

THE SAN FRANCISCO CALL, SATURDAY, JULY 23, 1904.

SENATOR STEPHEN M. WHITE'S WIDOW BECOMES A BRIDE FOR SECOND TIME

She Is Wedded Very Quietly at Los Angeles to Robert P. Troy, Formerly Her First Husband's Secretary---Friends of Both Are Astonished, as Neither Gave Any Hint of an Attachment

In the presence of a few friends Mrs. Hortense Sacristi White, widow of the late Senator Stephen M. White, and Robert P. Troy, a popular lawyer and well known Democratic politician of this city, were quietly married at Los Angeles yesterday morning.

Both here and in the south the news of the affair came as a surprise. When it was first announced to the relatives of the late statesman they refused to credit the report. The brothers of the groom, Daniel and E. P. E. Troy, were much astonished.

The bride is well known through the prominence of her first husband and because of her intellectuality and charm. She is a brilliant and fascinating woman. As the wife of Senator White she was one of the most popular ladies in the national capital during her husband's brilliant career.

IS WOMAN OF INTELLECT.
Her drawing-room at Washington was thronged with the most brilliant of the law makers. They were charmed by her rare intelligence and by her graciousness as a hostess. At her teas and dinners the weightiest problems of the Government were discussed and her views were always heard with interest.

Her friends say that the Senator often acted on her advice and that her ambition stimulated and sustained him in many conflicts. She became his wife eighteen years ago. Mrs. Troy is a descendant of the Sacristi family, one of the oldest of California.

QUIET REIGNS IN BONESTEEL

Threat of Superintendent to Remove the Registration Office Has a Good Effect

BONESTEEL, S. D., July 22.—Bonesteel has been quiet to-day. It was not until nearly noon that the streets began to show their accustomed numbers. Early in the morning gambling games, which had been compelled to abandon the street corners last night, took their accustomed places at the edges of the walks and upon vacant grounds adjacent to the streets. But before noon they had been forced to desist the plying of their trade. Inside games were running as usual, but with greatly reduced patronage.

Early today there was a meeting of citizens to devise ways and means to prevent the lawless scenes of last night. At this meeting it developed that Superintendent of Registration John McPhail had issued what proved to be a virtual ultimatum to the effect that the riotous scenes of last night must not be repeated or he would remove the registration office to some other point and request that troops be sent here for the protection of life and property. McPhail was asked to delay his request for troops until the city authorities and the gamblers could get together on some basis of settlement.

A few hours later it was given out that the gambling element had agreed to send the "graffers" and hangers-on out of the city by 3 o'clock, pending which no call for troops was to be made. This agreement was carried out and the objectionable persons left town on an afternoon train. This had the effect of producing a calmer feeling and little apprehension is felt of any further trouble.

At noon a call was made by the Board of Trustees upon Governor Herreld asking that troops be sent to Bonesteel. A reply was received stating that the Governor was out of the city, but that the troops could be furnished if necessary.

friend of his present wife's husband for fifteen years. During the campaign that resulted in the election of Senator White, Troy was secretary of the Democratic organization. Troy accompanied the Whites to Washington, where he acted as private secretary to the Senator.

Senator White, who always felt a warm friendship for the young man, later helped him to secure a desirable clerkship in the Senate. He held the position for six years, during which he studied the great men of the world as seen on the stage at Washington. Often he heard arguments in the Supreme Court, the United States.

Later he made a tour of Europe on a risk government mission. Returning to San Francisco, Troy began the practice of law with success. He has also been prominent in politics and the conservatives wanted him instead of Liverash for Congress. Troy is now suing on behalf of his wife, though in the name of Mrs. White, for the Senator's share of the fees for recovering the famous Pious fund of the Catholic church.

TIME SOFTENS HER GRIEF.
It was generally thought that after Senator White's death on February 22, 1901, the widow would remain invulnerable. But time, the healer of all sorrows, has softened her grief and permitted her to take up again the responsibilities of widowhood.

When his famous friend had been called to the beyond Mr. Troy took charge of the widow's affairs. His assiduity for her welfare and that of her three children probably touched Mrs. White. At any rate, she did not look upon his attentions with coldness.

Naturally Mr. Troy had to make several visits of late to Los Angeles to talk with his charming client about the suit. It is evident that one of these visits must have resulted in a courtship, where she was both judge and jury. His arguments were successful and a decree in his favor was declared at the altar yesterday morning.

The wedding took place early yesterday morning at St. Joseph's Catholic Church. The Rev. Father Victor performed the ceremony.

WEDDING IS A SURPRISE.
It was entirely unannounced and only a very few intimate friends of the bride and groom were present. Immediately after they were made one Mr. and Mrs. Troy left the church in a carriage. Their destination is not even known to their closest friends. They intend to enjoy a brief honeymoon and then return to San Francisco, where they will reside permanently.

The mother of the late Senator White, with whom Mrs. Troy resided for some time after her first husband's death, declines absolutely to discuss the affair. She admitted that the news caused her some astonishment. Her daughter-in-law at no time confided in her the fact that she contemplated a second marriage.

The groom has two brothers in this city—Daniel Troy, assistant cashier in the Postoffice Department, and P. E. Troy, an insurance man. They decline to discuss their bride's marriage. They did not know of it until notified by telegram.

Mrs. Troy is the mother of three children by her first marriage—two boys and a girl. The eldest, a son, is about 17 years of age.
