSID TILLIT NETTOD LATE: And where Paper-credit is large ⁶⁶ and increasing, if the money be exported and the coinage decrease, THAT CREDIT MAY SINK ⁶⁶ AT ONCE; for want of a proportionable quantity of Specie, which alone can support it in a ⁶⁷ time of diffres.⁷⁶—See Mr. Conduit's Observations on the flate of our Gold and Silver Coins ⁶⁶ in 1730, Page 36 to 46.

(a) According to the accounts of the exports to, and imports from the North-American Colonics, laid before Parliament; the balance in our favour appears to have been, for 11 years before 1774, near a million and a balf annually.

fpread

[33]

fpread of the most dangerous tendency.——The next foreign war, should it prove balf as expensive as the last, will probably occasion such a deficiency; and bring our affairs to that crisis towards which they have been long tending.—— But the war with America has a greater tendency to do this; and the reason is, that it affects our resources more; and is attended more with the danger of internal disturbances.

Some have made the proportion of our trade depending on North America to be near ONE HALF. A moderate computation makes it a THIRD. (a) Let it, however, be supposed to be only a FOURTH. I will venture to fay, this is a proportion of our foreign trade, the loss of which, when it comes to be felt, will be found infupportable.——In the article of Tobacco alone it will cause a deduction from the Customs of at least 300,0001 per ann. (b) including the duties paid on foreign commodities purchased by the exportation of tobacco. Let the whole deduction from the revenue be supposed to be only half a million. This alone is more than the kingdom can at present bear, without having recourse to additional taxes in order to defray the common and necessary expenses of peace. But to this must be added a deduction from the produce of the Excifes, in confequence of the increase of the poor, of the difficulties of our merchants and manufacturers, of less national wealth, and a retrenchment of luxury. There is no possibility of knowing to what these deductions may amount. When the evils producing them begin, they will proceed rapidly; and they may end in a general wreck before we are aware of any danger. In order to give a clearer view of this subject, I will in an Appendix, state particularly the national expenditure and income for eleven years, from 1764 to 1774. From that account it will appear, that the money drawn every year from the public by the taxes, falls but little short of a sum equal to the whole specie of the kingdom; and that, notwithstanding the late increase in the productiveness of the taxes, the whole furplus of the national income has not exceeded 320,000 I. pr ann.(c) This is a furplus fo inconfiderable as to be fearcely fufficient to guard against the deficiencies arifing from the common fluctuations of foreign trade, and of bome confomption. It is NOTHING when confidered as the only fund we have for paying off a debt of near 140 millions.——Had we continued in a flate of profound peace, it could not have admitted of any diminution. What then must follow, when one of the most profitable branches of our trade is deflroyed; when a THIRD of the Empire is loft; when an addition of many millions is made to the public debt; and when, at the fame time, perhaps, fome millions are taken away from the revenue 2 - I fludder at this profpect. A KINGDOM, ON AN EDGE SO PERILOUS, SHOULD THINK OF NOTHING BUT A RETREAT.

SECT. IV. Of the Honour of the Nation as affected by the War with America.

ONE of the pleas for continuing the contest with America, is "That our "honour is engaged; and that we cannot now recede without the most "humiliating concessions."

- With respect to this, it is proper to observe, that a diffinction should be made between the nation, and its rulers. It is melancholy that there should be ever

(a) See the fubstance of the evidence on the petition prefented by the West-India Planters and Merchants to the House of Commons, as it was introduced at the BAR, and summed up by Mr. GLOVER. (b) The annual average of the payments into the Exchequer, on account of the duties on tobacco, was for five years. from 1770 to 1774, 219,1171. exclusive of the payments from Scotland. Near one half of the tobacco trade is carried on from Scotland; and above four fifths of the tobacco imported is after wards exported to France, Germany and other countries. From France alone it brings annually into the Kingdom, I am informed, about 150,0001. in money.

In 1775, being, alus! the parting year, the duties on tobacco in ENGLAND brought into the Exchequer no lefs a fum than 298,2021.

(.) See the Append x.

L 34]

any reason for making such a distinction. A government is, or ought to be, nothing but an inflitution for collecting and for carrying into execution the will of the people. But so far is this from being in general the fact, that the meafures of government, and the sense of the people, are sometimes in direct opposition to one another; nor does it often happen that any certain conclusion can be drawn from the one to the other. — I will not pretend to determine, whether, in the present instance, the dishonour attending a retreat would belong to the nation at large, or only to the perfons in power who guide its affairs. Let it be granted, though probably far from true, that the majority of the kingdom favour the prefent meafures. No good argument could be drawn from hence against receding. The difgrace to which a kingdom muft fubmit by making conceffions, is nothing to that of being the aggressors in an unrighteous quarrel; and dignity, in fuch circumstances, confists in retracting freely, speedily, and magnanimously. ----For, (to adopt, on this occasion, words which I have heard applied to this very purpose, in a great affembly, by a peer to whom this kingdom has often looked as its deliverer, and whose ill state of health at this awful moment of public danger every friend to Britain must deplore) to adopt, I say, the words of this great man - " Rectitude is dignity. Oppression only is MEANNESS; " AND JUSTICE, HONOUR." I will add, that P v DENCE, no less than true Honour, requires us to retract. For the time may come when, if it is not done voluntarily, we may be obliged to do it'; and find ourselves under a necessity of granting that to our distress, which we now deny to equity and humanity, and the prayers of America. The peffibility of this appears plainly from the preceding pages; and fhould it happen, it will bring upon us difgrace indeed, difgrace greater than the worft rancour can wish to see accumulated on a kingdom already too much dishonoured.----Let the reader think here what we are doing. — A nation, once the protector of Liberty in diftant countries, and the scourge of tyranny, changed into an enemy to Liberty, and engaged in endeavouring to reduce to fervitude its own brethren. ----A great and enlightened nation, not content with a controuling power over millions of people which gave it every reasonable advantage, infisting upon such a fupremacy over them as would leave them nothing they could call their own, and carrying defolation and death among them for disputing it. ——What can be more ignominious? ——How have we felt for the brave Corficans, in their ftruggle with the Genoese, and afterwards with the French government? Did GENOA or FRANCE want more than an abfolute command over their property and legiflations; or the power of binding them in all cafes what foever? — The Corficans had been fubject to the Genoele; but, finding it difficult to keep them in fubjection, they CEDED them to the French.——All fuch ceffions of one people by another are difgraceful to human nature. But if our claims are just, may not we also, if we please, cepe the Colonies to France?----There is, in truth, no other difference between these two cases than that the Corficans were not descended from the pople who governed them, but that the Americans are. There are some who seem to be sensible, that the authority of one country over another, cannot be diffinguished from the fervitude of one country to another; and that unless different communities, as well as different parts of the fame community, are united by an equal reprefentation, all fuch authority is inconfiftent with the principles of Civil Liberty. But they except the cafe of the Colonies and Great Britain; because the Colonies are communities which have branched forth from, and which, therefore, as they think, belong to Britain. Had the Colonies been communities of foreigners, over whom we wanted to acquire dominion, or even to extend a dominion before acquired, they are ready to admit that their refiftance would have been just.-In my opinion, this is the fame with faying, that the Colonies ought to be worfe off than the rest of mankind, because they are our own Bretbren. Again.

[35]

「日本」と言語の

Again. The United Provinces of Holland were once subject to the Spanish monarchy; but, provoked by the violation of their charters; by levies of money, without their confent; by the introduction of Spanish troops among them; by innovations in their antient modes of government; and the rejection of their petitions, they were driven to that refiftance which we and all the world have ever fince admired; and which has given birth to one of the greatest and happiest Republics that ever existed. ———— Let any one read alfo, the history of the war which the Athenians, from a thirst of Empire, made on the Syraculans in Sicily, a people derived from the fame origin with them; and let him, if he can, avoid rejoicing in the defeat of the Athenrans.

Let him, likewife, read the account of the focial war among the Romans. The allied states of Italy had fought the battles of Rome, and contributed by their valour and treasure to its conquests and grandeur. They claimed, therefore, the rights of Roman citizens, and a share with them in legislation, The Romans, disdaining to make those their fellow-citizens, whom they had always looked upon as their Jubjects, would not comply; and a war followed, the most horrible in the annals of mankind, which ended in the ruin of the Roman Republic. The feelings of every Briton in this cafe must force him to approve the conduct of the Allies, and to condemn the proud and ungrateful Romans. But not only is the prefent contest with America thus difgraceful to us, because inconfiftent with our own feelings in fimilar cafes; but alfo because condemned by our own practice in former times. The Colonies are perfuaded that they are fighting for Liberty. We fee them facrificing to this perfusion every private advantage. If mistaken, and though guilty of irregularities, they should be pardoned by a people whose ancestors have given them so many examples of similar conduct. ENGLAND should venerate the attachment of Liberty amidst all its exceffes; and, instead of indignation or scorn, it would be most becoming them, in the present instance, to declare their applause, and to say to the Colonies-----"We excuse your mistakes. We admire your spirit. It is the spirit that has " more than once faved ourselves. We aspire to no dominion over you. We " understand the rights of men too well to think of taking from you the inestim-" able privilege of governing yourselves; and, instead of employing our power " for any fuch purpose, we offer it to you as a friendly and guardian power, to " be a mediator in your quarrels; a protection against your enemies; and an " aid to you in establishing a plan of Liberty that shall make you great and " happy. In return, we alk nothing but your gratitude and your commerce." This would be a language worthy of a brave and enlightened nation. But alas! it often happens in the Political World as it does in Religion, that the people who cry out most vehemently for Liberty to themselves are the most unwilling to grant it to others. One of the most violent enemies of the Colonies has pronounced them "all " Mr. Locke's disciples,"---Glorious title ! ---- How shameful is it to make war against them for that reason? But farther. This war is difgraceful on account of the perfuasion which led to it, and under which it has been undertaken. The general cry was last winter, that the people of NEW ENGLAND were a body of cowards, who would at once be reduced to fubmifion by a hostile look from our troops. In this light were they held up to public derifion in both Houfes of Parliament; and it was this perfuafion that, probably, induced a Nobleman of the first weight in the state to recommend, at the passing of the Boston Port Bill, coercive measures; hinting at the fame time, that the appearance of hostilities would be fufficient, and that all would be foon over, SINE CLADE. ----- Indeed no one can doubt, but that had it been believed fome time ago, that the people of America were brave, more care would have been taken not to provoke them. Again. The manner in which this war has been hitherto conducted, renders it still more disgraceful.-----English valour being thought insufficient to subdue due the Colonies, the laws and religion of France were established in Canada, on purpose to obtain the power of bringing upon them from thence an army of French Papists. The wild Indians and their own Slaves have been instigated to attack them; and attempts have been made to gain the affistance of a large body of Russians.——With like views, German troops have been hired; and the defence of our Forts and Garrisons trusted in their hands.

[36]

SECT.V. Of the Probability of Succeeding in the War with America.

E T us next confider how far there is a possibility of fucceeding in the prefent war.

Our own people, being unwilling to enlift, and the attempts to procure armies of Ruffians, Indians, and Canadians having mifcarried; the utmost force we can employ, including foreigners, does not exceed, if I am rightly informed, 30,000 effective men. Let it, however, be called 40,000. This is the force that is to conquer half a million at leaft (a) of determined men fighting on their own ground, within fight of their houses and families, and for that facred bleffing of Liberty, without which man is a beaft, and government a curfe. All history proves, that in fuch a fituation, a handful is a match for millions.

In the Netherlands, a few states thus circumstanced, withstood, for thirty years, the whole force of the Spanish monarchy, when at its zenish; and at last humbled its pride, and emancipated themselves from its tyranny. ---- The citizens of SYRACUSE alfo, thus circumstanced, withstood the whole power of the Athenians, and almost ruined them. --- The same happened in the contest between the house of Austria, and the cantons (b) of Savitzerland. ----- There is in this cafe an infinite difference between attacking and being attacked; between fighting to deftroy, and fighting to preferere, or acquire Liberty.----Were we, therefore, capable of employing a land force against America equal to its own, there would be little probability of success. But to think of conquering that whole continent with 30,000 or 40,000 men to be transported across the Atlantic, and fed from hence, and incapable of being recruited after any defeat. ——This is indeed a folly fo great, that language does not afford a name for it. With respect to our naval force, could it sail at land as it does at sea, much might be done with it; but as that is impossible, little or nothing can be done with it, which will not hurt our selves more than the Colonists. ----- Such of their maritime towns as they cannot guard against our fleets, and have not been already destroyed, they are determined either to give up to our resentment, or (c) destroy themselves: The consequence of which will be, that these towns will be rebuilt in fafer fituations; and that we shall lose fome of the principal pledges by which we have hitherto held them in fubjection.----As to their trade; having all the necessaries and the chief conveniencies of life within themselves, they have no dependence upon it; and the lofs of it will do them unspeakable good, by pre-

(a) A quarter of the inhabitants of every country are fighting men.——If, therefore, the Colonies confift only of two millions of inhabitants, the number of fighting men in them will be half a million.

(b) See the Appendix to Dr. Zubly's Sermon, preached at the opening of the Provincial Congress of Georgia.

(c) NEW YORK has been long deferted by the greatest part of the inhabitants; and they are determined to burn it themselves, rather than suffer us to burn it. ferving ferving them from the evils of luxury and the temptations of wealth; and keeping them in that state of virtuous simplicity which is the greatest happines. I know that I am now speaking the sense of some of the wifest men in America. It has been long their with that Britain would thut up all their ports. They will rejoice, particularly, in the last restraining act. It might have happened, that the people would have grown weary of their agreements not to export or import. But this act will oblige them to keep these agreements; and confirm their unanimity and zeal. It will also furnish them with a reason for confiscating the estates of all the friends of our government among them, and for employing their failors, who would have been otherwise idle, in making reprisals on British property. Their ships, before useless, and consisting of many hundreds, will be turned into ships of war; and all that attention, which they have hitherto confined to trade, will be employed in fitting out a naval force for their own defence; and thus the way will be prepared for their becoming, much fooner than they would otherwise have been, a great maritime power. This act of parliament, therefore, crowns the folly of all our late measures. — None who know me, can believe me to be disposed to superstition. Perhaps, however, I am not in the prefent instance, free from this weakness. ——I fancy I see in these measures something that cannot be accounted for merely by human ignorance. I am inclined to think, that the hand of Providence is in them working to bring about fome great ends.-But this leads me to one confideration more, which I cannot help offering to the publick, and which appears to me in the highest degree important. In this hour of tremendous danger, it would become us to turn our thoughts to Heaven. This is what our brethren in the Colonies are doing. From one end of North America to the other, they are FASTING and PRAYING. But what are we doing?-Shocking thought! we are ridiculing them as Fanatics, and fcoffing at religion. ——We are running wild after pleafure, and forgetting every thing ferious and decent at Masquerades --- We are gambling in gaming houses; trafficking for Boroughs; perjuring ourfelves at Elections; and felling ourfelves for places.-Which fide then is Providence likely to favour? In America we see a number of rising states in the vigour of youth, inspired by the nobleft of all paffions, the paffion for being free; and animated by piety. -----Here we see an old state, great indeed, but inflated and irreligious; enervated by luxury; encumbered with debts; and hanging by a thread. —— Can any one look without pain to the iffue? May we not expect calamities that shall secover to reflection (perhaps to devotion) our Libertines and Atheifts? Is our cause such as gives us reason to ask God to bless it?-----Can we in the face of Heaven declare, " that we are not the aggressors in this war; and that " we mean by it, not to acquire or even preserve dominion for its own fake; " not conquest, or Empire, or the gratification of resentment; but solely to de-" liver ourselves from oppression; to gain reparation for injury; and to defend "ourfelves against men who would plunder or kill us?"-Remember, reader, whoever thou art, that there are no other just causes of war; and that blood fpilled, with any other views, must fome time or other be accounted for.-----But not to expose myself by faying more in this way, I will now beg leave to recapitulate fome of the arguments I have used; and to deliver the feelings of my heart in a brief, but earnest addrefs to my countrymen.

[37]

I am hearing it continually urged—" Are they not our subjects."—The plain answer is, they are not your subjects. The people of America are no more the subjects of the people of Britain, than the people of Yorksbire are the subjects of the people of Middlese. They are your fellow-subjects. "But we are taxed; and why should not they be taxed?"—You are taxed by yourselves. They infift on the same privilege.—They are taxed to support their own governments; and they help also to pay your taxes by pur-C 3 chafing your manufactures, and giving you a monopoly of their trade. Muft they maintain two governments? Must they submit to be triple taxed?-Has your moderation in taxing yourfelves been such as encourages them to trust you with the power of taxing them ?

[38]

" But they will not obey the Parliament and the Laws." ----- Say rather, they will not obey your Parliament and your laws. Their reason is: They have no voice in your Parliament. They have no share in making (a) your laws.-----" Neither have most of us."----- Then you fo far want Liberty; and your language is, "We are not free; Why will they be free?"-But many of you have a voice in parliament; None of them have. All your freehold land is represented : But not a foot of their land is represented. At worst, therefore, you can be only enflaved partially.—They would be enflaved totally.—They are governed by parliaments chosen by themselves, and by legislatures similar to yours. Why will you diffurb them in the enjoyment of a bleffing fo invaluable? Is it reasonable to insist, that your discretion alone shall be their law; that they shall have no conflitutions of government, except such as you shall be pleased to give them; and no property except fuch as your parliament shall be pleased to leave them?—What is your parliament?—Powerful indeed and respectable: But is there not a growing intercourse between it and the court? Does it awe ministers of state as it once did ?-Instead of contending for a controuling power over the governments of America, should you not think more of watching and reforming your own?-Suppose the worst. Suppose, in opposition to all their own declarations, that the Colonists are now aiming at independence,--- " If " they can fubfift without you;" is it to be wondered at? Did there ever exift a community, or even an individual, that would not do the fame ?- "If they cannot " fubfift without you;" let them alone. They will foon come back. ----- "If " you cannot fubfift without them;" reclaim them by (b) kindnefs; engage them by moderation and equity. It is madnefs to refolve to butcher them, This will make them deteft and avoid you for ever. Free men are not to be governed by force; or dragooned into compliance. If capable of bearing to be fo treated, it is a difgrace to be connected with them. " If they can subsist without you; and also you without them," the attempt to subjugate them by confiscating their effects, burning their towns, and ravaging their territories, is a wanton exertion of cruel ambition, which, however common it has been among mankind, deferves to be called by harder names than I chufe to apply to it.—Suppose such an attempt was to be succeeded: Would it not be a fatal preparation for subduing yourselves? Would not the disposal of American places, and the distribution of an American revenue, render that influence of the crown irresistible, which has already stabbed your liberties?

(a) " I have no other notion of flavery, but being bound by a law to which I do not confent." See the cafe of Ireland's being bound by acts of Parliament in England, flated by William Molyneux, Eq; Dublin. —. In arguing against the authority of Communities, and all people not incorporated, over one another; I have confined my views to taxation and internal legislation. Mr. Molyneux carried his views much farther; and denied the right of England to make any laws even to regulate the trade of Ireland. He was the intimate friend of Mr. Locke; and writ his book in 1698, foon after the publication of Mr. Locke's Treatife on Government.

What I have faid, in Part 1st. Sect. 3d. of fubjecting a number of states to a general council representing them all, I suppose every one must consider as entirely theoretical; and not a proposal of any thing I will, may take place under the British Empire.

(b) Some perfons, convinced of the folly as well as barbarity of attempting to keep the Colonies by flaughtering them, have very humanely proposed giving them up. But the highest authority has informed us, with great reason, "That they are too important to be given up." ---- Dr. TUCKER has infified on the depopulation, produced by migrations from this country to the Colonies, as a reafon for this measure. But, unless the kingdom is made a prison to its inhabitants, these migrations cannot be prevented; nor do I think that they have any great tendency to produce depopulation. When a number of people quit a country, there is more employment and greater plenty of the means of sublistence left for those who remain; and the vacancy is soon filled up. The grand caufes of depopulation are, not migrations, or even famines and plagues, or any other temporary evils ; but the permanent and flowly-working evils of debauchery, luxury, high taxes, and oppreffion. Turn

[39]

Turn your eyes to India: There more has been done than is now attempted in America. There ENGLISHMEN, actuated by the love of plunder and the fpirit of conqueft, have depopulated whole kingdoms, and ruined millions of innocent people by the most infamous oppression and rapacity.— The justice of the nation has slept over these enormities. Will the justice of Heaven sleep?——Are we not now execrated on both fides of the globe?

With respect to the Colonists; it would be folly to pretend they are faultless. They were running fast into our vices. But this quarrel gives them a falutary check: And it may be permitted on purpose to favour them, and in them the rest of mankind; by making way for establishing, in an extensive country possessed of every advantage, a plan of government, and a growing power that shall assonish the world, and under which every subject of human enquiry shall be open to free discussion, and the friends of Liberty, in every quarter of the globe, find a safe retreat from civil and spiritual tyranny. I hope, therefore, our brethren in America will forgive their enemies. It is certain that they know not what they are doing.

CONCLUSION.

TAVING faid fo much of the war with America, and particularly of the I danger with which it threatens us, it may be expected that I should propose some method of escaping from this danger, and of restoring this once happy Empire to a state of peace and security.-Various plans of pacification have been proposed; and some of them, by persons so distinguished by their rank and merit, as to be above my applause. But till there is more of a disposition to attend to fuch plans; they cannot, I am afraid, be of any great fervice. And there is too much reason to apprehend, that nothing but calamity will bring us to repentance and wifdom. ----- In order, however, to complete my defign in these observations, I will take the liberty to lay before the public the following sketch of one of the plans just referred to, as it was opened before the holidays to the house of Lords by the Earl of Shelburne; who, while he held the seals of the Southern Department, with the business of the Colonies annexed, possessed their confidence, without ever compromifing the authority of this country; a confidence which discovered itself by peace among themselves, and duty and submission to the Mother-country. I hope I shall not take an unwarrantable liberty, if, on this occasion, I use his Lordship's own words, as nearly as I have been able to collect them. " Meet the Colonies on their own ground, in the last petition from the " Congress to the king. The furest, as well as the most dignified mode of " proceeding for this country.-Suspend all hostilities-Repeal the acts which " immediately diffress America, namely, the last restraining act,-the charter " act, — the act for the more impartial administration of justice; — and the Quebec " act.-All the other acts (the cuftom house act, the post office act, &c.) leave " countries may wish repealed. Some which can never be given up, the prin-" ciple being that regulation of trade for the common good of the Empire, which " forms our Palladium. Other matter which is fair subject of mutual accommo-" dation...... Prescribe the most explicit acknowledgement of your right of re-" gulating commerce in its most extensive sense; if the petition and other " public acts of the Colonies have not already, by their declarations and ac-" knowledgements, left it upon a sufficiently secure foundation.-Besides the " power of regulating the general commerce of the Empire, something further " might be expected; provided a due and tender regard were had to the means "and

[40]

" and abilities of the feveral provinces, as well as to those fundamental, unalien-" able rights of Englishmen, which no father can furrender on the part of his " fon, no representative on the part of his elector, no generation on the part of • the fucceeding one; the right of judging not only of the mode of raifing, but 4 the quantum, and the appropriation of fuch aids as they shall grant.---Γο be " more explicit; the debt of England, without entering into invidious diffinc-" tions how it came to be contracted, might be acknowledged the debt of every " individual part of the whole Empire, Afia, as well as America, included.-----" Provided, that full fecurity were held forth to them, that fuch free aids, to-• gether with the Sinking Fund (Great Britain contributing her superior share) " should not be left as the privy purse of the minister, but he unalienably appro-# priated to the original intention of that fund, the discharge of the debt;---• and that by an honest application of the subole fund, the taxes might in time be " leisened, and the price of our manufactures confequently reduced, fo that every " contributory part might feel the returning benefit-always supposing the laws •• of trade duly observed and enforced. " The time was, I am confident-and perhaps is, when these points might be •• obtained upon the eafy, the conftitutional, and, therefore, the indifpenfible •• terms of an exemption from parliamentary taxation, and an admiffion of the •• facredness of their charters; instead of facrificing their good humour, their •• affection, their effectual aids, and the act of NAVIGATION itself, (which you •• are now in the direct road to do) for a commercial quit-rent, (a) or a barren •• metaphysical chimæra.—How long these ends may continue attainable, no •• man can tell. _____ But if no words are to be relied on except such as make •• against the Colonies—If nothing is acceptable, except what is attainable by •• force; it only remains to apply, what has been so often remarked of unhappy •• periods,_____Quos Deus vult, &c."

These are sentiments and proposals of the last importance; and I am very happy in being able to give them to the public from so respectable an authority, as that of the distinguished Peer I have mentioned; to whom, I know, this kingdom, as well as America, is much indebted for his zeal to promote those grand public points on which the preservation of Liberty among us depends; and for the firm opposition which, jointly with many others (Noblemen and Common. ers of the first character and abilities,) he has made to the present measures.

Had fuch a plan as that now propofed been adopted a few months ago, I have little doubt but that a pacification would have taken place, on terms highly advantageous to this kingdom. In particular. It is probable, that the Colonies would have confented to grant an annual fupply, which, increafed by a faving of the money now fpent in maintaining troops among them, and by contributions which might have been gained from other parts of the Empire, would have formed a fund confiderable enough, if unalienably applied (b), to redeem the public debt; in confequence of which, agreeably to Lord Shelburne's ideas, fome of our worft taxes might be taken off, and the Colonies would receive our manufactures cheaper; our paper currency might be reftrained; our whole force would be free to meet at any time foreign danger; the influence of the Crown would be reduced; our Parliament would become more independent; and the kingdom might, perhaps, be reftored to a fituation of permanent fafety and profperity.

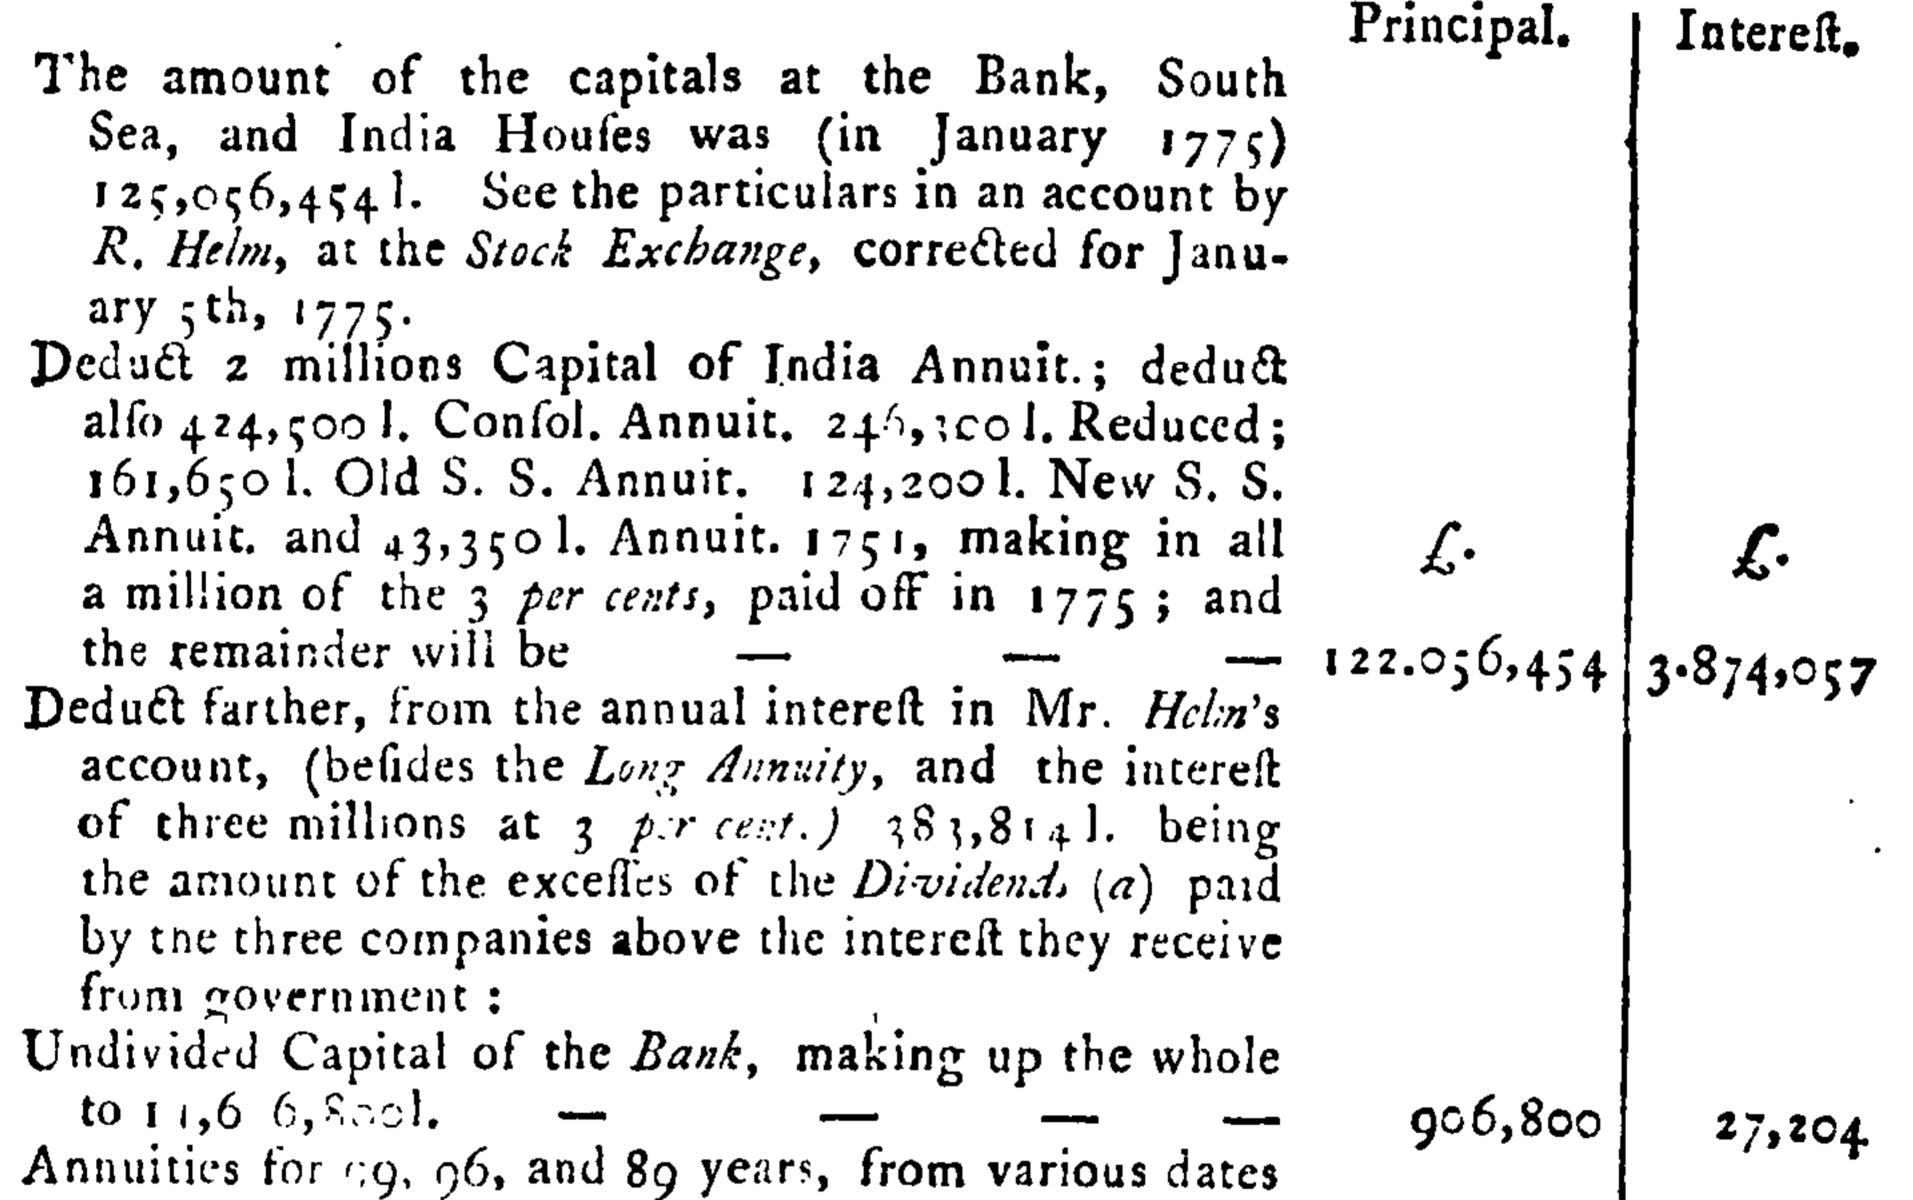

(a) See the Refolutions on the Nova-Scotia petition reported to the Houfe of Commons, November 29, 1775, by Lord North, Lord George Germaine, &c. and a bill ordered to be brought in upon the faid Refolutions.——There is indeed, as Lord Shelburne has hinted, fomething very aftamining in these Refolutions. They offer a relaxation of the authority of this country, in points to which the Colonies have always confented, and by which we are great gainers; at the fame time, that, with a rigour which hazards the Empire, we are maintaining its authority in points to which they will never confent; and by which nothing can be gained.

[4]]

To conclude: — An important revolution in the affairs of this kingdom feems to be approaching. If ruin is not to be our lot, all that has been lately done mult be undone, and new measures adopted. At that period, an opportunity (never perhaps to be recovered, if loft) will offer itself for ferving effentially this country, as well as America; by putting the national debt into a fixed course of payment; by subjecting to new regulations, the administration of the finances; and establishing measures for exterminating corruption and restoring the constitution. ——For my own part; if this is not to be the consequence of any future changes in the ministry, and the softer of corruption, lately so much improved, is to go on; I think it totally indifferent to the kingdom who are in, or who are out of power.

A P P E N D I X.

Amount of the NATIONAL DEBT, and APPROPRIATED REVENUE, at Midsummer 1775.

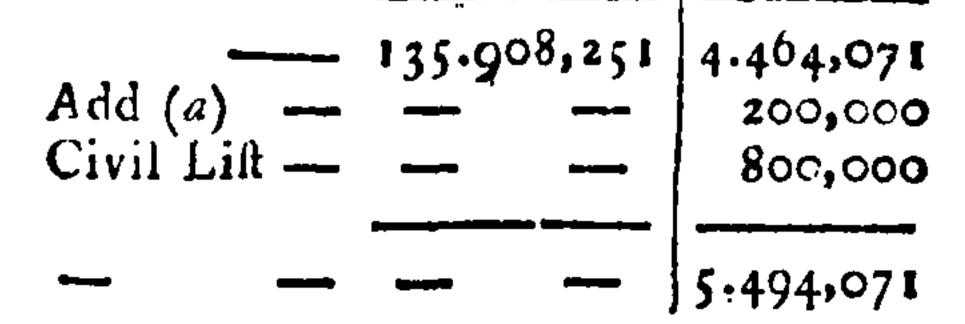

(a) This deduction was not made in the former editions of this work. I should have thanked the writer who has pointed out this omission to me, had he done it in a handsomer manner. But nothing depends on this omission; nor does it affect the conclusion with a view to which I have chosen to state the national debt.

Annuities

[42]

	Principal. L.
Brought over —	124.805,501	4.045,821
Brought over — Annuities for two or three lives granted in 1693. Alfo annuities on fingle lives 1745, 1746, 1757. The annuities on fingle lives 1745, 1746, 1757. The original amount of these annuities, taken all toge.
original amount of these annuities, taken all together, was 123,8831. They are now reduced by deaths to about 80,0001. I have valued them at 10 years purchase	800,000	80,00 0
Long annuity for 99 years 1761-The value of this annuity is in the Alley about $25\frac{1}{2}$ years purchase; but the remaining term is really worth 27 years pur-	1
chafe — —	6.702,750	248,250
UNFUNDED DEBT, consisting of Exchequer Bills	•	• •
(1,250,0001.) Navy debt (1,8;0,0001.) and Civil List debt, supposed 500,000 l. The interest is reckoned at no more than $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. —	3.600,000	90,000

Total of the National debt in 1775

ing,

Total of the appropriated Revenue

By an act of the first of George II. the income of the Civil List was to be made up to 800,0001. whenever, in any year, the duties and revenues appropriated to it fell short of that fum. The clear produce of these duties for 33 years, or from Midfummer 1727, to Midfummer 1760, was, according to a particular account in my possession, 26.182,9811. 178.6d. or 793,4231. per ann. They fell short, therefore, taking one year with another, more than they exceeded.—In 1747, they had been deficient for seven years together; and the whole deficiency amounted to 456,7331.16 s.—which, in conformity to the act I have mentioned, was made good to his majesty out of the supplies for that year.—In 1729 also, 115,0001.

was granted out of the fupplies for the like reafon.—This is all the money, received by his late majefty from parliament, towards fupporting his houshold and the dignity of his civil government; or 810,749 l. per ann.—I have thought proper to state this matter to particularly here; because accounts grossly wrong have been given of it.

The amount of the National Debt, it has appeared, was last year 136 millions —The great deficiencies of last year, added to the extraordinary expences of the prefent year, will increase this debt considerably.——Drawing out, embody-

(a) Being charges of management at the Bank, South-Sea Houfe and India Houfes; Fees, Salaries and other Expences at the Exchequer; Interest of loans on the Sinking Fund; Annuities payable to the Dukes of Gloucester and Cumberland, and the Representatives of Arthur Onslow, Esciption of England; expence of coinage; first fruits of the clergy, &c. — These Articles were omitted in the former Editions, and ferved to balance the overcharges of interest on the Bank and India capitals. I have probably under-rated them; but it cannot be expected that I should be able to give their exact amount. I leave, therefore, this part of the appropriated revenue to be corrected by those who are better informed.

[43]

ing, and maintaining the militia in the laft war, coft the nation near half a million per ann.—We cannot reckon upon a lefs expence in doing this now. Add to it, pay for foreign troops, and all the extraordinary expences of our increased Navy and Army, transport service, recruiting service, ordnance, &c. and it will be evident that the whole expence of this unhappy year must be enormous.—But I expect that care will be taken to hide it, by fun 'ing as little as possible, and that for this reason it will not be known in its full magnitude, till it comes to appear another year under the articles of Navy debt, extraordinaries of the army, transport bills, ordnance debentures, &c. making up a vast unfunded debt which may bear down all public credit.

State of the Surplus of the Revenue for 11 years ended at 1775. UNAPPROPRIATED REVENUE.

NETT PRODUCE of the Sinking Fund for the last five years, including casual surplusses, reckoning to Christmas in every year; being the annual medium, after deducing from it about

Total of unappropriated (a) Revenue £. 4.460,759

Produce of the SINKING FUND, reckoned to Christmas in every Year.

$$1770 - 2.486,836$$

 $1771 - 2.553,505$
 $1772 - 2.003,831$

$$1773 - 2.823,150$$

 $1774 - 2.731,476$

In 1775 the finking Fund was taken for 2.900,0001. including an extraordinary charge of 100,0001. on the Aggregate Fund. If it has not produced fo much,

(a) The greatest part of this Revenue is borrowed of the Bank, and spent before it comes into the Exchequer. And therefore, is a debt constantly due to the Bank, for which interest is paid. ——One of my answerers has denied this affertion; but at the same time has confirmed it, by faying that only 2.250,000 l. was borrowed in 1975 on the unappropriated Revenue.—The same writer has afferted, that there are THREE MILLIONS of India Annuities created by the company itself, and that this makes Two MILLIONS difference in the amount of the national debt.—The truth is, that in consequence of taking Mr. Helm's paper (a paper perfectly adapted to the purpose for which it is intended) without examining it; I had made the capital of the perpetual Annuities to be 124.056,4541.; whereas, if two millions India Annuities are rejected, and 906,8001. undivided capital of the Bank admitted, it comes out to be 122.963,2541 See p. 41. — The writer who has given to the public this information, received it, I understand, from the great ministe who directs our Finances, to whose Authority on this subject I am very ready to submit. Pity it is, that he did not choose to communicate it by a perfon possible of more of his own ability and candour.

[44]

the deficiency is a debt contracted last year, which must be added to other debts (referred to in Page 43) arising from deficiencies in the provision made for the expences of last year. This provision amounted to 3.703,476 l.; but it has fallen shore a million and a half. (a)

ANNUAL EXPENDITURE.

Annual income f. 4.460,759

paid

The effimate for the peace effablishment, including miscellaneous expences, amounted, I have faid, in 1775 to 3.703,4761.—In 1774 it amounted to 3.804,452l. exclusive of 250,000 l. raifed by Exchequer Bills, towards defraying the expence of calling in the gold coin. And the medium for eleven years, from 1765, has been nearly 3.700,000 l.—According to the accounts which I have collected, the expence of the peace effablishment (including miscellaneous expences) was in 1765, 1766, and 1767, 3.540,000 l. per ann.—In 1768, 1769, and 1770, it was 3.354,000 l. per ann. — In 1771, 1772, 1773, 1774, and 1775, the average has been nearly four millions per ann. exclusive of the expence of calling in the coin.

There is another method of proving that the permanent furplus of the revenue cannot exceed the fum now flated.

I have learnt from the highest authority, that the national debt, about a year ago, had been diministed near 9 millions and a half, (b) fince the peace in 1763; including a million of the 3 per cents difcharged last year. The money employed in making this reduction, must have been derived from the furplus of the ordinary and stated revenue, added to the extraordinary receipts. These extraordinary receipts have confilled of the following articles. The Land 1 ax at 4 s. in the pound in 1764, 1765, 1766, and 1771; or 1 s. in the pound extraordinary for four years, making 1.750,000 l. 2. The profits of Ten Lotteries, making (at 150,000 l. each Lottery) 1.500,000 l. 3. A contribution of 400,000 l. per ann. from the India company for five years, making 2.000,000 l. - 4. 110,000 l.

(a) The expences of the army not provided for in 1775 have amounted to 845,000 l. spent chiefly at Boflon. —— The Navy debt increased, during the course of the same year, from 1.850,000 l. to 2.098,579 l.

(b) This was Lord North's account at opening the budget in 1775. The particulars, as I have been able to collect them, I have flated in the Poffeript.

[45]

Paid by the Bank in 1764 for the privilege of exclusive banking. Also the money Paid by France for maintaining their priloners; and the money arising from the fale of French prizes, taken before the declaration of war; from favings on particular grants at the end of the war, &c. &c.—which (a) I will take at no more than 300,0001. Add 3.600,0001. arising from a surplus of 300,0001. for twelve years; and the total will be 9.260,0001. which is a sum more than sufficient to discharge 9 millions and a half of the public debt.

Sketch of an Account of the Money drawn from the Public by the Taxes.

CUSTOMS in ENGLAND, being the medium of the payments into the Exchequer, for 3 years ending in 1773 (b) ______ 2.528,275 Amount of the Excises in ENGLAND, including the malt tax, being the medium of 3 years ending in 1773 ______ 4.649,892 Land Tax at 35. ______ 1.300,000 Land Tax at 15. in the pound ______ 450,000 SALT DUTIES, being the medium of the years 1765 and 1766 _____ 318.770

SALT DUTIES, being the medium of the years 1705 and 1700 -	218,739
Duties on Stamps, Cards, Dice, Advertisements, Bonds, Leases, In-	— — —
dentures, News-papers, Almanacks, &c. – –	280,788
Duties on houses and windows, being the medium of 3 years ending in 1771	385,369
Post-Office, Seizures, Wine Licences, Hackney Coaches, (c) Tenths of the Clergy, &c	250,000
EXCISES in SCOTLAND, being the medium of 3 years ending	-,
in 1773	95,229
CUSTOMS in SCOTLAND, being the medium of 3 years ending	7377
	68,3 69
In 1773 — Annual profit from Lotteries — —
	150,000
Inland taxes in SCOTLAND, deduction of 6d. in the pound on all Pensions, Salaries, &c. casual revenues, such as the duties on
Gum-Senega, American revenue, &c. — — —	150,000
EXPENCE of collecting the EXCISES in ENGLAND, being the aver-	••••• age of the years 1767 and 1768, when their produce was 4.531,0751. per ann.
6 per cent. of the groß produce '
	$ 97 ,887
EXPENCE of collecting the Excises in SCOTLAND, being the medium of the years 1772 and 1773, and the difference between the gross and nett produce was demoved of the gross produce

EXPENCE of collecting the CUSTOMS in ENGLAND, being the average of 1771 and 1772; bounties included — 15 per cent. of the groß produce, exclusive of drawbacks and over-entries — N. B. The bounties for 1-71 were 202,8401. for 1772, 172,4681.
The charges of management for 1771, were 276,4341.
For 1772, 285,7641. or 10 per cent. nearly.

43+254

468,703

(a) My reason for this will be seen in the Possfcript, page 48.

(b) The annual medium of the payments into the Exchequer from the CUSTOMS in ENGLAND, for the last five years, has been 2.521,7691. —In 1774 this payment was 2.547.7171. In 1975, it was 2.476,3021.—The produce of the CUSTOMS, therefore, has been given rather too high.

The produce of the Excises in England has been higher in 1772 and 1775 than in any other two years; but the average of any three successive years, or of all the five years fince 1770, will not differ much from the sum I have given. — In 1754, or the year before the last war, the Cus-TOMS produced only 1.558,2541. — The Excises produced 2.819,7021.—And the whole sevenue, exclusive of the Malt-tax and Land-tax at 23. was 5.097,6171.

(c) These branches of the revenue produced in 1754 210,2431. I do not know how much they have produced lately; but I believe I have estimated them at the highest, --- In 1754 the Revenue of the Post-Office was 100,7101. It brought in last year 125,0001.

Intercft

[46]

Interest of loans on the land tax at 41. expences of collection, militia, &c. ______ 250,000 PERQUISITES, &c. to Custom-house officers, &c. supposed ______ 250,000 EXPENCE of collecting the Salt Duties in ENGLAND, 10¹/₂ per cent. 27,000 Bounties on fish exported _______ 18,000 EXPENCE of collecting the duties on Stamps, Cards, Advertisements, &c. 5¹/₄ per cent. ______ 18,000

وموجد جميعها فتتبت وتواكي وواكات

Total L. 11.900,505

It must be seen, that this account is imperfect. It is, however, sufficient to prove, that the whole money raifed DIRECTLY by the taxes, cannot be much less than TWELVE MILLIONS. But as the increased price of one commodity has a tendency to raife the price of other commodities; and as also dealers generally add more than the value of a tax to the price of a commodity, belides charging interest for the money they advance on the taxes; for these reasons, it seems certain, that the taxes have an INDIRECT effect of great confequence; and that a larger fum is drawn by them from the public, than their gro/s produce.---It is farther to be confidered, that many of the perfons who are now supported by collecting the taxes, would have supported themselves by commerce or agriculture; and therefore, inflead of taking away from the public flock, would have been employed in increasing it. ----- Some have reckoned, that on all these accounts the expence of the taxes is doubled; but this must be extravagant. Let us suppose a fourtb only added; and it will follow, that the money drawn from the public by the taxes (exclusive of tythes, county-rates, and the taxes which maintain the poor) is near 15 millions per ann.; a fum equal to the whole specie of the kingdom ; which, therefore, had we no paper currency, would be totally inadequate to the wants of the kingdom. Without all doubt fuch a state of things, in a great commercial nation, is most dangerous, and frightful; but it admits of no remedy, while the public debt continues what it is. With a view, therefore, to the quick reduction of this debt, I will throw away, after all I have said on this subject on former occasions, the following proposals.----It has appeared, that, supposing the taxes not to become less productive, and the current national expence to continue the same that it had been for ten years before 1775, a furplus may be expected in the revenue of about 300,000 l. per ann.-With a furplus fo trifling, nothing can be done; but it might be increased, first of all; By keeping the LAND TAX for the future at 4 s. in the pound.—As rents have been almost doubled, this will not be much more to the present proprietors of land, than 2 s. in the pound was formerly. 'Tis, therefore, equitable; and it will add to the national income near 450,000 l. Secondly, All the money now spent in maintaining troops in America might be faved. The Colonies are able to defend themselves. They wish to be allowed to do it. Should they ever want the aid of our troops, they will certainly pay us for them. Indeed I am of opinion, they will never be willing. to make peace with us, without stipulating that we shall withdraw our troops from them. Were there any external power that claimed and exercised a right of stationing troops in this country, without our consent, we should certainly think ourselves entirely undone. ----- I will estimate this faving at no more than 200,000 l. per ann. Thirdly, I do not fee why the peace establishment might not be reduced to what it was, at an average, in 1768, 1769 and 1770. This would produce a faving of 350,000 l. jer ann.---- I might here propose reducing the peace establishment for the Navy to what it always was before the last war, or from 16,000 to 10,000 men. But it would be infinitely better to reduce the ARMY; and this might produce a farther faving of great confequence.----But waving this, I shall only mention, Fourthly,

[47]

Fourthly, That contributions might be obtained from North-America and other parts of the British Empire, on the principles stated from the EARL of SHELBURNE'S authority, in page 39.—I will estimate these at no more than 400,000 l. per ann.——(a) Add the Surplus now in our possession; and the total will be 1.700,000.——In the Introduction to the third edition of the Treatise on Reversionary Payments, I have explained a method of paying off, with a finking Fund of a million per ann. (b), a hundred millions of the national debt in forty years. What then might not be done with such a Fund as this ?

In five years 18.986,300 l. will fall from an intereft of 4 per cent. to 3 per cent.—Alfo, 4.500,000 l. 3 per cent. 1758, will fall, in fix years, to an intereft of 3 per cent.—The long Annuities granted in King WILLIAM's time, will, in 20 years become extinct; as will also the greatest part of the Life Annuities specified in page 41.—All these favings will not amount to much less than 400,000 l. per ann. And were they to be added to the fund as they fall in, its operations would be fo much accelerated, that in a few years we should fee this country above all its difficulties.—Still more might be done by striking off unneceffary places and pensions; by giving up all the means of corruption; by reducing the pay of the great officers of state; and simplifying the taxes.—A minister who appeared determined to carry into execution such a state, would foon gain the confidence of the public; endear himself to all honest men; and in time come to be blessed as the Saviour of his country.—But what am I doing ?—We have no such happy period before us.—Our ministers are active in pursuing measures which must increase our burthens. A horrid civil war is begun; and it may foon leave us nothing to be anxious about.

(a) We drew, some years ago, this contribution from Asia only: and it cannot be unreasonable to expect, that the greatest part of it may be again drawn from thence after the expiration, in 1780, of the charter of the EAST-INDIA company. At that period also, it is much to be wished that some effectual measures may be established for making amends to the inhabitants of BENGAL for the shocking injuries they have suffered; and for skreening them from all farther injuries; and, likewise, for withdrawing from the crown that Patronage of the East India Company, which it has lately acquired, and which has given one of the deepest wounds to the constitution.

(b) At the time of writing the introduction here referred to, above three years ago, I ibsught, or rather boped, that the furplus of the revenue might be taken at 900,000 l. per ann. But it must be confidered, that the nation was then in possession of a contribution of 400,000 l. per ann. from the India Company, which has been fince lost—See the Additional Preface to the 2d Edition of the Appeal to the Public on the Subject of the National Debt.

POSTSCRTT.

A CCOUNT of Public debts difcharged, Money borrowed, and Annual Interest faved, from 1763 to 1775.

Debts	paid	off fince 176	ö 3.					Annı	ity decreal	cd.
	· 	£	forded be	 nters ()					£.	5.
-/~5		.$70,888							34,835	10
			unfunded,	 -	- 4 pe	r cent.		6	60,000	00
1766	-	0.870,888	funded,		4 pe	er cent.			34 835	10
-		1.100,000	unfunded,	 	4				48,000
1767		2.616,777	funded,	 	4		an a	,	104,671
		3.635,000			4			·	105,000
1771		1.500,000	-			er cent.
• •									52,500
1772		1.500,000	•		3 P	er cent.		(45,000	0
1773		800,000	unfunded,	 	3				24,000	0
1774		1.000,000	funded,	 	3				30,000
1775		1.000,000	funded,	(mail	3			C	30,000
_	-								 	iirai
Т	ntal	10 480.000						(The section of the s	-/0 0	_

Total 15.483,553

Total - 568,842 0

In

In 1964, there was paid off 650:000 /. navy-debts but this I have not charged, -bocaule scatter equal to that annual increase of the navy-debt for 1764, 1765, and 1766, which forms a part of the ordinary peace establishment. The same is true of 300,000 /. navy-debt, paid in 1767; of 400,000 /. paid in 1769; 'of 100,200 /. paid in 1770; 200,000 /. in 1771; 215,883 /. in 1772; and 200,000 /. in 1774.

al h

Account of money borrowed fince 1763.

Annual intereft increased.  Borrowed and funded, at 3 per cent. in 1765 45,000 1.500,000 45,000 1.500,000 in 1766 ود م 45,000 in 1767 1.500,000 _ -----(mirt) 57,000 in 1768 1.900,000 الطفنين Unfunded in 1774 7,500 250,000 رالشعيج

Total — 6.650,000 — 199,500

From 15.4.83,553 /. the total of debts discharged, subtract 6.650,000 /. the total of debts contracted; and the remainder, or 8.833,553 /. will be the diminution of the public debts fince 1763. Alfo, from 568,842 /. the total of the decrease of the annual interest, subtract 199,500 /. (the total of its increase), and the remainder, or 369,342 /. will be the interest or annuity faved since 1763 - To this must be added 12,537 l. per ann. laved by changing a capital of 1.253,700 l. (part of 20 240,000 l.) from an interest of 4 to 3 per cent. pursuant to an act of the 10th of George III.; also the liteannuities that have fallen in; which will make a faving in the whole of near 400,000 l. per annum: And it is to this faving, together with the increase of luxury, that the increase of the Sinking Fund for the last ten years has been owing. To the debts discharged the following additions must be made. In 1764 there was paid towards discharging the extraordinary expenses of the army, 987,4347. In 1765, these expenses amounted to 404,4961. : In 1766, to 404,3101 .--- Total 1 796,2401 -----This fum is at least a million higher than the extraordinary expences of the army for three years in a time of peace. This excess being derived from the preceding war, must be reckoned a debt left by the war. And the same is true of 1.106,000% applied, in 1764, 1765, and 1766, towards satisfying German demands.---- There are likewise some smaller sums of the same kind; such as subsidies to Hesse-Cassel, Brunswick, &c. And they may be taken at 200,0001.----The total of all their sums. is 2.306,240 /.; which, added to 8.833,553 /. makes the whole diminution of the public debt fince. 1763, to be 11.139,793 !. --- Towards discharging this debt, the nation, besides the surplus of it ordinary revenue, has received, at different times between the years 1763 and 1768, from lavings on high grants during the war, from the produce of French prizes, from the Bank for the renewal of. their charter, from the sale of lands in the ceded islands, and composition for maintaining French priloners (a), 2.630,000 l. Alfo, from the profits of ten (b) lotteries (at 150,000 l. each lottery) 1.500,0001.; from the East-India Company (400,0001. per ann. for five years) 2.000,0001.; from Is extraordinary land-tax for 4 years, 1.750,000%; from debts difcharged at a discount, 400,000%; (c): In all 8.280,000 /. — There remains to make up 11.139,793 /. (the whole debt discharged) 2.859,7931.; and this, therefore, is the amount of the whole surplus of the ordinary revenue for 12 years; or 238,000 l. per annum. Soon after the peace in 1763, an unfunded debt, amounting to 6.983,553 l. was funded on the Sinking Fund, and on new duties on wine and cyder at 4 per cent. There has been fince borrowed and funded on coals exported, window-lights, &c. 6.400,000 /. The funded debt, therefore, has in-& creafed fince the war 13.383,553 /. It has decreafed (as appears from page 47) 11.983,553 /.; and, confequently, these has been on the whole an addition to it of 1,400,000 /.----During feven years, from 1767 to 1774, 1.415,883 /. navy debt was paid off. See above. But, as this is a debt arifing "from confiant deficiencies in the peace estimates for the navy, it is a part of the current peace expences.-In 1768 this debt was (d) 1.226,915 /.-In 1774 it was 1.850,000 /.; and confequently, though 1.415,8831. was paid off an addition was made to it, in seven years, of 623,0851. It en-· creased, therefore, according to this account, at the rate of 291,000 l. per ann. Upon the whole, there is reason to believe, that the annual increase of the navy-debt might have been more truly stated in page 44, at 300,000 l. per ann. and this would have reduced the annual Surplus of the revenue to 270.759 l. per annum.

(a) See the particulars in a pamphlet intitled, The present State of the nations pathlifted in $768. Page 56.

(b) Four of these lotterics have been annexed to an juities; but it is a great milities to this when they have not been equally profitable with the other lotterics. For inflance i in 1999, n'number a half was borrowed on annuities, at 3 per cent. with a l ttery of 60,000 ticks is aparted. In the fame year 2.616,777 l. was paid off; but had it not been for the lottery, only 2.350,000 l. could have been raised on the annuities, and 1,0,000 l. lefe must have been paid off. (c) The difcounts only on a million and a half paid off in 1772, and a million paid off in 1776 and 1775, amounted nearly to this fum. (d) See The prefent State of the Nation, page 51.

FINIS.

In 1764, there was paid off 650.000 /. navy-debt; but this I have not charged, because fearcely rqual to that annual increase of the navy-debt for 1764,1765, and 1766, which forms a part of the orlinary peace establishment. The same is true of 300,000 /. navy-debt, paid in 1767; of 400,000 /. paid in 1769; of 100,200% paid in 1770; 200,000% in 1771; 215,883% in 1772; and 200,000% in 1774.

Account of money borrowed fince 1763.

Annual inte-

reft increafed.

				•••
	 1.500,000	telenet	~	45,000
—	 1.500,000			45,000
	 1.500,000			45,000
	 1.900,000			57,0CO
	 250,000		-	7,500
	international and international Support
Total	 6.650,000	6-4-5-		199,500
		- I.500,000 $- I.500,000$ $- I.500,000$ $- I.900,000$ $- I.900,000$	$ \begin{array}{cccccccccccccccccccccccccccccccccccc$	$ \begin{array}{cccccccccccccccccccccccccccccccccccc$

From 15.483,553 /. the total of debts discharged, subtract 6.650,000 /. the total of debts contracted; and the remainder, or 8.833,553 /. will be the diminution of the public debts fince 1763. Alfo, from 568,842 l. the total of the decrease of the annual interest, subtract 199,500 l. (the total of its increase), and the remainder, or 369,342 /. will be the interest or annuity faved fince 1763 -To this must be added 12,537 l. per ann. laved by changing a capital of 1.253.700 l. (part of 20 240,000 l.) from an interest of 4 to 3 per cent. pursuant to an act of the 10th of George III.; also the liteannuities that have fallen in; which will make a faving in the whole of near 400,000 l. fer annum: And it is to this faving, together with the increase of luxury, that the increase of the Sinking Fund for the last ten years has been owing. To the debts difcharged the following additions must be made. In 1764 there was paid towards discharging the extraordinary expenses of the army, 987,4347. In 1705, these espences amounted to 404,4961. : In 1766, to 404,3101.-Total 1 796,2401.----This tem is at least a million higher than the extraordinary expences of the army for three years in a time of peace. This excels being derived from the preceding war, most be reckoned a debt left by the war. And the fame is true of 1.106,000% applied, in 1764, 1765, and 1766, towards fatisfying German demands.---- There are likewife fome smaller sums of the same kind; such as subsidies to Heffe-Caffel, Brunfweck, &c. And they may be taken at 200,0001.---The total of all theig Sums. is 2.306,2401.; which, added to 8.833, 531. makes the whole diminution of the public debt fince. 1763, to be 11.139,793 /. --- Towards difcharging this debt, the nation, befides the furplus of its ordinary revenue, has received, at different times between the years 1763 and 1768, from lavings on high grants during the war, from the preduce of French prizes, from the Bank for the renewal of their charter, from the fale of lands in the ceded iflands, and composition for maintaining French priloners (a), 2.630,000 /. Alfo, from the profits of ten (b) lotteries (at 150,000 /. each lottery) 1.500,0001.; from the Eall-India Company (400,0001. per ann. for five years) 2.000,0001.; from Is extraordinary land-tax for 4 years, 1.750,000%; from debts offcharged at a discount, 400,000%; (c): In all 8.280,000 l. — There remains to make up 11.139,793 l. (the whole debt difenarged) 2.859,7931.; and this, therefore, is the amount of the whole surplus of the ordinary revenue for 12 years; or 238,000 l. per annum. Soon after the peace in 1763, an unfunded debt, amounting to 6.983,5531. was funded on the Sinking Fund, and on new duties on wine and cyder at 4 per cent. There has been fince borrowed and funded on coals exported, window-lights, &c. 6.400,000 /. The funded debt, therefore, has increafed fince the war 13.383,5531. It has decreafed (as appears from pige 47) 11.983,5531.; and, confequently, there has been on the whole an addition to it of 1.400,000/.----During feven years, from 1767 to 1774, 1 415,8837. navy debt was paid off. See above. But, as this is a debt arifing from conflant deficiencies in the peace effimates for the navy, it is a part of the current peace ex-. pences.—In 1768 this debt was (d) 1.226,915/ -In 1774 it was 1.850,000/.; and confequently, though 1.415,8831. was paid off an addition was made to it, in feven years, of 623,0851. It encreafed, therefore, according to this account, at the rate of 291,000 l. per ann.

Upon the whole, there is reason to believe, that the annual increase of the navy-debt might have been more truly flated in page 44. at 300,000% per ann. and this would have reduced the annual furplus of the revenue to 270.7591. per annum.

(a) See the particulars in a pamphlet intitled, The present State of the nation, published in 1768. Page 56.

(b) Four of these lotteries have been annexed to an juities; but it is a great mistake to think that they have not been equally profitable with the other lotteries. For inflance: In 1767 a million and a half was borrowed on animities, at 3 per cent, with a l teery of 60,000 ticks is annexed. In the fame year 2.616,777 I. was paid off; but had it not be n for the lottery, only 1.350,000. Could have been railed on the annuities, and 1,0,000% left must have been paid off.

(c) The difcounts only op a million and a half paid off in 2772, and 2 millions paid off in $774 1911 62 and 1775, amounted nearly to this fum.

(d) See The prefent State of the Nation, page 51.

 \mathbf{F}^{-} I N I S.