HEADS COMBINE CONTROLLED
BY LATE SAMUEL PRATT.
Leonard Dreyfuss has been elected president of the United Advertising Corporation and subsidiary companies, operating 15 of the largest groups of advertising companies in the country, covering over 400 cities and towns, with executive offices in New York.

Mr. Dreyfuss, who is thirty-six years old, ascended to the presidency of the United companies when the estate of the late Samuel Pratt was settled in New York this week. He was previously vice-president and acting head of the United companies, and Mr. Pratt died in February while on his way to Europe.

The other officers are: Vice-president, Milburn Hobson, Dallas, Texas; treasurer, A. V. Van Beuren, New York; secretary, Edgar B. Wolfe, Newark, N. J.; assistant secretary-treasurer, Joseph A. Burrell, Newark.

The new president is treasurer of the Outdoor Advertising Association, a member of the national commission of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, and a member of the Sphinx Club, Advertising Club of New York, Advertising Men's League, Newark, and other prominent organizations.

FORMER PUBLISHER BACK IN THE BUSINESS.
Henry S. Rosecrans, former publisher of the Oskaloosa, Iowa, Times, is again in the newspaper business.

FORMER EDITOR SECRETARY OF COAL ASSOCIATION.
Harry L. Gandy, former congressman and newspaperman, has been appointed secretary of the National Coal Association. Mr. Gandy was at one time owner and editor of the La Grange, Ind., Democrat. He later acquired the Kendallville, Ind., News, a weekly paper, with which he converted into a daily publication.

Selling his Indiana papers in 1907, he went to Rapid City, S. D., where he became editor of the Rapid City Register, which he sold in 1908. He was business manager of the Rapid City Register Printing Company and director of the Gate Local Club. In 1910 he removed to Wasta, S. D., where he purchased the Gazette, continuing its ownership until August, 1918. In addition to holding other public positions, Mr. Gandy served as a member of the South Dakota legislature.

PICTORIAL DAILY HAS YOUNG SUNDAY EDITOR.

Roberta Yates Armstrong, who has recently been made Sunday editor of the New York Daily News, is said to be one of the youngest Sunday editors in America.

Beginning her journalistic career about three years ago, she has followed the print from Indianapolis, her birthplace, through Lebanon and Clarksville before coming to New York.

"I began editing the Sunday of the Cincinnati Post," Mrs. Armstrong said when reporters started joining the army, "I was given a chance. It was hard work in those days and among other things I had the interesting task of love-letters." About two years ago I followed the call to the East. I began with the News covering general assignments, and then I did feature work. For a time Mrs. Armstrong was the Sunday editor of the Chicago Tribune.

Ralph Armstrong, Mrs. Armstrong's husband, is also a member of the Sphinx Club. His pseudonym is Industrialist. He began his newspaper career on the Chicago Tribune, too, returning recently to New York.

NORTHEAST MISSOURI PRESS ELECTS E. E. SWAIN PRESIDENT.

Selecting Moberly, Mo., as their next place of meeting and July 16 as the commencement date, members of the Northeast Missouri Press Association closed the thirteenth convention of the organization in Moberly, Mo., last Monday, after electing the following officers: President, E. E. Swain, of the Kirkville Observer; vice-president, E. R. Shofoot, editor of the Edina Sentinel; secretary-treasurer, W. H. Bart, of the Macon Daily. Mr. Bart was also the president of the Macon Daily Chronicle-Herald, was made publicity director. A large number of editors and publishers attended the meeting.

OKLAHOMA REPORTER WRITES BOOK OF HUMOR.

"As a Man Thinketh So Izzy, Prof. Gum's Improved Method of Oughta-Suggestion." is the title of the book written on the order of the "Art Gun" committee of the Oklahoma City Times, which has been published by H. I. Bold Mueller, reporter on the Times, and writer of "Art Gun." In the preface it is stated that Art Gum is authors of "The Mirrors of Bradstreet," "The Thirteen Man," "The Inside of the Outline," "The Truth About Follywood," and other unpublished works.

1922, that the weather during the same summer had the greatest amount of rainfall since commencement of the weather bureau, that there was a business and financial depression during the entire year, that the proprietor had made certain mistakes as to the locality of his hotel, that all the hotel's business was all out of proportion to the expected profits, that the advertiser had received exactly correct advertising from various Aberdeen publications circulated in the through the state, and, finally, that the defendant newspaper was neither a guarantor nor insurer of the business of the plaintiff. This latter defense was the most important. It was necessary to admit all the errors, but the newspapers spoke for themselves.

After a jury trial the verdict was rendered in favor of the defendant, the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, on the ground that there was no cause of action.

The proof by the plaintiff was to the effect that during the summer of 1921 he was not only able to fill his own hotel from the advertising, but that it was completely filled, with no surplus, an adjacent hotel. He produced witnesses who proved that the board of trade business was better in 1922 than in 1921 and also produced evidence to better business conditions in the greater bank deposits, increased tax business, increased tax real estate, development of the ice cream business and other beverages mainly, by vacationists and proved that his profit per person was eight dollars.

Harold St. L. O'Dougherty, a Brooklyn attorney, defended the action for the Eagle.

"An international movement is under great headway to emphasize in all climes and among all peoplesthe human rights of the press. The executive committee of the Press Congress of the World is directing the campaign, and it is concentrating its efforts on the high idea that the press must be completely free.

"The press is an institution," says the Green Bay, Wis., Gazette. "It is a human institution; human, in the sense that it is not only the organ which transmits major and minor news, but human in the sense that it is the forum in which the people may express the thought tower that holds all the noble ideals which mean human happiness and prosperity. Clearly, the press is a public necessity. It charges for one kind of service. There are two phases of this public necessity. One is the news; the other is advertising, which is also news. It is quite obvious that the press could not subsist as a business venture unless it fulfilled its duties as a public, a literary institution. The press is a success only as the public's representative.

"Inasmuch as the press is the facility which keeps the public fully informed on political and civic, as well as all other matters, and publishes honest opinion, besides live news, it is entitled by right to the fullest freedom. It must be untrammeled. It must be enabled to collect the news that may be unstrained in the dissemination of news. Moreover, it must be at liberty to present opinion, in addition to information.

"The press may be trusted to refrain from publishing what it should not publish. It needs no prohibitive law, no curtailing censorship, to deceive, prey upon, and undermine the laws that are those that correspond with public opinion. The press is commercial and editorially responsible to the people, which implies that it must conduct itself as a public servant.

"It is more particular to the interest of the public, than to that of the press, that the press should have full freedom in gathering and publishing news and opinion. These are phases of public opinion. The people rule or are striving to rule. If the people could not defend or advance their rights and privileges, they could not preserve their liberty, without a free press."

COUNTRY PAPER NEEDS WELL-

BALANCED HEADS THAT

BULLETIN NEWS

That city idea of newspaper editing is the truth which Marshall L.

Kelly-Smith, demonstrator in the Morning Union, Okla., News, since he abandoned city newspaper work in 1917 and purchased the paper he now publishes.

"A city weekly needs to have well-balanced heads that tell the reader the news in the same way as a county paper needs these things." This is one of the common requisites of both city and county papers, Smith says, but he points out the difference that a county weekly must print more news briefs about the town and people, although it should not gossip and it should not publish intimate, personal things.

Born in Virginia, 50 years ago, obtained a common school education in battleground country, and very little at that," is the statement with which Mr. Smith dismisses his early life. He learned the printer’s trade when he was a small boy in small towns and later in Washington and Philadelphia.

This work was interrupted by his service in the Spanish-American war.

When he went back from the presses in 1917, he was appointed editor and political writer on the Kalamazoo

Gazette and Lansing Journal.

Smith went to Oklahoma in 1910, where he first worked as reporter in Guthrie, but in 1911 he became city editor of the Tulsa

Democrat and desk editor on that paper and the Muskogee Times-Democrat until 1916. Then he went to the general club work from which he was employed elected on the democratic ticket as representative from Osage county in the 1922 election.

VETERAN FINANCIAL EDITOR
DIES IN DENVER.

Clinton Buswell Evans, associate writer for the Philadelphia Public Ledger and financial editor and publisher of the Economist of Chicago, through which he established himself as a formidable business force, died on March 21 at his home in Chicago. He was seventy-four years old.

On February 1, Mr. Evans withdrew as president and editor of the Economist, which he founded in 1888 and which had gained national recognition, and he established a residence in Chicago, where he established a business firm.

Tell the truth. With the truth on your side, you always have a majority.

Frank A. Vanderlip, former president of the National City Bank of New York, and Will Payne, the novelist, were proteges of Mr. Evans.
Mr. Vanderlip served as financial editor of the Economist from 1895 to 1897, leaving to become private secretary to Henry W. Longfellow. Lyman Gage. Will Payne a few years later became financial editor of the Economist.

Mr. Evans was born in 1848, at Fayetteville, N. C., and attended the academy in his home town he went to Dartmouth, where he graduated in 1873.

His entrance into journalism was at Springfield, Mass., where, for ten years, he was financial editor of the Republican, under Samuel Bowes.
There he extended his knowledge of newspaper work into its every phase.

In 1883 he went to Chicago, in 1885 and became financial editor of the Chicago Tribune. Five years later he started the Economist.

Mr. Evans' dispatches to the Public Ledger on banking and credit sent to hundreds of papers throughout the country. He concluded a distinguished business epoch of the Public Ledger, which was syndicated by that newspaper, and which gained wide recognition.

GENERAL AUDITOR OF HEARST CORPORATIONS DIES.

Walter Galbraith Langdon, general auditor of all the Hearst Corporations, died Monday at Morristown,
N. J., after a month's illness.

Mr. Langdon had been connected with the Hearst organization for more than twenty years. He was born in London, Ont., February 4, 1848, and had been a newspaper journalist from his youth.

Theodore Tubman, a veteran of the Civil War, who had worked as editor of the Los Angeles Times, Arthur Sears, the editor of the Chicago Tribune, and had been editor of the Washington
Evening Star, Robert B. Smith,
Chicago Tribune; Frank Wister,
New York Herald; James L. Wright,
Cleveland Plain Dealer, and L. C.
Speers, New York Times,
were former associates of Mr. Langdon.

A few years later Mr. Langdon came to New York to join the forces of the New York American and Evening Journal, and other Hearst Corporations and gradually rose until about five years ago he became general auditor of all the Hearst Corporations, which position he held until his death.

VETERAN WASHINGTON
PAPER MAN PASSES AWAY.

Charles Sumner Albert, for thirty-one years a newspaperman in Washington, and for a number of years attached to the Washington staff of the New York World, died Tuesday after a brief illness. He was sixty-five years old.

In his time Mr. Albert enjoyed an intimate acquaintance with a long succession of public men and politicians, and with a wide reputation in his profession.
For a quarter of a century he was prominent in the editorials of the Denver Post, and some of his hardest work was done in the closing days of the last Congress.

Mr. Albert's last stay on duty was on March 21, and the last story he wrote was an interview with Senator S. W. Long, on legislation that would come before the next session. He complained of illness and the next morning was delicious. He soon came unconscious and so remained until the morning when the end came.

They called him "Colonel" Albert among the publicists, and became besotted by Senator Simons when he read into the Congress the summary of Woodrow Wilson's first year in the White House. Colonel Charles S. Albert, the great correspondent of a newspaper.

Rudolph Bartlett was chairman of the standing committee of correspondents, appointed the following committee to represent the press at the funeral: John T. Suter, Associated Press; James J. Hornaday, Indiananapolis News; William E. Brigham, Boston Transcript; H. C. Stevens,
New York World; Robert Barry,
Philadelphia Public Ledger; Roy A.
Roberts, Kansas City Star; Arthur Sears, Chicago Tribune, and had been editor of the Washington
Evening Star, Robert B. Smith,
Chicago Tribune; Frank Wister,
New York Herald; James L. Wright,
Cleveland Plain Dealer, and L. C.

The honorary pallbearers were Charles Michelson, New York World;
John Halsey, New York Times;
John Howard, Chicago Tribune;
H. E. C. Bryant, New York
Herald; James R. Nauree, New York American; Angelo McSheen, Philadelphia North American; Gus

VETERAN FINANCIAL EDITOR
DIES IN DENVER.

Frederick O. Dickensheets, financial editor of the Rocky Mountain News and Denver Times, two of the Shaffer Group of Newspapers, died in Denver on March 15. He was widely known in newspaper and financial circles as an accurate writer on topical topics.

Mr. Dickensheets was the son of Charles Dickensheets, for many years associated with the Shaffer Group of Newspapers.

Mr. Dickensheets was a companion of Eugene Field, O. H.
Butler, Fred Shiff, John Brien
Walker, Charles Gleed and others.
Mr. Dickensheets was one of the best posted newspaper men in the country and was not thoroughly familiar with all stocks and bonds of the various oil districts of the United States, and especially the ones in dealing with Wyoming, Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas.

Other Obituary Notes.

CHARLES H. CRANDALL, known as "the farmer poet," and formerly for five years on the New York Times, died, Friday, May 10, 1908.

Mr. Crandall's first wife was Miss Catherine V. Ferguson, a New York newspaper woman, who died five years after their marriage, leaving two sons. One son, Lieutenant Robert Grady, was killed in battle of the Marne in the World War. He was with the Thirty-eighth United States Infantry, and received a posthumous decoration for valor in this battle.

Beat New York On New York's Biggest Story—

"Get it FIRST—but FIRST Get it RIGHT"

Again I.N.S. proves the deep significance underlying its famous slogan.

On Saturday, March 24th, at twelve noon, International News Service delivered a clean scoop over all other news agencies, when it flashed the name of John Kearsley Mitchell, son-in-law of E. T. Stotesbury, as the mysterious "Mr. Marshall" figuring in the Dorothy King murder case.

Two hours elapsed before the verified I.N.S. story could be confirmed by competing agencies. But I.N.S. clients had been enabled to play the story simultaneously with the New York Evening Journal—

—Thus scoring clean beats over competitors in their own fields as well as over all other New York newspapers.

A weighty fact for editors—proving:

1st The reliability and speed of the world's greatest news gathering organization.

2nd The complete faith of I. N. S. clients in I. N. S. by their prompt publication of this—one of the most hazardous stories of that character ever printed—without awaiting confirmation from any other source.

3rd The value of a service supported by the fullest co-operation of dependable "news connections" in the great news centers—New York, Washington, Chicago, San Francisco——At these points, as at others, I.N.S. stands unrivaled in its command of the established news resources of America's greatest newspapers.

At Home with the Real Automobile Buyer—

At home, in the evening, when family councils are held, is the time in which to reach the actual buyers of automobiles and accessories. And to reach them effectually the advertiser must use the mediums that are read for advertising information—that enjoy reader interest and confidence.

In Chicago—The Daily News, which not only has “circulation coverage”, but what is vastly more important to the advertiser, “advertising coverage”, or circulation effectiveness. The Chicago Daily News, by reason of its 47 years of efficient newspaper service, is the advertising director and guide of the great majority of financially competent citizens of Chicago and its suburbs. Its year in and year out leadership in display advertising among Chicago daily newspapers amply attests this fact.

In 1922, for example, The Chicago Daily News printed 560,074 lines of automobile advertising, 50,886 more lines than were printed by The Daily Tribune, the daily newspaper having the next highest score.

1923 is a year of keen competition in the automobile trade, and to reach effectually the greatest possible list of able-to-buy Chicago consumers advertisers should broadcast their messages through Chicago's outstanding automobile medium—

HARDING MAY BE GUEST OF PUBLISHERS AT DINNER.

PRESIDENT HAS EXPRESSED DESIRE TO BE PRESENT, BUT HAS NOT YET DECIDED — LORD ROBERT CECIL WILL BE ONE OF THE SPEAKERS.

Preparations for the conventions of the Associated Press and the American Newspaper Publishers Association indicate that the week of April 23-27 will be most eventful only for the dinner on Thursday evening, April 26, to be held in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria under the auspices of the A.N.P.A. Bureau of Advertising, but this affair alone promises to be a remarkable attraction.

There is a large possibility that President Harding may grace this occasion. He has expressed his desire to be present, but a definite answer awaits his return to Washington from his vacation trip. He was disappointed in the hope of attending last year, so that he is likely to make a special effort this time.

The directors of the Associated Press will meet on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday morning, April 26 and 27 to complete arrangements for the meeting of the A.P. on Tuesday, April 25. At this meeting directors are to be elected to take the place of the following members whose terms of office expire:

Herschel V. Jones, Minneapolis Journal.

MORNING DAILIES CALL MEETING IN NEW YORK.

SESSION AT WALDORF WILL MARK REAL BEGINNING OF NEW ASSOCIATION'S ACTIVITIES — LOUIS WILEY AND L. K. NICHOLSON TO ADDRESS PUBLISHERS.

Two hundred morning newspapers are expected to be represented at the meeting of the Morning Newspaper Publishers Association, to be held April 25 at the Waldorf-Astoria, during the time of the A.N.P.A. convention. Invitations have been sent to all morning paper publishers. The meeting will mark the beginning of the association's activities, its earlier sessions having dealt altogether with the details of getting organized.

Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times, and L. K. Nicholson, president of the New Orleans Times-Picayune, will address the speakers. The time for the meeting has been set for four o'clock in the afternoon, to give the publishers opportunity of attending both the morning and afternoon meetings. One of the largest halls in the Waldorf has been reserved for the meeting.

LEADING MEXICO CITY DAILY SOLD BY ITS FOUNDER.

Felix F. Palavicini, founder and principal stockholder of the Mexico City morning newspaper El Universal, and three allied publications, has sold control of the group to Mexican business men.

Miguel Lanz Duret, an attorney, who is the new manager of the publications, will carry out the policies laid down by Senor Palavicini, who is politically independent.

Notwithstanding the troublous time following the founding of El Universal on Oct. 1, 1916, Senor Palavicini brought the paper into journalistic prominence second to none in Mexico. Because of his staunch support of the allies during the war, Senor Palavicini was decorated by five of the allied governments.

FORT WORTH RECORD GOES FORMALLY TO HEARST.

ALLISON ANNOUNCES TRANSFER—D. D. MOORE RETAINED AS PRESIDENT AND PUBLISHER—WITHINGTON REMAINS WITH COMPANY—PAPER ADDS FEATURES.

The Fort Worth, Tex., Record was this week formally transferred to the ownership of W. R. Hearst, after a series of deals which began in December, when Edmund Walker announced that he had purchased the paper from James H. Allison and Leonard Withington. During February Mr. Walker announced the record became the property of D. D. Moore, former publisher of the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Mr. Moore has been retained by Mr. Hearst to represent his interests in Fort Worth, and is the head of the new publishing company.

In a statement announcing that he has disposed of the paper to Mr. Hearst, James H. Allison, in addition to thanking his directors and employees for their loyalty and friendship, states that in disposing of the Record to Mr. Hearst he sought only to provide Fort Worth with a metropolitan morning newspaper.

A new company, the Fort Worth Record Company, succeeds the Record Company, the new company assuming all obligations of the former one. The officers of the new company are D. D. Moore, president; Edward W. Gough, secretary-treasurer and business manager. The new board of directors are William Randolph Hearst, Robert W. Plamann, W. F. Ladd, D. D. Moore, and W. G. Turner.

Withington, former vice-president and editorial executive, remains with the company in the editorial department; Gough succeeds H. E. Grimes as managing editor, and Cullen remains as mechanical superintendent.

During the last month while the new owners have been taking over the property, there has been added to the Record 66 columns of advertising, the entire section of which has been increased to eight pages all in color. The subscription price was increased from sixty cents to $1 per month, beginning April 1, and from five cents to ten cents per single copy on Sunday.

WELCOME HEARST.

Telegrams of congratulation from the chamber of commerce and prominent Fort Worth business men were sent to Mr. Hearst congratulating him to Fort Worth. Fort Worth is the smallest city in which he has a news organization. He will be gone six or eight weeks.

Rumors to the effect that Mr. Westfall was to leave the Hearst organization he clasped as being well-grounded, except that he had had a number of offers from paper houses, based on his experience in the news print field, all of which he has turned down.

During his absence the Record will be operated by the same personnel as heretofore.

PAPERS CUT PRICES.

The San Francisco Bulletin and the San Francisco Call, both evening papers, have reduced their price from 5 to 3 cents. The Call price will remain at 5 cents on Saturday, however.

AMERICAN WEEKLY SHATTERS ALL RECORDS FOR VOLUME TWO SUCCESSIVE WEEKS—AN ALADDIN'S LAMP OF ADVERTISING CONTROLLED BY A REAL GENIUS.

Advertising men frankly admit that he is a wonder. Arthur Brisbane calls him the "bloodhound of advertising" and "the merchandising miracle man." But he calls himself just A. J. K.

The wonder and the miracles which are associated with his name he energetically disclaims. One hundred thousand dollars worth of business a week in a space of twenty-four pages seems to him no more than the logical return for the service he sells. And he will tell you that, besides himself and his brilliant collaborators in the Hearst organization, there are about four and a half million other reasons for the wonderful record of the American Weekly.

Last week's issue stirred even Arthur Brisbane's diaphanous into ecstasy. It carried on hundred and seventeen thousand dollars' worth of advertising and broke into Brisbane's "Today" column the next morning. The silently efficient A. J. K. was thereby thrust before the minds of the millions of Hearst readers as "Mr. Kohler, the bloodhound of advertising."

Thus was the spotlight thrown upon the little office of the American Weekly's salesmen in the new American building at Columbus Circle. There, with windows on three sides, Kohler functions like a captain in a pilot house, the gigantic machinery that he controls directs under his thumb, but out of his sight and hearing. It is headquarters, remittance bureau by Kohler and his secretarial aids. There is none of the monotone of detail to interfere with his managing.

Next Monday Mr. Brisbane should be due for another salvo of superlatives, unless he has to turn in his "Today" copy before he hears from Mr. Kohler. Sunday's issue of the Weekly will give him one hundred and forty thousand dollars' worth of (Continued on Twenty-fifth Page)

BULLETIN PLANT WILL BE LARGEST IN U. S.

WORK OF TEARING DOWN BISHOP SIMPSON'S FORMER MANSION TO MAKE WAY FOR ADDITION TO ANNEX—NEW CAPACITY TO BE GREATLY ENLARGED.

Workmen have begun to tear down three buildings adjoining the Philadelphia Bulletin plant to make way for the addition of Bishop Simpson's former residence in that city, on the site of which an addition, 1334-36 Arch street, will be erected to the Bulletin building.

One of the buildings to be razed, 1334 Arch street and one door removed from the Arch Street Methodist Episcopal church, will become the new double front brownstone mansion occupied by the late Bishop Simpson when he was head of the church.

It passed from the hands of his heirs many years ago and has been used as a printing office since 1879.

The press room in the basement of the annex will be more than doubled in size.

ALL FOR PRINTING.

When completed it will be occupied exclusively by the printing equipment of the Bulletin. The annex will then extend from Juniper street to the Arch Street church at Broad and Arch and occupy the entire space between the Bulletin building and the Cuthbert and Arch streets, adjoining the Masonic temple.

A last order for printing presses was placed some time ago and these will be installed in the increased space. The production of the Bulletin plant from over 20,000 to 350,000 completed printed copies an hour, or twenty-five times the capacity of Spanish-American War days.

Printing machine manufacturers say the Bulletin plant is the largest daily newspaper printing establishment in the United States.

Plans for the completion of the building early in 1924. Doyle and Company has the contract.

ABERDEEN PUBLISHER BUYS PARTNER'S INTEREST.

J. H. McKeever has purchased the interest of his partner, E. P. Neill in the Aberdeen American Company, which publishes the Aberdeen, D. S., Morning American, the Evening News and the Sunday American News. Also included in the transfer is Mr. Neill's interest in the American Building and in the job printing plant.

JUDICIAL FIGHT IN DETROIT WON BY TIMES.

HEARST PAPER IN ITS FIRST ELECTION STAND BREAKS "BIG FOUR" BLOC— SIGNAL VICTORY AGAINST OTHER PAPERS— ISSUE MADE ON INDEPENDENCE.

Detroit newspapers April 2 ended a bitter contest over the election of judges for the recorder's or municipal court. The majority contest was almost lost sight of in the heat of this struggle.

The Detroit Times for the first time since it was acquired by W. R. Hearst, took issue with the other papers. The four judges, known as the "Big Four," who were running for re-election, each bloc, averred that they had formed a political combine on the bench. As there are seven judges in the city, the four judges, both as recording judges, would have been in a position to control the court. The Times entered its efforts on the election of Frank Murphy, who had been the only member of the "Big Four" bloc who had served overseas and had convicted profiteers after the war as first assistant US attorney in Detroit. The Detroit News and Detroit Free Press has defended the "Big Four" judges—Keiden, Cotter, Marsh and Heston. The local business interest—Citizens League and other religious and commercial organizations were strongly in favor of the "Big Four" bloc. The election was decided by the United Club of Advertising Women, and the leading industries and businesses of all Philadelphia, outlined the part it would take in the election. The Times appealed to the June of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Atlantic City. The meeting was arranged as a rally to interest Philadelphia's industries in attending the convention, and during the course of the meeting, it was stated by Howard Story, chairman of the advertising committee that there will be a golf tournament at Seaview on June 5, open to members of the Pacific cities, and upon winning the tournament, the funds will go to the local police, and deserved re-election.

The Times' victory naturally was the cause of much comment. The day after election the Times said editorially, in part:

"The great fight for a principle the independence of the judiciary is won."

Behind the "Big Four," not so big bloc was the Manufacturers' Association, "Big Business," the Detroit News and the Detroit Free Press, and the Citizens' League, together with other local religious and commercial organizations.

Against the bloc there was the Detroit Times.

QUAKER CITY ADVERTISING FOLK PLANNING FOR A.A. C.W. CONVENTION.

The meeting was arranged as a rally to interest Philadelphia's industries in attending the convention, and during the course of the meeting, it was stated by Howard Story, chairman of the advertising committee that there will be a golf tournament at Seaview on June 5, open to members of the Pacific cities, and upon winning the tournament, the funds will go to the local police, and deserved re-election.

LIBEL PROCEEDINGS AGAINST NEWFOUNDLAND NEWS—PAPER SAID TO BE BASED ON APPLICATION FILED BY SENSATIONAL LIBEL PROCEEDINGS AGAINST NEWFOUNDLAND NEWS—PAPER SAID TO BE BASED ON APPLICATION FILED BY PUBLISHERS OF GOVERNMENT PAPER SUED.

Sensation libel proceedings have been taken against Newfoundland Publishers, Ltd., which publishes the leading government paper in Newfoundland, by the Monroe Export Company, Ltd., a well-known newpaper company, demanding that the publication be restrained from publishing statements which have been made by the Monroe Export Company last year with the government for advertising in the newspapers.

As a result of the negotiations between Premier Squires and the Bank of Nova Scotia, the newspaper company stated that arrangements had been made between the bank and the company whereby the securities accounts would enable it to carry on. The Times said it had issued a letter to the bank manager to the director of the company, stating that the newspaper company having involved the bank in the proceedings.

The letter of the bank manager said that the letter of the local manager included the facts of the matter and demanded that the statements be made in the publication.

The Times' victory naturally was the cause of much comment. The day after election the Times said editorially, in part:

ADVERTISER MUST PIN FAITH ON “BIG IDEA.”

SOME ONE THING DISTINCTIVE IN PRODUCT’S QUALITY OR SERVICE MUST BE DEVELOPED TO DRAW PUBLIC'S ATTENTION—HOW SOME OF “BIG IDEAS” ARE USED.

Every successful advertising campaign must be rooted in a clear-cut, well-considered idea, which forms the basis of the whole appeal. The attention given to the selection of this “big idea” will, more than anything else, determine the success or failure of the campaign.

This idea may be, at first sight, trivial—as for instance, when a well-known toothpaste manufacturer made a slight improvement in the form of the toothpaste container. The idea, however, was so well thought out and treated from different angles at different times, that it was, at last, a “big idea.”

“Most big ideas will be found to fall under one or other of three descriptions,” said Mr. H. A. Naughton of J. J. Gibbons, Limited, Toronto Advertising Agency.

There is the big idea that emphasizes some feature of a product which makes that product different in an important way from all competitors. This difference may range in magnitude all the way from the difference between a broom and a vacuum cleaner to the difference between, say, an ordinary table cloth and one with a hinged cap. The difference may be, actually, very slight or very great depending on the importance that makes it a ‘big idea.’

“But there are some products which are not in the first analysis, and on absolutely unbiased comparison, indistinguishable from their competitors. Even small differences with any particular significance to the consumer are lacking.

“In such cases there are two alternatives. One is to sing out some merit of the product (that may be possessed also by competitors, but is not being specially featured) and to emphasize it prominently.

“In this way, the consumer may be induced to buy the product, without, consciously at least, as your competitor refrains from ‘stirring your thunder.’ It is probably true, for instance, that there is more than one brand of varnish that will withstand the injurious effects of boiling water. But the public, looking for a waterproof varnish, will in all likelihood buy that which it has been repeatedly told, in a convincing way, will not be injured by boiling water.

“The other alternative is to take a general idea, and to tie up your product to it in an effective way. The idea of keeping a photographic record of the children, tied up to a particular brand of camera, has sold millions of that particular brand of camera. The idea is cleverly associated with a particular brand of beds, has created a tremendous market for that brand of beds. The virtue of this kind of ‘big idea’ lies in the universal ‘suggestibility’ of human nature, which successful advertisers discovered long before Dr. Emil Coue applied it to therapeutics.”

“The wise advertiser is the one who realizes that it is folly to rush into a campaign without first finding the ‘big idea’ which is to be its keynote. How some of ‘big ideas’ are used.

Containing a complete list of the advertising agents of the world, thoroughly revised since its last publication in October, will be issued by THE FOUNDATION: ESTABLISHED FOR SON OF WASHINGTON NEWSPAPER MAN.

Andrew Carnegie and John D. Rockefeller are not the only Americans who can establish foundations. Harry A. Cusack, writer on financial topics for the Washington Times, has become the proud father of a son. Now, Cusack is also a member of the crew of the Lola Bennett, which is a houseboat owned by a group of Washington newspaper men and used by them for summer outings. Other prominent members of the crew include one Harry Markes, Jr., managing editor of the Washington Times and Joseph Homer Dodge, Jr., editor in chief of the Federal Trade Information Service.

Swayed by fraternal sentiments as well as to test a local forays on the good ship Bennett, Cusack has named the arrival Homer Avery Cusack. This testimonial of affection and respect was hurriedly arranged. Interest and support were immediately enlisted among other Washington scribblers. Arrangements for the proper establishment of the foundation proceeded apace. Not unconnected with the Riggs National Bank were successively carried out, and the Washington newspaper men busy writing one dollar checks, each of which makes the donor a “founder.” The deposits were received in the bank until Homer Avery arrives at his majority. Sizable to the financing was to have been expected by the bank. That this suggestion was frowned upon by the bank's management is better known in newspaper circles than in bank management came upon the riggs foundation is an established fact, however, and the little Cusack will find the bread cast upon the waters returning after many days.

TYPE IN KEEPING WITH THE PRODUCT AN ESSENTIAL OF GOOD ADVERTISING.

“In selecting type, the advertiser should try to choose that kind which is as nearly as possible in harmony with the subject under discussion. For instance, a light delicate type such as Goudy or Della Robbia is appropriate for millinery, jewelry, ladies' wear or articles appealing to the feminine mind, but a bolder, stronger type, say Gothic, Poster, Cheltenham or Caslon Bold, would be better for the advertising of coal, lumber, or manufactured goods. The foundation of J. J. Gibbons, Limited, Toronto.

“Type should also be made to harmonize with the size and shape of the space to be filled. For instance, a thin narrow page looks well in a condensed type; and a page wider than its height is better set in a more expanded letter.

“In considering the typography of an advertisement thought should be given to the length of the space in which the advertisement is to be set. The shorter the line should be, the less important to the size of type; the longer the line should be, the more important the size of the type. A line of copy for a one-column advertisement is not so much less important than the average length of line in the average newspaper. The proper length of line different sizes of type is very important to the size of type and should be rigidly observed.

Merchandising of Newspaper Space and Business Promotion by Agencies can not be better directed than through the advertising pages of the Agency List, which assures the attention of the prospective client at a time when he is looking for a service through which to place his business.

READERS CAN NOW ANSWER BACK AT EDITORS.

ORGANIZATION, FOUNDED BY FORMER WILMINGTON, DEL., PUBLISHER, WILL AFFORD NEWSPAPER READERS AN OPPORTUNITY TO STATE THEIR VIEWS.

For the first time in this country there is a vocal press, a spoken newspaper, to voice the editorial opinions of the readers of newspapers, thus giving immediate expression to the reaction of news and editorials in the day's newspapers.

The first meeting of this new institution, which is to be known as the Forum and Vocal Press, was held at its headquarters at 279 Madison avenue, New York, with the founder, Horace Greeley Knowles, former owner and editor of the Wilmington, Del., Evening Journal, presiding.

The Vocal Press will afford newspaper readers an opportunity to get back at their favorite editors, ac-

Leadership. Every development of the slug composing machine from the first idea of the circulating matrix to the present quick-change, multiple-magazine text and display machine has been a Linotype achievement. The Linotype Company maintains organized departments that do nothing else except work ahead to keep the Linotype user in the front of the printing business.

Performance. Linotypes are in active operation today after more than a quarter-century's steady use. Many are in use in remote places. Linotype resources have been invested without stint in factories and equipment to take care of the needs of the printing business for years to come.

Service. The more than 45,500 Linotypes throughout the world are supplied through Linotype sales and supply organizations that serve four-fifths of the world's printers and publishers.

Production, Operation

The mechanical production of a newspaper is obviously a manufacturing problem—but, due to entirely natural conditions it has rarely been treated as such. Many years' practical experience in the newspaper business convinced me of the need for a specialized study of newspaper production problems.

During the past three years trained engineers, with wide experience in the production problems of other industries, working under my direction have made detailed studies of a large number of newspaper plants of all sizes.

The value of this work has been fully proven during the past year. Building and plant designs have been made for several newspaper publishers—each design incorporating the results of this work and adapting them to the specific needs of each case. The New York Tribune's new plant—now ready for operation—embodies features of general design, mechanical layout and production methods developed through this original research.

This specialized newspaper building and plant service is now organized on such a scale as to be available to all publishers contemplating new buildings or desiring to improve existing plants. Under my control, through retainers, are engineers familiar with newspaper mechanical operation—and for the allied problems of building design and construction, I have under engagement one of the largest engineering organizations in the country.

This service, under the co-ordinated leadership of an experienced newspaper man, is now ready to handle all of the problems entering into economical newspaper manufacture.

WHERE THE SNOB APPEAL FITS AND FAILS.

IN SOME LINES IT SATISFIES THE CONSUMER’S IDEA OF HIS OWN IMPORTANCE, BUT THERE ARE MANY PLACES IN WHICH IT COMPLETELY FAILS TO REGISTER.

By Frances Maul,
J. Walter Thompson Company.

The first manufacturers showed that they understood the Snob Appeal when he added to the name on his signboard "Armourerto the King." He probably reasoned like this: "Everybody knows that the king can have the best there is. So when I tell the world that the king gets his arms from me, the advertisement will be more important."

The Silk Underwear Prospectus, las- tling her down the line to the retailer, is a perfect example of this kind of thinking. She is the woman whose taste is a judgment of values, and that—uncomfortably aware of the fact that she has no reliable standards to go by—judges for herself, experiences an instant relief from conflict.

"Oh well, I think that’s the kind of women that like that—why then—"

The sale is likely to result.

Or suppose you are selling coffee. You say to the housewife, conscious of the fact that she has only one coffee to choose from, one coffee from another, "Serve the coffee that the greatest coffee mer- chants serve."

Who could have finer coffee than a merchant prince to whom all rare coffees were accessible—an expert, moreover, to whom all rare coffees were known, reasoned like this: To copy this, add illustrations showing the most correct of butlers serving coffee from the most approved of coffee services in rooms of baronial splendor—one is quite prepared to learn that with thirty-three weeks after this coffee was put on the market in New York and Chicago, it was far outselling every other brands.

Even with so prosaic a thing as soap, we see what can be done with the snob appeal. "You have been away—and when you got home you found the most wonderful week-end invitation... just the thing we were trying to tell you."

The photograph, taken last summer, shows his father, mother, and two of his four brothers, just before departing for Europe.

Published’s Son, who married College Mate.

Hearst’s Son Elopes and Weds College Mate.

George Hearst, eldest of the five sons of William Randolph Hearst, and Miss Blanche Louise Wilbur of Idaho Falls, Idaho, were married at Martinez, Cal., Monday, after eloping from the University of California where both were students. Mr. Hearst is eighteen years old, the bride’s father is a pioneer Idaho Falls merchant and banker. The family is one of the most prominent in southeastern Idaho. Mr. Hearst gave his age as twenty-one at the Martinez city hall in obtaining the license, and Miss Wilbur said she was nineteen. Parents of both the bridegroom and bride sent congratulations upon receiving the news. The couple are row on a honeymoon.

Opinions Take Rank With News, As Heywood Broun Sees It.

Somehow or other the value and importance of opinion must be emphasized, it seems to Heywood Broun. "To the average mind there is almost an element of reproach in such a phrase as ‘journal of opinion,’ he says. 'Editorials in newspapers are segregated and people have to go to them. And yet the significance of an event, its meaning and its interpretation, is generally rather more important than the event itself.'

"The rigorous divorce of that which is news and that which is opinion sometimes works a hardship upon the honest newspaper."

"If we ever become a Northcliffe we plan to establish a zebra sort of newspaper make-up. Facts and opinion will be in alternate columns each plainly labelled. If anybody calls us a robber we will be glad to print it, but we are not going to give him the advantage of burying our reply pages and pages away from the attack.

"On the contrary, we shall reserve the zebra for opinion, a statement of the reasons why we believe our detector to be a crook. And likewise we will give exactly the same emphasis and prominence to our opinion of the reasons why the French should not be in the Ruhr that we give to the fact that they are in."

Special Souvenir Number for Fountain of Youth Celebration.

The St. Augustine Evening Record published a special souvenir number in honor of the Ponce de Leon celebration held in that city on April 4, 5 and 6. The festivities commemorated the discovery of Florida by Ponce de Leon near the site of St. Augustine on Easter Sunday, 1513, the founding of the city by Menendez, and the change of flags from that of Spain to that of the United States in 1821.

Two sections of the paper were entirely devoted to the history of the city.
BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU SCOPE EXPANDING.

BOSTON REPORTS PROGRESS IN FIRST NINE MONTHS — GREAT WORK DONE IN SCOTCHING FRAUDULENT STOCK SCHEMES — MANY REFORMS UNDERTAKEN.

Remarkable achievements of the first nine months of its existence are chronicled in the recently issued annual report of the Boston Better Business Commission, organized in April, 1922, with the high aims of promoting honesty, truthfulness and dependability in advertising—in fact all business methods and practices, working towards generally fair competition.

Public confidence and respect for advertising, salesmanship and business methods have received considerable attention in Boston as a result of the activities of the commission, which is affiliated with the national better business commission, extending across the continent.

In the first nine months, the commission has issued 308 reports in response to inquiries, these reports proving very instructive, as to the character of no less than 319 companies.

These inquiries originated in savings banks, mercantile houses, industries and others, the first nine months, 225 of these to local companies, and 87 to out-of-town concerns. The commission has worked closely with the office of the treasurer of Massachusetts, the department of public instruction, the department of health, the department of agriculture and the department of labor. In the first nine months, the commission has received 241 complaints and issued 108 reports of violations of the truth-in-advertising law.

The commission, in addition to its work of checking advertisements, has issued a series of bulletins containing information and material of value to the public, businesses, and trade organizations. These bulletins have been widely distributed, and the commission has received many letters of commendation for its work.

VAUDEVILLE ENTERTAINMENT WILL BE FEATURE OF N. Y. EVENING POST BALL.

One thousand persons are expected to attend the annual ball of the New York Evening Post Employees' Association at the Hotel Astor, New York, tomorrow night, including representatives of newspapers, magazines, papers, and civic organizations.

Irving Greenberg, president of the association, has arranged for a special vaudeville entertainment and many other attractions, among which will be the distribution of prizes to all women who attend.

The officers of the association in addition to Mr. Greenberg are John Machen, vice-president; J. Fuchs, secretary; Joseph Spocia, treasurer; John Healy and Joseph Bavasi, floor managers.

FORM NEW CORPORATION FOR ILLINOIS NEWSPAPER.

These were followed by a second shipment containing a Model 14 linotype machine for the paper of G. A. Fraser of Christchurch, New Zealand.

PLANS BIG OFFICE BUILDING.

With the announcement of advertising Minneapolis and Minnesota throughout the United States and in foreign countries, the Minneapolis publicity bureau has filed articles of incorporation, the purpose of which is to bring tourists and new citizens to the northwest.

Officers named in the articles were L. J. Hansell and A. M. Robinson, George Freeman and J. H. W. Mackie, vice-presidents; Frank J. Morgan, secretary, and Harry W. Milburn, treasurer.

The bureau, it is planned, to open immediately, to raise $75,000 as a fund to be spent the first year in advertising the city and state.

CHANGES SEEN IN NEWSPAPERS OF THEN AND NOW.

LITTLE CRIME, SCANDAL AND SENSI TIONAL NEWS IN EARLY DAYS—FRONT PAGE BORE SOBER ARTICLES OF AN INFORMATIVE NATURE INTERSPERSED WITH ADS.

Newspaper readers of today would find the newspapers of seventy years ago dull and dreary in comparison with modern sheets, and would probably discontinue their subscriptions at once if they came down in the morning and found one lying on the breakfast table.

Crime and scandal-suicide, pacts, love "neats," sensational divorce cases, and flapper features—received little "play" out of the way, while the front page, now embellished by flaring headlines, bore sober articles of an intellectual bent, interspersed with a good amount of advertising.

Recently the Davenport, Iowa, Democrat-Leader looked back and found in the files of Iowa newspapers published in the county of Davenport, stories preserved at the state historical building, the wide divergence between the news styles of yesterday and today become immediately apparent.

On the front page of the Bloomington (Illinois) Pantagraph (a Whig and Free-Suyat Democratic Enquirer, printed in December, 1848, can be found two paragraphs in the story "The Gambler’s Mother," a column or more of advertising clipped from the works of famous literary men, and a few items of local interest. "Cherry pie and tea going off like hot cakes," can be seen in the advertisements, as well as "saddles, saddles," and "barrels and whisky—40 bbls., just received."

Modern "display" advertising was unknown, and the ads ran one under another in the single column, in line type—"cut" like the want ads sections of papers of today.

Professional men in early Iowa days do not have the business of advertising to worry them, as advertising they possess today, as an advertisement by a Dr. J. B. Stephens shows. He announces, in a dignified manner, that he will "attend to all calls in connection with the business," and that he has the advantage of lectures in eastern colleges, and seven years’ practical experience on the spot, of which have been spent in the mining country near Dubuque, he flatters himself he will give satisfaction to all who may need his services.

The advertisement was printed in the Dubuque Visitor of May 18, 1836, ten years before Iowa became a state.

LECTURES ON JOURNALISM.

The Matrix, the honorary journalism society of Baylor College, is conducting a series of lectures on journalism this spring to create a greater interest in the subject among all students at Baylor College.

J. H. Lowery, former president of the Texas Press Association of Corpus Christi, and nationally known as the "butter and milk philosopher," of Texas, was the first newspaper man brought to the college by the Matrix.
WIDOW OF LATE BRITISH PUBLISHER WEDS.

Viscountess Northcliffe, widow of the famous publisher of the London Daily Times and the London Daily Mail, became the bride, Wednesday of Sir Robert Arundell Hudson, former chief agent of the party, in the chapel of Harlbury Castle, Worcestershire. The couple left that night for Italy to pass their honeymoon and will return to England early in May.

The wedding recalls reports at the time of Lord Northcliffe's death on August 14, 1922, to the effect that one of his dying wishes was that if Lady Northcliffe should die again her choice would fall upon Sir Robert Hudson.

By her marriage Lady Northcliffe forfeits a large annual income amounting to eighteen per cent of the residuary fund and the leasehold of the house in Carlton Gardens, overlooking the mall of St. James Park, in the most exclusive quarter of London.

Lord Northcliffe's fortune was estimated at about five million sterling, of which about one and three-quarters was in liquid assets, and two and one-half was in investments.

No more than three persons in a thousand could fitly equal him in the range of his attainments.

The American Pulp and Paper Association has received telegrams from Stockholm indicating that no immediate settlement of the strike in the pulp mills of Sweden is to be expected. The latest message to the association was the following:

"The situation in the 17,000 men employed in the pulp mills would not go back to work in the near future. It is very difficult to propitiously, however, as conditions might change at any time."

RETAILERS OVERDO NEWSPAPER SPACE.

UNLIMITED USE OF PAGES IS SERIOUS PROBLEM. STORE MANAGER TELLS AD CLUB—CONFLICT OF MULTIPLE PAGE ADS CUTS VALUE TO EVERYBODY, HE SAYS.

The tendency among retailers to enlarge their advertising space is increasing the size of newspapers to such an extent as to lessen the value of all advertising, William O. Riordan, merchandise manager of the B. Forman Company, one of the leading specialty stores of Rochester. N. Y., told the sales group of the Rochester Ad Club recently. Mr. Riordan and Richard Planagan, advertising manager of the store, led a discussion on "The Retailer’s Problems."

"We don’t believe we ever have a right to use a full page advertisement, except in some outstanding event like our anniversary sale," said Mr. Riordan, "and yet we are compelled to do so and to run much larger ads than would otherwise be necessary, because stores so much smaller are using such a disproportionate amount of space. In competing against one another in the amount of newspaper space used, the retail stores are increasing the size of the newspapers to such a point that the value of all advertising is lessened."

To emphasize this point, Mr. Riordan discussed the custom of using an excessive amount of space in Friday issues. He thought that the nationally advertised merchandise, Mr. Riordan said that his firm is inclined to favor the nationally known brand when its intrinsic value is as high or higher than unbranded lines. He added that, however, that a brand of merchandise sold under the store’s own name outsells all other brands ten to one. Despite this fact, he said, no attempt is made to push the store’s brand to the forefront.

WASHINGTON STATE PRESS TO MEET AT ELLENBURG NEXT AUGUST.

The Washington State Press Association will hold its annual convention in Ellensburg, Friday and Saturday, August 24 and 25. There will be an informal conference on Thursday evening prior to the official opening of the convention.

Fred W. Kennedy, field manager for the association, plans to bring to the convention leaders in the commercial and business life of the Northwest to take part in a conference with the state press on the problems of advertising Washington to the country at large.

The state normal school closes one day in advance of the convention opening and the dormitory will be available for housing delegates who cannot find accommodations in hotels.

COMPREHENSIVE DEFINITION OF ADVERTISING TAKES JUST NINE WORDS.

The earliest advertising of which any record has been discovered is the hieroglyphic announcement of an ancient Egyptian land owner seeking a runaway slave, declared C. C. Ceesna, merchandising manager of the Harnel & Von Maur Store of Davenport, Iowa, addressing ten students attending the lecture of the Davenport Advertising Club.

Tracing the development of advertising from that time on, he declared that prior to the Civil War $3,000 was the highest amount ever paid by an advertiser for an individual publicity announcement.

It was not until 1864 that magazine advertising began.

Mr. Ceesna submitted the following as an accurate and all-inclusive definition of advertising:

"Advertising is causing people to think, remember and act."

AGRICULTURAL EDITORS TO MEET IN CINCINNATI.

The annual convention of the American Agricultural Editors Association will be held in Cincinnati on May 5 and 6 and at the Ohio Experiment Station at Wooster, Ohio, on May 7.

A program for the convention is being arranged by C. A. Cobb, editor of the Southern Ruralist, Atlanta. Mr. Cobb is chairman of the program committee and says that he will welcome any suggestions for sections. The election of officers of the association for the ensuing year will be held on May 6.

Voting in the Good Will Elections is on the basis of contributions for the work of the American committee. Candidates receive credit in proportion to the size of the contributions made in their names.

A program of dances, bazaars, and other social affairs to raise funds for Mrs Chauncey’s election is being carried on by her campaign managers.

EXTRA!
FORESIGHT SAVES EDITIONS

Easter Sunday evening something went wrong with the boiler that heats the steam tables in the plant of THE AMERICAN and THE EVENING JOURNAL. When the first edition of THE AMERICAN was ready to go to press no steam was obtainable to dry the mats under the steam tables, and the paper was seemingly up against it good and hard.

The management, however, had wisely provided for just such an emergency, and speedily, without disorder, the first three editions of THE AMERICAN were completely printed from plates cast from WOOD DRY MATS.

The work was done by a crew of stereotypers, which, though experts in their craft, had never before handled dry mats. Great credit is due them. The dry mat made up lost time, and the editions, with no preparation possible, were as well printed as usual.

WOOD DRY MATS saved these editions of THE NEW YORK AMERICAN.

Suppose the management had not insured by keeping constantly on hand, conditioned and ready for instant use, an ample supply of WOOD DRY MATS?

It would have been necessary to send the forms to the most convenient newspaper plant at great expense and loss of time. Many forms would have been pied, undoubtedly, and the editions would have been hopelessly behind the schedule. Trains would have been missed and street sale probably lost.

WOOD FLONG

of the NEW YORK AMERICAN!

THE NEW YORK AMERICAN now enjoys the distinction of being the first metropolitan newspaper to have printed three complete and successive editions with plates cast from dry mats,—to have printed them precipitately, it is true, but in an orderly manner with satisfactory results.

Notwithstanding that more than 350 daily newspapers of the smaller cities, whose manufacturing conditions are no different from and are equally as important as those of the NEW YORK AMERICAN, now use WOOD DRY MATS exclusively, it has called for an emergency to awaken the metropolitan publishers to the fact that the WOOD DRY MAT is an invaluable invention for newspapers.

The wet mat and steam table curse should be relegated to the past and buried with the hand-casting box and other relics of the days of primitive newspaper manufacturing.

Nothing can go wrong with the dry mat. It is always ready. It makes unnecessary the use of steam tables and the sloppy operation of making mats in the plant. It saves print paper and precious time. It improves printing.

The WOOD DRY MAT is ready to serve you at all times, for all work, and in any emergency.

It has arrived for the metropolitan newspaper.

NOTICE:— WOOD DRY MATS are the only dry mats made in America. An unlimited stock, boxed and ready for immediate shipment, is constantly carried on the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. A continuous supply of uniform and satisfactory dry mats is not, therefore, dependent upon the peace or squabbles of Europe.

UNCLE SAM SHOULD SET A GOOD EXAMPLE.

The volume of announcements sent out from government departments to newspapers with the expectation that they will be given widespread publicity is increasing. Editors are being bombarded more heavily than ever, and there are some particularly heavy guns in the post office department.

These announcements are sent out with the idea that the newspapers will use them in their entirety, or nearly so, and thus save the Government the cost of advertising them. The result is that both the Government and the newspapers lose.

The publicity is turned down by so many editors that it falls far short of its purpose. The papers will use them in their entirety, or nearly so, and thus save the Government the cost of advertising them. The result is that both the Government and the newspapers lose.

There is no good reason why the Government should expect the newspapers to do its advertising for it. There are editors who have the habit of sending their announcements to the newspapers in a form that is unattractive and uninteresting to them.

Papers that do use it are giving away the service they are in business to sell, and are at the same time postponing the day when the cause of the paper will be endangered.

The editor of the Litchfield, Minn., Independent has learned something from his observations in the lobby of the local post office.

CIVIC ADVERTISING AND THE NEWSPAPERS.

Many communities have added to their revenue by the use of judiciously placed advertisements in the newspapers. This has been done in a variety of ways, ranging from the sale of space to merchants for advertisement of their goods to the sale of space to other communities for the advertisement of the products of their industries.

One of the most interesting features of the annual report of the Western Union Telegraph Company for 1922 is the statement that a new type ocean cable is being laid in the Pacific Ocean, which is in the process of being laid.

The Vancouver, B. C, Daily Province recently published a fine big anniversary number to commemorate its twenty-fifth birthday. In addition to the usual features, the paper included a special section devoted to the growth of the city since its founding, and the exterior and interior of the Daily Province building are shown, with the presses, advertising offices, and other features.

The editor of the Litchfield, Minn., Independent has learned something from his observations in the lobby of the local post office.

The difference in the amount of advertising in a respectable newspaper and the same thing in a handbill or circular, he says, is that "While the handbill is a waste paper container filled with the advertising circulars mailed to individuals, the public sees none of the local papers thus discarded. They are read by the public, and carry with them a trustworthiness that is entirely lacking in these transient circulars."

NOTE AND COMMENT.

"This country needs a national censorship over publicity seeking fanatics," declares an Atlanta newspaper editorial. "This is a country with a great many people who are not really interested in the public welfare, but who are interested in making a profit. They are not interested in the public welfare, but they don't know what it's for.

ADDITIONS TO NEWSPAPER FEATURE SERVICE STAFF

Walter Vogdes, who has worked on newspapers from New York to the Pacific Coast, has joined the staff of Newspaper Feature Service as one of the associate editors.

Mr. Vogdes did his first real newspaper work as a member of the staff of the Philadelphia Telegraph, which paper he joined after an apprenticeship on a country newspaper.

He went to the Philadelphia Record after a year or two, first as a feature writer, and later as assistant Sunday editor.

Mr. Vogdes went west after five years and was of the staff of the Los Angeles Times for six years. He wrote dramatic criticisms for the Los Angeles Graphic. Later he joined the publicity staff at the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, became part of the staff of the San Francisco Examiner.

Another recent acquisition to the staff of the Newspaper Feature Service is Peter Greig, who will conduct a department on correct clothes for men.

Mr. Greig was born within sound of Bow Bells, London, England. He was educated at Cheltenham College and Cambridge University, and took a degree in economics and law as a preliminary training for the stage.

During the war he was attached to the British Embassy at Washington, where he served as confidential secretary to Lord Reading and Lord Grey. Upon the close of the war he became a salesman for Lee Higginson & Co., and after three years with that firm he left to take up newspaper work.

WRITING SPECIAL FEATURES FOR INTERNATIONAL

Bushnell Dimond, one of the well-known newspaper writers of the East, has joined the staff of the International Feature Service in charge of some special feature work. His newspaper experience began on the Philadelphia Inquirer in 1909. He had covered many departments when he left in 1913. During the war he was dramatic editor and musical critic for the Philadelphia American. He covered similar departements for the Philadelphia Telegraph and the Philadelphia Ledger until the end of 1916.

During 1917 and 1918 he was battalion sergeant-major of the First Battalion, 304th Engineers. Upon the close of the war he became assistant dramatic critic of the Philadelphia Press and from 1920 until recently he was art critic, magazine editor and assistant dramatic critic for the Philadelphia Inquirer.

NEW ASSOCIATE EDITOR FOR KING FEATURES

Harry King Toole has joined the King Features Syndicate, New York, as an associate editor. Mr. Toole received his newspaper training on the Kansas City Journal and the Roanoke, Virginia, Times.

At one time he wrote the Sporting-Correspondent column for the Chicago Daily News and later was advertising and publicity director for the Gaumont Motion Picture Company.

As an artillery officer in France, Mr. Toole was aide-de-camp to General W. E. Cole and later acting adjutant to Brigadier General John Churchner in command of the 167th Field Artillery Brigade. Mr. Toole has not been active in newspaper work since the war, dividing his time between New York and his country place near Peles, V. C.

HOW NEWSPAPERS GUIDE WOMEN IN BUYING

LOS ANGELES INQUIRY SHOWS THAT 83 PER CENT OF WOMEN READ NEWSPAPER ADS DAILY -- 70 PER CENT HIGHER IN ATTRACTION THAN MAGAZINES.

Eighty-three per cent of the women of Los Angeles read newspaper advertisements daily. Seventy-two per cent declare that they read magazine advertising. Thirty-six per cent say they are more influenced by newspaper advertising while twenty-three per cent claim it is magazine advertising which has the greater effect upon them.

These statistics were collected recently by the Women's Advertising Club of Los Angeles, through the medium of a broadcast questionnaire, and form the basis for many interesting comparisons.

THE MATTER OF INFLUENCE.

In all, there were sixteen questions, some dealing specifically with advertisements read, some with the comparative influence of the different kinds of advertising, and some with the effect of different kinds of copy.

In studying the results, however, some advertising men declare that it should be born in mind that there may be some slight differences between the kind of advertising which really does influence purchases, and the kind which she thinks influences her.

In other words, it may be that in ascertaining the questions many women failed to realize the effect upon themselves of advertising of the purely cumulative publicity type, and have given perhaps too much credit to the advertisement which finally stimulated the decision to buy.

WHAT TESTS SHOWED.

Analysis of the replies to the questionnaire indicates the following percentages of reading and influence among women --

1. Reading Influence
   - Newspaper advertising: 83%
   - Circular letters: 80%
   - Announcement cards: 75%
   - Booklets and pamphlets: 64%
   - Magazine advertisements: 58%
   - Program advertisements: 57%
   - Street car advertisements: 56%
   - Poster advertisements: 49%

(Those who said they were influenced by advertisements are given the percentage of influence, usually expressed as a percentage of their confidence; whereas those who were not influenced are not listed here."

STUDY SMALL CITY DAILIES.

A comparative study of leading dailies published in towns under 25,000 population is being conducted by the Junior, Sunday and Street Car Division of the New York World, under the direction of Professor Alexander Irvine. Smalldaily editors are co-operating by sending consecutive copies of their paper to the service.

In all, there were sixteen questions, some dealing specifically with advertisements read, some with the comparative influence of the different kinds of advertising, and some with the effect of different kind of copy.
ADVERTISING BEST WAY TO ACHIEVE SUCCESS.

Reduces price of goods, does not reduce the profits — large amount of business can be handled without increased payroll expenses.

Advertising has its economic justification in the fact that it reduces the price of goods without reducing the profit, says Arthur Hallam, instructor in advertising at the Oklahoma University. So much of the customer's dollars must go to pay the clerks.

The average clerk can do twice as much business if the customer comes in the store to buy. Advertising brings the customers into the store. It shows the customer that there is an expert in the department. It gives the expert in the department an opportunity to sell the paper's food department because of the service it renders. Their advertising is so effective as to make the food feature become established in the Times, and its growth has been so rapid that the record of eight pages may soon be eclipsed.

SASKATCHEWAN DAILY AT TWO-SCORE MARK.

The forty-ninth anniversary of the Regina Morning Leader was celebrated by the publication of a special section relating to the newspaper's history and many notable men from Nicholas Flood Davin to Hon. Walter Scott, the first editor. The new modern equipment now in use were featured on the front page of the section, while within were many historical extracts from the Leader's history. Burford Hooke, associated for twenty years with the paper and now its managing director, was presented with a handsome hall clock by the employees.

FRISCO NEWSPAPER WORKERS OPEN NEW CLUB.

The San Francisco Newspaper Mechanics' Club was opened recently with a house-warming. Pressmen, stereotypers, compositors, photo engravers, mailers and others of local newspapers form the organization. The club officers are: James Thomas, Examiner, president; James Garrett, Examiner, vice-president; James Hughes, Telephone Book, Ernest Langton, journal; John Biddle, Chronicle, assistant manager; Bill Gooden, Daily News; Bud Warer, Bulletin, and Guido Fennone, La Voce del Popolo, Populous Club, secretary.

ADVERTISE! FARMERS URGED BY COLLEGE EXPERT.

Professor W. A. Sumner, assistant professor of agricultural journalism at the University of Wisconsin, at Madison, speaking before the members of the Wisconsin Press Association recently said: "The home paper is the first medium which the average farmer should consider for advertising. The farmer who sells domestic grains will find his best market in his home neighborhood. There is no medium as effective for selling his product as the home paper."

The development of classified advertising in the weekly paper has been largely neglected. The farmer has his wheat which must be sold near at home, can be profitably interested in the classified columns."

"The display advertising columns of the home paper are also an excellent method of advertising the farmer's product in the home community. The home paper which once was read every week for a year, is not the most effective sort of advertising. Business men have long foreseen that it pays to change the copy."

DECEPTIVE ADVERTISERS ARE WARNED BY FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION.

Complaint against the Holsman Company of Chicago, among other things, that it is making use of the words "French Ivory" in connection with the advertising of products of purely cosmetic character, is to be likened to the great Aquitania or Mauretania. The procession of developments of a similar idea has been at work in both cases, and it is safe to say that many changes have been as marked in one as in the other.

It is doubtful if Barnum spent in any one season as much as many national advertisers spend today for a single issue of the Saturday Evening Post. But, aside from the expenditure of money,

Newspaper Lives Only for Day, But It is Lifetime of Real Usefulness

Consider the newspaper, invites the Columbus Ohio Citizen. You know it is the daily news, the day's news. You have the opinion of experts to aid you in interpreting these events. You find entertainment and information in the features and comics. And you learn what and where to buy in the advertisements.

First, these needs were served by word of mouth. Then they were written and distributed by copying. Now the printing presses multiply the copies and deliver a distribution that blankets the territory in which the paper circulates.

It has been said that in all these stages, from wandering village gossip, story telling and message bearer to the power press, the newspaper train and carrier, this machinery expresses a social need and meets a demand whose satisfaction is necessary to organized society.

The appetite for information sharpened, as facilities for gathering and distributing it are improved. And though the newspaper lives only for a day, the eagerness with which its rebirth is awaited makes all the effort and ingenuity put into itsevery issue worth while.

A House Divided

Some years ago there were in Paris two papers, the Razor and the Scorpion, which were always attacking each other. Every time a new editor appeared, a battle was fought to the death. No other guest appeared, the host demanded: "May I ask, are you the editor of the Razor or the Scorpion?" "Both," said the sad-eyed man.

FUNDAMENTAL INSTINCTS OF MEN AND WOMEN BUYERS REQUIRE AS DEEP STUDY AS THE PRODUCT ITSELF — MIND SUSCEPTIBLE TO POWER OF SUGGESTION.

BUFFALO TAILORS ADVERTISE CO-OPERATIVELY.
Fourteen members of the Merchant Tailors' Exchange of Buffalo have started a co-operative advertising campaign to boost tailor-made clothing. The campaign is aimed to the educational publicity contained in the newspaper advertisement and the sale of the larger men's clothing stores of Buffalo, dressing quality, style and workmanship.

"We have had a suit made up in a material similar to the sample," explained the retailer, "and he brought the suit out a few minutes, he purchased the suit and before he left the store he had already made another suit, with a large quantity of material that retailed at $1.35.

"He is now a regular customer and I doubt if he has ever had another tailor-made garment," explained the retailer in telling the story.

FRANK AGENCY DISTRIBUTES SIMPSON'S VIEWS ON INFLATION DANGER.

James Simpson, president of Marshall Field & Co., issued a warning of the danger of inflation to prosperity, in an interview issued through the Chicago office of the Albert Frank & Co., Advertising Agency. Mr. Simpson took into consideration the present rate of building expansion, with the possibility that as in the years of operation every year, six years ago, when Mr. Kohler took charge, he had 2,000,000 circulation to sell, but since that time Mr. Hearst has added many more papers, and tremendous circulation gains have been made by every one of them.

"Six years ago there were few advertisers that didn't regard $10,000 as too much to devote to appropriate at one time for one medium," he commented. "Today we have advertisers who do not hesitate to contract for $150,000 at a time in the American Weekly. That gives a pretty good idea of the new appreciation of advertising that has developed in six years."

Some other figures make the comparison even more graphic. In 1916 the American Weekly had a total business of $24,000. Last year the Elliott-Fishers ticks off $7,000,000, and right now they are reeling off an average of $100,000 an issue.

"Our efforts to explain this development, while Mr. Hearst and everyone else who has watched it includes A.J.K., a new number one, so far as the American Weekly is concerned, the generalizations from personal. He sees the mounting totals as a tremendous, strategically delivered circulation: the advantage to advertisers of multi-color newspaper advertising."

PITTSBURG DAILY HOSTS TO VICTORS IN "TELE" BIRD-HOUSE BUILDING CONTEST.

Sixteen Western Pennsylvania school children, prize winners in the bird-house building contest originated by the Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph, went to Washington last Wednesday on a sight-seeing trip as guests of the Pittsburgh publication.

The event represented the annual convention of the "Tele" Bird Club, founded some years since by the Chronicle-Telegraph for the purpose of stimulating the interest of the children in American bird life. During the years of the club's existence, there have been as many as 1,000 to 8,000 contestants who have built bird houses in Western Pennsylvania. Four thousand bird houses were built this year. The trip to Washington represents the awards granted to the designers of the prize-winning houses.

The handiwork of the prize winners will be on exhibit in Washington for several weeks, under the auspices of the Government. The address on the presentation of the bird house was delivered at the "zero milestone" on the back of the White House by F. E. Lewis, representing the Pittsburgh public schools.

These bird houses and the contests for which they stand, said Mr. Lewis in part, "represent a desire on the part of a great newspaper. Covered by but one daily newspaper.

Professor McElroy said that the trouble with most forums in the past that the conservatives and reactionaries stayed away. To succeed, a forum must have the views of all classes presented without interference, he said. Following the formal talks every one will be permitted a chance to express his views.

TRUER MEASUREMENTS OF PAPER THICKNESS NEEDED.

Need for more accurate measurements of paper thicknesses is discussed in a technical pamphlet just issued by the bureau of standards of the government. The thickness, which is an important factor in determining the suitability of paper for many purposes, is usually determined by counting the number of sheets of paper used in large quantities, the government officials state. Ordinarily printing and writing papers are specified in thicknesses varying from 0.002 to 0.003 inch.

1.000 inch thick is specified and the paper is furnished averaged 0.003 inch by the government officials stated. "The difference, 0.0005, represents an error of twenty percent in the reading. One of the reasons why the measurements used in measuring thicknesses must be accurate, and in the number of types and makes of dials micrometers used in measuring the thicknesses, it is not surprising that disputes frequently arise between the paper manufacturer or jobber and the consumer."

Studies by the bureau of standards of dials micrometers commercially used show a wide range of design.

sages, and the utilization by the Hearst papers of every improvement in high-speed newspaper color printing; an unexcelled record of results for advertisers; and a new and general appreciation by business man of the fact that advertising is a tool and not a toy.

Although he will not say so, Kobler does know what is the most important advertising responsibility in the world. When he received 4,000,000 possible customers, he sells what in many cases proves to be a large block of that firm's business for the year. The advertiser must be ready to meet an almost unbounded demand, and in great many cases Kobler has to sit in and make sure that the advertiser will be able to take the consumer's demand at its flood. This involves problems of both production and promotion, he is seen from the following example.

Two months ago a skin ointment that used to be well-known in advertising, but which has since not advertised, was given for a price in the Weekly. This page has not yet appeared, but the week's sales manager reported that the response of jobbers and retailers to advance proofs and guarantees of insertion had been great; that his company desired at once to reproduce the same pages to run during the rest of the year. That is one out of the many similar experiences which have been Kobler's.

Nothing about the American Weekly was more interesting than A. J. K. himself. A little more than twenty years ago he was a textile designer, about as far from advertising as a silver miner was from advertising, in his mind. He had expended a tremendous sum of money. Thousands of yards must be sold to enable him to break even on a fair share of each design, and there were likewise many designs that didn't "take," necessarily becoming overlaid.

Kobler invented a process by which every design could be printed, as his observation on frequent trips to Europe taught him. The design could be sold through samples as well as in the trade, and that was at that time a flattering offer for it—fifty thousand dollars.

Kobler then turned his attention on the coloring in the sale from continuing in a related line. Kobler turned his attention on the coloring in the sale from continuing in the advertising of new paper. As his business grew, Kobler was called upon to handle the color problems of many advertisers, all of their publicity. It was thus only a short time before the experience of the other work.

The merchandising instinct led many of his clients to place their accounts in his hands. By 1907 his printing business had graduated into the advertising agency class. His business came to a stop when his safety valve popped and no sign of boiler trouble. Kobler at fifty is off to a flying start.

Washington official life. That organization, which came to be known as the Press Bureau, was once a quiet and unobtrusive part of the government.

This bureau, however, is now the center of attention for a group of young men who are eager to get into politics. They are members of the press corps that covers the White House.

They are also interested in the political outlook of the United States, which is changing rapidly. They want to know what the future holds for their country.

There is a large number of these young men who want to work on political campaigns, but they are not all interested in the same thing. Some want to work on the national level, while others prefer to work on the local level.

They are all working hard to get a foothold in the political world, and they are willing to do anything to get it. They are all very ambitious, and they are determined to succeed.

What is the future of the press corps? It is difficult to say, but one thing is certain: they are here to stay.

PRESIDENT ALMOST SURE TO BE A.N.P.A. GUEST.

FAVORABLE ANSWER TO INVITATION TO ATTEND CONVENTION DINNER LIKELY — PRESIDENT NOYES OF A. P. RETURNING FROM EUROPE FOR MEETING.

Plans are now complete for the annual dinner of the A.N.P.A. Bureau of Advertising on Thursday, April 26, which will be one of the high lights of the A.N.P.A. convention at the Waldorf-Astoria opening on Wednesday, April 25, and continuing through Friday, the twenty-seventh. President Harding is understood to have privately made the statement that he would be present, although no official decision has yet reached the A.N.P.A. headquarters.

The bureau is now corresponding with the President, and if the pressure of administrative affairs does not prevent his leaving Washington, Mr. Harding will attend, as he already had expressed a strong desire to accept the bureau's invitation.

Directors of the Associated Press will meet on Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Monday, April 19, 20, 21 and 23 at 10:30 in the morning at the headquarters, 51 Chambers street, to review the year's activities and complete arrangements for the annual meeting of the A.P. on Tuesday, April 24. The newly elected board of directors will meet on Wednesday, the day following the annual meeting.

PRESIDENT NOYES RETURNING.

Frank B. Noyes, publisher of the Washington Star and president of the Associated Press, is now in mid-ocean, having sailed Wednesday with Mrs. Noyes from New York on the Majestic. They are expected to arrive in New York Tuesday, thus leaving Mr. Noyes ample time for conferences with Frederick Roy Martin, general manager of the organization.

It is expected that Mr. Noyes will be able to give his fellow members many interesting sidelights on conditions abroad as he has been gone since last September. He was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Associated Press Association a few days before his departure.

PINDELL BACK FOR CONVENTION.

Another member to return from abroad for the convention is Henry M. Pindell, after a two months' cruise in the Orient. Mr. Pindell is one of the nominees for election as director of the Associated Press. He is also a member of the A.N.P.A.

Keen interest is being exhibited by the publishers in the announcement that Lord Robert Cecil, the distinguished British advocate of the League of Nations, and Senator George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania are to speak at the annual dinner. Senator Pepper, long a prominent anti-League, recently became a League convert, attributing his change of viewpoint to the logical arguments of the League leaders.

During the A. N. P. A. convention the Inland Daily Press Association will have a room on the second floor of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, as an information bureau. Inland members are asked by Secretary Wil V. Tufford to mail name and New York address to him, that he may compile a directory.

NEW YORK WORLD APPOINTS MERCHANDISING DIRECTOR.

Arthur D. Noble has been appointed merchandising manager of the New York World. Mr. Noble has been connected with the advertising department of the World for the last thirteen years, and has a thorough knowledge of marketing advertised products.

He was one of the staff of men who organized the world's merchandising department upon the basis of humor to be directed at the newspaper men as a wind-up to the affair.

As applications for the dinner already exceed the capacity of the common ballroom, the committee has engaged the Waldorf ballroom, which will accommodate 100 additional guests. The dinner will be held on the night of April 26 and it is announced that the doors will be opened at 6:45 o'clock precisely.

NEWSPAPERS ARE MERGED.

B. H. Peace, publisher of the Greenville, Ohio Daily News, has purchased the Greenville Tribune and has merged the two papers into the Greenville Daily News. The Tribune is the oldest newspaper in Darke County, having been established in 1890. The Daily News was established in 1921.
Selling your brand of cement to contractors and builders of Philadelphia

Philadelphia, last year, started work on 108 manufactories, 52 office buildings, 62 warehouses, 18 schools, 2 hotels, 5 hospital buildings, 6 banks, 1909 garages of all sizes, in addition to many other structures provided for in the $115,000,000 building program.

You can profit from the big market offered by Philadelphia's building plans if you teach the buyers and users of cement and other materials to ask for your products by trade name or brand, through The Philadelphia Bulletin.

Practically all builders, architects, engineers and business men and their superintendents and other employees, read The Bulletin daily.

Every day The Bulletin goes into nearly every home, office and workshop in Philadelphia, Camden and their suburbs.

HARDING ENJOINS REPORTERS' 1924 ENTHUSIASM.

MANIFESTS HIS DISPLEASURE AT NEWSPAPER STORIES PUTTING CAMPAIGN COLOR ON PROPOSED TRIP TO ALASKA — CORRESPONDENTS MILDLY REBUKED.

Back to his desk in the executive offices of the White House, bronzed and hearty after his five weeks of rest and recreation in Florida, President Harding this week took up again the routine of official duties and tackled the many problems which had accumulated during his absence.

First and foremost of these matters to be disposed of is the business of the newspaper men, who have speculated much on the significance of the prospective visit of Mr. Harding to Alaska, to which they have insisted on giving a political color. In brief, the "slant" of practically all that has been written on the subject has carried the strong intimation that the journey through the Western States toward the announced objective of the trip will constitute a traditional "whirl around the circle," with a view to smoothing the way for the re-election, and not the re-renomination, of Mr. Harding in 1924.

Connected with these plans, the scribes have interwoven numerous details, including the part which will be played by Chairman Albert D. Lasker, of the United States Shipping Board, whose talents for organization and practical achievement were demonstrated first in the advertising world, and since in dealing with the problems of the American merchant marine, is engineering the program which is to culminate later, by serving as "managing director" of the "1924 campaign."

Some two hundred of the Washington writers were apprised of the inaccuracy of this alleged program soon after the President's return, when they were interrupted by an authoritative White House spokes man that there was no such thing. It was also made known that, while Mr. Harding as a newspaper man understood and sympathized with the instincts that led members of the press to formulate his plans and policies in advance, Mr. Harding as President of the United States took quite a different view of the situation.

In fact, as President, his emotions bordered closely on that of mild indignation. Moreover, the scribes were informed, that, as a President who could become stubborn under pressure, continued insistence in the press on giving the Presumptive Alaskan trip the color of a political journey might easily lead him to abandon it altogether. If President Harding makes the trip, then, there is no question that it will be given a non-political meaning. The journey will be that of a President and not of a political aspirant. Speeches, by the way, if any, will be in response to the inevitable call for a discussion of evidenced public items. Such call will be answered, in all likelihood the railroad situation will be discussed for the credit of the middle west, as for the entire country as well.

The problems are down on the list, with the gratifying results of the last several months, increased income and excess profits making it probable that a reduction of taxes all along the line, and not on surtaxes alone, will be included in the next revenue recommendations to congress. The world court is another subject likely to be aired in informal addresses by the way. Here, again, it will be made known that the chief executive does not regard participation by this Government in the world court as a "back door" entrance into the League of Nations, as the more zealous of the league advocates have claimed.

Tentative plans are that the presidential party will leave Washington about June 21 and reach Alaska about July 10. Governor Scott C. Bone of Alaska, former newspaper man, has thoughtfully advised as to the best time for the trip, with the proposed date of arrival indicated as the most comfortable from a personal standpoint. Mr. Harding will be accompanied by several members of the cabinet. These, it is understood, will be Secretary of Commerce Hoover, Secretary of the Interior Work and Secretary of Agriculture Willard—all three presiding over departments concerned in phases of control and development in Alaska. The "slant," then, has been given by Mr. Harding as a newspaper man to newspaper men, as to the nature and motives of the contemplated journey. He will go as President, with nearly two years more to serve and much work to do in the meantime. For the present it is neither appropriate or seemly to talk of 1924.

NOTABLE TRIBUTE TO F. B. NOYES IN LONDON.

FIFTY OF BRITAIN'S GREATEST PUBLISHERS GREET HEAD OF ASSOCIATED PRESS AT DINNER GIVEN IN HIS HONOR BY SIR RODERICK JONES, CHAIRMAN OF REUTER'S.

London's most noteworthy newspaper gathering of the year was the dinner which Sir Roderick Jones, chairman of Reuter's, Ltd., gave at the Claridge on Monday when fifty prominent journalists and publishers gathered to meet Frank B. Noyes of the Washington Star, president of the Associated Press, who was in London on the last stage of his trip around the world. Mr. Noyes is now on the ocean, and will reach New York early next week.

Sir Roderick presided, with Mr. Noyes at his right and Ambassador George Harvey at his left. Speeches were made by the chairman, Mr. Noyes, Viscount Burnham of the Daily Telegraph, Lord Riddell, and Ambassador Harvey. The guests included representatives of nearly all the London newspapers and the British Press Association.

PUBLISHERS COMBINE TO CUT PRINTING COSTS.

Twelve New York literary and trade journals have formed the Publishers' Co-operative Association, the first of its kind in the United States, to combat "the almost prohibitive costs of manufacture of periodicals in New York City."

Parties to the venture are the Outlook, Motion Picture News, the Survey, Survey Graphic, Textile World, the Official Textile Directory, the Textile Catalog, Hendricks Commercial Register of the United States, Hendricks Commercial Bulletin, the Ford News, Association News and How to Make Money.

Here Is a First-Class Motto
First-Class News Gatherers Originated It.
Copyright.1823 by Star Company.

"Get It FIRST—but FIRST Get It RIGHT"

That is the motto of the International News Service, which supplies news of all the world to hundreds of newspapers, and which, because it DOES get the news FIRST and gets it RIGHT, has been growing with extraordinary rapidity for several years past.

The International News Service motto ought to be posted up in every classroom of every "School of Journalism."

Every newspaper man, young and old, knows that the life of a newspaper is NEWS and that the life of news is GETTING IT FIRST.

Many men, especially the young and enthusiastic, are apt to forget that getting it RIGHT is even more important than getting it FIRST, although a combination of the two, RIGHT and FIRST, is the combination that builds up great newspapers and great newspaper men.

The success of the International News, which, by the way, has been greater during the last three months than ever before in its history, has been based on its news qualities.

Its growth comes of energy, forever on the alert, that first GETS the news, and of painstaking care and conservative policy, that demands that with the news FIRST shall come proof that it is the news RIGHT, in addition to being first.

For every dean of a school of journalism there could be no better text for a lecture to the boys and the girls of the school than the motto of the International News Service:

"Get It FIRST—but FIRST Get It RIGHT"

SPIRIT MUST BE TAUGHT AS WELL AS TECHNIQUE.

DR. EVERETT SMITH, STANFORD JOURNALISM PROFESSOR, DISCUSSES RESPONSIBILITY OF INSTRUCTORS — STRONG MEN OF FUTURE NOW IN COLLEGES, HE SAYS.

“In teaching journalism, universities and colleges must lay emphasis all the time and in every course on the professional responsibilities, requirements, limitations, and ethical values of the calling. Better for journalism and better for the good name and standing of universities that we do not touch journalism at all than that we train men in techniques, tricks and trade alone, as though we were only technical or trade schools,” declared Dr. Everett W. Smith of Stanford University, former president of the American Association of Teachers of Journalism, in addressing the association’s annual meeting.

“Journalism is a profession. In practice it may not always live up to the professional requirements, but the requirements are there, and the future of our profession depends upon how fully they are observed. The future of journalism is increasingly in the hands of the college and university teachers of the young men and women who will go into the profession.

“We have in times past permitted ourselves to shun this point somewhat because of the complexity of the active newspaper man’s distaste for big words and his contempt for cant and pretense. We have been active newspaper men ourselves. Whether journalism is a business or a profession doesn’t greatly bother the newspaper man, he asserts; call it a profession and it goes.

“He sees so much of big titles for little men and admirers so much the simplicity and sincerity of men who really do things that for himself he prefers the character of newspaper man and let incompetents style themselves journalists. I really believe that all of us, therefore, see ourselves as unfortunate and that the public has been confused by our names until we were a little blind to realities.

“Confusion arises, to from the o’eremphasis of the grim fact that a newspaper must pay its expenses. This leads to all sorts of misconceptions, honest and disingenuous. It leads to the declaration that the papers must give the public what the public wants or fail as paying businesses and therefore fade out of existence altogether.

“That is the defense of ultra-sensationalism, yellow journalism, and a host of evils that are essentially non-journalistic, but are assumed to be journalistic because they are done in connection with writing or publishing of a newspaper in the effort to get circulation, and thereby the adrostics that do not pay their way ever profit there is.

“But the man who truly pays in circulation and money; the people will buy it. But newspaper makers are, it is true, no longer men of journalism teachers we ought not to side-step the responsibility that thereby rests on us to let journalists side-step it. Ultra-sensationalism was given its death blow by the deliberate and devised contrivance to gain circulation; and it works.

“The men who hit upon the idea of pelting that sort of stuff created or fostered the taste for it, and the vicious circle rolls down hill very fast. It is harder work to draw up public taste and public appreciation than it is to help it to slip downward; but it has been done by strong men, and it is journalism.

“If journalism is a business we want to see it run as the business of journalism, the finding and printing of the truth, and the illumination of that truth. The public now is very distrustful of our newspapers, and the trouble is that they suspect the ulterior purposes of the men who are making our papers. They perceive that the motive is not the desire to find and print the truth, but something else; that the rewards and satisfaction sought are not those that belong to journalism, but something else.

“The hope of those solicitous over the future of journalism, is that some strong men will continue to prove that sincere, honest, public-spirited journalism, the journalism animated by the professional spirit, will also, if it is combined with ability, gain circulation and be self-supporting. Certainly it pays in all other ways; it exerts a real influence and ability of some single strong man who regarded journalism from the professional angle and who would not give up his ideals of public service who was sagaciously honest, and who had the journalistic and the business ability to make his ideas work. He was no more independent and clearly than other men of his time; he started something new, proved that it would work, and set an example that others followed. The hope of our hope, and the strong men of the future are in our classes now.”

NEW BUILDING FOR SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE.

The San Francisco Chronicle, M. H. De Young, publisher, last Monday issued a rotogravure supplement containing photographs of the new building planned especially for that newspaper. The building, it is claimed, will also be a cut of M. H. De Young, founder and builder of the Chronicle, together with some of the pictures of the former homes of the Chronicle of which there have been published recent descriptions of some of the new equipment which will be installed in the new Chronicle building, and a description of the improvements.

A cut of the Chronicle's newest home and Mr. De Young's plans for his new plant, will appear in the April 21 issue of THE FOURTH ESTATE.
ADVERTISING AS A SOURCE OF PROFIT.

ITS ECONOMIC SIGNIFICANCE IS NOT YET APPRECIATED BY BUSINESS MEN AND PUBLIC GENERALLY—BASIC REASONS THAT HAVE MADE IT A POWER.

Business is constantly becoming more professionalized. The plan of business competition is being raised; shrewedness is giving way to strategy. Labor, individually or collectively, established a wage after a protracted period of bargaining. Raw materials were bought and finished products sold in complicated network of discounts, commissions and rebates.

Production was largely motivated by the driving energy of general managers, superintendents, and foremen, while the consumption of goods steadily followed well-grooved habits. Everyone in the organization bargained and maneuvered for advantage in an environment of cleverness and especial privilege.

WORKEK AN INVESTMENT

Although many businessmen still think and act in terms of the past, an increasingly large number appreciate the new industrial emphasis. The working man is no longer approached as a given supply of energy to be paid a standard or customary wage, but as human investment capable of developing an almost unlimited capacity.

A large number of human appeals have been developed in the effort to increase productivity. The general manager no longer measures output in direct relation to hours of labor but rather analyzes bonus systems, work-conditions, promotions, labor turnover, absenteeism tardiness, co-operative management and shop committees.

The purchasing department is giving more time to the quantity, kind and quality of materials while the marketing division has learned to appreciate changing conditions in demand. The first characteristic of a profession is being fulfilled—then necessity for trained ability.

There are few businessmen who do not appreciate the value of advertising as a source of profit to the individual business. There remain some who are unable to appreciate merchandising results, due to the failure to stimulate the time and quality element in advertising. This discussion does not pertain to the value of the producer and distributor but from the larger consideration of the public. Advertising is of greater economic significance than is usually appreciated.

DEMAND IS ELASTIC

First, the demand for products has more or less elasticity; that is, changes more or less with the change in price. Likewise the family budget has more or less plasticity; that is, in a margin which may be diverted into any one of several different channels. The average family has close to twenty-five per cent of its income available for a broad selection of commodities. The producer and merchant have not coordinated their conditions. Money spent in advertising to stimulate a demand which is elastic yields a different return than when spent upon products for which the demand is inelastic. Likewise an appeal to that part of the budget known as miscellaneous or sundry expenditure will have quite a different effect than when directed along the line of tradition and necessity.

ADVERTISING PROTECTS CONSUMER

Second, advertising protects the consumer. Such an argument for publicity may not be as strong as the present time as during that period of business when more adulteration and irresponsibility prevailed; but continues to be a vital protection to the buyer. "When in doubt buy an article well established through advertising" is a safeguard of no little economic significance.

Third, large economies depend upon mass production; mass production depends upon mass sales. One of the chief reasons why the farmer receives a smaller proportion of the consumer's dollars is that in the fact that methods of retailing do not make possible the lowest distributing cost. Advertising builds up large scale industry through stimulating mass sales and is therefore one of the most important forces in preventing diminishing cost in production and distribution.

Fourth, advertising maintains greater stability and continuity in business. The extension of the period of production and the large capital investment necessary have made not only severe competitions but also the necessity for stability and continuity. In other words, modern business is a growing concern with tremendous overhead and current expenses. A delay of even a few hours duration entails an unusual loss to the owners as well as to society. Sales must be assured, not spasmodic orders, but a steady stream of buying which will insure the continuity necessary for the realization of economies. Consistent, well organized advertising constitutes an insurance that sales will not fall below normal.

PONY AUTOPLATE
ANNOUNCEMENT

We beg to announce that we have just added an automatic plate cooling device to our Pony Autoplate Stereotyping Machine.

The Pony Autoplate now casts, finishes, and cools its printing plates, and delivers them ready for press.

It thus replaces all of the plate making apparatus in a foundry, from casting box to cooling tub, including finishing blocks. Hand finishing is no longer necessary.

It can be operated by one man. The price remains the same.

At the A.N.P.A. Convention

It has been hard to get some newspaper publishers to realize that there are now Linotypes so flexible that they can set any line in the paper. The thing seems too good to be true.

And so for the A.N.P.A. Convention this year we have prepared an exhibit that will present the range and adaptability of the Text and Display Linotype in a very forceful and unforgettable way.

First a specimen page was set combining all the problems of front-page and advertising page display. Then part of this page was photographically enlarged to twelve times its natural size so that it would take up a whole corner of the room. In the middle of the page a hole was cut out big enough to admit a Model 21 Linotype and a magazine rack. Ribbons run in from the various type faces on the page to the magazines showing how the entire page was set from one machine—all from one keyboard, and each font completely contained in one magazine.

A cordial invitation is extended to all newspaper executives to call at the East Room of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel during the week of April 23-27 to see this exhibit. If you are unable to see it, we have prepared a folder illustrating it which will be mailed to you on request.
NEWS CORRESPONDENTS OUTWIT SOVIET BAN.

CENSORSHIP TIGHTENED, MacKENZIE AND McCULLAGH FIND WAY OF SENDINGスタートNG NEWS TO AMERICA — HAD TO LEAVE RUSSIA TO DO IT.

News censorship in Russia is increasing in stringency, rather than relaxing, this week's news from correspondents for two important American papers reveals. F. A. MacKenzie of the Chicago Daily News and Francis McCullagh of the New York Herald have had to leave the borders of Russia in order to cable news about Russia that told the truth.

It is apparent that the overtures recently made by the Association of Foreign Correspondents at Moscow, of which Mr. MacKenzie is president, have failed to find appreciative response from the Soviet government. The correspondents' organization, as told in The Fourth Estate two weeks ago, had approached the Soviet commissar for foreign affairs with the idea of obtaining modification of the censorship, even inviting Commissar Tchitcher in to appoint one of his staff to become an honorary member of the correspondents' association.

How little an effect this had on the Russian dictatorship is vividly demonstrated in a dispatch Mr. MacKenzie sent his paper this week. After stating that Premier Lenin's death is only a matter of a short time, and that the news has been kept from most of Russia itself, Mr. MacKenzie wrote:

"Because of certain difficulties with the Russian censorship I have come over to Warsaw from Moscow, but expect to return later this week. Formerly lenient, the Soviet censorship has recently become exceedingly strict, as to expression of both fact and opinion. There have been several hectic scenes between the censor at Moscow and the foreign newspaper correspondents. One correspondent tore up his copy and threw the fragments on the floor after the censor had finished making his excisions. "If all the correspondents treated their work in that fashion I should keep (Continued on Thirtieth Page)
PERRY AND GUEST WELcomed BY PENSACOLA.

ENTHUSIASTIC WELCOME GIVEN TO DR. ALBERT SHAW ON VISIT TO FLORIDA CITY — NEWSPAPER DEVOTES ENTIRE PAGE TO ACCOUNT — AIRPLANE NEWS FOR CUTS.

Dr. Albert Shaw, editor, essayist and publicist, who was the guest recently at Pensacola, Fla., of John H. Perry of the Perry-Lloyd Jones Newspapers, was given a rousing welcome by Pensacolans. The Pensacola Journal, one of the Perry-Lloyd Jones newspapers, devoted an entire page on April 1 to welcoming Dr. Albert Shaw.

Dr. Shaw was born July 23, 1857, at New London, Ohio. He received his education at Johns Hopkins University, preparing himself for his chosen profession of journalism. In 1884, he joined the editorial staff of the Minneapolis Tribune, holding that position until 1891, when he assumed the chief editorship and management of the American edition of the Review of Reviews, which position he still holds.

PENN Sylvania Dailies Issue Valuable Book on County Industries.

The Chester Times and Morning Republican have issued a most valuable and useful handbook and almanac for 1923, giving ready reference pertaining to political, industrial and civic life in Delaware County, with authentic facts and figures.

The volume, which contains 166 pages, is not a one-man endeavor, but the product of many minds, each following a distinct trail. The work treats of the city of Chester exhaustively, but it is broader than mere municipal boundaries, the aim of the publishers having been to glean some useful data concerning every community in the county. On the cover of the hand book is a cut of the Times and Republican Building.

From time to time, as necessity may suggest, the present volume will be revised, amended and amplified, and it and its successive numbers should make a useful series of books well worthy of preservation.

JOSEPH GARRETSON Quits Newspaper Field.

Because of ill health, Joseph T. Garretson, for twenty-four years managing editor of the Cincinnati Times-Star, and one of the best known newspaper men in the country, has left newspaper work. Moses Strauss, for many years city editor of the Times-Star, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Garretson.

Mr. Garretson has also withdrawn as president of the Associated Press Ohio Editors’ Association, to which office he was recently re-elected. Mr. Garretson became ill about a fortnight ago. His present plans are to retire to his home at Terrace Park, on the Little Miami River, and to rest quietly during the coming summer.

SOPHIE IRENE LOEB SPEAKS ON BEING SERIOUS IN ONE'S PROFESSION AND SAYS ANYTHING CAN BE ACCOMPLISHED BY THOSE SERIOUS IN THEIR WORK.

A number of women writers for New York newspapers were the guests of honor last Saturday at a luncheon given by the Theatrical Press Representatives' Association at Keen's Chop House, New York. The speakers were Sophie Irene Loeb of the New York Evening World and Jane Dixon of the New York Evening Telegram. Other newspaper women present were,

SOPHIE IRENE LOEB

Margaret Mooers Marshall of the Evening World; Zoe Beckley of the Mail; Eleanor Stanton, Sun; and Sarah McCougall of the Sunday World.

The speakers were introduced by Commander Wells Hawkes, well-known press representative and president of the American Press Association, who declared the object of the open luncheon was to have talks by persons who could give press representatives something to think about, and also as a token of the cordial relations between the women who edit and write and the men who send them.

Nellie Revell now confined to St. Vincent's Hospital, who is a charter member of the organization, sent a bright and interesting letter which was read by William D. Coxey, and in which she wrote: "I have always loved the smell of copy and printer's ink, and I have also loved the theatre with its romance and color and I could be happy with either, were father fair charmer away."

Miss Dixon spoke of the pleasant relations existing between newspaper and press representatives, and said it was a splendid thing to be able to look to the latter for new ideas.

Miss Loeb talked emphatically on being serious in one's profession, and said that anything can be accomplished by men and women who were serious about their profession.

MEGERTHALER ENGINEER TALKS ON THE LINOTYPE.

John R. Rogers, consulting engineer of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, delivered an interesting illustrated talk on the linotype for members of the Type Machine Engineers' Guild of Chicago.

Mr. Rogers, who has been identified with the makers of the linotype almost from the beginning of the company and who has played a leading part in the development of the master composing machine, discussed the history of the linotype and took it up step by step the evolution of the linotype from the single letter machine to the much more versatile and wider ranged models in use today in sixty-three different countries, and producing correct compositions in half a hundred different languages.

In speaking of the world influence of the more than 45,000 linotypes manufactured Mr. Rogers called attention to the fact that in Japan English newspapers are produced on the linotype by native operators. In China more than twenty job offices and newspapers use the machines. India has over one hundred linotypes, nearly all operated by natives only, who have a slight knowledge of mechanical principles and of the English language. Linotypes are in use in Managua, Brazil, a thousand miles from the mouth of the Amazon River; in La Paz, Bolivia, more than 13,000 feet above sea level; and in all other cities of importance in South America, including Puntà Arenas, the most southerly inhabited town in the world; in several cities in Alaska; in the Philippine Islands; in the Hawaiian Islands; in the West Indies; in Fiji; in the Galapagos Islands; in many cities in Siberia; in the principal cities of both north and South Africa; in Nairobi, British East Africa; and the heart of the big game country.

A battery of linotypes is in operation in the Vatican, at Rome; more than a dozen battleships of the United States Navy have master composing machines aboard, and Linotypes are used by the government printing offices of more than forty countries.

If the average yearly output of all of the above-listed cities today were placed in a line, the line would extend around the sun and back to the earth again; or it would reach the moon and back more than two hundred times. If the machines were placed side by side they would cover forty miles of space. Topping of four thousand booksroom either they could make possible the composing of four thousand books in a single day.

An American journalist, W. L. Moody, Jr., was made on March 22 last that W. L. Moody, Jr., trustee, of Galveston, had purchased the property from A. H. Belo and Company, former publishers.

The change in ownership ended proprietary rights held under the name of A. H. Belo & Company since that corporation was organized in 1881 and a lineage of possession handed down from 1866, when the late Colonel A. H. Belo first acquired an interest in the publication.

The Galveston News was established on April 11, 1842. To those familiar with Texas history, and especially with the development of newspaper making, this length of service carries remarkable significance. It means that when the News first came off the press, Texas was a republic, a wilderness domain just emerged from the domination of Mexico; it means that in the columns of the News was heralded the fact of statehood in the union, and that the paper survived during the gruelling period of the civil war and the subsequent reconstruction days.

That the News marched hand in hand with the later progress of Texas the present existence of a daily journal honored by state and even national prestige bears testimony.

The story of how the policy of the News primarily to record current events in an accurate and impartial manner, and how this policy was vindicated by success, forms one of the most interesting studies in the history of American journalism.

Except for the name, the News may properly trace its existence back to March 26 1841. Samuel Bangs, a printer who first visited Galveston island with Jean Lafitte, the gentleman buccaneer, on that date started the Daily Galvestonian, of which George H. French was editor. The paper suspended publication early in 1842, but before its demise became the property of George H. and Henry R. French.

Unwilling to abandon the business of a publisher, George H. French in April, 1842 revived the paper under the name of the Daily News. Thus began the News.

Willard Richardson, the man who more than any other influenced the destiny of the News during the formative period, became its editor in 1844.

Colonel Belo, a young North Carolinian who had served during the war as a lieutenant colonel of cavalry, came to Texas to build up his war-time fortunes and in September, 1865, joined the News. He was admitted into partnership on March 21, 1866. From that time on Col. Belo rapidly advanced to a position of leadership in direction of the paper's business affairs and in 1876 was elected president of the company.

Under Colonel Belo's foresighted direction the News continued to prosper and it was decided to establish another paper in North Texas. After much deliberation and selection the Dallas News began publication on October 1, 1885. Colonel Belo, now president, was made general manager of A. H. Belo & Company, as business manager.

Mr. Dealey began his connection with the News at Galveston as office boy in 1874, became foreman of the mailing room in 1882 and in 1886 was elected an editor. The Dallas News began publication with George H. French, now general manager of A. H. Belo & Company as business manager.

Mr. Dealey had risen in the company to a position of leadership in the affairs of the paper and in 1919 was elected president of the company.

HOW CHICAGO TRIBUNE RUNS ITS LIBRARY.

Miss Mildred Burke, librarian for the Chicago Tribune, has indexed every book and document so that any Tribune employee looking for a moment any treatise on religion, philosophy or any other subject. The files have been systematized so that anyone who can read has no difficulty in getting the paper for which he is searching.

The modern newspaper endeavors to base its statements on facts. It is not long ago that people in general depended on magazines for the current events and held to the opinion that newspapers were unreliable, says Miss Burke.

Today as many as half a dozen editions of a paper may appear, with the accompanying speed libraries for the Chicago Tribune, have indexed every book and document so that any Tribune employee looking for a moment any treatise on religion, philosophy or any other subject. The files have been systematized so that anyone who can read has no difficulty in getting the paper for which he is searching.

A Treasure in Facts and Ideas—

The ultimate significance of the day-to-day developments in journalism and advertising strikes home only when you see them spread upon the record.

Facts and ideas are the tools of both professions. Day by day and week by week they expand and increase, becoming in time trends, movements, and customs.

The when, the how, the who, and the where are spread upon the record in the

Bring The Treasure Home.
HEARTY WELCOME FOR HEARST IN BALTIMORE.

GOVERNOR, MAYOR AND BUSINESS MEN HONOR NEW OWNER OF BALTIMORE NEWS AND AMERICAN AT DINNER—WARM WELCOME HOME FOR PUBLISHER J. E. CULLEN.

Baltimore extended a remarkable welcome Tuesday evening to William Randolph Hearst at a dinner at the Emerson Hotel given by Mayor Broening in celebration of Mr. Hearst's purchase of the Baltimore News and the American. The dinner was given in the name of the people of Baltimore, and resolved itself into a notable journalistic event.

"Welcome home" was the greeting to John E. Cullen, who returns to Baltimore as Mr. Hearst's newspaper representative in charge of both properties. Mr. Cullen, in a brief speech, told how deeply he had been touched by the greeting accorded by his home town.

Mr. Hearst said that his entry into Baltimore was also somewhat in the nature of a homecoming, his family in both branches having been Southern people. But, he added, "It isn't a homecoming, but I feel about coming to Baltimore; the important question is how Baltimore feels about it."

Of the nature of this feeling he was assured. On behalf of the city Mayor Broening metaphorically extended the hands of hospitality; for the state, Governor Ritchie spoke words of warm felicitation; as the dean of the newspaper fraternity of Maryland, Gen. Felix Agus expressed the pleasure of the fourth estate on Mr. Hearst introducing his methods and policies of journalism into Baltimore.

The achievements of Mr. Hearst in the newspaper world and his ambitions for his Baltimore newspapers were recited by Arthur Brisbane and Mr. Cullen spoke more in detail of the relations between Mr. Hearst's Baltimore papers and the city itself.

As head of the American for 57 years, General Agus described to Mr. Hearst its history and its active participation in all the great events of the nation from before the days of the Revolution, and rejoiced that the old and honored paper had come into the hands of "one who by his own industry and progressiveness holds such a high place among the publishers of America."

Charles H. Grasty, as former publisher of the News, also voiced grate-

This may be radicalism, but it is constructive radicalism, conservative radicalism. It makes for the preservation of our liberties, the protection of our properties and the perpetuation of our American institutions.

MAYOR AND GOVERNOR STRESS GOOD NEWSPAPER'S VALUE TO THE COMMUNITY.

Mayor Broening said in part: "Mr. Hearst, Baltimore appreciates the confidence you show in assuming the ownership of the American and the Baltimore News, and the evidence of your faith in the city's future possibilities. We may be a bit slow in getting familiar with a newcomer, but once we are convinced that the person we meet is worth while, as we expect such a person to feel toward us, then the friendship of Baltimore is manifested itself in boundless and countless ways and proves that friendship is vital, fervent, actual reality. "Like you, many others have come, have been impressed with Baltimore's advantages and have remained, establishing their business enterprises and are now among its strongest advocates.

"You come to Baltimore at a most opportune time. I am the head of a vast advertising business, a proprietor of two big newspapers. You have come to the right place. Baltimore was the pioneer in the newspaper line, in fact one of the very papers you own, the Baltimore American, is held to be the oldest daily continuing newspaper in the United States, having had a continuous existence since 1772, with a solitary exception, September 12, 1814, when the paper and his staff shut up shop. Shouldered their muskets and marched off to help defeat the British at North Point."

Besides welcoming William Randolph Hearst, Mr. John E. Cullen of The Baltimore Sun, the New York Times of the News and the American and promising co-operation with Mr. Hearst in the development of the state, Governor Ritchie in his speech on the relations between the press and the people and their government, paying high tribute to newspaper men from his experience with them.

"It is not very often, Mr. Hearst, that an occasion arises in which the citizenship of a city like Baltimore assembles to welcome some one who has decided to cast a large portion of his interests with them, said Governor Ritchie.

"Perhaps those of us who are actively in public life realize what a newspaper does to a community, its helpfulness, its constructive service, more than others. But perhaps those of us who are actively in public life realize the importance of the right kind of publicity along other lines more than a good many of you gentlemen who are not actively in it realize.

"I am very glad to be able to take advantage of this opportunity for just a moment of saying that I think of the striking things which came to my mind is the absolute fairness of the average newspaper. I have anything, I have less patience with the man in public life, or in any kind of life, who is all that time worrying that the newspaper is not treating him fairly, who is not getting the kind of deal that he ought to have because the facts are not being presented in the press in a way as they ought to be.

"I do not agree with him. There may be some papers that are not fair, perhaps most papers at times may not be fair, if so they are doing nothing but shaming the whole human frailties that are always shown.

"My observation of newspapers and my experience with them is that all of them give to the man who comes into contact with them exactly what they deserve and in the long run give them good, if they deserve it, and give them ill if they deserve it.

"If I may say one other thing in the same connection it is the fact very largely to the very splendid caliber of most of the newspaper reporters, around whom the work of a newspaper is built.

"It is really right strange for us to feel in Baltimore that a couple of weeks ago to most of us William Randolph Hearst was but a name. It was a name that we knew was attached to one of the great and successful constructive publishers of the country, but it was not a name that we associated with ourselves locally or thought that we could associate ourselves locally with.

"And yet overnight the change has been wrought and in that short space of time we find many of Baltimore's best here tonight taking pleasure in the privilege of welcoming you and showing you what little honor we can on this occasion.

WORDS OF PRAISE FOR CULLEN.

"I do not know anything that gives us in this city more genuine pleasure than the fact that our papers in Baltimore are going to be under the direction of Jack Cullen and Mr. John E. Cullen."

"Mr. Cullen has been in the newspaper business for years before and then, after other activities for a few more years, he went out to Milwaukee... for you... I know I am simply saying what is in the heart of everybody here, that we were all very much disappointed when he left.

"We were distressed when he left because we were not only losing a real friend, but we thought we were losing a man who is a real fighter in the community, because this community, like all others, has its groups and its crowds—perhaps you would not call them factions—but it has its groups that work along together with each other.

"It is not very often that you find one that belongs to one group who is friendly to the other group. I think Jack Cullen is one of the exceptions. I do not know of any newspaper men, business men, whose affection and respect 'Jack' Cullen did not have.

PUBLISHER CULLEN RESPONDS TO ENTHUSIASTIC GREETING FROM HIS HOME TOWN.

To a double welcome, both personally and as Baltimore representative of William Randolph Hearst's newspaper enterprise, John E. Cullen spoke freely and earnestly as follows: "I have been as happily coupled with wealth as Mr. Hearst has," said Mr. Cullen. "Probably if I steal with his successful organization that handicap might come to me in years. General Agnus, I was at the get together... I get greater joy out of anything, even that... in four months of my life, that four months that I have spent in Mr. Hearst's organization.

"When I left Baltimore some of my friends thought I was turning my back on big opportunities. As a matter of fact, some one had opened the door to the best opportunities I have ever had..."

"The very name of a Hearst newspaper to Baltimore is in my mind, a much bigger and better thing than the word 'advertising' or any of the other splendid things that the board of trade and other civic and commercial bodies of this city have done. There is not anybody in Baltimore who stands for Baltimore and whose ideas are for the progress and the betterment of the citizens of Baltimore. I cannot welcome a Hearst newspaper.

"But the fellow who has got something to go across to the public, the town, is going to find it mightily difficult to welcome a Hearst newspaper, because that has been the story in every city in which a Hearst newspaper has ever gone.

GENERAL AGNUS FELICITATES BALTIMORE AND MR. HEARST ON NEW OWNERSHIP.

Rejuvenation of the veteran Baltimore American in the hands of William Randolph Hearst was the vision in the mind of General Agnus, for over half a century the head of that newspaper. and he observed that during the oldest newspaper of the country had come into the hands of a master publisher.

"For more than half a century..."

"To you, Mr. Hearst, I may say that I had the pleasure of meeting your distinguished father, the senator from California, and also your good mother whose great liberality to one of the doll shows which I always..."

This week's news from Russia brings to mind a vivid mental picture of a patrician Gulliver in the hands of the Lilliputians. So strong are the chains which manacle that benighted nation to the level of the Middle Ages that representatives of the world press find it forced to flee to a neighboring country to file dispatches that tell the truth.

Dr. V. S. Mackenzie, correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, made journalistic history this week. He cabled this week from his refuge in Warsaw. Although his story dealt with details of revolution and counter-revolution within the benighted nation, the most revealing information it contained was the describing the tsarist censorship.

The mysterious disappearance of the New York Herald, is now out of Russia, sending his newspaper the real Russia, not the mellow, ever and anon, at the strange children of the Press. It is obvious that the censorship is at work.

"Uplifter Nichols has introduced a bill which, if it is enacted, he says will make the newspaper business a profession. Bless the little man's soul, it is a profession and has been for 200 years, and no one, not even Greeley and Charles Dana—one of the noblest, most honorable and patriotic of the Press—ever dared to propose for consecutive insertions when paid in advance: One month, 10 cents; two months, 15 cents; three months, 20 cents; six months, 80 cents; one year, 120 cents.

Small advertisements under classified headings, such as Help Wanted, For Sale, To Let, Instruction board for examinations, Office Necessities, 20 cents an ad. Even the plumbers and the cabbies are protected. Situations wanted, 15 cents an ad. Please send cash with order.

Fraudulent or questionable advertising is excluded and the publisher reserves the right to edit all copy so as to conform with the rules and policies of the paper.

For advertising rate, forms, etc., see page 8. Advertisement space should be reserved as early in the week as possible to insure position. Forms close Thursday. Advertising Rate, 50 cents a column inch. Rates on cut lines to the page, $2800.

Smaller advertisements in special position, call for separate rate.

Discounts for consecutive insertions when paid in advance: One month, 10 cents; two months, 15 cents; three months, 20 cents; six months, 80 cents; one year, 120 cents.

Advertsing "PEP" COMES A SERIOUS CROPPER

A department store in Hamilton, Ont., discovered that it wanted more pep in its advertising. It subscribed to the services of a advertising specialist, but the result was disastrous. The store is going to appeal the verdict. But Miss Garland's views as to what a store should advertise are pretty good advice.

THE COMPLETE ANSWER TO CRITICS OF THE PRESS

Hardly a day passes that does not bring some criticism or other from various elements or factions that have ideas as to how the newspapers should be run. In most of these, however, we find that the persons who are not even remotely likely to study the matter, called upon to direct a publication, so that there is little danger that they will learn the fallacy of their theories by experience.

The editors who perform the tasks of journalism and cope every day with the common and uncommon problems of mankind are therefore left plugging away with only criticism from the wise ones.

Mrs. Osborne Leonard, who lives outside London, has astonished Sir Francis Newbery, noted in the Daily World, of which Eugene Loring is publisher and editor.

Mr. Newbery, who with the Papal States decided to pass a bill to control the press, is treating the subject quite seriously. If the bill is not passed, the Press will be left in the hands of the public.

Mr. Webster was born in Parkersburg, W. Va. When he was a child his family moved to Tomahawk, Wis., where, it is interesting to note, in the village school Webster's marks in drawing were always the lowest. After a brief attendance at an art school in Chicago, Mr. Webster went to Denver and joined the Republican and then the Post, as a cartoonist, at a salary that ranged from nothing to fifteen dollars a week. "MY IDEA IS TO HELP THE SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM," EDITOR TELLS SENATE.
"Every man has an idea, and my idea is to do something for the school of journalism at the University of Oklahoma," said Edgar S. Bronson, one of the publishers of the El Reno, Okla., American, and

OKLAHOMA PAPER SUED.
The Oklahoma City News has been sued for $100,000 damages by K. Morrison for his statement of his conviction for violating the liquor law by a federal court.

The Stroud Democrat declares "nothing fails but the male when it comes to violating the law, but just give publicity to their illegal acts and you will see their fury armed."

EDGAR S. BRONSON.
secretary of the Oklahoma Press Association, in a talk before the state recently.

"It is for this purpose that I have decided to give $10,000 in cash and a valuable Indian collection to the state if it will appropriate $75,000 for a journalism building at Norman," said Mr. Bronson.

He reminded the senators that in this way he believed he was helping in producing better editors, and consequently helping to lessen the number of libel suits in the state. He also expressed the hope that his gift, the first of its kind to be given in the history of Oklahoma, would be an incentive to wealthy men of the state to make similar offers to the institutions of higher education.

NEWSPAPER EXPEDITION NOW IN WILDS OF SAHARA.
The Chicago Tribune is sending into the Sahara desert an expedition for the purpose of securing information, and possibly better developing the Timbuctoo country and the Algerian-Moroccan frontier about 800 miles southwest of Algiers.

The objective of the expedition is three months away and is located 2,000 miles across the sands to the southward. The finishing point of the trip is on the Niger river in French West Africa.

TRADE JOURNAL TO OBSERVE SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF ORGANIZATION.
The American News Trade Journal, to celebrate its sixtieth anniversary, is planning a series of historical articles in the trade journal, which will cover not only the development of the news company, but also a fairly complete outline history of the publishing industry. Herbert Hungerford is editor of the publication.
AD CLUB PUTS ITS OWN ARMY IN THE FIELD.

MOBILIZED PRIMARILY FOR PURSUIT AND DISTRIBUTION OF USEFUL NEWS AND INFORMATION—THE AD CLUB MOST EFFICIENTLY ORGANIZED IN WORLD.

Ten "major generals" and one hundred "colonels" have been appointed by the Advertising Club of New York to head divisions of the club's membership in a new system for spreading news and information among the club's members. The plan will be operative next fall when the club moves into its new $500,000 home at 23 Park Avenue.

The system will be used to inform club members within an hour of important developments and news of interest to advertising men, through a series of telephone calls. The club membership can be quickly mobilized by it for charity or emergencies.

When the executive committee of the club, a few nights ago, President C. K. Woodbridge outlined plans for the system which he believes will make the club the most efficiently organized in the world. The officers and executives of the club will act as a general staff or headquarters. Directly subordinate to the staff are ten major generals. Each major general has ten colonels responsible to him, ten captains, and so on down the line until the entire club membership is accounted for.

Each general or colonel is in command of a section of the city and the officers serving under him are all active for the club.

The uses to which this system may be put are many, but here is one that will illustrate its efficacy: Mr. Smith, a captain of the club, meets Lord X, the distinguished English publisher at dinner one night and learns that Lord X has no engagement for luncheon the next day. He extends the publisher an invitation to speak at a luncheon at the club the next day, and at his first opportunity gets in touch with the general so they can talk it over. The general then calls up the ten major generals who in turn call up the colonels in their command, and so on, until every member of the club is informed that Lord X will speak at the luncheon the next day.

Many other such possibilities exist, and the club membership is acutely aware of the opportunities and benefits this system will afford.

HANSON CONTROLS MONTGOMERY ADVERTISER.

BIRMINGHAM NEWS PUBLISHER BUYS THREE-QUARTERS OF STOCK FROM MAJ. SCREWS’ ESTATE AND C. H. ALLEN—W. T. SHEEHAN RETAINS ONE FOURTH.

Victor H. Hanson, publisher of the Birmingham News and formerly advertising manager of the Montgomery Advertiser, has purchased a three-fourths interest in Advertiser. Mr. Hanson purchased the entire holdings of the heirs of the late Major W. W. Screws, amounting to fifty per cent of the total capital stock of the Advertiser Company. He has also purchased the one-fourth interest and will be associated with Victor H. Hanson, in the conduct of the paper, as vice-president and editor.

Mr. Hanson bought the Advertiser Company from the estate of W. T. Sheehan, vice-president and treasurer. Mr. Sheehan retains his interest in the paper, and Mr. Hanson will direct the management of the newspaper as president.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Advertiser Company resulted in the election of the following officers: Victor H. Hanson, president; W. T. Sheehan, vice-president and treasurer; R. F. Hudson, secretary and treasurer.

ST. LOUIS GLOBE-DEMOCRAT AWARDS CASH PRIZES IN AD CONTEST.

"What is a Want Ad?" was the question asked every employee of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Three prizes were offered for the best answers. The prizes were $25 for the best answer, $10 for the second, and $5 for the third. Each participant in the contest was permitted to suggest as many answers as he pleased. The total number of individuals who participated in the contest was 201, and the total number of answers received was 790.

The contest was very spirited and unusual interest was shown in evidence during its progress throughout the entire building, and every department of the newspaper was represented. The replies received have provided a large number of new ideas that are as easily adaptable to a classified promotion advertising.

F. Lansing Ryan, vice-president; Charles M. Houser, vice-president and manager; and Charles W. Nix, classified advertising manager, were the judges.

The first prize was won by Miss Blanche Ruhman, employed in the job press department. Her answer was—"A Want Ad is the most convenient method of becoming known to the greatest number of people in the quickest, surest and cheapest way."

The second prize was won by William G. Zink of the advertising room of the composing room. His answer was—"A Want Ad is the modern answer to the need of the multitude."

Joseph Traxler of the service and promotion department was given the third prize. His definition was—"A Want Ad is the shortest route to the phrase 'I need' and 'I have.'"

VICTOR H. HANSON.

FORMER NEWSPAPER MAN’S STORY APPEARS IN BOOKMAN.

Henry Goodman, whose story, "When the Tide Rises," appeared in the Bookman for March, is a former newspaperman. He was born in Romania and came to this country in 1900 at the age of seven. He was graduated from Columbia University and has taken his degree in the school of journalism. He then read copy on the New York Tribune and at the same time translating from the Yiddish stories of Raisin and Peretz which were being published in East and West, a New York publication no longer existing. Later Mr. Goodman went to the New York World as a reporter, and left there to enter publicity work.

For Sale a Punch in Your Display Advertising Space

by a "hot shot" Salesman with ten years behind his pen, and whose monthly figures tell the story. More space sold to customers than the "other fellow" says he ever would run. The secret is knowing how—when and what. It might take eight hours a day. It might take twelve. What is different is the space as the space is there.

My references from my customers tell their own story. Guarantee 2,000 inches weekly. Line of your staff, give me all the "chronicles," "dye-pot"; "don't believe in advertising," "went run," "no results from last ad," and then turn me loose on that crowd. I will "snow" your former records every month. Working but up the ladder I go.

My speed is 1,000 inches from a grocery store in one week, and I have an average business of $200.00 a Saturday. Let him tell you. A man's store whose cash register is telling a mighty tale. A drug store that is stepping a lively pace.

I carry a rugged range of English, rough and ready, double-barreled, deep-chested, built for storm and strife. A gentleman Jim-crouch and tender, according to circumstances—rushed with a hollow ad, and a riot with a man's. Revealing polish, but concealing that "landing" punch—tailed for speed but built for blizzards. The rough kind are as soft as a Government job, my finish as tough as a thumbscrew to your service.

My character is plain. My age is 24, my salary $100.00 a week. Put together with workmanship that is a genuine joy for your bookkeepers and you behold I come high but I come through. Don't write me your IP's I'll all, prove my punch. Prove years. Write me Box 5851, care The Fourth Estate. Unless you can pay the price don't write.

MANAGER OF CALIFORNIA CLUB TELLS VALUE OF PUBLICITY.

Publicity and community advertising, particularly through the newspaper, was the subject of an interesting talk before the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce by Thomas G. Armstrong, secretary manager of the San Diego California Club.

The development of the community advertising idea in California was briefly traced by the speaker.
San Diego was the first city in this country to embark on a systematic community advertising campaign, and the success attained was such that Los Angeles, great as that city has become, is spending $250,000 to attract home-seekers, and visitors. San Diego is spending $400,000 for the same purpose.

As a result of the tremendous amount of advertising now peeping in Eastern and middle western newspapers he said, the eyes of the country are in reality focused upon California, he said. Every community in the state is bound to benefit from the influx of home-seekers and visitors, he declared.

SON OF DRAMATIC CRITIC ON THE STAGE.
Harold Waldridge, who plays the role of Morris, the office boy, in Polly Pufn on the Little Theater, New York, is a newspaper family. He was born in New Orleans just a few years ago, and his father was dramatic editor and critic of the New Orleans Pufn. When Waldridge was sixteen years old he ran away to Oklahoma during the oil rush, remained there a few months and came to New York. He has appeared in several successful plays. In addition to his playing at the Little Theater, he is a student at Columbia University taking up English course, and also attends the lecture course of drama and dramatic art.

PAYING VISIT TO FRIENDS IN COLUMBUS.
John C. Eastman, publisher of the Chicago Daily Journal, was the guest for a few days recently of old friends in Columbus, Ohio, having taken “time off” a very busy career to renew his acquaintance.

Mr. Eastman was a student at Ohio State University, a member of the class of '85, and a few years later employed as a reporter on the staff of the Ohio State Journal. This was the beginning of his notable newspaper career through all its stages to the proprietorship of a metropolitan daily.

The advertising agency of Farnsworth, Brown & Schaefer, New York, has changed its name to Farnsworth & Brown. There is no change in personnel, Mr. Schaefer having withdrawn last January.

Rhey T. Snodgrass, formerly president and treasurer of Snodgrass & Gaynes, New York, and more recently with the Cowen Advertising Agency, has joined the advertising staff of the Cosmopolitan on April 16.

Harry H. Cromwell has become a member of the staff of the S. M. Maase Company, Cleveland, and has been incorporated under the name of the S. M. Maase Company, Cleveland, by Mr. Maase, president and treasurer, and K. H. Kolpe is secretary.

The advertising business conducted under his own name by S. M. Maase at Cleveland, has been transferred to the company's Toledo office.

AGENCY MOVES TO LARGER QUARTERS IN TERMINAL.

The new offices occupy the entire seventh floor and there are entrances on Forty-first and Forty-second street, an increase of fifty per cent over the former quarters.

NAMED AD MANAGER FOR CONVENTION.

J. L. Sperling, advertising manager of the Cleveland Trust Company, Cleveland, has been appointed chairman of the convention of the Financial Advertisers' Association, which will be held during the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Atlantic City, June 3 to 7.

took great interest in contributed solargely to its success and helped make hosts of little children happy on Christmas Day. "So, as I bid you welcome, to Baltimore, I feel I am extending my hand to a son of old friends as well as to one who by his own industry and progressiveness holds such a high place among the publishers of America."

THE碣SUMER publisher of the News, Charles H. Grasty joined in the general gratification that William Randolph Hearst had acquired this newspaper, together with the American, and bespoke the confidence of the advertisers and the publishers under Mr. Hearst's ownership.

Mr. Grasty was able to get up for the purpose of associating myself with the good things that have been said about my son-in-law," Mr. Grasty said, "he is one of my boys, and the honor that has been paid him by Mr. Hearst I share.

"Mr. Hearst and I, perhaps, have differed; I, in my humble way to the greatest craftsman in the newspaper business, in method and policy, but I am glad to say that here I consider him the greatest craftsman in journalism on either side of the Atlantic, and I am glad to say a word about him personally. He is one of the most charming men and the best employer, perhaps, if I except my own employer, Mr. Ochs, in journalism, and he has a sense of humor that you will learn to appreciate."

HEART CLOSE-UPS REVEALED BY BRISBANE.

PUBLISHER STILL STAYS UP NIGHTS TO GET EARLY EDITIONS OF HIS PAPERS—HOW HE AND HIS EDITOR "GROWED" TOGETHER TOLD AT BALTIMORE.

Arthur Brisbane, editor of the New York Evening Journal and right bower of Mr. Hearst in the editorial staff of the Hearst's newspapers, provided a remarkable close-up of his chief at the dinner Tuesday night. Intimate glimpses of Mr. Hearst and his personality reveal that although he ranks as the biggest publisher in the country, and was born to wealth, he still burns the midnight oil and is a veritable slave to his work.

"I think the interesting thing in Mr. Hearst's career is that he has grown in spite of wealth," Mr. Brisbane declared. "Anybody can succeed in spite of poverty, because, if you do not succeed, you die. You must live. But to be born with the handicap of wealth, to have a rich father, to be born with millions around you knowing that you can do what you choose; to have a father with magnificent racehorses, magnificent real estate properties and great mines and to be able to go to anywhere you please and go to Paris, London, Moscow, and have your own plane made and your money put in the bank, that would be quite a temptation.

Mr. Hearst has worked. He has worked like a slave since his boyhood at Harvard. My father-in-law was his classmate in that institution. He came up with the present head of the Hearst newspaper staff. He worked on his own papers from morning to night when I ran the Evening Journal for him twenty-five years ago, and ran the morning American in New York.

"I went down to work about four o'clock in the morning, and he came back. We lived together on Lexington avenue in the same house. He came back from his papers at four o'clock in the morning.

"Every day he has at least fifteen or twenty men, the heads of all his newspapers, up at his house. He works with them up until two o'clock in the afternoon. He stays up at night to see the morning papers come out. He gives absolutely slavish, uniring effort to his papers, wears himself out—God alone knows why he does it.

"You have here a big man in the business. When Schwab came here you had a big iron man. You have in Mr. Hearst a newspaper man ten times as big as Schwab, because there are other iron men, but there is no other Hearst.

"I congratulate Hearst on having acquired these properties in a splendid city like Baltimore, and I congratulate the mayor when he spoke of getting a big league because he has in Mr. Hearst the man who is himself the big league of newspapers.

HARD TO REMEMBER ALL.

"I do not think I have mentioned all his papers, because, my wife is a mother of a large family—hard to remember all the children and I do not think Mr. Hearst himself has the memory to mention them all without hesitating. He works on them. He has his whole life in them, and I want to tell you something about his work—a thing I said one day to Brisbane Walker, who is my distant cousin, who owned the Cosmopolitan Magazine that Mr. Hearst now owns—and I will add a parenthesis there: When he bought it from Walker it had a circulation of 250,000 and sold for ten cents.

"Some gentleman who has since retired from the field by force of circumstances, remarked that, of course, Hearst understands a one-cent newspaper, but when it comes to bringing it up to something of its depth. And now that magazine has more than a million circulation and its price is thirty-five cents."

Kennedy B. Fullerton, known to his friends as "the Judge," died last Tuesday, at Brookline, Mass., where he had recently made his home. Mr. Fullerton was the first secretary of this company, later becoming first vice-president and general manager. He was also one of the organizers of the St. Regis Paper Company, and for many years Mr. Fullerton sold the product of this mill.

In 1884 the Manufacturers Paper Company was formed by Mr. Pagenstecher, Mr. Fullerton and F. W. Bidwell. Mr. Fullerton was the first secretary of this company, later becoming first vice-president and general manager. He was also one of the organizers of the St. Regis Paper Company, and for many years Mr. Fullerton sold the product of this mill.

Mr. Fullerton retired from active business in 1915. Being interested in agriculture as a hobby, he passed his remaining years in developing a farm in West Hamption, between New London and Norwich, generally spending his winters in the South or in California. He remained as a director in the Manufacturers Paper Company and the Shawsheen Manufacturing Company until his death.

MAKING GOOD BUSINESS BETTER IN CHICAGO

As reflected in that infallible mirror of business in Chicago—the advertising columns of The Chicago Daily News—the "good business" of the latter half of 1922 is growing into better business in 1923.

Advertising in The Chicago Daily News for the first quarter of 1923, both in volume and in proportion of gains, shows a tremendous increase over the same period of 1922. This is indicative of booming business in Chicago and reveals one of its great contributing factors—liberal advertising by shrewd and experienced business getters in that medium to which the greater part of Chicago and its suburbs looks for advertising information and guidance—The Chicago Daily News.

The following statement of display advertising for the months of January, February and March, 1923, is striking evidence of The Daily News' leadership among the daily newspapers of Chicago in the following important classifications:

HARDING SPEECH FEATURE OF CONVENTION WEEK.

PRESIDENT ACCEPTS A.P. INVITATION TO ADDRESS ANNUAL LUNCHEON ON TUESDAY—RADIO, LABOR, TAXES PAPER AND POSTAL PROBLEMS LEAD CONVENTION TOPICS.

Newspaper publishers from cities large and small all over the country are concentrating in New York for the annual meeting of the Associated Press on Tuesday and the convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, which will follow on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The management of the Waldorf-Astoria, which has been the scene of the A.P. and A.N.P.A. sessions for twenty-six years, says that it is already certain that this year's gathering will break all records.

The outstanding feature of convention week will be the address of President Harding to the Associated Press annual luncheon Tuesday at 1 o'clock. The President had also been invited to address the annual dinner of the A.N.P.A. Bureau of Advertising Thursday night, but the address was made to the Associated Press because Tuesday was the more convenient date. In a letter to Louis Wiley the President explained that it would not be possible for him to remain over in New York for the Thursday night dinner and that as the prior invitation came from the A.P. he had decided to accept the invitation to address the Associated Press.

Mrs. Harding, Secretary George B. Christian, Jr., and Brigadier General Charles E. Sawyer, will accompany the President to New York. The President will leave Washington late Monday, arriving here at 10:30 Tuesday morning. The President is expected to have lunch at the White House Tuesday.

President Frank B. Noyes will be toaster at the Associated Press annual dinner at which there will be only one speaker. Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times, will toastmaster at the ad bureau dinner, with Senator George Baker as toastmaster, Lord Robert Cecil, James A. Emery, James W. Gerard, and Will Rogers as speakers.

Programs that insure four solid days of activity have been mapped out by the A.P. convention committee, but the actual timetable is no secret, to be announced, and may develop. Once the ball is started rolling, the newspaper visitors and their companions will be busy making a thorough job of it.

The foremost topics to come before the Associated Press are those concerning radio for gathering and sending news, improvements in foreign service, extension of wires, and further improvement in the Markum machines, which has been hooked up so as to operate by wireless impulses. Expansion of bureau service and the possible establishment of a new bureau with a view to making state coverage more complete will also come before the members.

President Frank B. Noyes of the Associated Press will have a remarkable message for the members as a result of his world-tripping, from which he returned from China, Korea, the Malay States, Java, India and Ceylon, continuing through the Suez Canal to Paris and London. Mr. Noyes visited Japan, China, Korea, the Malay States, Java, India and Ceylon, continuing through the Suez Canal to Paris and London. He is a member of the National Bureau Board.

INLAND OFFICERS AT WALDORF

President Frank H. Burgess and Secretary W. W. Tuford of the Inland Daily Press Association will remain headquarters at the Waldorf throughout convention week.

ILLINOIS SUPREME COURT OUTLAWS CHICAGO SUIT.

THOMPSON'S $10,000,000 LIBEL ACTION AGAINST TRIBUNE CANNOT BE MAINTAINED—LIBERTY OF PRESS THE SAME AS FREEDOM OF SPEECH, IS RULING.

Former Mayor William Hale Thompson's $10,000,000 libel suit brought against the Chicago Tribune for libel on the city of Chicago was this week thrown out of court by the supreme court of Illinois. The highest tribunal in the state thus upheld the earlier decision of Judge Fisher in the circuit court of Cook County, and ruled that "liberty of the press is the same thing as freedom of speech." The decision means the abandonment of the companion suit filed by Mr. Thompson in the city of Chicago against the Chicago Daily News. The supreme court rules that a municipality, even if it has a police court and a civil court, cannot maintain such an action. "The right of the press is based," it said, "on the fundamental principle of the American government and the right of the people to criticize the Government and its administrators so long as they do not advocate overthrow of the existing government or violation of the laws."

On the question of whether the city could sue in its capacity as a corporation, the court held that "because of its proprietary right it does not lose its governmental character."

I.T.U "LAW" HELD ARBITRABLE BY U.S. COURT.

DECISION IN CASE BROUGHT BY WASHINGTON PRINTERS ENDS PRINCIPLES FOR WHICH A.N.P.A. HAS CONTENDED—LIVE SUBJECT FOR CONVENTION DISCUSSION.

Decision by Judge Fenton W. Booth of the United States Court of Claims at Washington that the "international law" of the International Typographical Union is arbitrable, which the union and its representatives have maintained in their contract negotiations with newspaper publishers, results a new and important subject for discussion at the A.N.P.A. convention.

Judge Booth's decision, rendered in the case of the Closed Shop Division of the Washington Typothetae against Columbia Typographical Union No. 101, holds that in the "law" of the union is arbitrable in the District of Columbia, even though its court has jurisdiction. As a consequence the decision may be of some importance in courts in all parts of the country.

Negotiation of a new international agreement between the International Typographical Union and the A.N.P.A. came to nothing last year because the publishers steadfastly refused to agree that the union "law" was arbitrable. Since then it has gone on without the making of a national contract, which is still a subject of discussion as another A.N.P.A. convention meets.

The exact effect of Judge Booth's decision can not be anticipated but it is sure to have the effect of encouraging newspaper publishers to remain in arbitration instead of repeating the situation not to be bound by the decision of the union. Excerpts from the record follow:

"A complete survey of the whole record convinces the arbitrator that this matter is now in force and observed by the parties to this arbitration should stand."

As to the dispute, or alleged contract, which was printed and circulated in August and September of 1921, the original of which was never signed by the Closed Shop Division subject to the decision for over a year and which was published by the defendants, all the M.L.A. scale since May 1, 1922, the court said:

"The union should not have had the agreement printed. I say 'should have been printed.'"

BUTTE MINER SUFFERS HEAVY FIRE DAMAGE; USES PLANT OF BUTTE POST.

Fire thought to have originated in the mine was the cause which the Butte Miner did damage to the building and plant estimated at $30,000 Tuesday morning. A total of all the linotype and equipment in the composing room, second floor, were destroyed, while all copy, many records, and all national advertising space was destroyed. The press in the basement was uninjured and the stereotyping room. "It all makes up work will be done for the next two weeks in the plant of the Butte Daily Press."

Defective wiring is believed responsible for the blaze. A fire alarm fully covered by insurance. Former Senator W. A. Clark, millionaire mining magnate of Montana and New York, is the owner of the Miner.
Will your paints, cleaners, tools or other products be used in “Clean Up Week” in Philadelphia?

Philadelphia’s annual “Clean Up Week” begins April 30.

It is the signal for starting improvements which continue for many weeks.

When the housewives of the 400,000 separate dwellings and the owners of stores, workshops and other buildings begin overhauling and repairing their properties, a big outlet for products of many kinds which fit into the Clean Up Drive will be opened up.

New furniture and rugs, electrical appliances and a host of other things are installed in thousands of homes and business places in the Spring and Summer.

If you make products that fit into “Clean Up” plans you can tell practically all the people about your goods through The Philadelphia Bulletin, for The Bulletin every day goes into nearly every home, office and workshop in Philadelphia, Camden and suburbs.

WHY AMERICA IS THE BEST INFORMED OF NATIONS.

NEWS OF WORLD GETS HERE FIRST, "VIA LONDON" GIVING PLACE TO DIRECT CABLE AND WIRELESS—OUR WRITERS EVERYWHERE, AND WITHOUT BIAS.

By Charles T. Thompson,

I am glad to comply with the request of THE FOURTH ESTATE for something concerning the foreign news coming to this country, but with certain reservations, namely: That the statement be made, but not sounding the merit of one's own. Still, there is something to be said, and this is distinctly favorable to the promptness, thoroughness and disinterestedness with which the American public is kept informed on important news events throughout the world.

In this respect it is probably too much to say that the American public is as fully and as reliably informed on current events throughout the world as any other people or nation.

FLORIDA DAILY PURCHASED BY JAMES M. COX.

Former Governor James M. Cox of Ohio, owner of the Springfield News and the Dayton News, has purchased the Miami, Fla., Metropolis, one of the best known of Florida's evening dailies. The Metropolis, established in 1893, has been owned and published for nearly fifteen years by S. Bobo Dean.

Mr. Cox has been resting at Miami Beach since his return several weeks ago from a European tour, in which he made a prolonged study of the status of the League of Nations. There is a strong probability that he will again be the Democratic nominee for President in 1928, and he is still as earnest an advocate of the League as he was in the memorable campaign of 1920.

Mr. Cox said recently that if the present administration made an effort to establish international relationship on a basis that will enable it to function" no man would give it any more whole-hearted support than he.

PUBLISHERS WILL AGAIN BE GUESTS OF KOENIGSBERG.

ENTERTAINMENT WEDNESDAY AT FRIARS' MONASTERY WILL TAKE THE FORM OF A CARRIERS' LARK—400 EDITORS EXPECTED—UNIQUE PROGRAM PLANNED.

Publishers who come on for the A.P. and A.N.P.A. conventions each year always look forward with great anticipation to the entertainment given by the Friars of Koenigsberg of the King Features Syndicate. The spirit of Simple Cycles is one of the outstanding features of the convention, will this year take the form of a "Carriers' Lark," and will be held Wednesday, April 25. The Friars' Monastery in West Forty-eighth street, will, as heretofore, be thrown open for the occasion.

Four hundred publishers are expected to attend the event. Like his parties of previous years, M. Koenigsberg's lark, in addition to the dinner and fun, will have many interesting and original features to entertain the newspaper men. Last year he gave them a "Best Seller Lark" and the year before a "Lollypop Lark," and those who were among the fortunate guests have not yet forgotten those unique and enjoyable events.

NOW WITH INDIANA DAILY.

Local Advertising Gains Tell The Story In Charleston

Charleston American makes larger GAINS in local display than both other papers combined

The Charleston American is the fastest growing newspaper in South Carolina. Since becoming one of the Perry-Lloyd Jones Newspapers, the American has shown steady gains in every department. Local merchants are first to realize this change of conditions and to take advantage of it by using increased advertising lineage. The figures for the first three months in 1923 tell the story:

Figures For First 3 Months 1923
Charleston American Gain in local display
1923 mos. of last yr. 241,688 lines

| Other Morning papers Gain for Same period in local display | 30,268 lines |
| Evening papers Gain for same period in local display | 48,006 lines |

American’s Gain Over Both Other Papers Combined 54,040 lines

This record—unparalleled in the history of Charleston—tells definitely which way the sentiment of the people is pointing. The American is the progressive, constructive, unprejudiced newspaper in this rich trade territory—the newspaper that reaches the active buyers—the paper that produces results.

GOVERNOR GUEST OF CIRCULATION MANAGERS.

NEW YORK STATE CONVENTION MARKED BY ENTHUSIASM—LYNCH, MCKERNAN, ROY SMITH AND OTHERS GIVE VALUABLE POINTERS ON GAINING SUBSCRIBERS.

Governor Alfred E. Smith was the guest of honor yesterday at a luncheon given by the New York State Circulation Managers Association, meeting this week in annual convening at the Hotel Ten Eyck at ten o'clock Thursday morning. It was marked by a large attendance and the greatest enthusiasm. President F. S. Levy presided and all the officers were present. Of a membership of seventy managers sixty-eight were in their seats when the convention was called to order.

John J. Lynch, president of the International Circulation Managers Association, was a convention guest and favored the meeting with an address on the growth and success of the organization and some good advice on methods of getting circulation. He was heartily applauded.

Among those who spoke at the meeting was James McKernan, circulation manager of the New York World and founder of the managers' association. Mr. McKernan said a sharp line was drawn between the metropolitan daily and the newspaper of small towns and villages. The methods in vogue on a big paper in obtaining circulation, he said, could not be generally employed by the papers of lesser scope, but he advised the study of their methods with the end in view of applying them as far as practicable to the smaller fields of circulation.

Others who addressed the convention were Alfred W. Cockrell of the Ultra Press and Glenn S. England of the Johnstown Leader-Republican. An unexpected speaker before the convention was Roy Smith, secretary of the Albany Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Smith said that to his mind the greatest success in circulation lay in the co-operation of those interested in it. A new way of doing this, he said, was by a constant interchange of ideas, which was being done by organizations such as he represented. When he found himself troubled at all in the manner of handling any proposition, he got in touch with someone he knew was more familiar with the subject than he, with the end that he always got results.

Other speakers were R. D. M. Decker, Rochester Democrat and Chronicle; A. B. Parker, Watertown Standard; Frederick S. Ohrt, Niagara Falls Gazette, and Frank A. McDuff, Albany Times-Union.

AD CLUB EDUCATIONAL BOOK TELLS HOW ORGANIZATIONS ARE FINANCED.

The educational department of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World has issued an interesting twelve-page pamphlet reviewing data obtained from the active advertising clubs throughout the country on the subject, "How Advertising Clubs Are Financed." The next pamphlet to be issued is a review of advertising plans and methods of increasing membership of advertising clubs. The executive offices of the A. A. C. of W. are rendering a valuable service to the advertising club movement in general in securing and presenting suggestions and counsel along these lines, Earle Pearson, director of the educational department of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, is responsible for this service.

ADVERTISING CLUB TO HAVE WEEK OF JUBILEE.

SEVEN-DAY CELEBRATION TO MARK ACQUISITION OF $500,000 HOME — FAREWELL ENTERTAINMENT WILL BE HELD AT OLD CLUBHOUSE ON APRIL 28.

The Advertising Club of New York will spend a week celebrating the acquisition of its new $500,000 clubhouse, begin next Monday, April 23. That date was chosen, it was said, because it coincides with the address of the club's new home at 23 Park avenue.

While entertainment is included in the program for the week, the feature is a matter of business, the completion of the Advertising Club's new system of military organization by which it will be possible to mobilize the entire membership for any important undertaking on short notice.

J. J. Lynch

Gilbert T. Hodges, who is already one of the most active members of the club as a member of the board of directors and of several communities, heads the system as "field marshal" of the club "army." The city is divided into ten geographical zones, each commanded by a "major general," who is a division, which is divided in turn into ten regiments headed by "colonels," each of whom has ten captains.

A farewell dinner-dance will be held at the old clubhouse on Saturday, April 28.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION CONTINUES WAR AGAINST MISLEADING COPY.

Continuing its war against misleading advertising the Federal Trade Commission has recently taken action against two concerns which are alleged to have indulged in the practice.

In its complaint against the Broadway Knitting Company and the Murray Company, of Salt Lake City, the commission charged them with advertising and representing that they own or control manufacturing plants, when such is not the fact, the object being to cause the general public to believe that by purchasing their merchandise the profits of the middleman are eliminated. The respondents are given thirty days to make answer.

Declaring that advertising a product so as to give the impression that it is turpentine when such product is a coal tar distillate constitutes unfair business practice, the commission reports that investigation of the International Paint and Oil Company of Florida, III., and whose name that the concern used the name "Tar-Pen- tine" in marketing a commodity resembling turpentine, false and misleading claims of the superiority of the product itself.

The commission ordered the concern to stop using such words in the sale or offer for sale of a commodity which is not turpentine.

JOINS VIGILANCE COMMITTEE.

B. L. Shinn, manager of the New York office of the Federal Trade Commission, has been appointed head of the case department of the National Vigilance Committee. He joined the headquarters staff April 16. Mr. Shinn succeeds William A. Golden, who left to become associated with the sales department of the Dunlop Tire Company at Buffalo.
Your space is worth what you make it. Display lines that attract are more important than position. You can't hide them. You can't lose them. You can't pass them without stopping to read.

Commanding display is the first requisite of good advertising: 1. To attract attention; 2. to interest and convince; 3. to induce action. No attention is attracted by old, worn and broken type. The type must be new and perfect. No attention is attracted by thin, compressed faces. Big, bold and extended faces are required. Second-choice faces— for advertisements that come late— destroy the effectiveness of the best written heads.

ONE HUNDRED CITIES STILL AFFECTED, THOUGH THREE WERE SETTLED—CONTRACTS WITH NEWSPAPERS SIGNED IN TWELVE CITIES CALL FOR INCREASES.

According to the March report of President John McParland, 3,904 members of the International Typographical Union in 100 cities are on strike, a decrease of 207 since February. Although the situations were cleared up during three other cities, trouble developed in three cities, keeping the figure at an even hundred.

Gravity Production

As applied to the New York Tribune's new plant, is an important forward step. Yet it is only one of several major features introduced into that plant, each of which materially affects newspaper production speed and cost.

The service of engineers familiar with newspaper mechanical operation, and of an engineering organization for the allied problems of building design and construction, as co-ordinated under my direction can provide these interesting advantages in your new plant. The result of over two years of special investigation and application of scientific principles to newspaper manufacturing is at your disposal.

M. H. DE YOUNG TO ERECT NEW HOME FOR HIS PAPER.

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE WILL OCCUPY HANDSOME BUILDING ACROSS FROM UNITED STATES MINT—CLOCK WILL ADMORN IMPOSING ENTRANCE.

As the fifth of its homes since its founding in 1865, the San Francisco Chronicle is soon to occupy a new building to be erected at the corner of Fifth and Mission streets across from the United States Mint and one of the most convenient and central locations available for such a purpose. The new building is to be entirely given over to the needs of the Chronicle, with the exception of nine stores which will occupy the Mission street ground-floor frontage. M. H. de Young, who has been constantly at the head of the Chronicle since its founding in 1865, has given his personal supervision to the plans.

The building is designed in industrial Gothic style, combining beauty, solidity and convenience. It will be of reinforced concrete construction, with three stories above street level and a great storage basement below.

The present location of the Chronicle at Market and Kearny street is no longer adequate for the rapidly growing newspaper. It has served since 1890, with some additions, and for some years has been overcrowded.

From the exterior, the outstanding point of the new building will be the clock tower at the Fifth and Mission corner, over the entrance. Four clock dials and a set of chimes will be installed here.

The Mission street facade will have the principal entrance, leading into the public business offices and the general entrance to the building.

Behind the public business quarters will be ample space for trucking facilities, both for the delivery of print paper and the rapid distribution of the complete papers. The trucks will load and unload in a courtyard, so that the heavy traffic and congestion will be removed from the street.

Back of the first-floor offices will be the pressroom, where will be installed the giant presses, the size of which largely determines the extent of the building. These presses, now being built by R. Hoe & Co., New York, will be the last word in newspaper efficiency. They will operate as two units, although there are actually fifteen presses, fourteen in the black press and the fifteenth, a fifteen-cylinder color press.

The fourteen units of the black press will be installed in sequence so that their operation will be continuous. They will be the equivalent of three and one-half duplicate presses, permitting many combinations according to the size of the paper to be printed.

The total length of the press installation will be 235 feet. 160 feet being occupied by the black press and the remainder by the color press. The black press will have a capacity of 140,000 thirty-two page papers hourly, turned out completely printed, folded and counted, ready for distribution. Thirty-five tons of print paper will go into the black press in one hour, a paper ribbon 421 miles long.

The fifteen-cylinder color press will have a running speed of 57,000 pages an hour, and will be able to handle a full supplement section, front and back pages in four colors, and a full-color eight-page comic section.

Ttriplicate installation of paper reels will keep the flow of paper continuous. While one roll of paper is going through the press, a second will be ready for running, being pasted and connection, and a third will be waiting to drop into the place of the second. The storage basement will hold a supply of 3,000 tons of print paper.

On the second floor will be the mail room, where ample space is needed, as the Chronicle has a large mail circulation. Here will be offices for department heads, special reporting departments and subsidiary departments.

The Chronicle's rotogravure plant will be located on the second floor, one-quarter of the space being given over to the special equipment on which is turned out the beautiful section that has been called the country's finest specimen of rotogravure art.

Editorial, advertising and art departments, the composing and engraving rooms, stereotype room, and executive offices will be on the third floor where special plans are made for effective lighting and ventilation. Although the addition of further stories to the building is contemplated, skylights will continue to provide ample light for these departments.

Mr. de Young's private office will be in the tower corner of the third floor, and will be furnished with the rare stained glass, valuable rugs and objects of art. The tower will be so designed as to make his private office a veritable mini-ature of a fortress.

Close by will be the offices for the executive group, and the executives of the press, telegraph, and conference quarters in the tower.

In effect, the editorial department will be on one grand floor, with seventeen foot glass partitions setting aside offices for department heads, special writers and the large library maintained by the Chronicle.

Art and photographic departments will occupy one side of the third floor, with the engraving room directly connected with the art room so that work may be expedited. One-third of the third floor will be devoted to the composing room, extend- ing along the rear of the building with arrangements for thorough ventilation and good lighting.

Passages will connect the composing room directly with the editorial and advertising departments, so that the art and text manuals may travel from desk to linotype.

Every provision will be made for the comfort and convenience of employees. There will be numerous rest rooms and a roof garden, this latter features particularly adapted for the use of the large number of telephone clerks in the classified advertising department.

Fifteen-minute rest periods will be given these girls twice daily on account of the exacting nature of the work, and they will be enabled to spend their recreation time in the open air. All employees of the Chronicle will be privileged to use the circulating library that is to be a unique feature of the new plant.

In the rear of the building there will be slides and manifolds connecting the pressroom and the basement. The manifolds are one-man elevators operated by compressed air, a particular feature of the new location of the Chronicle is its convenience to the distributing centers. The floors of it's distribution is in Powell and Market streets, one block distant. The main postoffice is two blocks off Mission.

Newspaper delivery to San Francisco, Oakland, San Mateo, and Alameda counties will be handled by the Express Delivery Company, which is an affiliate of Williams, Lawrence and Cremer Company, which represents the Chronicle in Eastern and Western States.

CORRESPONDENTS AT WHITE HOUSE ELECT OFFICERS.

H. N. PRICE OF WASHINGTON POST FOR 1ST RACE FOR PRESIDENCY—HARDING, HONORARY PRESIDENT, AN INTERESTED ONLOOKER DURING THE VOTING.

The election of officers of the White House correspondents for the coming year was held in the pressroom of the White House last Wednesday.

After a spirited contest, Harry N. Price of the Washington Post was declared elector for the first race for the presidency. Other winners in the contest were: Isaac Gregg, New York Sun, vice-president; William P. Flythe, Universal Service, secretary-treasurer, and Samuel W. Bell, Philadelphia Public Ledger, and Isaac Gregg, members of the board of governors.

John Russell Young of the Washington Star, the retiring president of the organization, was associated with election as president emeritus. Richard L. Jervis, head of the secret service of the White House, was made sergeant-at-arms, succeeding Walter L. Ferguson of the Washington secret service, and Orsey of the National Foto was elected as official photographer for the organization.

Retiring officers were: Harry N. Price, vice-president; Thomas W. Stokes, United News, secretary-treasurer, and Samuel W. Bell, Philadelphia Public Ledger, and Isaac Gregg, members of the board of governors.

Asked to announce his policies, President-elect Price solemnly replied that they would be made known in his inaugural address. The policies of all the candidates as announced prior to the election were desired, however, as they were quite liberal on all points, including the prohibition issue, the former being a pronounced opposition to "pan handling" White House news by language correspondents.

Under the constitution granted the association by the government in 1914, President Harding is honorary president of the organization and George B. Christiaan, Jr., honorary secretary. President Harding was an interested onlooker during the voting.

Promises have been made for the greatest banquet ever tendered by the association, to be held late this month and at which the newly elected officers will be installed.

RICHMOND AD MEN GUESTS OF WASHINGTON CLUB.

Seventy-five Richmond advertising men, many of them accompanied by their wives, were guests of the Washington Club business luncheon this annual spring dinner-dance this week.

Skits, speeches, a radio program and other features marked the occasion, with a sight-seeing trip later. Avery C. Marks, Jr., managing editor of the Richmond Times, officiated as toastmaster.

HANDSOME $40,000 STRUCTURE REPLACES BUILDING WHICH WAS RAZED BY FIRE LAST SUMMER—HISTORIC "SHACK" STILL AN ESSENTIAL PART OF UNIVERSITY LAYOUT.

The dedication of the new three-story Journalism Building at the University of Oregon was a feature of the fifth annual newspaper conference conducted under the auspices of the school.

The new building, which replaces the structure destroyed by fire last summer, was built at a cost of approximately $40,000. It is 50x80 feet, at the east end of the campus.

There are ten offices and class rooms on the first floor. The instructional staff of the University occupies the southeast corner of the first floor. The copy desk room occupies the northwest corner, and the student room the southwest corner. The offices of the news editor of the Emerald, the University undergraded daily, and the Emerald news room is also on this floor.

The main assembly of the school occupies the east end of the second floor. It is the gathering place Friday and Saturday for those who attend the newpaper conference. It is large enough to bring together the entire group of major students of the school when an assembly is desired.

Adjoining the assembly room is the word room for the advertising laboratory. There are offices and other equipment of this nature in advertising laboratories in other parts of the country and a display that shows the various engraving processes. The main assembly of the school

The dedication of the new three-story Journalism Building at the University of Oregon was a feature of the fifth annual newspaper conference conducted under the auspices of the school.

The new building, which replaces the structure destroyed by fire last summer, was built at a cost of approximately $40,000. It is 50x80 feet, at the east end of the campus.

PAPER AND PULP MEN URGED TO REFOREST.

INDUSTRY IS MENACED UNLESS AVAILABLE FOREST LANDS ARE PROTECTED AND IDLE ACRES USED, CONVENTION IS TOLD—AVOIDANCE OF WASTE DISCUSSED.

Protection of the available forest lands, reforestation plans and the avoidance of waste were the principal themes discussed at the forty-sixth annual convention of the American Paper and Pulp Association and the eighteen affiliated organizations at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, last week. At the same time a large variety of products made entirely or partly from paper was displayed at the first paper industries exhibition at the Grand Central Palace.

Dr. Hugh P. Baker, executive secretary of the association, in urging aggressive reforestation plan said: "Ninety-five per cent of the 70,000,000 tons of paper made annually in the United States are made wholly or in part from wood. The forests are getting to be further and further away from the mills. More and more are we becoming dependent on Canada for our supply of raw material. There is talk of Canada placing an embargo on wood from the freehold lands. There is already an embargo on crown lands."

He then pointed out that the idle land in New York alone could bear eight or nine million acres of forests, thus making the United States independent of Canada. The New York State College of Forestry of Syracuse University in an exhibit showed that 4,000,000 acres of the 12,000,000 acres in the state particularly suited to timbers for production are idle. A statement issued by the college declared that New York state yearly furnishes five times as much lumber as it uses, and twenty times as much as the forests grow. With sixty per cent of the remaining timber area of the Mississippian forest half of it on the Pacific coast, lumber was shown to be expensive in New York since.

"Nearly fifty per cent of the newsprint manufacturing industry in New York," the statement continued, "but we have to import from Canada more than half the raw wood needed to keep this industry going. We cannot, with assurance, continue to depend on outside sources for pulp wood. The only way to keep this valuable industry within our borders is extensive reforestation on our immense areas of waste land."

The forestry committee suggested that intensive methods and the utilization of new species were necessary now the part of American manufacturers to avoid drastic action. Some papermen were opposed to the waste of available pulpwood. The committee reported that the United States imported over 400,000 cords of pulpwood, and that an increase in the use of pulpwood from Canada and in other European countries to the United States will be reduced with the result that this country will be forced to produce its own wood pulp.

CITIES DAMAGE BY PEST.

C. W. Boyce of the United States Forest Service declared that the spruce bud worm damaged the pulp forests more than all other pests combined, and that cutting of paper companies. He estimated the loss for Quebec alone at $1,200,000, or 24,000,000 cords of pulpwood, equal to half the quantity used in North America since the beginning of the paper industry.

The committee on waste informed the convention that not only was waste avoidable, but large profits could be returned to the mills, particularly in the reworking of white water. The report stated that the repeated use of white water would save power and that little or no increase of equipment would be required in the process.

C. W. Wilson of the Laurentide Paper Company of Quebec said that manufacturers were sending escaping aviators over dense timber tracts to make thousands of photographs, study of which afforded rough rules affecting density.

NEWS PRINT EXPORTS FOR JANUARY.

News print exports from the United States during January of this year aggregated over a thousand tons, valued at $19,569. The major export of the stock was consigned to Cuba, Philippine Islands, Mexico and Canada and amounted to 81,360,041. The largest consumer, with 389 tons. The smallest order filled during the month for foreign countries was 64 tons value at $17, consigned for Belgium. The news print exports for January as compiled by the Department of Commerce follow:

EIGHTY-FIVE PER CENT OF DECEMBER NEWS PRINT IMPORTS FROM CANADA.

Nearly seven millions of dollars in news print was imported into the United States for every cent counting December, according to statistics compiled by the special statistical service section, division of statistics, bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the Department of Commerce. Of this amount Canada furnished nearly $8,000,000 worth of stock. Sweden was second, having shipped news print valued at more than $400,000.

EDITOR-HUMORIST LECTURES IN MINNEAPOLIS.

T. A. Daly, poet and humorist and editor of the Philadelphia Record, spoke last week in Minneapolis under the auspices of Seton Guild. His topic was "Poets, Wild and Tame." He included in his lecture many of his own verses in Italian and Irish dialect.

Mr. Daly has been on the lecture platform for eighteen years and is one of the best known humorists in the East.

HIGH SCHOOL PAPERS FORM NEWS ASSOCIATION.

An association to handle state high school news was organized at the meeting of the Oregon High School Press Association at the University of Oregon school of journalism recently. The association's plan will lead to the exchange of news among the high school newspapers and magazines of the state. The syndication of news will be handled through the school of journalism at the university.

NEWS PRINT EXPORTS FOR JANUARY.

The people of Newfoundland will on May 4 express their approval or disapproval of Premier Squires' proposal for the development of hydroelectric power in the Humber River region and the establishment of a manmoth news print mill. The project includes the guarantee by the government of Newfoundland of one-third of the interest on a bond issue sufficient to finance the power development and construction and equipment of a news print mill capable of producing 400 tons per day. The British government will guarantee the other two-thirds of the cost.

The Newfoundland parliament has been prorogued for the express purpose of passing upon the proposal, which seems to be favored by most of the public. Operating capital for the mill will be provided by the Armstrong-Whitworth interests.

DAVENPORT DAILY TO HAVE $300,000 NEW BUILDING.

PLANS COMPLETED BY FRANK D. THROOP, PUBLISHER, FOR HANDSOME PLANT TO HOUSE DEMOCRAT-LEADER — NEW MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT TO BE INSTALLED.

"Sixty-eight years a newspaper" may well be the motto of the Democrat and Leader of Davenport, Iowa, of which Frank D. Throop is the enterprising publisher. But its sixtieth year is to be the most important in the history of this publication, for work has started on a new $300,000 building and plant which will be a model of its kind and will embody the by other people's mistakes, as well as by their wisdom.

With this idea in view and the determination to put it in concrete form, Mr. Throop and his architects visited a number of the leading newspaper plants of the country. From the various publishers they obtained both the good and bad points in the respective buildings. The advantageous features they carefully embodied in the Democrat plans and the objectionable points they zealously avoided. The beneficial result of this "Safety First" measure is expected to be revealed in many ways in the Democrat's own new structure.

The Democrat building will be devoted exclusively to the requirements of that newspaper. It is to be a substantial yet modern structure. Dimensions are 50 by 150 feet, with an elevation of 48 feet above the street. It will be of Bedford stone, granite base and terra cotta trimmings, erected over a deep and lighted basement. There are two main floors and a mezzanine floor.

The central part of the building will be recessed for the advantageous display of bulletins. On either side will be spacious entrances. A ten-foot open court will surround the building on both sides.

On the ground floor will be located the business office, 40 by 48 feet, publisher's office, circulation department, press room, etc. The advertising department will be conducted from the mezzanine floor. On this floor also will be located a director's room, rest rooms and numerous other features.

On the second floor will be the editorial department, with a large reporter's room, 28 by 38 feet, and private offices for the managing editor, city editor, society editor, telegraph editor, Associated Press leased wire operator and radio operator.

On this floor will also be the spacious composing room, 50 by 70 feet, with large windows opening on either side and dormer lights above. Adjoining the rear is the storeroom.

A new high speed sextuple Goss press, new linotype machines and the latest stereotype machinery is but a part of the efficient mechanical equipment which will find a resting place in the new building.

Charles H. Eddy Company represents the paper in the national field.
NEW YORK TRIBUNE NOW OCCUPYING NEW HOME.

NOT A MOMENT LOST FROM PUBLICATION IN TASK OF MOVING TO UPTOWN PLANT—FLEET OF TRUCKS AND 300 MECHANICS DO THE TRICK OVER SUNDAY.

With the publication of last Sunday edition of the New York Tribune another of Park Row's old newspaper landmarks has passed. For the first time in the eighty-two years of its history the chronicle of the world's doings, which appeared at Park Row Monday was prepared and printed elsewhere than at the junction of Spruce street, Nassau street and Park Row.

WORK AT TOP SPEED.

The work of dismantling the machinery and equipment and moving it up to the new building, at forty-fourth street west of Seventeenth avenue, began as soon as last Sunday's editions were off the presses. Throughout the night big motor trucks hurried back and forth while 300 skilled mechanics worked at top speed dismantling the old plant and installing the new. When the force of reporters, editors, compositors and pressmen reported for work Sunday everything was in readiness and the moving of a modern newspaper plant, with its myriad departments and mass of heavy machinery and equipment was accomplished without any interruption in its publication.

So the big building at 134 Nassau street, the third to house the Tribune on that site, became an office building, empty of the traditions and accomplishments which have been the Tribune's during the last eighty-two years. These the paper took with it into its new home. The achievements of Horace Greeley and Whitelaw Ried are necessarily an indissoluble part of the Tribune, as are the names of those who have written for its columns, such as John Hay, William Winter, Carl Schurz, Henry James, F. Marion Crawford and William Dean Howells.

In their time the moving operation would have been a far simpler undertaking. It probably would have been unnecessary to plan every detail for weeks ahead as was done. Each piece of equipment was tagged and marked with its location when the mechanics began their work of dismantling.

ALL EQUIPMENT NEW.

In the street below were ten big seven ton trucks, whose drivers had been instructed just what route to take to the new building so as to make the quickest run between the old plant and the new. At the new building there was another force of mechanics who installed the machines in the designated places.

With the equipment moved from the former plant the Tribune in its new home will be amply able to meet the increased demands the paper's expansion and growth are expected to make. The equipment is entirely new, three large super-speed octuple presses having been installed, while a fourth, now being assembled, will give the Tribune a press battery which will increase the printing capacity fifty per cent.

In addition to the twenty-four linotype machines that were moved from Park Row there have been installed twenty-six new linotypes for setting type, and there are new steam tables and casters used in the stereotyping process which transforms the metal type into big curved plates for the rotary presses.

A gravity, stream line movement marks every step from the writing of the news to the delivery of the printed papers to the waiting trucks. From the editorial department on the fifth floor the news will move in continuous stream first to the composing department on the fourth floor, then to the stereotyping department on the third floor, to the presses on the second floor, and then still following the gravity plan, the finished papers go to the mail and delivery rooms on the first floor, and so to the trucks in the street.

OCCUPYING ENTIRE PLANT.

The building is on a plot 150x100, and all of its seven stories will be occupied by the Tribune. The location is considered an ideal one, both as a center for the gathering of news, as well as the routing of the papers to the principal railroad stations and the general postoffice. The change entailed the removal of almost 1,500 tons of machinery, books, records, furniture and other equipment a distance of six miles by motor truck.

The provisions made for handling news from all parts of the world at top speed are particularly complete.

HOW CIRCULATION BY THE MILLION IS ATAINED.

ANNENBERG, FIELD MARSHAL OF HEARST DISTRIBUTION, SAYS THERE'S NO MYSTERY TO IT—GET BEST PAPER THERE FIRST ALL THAT'S REQUIRED, HE SAYS.

Circulation by the million is no more of a mystery than circulation by the thousand, according to Moses L. Annenberg, general circulation director of all the Hearst newspapers and magazines, who is used to counting in millions. As the field marshal of newspaper distribution, Annenberg says that it is a fairly simple matter to mobilize readers in millions, provided "the cause is just."

And a just cause, in Annenberg's mind, is a good newspaper. He has found the million ready to rally around the Hearst publications because they are uniformly good, and he sees his job as merely a simple matter providing strategic rallying points.

So there is really no trick to it at all, in Annenberg's mind. All that is required is William Randolph Hearst be the publisher of the paper. What mystifying features there may be about attaining huge circulations will be solved by any newspaper that can claim Hearst for its owner, Mr. Annenberg insists, despite the fact that the Hearst organization, from owner to office boy, regards Annenberg himself as a miracle man.

"Our circulation men are not wizards," Field Marshal Annenberg insists. "They are the same as other circulation men. The big reason for the success of the Hearst newspapers is that Mr. Hearst is by far and away the most able newspaper man in the world. He is years ahead of other publishers." And lest there be any doubt that he meant what he said, Annenberg told how Mr. Hearst works it. Not one issue of any one of the Hearst publications goes to press without the chief's having a hand in it. Mr. Hearst makes no effort to be everywhere at once, but he makes certain that his directions are.

There is a formula for the morning papers, one for the evening papers and another for the Sunday papers. It's just like a recipe from a master chef, in Annenberg's mind; all you have to do after you get it is to assemble the ingredients and make it.

"The policy of our newspapers is right," he says, "the excellence of the service we render to our readers in every department of our newspapers is superior to that of other newspapers. We aim to make the most complete kind of newspaper. We have by far and away the best editorial departments for the serious minded; we have the best for those that like fiction; we have the best sporting writers and comic artists; we have a wonderful financial department; we have the best newspapering staffs and the best news writers; and we have the best circulation staffs. It is easy to see, therefore, why our papers excel wherever published.

And these superlatives do not appear at all far-fetched when measured against the Hearst newspapers' circulation figures, given in the accompanying table. If not a majority, at least a plurality of the electorate seems to agree with him, as evidenced by the cash ballots they cast every (Continued on Twenty-first Page)

Twenty-five direct Western Union and Postal telegraph wires link the editorial rooms with all points of the compass, and in addition to these there are automatic printers which carry the reports of the Associated Press, the City News service, and the Standard New service directly into the editorial rooms.

REMARKABLE PHONE SYSTEM.

The Tribune is the first newspaper to be equipped with telephone machine switching apparatus, its new number, Pennsylvania 4,600, putting it in the Pennsylvania exchange, the first automatic switching central installed by the telephone company. The traffic, plant, installation, engineering and commercial departments of the telephone company lent every assistance so that the new switchboard, with its thirty trunk lines, for incoming and outgoing calls and 200 extensions inside the building might be ready on time. The change from the manual system of calling numbers to the new dial system required an extended course of training for the seven operators who will furnish twenty-four-hour telephone service.

While no formal housewarming has been arranged by the Tribune, the new plant will be thrown open for inspection next week to the visiting publishers who attend the A.P. and A.N.P.A. conventions.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

A recent Sunday edition of the Seattle Times carried a clever story written by C. B. Blethen, editor of the Times, and E. T. Short, reporter. They described the discovery and buying of a vault in the ruins of Seattle's Corn Palace 40 years hence, and wrote the story in the same style as had been used in connection with the King of France. Methods of conducting public business are viewed as they might be viewed 30 years hence, and were presented in a manner that should make the reader think.

The editor of the Ord, Neb. Quiz sets aside a small amount of space in his paper for such spring poetry as may be submitted to him by his readers, says the South Dakota Rural Press, and adds that the editor feels free to criticize the verses when he sees fit. The criticisms of the output of two or three unpaid subscribers ought to make prime reading.

“It is a generally accepted fact that local features are among the best tonics for running down newspaper circulation,” says Norman J. Radder, of the department of journalism at Indiana University. “If anything, the department of journalism at Indiana is constant in its efforts to impress upon its students the superiority of local feature over syndicated material.”

"The late Joseph Pulitzer was a go-getter if ever there was one," says Arthur Brisbane. "When he came to New York, he didn't have a newspaper, with hardly any circulation, he immediately ordered the biggest, most powerful press that New York newspaper had ever had. Why have another one, so many Josephs," his wife asked. "You don't need any presses now, no."

"That's the spirit of go-getting." "We are advertising ourselves every minute of the day," serves a writer in the Advertising Club News. "We have such a huge audience that we can't afford to go to waste. We have to go out and tell people, in every possible way, time and time again, how much we want them."

"It is a generally accepted fact that local features are among the best tonics for running down newspaper circulation," says Norman J. Rader, of the department of journalism at Indiana University. "If anything, the department of journalism at Indiana is constant in its efforts to impress upon its students the superiority of local feature over syndicated material."
The withdrawal of Guy M. Peterson as assistant publisher the Springfield Union has made some advancements on the staff of the Union. H. F. King, who has been local advertising manager, is made advertising director. John Inman, who has been promotion manager, has been made national advertising manager. Henry M. Bowman, who has been business manager, will devote a vast amount of his time to the advertising department.

Miss Jane Johnston Martin has been appointed manager of the New York office of Carpenter & Co., a two weeks' trip through Egypt, including a visit to the tomb of King Tutankhamen, was made by Prof. W. PUBLISHER'S SON AND BRIDE COMING EAST TO VISIT PARENTS.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hearst, son and daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, have returned to San Francisco from their honeymoon which they passed at San Simeon, the California home of the publisher. They were married in Martinez, Cal., on April 2 in a ceremony that had its inception at the University of California at Berkeley. The bride was Miss Blanche Wilbur, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Wilbur of Idaho Falls, Idaho. The couple are preparing to leave for New York next Monday to visit the bridegroom's parents.

WELL KNOWN NEWSPAPER MAN OPENS SPECIAL AGENCY.

William N. Callender, Jr., has left his position as advertising manager of the New York Evening Journal to become president of Callender & Lynch, publishers' representatives, 17 East 45th street, who will be the representatives of the Jewish Daily Forward, the Staats-Herald and the Corriere d'America in the national advertising field.

Mr. Callender is one of the best known men in the national advertising field. Coming to New York he was first associated for four years with Remington Brothers Advertising Agency, joining the Hearst organization in 1915 as assistant manager of foreign advertising of all the Hearst newspapers.

How two advertising men, Charles C. Green, head of the advertising agency in New York bearing his name, and Carl Hunt, general manager of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, helped build a new church in Jamaica, L. I., is told in recent issues of the Long Island Press.

Two new Hoe super speed presses in Richmond.

Construction work preliminary to installation of two new Hoe deuple presses has been begun in the printing plant of the Richmond Press and Publishing Co., who own the presses. Each press is capable of delivering 40,000 double page papers an hour.

STAFF CHANGES.

C. Fred Cook, news editor of the Washington Evening Star, has been advanced to news manager, filling the vacancy caused by the recent death of John B. Smallwood. Charles D. Keller has been promoted from city editor to news editor of the paper, and Ray H. Hayway, who has been city editor, has been made city editor. Sheldon C. Cline, who has been Sunday editor, has been made assistant managing editor.

Curtis H. Clay, former city editor of the Springfield Union, has returned to his home in Springfield. He is now in charge of the city editor and city editor. Henry D. Hardin has been placed in charge of sports. Cordry has been covering general assignment work.

Orville McLaughlin, formerly of the Dayton, Ohio, News, has joined the Springfield, Ohio, News staff. He is covering police and city hall.

Frank Straw, who has been in charge of the News League Bureau at Washington, has joined the Springfield, Ohio, News staff. He is covering police and city hall.

Construction work preliminary to installation of two new Hoe deuple presses has been in progress in the Richmond Press and Publishing Co., who own the presses. Each press is capable of delivering 40,000 double page papers an hour.

PRESSMEN BUY HOUSE.

The United Pressmen's Association, a subsidiary of New York Printing Pressmen's Union No. 51, an organization with 2,500 members, has purchased the property at 22 West 23rd street. The extension of the building for its executive offices, pressroom and basement will increase the capacity of the building.

NON-PARTISAN DAILY SOLD.

The Fargo Tribune Company, controlled by J. P. Dolson of Fargo and Clarence W. Brown of St. Paul, Twin City publishers, owners of the Fargo Review, News, a morning daily and official organ of the Non-Partisan League, have announced that they will continue the Fargo Tribune.

The papers state that the politics of the Fargo Tribune will be "independent, owing no allegiance to any political party or faction."
SPECIAL SERVICES TO A.P. MEMBERS INCREASED.

RACING, ELECTION, STATE MAIL, BUREAU, LEGISLATIVE AND FINANCIAL REPORTS ALL INCLUDED IN EXPANSION — ELECTION SERVICE NOW AT HIGH EFFICIENCY.

During the past year the Associated Press materially extended its list of special services to member papers. The new special features embrace a racing service, election service, state mail services, financial reports, legislative services and special bureaus to develop to a greater extent news in various regions. The racing service, which was the most recent established, was inaugurated from New York to Atlanta and St. Louis with nineteen members participating, although other members have expressed desire to receive this feature as soon as other contracts expire. Eighteen hundred miles of wire were set up for this work. Results are filed from the tracks at Havana, New Orleans and Tia Juana.

Co-operative election services were extended during the year to the majority of northern, central and western states under the direction of the Associated Press, with the result that all records were shunted in sending in returns to member papers. Similarly co-operation was established in some of the southern states for the primaries, with Tennessee and Alabama also installing the co-operative system on election day. The accuracy, swiftness and completeness with which the returns were gathered and filed again proved the value of the co-operative system. It is estimated that approximately 50,000 persons were engaged on election night in gathering and distributing the returns. Every county in every state was covered.

HIGH SPEED IS SHOWN.

The New York bureau gave the morning papers returns from 7,000 of the state’s 7,301 districts within the gubernatorial contest. Philadelphia sent out a running story of election returns at six districts in Pennsylvania. These were sent through without interfering with the bulletin service. The running story has become a feature in practically every state in the northern district. With the co-operative system functioning in twelve of the fifteen states of the central division complete reports on congressional elections were filed within thirty hours after the polls closed.

Special reporters have been assigned to cover legislative sessions in the states. Reports on all important movements throughout the sessions are supplemented by mail reports.

State mail services were established in twenty-four states. More than 475 members are receiving terminal service, which consists of special news of the day compiled by editors usually stationed in the state capitals.

MAINTAIN SPECIAL BUREAUS.

In addition to the state mail service members in several states also cooperated in establishing special bureaus headed by A.P. correspondents to develop to a greater extent all regional news of interest to members. These special bureaus have replaced the special correspondents who were maintained at various points by the members. Through this method of co-operation the members have been enabled to effect a considerable saving on expenditures.

A financial report giving complete details of market activities has proved to be one of the most successful features installed. The organization is now working toward enlarging its wire service to all members desiring this service. Complete stock, bond and bond quotations with total sales, opening, high, low and net changes are filed on two wires for afternoon papers and one wire for morning papers. Every possible means is used to speed this service. Eighteen persons are engaged in getting the reports into proper shape and special code signals in the forms and the report is such that the service is expedited to the highest degree consistent with speed and Associated Press accuracy.

NEW FEATURE SERVICE.

L. Preston Hollander and John Van Norden have opened the Hol-Nord Feature Service at 500 Fifth Avenue, New York. Among the recent acquisitions of this organization is numbered Richard Le Gallienne, originating an original series of plays to be called "Boots and Carte," which includes contributions in verse, humorist, or contemporary matter by well-known authors, and anecdotes gleaned from many years of association with leading writers.

Other contributors to this service are William Crowder, formerly managing editor of Science Service; Allen Chaffee, for seven years on the staff of the Boston Post; Elsie McCormick, Count Edward Zichy, John E. Barber, vice-president of the First National Bank, Los Angeles; Tom S. Erickson of the Indianapolis News, Harry Cole Bates of the New York bar, Ella S. Stringluff, Jordan Maysley and Helen Christine Bennett.

NEW MONTREAL ADVERTISING AGENCY ORGANIZED.

The Ronalds Advertising Agency, Ltd., has been organized in Montreal, with offices in the McGill Building. The president is W. P. Tuttle, formerly a partner in the New York agency of Morgan, Tuttle and Jenkins, now Wylie and Tuttle, and previously to which he had been vice-president and general manager of the Knox Hat Company; and at one time was associated with the Frank Press Company, New York.

Russell C. Ronalds is vice-president of the new agency. E. D. King is director of plan and copy and John P. Kelly, formerly eastern manager of the Continental Publishing Company, is chief account executive.
TWO PUBLISHERS WHO ARE JUST ALIKE.

BROSSIER TWINS HAVE KEPT EVERYBODY GUESSING IN FLORIDA, EVEN THEIR OWN WIVES—BUT EACH HAS HIS VIRTUES, SO THAT NEITHER ONE SUFFERS OVER MUCH.

By Jack Hughes. (Contributed).

As the southern states shove higher upon the chart of American progress the magic colors of well-earned laurels, the more potent factors fostering this wholesome estate cannot be denied. And the prestige of their daily newspapers has been recognized.

But of these, the soil and enterprise, the romances and character are so great it would take a five-foot shelf to hold a brief of the story in six point type square. Hence, at this time, the only one of two youthful publishers, the "Crescent Cover Twins," Camisole and Bras- siere (R. B. and J. C. Brossier), owners and publishers of the Orlando, Florida, Evening Reporter-Star, who worked their way into the bigger field with a smile and zeal that has misled the imagination of fellow publishers far and wide.

EVEN HAVE SIMILAR TRAITS.

Their names were not born by any idiosyncrasies of manner or freakishness of dress, however, but because of a similarity arising from their French names, for which they were not responsible. They enjoy, they say, the coincidence of existence that gave rise to no much jesting; and even were it not so, no one could detect the twins really, simply can't hide the life-long smile that has ever characterized them, and comforted those about them through any and every adversity.

R. B. and J. C. Brossier are the youngest publishers and owners of a recognized daily newspaper in the South. They look alike, talk alike, and, above all, they are twins, that similarity is inseparable. These are the natural traits that have singularized the twins since the age of fifteen became circulation manager of the Miami Metropolis and a year later R. B. assumed a similar position with the Miami Herald. At the age of twenty-two, and chivalrous and ad-oportunity to purchase from their brother-in-law, J. Hugh Reese, a half interest in the Orlando Evening Reporter-Star and did so. It was decided that J. C. should remain in Miami for a while to assist his father and another brother in the real estate business.

Until now, the twins had never been separated longer than a week, and endured this separation one month and ten days. Then R. B. who had taken hold at Orlando, wrote J. C., telling him he would either have to come to Orlando or he would return to Miami. J. C. joined R. B. forthwith at Orlando.

ENTER NEWS FIELD.

When R. B. assumed the entire management of the Evening Reporter-Star it meant business manager, advertising manager, cashier, copy chaser, cub reporter and general routabout, without any previous experience in those particular departments save that acquired in the circulation department of the Miami. J. C. assumed the position of editor, managing the entire make-up, writing all editorials and handling telegraph and local copy on five minutes, notice.

The Brossier boys have declared that they owe to their mother and father "whatever success we have made in life, owing to their patience and interest in us at all times. It has inspired us from boyhood to make good." They have made good and the result of their tireless efforts to forge ahead speaks louder than words in the enterprising and growing publication they own today.

WIVES KEPT GUESSING.

The twins have never taken life as a burden and the coincidence of being twins has engendered much into their notions of living that has caused them always to look upon the bright side of most things.

The only serious mistake that caused one to suffer the pain meant for another was when R. B. once received a parental trouncing meant to remind him of a mistake made by J. C. The Brossier brothers have never fallen in love with the same girl, except on one occasion. Then they agreed that the best man should win and the combat ended in a friendly draw. Their wives have often mistaken one for the other and have told some other confidential secrets intended for the other. There have been several other embarrassing instances of mistaken identity in the private lives of these breezy, witty twins, the nature of which the brothers, alas, throw up their hands when asked to confirm.

by a "hot shot"! Salesman with ten years behind his pen, no wind, your monthly figures tell the story. More space sold to each customer than the "other fellow" says he ever would run. The secret is knowing how—when and what. It might take eight hours a day, it might take twelve, what's the difference so long as the space is there?

My reference, from my customers tell their own tale. Guineas inches weekly. Line of your staff, give me all the "chronics," "desp-ectics," "don't believe in advertising," "want run," "no results from last ad," and then turn me loose on that crowd. I will "snow" your former records every month. Work but up the ladder I go.

My speed is 1000 inches from a grocery store in one week, who does an average business of $300 each Saturday. Let him tell you. A man's store whose cash register is selling a mighty tale. A drug store that is selling a mighty tale. I carry a rugged range of English, rough and ready, double-barreled, deep chesed, built for storm and strife. A gentleman Jim—tough or tender, according to circumstances —refined with a ladies ad, and a riot with a man's. Revealing a polish, but concealing that "landing" punch—taught for speed built for blizzards. The rough kind are as soft as a Government job, my finish as tough as a touchdown to your service.

My character is plain, my age is 24, my salary is $100.00 per week. Put together you have a workman that is a genuine joy for your bookkeepers and able to hold, I come high but I come through. Don't write me your IP's I have them all. I prove my points. I work. Write me Box 5851, care THE FOURTH ESTATE.

Unless you can pay the price don't write.

not getting to its readers on time. Sometimes it is press trouble, when a few minutes delay means losing a train, sometimes desire of the editor to crowd in late news or lack of co-operation between the editorial and circulation departments or, as in many cases, the fact that the advertisers do not heed the admonition "early copy." To remedy that condition the publication established an absolute "zero hour" when the forms shall close both for news and advertising, was recommended by Mr. Doldpint, who said that such a system was in force on his paper and that it was satisfactory.

At the afternoon session the important discussion was continued. Several other questions of circulation managers were discussed. Following the discussion the managers held a banquet at which J. L. Young again spoke, using as his topic "Standards of a circulation Manager.

Thomas J. Downer, circulation manager of the Boston Globe, also gave a brief address. The next meeting of the association will be held in Washington some time in October.

JULIUS H. BARNES ADDRESSES NEW YORK NEWSPAPER MEN.

Only the textile industry is lagging in the general restoration of British industry to a prosperous condition, said Julius H. Barnes, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, at a dinner to New York City newspaper men, at which he was the guest of honor, given Monday night at the Metropolitan Club by A. C. Bedford, president of the Standard Oil Co.

Mr. Barnes described financial and industrial conditions in North Africa, Egypt, the Near East and Europe—a he and the American party of business men who attended the conference of the International Chamber of Commerce in Berlin, as a part of the course of a comprehensive tour.

BUTLER EAGLE TO ERECT $150,000 BUILDING.

HAS ACQUIRED ADDITIONAL PROPERTY ADJOINING ITS PRESENT QUARTERS FOR PROJECT — WILL INSTALL NEW EQUIPMENT, INCLUDING PRESS.

The Butler, Pa., Eagle has completed arrangements for the erection of a modern building, which shall furnish every facility and convenience necessary for publication of a journal that will compare favorably with newspapers appearing in cities twice the size of Butler.

It is the intention of the management to construct an Eagle building, a modern structure, which shall be completed.

A new $35,000 press has been ordered, capable of turning out 30,000 newspapers per hour. This machinery, together with new stereotyping equipment, will be installed on the ground floor in what has been planned to be one of the most efficient and up-to-date printing press departments of any newspaper of its size in the East.

Several years ago the Eagle found it was rapidly outgrowing its present quarters and plans have since been fixed to erect a splendid new building that not only will be distinguished from an architectural standpoint, but which will make possible the issuing of larger editions of improved appearance.

A remarkable growth in circulation and increased advertising patronage have rendered the present quarters now inadequate. The Eagle is publishing an average of approximately 12,500 copies a day.

probability that many of them will be offered for extended discussion at the annual meeting. The increased dependence of the world upon the United States, political and economic conditions by Mr. Noyes will enable the membership to meet the requirements of the situation in a thorough manner.

Officers for the coming year will be elected at a meeting of the new A.P. board of directors to be held Wednesday morning. Balloting for directors will take place at the afternoon session of the annual meeting on Radio, labor, the news print situation, taxation and postal problems will occupy most of the considerations at the A.N.P.A.'s three-day session which will close with the election of officers Friday afternoon. The members are more interested than ever in radio, some of the members regard it as a supplement to the daily press, while others incline to the belief that it is a substitute. The fact is, however, that a considerable element of prominent publishers has given it a thorough going over, too; and it is a logical prospect for newspaper advertising.

Labor discussions will feature the progress of the open shop publishers, for whom a special bureau of the A.P.A. was created by resolution at the last meeting. Another topic of general interest will be the deputation of the U.S. Senate to the Post Office Department to have revised the "national law" of the International Typographical Union is arbitrable and unenforceable. The agreement was rendered in the case brought by the Washington Typotheta against Columbia, a detail program of this issue of The Fourth Estate. News print problems have not changed much in the year, except that curtailment has gone more than ever since the convention last met. While there was some response to the repeated warnings issued by General Manager Lincoln B. Palmer that news print consumption was increasing out of all proportion to advertising gains, the curtailment fell far short of expectations. Present steps in Canada to place a sizable export duty on wood pulp and pulp wood will lend point to the arguments of those who counsel curtailment.

Taxation and postage are still in the vexatious class. Publishers are prodded to furnish their cases to the Department of the income tax, while the campaign waged by the A.N.P.A. in connection with the House Postmaster General's Conference for a repeal of war-time second class mail did not accomplish its purpose, owing to political obstacles at Washington.

MACHINES ADD 36 PER CENT TO A.P. NEWS VOLUME.
NEW EXPERIMENTS TO APPLY MORKRUMS TO WIRELESS PRESAGE MORE WONDERS TO COME IN TRANSMISSION — A.P. EXPERT EXPLAINS PRINCIPLES OF OPERATION.

By Milton Garges, Superintendent, Traffic Division, Associated Press.

It was more than fifteen years ago that the Associated Press first began to experiment with printed telegraph systems in connection with the transmission and receipt of its news report. As a result of these experiments, which still are being continued, a machine has been evolved by the printer manufacturers and many of them are in use. But the perfection of the printing telegraph has yet to be attained.

It is a great fascination for the layman to see an automatic page printer in operation. A simple, but effective piece of mechanism and its operation looks simple enough. As a matter of fact, the printer itself, with its modern reënments, is comparatively easy to understand; and the non-technical man looking at it as it rolls out the copy at sixty or seventy words a minute thinks only of what he sees. But the best printer in the world isn't worth much unless it is a connecting link of wires to bring it to the electrical impulses from the distant station to set its machinery moving. And a very complex operation is here involved.

Morse circuits used by press associations link up half a dozen or more cities on a circuit. Each point can both send and receive, so that if any of the intermediate cities has a news story, it can be sent directly to the other cities on the circuit, all its operator has to do is open his key and begin to talk. Any other station on the circuit receives the news as if it were coming over the line directly from the distant station.

The automatic printer functions of the automatic printer were performed almost equally. This required such intricate work that every printing was made to do, that it is possible only if you in the arrangement of the mechanism to the circuit which materially reduce its speed.

If the sole object were to deliver the news from a central point to a number of other distant stations, the automatic printer could solve that problem admirably. But where the news collection also must be made, and where the costs are as high as possible, it may be economically and more economically through Morse operation.

In 1920 one of the things the Associated Press has discovered in its fifteen years of experimenting; one of the greatest benefits that can be derived from the perfection of the printed telegraph news circuit has yet to be attained.

It is a great fascination for the layman to see an automatic page printer in operation. A simple, but effective piece of mechanism and its operation looks simple enough. As a matter of fact, the printer itself, with its modern reënments, is comparatively easy to understand; and the non-technical man looking at it as it rolls out the copy at sixty or seventy words a minute thinks only of what he sees. But the best printer in the world isn't worth much unless it is a connecting link of wires to bring it to the electrical impulses from the distant station to set its machinery moving. And a very complex operation is here involved.

NEW YORK SUN ASSISTANT MANAGING EDITOR DIES SUDDENLY.

Thomas Mortimer Dieuaidé, assistant managing editor of the New York Sun, who was one of the party of government editors and men who made the trip on the transport Henderson to Panama, returning April 12, died in Washington the following night. Mr. Dieuaidé was taken ill suddenly when on the trip.

Mr. Dieuaidé was for many years a reporter on the staff of the Evening Sun, covering ambassadorial appointments.

For five months in 1898, during the Spanish-American War, he was aboard the battleship Texas and took part in the battle at Santiago. Later he was one of the two civil witnesses to testify before the Congressional investigation in the Sampson-Schley controversy.

He was born on the island of Campeolbo of the Patagonian Islands, off the coast of New Brunswick, Canada, in August, 1865.

After a short time in the insurance business Mr. Dieuaidé began newspaper work on the New York Telegraph, leaving that paper in 1891 after having worked his way to the city editorship, which he had joined the staff of the Evening Sun.

The body was brought to New York accompanied by Mr. Dieuaidé’s son, Dr. Francis M. Dieuaidé, and Maurice B. Judd, Washington correspondent of the Sun. Funeral services were held on Tuesday. Active pallbearers were Don Murphis, Robert E. Livingston, Edmond Barnett, John W. Low, Reginald Wilson, Walter Deuffenbaugh, James C. Grey and Beaussa Fox.

The honorary pallbearers included Frank A. Munsey, Chester S. Lord, William J. Simmons, George Speed, Bernard C. Crandall, Winfield Scott Mays, Charles L. Cooper, Willis P. Dewart, F. T. Birchell, Robert L. Lyman, Ernest W. McCready and Dr. Van Buren Thorne.

OFFICIAL OF MINNEAPOLIS TRIBUNE IS DEAD.

William F. McNally, vice-president of the Minneapolis Tribune Company, which publishes the Minneapolis Tribune, died on April 13 at his home in New Richmond, Wis. Mr. McNally had been ill for some time, but his condition was not considered serious until it became complicated by pneumonia. Mr. McNally was one of the best known attorneys in northern Wisconsin. In 1888 he married Stella Murphy, a sister of the late Dr. J. Murphy, owner of the Minneapolis Tribune.

Mr. McNally became vice-president of the Tribune in 1908 after the death of Mr. Murphy. He was executor and trustee of the estate of Mr. Murphy and vice-president of the Minanistique Pulp and Paper Company.

OBITUARY NOTES.

GRANT SHERMAN HAGER, publisher of the Walsh County Record, Grafton, N. D., died recently at Grafton. Mr. Hager was born in Rome, N. Y., June 7, 1865. He formerly published the St. Thomas Times. Mr. Hager was president of the North Dakota Press Association in 1904-05, and in other years was chairman of the executive committee and a member of the legislative committee.

MRS. JOSEPHINE YEAGER, mother of Abraham Yeager, sports editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, died last week in Brooklyn in her ninety-first year.

CHARLES A. STEELE, for the last eighteen years in charge of the Chicago office of the Wall Street Journal, died Tuesday at Evanston, Ill., before taking up the post he held at his death, was managing editor of the Wall Street Journal. He joined the staff in 1899. He was widely known in railroad circles in New York and in Chicago with an authority on matters related with transportation.

F. A. MURRAY, for the last eighteen years in charge of the New York Daily News, died Thursday morning at her home in West New York, N. J. Mrs. Payne had been ill for the last seven months. She was in her twenty-seventh year.

Mrs. Payne were married June 16, 1916. The same priest who performed the marriage service will officiate at the funeral services, which will be held Monday morning at St. edward’s, Columbus, Ohio.

WILLIAM R. GILLIAM, vice-president of the Harvey Blodgett Company, St. Paul, died at Los Angeles recently while returning from a trip to Honolulu.

MIRA M. METCALF, writer of humorous sketches, died at the residence of her daughter in Washington, D. C., Tuesday at the age of seventy-six. She was a resident of Washington for nearly half a century, but was born in New York City. For almost thirty years she was recording secretary of the Short Story Club of Washington, and was an active member of the Maine State Society and the Excelsior Literary Club.

DISTRIBUTION

Here's the Hook Drug Company with fourteen large, modern retail outlets. They are interested in Turn-Over—not in furnishing warehouse or store space for slow-moving articles. Newspaper advertising certainly is the "OPEN SESAME" for distribution through the Hook chains. They know that it is good business for them always to stock merchandise for which adequate advertising has been scheduled on a noncancellable basis in the Indianapolis News. On the other hand, the Hook Drug Company, and other Indianapolis retailers, are unwilling to do the gambling for the manufacturer. The manufacturer must guarantee—with News advertising—that he will produce the demand before the retailer stocks. The retailer should not stock, nor will he, when the salesman's advertising promise is contingent upon the sale in the market of a certain quota that has been established in advance by the manufacturer.

The Hook Drug Company knows the power of News advertising. They probably use more space in this paper than any other drug concern uses in any one paper in the world.

WORLD VIEW BROUGHT TO MEETING OF A.P.

MEMBERS WILL GET CLOSE-UPS OF NATIONAL AFFAIRS IN MESSAGE FROM PRESIDENT HARDING — PRESIDENT NOYES OF A. P. TO TELL OF WORLD TOUR.

World and national conditions will be brought home graphically to the annual meeting and luncheon of the Associated Press at the Waldorf Astoria. A message from President Frank B. Noyes, for twenty-three years head of the A.P., who has just returned from a trip around the world during which he made close personal observation of social and economic affairs as well as news-gathering methods.

A message from President Warren G. Harding on national affairs will be one of the features of the luncheon, beginning at one o'clock. Adjudging plans work out favorably, the President may make a personal address if plans work out favorably, and there is a probability that they will. At any rate, a message direct from the White House may be expected as a feature of the luncheon. In the event the President is unable to come another high Government official will probably be the leading speaker.

The Associated Press began its pre-convention activities this week with meetings of the board of directors Thursday morning and Friday morning at the executive offices, 51 Chambers street. The officers of the organization were in a meeting situation met at the Waldorf-Astoria Thursday afternoon. The publishers discussed the conditions of the business of the bar to permit member papers to broadcast their news. They pointed out that one of the most important conditions facing the publishers is the cost of news-gathering agencies.

The members placed little credence in the theory advanced in some quarters that the larger broadcasting corporations might eventually give serious competition to press organizations as disseminators of news. One argument advanced against the feasibility of radio organizations entering the news distribution field to any great extent was that the move would entail the building up of a vast news-gathering organization fit to compete with the established agencies. Such action, the members thought, was extremely impractical and unlikely.

The Associated Press will convene Tuesday morning in the Astor Gallery at the Waldorf-Astoria. After an address by President Frank B. Noyes, the members will proceed to the election of directors, advisory boards, auditors, and auditing committee. With the transaction of other business that may come before the meeting, the members will adjourn at one o'clock to the grand ballroom for luncheon.

Mr. Noyes will preside at the luncheon as toastmaster. Seats for members and other guests of members who wish to hear the speakers have been provided in the boxes. Admission will be ticket by ticket which may be procured on the floor or at the meeting itself. The speaking will not last more than an hour after which the members will reconvene in the Astor Gallery to act on unfinished business and to announce the results of the balloting for directorship.

The nominating committee has named ten members to succeed the directors whose terms expire in 1923. Five of these members are to be elected.

The new board of directors will meet at the Waldorf-Astoria Wednesday morning at 10:30 to elect officers and to appoint the executive committee for the ensuing year.

Fairmont Times, Fairmont, W. Va.

Gentlemen:

We believe in giving credit where credit is due and you will probably be glad to know that an analysis of the results of the Crisco Coloring Contest recently conducted in thirty-three newspapers in various parts of the country shows that the Fairmont Times produced the greatest number of entries per thousand circulation.

Your paper averages 86.4 entries per thousand circulation. The second paper was the Ft. Smith, Ark., Times-Record, averaging 49.4 entries per thousand circulation; the third paper, the Tucson, Ariz., Star averaging 46.1; the fourth the Clarksburg, W. Va., Telegram averaging 80.5.

You are to be congratulated on this showing which was undoubtedly the result of your intelligent and energetic co-operation and we want you to know that both we and the Proctor & Gamble Company appreciate it.

Yours very truly,

THE BLACKMAN COMPANY,
(Signed) L. T. Bush.

THE TIMES A.B.C. net paid circulation for twelve months preceding March 31, 1922, was 6,317. Its present circulation is well over 7,000.

Fairmont is located in the heart of the central West Virginia coal fields. Every R.F.D. route leads to mines and payrolls. Its traction lines pass through numerous mining towns, rich agricultural territory, and all lines lead to Fairmont, the buying center with a total population in the trading territory of 65,000.

ANY LINE IN THE PAPER
Set from the Same Linotype

It has been hard to get some newspaper publishers to realize that the Linotypes are now so flexible that they can set any line in the paper. The thing seems too good to be true.

And so for the A.N.P.A. Convention this year we have prepared an exhibit that will present the range and adaptability of the Text-and-Display Linotype in a very forceful and unforgettable way.

First a specimen page was set combining all the problems of the front-page and advertising page display. Then part of this page was photographically enlarged twelve times its natural size so that it would take up a whole corner of the room. In the middle of the page a hole was cut big enough to admit a Model 21 Linotype and a magazine rack. Ribbons run in from various type faces on the page to the magazines showing how the entire page was set from one machine. All from one keyboard, and each font completely contained in one magazine.

This Exhibit is Illustrated on the Following Pages

Unlimited Number of Faces Can Be Set
On a Text-and-Display Linotype

It is the purpose of this folder to show what can be accomplished with a Text-and-Display Linotype and a comparatively small equipment of machines. It does not by any means show the entire possibilities of the machine since there is no limit to the number of times that can be set on it. The additional faces are carried on either full length or short magnifiers and only a few seconds are required to change any one. It would take a hand compositor to cut out every case of type.

In order to provide the purchaser of a Display Linotype with the equipment necessary to put the plant on a display basis, the Company has cut a very wide range of type. This includes complete series of all the most generally used families such as Century, Gothic, Bodoni etc., as well as a great variety of faces that are suitable for special purposes.

Conventional Illustrating the Range and Flexibility of the Multiple Magazine Text-and-Display Linotype.
The Exhibit shown on the preceding page was made BIG because it has a big significance for every newspaper:

Any Newspaper, Large or Small, Can Enjoy the Speed and Economy of Linotype-Set Display

Display Linotypes are saving money in hundreds of composing rooms. In small dailies and weeklies as well as big-city papers.

Many small papers have proved that it would pay to put in a Display Linotype even if were only used three or four hours a day to set display because in those three or four hours the display machine does work that would take many hours if done by hand.

But there is no need for a Text-and-Display Linotype ever being idle. In the average small or medium sized office it will clean up the display composition in a short time and then be ready to help on any kind of composition for which it is needed.

In addition to being a Display Machine it can be a Utility Machine, of wide usefulness, ready at any time for any task.

Ask the nearest agency to show you just how a Text-and-Display Linotype will fit into your composing room and speed up production all along the line.

OF DIRECTORS—$24,801.46 OF
TOTAL WENT TO COMPEN-SATE 263 EMPLOYEES DIS-ABLED WHILE IN SERVICE.

The board of directors of the As-associated Press has refunded to the Employees' Benefit Reserve Fund the total charge of $55,615.08 incurred during the fiscal year ending December 31, 1922, in paying pension, disability and death benefits. During the year $10,520.35 was paid in pensions to fourteen employees; 263 employees added in disability benefits amounting to $24,801.46, insurance covering death benefits and permanent disability called for an expenditure of $15,971.11, and the expenses entailed in providing substitute operators during the illness of regular employees totalled $1,522.21.

Pensions were paid to the following: Robert Berry, Detroit; W. A.
Connor and G. H. Sickles, Philadelphia; J. H. Goudey, J. McGinn and C. C. Martin, New York; Miss

J. J. Newcombe, of New Haven, was placed on the permanently disable roll and since February 1, 1922, has been receiving $17.83 per month.
The reserve fund stood credited with $119,125 at the end of the year.
This consisted of the original appropriation of $100,000 and the interest of $19,125 earned on the security ( Liberty Loan 4.5% bonds, 2d issue).
Charges against the fund were $143,008.43, reported in the statetment to December 31, 1921, and the $55,615.08 for 1922, which made a total of $198,623.51.

Rough Riders and saw service in Cuba. A series of articles from Cuba to his home town papers at Grand Rapids, Mich., launched Mr. Knox into newspaper work. Returning from Cuba he became a reporter on the Grand Rapids Herald, went through the various steps to the city desk, and later became manager of circulation.

In 1901 Mr. Knox purchased with John A. Muehling a paper in Sault Ste
Marie, Mich., and a few months later consolidated that with an existing paper, the consolidated paper being known as the Sault Ste Marie News.
It was as editor of the Sault Ste Marie News that Major Knox became a member of the Associated Press in 1902. Selling this paper in 1912, Major Knox and Mr. Muehling launched the Manchester Leader. They purchased the Manchester Union in July, 1913, and consolidated the two papers, publishing the Union as a morning and the Leader as an evening paper.

Major Knox was appointed on the staff of the governor of New Ham-shire in 1913. In 1917 he enlisted as a private in the First New Hampshire infantry, and in September, 1917, was commissioned a captain of cavalry and assigned to service with the 7th Division. On December 1, 1917, he was commissioned major of field artillery, and given command of a battalion in the 153d artillery brigade. He served overseas with this brigade until March, 1918, until May 1919, when the Regiment was disbanded, and the French signed an armistice in the fields of November 11, 1918.

In June, 1922, the Sunday Union
Leader was launched. It is the only
Sunday paper published in the state.

which he published until 1907, when he became the owner of the Telegram.

He took an active part in war time activities, among other things of organizing and directing the Michigan State Bureau of War Bond and War Loan activities. In 1918, Mr. Perry was chairman of the Michigan reconstruction committee, a member of the community council commission and the industrial relations commission. In 1920 he received the honorary degree of Master of Arts from the University of Michigan for constructive editorial work and services.

Mr. Perry has been president of the Michigan Daily Newspapers Association since 1909 and has served two terms as second vice-president of the Associated Press.

SPORT NEWS COST TO A.P. $1,250,000 EVERY YEAR.

ALMOST ONE-FOURTH OF EACH DAY'S REPORT DEALS WITH SPORTS — SPECIAL WIRES AT ALL BIG EVENTS ASSURE INTERESTED AMERICANS OF LIGHTNING-LIKE SERVICE.

It costs the Associated Press approximately a million and a quarter dollars annually to produce its service. It has been estimated that about 33 per cent of the daily news budget of news is of this class. Excluding the market and financial news sections, in round numbers, the 20,000 words devoted to the world of sport daily go over the 90,000 miles of wire operated by this organization.

SERVICE "ON THE SIDE."

Beside the regular news circuits dozens of special circuits annually are operated to meet the seasonal demands for box scores, races, etc. Of course, where a paper gets its service only on a single wire it does not get the whole volume of the sporting news, but the percentage is about the same.

Special wires go from the ringside of important pugilistic encounters, from the press box of the golf courses, from the tracks, where the horse racing is being decided, from the observation trains following the University Boat Races and from the stadium where thousands are "shoving" for their favorite football teams.

COVERING BIG EVENTS.

International sporting events require equal attention and whether it be an English Derby, a Olympic Games or a bowl game, a man and a Senegalese, the invariable demand of the American newspaper reader must be met, let the cost be what it will.

Then, when the Giants and the Yanks come to grips in the great American classic, it must be a tremendously important piece of news that can be plugged into the paper while the "series" is running. All the circuits are "hooked" together, and the man at the key in the Polo grounds has an audience of tens of millions hanging on his every word. The "dirt" is the extra wire from the press is giving the fan his detailed box, without which his dinner would lack flavor.

LAUSANNE REAL ACHIEVEMENT IN A.P. SERVICE.

FINE STAFF CO-ORDINATION AND EXPERT REPORTERS AT FARLEY ENABLED PROMPT AND ACCURATE COVERAGE OF SOMETHING ABOUT MEN WHO DID THE WORK.

Covering all angles of the Near East peace conference at Lausanne proved to be another Associated Press achievement in cooperative news gathering during the past year. With the activities centering at Lausanne, virtually every capital in Europe reverberated to the myriad of situations brought up at the conference. Despite the tremendous difficulty involved in gathering all details of this event, the European staff of the organization worked with that precision, speed and accuracy which has come to be a characteristic of the Associated Press.

The conference was handled by two service men who had had vast experience in covering events of that nature. Charles S. Smith, who was in charge of the work during the earlier part of the conference, had covered in turn the Paris meeting of 1919, made memorial by the Versailles treaty, the Hague gathering and then the Lausanne conference. More recently, Mr. Smith was joined by Mr. Joseph E. Sharkey, who for many years had been at the head of the Polk bureau of the Associated Press.

Mr. Sharkey had accompanied the Japanese delegation to the Washington Armament Conference and had later been sent to Europe to cover the Genoa conference with the Germans and the Russians. When France invaded the Ruhr Valley, Mr. Smith hastened to his post at the head of the Berlin bureau to cover this situation. Mr. Sharkey was then left alone at Lausanne, where he performed noteworthy service in covering both day and night assignments throughout the concluding stages.

Meanwhile echoes of the Lausanne conference resounded throughout Europe. The situation constantly became more intricate. Warfare was renewed between Turkey and Greece. The Russian delegation sought concessions and the future agreements. Great Britain and Turkey became involved. Economic problems which affected every nation in the world were discussed. The reactions in the various capitals to these problems had to be ascertained. An unusual opportunity was presented to correspondents for individual and co-operative effort calling for the highest degree of newspaper acumen. The staffs of the Associated Press seized upon this opportunity and in a manner that has added a glowing chapter to the history of world-wide news gathering.

Especially noteworthy was the work done by the representatives of the Associated Press at Constantinople. Turkey soon became the hotbed of controversy at the conference. Questions of the control of the Dardanelles, the Turkish boundaries and the rights of foreigners in Turkey were involved.

During the earlier stages of the conference James A. Mills was in charge of the Constantinople bureau. Long service in the Balkans and the Near East made Mr. Mills eminently fitted for his task. Upon his departure, Mr. Elton E. Kloeger, who was transferred from the Vienna bureau, Mr. Kloeger has since been covering the situation in the same capable manner.

FREDERICK I. THOMPSON.

Paul Cheney Patterson, publisher of the Baltimore Sun, was born in Rushville, Ill., about forty years ago. He became president of the A. S. Abell Company, publisher of the Baltimore Sun, about forty years ago and was born in Rushville, Ill., about forty years ago. He became publisher of the Baltimore Sun, publisher of the Associated Press.

Stuart H. Perry, editor and publisher of the Adrian, Mich., Daily Telegram, was born October 13, 1874, at Pontiac, Mich. He is a graduate of the University of Michigan, where he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1894 and Bachelor of Law in 1896, after which he passed practicing law for several years with his father at Pontiac and Detroit. He entered newspaper work as managing editor of the Pontiac Press in 1891, afterwards buying the St. Johns, Mich., News.

Congratulations on McCormick-Oser wedding scoop. Evening American enjoyed the privilege of printing more than a column of cable on wedding in more than 350,000 of the 425,000 circulation yesterday and not a line in any other Chicago paper all day long. Almost unbelievable that in this advanced news age, a story of such magnitude as the wedding of John D. Rockefeller's 18 year old granddaughter to a 45 year old riding master could be held exclusive all day long. Its is the greatest tribute yet to the superior news service of yours. No wonder your clients are soaring in circulation. No wonder Chicago Evening American selling at three cents is ahead of newspapers selling at two cents. Again I congratulate you.

Publishers, Presses and Progress

At this time, when publishers will shortly gather in convention to discuss and exchange ideas and experiences, it is not amiss to consider for a few moments that all-important and most essential factor in the development of any newspaper—the PRESS.

With the foresight born of over a Century's experience in newspaper press building, R. Hoe & Co. some years ago designed and perfected their Superspeed and Unit types of newspaper presses, which are now rapidly superseding practically all other designs in the modern pressroom. Conclusive evidence of this is found in the fact that installations of Hoe Superspeed and Heavy-Design Presses of Unit-Type construction, equipped with the latest Hoe improvement, the Patented Automatic-Pump System of Ink Distribution, have been or are being made in the greatest newspaper plants in the country, including the Philadelphia Bulletin, Philadelphia Public Ledger, Philadelphia Inquirer, New York Times, New York Tribune, New York Herald & Sun, New York American & Journal, Brooklyn Eagle, Brooklyn Times, Boston Post, Boston Globe, Boston Transcript, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Baltimore Sun, Dayton News, Kansas City Journal-Post, Los Angeles Times-Mirror, Minneapolis Tribune, New Orleans Times-Picayune, Newark Star-Eagle, Pittsburg Post & Sun, St. Paul Dispatch, San Francisco Chronicle, Toronto Star, Toronto Telegram, Trenton Times, and many others too numerous to mention.

New production records being made continually on Hoe Superspeed and Hoe Heavy-Design and Condensed-Design Unit-Type Presses, prove conclusively that the Hoe Improved Unit types of construction, especially those with all the printing units on the floor and, wherever practicable, with underneath roll feed either from brackets or reels, although more costly to manufacture, are a better investment in the end and far superior to the old decked or straight-line machines, and publishers considering new equipment are urged to investigate thoroughly the greater output, versatility, and economy of Hoe Unit type construction, before giving undue weight to machines of cheaper design.

We are now installing a large plant of Heavy-Design Unit Presses in the new building of the New York Tribune, and on the initial run the first machine produced 168,000 28-page tabloid papers at the rate of from 30,000 to 32,000 per hour net production, without a single paper break. Three of these presses can now be seen in operation in the Tribune's new plant.

The month of April marked a conspicuous milestone in the progress of the New York Tribune. It is now installed in its new uptown building on Fortieth Street, just west of Seventh Avenue.

It was not without sorrow that The Tribune left its eighty-one year old site on “Newspaper Row”—a spot rich in tradition and historic associations. But the pressure of a steady growth long ago overtaxed its equipment and made expansion imperative.

The new plant was not planned as an industrial shrine to attract the casual visitor to New York, but as the most modern newspaper plant in the world. Constructed and equipped in every detail for efficient operation, it delights the eye of the initiated.

It's more than 100,000 square feet of space, occupied entirely by The Tribune, incorporates many novel ideas of arrangement and equipment and doubles The Tribune's past facilities.

The new plant makes possible the continued growth in News Service, Advertising and Circulation, which has characterized The Tribune's progress during the past decade.
Every Dot Means Ten Families To PLAIN DEALER Advertisers

Sit forward and study the map. It is northern Ohio—second in the country in varied industries. The arc describes a radius of 100 miles—a rich market—with Cleveland as the gateway. This territory comprises over 3,200,000 people.

This map tells two stories—presentment of opportunity and fulfilment to those seeking expansion and consequential increased sales.

Note the centers of distribution. Cleveland is FIRST in 15 of the country's major industries. One and one-half billion dollars is the valuation of Cleveland's manufactured products annually. Ashtabula, one of the world's largest lake ports, Akron, the largest rubber manufacturing center, Youngstown, second in steel production, and Lorain, a large receiving port for iron ore, and shipping point for Ohio coal, are among the cities in this responsive market.

Every dot on the map represents 10 families who use The Plain Dealer as their Buying Guide. That means over 190,000 prospects for soap, spark plugs, washing machines, hair nets and baking powder every day, and nearly 250,000 Sunday. There is no better time to seriously tap this great buying stream of people.

Space buyers know the right media in every territory. That's their business! During 1922, The Plain Dealer ALONE carried 50.3% of ALL National advertising placed in ALL Cleveland newspapers.

WEIGHTY TOPICS BEFORE A.N.P.A. CONVENTION.

LABOR, LEGISLATION, RADIO, POSTAGE AND TAXATION LOOM AS LEADING SUBJECTS FOR PUBLISHERS — ATTENDANCE WILL SET NEW RECORD.

With publishers now arriving in New York in unprecedented numbers, the annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at the Waldorf-Astoria promises to be the largest and most important in the annals of the organization. Pre-convention activities point to labor, legislation, radio, postage and taxation as the most important subjects to come before the convention. The Waldorf management has prepared for a record-breaking convention attendance.

Convention week activities of the A.N.P.A. will begin on Monday morning when the directors will meet at the headquarters in the World building to discuss problems which will be presented to the convention. Convention week activities of the A.N.P.A. will begin Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock in the Astor Gallery of the Waldorf. The A.N.P.A. convention will begin Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 when a general discussion of the publishing problems will be held. The meeting will be continued Thursday morning and afternoon.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF NEW CONVENTION ROOM.

The A.N.P.A. will meet next Wednesday morning at ten o'clock in the Astor Gallery of the Waldorf. The A.N.P.A. convention will begin Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock when a general discussion of the publishing problems will be held. The meeting will be continued Thursday morning and afternoon.

MANY DINNER FEATURES.

Thursday evening's feature will be the dinner to be held in the ballroom of the Waldorf under the auspices of the A.N.P.A. Bureau of Advertising at 6:45 o'clock. Louis Wiley of the New York Times is to be toastmaster. The speakers are to be Lord Robert Cecil, the distinguished British statesman, now here to advocate the League of Nations; George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania, once a prominent anti-warist who recently converted to the League proponent's point of view through the British advocate's presentation of the subject; James A. Emery, counsel for the National Manufacturers Association; James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany, and Will Rogers of the Ziegfeld Follies, who has been developing an assortment of sallies to be directed at newspaper men and newspapers in general.

As the applications for places at the dinner already exceed the capacity of the ballroom, the committee has

EDITORS' MEETING TO BE BRILLIANT GATHERING.

DISTINGUISHED SPEAKERS TO ADDRESS FIRST ANNUAL CONVENTION OF AMERICAN SOCIETY OF NEWSPAPER EDITORS IN WASHINGTON—TO CLOSE WITH BANQUET.

President Harding and Honorable John W. Davis, president of the American Bar Association, will be principal speakers at the banquet next Saturday at the Hotel Willard, Washington, which will close the three-day session of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Grand Annual Banquet will convene at the capital city on April 27 and 28.

The society came into existence just a year ago when fifty editors and managing editors of newspapers met in New York and projected an organization, to "develop a stronger spirit de corps, to maintain the dignity and rights of the profession, to consider and perhaps establish ethical standards of professional ideals, and for the more effective application of professional labors and to work collectively for the solution of common problems."

Friday will be devoted to reports of the various committees, and on Saturday, it is expected, many publishers who attend the Associated Press and the American Newspaper Publishers Association conventions in New York next week, will go to Washington. The following program is scheduled, to open at 10 a.m.:

Friday:

Saturday:
- "Publicity Best Way to End Klan."—Governor Parke declares. "Turn the light of publicity on the Ku Klux Klan. Its members cannot stand it. Reputable businessmen, bankers, lawyers and others numbered among its members will not continue in its fold. They cannot afford it."
- "Gives Good Advice to Ad Men."—Mr. Brisbane, in a short talk to members of the Advertising Club at the Emerson Hotel, Baltimore. Mr. Brisbane was the guest of the club and was cordially greeted.

We are pleased to announce to American Newspaper Publishers that we have made connections abroad for a steady supply of GERMAN DRY MATS of the very best pre-war quality. Immediate deliveries can be made from stock at all times.

LABOR TROUBLE CAUSES 258-YEAR-OLD LONDON PAPER TO MISS AN ISSUE.

For the first time in its 258 years of existence, the London Gazette, the Government's official paper, was prevented Wednesday from printing its daily edition, which traditionally appears in one of its two weekly appearances. The interruption was caused by trouble among the trade union men in the office where the journal is printed.

The Gazette was founded in 1665. Before the days of newspapers it was the Government's official printing office, which it still is. It now prints the Government's daily papers and other official documents, the history of British history for more than 250 years, including those of the House of Commons.

The trouble, which is an unwritten order, affects the 258-year-old London newspaper. It appears in its unsatisfactory columns.

The existence of the newspaper depends entirely on the Government's permission to print official papers, which the Government does not give. It has a few pages, at other times it is as large as an American Sunday journal.

The Government's permission to print official documents is regulated by law, certain persons being obliged to advertise in it, while others would not be able to buy space for a million pounds.
First in Gain!

Leading all New York Newspaper in Gains for Ten Consecutive Months

The World closes the first quarter of the current year with the record of having stood first among all New York newspapers in gains for ten consecutive months. Its gain for the first three months of 1923 was 564,633 lines, which was:

14.9% in excess of the corresponding period last year;
52.0% of the combined gains of the morning papers of New York;
30.8% of the combined gains of the morning and evening papers of the city; and 303,101 lines, or 116%, in excess of the gains of its nearest competitor.

The World's quarterly gain in two particularly important classifications has a special significance to all advertisers at this time:

A constantly increasing number of the leading financial houses of the country are using the columns of The World for reaching an alert, responsive body of investors. Its gain in this important classification was 71% of the combined increase of the field.

The first-quarter's increase of The World Gravure was more than four times the ratio of gains registered by the gravure field. Closing 1922 with a gain of 36%, it has held first place in ratio of gains consistently from the beginning of this year, its quarter's gain being 47% of the combined increases of its field.
Radio cannot replace newspapers, says Harbord.

Head of Broadcasting Corporation declares wireless can only supplement newspapers — has proved value in collecting news.

Radio will never replace newspapers, though it likely will supplement them, Major General James G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America, declared in a statement to The Fourth Estate based on the relative merits of the two methods for the dissemination of news.

“I don’t believe that the time will ever come when radio will replace newspapers and agencies of that sort,” General Harbord said.

“Radio broadcasting will ever replace the printed page as the chief instrument of news distribution. If you note something of more than passing interest, you lay the paper away on a shelf where it is out and gone. You pick up your daily newspaper, and reading through it, you note something of greater importance. The newspapers remain for a year or more, a matter of history.”

Publicity inspired Nero’s Torch, says Hawkes.

The story of Nero fiddling while Rome burned was nothing more than a baseless contrivance to attract attention to some new musical comedy of that time, according to Wells Hawkes, president of the Association of Theatrical Press Agents, who laughingly expressed that view of the incident at a luncheon of the Philadelphia Rotary Club at the Bellevue-Stratford.

“Here have been press agents since the time of the ancients,” Mr. Hawkes declared. “And Dido used to publish some pretty good stuffs in the days of the Caesars. Some of the gladiators had money and used to send secret places by the hour, eulogizing their bravery and fearlessness. And I imagine that the publicity man received about a 95% split. The fellow who thought that one about Nero fiddling while Rome burned, certainly had the right idea. He was a press agent.”

“A man of modern times who could think up new stuffs with some of our collection and the papers had given me considerable space. One day, however, I entered the office of a New York city editor and informed him that we had in our collection a monkey that could write shorthand. Instead of falling for the story he summoned two office boys and the monkey was safely lodged in an insane asylum. Charles Dillingham was the first great publicity man.”

Mr. Pindell said he found a distinct improvement in every way over the conditions that existed in Europe when he was there last year. Europe needs our help, not alone moral but physical as well, and just as much as ever before. He said his trip had convinced him that the United States could no longer occupy an isolated position in regard to Europe. He believes America should join the League of Nations or a similar organization to help Europe as well as ourselves. On the cruise were several other publishers and their wives, including Victor Murdock of the Wichita, Kan., Beacon, and Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, and Mrs. Murdock; William Allen White, Emporia, Kan., Gazette, and Mrs. White; Harry S. Talmadge of the Toledo, Ohio, Blade, and the Newark, N. J., Star-Eagle, and Mrs. Talmadge; John F. Dwyer of the Philadelphia Record, and A. S. Jewell of the Springfield, Mo., Leader, and Mrs. Jewell. Mr. White went abroad to make a report for the Near East relief.

At Naples Lord Beaverbrook, publisher of the London Daily Express, and his secretary, Sir Horace Douglas, boarded the steamer, leaving the party in London. By far the most interesting incident was the trip to the tomb of Tut-anhk-Amen and the Valley of the Kings, though the party stopped at Gibraltar, Algiers, Constantinople, Athens, Palestine, Nice and at Monte Carlo, where Harry Talmadge distinguished himself by winning some un-conceivable number of francs. Mr. Talmadge said that he had won 150,000 francs on three turns of the wheel and repeated the performance in a gaming casino at Lisbon, winning about $1,000.

The newspapers everywhere, of course, carried long and excitable accounts of Lord Carnavon's discoveries that rallied against the desecration of the Tombs of the Pharaohs. Tut-anhk-Amen seemed to provide the livest subject of conversation. The party spent several days in the desert, and visited the Sphinx and the Pyramids. Photographs of the party were taken at the tombs and elsewhere.

Mr. and Mrs. Pindell left New York for home last Saturday, but Mr. Pindell is returning for the convention of the Associated Press and the American Newspaper Publishers Association next week. He is one of the nominees for election as director of the Associated Press.

Henry M. Pindell, publisher of the Peoria, Ill., Journal and Sunday Journal-Transcript, was born at St. Joseph, Mo., December 23, 1860. He was graduated from De Pauw University in 1884. Mr. Pindell established the Peoria Herald in 1889 and after purchasing the Peoria Transcript in 1897 consolidated it with the Herald as the Herald Transcript. He bought the Peoria Evening Times in 1897 and sold it to the Peoria Evening Journal. In 1902 he bought the Evening Journal and has since been its sole proprietor. After selling the Herald-Transcript in 1902 he re-purchased the Transcript in 1916 and made it the morning issue of the Evening Journal.

Mr. Pindell was city treasurer of Springfield, Ill., from 1887 to 1889. He was a delegate-at-large to the Democratic national conventions in 1908 and 1912. Mr. Pindell declined the ambassadorship to Russia in 1911 after the senate had confirmed President Wilson's nomination.

On March 10th, we announced that an increase in our shop labor rate would necessitate an advance of AUTOPLATE prices.

This advance will occur on May 1st.

As the country is in for a long period of rising prices of all manufactured goods, we suggest in the interest of economy that publishers order now such machinery as they are likely to need during the ensuing two years.

THE PRINCIPAL NEWSPAPERS OF THE WORLD USE AUTOPLATE MACHINERY.
RADIO A SELLING POWER FOR NEWSPAPERS.

PROGRAM NEWS IN DEFINITE DAILY DEMAND, A CONSTANT FACTOR IN CIRCULATION — NO REASON TO REGARD WIRELESS AS ADVERTISING COMPETITOR.

By Edgar H. Felix, American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Radio, instead of being a menace to the welfare of newspapers as some publishers have been led to believe, has proved to be a valuable adjunct in increasing both advertising lineages and circulation. According to a recent survey conducted by the radio broadcasting department of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, hundreds of newspapers throughout the country are attributing a marked growth in their prosperity to radio.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company is now furnishing approximately 500 newspapers with advance copies of its programs. While most of these papers are within a radius of 100 miles from New York City, the programs are run frequently at points as distant as Chicago, Wisconsin, and Alabama. The newspapers within the New York area which are supplied with these programs regularly, have a combined circulation of 10,000,000 copies. A survey of a number of these cities with a combined population of 2,100,000 persons, showed that there were 70 newspapers in the group, with a total circulation of 1,100,000 people. A large percentage of the population of each community undoubtedly is keenly interested in reading that paper which runs the most complete radio news.

JOURNALISM NOW TAUGHT IN 199 INSTITUTIONS.

FIFTY-NINE OFFER MORE THAN THREE COURSES, WHILE 140 OFFER ONE TO THREE SUBJECTS — EXPANSION IS PLANNED FOR PRACTICALLY ALL SMALLER COURSES.

Preliminary classification of the schools and departments of journalism in the United States shows that fifteen institutions are offering more than three courses, and 140 others are offering from one to three subjects which will count as journalism in the schools.

Of the 154 institutions offering four or more courses, thirty-five are organized on the basis of a school or course alone, while the other 119 are organized on the basis of blocks of courses. The schools are not all meeting the requirements for full membership in the Association of Schools and Departments of Journalism but they are organized in such a way that it is comparatively easy for them to meet the standards of the association.

The next most significant group is that which is organized to offer the equivalent of an undergraduate minor in journalism. In this class there are at present sixteen institutions. Practically all of them are seeking further expansion and the creation of either a full department, or one which will count for inclusion in the group if it is later reorganized.

In the group offering four or more courses but not organized as distinct units are many small secondary schools which have only a few courses when all the work in journalism is included. The basis for inclusion in this group was fixed at four courses because it is generally true that the schools which offer four or more courses are taking the work in journalism seriously and are planning to expand it into a more adequate system of study. As classification of schools continues this group will disappear and only schools with definite journalistic organization will be classified.

Using the divisions indicated the schools are classified as A, B, and C. (Continued on Page 14a)

STYLiE C. RELIEFOGRAPH

This illustrates our hand-lever not motor driven embossing machine with a capacity of 50 embossed plates per hour. Our power driven Reliefograph has a capacity of 250 embossed plates per hour. (see illustration below).

Do away with your galley room and Linotype slugs for newsdealers and subscribers. Substitute our thin indestructible aluminum plates, have the printing of your mailer strip, preparation of the lists, etc., done in the circulation department under the observation of the circulation manager, where the work can be done in half the time required with any other system and names entered on a daily list up to within an hour before closing time.

For those whose lists warrant it, we have an Automatic Mailing Machine which eliminates mailer strip entirely and prints on the margin of the publication direct at a speed of from 10,000 to 15,000 per hour.

QUEBEC EDITOR RELEASED AFTER SERVING PART OF HIS SENTENCE

John H. Roberts, editor of the Montreal Axe, a weekly, has been released from Quebec jail after serving three and a half months of a sentence imposed on him by the Que- bec legislature for printing comments "violating the dignity and privileges of members." He printed in his paper rumors concerning the sale of the inquiry into the murder of Blanchar Garneau here in 1920.

LORENZEN and THOMPSON, Publishers Representatives
NEW YORK CHICAGO DETROIT
Department Store Advertising!

When selecting newspaper as advertising mediums in New York, "quality" counts. Circulation counts. And more than either the intangible element that might be called "personality", the element of prestige and decency, counts also. But from the advertiser's point of view, these three factors simmer down to one: A newspaper "pulls" or it doesn't, in proportion to the expenditure required for its space.

THE NEW YORK HERALD PULLS.

During 1921, 1922, and in the first quarter of 1923, The Herald published more Dry Goods advertising than any other New York (morning) newspaper but one.

The importance of this fact becomes apparent when one considers that "Dry Goods advertising" consists largely of the advertising of the great New York Department Stores which sell tremendous quantities of merchandise with a diversity and a price range that include products somewhat similar to practically all those nationally advertised; and whose advertising returns are directly traceable day by day.

A national advertiser who includes The Herald in his New York morning newspaper schedule profits by the experience of many of the world's greatest merchandising organizations.

THE NEW YORK HERALD

The thing you are hoping to do

In every business that is destined to grow, one man at least is engaged on a stupendous task.

He is trying to give people a better understanding of the product he is marketing.

He is hoping to get his salesmen, his partners, his dealers, and the public to appreciate the actual, human, social need of the service his product is made to render.

He has studied his product. He has studied its present use and its possible uses. He has worked and spent to improve it.

And yet, instead of seeing and selling or buying this product in terms of the service it renders, everyone goes ahead and buys or sells in terms of so much material at such and such a price.

If you are wrestling with the job of making your product better understood and more advantageously used, it is because you know it can be done, you know it will be done, and you don’t want to struggle twenty years only to see someone else take up your idea and win with it, while you and your efforts are forgotten.

Advertising does in a few years the things that otherwise would require a generation to accomplish.

Most of the great advertising successes are those which have given the public a new conception of the way to buy and use an old product.

If advertising can help you do the thing you are trying to do, you need it and want it. If a talk with men who understand how advertising works would help you, call on us.

Once a month, or more frequently, we issue a publication called Batten’s Wedge. Each issue is devoted to a single editorial on some phase of business. If you are a business executive and would like to receive copies, write us.

ASSURING THE CONSTANCY OF ADVERTISING VALUES.

APPROPRIATIONS ARE GIVEN EVERY SAFEGUARD BY BOTH AGENCIES AND PUBLISHERS — TEAM WORK HAS CREATED CONFIDENCE.

By JAMES O'SHAUGNESSY, Executive Secretary, A.A.A.A.

Manufacturers and distributors in America can today invest dollars in advertising with greater security than at any other time or in any other country. That statement, on the surface, is a broad commendation of all advertising; but analysis will show that it is a specific endorsement of publishers' rates.

The soundness of publishers' selling prices is a basic element in making advertising that pays everybody concerned in its use and production. Most of the fine things we are able to point at in advertising today would never have transpired if rates had been out of proportion to the service rendered.

Makers of advertising owe more recognition than is usually accorded to the makers of media. The men who have built the roads and the vehicles for advertising are not judging the efficiency of their efforts by the size of their pay. They are affairs of the highest type.

The advertising columns of his publication make the publisher the master merchant of his field. In order to sell his own product he must show that he can help other men sell theirs. Therefore the soundness of publishers' rates is a matter of prime importance to industry and commerce.

The publishing men of this country have realized more than ever that the efficiency of any agency is having at his right hand the advertising agency, with its machinery for making advertisement for the advertiser in a way that the future of such advertising is a basic element in making advertising that pays everybody concerned in its use and production.

The Four A's exist to safeguard the advertising business. The publishers' selling prices are a basic element in making advertising that pays everybody concerned in its use and production.

Every now and then I run across the man who "doesn't believe in advertising"—one who says "advertised goods cost more," says Hugh Chalmers, president of the Chicago Tribune Company.

"Advertising is 'news,'" declares Truman A. DeWeese in his book called "Keeping a Dollar at Work." And he continues: "The closer we approach the truth, the closer we come to the recognition of the fact that the value of advertising to the merchant or the manufacturer, the retailer, the wholesaler, and, as far as advertising is concerned, the advertiser, is a thing that may be looked upon as a capital investment, a thing that pays dividends, as does every other business investment."
Advertising aims, methods, results have developed greatly in recent years.

Advertising has come to be recognized as salesmanship's most forceful factor.

It moves goods to quick turnovers and speedy profits, and builds and preserves reputations for merchandise that grow into tremendous assets.

Only advertising that is an honest, informing, assuring voice to the buyer is of much permanent value.

The merchandise and performance must thoroughly back up every statement made, whether direct or implied.

The good advertising business message is not only keen, clear-cut, and convincing in its construction, but is carried by messengers (media) in whose advertising contents the public confidence has grown stronger and stronger each year.

The newspaper has become the ideal advertising medium. Every intelligent man and woman in the land reads it daily. It is welcome in every home, and the honest, straight-forward business messages therein are greeted in a spirit of good will that adds to the response.

We are the National Advertising Representatives of TWENTY PROGRESSIVE NEWSPAPERS in that many fine cities of the United States.

We are equipped to lay before any interested advertiser or advertising agency a vast amount of up-to-the-minute information regarding the market opportunities and publicity advantages of those cities, whenever and wherever you say.

REVISED LIST of ADVERTISING AGENCIES

NEARLY FIFTEEN HUNDRED in the UNITED STATES AND CANADA

AND FOUR HUNDRED AND FIFTY OVERSEAS

Star (*) indicates members of American Association of Advertising Agencies.

The Fourth Estate will appreciate any information furnished in the matter of changes of address, or of any errors or omissions that may have occurred ever before.

The agencies in the larger cities—New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia—have been placed first on the list for convenience, as they are most frequent.

Thanks are extended to the agencies themselves, the American Newspaper Publishers Association, the British Advertising Agents Association, and many others for their cordial co-operation in this work.

In three months of this year The Times printed 5,948,810 lines of advertising, 261,532 lines in excess of the corresponding period of 1922 and 1,610,616 lines more than the next New York newspaper.

In 1922 The New York Times published 24,142,222 agate lines of advertising—a gain of 2,489,609 lines over 1921 and 6,893,132 lines in excess of the next New York newspaper.

With a daily circulation of 350,000 copies and a Sunday sale exceeding 550,000 copies, the readers of The New York Times, distributed in 8,000 cities and towns of the United States, form the largest group of intelligent, discriminating and responsive persons ever assembled by a newspaper.

ONE HUNDRED MEMBERS OF THIRTY CLUB COMING TO CAMPAIGN FOR LONDON AS 1924 CONVENTION PLACE—BRITISHERS HAVE STARTED TO PREPARE ALREADY.

The proposal to hold the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in London in 1924 will be renewed by a delegation of British advertising men and merchants. Sir Charles F. Higham came over last year to the convention in Mil-aukee as a special representative of the Thirty Club of London to convey to the American advertising men the invitation of the British clubs to hold the convention in London. His invitation was received so favorably by the American advertising men at the Milwaukee convention that a special committee was formed to consider the matter upon all features of the proposal. That report is on file, and its support of the proposal for a "London Convention." The following material for a report to the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, Mr. Wilson-Lawrence spent several weeks in London, where he interviewed all those who were interested in the proposal. He found much enthusiasm among the American advertising men, merchants, publishers, and manufacturers. He reports that all appreciated the meeting would be of interest to them.

The secretary of the British Advertising Clubs, Mr. G. F. Higham, was acting as non-Lawrence also points out in his report that if the convention is held in London the delegates of the Thirty Club of America will arrive there in May, 1924, for the opening of the British Empire Trade Exhibition, which is expected to be the largest trade exposition ever held in the world. Buildings already are being built on 400 acres of land at Wembley, near London, among them the world's largest stadium for athletics and outdoor sports. It is intended that a large hall at this exposition shall be set aside for the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

EVEN SALT ADVERTISING CAN BE MADE MISLEADING. Advertising ground rock salt imported from Germany as "highest grade of salt obtainable" and without any origin designation deceived the public and were unfair to competitors who truthfully described salt sold by them, the commission states.
The Lesson of a Localism

After all is said and done, upon consumer demand depends the success of any product in any community.

That paper which the local merchants find most profitable as an advertising medium is safe for adoption by the manufacturer for the exploitation of his product.

The Washington merchants know. There is no guesswork about what they do with such unanimity—for The Star—Evening and Sunday—carries, not only the advertising of practically every local merchant—large and small—but carries their unabridged copy.

It frequently happens that The Star’s volume of advertising greatly exceeds that carried by all the other Washington papers combined.

With The Star alone you are sure of reaching every worth-while resident and sojourner in Washington.

It covers the National Capital completely.

EVOLUTION OF ADVERTISING

IN THE MUSIC TRADES.

Half a century ago the advertising of the leading piano houses consisted of the name of the concern in heavy black blocked type with a little more space, of special improvements which they claimed for their instruments.

"Now and then space was taken in the daily papers when some of the leading houses got into a controversy over some award or some disparity in the prices of their pianos. But there was, however, no regular attention paid to the advertising which, having been once gotten up, remained as before in stereotyped form week in and week out, month in and month out.

"In the music trades, as in other businesses, the old town crier lost his job."

THE REAL TRUE STORY HOW THE OLD TOWN CRIER LOST HIS JOB.

In his time, the Town Crier served the identical purpose of the modern daily— the broadcasting of the news. It is interesting to note that even in the days of Lincoln's Civil War and the World's Fair, the old and new methods of advertising were combined with the news of the day.

"And every day in every city in the world the bellman has been regaled with the news..."

COX BUYS MIAMI PAPER.

James M. Cox of Dayton, former governor of Ohio and Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1920, has bought the Miami, Fla., Metropolis, an afternoon paper.
WHY ADVERTISING IS NECESSARY TO BUSINESS.

The big economic problem of the world is now, as it always has been— "How can each of us get the most from his day's work?"

Measured in gold, wages may be lower or higher than they used to be. MORE FOR A DAY'S WORK.

Measured in things to eat and things to wear; in books to read and music to hear; measured in comfort or convenience—in shoes to walk in or automobiles to ride in—everyone of us gets infinitely more for his day's work than anyone a hundred years ago. And so, more in proportion than last year, or last month—or, indeed—than yesterday. This century has made more difference, in the physical things of life, than any other single century ever made. For without the railroads—great and wide distribution could never have existed. If it were not for advertising, you might be paying $2 for something that was better made a hundred miles away for $1. And— if it were not for advertising, you would be living today without even knowing the existence of most of the things necessary to your comfort. The sewing machine costs money—but cheaper by far than the hand labor. The printing presses costs money—but cheaper books.

The telephone costs money, and saves millions of dollars. Advertising costs money, and not only lowers selling costs, but, by increasing the field of competition, lowers prices too. And advertising does a finer thing than all of these. For it is this in men the desire for better goods—for better homes and for so finer lives. For it is the one biggest, simple economic influence for good in the world today. And when, now and then, I meet the man who doesn't believe in advertising— "I am glad to tell him some of the reasons that I think him wrong. Which is a pretty good way to burnish up and strengthen my own faith. Some condemn all advertising because of occasional frauds which is a pretty good thing. But if you would have them engraved and mailed to your guests. You would in this way spend less money to save money and time, which is also money. Any man who has anything to sell has the problem of getting his invitation to buy before the largest possible number of prospective buyers. The larger the number he interests, the more use he can make, and the lower his producing cost descends. So he takes the quickest method of reaching a large number of people by advertising. And if someone tells you he is able to sell your goods at a lower cost because he had no advertising expense, laugh at him."

HEADS VIGILANCE WORK.

Kenneth Barnard, formerly secretary of the Better Business commission at Toledo, and more recently associate director of the National Advertising Committee of the A.A.C. of W., has been appointed director of the work of the committee. Owing to the illness concentrating lighter duties, William P. Green, until recently director, has been made associate director.

Housewife Gets Instruction Fresh Every 12 Hours, Advertisements Differently —Uses Ads Just as Her Husband Uses the Stock Market Quotations.

Nine out of every ten women read the advertisements of the retail stores more than they do any other part of the daily paper.

In fact, it is safe to say that nine out of every ten women are guided in their shopping by the "news" containing these advertisements.

Newspaper announcements of the price and quality of merchandise have assumed importance of the telephone directory in the average city household. The housewife looks to this section of the daily paper as one particularly her own—one destined for her special convenience and information.

Alma Reed, Feature Writer of the San Francisco Bulletin, who recently did a special subject on this subject, finds that housewives generally regard newspaper advertising not only as a very effective time and labor-saving device, making it unnecessary for her to "go the rounds" of the shops in order to satisfy herself as to where she can buy the best commodity for the least money—but also as the most reliable textbook in her education on values.

The advertisements, with their stories of fluctuating costs, are as essential to her practical, working knowledge as the keener insight and efficient handling of her housewife allowance is as the daily stock market is to her husband's investments.

And, as a result of the policy of honest advertising, the housewife has come to look upon the advertisements with their descriptions and illustrations—as absolutely reliable. She believes what she reads, because she is convinced that it has all the authenticity of what she sees. She does not have to weary herself or spend the time that she could well devote to her duties, in keeping check on "what things are worth."

PUBLISHERS' GOOD NATURE OFTEN IMPOSED UPON.

Extending accommodations to small and new agencies is likely to be found costly—many hard luck stories, but agency is debtor, not client.

It is generally understood that two of the principal reasons why publishers pay commissions to advertising agencies are, first, for the service of creating business for the advertising columns of the publisher, and the maintaining of the literary and artistic standard for carrying out that purpose. And second, for payment of advertising bills and seeing that the publisher is not aggrieved by the neglect of advertisements.

"It would seem that a few agencies at times overlook the last proviso," the Agricultural Publishers Bulletin observes. "An agency is supposed to be in position to finance itself and meet the publisher's bills promptly when due. If the publisher is going to finance both the agency and the client, one of the main reasons for allowing commissioner is wiped out."

"Recently a publisher reported that an agency objected to the last proviso, for payment of account on the ground that one of his clients had sustained a very bad slump in business, and on account of having used considerable space, he thought the publisher 'should give the client' further time for payment of account, and at the same time give a little 'thrive' to help out. The publisher has no connection with the client as far as payment of the agency bill and his restrictions are his own. It is surprising that any responsible agency should make such a statement."

Another recent report suggested that stress be laid upon two points in any agency application blank. It was stated that the agency should be impressed with the fact that arrangements should be on a cash basis for the sales, and that no assurance of any cash discounts whichever the client paid his bill promptly or not. In this instance the complaint was made that the agency was asking consideration for the 'client's bill,' when as a matter of fact the client did not owe the publisher any money, because it did not make an arrangement for carrying out the client's business."

"It seems to be a hard matter to convince some agencies and advertisers that it is a real coin of the realm to produce a page of advertising space, past it as it would cost money, the cost of a ton of coal, or a pound of sugar or a pair of overalls. The fact that the engine and coaches are 'made up in the train anyway,' doesn't stop the cost per pound for every passenger carried, and the same applies to the production of a publication."

"Most of the complaints along this line seem to lie in connection with the smaller and newer agencies. Every constructive small agency should give full operation and encouragement, but they should not be given any advantage over the concerns which have been developing business in large chunks for farm papers during the past years."

"Occasionally a deserving and responsible agency will go up against it and require a little accommodation from the publisher, and generally get it. But we know of several cases right now where publishers are holding up the bag from giving accommodation to unrecognized agencies which did not have any semblance of enough benefit in the till to transact a legitimate agency business."

"Publishers owe an obligation to those established agencies who are taking care of their bills promptly, and not the way of seeing to it that all agencies are required to place themselves in position to finance their own business."

NEW YORK TIMES CENSORSHIP OF ADVERTISING AIMS AT UTMOST FAIRNESS.

For years both newspapers and advertisers have known the New York Times, although it was among the first to welcome the idea that, if agencies, others realized that, after all, it was itself responsible for its own advertising columns. It had always tried to keep them clean and honest, but a few years ago, to do so even more effectively, and to apply in regular and orderly manner the law that a new motto which run some day like this, "No advertising is allowed which is not fit to print," a censorship committee on advertising was established.

"That committee scans every advertisement submitted for publication which gives any indication, in text, by authorship, source, business or connection, that it might convey an erroneous impression of the good so offered for sale, or contains words or phrases which could not be properly read aloud in any home in the land, or introduces goods which might offend the good taste of the Times readers."

"Every word is read and weighed, every sentence considered. Sometimes only a few words need to be taken out, an explanation for some minor correction made to qualify an advertisement for admission. But sometimes one has to be rejected altogether. Sometimes concerns themselves have to be denied access to the advertising columns."

"Where changes in copy are necessary, advertiser or agency is notified and consent to the change obtained. When the matter grows deeper than a mere change in copy, one of the committees of investigators is assigned to make a thorough examination. Any advertiser who feels aggrieved and has a defense against exclusion is invited to meet the censorship committee and present his case, bringing witnesses if he desires. He has a full and courteous hearing before the whole committee, if necessary; if not, one member gives the audience the judgment."

"The consequence is that clean and reputable business men are protected from the Times advertising columns, that readers of the Times are thus protected from the advertiser.

"It is generally understood that two of the principal reasons why publishers pay commissions to advertising agencies are, first, for the service of creating business for the advertising columns of the publisher, and the maintaining of the literary and artistic standard for carrying out that purpose. And second, for payment of advertising bills and seeing that the publisher is not aggrieved by the neglect of advertisements."

her family decently and cheaply than she cares about the agreement of the nations to scrap battleships. As a matter of fact, the housewife is very apt to regard the proposal to scrap battleships as the persiflage and camouflage of politicians, whereas she expects the announcements of the merchants to be honest and sincere.

"Occasionally the representative of some other form of advertising, such as billboards or streetcars, attempts to draw a comparison between these mediums and the newspapers. This means simply a waste of time and much mental weariness. There is no comparison.

"You can't compare an automobile with a farm wagon. They are not in the same class. It argues nothing to say that the farm wagon is a much cheaper vehicle. Space on a large billboard on the state highway for a month is much cheaper than a page advertisement in the newspaper for a month—but the combat is without sense or logic.

"The billboard with advertising value, it is true, but it is not to be compared with any advertisement that is embedded in the news of the day and which enters the home and is a part of the family circle. Advertising in the street car is cheap and has advertising value, but it does not enter the home, nor does it have the news value that attaches to the daily merchandising announcements that appear in the local papers.

"Everyday reads a newspaper. Most people read several newspapers. The amazing growth of the 'newspaper habit' is the product of our democracy, the safety of which depends upon the widest dissemination of public information. In no other country in the world is the newspaper habit so universal. In the old world countries the newspaper is read only by the educated and the prosperous few. As the kings and emperors pass off the stage the newspaper becomes the true tribute of the people.

"The newspaper comes into the family circle every morning and evening. It knows your friends and your neighbor's friends. It carries the news of the town into the home of the dealer who sells your goods. The newspaper has chronicled the doings of his family for generations. The files of the paper contain his family history, the weddings, the deaths, the anniversaries. It is his source of information regarding his party, his church, his lodge. It is by this intimate relation to the home that the newspaper occupies a field of its own as a medium, indispensable to the advertiser who must have a wide distribution for his products."

Advertising reduces sales expense, because a single ad can call on thousands, while a sales man can call on one or two. Advertising reaches an individual at least ten times per cent of the cost of telling the story to that person in any other way.

Advertising increases the keenness of competition so that prices are forced downward.

It would not be possible to produce a lead pencil for two cents, a tube of paint for ten cents, a collar for twice a half cent, were it not for the force of advertising in creating a wide demand, permitting quantity production and labor-saving machinery, thus cutting costs.

There are other reasons why you should insist on the advertised product.

"NAME ADVERTISING."

The purpose of most advertising is to establish the reputation of a name. In order to live up to that reputation, definite standards of quality must be maintained in the product. It must live up to the claims of the advertisement. Faking or misrepresentation cannot stand the light of publicity.

Advertising is your protection and safeguard. It points out the lines of goods of whose quality you can be sure.

Publishers' Co-operation puts added value in advertisers' space.

PERRY-LLOYD JONES NEWSPAPERS.
A new pioneering job in the railroad world

For the first time railroads have united to sell an entire region to the American nation

YEARS ago people laughed at the men who first planned to drive a railroad across the vast, unpopulated tracts of the Northwest.

It was only because they were fired by the same vision and courage as the early pioneers whom they followed, that these railroad men completed their work.

Today in this same Pacific Northwest—Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming—three railroads have commenced a new, enormous work of pioneering.

The wilderness has vanished. Large and beautiful cities have arisen.

But even with its amazing growth in population—eight times as rapid as for the whole country, the development of the Pacific Northwest has only begun. Its millions upon millions of fertile acres, its unlimited water power, its great natural wealth, stand waiting for the modern pioneers of agriculture, industry and commerce.

This is the background of the stirring task that has united three railroads—the Burlington, the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific.

For the first time in history, advertising is being used by railroads in a sustained and large-scale effort to develop an entire section of the United States.

This month, national magazines carried the opening announcement of a campaign that is to tell the whole nation the story of the Pacific Northwest—the romance of its past—but even more the unparalleled opportunities that it holds out today.

Already city after city in this section, visited by special representatives of the railroads, has demonstrated its enthusiasm and faith in the campaign and in its great objective.

With many jobs in the past accomplished “for the first time in history” the J. Walter Thompson Company has welcomed the privilege of co-operating in this great new enterprise.

REDWOOD, CAL., TRIBUNE BECOMES MEMBER, AFTER ALL 'FRISCO PUBLISHERS EXCEPT HEARST WAIVE NEW RULE APPLIED TO FUTURE APPLICATIONS.

Admission to membership of the Redwood, Cal., Tribune over the protest of the Hearst papers in San Francisco was the outcome of the Associated Press, on Tuesday. The Redwood paper, which is designated as in San Francisco territory by the A.P., procured the waiving of protest rights but the membership nevertheless voted for admission.

In the case of the Camden, N. J., Courier, all the New Jersey papers waived protest rights but the Philadelphia members declined to do so. The application of the Camden paper was also refused.

The convention adopted an amendment to the by-laws requiring that the membership must be filed with the secretary at least thirty days before the date of the annual meeting, and that all the papers likely to be affected by the application receive notice of it from the secretary as soon as possible, before the annual meeting convenes. The amendment defines the right of the members to require a prompt and full hearing of the petition for membership, and provides that the resolution of the members waiving protest rights shall be entered into the record of the Associated Press.

NEWS PRINT CONSERVATION AND PAPER COMMITTEES COMMENDED FOR HOLDING PRICES DOWN — STRESSES NEED FOR AGREEMENTS WITH UNIONS.

Paul C. Patterson, president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, in his opening address at the annual convention of the publisher, at the Waldorf-Astoria, Wednesday, stressed the aggressive work of the paper committee and the newsprint conservation committee in holding the contract prices for 1923 at a reasonable figure.

The agreement reached with the pressmen's union, for a new arbitration contract Mr. Patterson emphasized the importance of excluding negotiations with the other unions. The amount of the increase on the committee on federal laws in availing a duty on sulphite pulp and cement prices, with the association's committee on its work in relieving cases of paper shortages.

Another important question to be considered, Mr. Patterson said, was the inadequacy of the association's funds for the maintenance of linotype schools. The only failure in the association is that Mr. Patterson could record was in the fight for a reasonable modification of the postal rates. Despite the intelligent and vigorous efforts of the postal committee he believes it is necessary to grant a readjustment owing to the unbalanced antagonism of certain congressmen.

Mr. Patterson's address follows:

Members of the American Newspaper Publishers Association,—In welcoming you here today I feel it is necessary for me to dwell upon the great work that you are doing under the leadership of this great organization that gives you. Rather, I prefer to emphasize the importance caused by the excellent attitude of the world, the sustained interest of the membership in the work of the association. You have come here in what, by all tokens, seems to be the busiest period that has ever developed for the newspapers of the United States and Canada, a period that is (Continued on Fifteenth Page)

JUMP OF 12 PER CENT IN CONSUMPTION FORECAST BY A.N.P.A. CONSERVATION COMMITTEE, WHICH LOOMED LAST YEAR ENDED BY CO-OPERATION.

William B. Bryant, chairman of the newsprint conservation committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, reported to the convention at the Waldorf-Astoria that a survey made by the committee indicated that the newsprint consumption for 1923 would exceed by twelve percent that of 1922.

In addition to Mr. Bryant, the members of the newsprint conservation committee of the Associated Press on the proper course of action in the case of the Camden, N. J., Courier, all the New Jersey papers waived protest rights but the Philadelphia members declined to do so. The application of the Camden paper was also refused.

The report follows:

"The News-print Conservation was brought into being several years ago during an emergency and has functioned steadily since that time, and only when the situation was acute and serious enough to interest the entire association, we voted to go on with the plan. Your committee during the late summer of last year, anticipating the possibility of a crisis, and nearly all one of the great increase in consumption, organized sub-committees in practically every state in the Union. The News-print Committee has been in operation for the past year.

"Although there was a distinct hardening of the paper market during the early part of last year, and the anticipated crisis did not occur, paper consumption became available to meet all needs.

"During the latter part of 1922 a questionnaire was mailed to members in an effort to ascertain how much more news-print would be consumed in 1923 than had been used during the previous year. The results of the compilation of the information, as shown the Associated Press on his one wire as a big paper gets on four. Those men are very splendid men. They are doing a great work.

"The staff at Washington does a tremendous amount of work. And you will remember the superintendent there wrote that interview of that 'Day With Ex-President Wilson,' which is one of the most splendid pieces of work that ever went into an American newspaper.

"And here are these men whom you never see and I never see, who are placed all over this country, from Maine to San Diego, occasionally breaking into the newsprint business, but who are working diligently. If we got that same story from a special correspondent, or probably as a special correspondent, the New York or Washington newspaper which makes a business of peddling its news, we would think it was wonderful.

"Those men really are the fibre: the men who toil in the background, who keep the machine in top condition, who take care of its operation. And how can we do anything that is going to be in line with the work of these men, and we thank them for it. If we got that same story from a special correspondent, or probably as a special correspondent, the New York newspaper which makes a business of peddling its news, we would think it was wonderful.

"And so I move that the members express their appreciation of the very able and efficient manner in which our paper committee is working in the best interests of the newspaper business. And I thank them for what they have done during the past year.

"The committee also offered a tribute of appreciation to President Frank (Continued on Twenty-seventh Page)

COMMITTEE'S REPORT RESULTS IN FAVORABLE ACTION BY CONVENTION — TACTICS OF UNION SHOW INSTRUCTION SYSTEM HAS MADE BIG STRIDES.

Reporting to the American Newspaper Publishers Association, Thursday, on the progress during the year made by the Mason Printing School,建立于1920年，后来被接受为美国报纸协会的官方学校，目前在该学校第四年运作。

Mr. Anderson's report follows:

"During the past year a separatedepartment for instructing in mechanics has been established at the Mason Printing School. This is a project of the Associated Press, and the union will probably as a special cable from some New York paper which makes a business of peddling its news, we would think it was wonderful.

"We have some men here in this organization who are at cross-points and who have the difficulty of taking a four-line wire report, sometimes, and cutting it into a single wire report. It is just like taking sixteen columns of news and condensing it into four columns. And they ought to have as much of the Associated Press on one wire as a big paper gets on four. Those men are very splendid men. They are doing a great work.

"Those men really are the fibre: the men who toil in the background, who keep the machine in top condition, who take care of its operation. And how can we do anything that is going to be in line with the work of these men, and we thank them for it. If we got that same story from a special correspondent, or probably as a special correspondent, the New York newspaper which makes a business of peddling its news, we would think it was wonderful.

"And so I move that the members express their appreciation of the very able and efficient manner in which our paper committee is working in the best interests of the newspaper business. And I thank them for what they have done during the past year.

"The committee also offered a tribute of appreciation to President Frank (Continued on Twenty-seventh Page)

Will Vacationists from Philadelphia buy your goods this summer?

Purchases for vacation trips and sojourns at resorts during the next three months will transfer many thousands of dollars from the pockets of the people of Philadelphia, Camden and suburbs, to the cash registers of manufacturers and dealers.

Summer suits, dresses, shoes and other articles of apparel; sporting goods, automobile supplies, toilet articles and other things are on the "vacation needs" lists of the majority of the population of the "third largest market in the United States."

You can influence this vacation buying—get these thousands of people to ask for your goods by name or trade mark—through advertising in The Bulletin.

HARDING ADVISES EDITORS TO INSIST ON ACCURACY.

PREFACES NOTABLE WORLD COURT DECLARATION AT A.P. LUNCHEON WITH EARNEST COUNSEL TO JOURNALISM—URGES EDITORS TO INTERPRET CORRECTLY.

American journalism is in need of "a little less eagerness and much more accuracy," President Harding declared to five hundred members of the Associated Press and their guests at the annual luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria Tuesday. The President prefaced his speech on the International Court of Justice with this counsel, and just before the close of his address made the declaration that editors as moulders of public opinion have ignored the fundamental reason for a "great change" which "has taken place, vitally influencing the work of administrative and legislative fulfillment."

The President's views on the attitude the United States should take interest in his counsel to journalism. Many of the reporters who "trail Harding," having advance copies of his speech, prepared the members for a most ... of the speech might "make or break" President Harding as a political figure.

"It is inevitable that the President, who happensto be a newspaper man, appearing before a newspaper gathering, must talk about journalism, because he is a journalist himself, and, if I were going to lecture on Journalism, my theme would be 'a little less eagerness and much more of accuracy.' (Applause)

THE GOLF STICK STORY.

"Not very long ago I returned from a southern vacation and I picked up a very friendly publication and in a story on the golf stick it was said that the President of the American Publishers Association said something about the golf stick. (Laughter) I have never squirmed under the criticism but I have sometimes been appealed at inaccuracy of statement, and if I were going to lecture on Journalism, my theme would be a little less eagerness and much more of accuracy. (Applause)

"I left America feeling very proud of our organization and come back with an even greater pride. Generous as was the praise showered on the Associated Press as the foremost news gathering organization in the world, the tributes everywhere to it substantiated impartiality were the most heartening words that I have ever heard, and I heard them at every point I visited."

REPORTS UNBIASED.

"Japan and China, with widely differing standpoints, agreed in crediting the Associated Press with the most scrupulous impartiality. When I reached them, and I found the relations between the two countries somewhat strained, but was met in both countries by the most outstanding testimony from leading public men and journalists that our entire unbiased and accurate reports have been of the greatest service to each of them."

PUBLISHERS DINE AND FROLIC AT "CARRIERS' LARK."

PARTICIPATE IN THE FOURTH ANNUAL PARTY GIVEN BY HEAD OF HEARST FEATURE SERVICES — TEXAS EDITOR IDENTIFIED AS KING TUT REINCARNATED.

Publishers who have attended previous frolics given by M. Koenigsberg, president of King Features Syndicate, International News Service, Universal Service and allied organizations, always expect something different in the way of entertainment, and they were not disappointed Wednesday when they gathered for the fourth annual party, this year known as a 'Carriers' Lark.' Practically every member of the A.P. and A.N. P.A. in New York this week attended the merry frolic.

The evening varied from the usual solemnity of gatherings of serious men in the hall to the more light-hearted making, a brief address by the host, a few words by Arthur, Brisbane, and a splendid program of professional and amateur entertainment, the high light of which was the creation of the evening. Supported by the roster of comic artists who create so large a part of the well-known features syndicated to newspapers by King Features.

The Friars' Song, led by Sidney Jarvis, with all present joining in the chorus, ushered in the merriment as soon as the coffee cups were whisked away, and between special acts and surprises brought to pass on the set stage at the front of the hall there was incessant by-play and amusing incidents by "planted" interlocutors and interpolators heard from strategic points about the room.

King Tutankhamen was reincarnated and delivered living to the diners soon after the evening was under full momentum. In presenting King Tut, Mr. Koenigsberg said that the excavators of the Tomb of Pharaoh Tutankhamen said no other than Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, whereupon Mr. Carter appeared before a screen and a series of optical illusions created by electrical lighting effects, made it appear that he was brought to life from the mummified form of old King Tut. Friends of Colonel Carter established his identity as the reincarnated Tut by the evidence of the similarity in names between Tut-Ankh-Amon and Amon G. Carter. If further proof was needed, it was sent: the man was a colonel, as was revealed that Colonel Carter's middle name is Egyptian.

MORNING PAPERS TO PUSH JOINT CAMPAIGN.

ADVERTISERS AND AGENCIES WILL BE SHOWN VALUE OF REACHING THE CONSUMER EARLY IN THE DAY.

CONFERENCE WITH A.A.A.A. HELD ON THURSDAY.

About sixty of the publishers who attended the A.N.P.A. convention took part in the meeting of the Morning Newspaper Publishers Association which was held Wednesday afternoon in the assembly room at the Waldorf with A. Schaefer of the Fort Wayne Journal Gazette as chairman and Louis Wiley of the New York Times and L. K. Nicholson of the New Orleans Times Picayune as the leading speakers.

The general sentiment was in favor of continuing the work started by the morning association, which now has eighty-one members, and to take steps in the near future to crystallize the purposes of the organization into definite action.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL EDITORS TALK SHOP IN MEETING AT UNIVERSITY.

One hundred and thirty-four delegates from fifty-seven schools of the State of Washington attended a meeting of the Washington High School Press Association, held under the direction of the University of Washington School of Journalism, April 13 and 14.

For the purpose of furthering newswriting in high schools, aiding in putting out better high school publications and helping the high school editors in as many ways as possible, a plan was proposed that offers awards to the best high school newspapers in the state. These awards are to be presented at the annual meeting of the state high school press association.

To this end there will be conducted at the University of Washington an information bureau for the high school editors. This bureau will answer all questions asked by high school publishers concerning problems of management, editorial policy, organization, make-up and so on. The bureau will be conducted by the school of journalism.

A monthly bulletin will be printed for the general problems that arise among the high school editors. The bulletin will be distributed to all schools having a publication by the students. In this bulletin suggestions will be offered for the handling and gathering of news for high school papers. It will also offer suggestions on the handling and make-up of the different styles of publications.

Schools trying for the awards will be classified according to their student enrollment. One class will include papers from schools under 800, another from schools over 800, and the other class those from schools under 800.

These awards not only will be given to the school papers but to the school monthly magazines and annuals.

NEW YORK PAPERS TO PUSH JOINT CAMPAIGN.

ADVERTISERS AND AGENCIES WILL BE SHOWN VALUE OF REACHING THE CONSUMER EARLY IN THE DAY.

CONFERENCE WITH A.A.A.A. HELD ON THURSDAY.

Mr. Schaefer opened the meeting with an earnest description of the morning newspaper's strategic value both to the reader and to the advertiser. He said that the morning newspaper rather than the evening had struck the full page of editorial comment and other essentials which assured the newspaper an audience of the bulk of the consumer public.

Morning newspapers as a rule, declared, had not been so captivated by a too high rate of circulation and had given the most intimate relationship with the fields they serve because they have been forced to think of the day and interpretations of the news.

According to Mr. Schaefer, twenty or thirty of the largest advertising agencies place the bulk of the tremendous volume of advertising in the newspapers. He said that for some reason the attitude of advertising agencies towards the evening papers failed to change, although they had been handsomely encouraged at the expense of the morning newspapers. This was the result of advertising agencies using the morning newspapers at the source of advertising. Mr. Schaefer advised the publishers that it was not entirely a matter of national advertising.

It was his belief that, as only about three hundred of the two hundred and fifty daily newspapers in the United States are exclusively morning newspapers, it behooved the publishers of these three hundred morning dailies to get together and re-establish the value of the morning newspaper as an advertising medium. If they were not allowed to continue without some action on the part of the publishers, Mr. Schaefer said that the situation might conceivably arise in which the value of morning newspapers would be greatly magnified by coming from the morning newspapers.

The circulation of the morning newspapers is published at night and the newspapers are delivered into homes. It is his belief that if the papers were published early in the day the morning newspapers would be more read during the day.

James O'Shaughnessy, secretary of the A.A.A.A., met the executive committee of the association for a conference Thursday morning.

New York morning newspapers so greatly dominate in the New York suburban district that all but twenty-seven evening newspapers published within the 50-mile radius of New York are of no importance. These newspapers have a total circulation of less than one-third of the circulation of the six New York morning newspapers.

A year or so ago an investigation was made by the New York Stock Exchange, national advertisers and advertisers of doctors, lawyers. The result of this investigation showed that New York morning newspapers are of much greater value than evening newspapers. When advertising is dangerous.

To a man who told him that he had advertised freely and successfully with a morning newspaper, Harrison said he replied, "Sir, advertising is like a horse race. If you claim there was only one liquid a man could use in excessive quantities without being swallowed up by it, and that was printer's ink."

The morning newspaper advertisers have the valuable advantage of reaching the same readers day after day. Moreover, each reader's attention is concentrated upon one edition newspaper than it is not in advertisements in the evening newspapers. The morning newspaper may publish four editions daily and spend 4 a.m. but each edition goes to a separate printing press for duplication.

In New York the evening newspapers have many editions. The first edition is usually the best and the average reader goes home from business or from a day's shopping there are many newspapers that have been printed by afternoon editions. New York evening newspapers are sometimes read in the evening, or way home, or by the women in these suburban families.

PUBLISHERS FIGHT "CLEAN BOOKS" MEASURE.

NEW YORK NEWSPAPERS FILE BRIEF WITH LEGISLATURE PROTESTING PROPOSED BILL AS ADDED VICE TO THE ARBITRARY POWER OF CENSORSHIP.

Newspaper publishers of New York City joined in the fight against the "clean books" bill now in the New York state legislature, when in alliance with authors, book publishers and members of the printing crafts they filed a brief this week with a special committee in which it was maintained that the proposed Corti-jones amendment would be but an added vice to the arbitrary power of censorship, subject to attack countless volumes of religious, classic and scientific books.

The effect of this amendment, taken in consideration with an announcement later considered, says the brief, "would be to enable interests hostile to particular publishers and authors to cause complaints to be filed against publishers and publications that they either desire to injure or prevent."

Opposition is also expressed to that section of the bill which would make a part or parts of a novel a sufficient basis for an indictment, information or complaint.

SIMPLIFIED SPELLING SAID TO BE GAINING IN FAVOR WITH PUBLISHERS.

The Simplified Spelling Board, reports more than six hundred newspapers and periodicals that have adopted for use in their columns about two hundred of the original list of three hundred words recommended for simplification.

This board was formed in 1906 by members of the American Philological Association, the Philological Society of London and other educational organizations. It has recommended the approval of many members of the teaching profession, the editors of leading dictionaries, college authorities, and some newspaper and magazine publishers. The board believes that simplified spelling will tend to save time and money, both in education and in printing, will remove the greatest barrier to Americanization of foreigners, and tend to make English an international language. The objection that simplified spelling will destroy the etymology of words is answered with the assertion that the "scolar" knows the derivation of words anyhow, and from that point of view, spelling means nothing to ninety-nine per cent of those who read and write English. An idea of the simplifications suggested may be gained from the following list of thirty words:

WHOLE CONTINENT IS PROSPEROUS SAVORY SAYS.

ALL WE NEED IS CONFIDENCE IN OUR OWN ABILITY TO COMPLETE READJUSTMENT PROCESSES, MERGENTHALER OFFICIAL SAYS AFTER U. S. AND CANADIAN TRIP.

"American business is cheerful all the way through the country. Values are high, and there is no indication that they are inflated. Optimism is the most noticeable, without discord, both in the United States and Canada."

This is the meat of the volume of information collected by Walter H. Savory, personal representative of the vice-president and general manager of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, on his return from an annual trip that has taken him from coast to coast. Mr. Savory was in touch with local conditions in all parts of the two countries from Florida to British Columbia and Quebec to Los Angeles.

"Industries in the East are practically all working at full capacity," said Mr. Savory. "The resort places of the South and of California have been overrun all winter with people who have money to spend."

"Crops in all sections have been satisfactory and available at good prices."

"Even the cattle country of the plains, hardest hit last year and year before of all localities, is feeling better, and looking for a steady rise of its financial barometer."

"Texas is a verdant caldron of bubbling, effervescent activity. Her oil interests, cement industry, cattle men, cotton growers, are all hustling to keep up with the demands of their clients."

"The whole West coast from Los Angeles to Vancouver is teeming with business so great that real estate values are at a high level."

"California, Oregon, Washington and British Columbia are all anticipating a remarkable year—in transportation, business, in building of all kinds, in fruit growing and sale, in transportation."

Limit Urged in Exploiting Radio.

THE USE OF WIRELESS FOR PUBLICATION BY PRIVATE COMPANIES IS OPPOSED—NEW SCIENCE SEEN AS A MEDIUM FOR ENLIGHTENING MANKIND.

Radio is too great a medium for the commercial advancement of any one institutional and its use in its advertising should be strictly limited with the maximum amount of betterment. Halloran, editor of the Radio Magazine, at the Forum of the Commerce of San Francisco recently.

In co-operation with the American Radio Radio-conditioning subjects relating to radio and electrical development were discussed by various speakers. The standard of good radio is in variance with the one given just previous by Professor Edward R. Gardiner, marketing and advertising expert at the University of Wisconsin and president of the National Association of Advertising Teachers, who declared that the possibilities of radio were so limitless that it was an invaluable medium for advertising.

Radio in "Stone Age."

"Radio is still in the stone age of advertising," said Professor Gardiner. "We are only just beginning to get it away from a bit of miss-understanding and confusion and begin to realize that there is as much a real and artificial barrier in using the medium as there is in clothing. In fact, the barrier is a bit more pronounced from producer to consumer where it is not equal set to the medium, and it will require more development before it can be so."

SPIRITUAL FACTOR.

John A. Britton, vice-president of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, spoke on the development of the power side of radio and... said Professor Gardiner. "We live in an age where purposes are prescribed by loyalty, the pride of association, and the inspiration to accomplishment. I was the party government where purposes are prescribed by Harding.

More Accuracy Prescribed by Harding.

One more thought, little expected on this occasion, I am sure, but particularly appropriate before a highly representative body like the American Press. I know from experience how a newspaper man confidently prints public affairs. He has a marked advantage, because he is not only a good reporter, but he is a man of letters, and unless he happens to be elected President, and apparently not so, he has no chance of being re-elected. He has not yet achieved a pace in advertising and will require many years further development before it can do so, he stated.

"Radio is still in the stone age of advertising," said Professor Gardiner. "We are only just beginning to get it away from the representational and legislative fulfillment. This effectiveness is now influenced by war stress and Presidential personality.

In the political system, the rules of the primaries, the definition of pure democracy, and the growing impotence of political parties. We have gotten away from the representative system; we have reached a point where the lack of party loyalty has been replaced by party leadership in government less effective than it was for us to evolve to the time when a party platform is regarded by too many men in public life as even less important than a scrap of paper, and groups or sections are turned to serve group interests, and many individuals serve their own, while contempt for the party conference or cabinet has sent party loyalty much into the discard.

In the personal politics. They were the essential agencies of the political government, were in the making of what we are. We were never perfect, but under our party we have fought a development under representative democracy unmatched in all proclaimed liberty and attending human advancement. We achieved what we did, and we have been committed to sell parties and party loyalty was a cardinal factor in the inspiration toward accomplishment. Nowadays, in many states, party adherence is flouted, loyalty is held to be contemptible, nominations for office are often influenced by voters enrolled under an opposing party banner, and politicians are sometimes the in-sincere utterances of expediency, influenced by nominees, rather than by advocates of principle.

Let no one misconstrue me. I am not criticizing the abandonment of the primary which gives to every voter a voice in nominating the office and determining policy party. I would carefully preserve and safeguard it so that the mid-term causes which impelled its adoption, I would adopt, but I would adopt it so that it was not used as a means of party expression rather than a means of party confusion or destruction. Paul Cheney Patterson of the Baltimore Sun was re-elected president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association at the convention which closed Thursday at the Waldorf-Astoria and was notable for the attitude taken on labor, advertising, radio and the printing trade schools. All the officers of the association were re-elected. They are as follows: Paul C. Patterson, Baltimore Sun, president; S. E. Thomason, Chicago Tribune, vice-president; T. O. Fincher, Boston Globe, secretary, and Howard Davis, New York Tribune, treasurer.

SPLITTING OF COMMISSIONS, INTERNAL BORROWING, AND FREE PUBLICITY "BANDITS" CONDEMNED BY COMMITTEE.

The committee on advertising agents scored certain practices used by advertising agencies that it considered not only unethical but destructive, such as the borrowing of substantial sums of money from an agency by its principal, failure to maintain an adequate surplus, slow payment of obligations, and new-fangled schemes.

The newspapers of the country are losing out on the "pernicious" workings of free space "bandits," the report said, and to correct the situation the committee has recommended that agencies be required to post a bond, and that the bond be cancelled if they fail to make necessary payments.

The report follows:

During the year 110 applications for recognition were received. Thirty-seven for credit ratings, previously extended to the agencies were cancelled on the ground that applications were not completed in time. The committee is therefore not in a position to act on them.

In a preface to its report last year, the committee made known its interest in the question of the minimum surplus and the proper time in which to act on requests for recognition. It is now in a position to say that it has decided on the time in which to act, and that it is not now in a position to act on any application for recognition except in the case of those agencies which have been recommended to it by the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

The committee has classified credit ratings on the basis of the standing of those entitled to it and the quality of the work done.

In conclusion, the committee says that it is not now in a position to act on any application for recognition except in the case of those agencies which have been recommended to it by the American Society of Newspaper Editors. The committee has reclassified credit ratings on the basis of the standing of those entitled to it and the quality of the work done.

"As a protection to the members of the advertising agencies, your committee believes that the advertisers should maintain at all times an adequate surplus. This surplus is necessary for the purpose of defraying the cost of making audits in such cases."}

Failure to maintain an adequate surplus is a condition of recognition, and the committee is therefore not in a position to act on any application for recognition except in the case of those agencies which have been recommended to it by the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

for upward equalization. We are maintaining this view in pending cases affecting rates generally. The Interstate Commerce Commission is making an investigation into express transportation generally. Applications have been made for increases in rates and in various lines. The American Railway Express Company, at the beginning of the inquiry, notified your association that it would not seek any change in the existing rate on newspaper bundles. This rate was established two years ago as a compromise agreement with representatives of a number of large newspapers. Some members have expressed opinion that we should seek reduction of the express rate. Your committee, under advice of your directors, has considered it advisable to await opportunity for consideration later when not involved with other commodities and rates.

In news-press transportation, your committee has endeavored to render service through four principal channels:

1. Watchfulness over freight rates.
2. Relieving cases of newsprint shortage caused by traffic delays.
3. Offers of co-operation with paper mills in car shortages.
4. Preventing troubles by advance precautions in co-operation with government agencies and railroad officials who have cordially recognized the necessities of news-press transportation.

Through weekly bulletins during the past year, your association has requested publishers to notify the management on news-press transportation. All such cases were acted upon promptly in co-operation with railways and the threatened or distress relieved. Requests from mills for help in car supply also received immediate attention. Your committee gave this service to publishers during the year. Probably was greater than former years and your committee extends it to the association in case of necessity.

If forecasts are correct, serious congestion of railway traffic is anticipated for full car supply and prompt service for news-press, but publishers should be prepared to tide over temporary interruptions during the autumn congestion.

Your committee takes this opportunity of expressing its thanks and appreciation to Mr. L. P. Brown, associate director of the association whose energetic efforts have translated into direct action to the committee's advisory function and supplied to members an agency of real value.

AD CLUB REPRESENTATIVES OF TEXAS CONFER WITH GOVERNOR NEFF.

Four representatives of Texas ad clubs conferred with Governor Neff last week, urging him to submit to the special session a blue sky bill, the Real Estate Association of the State, a bill sent to the governor with the recommendation from the legislature that of Dallas will offer the bill if the question is submitted.

The legislature is necessary if the legislature was called in special session to consider certain matters, and that the work of the law enforcement in all printed matter, and is therefore proportionately effective. This efficiency is in the maintenance of rates and the permanence of performance.

Rates are stable. A cut rate in a newspaper is now a curiosity. Presidents have made no change in the matter of their newspaper.和 down the length and breadth of the land the outlook is promising and Europe's reconstruction while it might help, if hurried, will not greatly harm North American printing.

The country needs men men of ambition not publicity, but two-fisted people to produce crops and get money from the soil. East and West need them. Canada needs them, and there's plenty of room and money ahead for the class that's willing to work for the country.

"Printers of publicity are on a higher grade industriously and financially than ever before and there's every reason to believe present good business will continue or be still further improved.

PRESIDENT STILL MEASURES THE "ADS."

A home-town friend of President Harding staying at a New York hotel after a visit in Washington, told the executive:

"He got up and greeted him warmly from behind a desk littered with papers. They chatted for a few minutes about current affairs and old friends. Then the talk turned on political developments and matters of state. The President spoke earnestly about the duties and responsibilities of this great country and crossed the room and gazed out of a window reflectively.

"I'm learning away from the window. "If I had known what this job is, no one could have ever got me into it. I'm tired and worried and isolated most of the time. It's almost as if my work of late has been doing things that I'd like to do. I'm tired to this desk. I can't get enough exercise."

"Well," said the visitor, giving the president a sharper turn, "hope you haven't stopped reading the Marion Star?"

The President chuckled, "The Marion Star," he said, "No, John, I haven't stopped reading that. I take it to my room in a call at the chief executive.

"We will," said the visitor, "We will have to do half the things I'd like to do. I'm tied to this desk. I can't get enough exercise."

"And," said the visitor, "I can't have time to read the newspapers."

"Well," said the visitor, "I can't have time to read the newspapers."

"And," said the visitor, "I can't have time to read the newspapers."

witnessing the widest activity on the daily newspapers. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to bear witness to the excellent work done by your various committees since the last convention. Many important matters have arisen, requiring prompt and aggressive attention. Feel it is necessary to review the detailed reports of these committees you will certainly agree most heartily that they have done excellently well and have rendered a service of inestimable value not only to our industry but to every newspaper in the land.

I shall only take the time to call briefly to your attention some of the more important matters taken up during the year.

DUTY ON SULPHITE Pulp PREVENTED.

Very soon after the 1922 convention the Committee on Federal Laws engaged itself in an active campaign to prevent the imposition of a duty on sulphite pulp. In furtherance of this work a most effective organization of sub-committees in each state was worked out and through these State Advisory Committees, much support was secured for the efforts of the main committee. The result is in the prevention of the proposed tariff.

DIFFICULT NEWS-PRINT SITUATION MET.

In the latter months of the year the news-print paper situation developed in such a way as to require especially aggressive and intensive work by the Paper Committee and the News-Print Conservation Committee. An effective campaign assistance was secured from the many special sub-committees which were organized in practically every state for that purpose, and much of the supervision of this work was in the hands of the chairman. Consumption of news-print has increased so rapidly over the past six months of the year that paper prices began to advance steadily. Demand for spot news was very heavy as to encourage practically all manufacturers to advance prices for contract print in an effort to close the contracts for the supplies of news-print. The result was that prices had been pushed up from an average of $3.50 per hundred pounds to an average of $4.00, or a rise of $0.50 per hundred pounds, which would prevail for the year 1923.

The News-print Conservation Committee and its various effective sub-committees conducted a vigorous campaign to impress upon the public the necessity of holding down as much as possible on the consumption of news-print in order to avoid paper shortage pressure in the spot market; at the same time strong representations were made by the Paper Committee to the manufacturers to avoid a serious upset of conditions by holding prices low at all times. The result was a reasonable figure. These counsels of mod- eration failed, it is true, in the first instance; but it is estimated that a price of $3.75 a hundred was fixed for the first six months of the year. Consumption is continuing in a record-breaking rate, but fortunately expansions have taken place in the news-print mills at a rate that should provide an ample supply of paper to meet the demands. Publishers avoid extravagant and wasteful use of paper.

ARBITRATION PROGRESS.

After much patient work the Committee on Arbitration Contracts successfully concluded negotiations for a new contract with the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America. The new contract provided for an increase in wages, and with the remaining unions continues to deadlock and presents one of the most important problems for consideration by the convention.

TRAFFIC PROBLEMS MET.

The Committee on Traffic has had a particularly active year. Traffic conditions on the railroads became very acute in the fall. Many manufacturers are reporting shortages of cars. In certain sections of the country embargoes on freight were placed. The Traffic Committee has dealt most effectively with these situations. It has been active touch with the various railroads and by keeping the railroads constantly informed as to the present need for adequate car supply has managed to relieve the immediate difficulties. Individual appeals from publishers have been dealt with by the Committee. The Traffic Committee was also very active in relieving news-print shipments from various embargoes. The routine work of the Committee is to receive the specials of the railroads, respond to its appeals and anxious to do all that lies in its power to meet the requirements of the situation.

POSTAL RATES ADJUSTMENT REFUSED.

Only in the case of the fight for a reduction in the rates is it necessary to record failure and this is in no way different from the intelligent and vigorous efforts on the part of the Postal Committee. The efforts of this committee in the attempt to secure a reduction in postal rates are due to the unaided antagonism on the part of a certain group of congressmen, and this situation may be able to continue until the members of this group understand the unjustice and the improbability of the existing rates.

DEVELOPMENT OF LINOTYPE SCHOOLS.

In accordance with the resolutions adopted the development of an educational system was decided by the publishers at the beginning of the year for the purpose of assisting in the maintenance of linotype schools. In order to this purpose the printers of the states have been approached and the difficulty for this purpose, in view of their direct support of the problem.

It has been rendered more difficult by reason of the fact that linotype schools are being organized in all parts of the country and applications being made for the support of the linotype school fund, which is inadequate to meet all these demands. This is an important question deserving the careful consideration of the convention and on which many of the Directors will submit a special recommendation.

I will not attempt to take the time necessary to touch upon the work of the other committees, but I must refer you to the very full and perfect of their reports, which you will find printed in full.

HUMAN INTEREST FABLES IN NEWSPAPER PUBLICITY OF A.N.P.A.

Julius Gutman & Co., of Baltimore, Md., are running a series of advertisements entitled "Modern Fables," The first story pointed out the value of paying cash and proving to happiness and read:

"Once upon a time there lived a man and his wife, and they had many, many squabbles over the money question. 'Twas a pity; for they loved each other dearly, and it was only the subject of money that brought them distress."

When the man was desirous of giving to his wife lovely clothes and much finery, but his income was limited, and she had acquired the 'charge habit,' so that on the first of the month there was quarreling and making up and new promises, made only to be broken. One day the wife happened in at the cash store. She walked about among the pretty clothes and things. She looked at the price tags and gasped in amazement because they were so much lower than the charges stores asked for the same qualities.

"When she went shopping the next time she shopped for cash. She saved money—much money. She had no bills, and when the first of the month came she promptly told him her achievements, and peace and contentment reigned in their house from that day forward."

In accordance with the resolutions adopted at the 1922 convention, an assessment was levied upon the members at the beginning of the year for the purpose of assisting in the maintenance of linotype schools. In order to this purpose the printers of the states have been approached and the difficulty for this purpose, in view of their direct support of the problem.

The situation has been rendered more difficult by reason of the fact that linotype schools are being organized in all parts of the country and applications being made for the support of the linotype school fund, which is inadequate to meet all these demands. JOURNALISTIC STUDENTS NOW FRATERNITY MEMBERS.

Slugs of type attached to the coat lapel of eight journalistic students at the University of Utah herald their entrance into the Phi Kappa Phi fraternity, national journalistic fraternity, as pledges. The eight men are Preston Grever, Vernon Grieve, Donald Lyman, Russell Welser, Clinton Dinsdwoody, Lennox Murdock, Ray King and Wayne Farnsworth. Eligibility to the fraternity is based on either four years' successful participation in college journalism or the holding of the position of editor or business manager of a college publication.

The Byron, Cal., Times, following its recent loss by fire, is being issued on time and printed with a second color as usual. The publisher, Mr. Hammond, while the fire was still burning said that he intended to build a better and more modern building to house the newspaper. Construction is already in progress on a building composed of hollow tile and much larger and more modern than the old plant.

The site will be on the property owned by Mr. Hammond, a corner lot fronting 170 feet on the Byron Springs highway and 173 feet on the Mount Diablo boulevard. It will be one story, twenty feet high, and will have a frontage of one hundred feet on both streets. The building is owned by Mr. Hammond.

Mr. Hammond expects to be in his new home by June 1.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADVICE TO JOURNALISM.

President Harding's address to the Associated Press luncheon will go down in journalistic and political history as a most notable event. The President's admonition to journalists to cultivate less eagerness and more accuracy received a sympathetic hearing from the press when it came, as did from a President who has made it a point to be proud of the fact that he is a newspaper man. The governmental and political significance of the President's words was interpreted in various ways by his audience, composed of men of widely divergent political beliefs, but his counsel to journalism was heartily endorsed by the members of the press when it came.

It is apparent from the President's words that propriety is not new to him. He has learned a new side of the newspaper business during his occupancy of the White House. His address was not the first indication of this, but it was his first good opportunity since taking office to present his thoughts to a representative gathering of his newspaper men. The editors and publishers in the gathering, of whatever degree of Republican or Democratic faith, seemed completely to accept President Harding's counsel to journalism as that of a man notably qualified to advise. The Associated Press luncheon was the most eventful and interesting in that association's history. It is a source of deep gratification that the President of the United States selected a newspaper audience for his direct statement of his views on international relations, and that he did this thoroughly in keeping with the high standard of leadership set by the Associated Press that the people of the country should receive the president's messages through a medium of their own choosing. Add another scoop to the A.P.'s list.

CONVENTION PROGRESS ON LABOR MATTERS.

There can be no questioning the soundness of the A.N.P.A.'s action at this week's convention. This was made clear when it was attended by the first hearing because so little publicity had been given the proceedings of the papers. The third reading of the bill before the New York legislature was taken up on the third day of the convention.

As most in cases involving efforts at any kind of censorship, this matter was slipped through the assembly after it had been taken for granted that it would be pushed through without opposition. The opposition, however, is representing those who are determined to fight the measure made their voices heard.

The situation which led to presenting of this bill grew out of the views held by the Associations of newspapers as to some of the recent fiction products. Censorship, however, is hard to limit, and it is to those who advocate it, and the difficulty of limiting its application to the newspapers, that the A.N.P.A. has always made the paths of censorship advocates rough and rocky.

It will be noted that the Publishers Association of New York City, of which all the great metropolitan dailies are members, is also contributing first of the publishers' organizations to realize the iniquitous possibilities of the clean books movement as applied to newspapers, even though it is only in a beginning stage at the present time.

In 1914 there were at least 145 daily newspapers of all sizes in Canada. Today 102 comprise every daily enterprise in the country. Paper exports are being stepped up, and the establishment of a new daily is attended with unusual caution.

Need for encouraging school children to think of civic affairs is becoming increasingly apparent. It is an easily established fact that the schools alone are unequal to this great task. A statistical survey of educational work conducted by the Federal Bureau of Education shows that what is to be spent less than six years of his lifetime in school. Fortunately, says a leading Publisher, "There is an increasing interest in civic education, and the influence of the press—the greatest single factor in post-school education of adolescents and adults."

The pre-eminent of President Harding's more distant achievements is his opposition to the minor consideration of his administrative capacities was his interest in the press question, with the questions of the press, the press, and the press, and of the press. The pupils answered questions as to what they thought about Abraham Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt and Benjamin Franklin about as about as much as they might have been expected, but when it came to Warren G. Harding, the unanimity wasippy. "He makes me want to play golf."

OHIO PAPER BEGINS ITS FIFTY-SIXTH YEAR.

The Bowling Green Sentinel, now a part of the Sentinel-Tribune, has just entered on its fifty-sixth year, having been founded in 1867 by J. A. Bodenhamer and Fred C. Clute. The Sentinel was founded in 1859 by C. S. Van Tassell, in 1906 Alex B. Clark, and in 1918 by Alpheus Hadwell as manager and John T. Hutchinson as editor. Mr. Hadwell continues as manager, and Spencer A. Canary is editor, having assumed the position at the retirement of Mr. Hutchinson in 1909.

RETIRES ON ANNIVERSARY.

James Currie, who lately relinquished management of the Stirling, Ont., News, possesses a unique record in that his retirement took place on the sixty-third anniversary of his connection with the publishing business. Mr. Currie first came to Whitby township in 1853, and began his apprenticeship in Oswaw. Some years later, he moved to Whitley township, where he worked for a short time in Massachusetts and New York, before taking up printing and newspaper work in Port Perry. He has been in the publishing business for sixty-three years.

FORMER PUBLISHER HONORED.

Alexander P. Moore, former publisher of the Pittsburg Lead, the Pittsburg Leader, of Port Arthur, Ont., was a man of many interests. Mr. Moore was a driving force in the development of Port Arthur, Ont., and Whitby township, his work in these communities being of great benefit to them. He has always been a leader in any movement that he has supported, and his influence has been felt in many directions. He was a happy, cheerful man, and his passing is a loss to many friends and neighbors.

it applies to news print, the convention adopted a resolution embodying a definition of "standard news print" as placed upon the free-list in the Federal Revenue Act of 1922, can be properly defined only as "newsprint paper used in the manufacture of standard newspapers."

Be it further resolved that the Committee on Federal Laws be authorized and directed to urge upon the Federal Treasury Department and Collectors and Appraisers at the several ports the adoption of this definition in the interpretation of the Tariff Laws.

The report on the Macon printing school developed an extended discussion, about forty of the members taking opportunities to present their views. The main point in doubt was just how the funds raised by the A.N.P.A. for the support of the Macon school might be most advantageously and equitably distributed among the member bodies. It was made plain that the publishers are anxious to extend the scope of these schools, so that they will include not only instruction on the linotype processes in general printing.

As a result of the discussion and the deep interest of the membership, a committee was selected to meet Wednesday night and report to the convention on Thursday. Those who served on the committee were: Amon G. Carter, Fort Worth Star-Telegram; Harry Chandler, Los Angeles Times; W. J. Pattison, Scranton, Pa., Republican; J. D. Barmum, Syracuse Post-Standard; U. C., Worcester, Mass.; W. C. E. Needham, Kansas City; F. R. Pigg, Portland Oregonian.

Enthusiastic support for the Bureau of Advertising and general interest and appreciation of its work was manifested by the publishers following the report of the Bureau of Advertising. Among those who took the floor to commend the bureau's work were: Louis Washington Times; Fleming Newbold, Washington Star; S. E. Thomas, Chicago Tribune; Harry Brag, Milwaukee Journal; William W. Rogers, Boston Transcript; and Amon G. Carter, Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Radio occupied the larger part of Wednesday afternoon, a discussion that developed many interesting features. Among those who led the discussion were Harvey L. Payne, Los Angeles Times; E. E. Piper, Portland Oregonian; Amon G. Carter, Fort Worth Star-Telegram; P. H. McNeil, Memphis Commercial Appeal; H. S. Scott, Detroit News; Jason Rogers, New York Globe, and Daniel Nicoll, New York Evening Mail.

All the speakers except Mr. Rogers and Mr. Nicoll operate broadcasting stations, and meeting of the friendly rivalry manifested in the stories of achievements. All of them reported wide interest in radio among their readers, and said that a tremendous volume of mail was received from readers who had receiving stations. As to whether the printing of radio advertising presents any problems, most of the papers was to be considered news or advertising there seemed to be some difference of opinion. Some of the speakers declared they would continue to print only what was in the public interest.

The publishers' interest in the radio is based upon it as a service to readers, and there is no possibility of financial return it was said. The speakers generally agreed that the radio was a new and interesting medium, and that it did not have to take the place of other advertising.

The convention voted to authorize the president and board of directors to appoint a radio committee.

Independent action on the matter of second-class postage was recommended to the association by the report of the committee, presented by Chairman S. E. Thomas. This would mean that A.N.P.A. would take up postal problems with postal officials and with the post office department independent of the American Publishers' Association, which was organized about a year ago to represent publishers in all fields of postal matters. The report advises that the A.N.P.A. postal committee be referred to the association's Washington representative.

Questions relating to postage offered for discussion were: should the (Continued on Twenty-first Page)

Agency Expands—Officers Elected.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Harry Maley Company of New York and Chicago, Harry C. Maley was elected president; Benjamin Franklin Moffatt, formerly general manager of the Western Newspaper Union, Chicago district, vice-president; William A. Grant of Rafter, Grant, Hellen, Company, Chicago and New York, treasurer; William J. MacInnes, recently with William H. Rankin Company and the New York Evening Journal, as secretary. The Maley agency has open a New York office in the Bowery Savings Bank Building, 110 East Forty-second street.

First: To be able to furnish a survey of the local market and trade territory.
Second: To encourage and make possible an adequate distribution by supplying route lists of retailers for the purpose of salesmen of the manufacturer or advertiser who has made an adequate contract for space.
Third: If letters to advertisers or broadsides, so-called, are to be mailed, bills for printing and postage should be paid by the advertiser.
Fourth: To decline to sell goods, trim windows or make checkups on sales or distribution.

SPLITTING COMMISSIONS.

In the matter of splitting commissions, your committee calls attention to the resolution opposing this practice, which was adopted at the last annual meeting.

SLOW PAY.

The question of slow pay is one that every member should watch carefully and the New York Office should be advised by members of any such cases. Delinquent accounts, which are determined from a national basis only, and an agency placing considerable local business may discount his bills, while passing discount dates with publishers at a distance. Your committee feels justified in recommending the cancellation of recognition of all agencies that are habitually slow pay or who pass many cash discounts.

WORK OF COMMITTEE DURING THE YEAR.

One hundred and ten (110) applications for recognition were received. Thirty-seven (37) agencies were recognized; applications of twenty-nine (29) were refused; recognition previously extended to thirteen (13) agencies was cancelled; ratings of six (6) agencies were changed and recognition transferred on request for the services of (12) agencies.

UNION CONTRACTS AIDED BY OPEN SHOP BODY.

NEW DIVISION CREATED AT LAST CONVENTION REAL AID IN LABOR PROBLEM, COMMITTEE REPORTS — RECOMMENDS THAT IT BE CONTINUED.

D. D. Moore, chairman of the committee on open shop, reported to the American Newspaper Publishers Association, the Waldorf, Astoria, Wednesday that the work done by the open shop division since its organization in September, 1922, justifies the action of the convention last year in creating such a division and plainly indicated that this work should be continued by the association.

The committee is comprised of M. T. Harrison, president, of the Bedford Democrat; W. A. Land, of the Blackstone Courier; R. C. Brayley, of the South Boston News; L. E. Pugsch, of the Newport News Press; A. P. Rowe, of the Frederickburg Star, and James C. Latimer, secretary and treasurer.

ADA NEWSPAPERS MERGE.

NEWSPAPER MAIL PLANOFFERED BY NEW.

A.N.P.A. asks to the post office department to insure newspaper bundles?

What action should be taken toward restoration of former efficiency of mail service, impaired through the space taken up by the non-union and open shop offices, toward the establishment of an Open Shop Division? Should the A.N.P.A. submit a legal brief to the postal department contending that white space on newspaper pages should be credited not to advertising but to non-union rather than divided equally with advertising.

Labor affairs occupied practically the entire Thursday session. The morning meeting began with the presentation of the report of the arbitration committee by Chairman H. N. Kellogg, who reported in detail concerning the year's agreement and the agreement affected by the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union, which expired Jan. 1 and will continue in force until December 31, 1927. The report of the committee on open shop, presented by Chairman D. D. Moore, of the Record, advised the continuation of the A.N.P.A. open shop division and said that in several instances during the last year the open shop division had rendered material assistance to publishers in labor emergencies.

Victor F. Lawson of the Chicago Daily News, chairman of the committee on arbitration contracts, reported that the situation with regard to negotiations of a new arbitration agreement with the International Typographical Union remained practically the same during the year.

At a conference last August the committee refused to compromise on its objections to the 'set' law of the union, with the result that negotiations came to a halt.

MODEL BALL PLAYER TO BE EXHIBITED AT CONVENTION.

Leo C. Baum, president of the Playograph Company of Orange, N. J., has just introduced his new 1923 model ball player to the newspaper trade. He expects to have his model on display at the A.P. and A.N.P.A. convention at the Waldorf next week. He has some new plans of lease which he feels will interest the publishers.

For Sale a Punch in Your Display Advertising Space

by a "hot shot" Salesman with ten years behind him. No wind, your monthly figures tell the contractors, you and me. More space sold to each customer than the "old timer" says he ever would. The secret is knowing how—when what. It might take eight hours a day, it might take twelve, whatever the difference so long as the space is there. My customers tell their own story. Guarantee 8000 inches weekly. Line of your staff, give me all the "chronicles," "gyropettes," "don't believe in advertising," "won't run," "no results from last ad," and then turn me loose on that crowd. I will "snow" your former records every month. Working but up to the ladder I go.

My speed is 1000 inches from a grocery store in one week, who does an average business of $8000 each Saturday. Let him tell you. A man's store work register is telling a mighty tale. A drug store that is staking a living pace. I carry a rugged range of English, rough type, but hardfaced, deep cut, built for storm and strain. A gentleman Jim—tough or tender, according to circumstances—enough with a ladies ad, and a riot with a man's, a polish, but concealing that "landing" punch—tailored for the shop, but built for bazaars. The rough kind are as soft as a Government job, as clean as tough as a touchdown to your nose.

My character is plain, my age is 24, my salary is $100.00 per week. Put together with workmanlike that is a genuine joy for your bookkeeper, who will be no job. He can go high but I come through. Don't write me your 1's I have them all. I prove my punch. Prove yours.

POSTAL RELIEF TO BE FOUGHT OUT BY A.N.P.A.

The American Publishers' Conference kept careful track of the situation in the House Postal Committee during the summer of 1922, and on December 12th the Kelly Bill was brought to a vote in the Postal Committee, and by a vote of ten to five was laid on the table. At this same meeting, although the Joint Postal Commission had made no report, the Post Office Committee went record as recommending an appropriation for the continuation of the work of this commission.

There can be no doubt that the provisions of the Kelly Bill offered a just and equitable solution of several important rates, preserving in every detail the features of the present zone law. The political consideration which brought about the defeat of this bill in the Post Office Committee is beyond the understanding of your committee.

It is notable, however, that five members of the present Post Office Committee were not re-elected, and it is believed that a judicious educational program, and a proper presentation of the arguments in favor of the Kelly Bill before the new Post Office Committee, through the efforts of our association's Washington representative, may yet bring about a more favorable consideration of the association's postal program.

MORNING PAPERS WILL PUSH CAMPAIGN.

(Continued from Ninth Page) public opinion is the strongest power in the world, the power of the daily newspaper is well-nigh immeasurable. Hutchinson's News Record relates how Mr. Simcox lived in retirement in England and other countries, where he was associated with The New York Times, the world's greatest newspaper in business, political and social. When letters from his far-away friends caused his heart to throb, he would read them by the score, and be touched and moved by the stories they told.

In these days when perfectly partisan newspapers have gone out of fashion, every self-respecting newspaper insists that its political news shall be written from an unbiased standpoint, with fairness being the keynote. In other fields of endeavor, comparatively few newspapers are in the Democratic or Republican ranks, but in the world of politics, the agitation of public questions and criticism of political leaders is supported by this great daily newspaper which, in the whole world of public life, is second to none in influence and power. The public opinion that this newspaper represents is the strongest power in the world.

TREND OF POPULARITY.

The trend of popularity of morning and evening newspapers in New York at least is indicated by the circulation reports made to the post office department in the six months ending March 31, 1922, as compared with the reports for the corresponding period ending September 30, 1921. The total net gain of the morning newspapers was in excess of 48,000, while the total net loss of the evening newspapers was 640 copies.

As a rule, in the larger cities, morning newspapers are the more profitable. The conditions of urban life appear to favor the production of morning newspapers. However, in a modified way, the fundamental principle that newspapers are to be self-supporting and self-financing themselves applies to the evening newspapers in New York as well as to the morning newspapers, for the daily record of events is indispensable to all classes and sections.

NEWSPAPER RESPONSIBILITY.

In a recent address Hilaire Belloc said, "Within one man's lifetime the great daily newspapers have grown from a negligible force to a power which is capable of influencing the political course of a nation." Mr. Belloc accurately summarized the present position of the morning newspaper. This great power has brought with it a great responsibility. The need for newspapers which can analyze and clearly present the true meaning of political questions and accurately represent the present-day situation, is greater than ever before.

The tendency, in the United States at least, is to learn more of the influencing factors of life, to understand the complex problems of the present-day society, of economic crises, and of world politics, than ever before.

The Open Shop Division was to keep accurate records of the various open shops and non-union offices, and of men available for employment in such offices, to the end that the members of the association might have accurate information at all times as to the number of open shops actually operated, and as to the available labor supply for such offices.

The Open Shop Division was ready to give prompt assistance to any member of the association who should be reasonable and complete in the handling of the matter.

In the opinion of the committee, the work thus far done by the Open Shop Division of the Porterville Sun in the establishment of a union contract in that city was of great assistance to the members of the association, and should be continued by the association.

Mr. Zerbe's fifty years of continuous active service in newspaper work.

MORE ACCURACY PRESCRIBED BY HARDING.

reached in the reasoning of honest representation, and I like a party which is commissioned to strive in good conscience and all loyalty to keep the pledges which brought it popular approval.

Our drift today is toward pure democracy, and I hope democracy ever long survived. We talk solemnly and earnestly about preserving our world civilization. I have every confidence in its survival but it may be assured only by humankind reaching the proper appraisals of the proper avenues of twenty centuries of human progress. In our America we have the freest and best press in the world; its power today only the press can sound the warning and reason to that conviction which will enable us to play our full part in the work of the world.

Just before the President began his speech Mrs. Harding was escorted to a box in the center of the balcony, while the members rose in greeting. Mrs. Harding was accompanied by Commander Adolphus Andrews, the President's naval aide, Mrs. Joseph F. France, and Mrs. Frank B. Noyes. She immediately invited into her box Samuel T. Williamson, of the Washington staff of the New York Times, and Miss Cora Chase of the Metropolitan.

BEANS AS "NATIONAL DISH" OBJECT OF COMING CAMPAIGN.

The campaign to promote the sale of beans through an advertising and publicity drive is explained by Benjamin Gerks, one of its managers, in an article in the New York Commercial. The campaign has for its object to make this food the "national dish" of the country.

At the Hotel Men's Association in New York City last night a member a popular vote was taken at their exposition on the choice of a national dish. At the inn served corned beef and cabbage first, with pork and beans so close as to make it evident that the question was referred in New York opinion regarded beans as entitled to the high place, Mr. Gerks says.

He believes beans, with their history, can be used, which shows, may be easily moved up to first place as the national dish.

The New York State Bean Shippers' Association has undertaken to form a preliminary organization and response to requests for support have been prompt. A large Michigan operator telephoned he would back the project to the limit. The principal country operators throughout the East have given their support. Several hundred New York State elevators have contributed $10 each, making a total of $2,000.

"With the fund now subscribed," says Mr. Gerks, "I shall study sales plans and cooperate with producers to ascertain what made some succeed and others fail. A similar drive of the present fund include both non-members and members of the New York State Bean Growers Association. After the completion of the survey, I shall ask the following associations to send one delegate each to a conference: California Bean Growers' Association; Arkansas Bean Growers' Association; Louisiana Lincoln Bean Growers Association; Rocky Mountain Association and the Michigan and New York associations. Farm bureaus will be asked to co-operate.

The conference will be held in St. Louis, where a plan will be devised to raise an initial fund of $100,000, and cover the cost of advertising. The principal feature will be a steady flow of funds to establish a prominent fund and prevent the stagnation periods so frequent in the bean market.

COUNTY NEWSPAPER EDITORS ELECT OFFICERS.

Editors of newspapers in King and Kitsap Counties, members of the Washington State Press Association, Seattle, at a recent meeting elected Harrison W. Mason, editor of the Rainier Valley Times, president, and Captain B. P. Kunkler of the Bainbridge Island Beacon, secretary.

The reports show that the newspapers were well attended. The number of newspapers served with these verses from the Bible by the only immediate and available means of giving the word of God to the masses is through the press.

Thirty-five correspondents brought as many friends. Dinner was served to seventy-five. Correspondents who had a letter in every issue last year were designated "star correspondents" on their ribbon, and the others who sent letters for twenty-six or more issues were belittled as "honour correspondents."

Robert S. Brown, the new editor of the paper, introduced himself and announced that $100 in cash prizes will be awarded on May 1 to the correspondent who has by that time turned in the most subscriptions and renewals. The contest is open only to bona-fide correspondents of the paper.

H. A. Pauly and A. C. McClurg, publishers of the Union and of the Troy Daily News, explained why the Union had been made into a semi-weekly, a farm page added, and an extra man hired as editor. Mr. Brown, they said, is spending almost half his time afield, in an effort to open up first-hand sources of real country news.

Will S. Garbry, the only correspondent who has attended every one of the twenty reunions, described the enthusiastic spirit of the Metropolis for nearly twenty years, he has attracted a large following, due mainly to the practical policies of the paper and his apparent desire to be more or less a storied pet. While Mr. Dean has claimed none of the eminence of a number of distinguished southern journalists, some of whom left indelible marks on the history of the press of the south, yet he can very well be classed with the most cementing of them, and the passing of his paper from a purely southern channel, he, to a purely northern man, as Mr. Cox is, will be noted as a change in southern journalism. Mr. Dean's acquaintances will wish him well in any new business undertaking, and Florida hospitality most certainly will never be found lacking by Mr. Cox.

NEW MORNING NEWSPAPER IN CALIFORNIA.

The Long Beach Morning Sun made its initial appearance recently with a four-section, forty-eight page edition. The paper is being published, including Sunday, by a corporation of business men and newspaper men, and has been in the process of organization for several months. The business office is located in the Central Building, First and Bell streets, with a staff of four men.

The company is incorporated by Ward C. Anderson. The editorial policies are in charge of C. C. Cuthaw, managing editor, who has been connected with Long Beach newspapers for a number of years and also with newspapers in the East. The city editor is W. H. Leonard, formerly financial editor of the Los Angeles Herald Journal. Montgomery Brown, is in charge of the business office.

In reply the Nash Motors Company wrote:

"You may not inform the news- paper of Illinois who ... you are not authorized to place any advertising for us whatever."

Commenting on this correspondence, Mr. Tufford said:

"The particular announcement attached was one which was eagerly waited for by the press of the nation. Numerous news men of the Associated Press and the United Press had made arrangements for getting the announcement, even though they were not entitled to it. We have no quarrel with newspaper publishers as to what they are willing to pay for their advertising. We are opposed to the practice of some editors of printing anything in the newspaper that is not requested by us."

Mr. Tufford then discussed the policy adopted by the Ypsilanti, Mich., Press in dealing with government propaganda. Upon request the newspapers refrained from printing anything in the columns of a newspaper gratis.

"I will be very appreciative if you will take a personal interest in this matter and see what can be done with the Inland Press Association to assure a fair attitude toward legitimate news material."

"I compliment the Inland Daily Press Association and O'Shaughnnessey, secretary of the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

"I am of the opinion that the Inland Press should be in the same category as the banks and the treasury department should be willing to pay for their advertising."

PRINTING SCHOOLS TO BE GIVEN FURTHER AID.

The Mergenthaler Linotype Company has loaned us twenty-four machines, nineteen of which are in good working condition. All are old models, except one Model Fourteen, which was new when sent to the school two years ago.

The Intertype Company loaned us three practically new machines, one of them a recent model.

The Mergenthaler Linotype Company has loaned us twenty-four machines, nineteen of which are in good working condition. All are old models, except one Model Fourteen, which was new when sent to the school two years ago.

Thus we are in position to give the student a good working knowledge of the multiple magazine machines. He is taught to set all of the different kinds of composition used in a newspaper plant, and some of the publishers are really enthusiastic about the showing made by the new graduate.

Two of the publishers of daily papers who have had associates of them are Mr. J. L. Horne, Jr., of Rocky Morton G., and Mr. W. S. Holbrook, Los Angeles.

Some amusing reports are received now and then from unions that have learned from the school and are enthusiastic about it.

A student traveling in the field to avoid trouble, gets a card by keeping quiet about his connection with the school; and then writes to the school telling all he has heard.

The menu of the luncheon which the American Ambassador, William M. Collier, gave last Saturday at Santiago, Chile, to the correspondents attending the Pan-American Conference, bore the reproduction of a photograph of the President reading at work in the composing room of the Marion, Ohio, Star. It was printed from the Press of the Day-Warheit.

"With printer, publisher and editor, salutations from the Republic of the United States to the press of the Latin-American Republics, with all good will and good wishes for an ever-enduring friendship."

PAPER MAKERS OFFER 10 PER CENT WAGE RISE.

Officials of eight paper manufacturing companies Thursday submitted a wage increase offer of four cents per hour to all employees. Union officials will consider the offer on Sunday and report back to the conference next Thursday, at which time wage agreements will be signed for the coming year, effective May 1.

The wage increase approximates ten per cent and will affect 10,000 men, it was said, and was said to be less than had been sought by the Union representatives.

LIBEL SUIT OF CALIFORNIA EDITOR IS DISMISSED.

The libel suit for $25,000, filed by D. R. Hanhart in connection with charges made in a recent grand jury report, that he, as publisher of the Ranger and Madera Mercury, had "padded" his bills to the county, against F. A. Howard, grand jury, was dismissed when the case was called in the superior court this morning.

Mr. Hanhart agreed to pay the cost of the suit, which amounted to $101.

Here's the Hook Drug Company with fourteen large, modern retail outlets. They are interested in Turn-Over—not in furnishing warehouse or store space for slow-moving articles. Newspaper advertising certainly is the "OPEN SESAME" for distribution through the Hook chains. They know that it is good business for them always to stock merchandise for which adequate advertising has been scheduled on a noncancellable basis in the Indianapolis News. On the other hand, the Hook Drug Company, and other Indianapolis retailers, are unwilling to do the gambling for the manufacturer. The manufacturer must guarantee—with News advertising—that he will produce the demand before the retailer stocks. The retailer should not stock, nor will he, when the salesman's advertising promise is contingent upon the sale in the market of a certain quota that has been established in advance by the manufacturer.

The Hook Drug Company knows the power of News advertising. They probably use more space in this paper than any other drug concern uses in any one paper in the world.

There are 1,772 newspapers in the United States and Canada that have Special Representatives, as shown in the List beginning on Page 7b.

The arrangement by column explains this "key" automatically.

The list of the Newspapers and their Representatives may give, for example, the Cleveland Plain-Dealer represented by WOODWARD. This is the "key" for John B. Woodward in New York, and Woodward & Kelly in Chicago.

Column 1 gives the name of the Special Representative.

Column 2 shows the "key" letters, which appear alongside the newspaper in the list beginning on Page 7d.

Column 3 gives his main address and branch offices.

Column 4 gives his telephone number.

The Fourth Estate will welcome at any time information that will be of value in making this list as minutely accurate as possible.

The list is revised and brought up to date in every detail, so far as it has been possible to obtain information.

WASHINGTON TIMES SHOWS MILLION LINE GAIN IN ADVERTISING.

Mr. Payne associated himself with Mr. Hearst as publisher and general manager of Mr. Hearst’s Washington Times, in October, 1921. Mr. Payne says since that goal has been attained that his organization is now striving for a million and a half for the next period.

Many newspapers could adopt Mr. Payne’s idea of organization, and with much profit to themselves. Each Monday Mr. Payne calls an executive luncheon at which his department heads have an opportunity to discuss the various problems, bring forth suggestions, and develop a get-together spirit in general. As a result of these weekly meetings, a fine spirit of cooperation is manifested throughout the organization.

Mr. Payne says that after the executive luncheon he would like to manage any of the local advertising, Chicago Daily News, is director of advertising of both the Herald and Times.

HOW MERCHANTS KNOW WHAT WILL SELL.

ADVERTISING RECORD OF THE PRODUCTS ORDERED FOR THEIR SALE IS UNFAILING GUIDE — YEARS AGO THERE WAS NO WAY OF TELLING, BUT NOW IT'S DIFFERENT.

In a recent investigation conducted by the J. Walter Thompson Company news bulletin, several of the most prominent department stores were interviewed and asked what they looked for first in the purchasing of their stock of merchandise. A good many said quality; others said price; but far more than 50 per cent. of the dealers called upon said that the first question they asked themselves before they bought any piece of merchandise was "Will it sell?".

If the merchant can choose unerringly the kind of merchandise that will sell, his turnover problem will automatically answer itself. But how is he to know what merchandise will sell and what will not?

Years ago, there was no method of knowing. A merchant had to choose his stocks entirely on his own judgment and upon a knowledge of advertising and some manufacturing of merchandise unsold by any effort of the manufacturer who made it. In other words, the buying methods and the buying methods that governed the buying methods was: "Goods well bought are half sold," in other words, price and quality which could be sold in the merchandise itself were the sole determining factors in the purchase of goods.

But since that time we have entered the merchandising age and many manufacturers of merchandise have realized that the dealer is not a buyer but a salesman. These manufacturers have spent a part of their profits in advertising their goods to attract customers to the store to more readily receive the merchandise which they sell.

It is in the advertising of these manufacturers that has created a public interest in the merchandise bearing their name. It has created a reputation, a standard of value in the minds of millions of people who know and recognize the goods. The trade mark is looked upon by the consumer with confidence. In some instances this has resulted in an overwhelming demand for one or more particular brands so that the merchant is obliged to carry stocks of that brand in order to supply the demand.

On other kinds of merchandise, the advertising has created a public acceptance so that the brand is favored or chosen when it is offered for sale. The old proverb: "Goods well bought are half sold," is no longer true. In order to meet the changed conditions the proverb around to read: "Goods well sold are well bought."

Thousands of merchants already know this to be true and it will be done. The old proverb is not impossible today, to find a merchant who did not carry advertised brands in his stock. Insofar as the merchants are concerned the branches which are most readily accepted he contributes in the more rapid turnover of his merchandise. The trouble with most merchants is that they do not go far enough in concentrating upon the branches of merchandise which move the easiest.

The average stock of merchandise throughout the country will usually contain a certain percentage of lines which sell easily and turn over several times each year. But many mer-

ADJ BUREAU INCREASES ITS SERVICE TO MEMBERS.

IT'S REPORT WILL INDICATE THAT NATIONAL ADVERTISING IN NEWSPAPERS WILL EXCEED IN VOLUME FIGURES OF BOOM YEAR PUBLISHERS HAD IN 1920.

A new record of achievements will be indicated in the tenth annual report of the bureau of advertising to be presented Wednesday to the American Newspaper Publishers Association. Characterizing the period since the last convention as a "busy and productive year," the report will point to the continuing increase in national newspaper advertising and the significant fact that newspapers have gained in a greater ratio than any of their competitors. Its forecast for the year will indicate that national advertising in the newspapers will exceed in volume the figures of the boom year of 1920.

The advisory members of the committee are General M. D. Bryant, Six-Point League, New York, and Fred E. Crawford, who succeeded H. K. Clarke as representative of the Newspaper Representative Association of Chicago.

William A. Thomson is director of the bureau with headquarters in the World Building, New York. Thomas H. Moore is associate director, F. Guy Davis is western manager with headquarters in Chicago, and Thomas L. Emory is in charge of the Pacific coast offices in San Francisco.

An outstanding accomplishment was the establishment of a statistical department at the close of 1922 under the direction of F. Douglas Campbell, formerly of the Lowell, Mass., Courier-Column. This branch of the service is now being organized. The statistical department fills an urgent need in investigating and presenting intelligent help and advice to advertisers. The newspapers are not so well equipped as the magazines for gathering concrete information, especially as the completependitures of various advertisers, the bureau has found. Some of the statistical information in the magazines, especially that prepared by the Curtis Publishing Company, is of an extremely high character.

The bureau's statistical department is now equipped with figures to answer questions which will prove of constantly greater value to the newspaper industry. The bureau today finds that seventy-five per cent of the inquiries received from the advertisers are of statistical nature.

Work in making surveys has been continued by the bureau, but it has had more calls for what it terms "reason why" information than it has had for purely market data. Several times during the year the bureau was called upon to prepare briefs of a competitive nature.

ACHIEVEMENTS ON COST.

Some of the most spectacular work during the year was accomplished on the Pacific coast. That region happened to be an unusually productive field and Thomas L. Emory, the bureau's coast representative, proved to be an unusually active and aggressive solicitor. Numerous splendid tributes have been paid to the bureau's work on the coast by publishers and others. The office, which was opened in San Francisco on January 2, 1922, has added to a noteworthy measure to the general prosperity of the industry, which has been considerable in newspaper advertising from that section of the country and in several instances has prevailed upon advertisers to make marked changes in policies.

MUCH NEWSPAPER COPY.

The large gain in national newspaper advertising during the year was an other demonstration of the bureau's ability to convince national advertisers of the value of newspaper columns. The appearance in newspapers of an impressively large number of advertising copies is now a natural and accepted phenomenon.

NEWSPAPER SPACE AS THE AGENCY'S BUYER SEES IT.

Publication should show it covers definite field, and be fair in rates to pass tests, Gibbons' Space Buyer specifies.

Space buyers, as a rule, have a lot to say, but don't always say it. They don't talk for publication as much as the others. The papers we carry are selected because we think they have value, and we want to show them as well as possible.

Space buyers, as a rule, have a lot to say, but don't always say it. They don't talk for publication as much as the others. The papers we carry are selected because we think they have value, and we want to show them as well as possible.
THE ACID TEST OF ADVERTISING SINCERITY.

TOLEDO DEPARTMENT STORE SETS HIGH EXAMPLE IN STRICT APPLICATION OF TERMS WHICH MIGHT BE MISLEADING—OLD "DODGES" OF VERBIAGE CONDEMNED.

More and more retailers are coming to realize the dangers of comparative prices, the use of superlative and hackneyed expressions in their newspaper copy. Recently a number of prominent stores in the East and South have decided to refrain from this form of advertising.

Now the Better Business commission of Toledo, Ohio, calls attention to the idea of the merchant who, sensing the change of the old order, has formulated an advertising code for his store. He has placed the following list of phrases and retailing practices on his expurgatorian index:

- All Sizes—Used only when a complete stock of all sizes is on hand.
- Bargain—Used for merchandise that is priced below regular. This is a word the people understand, and can be used whenever the merchandise warrants it.
- Best—Should not be used. Because of the many uses of the word, its meaning is questionable, and it is impossible to determine when it is correct.
- Brand—Should not be used except on Enrich Stock—May be used only when a particular line is in stock. Nothing can be held out of such a sale.
- Choice to Conditions—Competition or Competitors—Must never under any circumstances be referred to in a complimentary manner.
- Cost—At Cost—Below Cost—Must never be used, even if true, because it may be assumed that the public will look upon these statements with suspicion.
- Cut—Must be exact reproductions of the advertised articles, unless the general tone of the ad makes it obvious that no particular item is referred to in the advertisement.
- Damaged—Is used only in connection with the cause of the damage.
- Description—Merchandise must not exaggerate, and is to be worded so that a reasonably accurate picture is produced in the mind of the reader. Ever before—merely meaningless. Former Price—Refers to the price an article was marked before a permanent reduction was made, meaning, in most instances, merchandise not quite up to date.
- Special—Must Not Be Flagrante.
- Fortune—Purchasing—Sample Lot—Products—Overstock—And like phrases to be used only when they are absolutely correct. They cannot be used merely because the store is in merchandise from its regular stocks.
- Last Season—Don't hesitate to use, but it should be used sparingly.

Limitied Quantity or Whole Quantity—Use when there is a chance of stock being exhausted before the end of the day.

Among Specials—House Sales—and other schemes, new and different, are being encouraged; for a woman who cannot come to the store, nothing is entitled to the same privileges as the one who can get there when the doors open!

Never Before—Never Again—Must never be used.

Not All Sizes—Cannot be used.

NEWSPAPER ROTO
STILL MYSTERY TO MAJORITY.

MANY NEWSPAPER MEN WHO COME IN CONTACT WITH FINISHED PRODUCT KNOW LITTLE ABOUT PROCESS
HERE IS HOW EXPERT DESCRIBES IT.

While rotogravure as a finished product has come to be familiar to newspaper men and the public generally, there are still few who have an adequate knowledge of what goes into it. Although hundreds of newspapers have their sections one week, the work of producing the section is usually done in a plant outside the city, for the reason that the work is performed by specialists and because rotogravure equipment is much too expensive to have idle four or five days a week.

TIMES HAS OWN PLANT.

Even in New York City, the New York Times is the only newspaper which operates its own rotogravure plant. The sections which are features of the New York Times are turned out by commercial printing concerns, usually specialists in rotogravure work, who have found that their plant is too expensive to keep it busy steadily, for not only the delicate sections, but also the weekly picture page, a feature of the Times, are also reproduced in the plant. Two million, five hundred thousand pieces of these sections come out in the plant every week, a figure that is all the more remarkable when it is remembered that rotogravure is much slower than ordinary newspaper printing.

The Times rotogravure plant occupies two entire floors in The Annex, the department being on the sixth and the press room on the seventh floor. The former employs a force of forty-five men, and the latter about forty-five.

DESCRIPTION OF PROCESS.

Newspapermen who have not had opportunity to become familiar with the rotogravure process in the course of their own work will be interested in a description of the process by Mr. Harry Jaeger, of the Times pressroom department. Mr. Jaeger's explanation shows plainly why it is that only the very largest newspapers do their own rotogravure printing.

"Rotogravure is the method of printing made on a copper cylinder and technically known as the intaglio process," Mr. Jaeger said.

"In intaglio, or sub-surface, printing the designs are etched on a copper cylinder, producing grooves or cells, below the surface. The varying depths of the etched designs result in different densities of the impression when the paper is passed through the press, producing extreme contrasts not obtainable on the ordinary cylinder.

"This intricate engraving process as applied to reproducing pictures was invented by Karl Klics (pronounced Klits) (pronounced Klisch) born in Bohemia eighty years ago.

"Rotogravure is practically all photogravure, the making of the negative. It is generally made on sensitized glass. The paper is placed on the easel of the camera and is then reduced or enlarged to the size better handling, and is placed in proper position on the copper cylinder with the sensitive side next to the carbon paper. This is followed by a heavy rubber roller, after which the carbon paper is allowed to partly dry. It is then immersed in warm water and the paper backing taken off.

Following this, all the soluble gelatine that has not been baked hard by light washes is removed, leaving on the cylinder a faithful reproduction of the positives included in the negative film of fine lines. This portion of gelatine is then washed off by the action of strong light on its sensitized surface. This renders it insoluble in water.

STAGING METHOD USED

The cylinder is then allowed to stand until the gelatine on it is dry. When thoroughly dry all portions of the cylinder where the tone illustrations are to appear and the margins which are to remain white are painted over with asphaltum (which is an acid resistant) to prevent these portions from being etched at that time. This is termed staging. When this is done the cylinder is ready for the actual etching of the line work.

A weak acid used for this purpose is iron chloride, which dissolves copper. When this has been applied the exposed copper on the carbon paper is etched away, or etched, the copper in proportion to the varying thickness of the film of gelatine that resists the action of the acid.

Where the gelatine film is thinnest the acid acts least; whereas the gelatine thickest, it etches the least.

When the etching has been carried to exactly the desired depth the cylinder is washed with water to halt the action of the acid. The asphaltum acid resist is removed by using a weak solution of a reducing agent which is wipe clean of all traces of the remaining gelatine.

The carbon paper containing the tone illustrations is then squeezed on to the cylinder in the same manner as previously mentioned. Great care must be exercised to place the second carbon paper exactly in the position where the first was laid. In hot weather difficulties are frequently encountered, as the heat softens the gelatine stretch.

Before etching the tone, the line work already etched is covered with asphaltum acid resist. The picture or tone parts exposed. The etching proceeds as before, only that to develop the various tones it is necessary to use a weaker solution of acid, as long as the etching of the line work required.

The highlights, as previously explained, have printed most heavily. In other words, they are represented by a thicker layer of hardened gelatin than the shadows. Therefore, in etching, the high lights are etched the least and the shadows etched most deeply.

MUST BE DONE BY EXPERT

To accomplish this the etcher passes the etching acid over the cylinder by hand, and here much of the quality is finally achieved. One doing this work must be an expert in order to get exact etching, as the degree to which the etching should be carried is a matter entirely of judgment. After the asphaltum and gelatine have been removed the cylinder is ready for the press.

The etcher has thus created in copper plate a positive impression of tiny cups, 22,500 of these to the square inch, that are surrounded by copper walls. These cups vary in depth according to the position they occupy in the picture, shadows being deepest and high lights shallow. By examining a rotogravure...
print through a magnifying glass, particularly in these little spots of ink may be clearly noticed. During many stages of the rotogravure process, it is necessary to work in rooms of even temperature and humidity. Variations in the atmosphere of the pressroom must be particularly guarded against.

The actual printing is one of the simplest parts of the whole process. The cylinders are placed in position so that they roll up over the vat of ink. The ink is about the consistency of thick soup. A steel blade, very flexible, is set on a dovetail blade, is so set that when the cylinder revolves out of the vat of liquid ink, the knife scrapes off the superfluos ink, leaving only that which is in the tiny cups. A rubber roller, pressing the plate of the paper on to the etched cylinder, brings the paper in contact with the ink, remaining in the etched or inked portions of the cylinder.

MICHIGAN DAILY SENDS FREE PUBLICITY MATTER BACK TO TREASURY DEPT.

The Ypsilanti, Mich., Press doesn't hesitate to place the various government departments in the same class with other free publicity seekers. Here is an example of the sort sent by the Press to the treasury department:

During Thrift Week we received a letter from C. T. B. W.,孵, requesting samples of what you are giving away on behalf of the Treasury Department. We are printing this "news item" from the enclosure to the paper. You will note that we not only have Thrift advertising from government men, but that both banks took good size space, the banks advertising four times during Thrift Week. Personally we feel that the government and the treasury department should be in the same interest with the banks, i.e., they should be willing to pay for our advertising. We have noted with interest that the treasury department has given the large city dailies and magazines but have passed up the best advertising by giving to the small city dailies which go right into the home without street and news stands.

cause it is misleading. State the sizes you have in stock. It is advisable to state the exact amount of each size. Do not handle. $1 Article for 39 Cents—Or similar statements, are poor advertising even if true. These promises are vague and therefore must not be used.

One paragraph: Two Dollars—When using or otherwise writing, be sure to have a reasonable quantity on hand. If the quantity on hand of the $2 article is insignificant, reduce your statement to the price at which you have a reasonable quantity and have customers agreeably surprised by finding better goods than mentioned.

QUANTITY MUST BE STATED EXACTLY.

- Quantity—If referred to at all, must be stated truthfully.
- Reduced For This Sale—Means a reduction from the regular price which you would bring the regular price if placed in stock.
- Sales Force—Must not exaggerate the value or quality or price of articles advertised. Advertisements as are made in the ads.
- Seconds or Run of the Mill—Must always be accompanied by advertising such goods.
- Sold Elsewhere At—Not accepted, because it is misleading. Special—Special Price or Special Sale—Can be accepted only when the words are compiled with literally. The price in each instance must be below the regular price. Must always be accompanied by applying goods offered at regular prices.
- The Latest—The Newest—Can be used only when it is fact. Undercutting—Must be stated as new and not as it was before bleaching or shrinking. Commercial width may be 36 inches, whereas the actual width is 35 inches.

WASHINGTON SCRIBES TO HOLD GOLF TOURNAMENT

The spring tournament of the Washington Newspaper Golf Club has been set for May 22, as a result of a recent meeting of members of the club. "The course will be played at the Washington Golf Club.

The tournament will serve to open the 1923 season of the club, which is one of the courses provided by the municipality for citizens of Washington.

At its meeting the club decided upon a revival of the intercity tournament. The tournament has always been held a year ago last summer, but did not take place in the following year. Invitations to participate will be sent to newspaper golf clubs of Boston, New York and Philadelphia, and also of Baltimore if the correspondents of that city are prepared to take part.

AN.PA. AD BUREAU EXPANDS SERVICE TO MEMBERS.

turers who heretofore had used only other media was a tributeto thebureau'sactivity. While it is indicatedthat newspapers will carry more national advertising than they did in the record year of 1920, the magazines, which also reflect the impressing campaigns, are still from twenty per cent to twenty-five per cent behind their 1920 figures.

Exchanges are being maintained with the individual agencies and with the American Association of Advertising Agencies. The bureau has been called upon several times by these agencies on matters that directly concern the development of national advertising.

The bureau will report that there have been few marked changes in rates in the several cities. In some places there is a serious trouble in the national field over newspaper rates. In fact, James O'Farrell, president of the American Association of Advertising Agencies recently stated that advertising rates in the various fields are to be eminently fair.
HOW MERCHANTS KNOW WHAT WILL SELL.

chants' stocks are still cluttered up with an even greater percentage of merchandise obtained from many manufacturers and much of it bearing no name or brand which the public knows and recognizes as a standard of value.

The answer to more rapid turnover therefore lies in a greater concentration on those lines which do sell and this kind of merchandise próprio is the brand which the public knows through advertising.

The merchant who would successfully answer the question "What merchandise will sell?" must first ask himself the following questions:

How long has the product been advertised?

How frequently and continuously has it been advertised?

If he can satisfy himself that the merchandise has been advertised in publications which reach not a few, but millions of people, and that it has been advertised not once a year, but every month in the year—not only for one season, but for a number of years—that it does not promise reputation and salability in the future, but that its reputation and salability are already here and already well established—then he can know positively in advance that this is the kind of merchandise that will sell. This is the kind of merchandise that will make rapid turnover in his store if he concentrates his selling effort in a big way behind it.

In addition to the increased turnover which he will obtain by concentrating on the salable merchandise, the merchant will find that he can now easily eliminate parallel lines which had only a small and sporadic sale.

B BUYING ECONOMIES BEGIN AS HOUSEWIFE READS HER DAILY NEWSPAPER.

(Marquette, Mich., Journal.)

Modern business is largely described as being based on advertising. People no longer follow the ancient custom of going to market to purchase the food necessary articles that were required by the family, and which the merchant may havé had exposed upon his shelves or tucked away under the counter or behind in tiers of drawers that were never opened unless the customer inquired for the goods that were thus hidden away.

Today the successful merchant uses the column of the newspapers to advertise his wares. He not only tells what he has got, but he illustrates his advertising space with pictures of the various articles either separately or artistically grouped. He gives prices and he also often describes articles in order to stimulate the desire in the mind of the reader. The reader may thus obtain a very clear understanding of what is offered for sale, its price, and the house, the terms and conditions of sale. It is this variety of advertising that has created a demand for thousands of articles that would not have sold had they not been advertised.

Advertising is the mainspring of business. It is the creator of business and the source of a nation's prosperity. Advertising tells the merchant where to go, how to go and how to get the benefit of the money he has spent upon his campaign. Advertising builds mills, railroads, great industries, and in fact everything that enters into the development and progress of any nation. It keeps the trains moving, the ships sailing, the airplanes flying, the goods sold, and it gives employment to people who would otherwise find existence a problem.

Advertisements are of vital importance. They may save millions of dollars in the expenditures necessary to every household.

CONNING TOWER CONTRIBUTES ATTEND ANNUAL DINNER.

The contributors to Franklin P. Adams' (F.P.A.) "Conning Tower" is the New York World gathered at the Waldorf-Astoria April 19 for their annual dinner.

The gold or silver watch for the best piece printedin the "Conning Tower" in 1922 was presented to Flaccus (Newman Levy), for his meditation on "Thais." Herbert Bayard Swope of the World was toastmaster. After the dinner there was a show, written, produced, acted and applauded by the contriv, including, besides those mentioned, G. K. Chesterton, George Bryan, Barun Ireland (Nate Salis bury), Morris Kunitz, Jack Hogan, Bill Netch, Miss L. Eddie Hahn, and others.

EMOTIONAL VALUE
REAL "PULL" IN ADVERTISING.

AGENCY WRITER TELLS HOW METHOD OF APPEAL FOR SEVERAL BIG ADVERTISERS WAS DETERMINED — HARD TO DO IT FOR A CAKE OF SOAP, BUT IT'S DONE.

"We are in the habit of speaking of emotional advertisements as if they were a particular type of advertisement— as if some advertisements were emotional and others were not," says Edith Lewis, of the New York office of the J. Walter Thompson Co. "This is a misconception. All good advertisements are emotional. One could almost say that they are good according to the degree of emotional quality they possess.

"Writing is nothing when it has not emotional quality behind it. It is what gives writing its color, its life, its power to awaken the imagination. And one thing this quality always depends on, whatever it may be, is the writer's using it. He must depend on the material that the writer is handling; it simply depends on the writer's using it, of course, strongly about that material."

In advertising, it is especially necessary to have this emotional quality, because in advertising you must write so that the average reader—you must induce him to act on the strength of the interest and sympathy you have shown. The thing that distinguishes different types of advertisements is largely a matter of where you place your emphasis in a situation. Sometimes you can put this emphasis on emotional appeal itself. For instance, food, furniture, clothes, vacation trips have themselves a strong emotional appeal.

DIFFICULT TO MAKE APPEAL.

"But there is a very large class of products which it would be difficult or even impossible to present in such a way as to make, in themselves, any appeal to the imagination.

"Take, for instance, the wash of soap. The soap itself may look like, smell like, feel like dozens of other soaps except for differences, which, however, real, are so intangible, that it would be impossible of classing them in importance. In a case like this, one cannot dramatize the product itself—one cannot appeal to the emotion of the reader, because there is no emotion in the product."

PARROTING OF STOCK PHRASES WILL NEVER PASS FOR GOOD REPORTING.

"If college courses in news reporting produced a standardized type of writing, one might have listened to P. Stone of the Chicago Daily News, and a member of the staff of the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern University, "The prospect of counting one's feeling. Emotional quality has to be real—it cannot be counterfeited; the public, regardless of class, is too intelligent. One cannot use our emotional appeal on the whole to detect and resent them."

PRESTIGE ALWAYS DEPENDS UPON THE EDITOR.

OCCASIONAL MISTAKES ARE QUICKLY FORGIVEN BY PUBLIC WHEN IT KNOWS PAPER HONEST, SAYS ILLINOIS EDITOR — AND HONESTY ALWAYS SHOWS.

"Every editor has many responsibilities, but each bears the impress of his editorship more keenly than any other role," John H. Harrison, editor of the Danville, Ill., Commercial News, says in an article written for the Quill. "An editor may own his newspaper, may have title to it as property; the build-ting, the equipment, type-setting machines and presses; the circulation, the organization, he may claim; the dividends, if such there are, may be his to dispose of as he chooses. But there is something else, an intangible though definite thing, that is not his. And yet it is his greatest asset; it is that thing on which he cashes in. I mean that quality which we call 'good will,' or 'influence,' or 'prestige,' or the 'power of the press.'" "That is only a trust in his hands, for which he must render an accounting. Every new subscriber added to his list is an addition to the trust, an added obligation. It means that the subscriber has voluntarily placed in the editor's hands the power of influence, eye, control, more than to any other agency, the destiny of that subscriber. The reader yields to the editor the right and the privilege of leading, either for good or ill. That editor who does not see it in this light and who is not ruled by the consciousness of this great obligation, is I assert, not fit to be an editor. "It must be admitted that there are editors not high-minded. The motives which shape their policies are on a lower level. Some are actuated only by profit; for instance, some for power: some for vanity. There are editors who are like some small boy in possession of a piece of artillery, which he would fire off for the fun of the noise; without comprehending or caring anything about the consequences of his act. To truly succeed a newspaper must realize that it is a public instution. In order to intelligently fulfill his obligation and proper-late his policy it is necessary that an editor be in touch with the ground. He must live himself into his community as a part of it. The public must have confidence in its paper. It must believe that it is hon-erly. "A paper may make an occasional mistake, or take the wrong side of a question, but if the public believes that the paper is honest and is actuated by right motives, these occasional errors will not cause of prestige nor will the circulation be affected. The public is possessed of the spirit of sixth sense, which intuitively knows of the integrity or otherwise of a newspaper. "A newspaper's policies and views are most of all under the scrutiny of the public. Its readers are influenced to whatever degree they feel the paper is actuated by blind partisanship, by prejudice, by selfishness, or whether it sincerely seeks good government through the election to office of honest men and the rendering of service. In journalistic ranks there is much discussion as to the relative merits of the paper and the so-called independent paper. The editor, however, must keep in view the fact that to act as a free lance is more effective. Others maintain that the popular paper which hopes for its existence within to make its own party better and thus merit party success is following a more desirable course. The method at least has the advantage of an organization to back and put into effect the policies advocated. "In any event the highest privilege of a newspaper is to demand the best men in the public service, that there may be honesty and efficiency in admin-

A GOLF STORY THAT SELLS ADVERTISING.

From Merchandising Advertising. "I don't see that advertising makes your stuff any better," Charlie Darwin—who, though totally unrelated to his namesake of evolution theory fame, was doing his best to make a monkey out of me for trying to get him to spend our hard-earned money we were coming out with a big publicity drive—thought he had me cornered. I could tell it by the twinkle in his eye. But he had sliced his shot. "Charlie," I said, "you play golf?" "I knew he did. Of course he nodded a assent. "Well, then, when you do eighteen holes in 108, to whom do you tell yowse the quality of a product, but it's a pretty sure indication that the product is better, that it is at least an '88 instead of a '100.'"

CANADA COMBINES SALES AND AD ASSOCIATIONS.

PERMANENT ORGANIZATION TO TAKE PLACE IN OCTOBER—NEW BODY DIVIDED INTO THREE SECTIONS, ACCORDING TO TERRITORY—VAN SCOYOC TEMPORARY PRESIDENT.

The Canadian Advertising and Sales Association is soon to combine and superecede all the publicity and advertising associations in Canada. Temporary officers have been appointed, headed by H. S. Van Scyoc, president of the Montreal Publicity Association and vice-president for Canada of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, as its first president. These preliminary steps were taken at a meeting recently held at Toronto and which was attended by the following delegates: D. George Clark, president of the Advertising and Sales Club, London, Ont.; W. T. Gregory, president, E. G. Taylor, secretary, W. G. Rook and F. W. Hunt, of the Toronto Advertising Club; Thos. F. Kelly, Hamilton Advertising Club; H. S. Van Scyoc, president, and Charles N. Valiquet, secretary, Montreal Publicity Association. APPROVED BY AD CLUBS. All the Canadian advertising clubs were reported in favor of organizing the Canadian associations and it was decided to launch this under the name of the Canadian Advertising and Sales Association, since the present memberships include both publicity men and sales managers and it was considered advisable to continue this close connection between the two branches. A constitution and by-laws were drafted, after which the following off-cicers were appointed, pending a general convention of the association at a place yet to be selected next October: D. S. S. Van Scyoc, president; E. G. Taylor, secretary-treasurer; and Charles N. Valiquet, chairman. It was also decided to organize the new Dominion association into three divisions, the eastern division comprising all provinces east of Quebec; the central division comprising Quebec and Ontario; and the western division, all provinces west of Ontario. Each of these divisions will have its own local convention under a vice-president, while the central committee will comprise the president, three vice-presidents, secretary-treasurer and an executive as yet to be elected. Temporary vice-presidents of the three divisions will consist of: Eastern Division, the president of the St. John's, N. B., Advertising Club; Central Division, George Clark, president, the Advertising and Sales Club, London, Ont.; Western Division, the president of the Edmonton Advertising Club, and it is hoped that this number will be added to before the convention date arrives. At a meeting of the Toronto Advertising Club called to consider the new national organization, the plan was passed by Mr. Van Scyoc with-warmly endorsed.

SPECIAL EDITION FOR DOLLAR DAY SALE.

The Ypsilanti, Mich., Daily Ypsilan-

posed sixth annual dollar day sale at Ypsilanti. The paper carried over 3,500 inches of advertising in the edition. In 1921 the Daily Ypsilantian-Press set a new state record for cities up to 10,000 in the matter of Dollar Day editions and each succeeding day has seen new records. In this issue the paper also announced the 100th anniversary for the city's one hundredth anniversary which is also the centennial of the first settlement in Washtenaw County to take place July 1 to 4.

THE ADVERTISER AND THE MEDIUM

Advertising aims, methods, results have developed greatly in recent years.

Advertising has come to be recognized as salesmanship's most forceful factor.

It moves goods to quick turnovers and speedy profits, and builds and preserves reputations for merchandise that grow into tremendous assets.

Only advertising that is an honest, informing, assuring voice to the buyer is of much permanent value.

The merchandise and performance must thoroughly back up every statement made, whether direct or implied.

The good advertising business message is not only keen, clear-cut, and convincing in its construction, but is carried by messengers (media) in whose advertising contents the public confidence has grown stronger and stronger each year.

The newspaper has become the ideal advertising medium. Every intelligent man and woman in the land reads it daily. It is welcome in every home, and the honest, straight-forward business messages therein are greeted in a spirit of good will that adds to the response.

We are the National Advertising Representatives of TWENTY PROGRESSIVE NEWSPAPERS in that many fine cities of the United States.

We are equipped to lay before any interested advertiser or advertising agency a vast amount of up-to-the-minute information regarding the market opportunities and publicity advantages of those cities, whenever and wherever you say.

"The Big Scheme of Simple Operation"

A Primer of Linotype Mechanism

THIS book, just off the press is a complete, non-technical account of how the Linotype is built and how it works. Each stage in the operation of the machine, from the time the key is pressed until the matrix is automatically returned to the magazine, is described in plain, understandable language, fully illustrated with photographs and phantom views.

While the operator or machinist will find it of interest, the book is written primarily for the man who has never worked on the machine—for the executive who wants to know the "how and why" of his Linotypes.

ANNUAL MEETING OF NEW ZEALAND PROPRIETORS.

NEWSPAPER PROPRIETORS PAY TRIBUTE TO P. SELIG UPON RETIREMENT FROM CHRISTCHURCH PRESS AND PRACTICAL JOURNALISM AFTER FIFTY YEARS.

A large and representative gathering attended the annual meeting of the Newspaper Proprietors' Association of New Zealand held recently at Christchurch. President C. W. Earle, who presided, in his report said that the past year had been a most difficult one for newspapers in many respects, and the outlook was not so bright as had been hoped. Paper prices were hardening at the moment, and proprietors were still paying double pre-war rates for supplies, with the prospect that prices would go higher in June. For years New Zealand had maintained a very high standard in the service rendered by the press to the public. They had lately added materially to the volume of cable news, and extended the scope and quantity of special features, while the issues had been generally enlarged.

Visitors declared that, considering the population, New Zealand had the finest daily press in the world, and it was a matter of concern to all interested that that standard be maintained, for it affected the public as well as the proprietors. The association has a membership of sixty-four.

Opportunity was taken at the meeting to bid farewell to P. Selig, who retired from fifty years of active association with the Christchurch Press. President Earle said that Mr. Selig was an institution in newspaper circles. For something like fifty years he had been associated with their newspaper life, and for the past score of years or so had taken a most prominent part in it. He had been the first president of the Master Printers' Association; for more years than many of them cared to count he had been a director and chairman of the United Press Association; and for thirteen years he had been chairman of the Newspaper Proprietors' Association. Looking back over the years, they realized that he had set a splendid example to all of them in the service he had ungrudgingly rendered to the newspaper proprietors of New Zealand. It had been decided to present him with an illuminated address and a cheque with which he could purchase some memento of his association with them; but, perhaps, what he would appreciate most was their decision to make him the first life member of the association.

On behalf of the provincial proprietors, R. J. Gilmour dwelt in eloquent terms on the great services Mr. Selig had rendered to their section of the association, and the feeling that by his retirement they were losing a valued counsellor and very good friend. He had been ready at all times to listen to the grievances of the smallest newspaper proprietors and advise and counsel them. Sir George Penwick and Mr. A. McNicol added their tributes.

PRESENTATION FROM AD FIRMS.

The principal advertising agents of New Zealand also presented Mr. Selig with an appreciative address and a souvenir of the esteem in which he was held, the latter taking the form of a substantial cheque which Mr. Selig was asked to convert into a suitable memento of the occasion.

VETERAN NEWSPAPER MAN HONORED BY COLLEAGUES.

Dr. Esdaile P. Cohen, reporter on the staff of the New York World, whose entry into newspaper work in New York dates back forty years, was given a birthday dinner early last week at Delmonico's by about a hundred of his present and former newspaper associates.

Robert H. Lyman, an editor of the World, was toastmaster, being introduced by Charles G. Hambridge, president of the Newspaper Club of New York, of which Dr. Cohen is a charter member.

Among the speakers were: Clinton T. Brainerd, president of Harper & Bros.; James S. Metcalfe, former dramatic editor of Life; David A. Vogeles, editor of the famous poker stories in the old Sunday Sun; Roy L. McCardell, humorist; Martin Green, reporter, the Evening World; Wells Hawkes, and Robert E. Livingston, publisher.

Dr. Cohen was given a cigare case. In expressing his appreciation he informed his audience he was only sixty-eight years old, instead of the seventy they had credited to him.

STUNTS AT THE CONVENTION.

H. S. Bressler presides at the Star Adcraft, Mrs. Florence McIntyre at the Premier Syndicate exhibit, and Floyd MacGriff and W. S. Cousins in charge of Cosmopolitan News Service.
A. P. STRETCHES FROM MEXICO TO CAPE HORN.

LATIN-AMERICA SPANNED BY ITS MEMBERSHIP — SERVES MORE THAN FORTY PAPERS FROM 4,000 TO 5,000 WORDS FILED DAILY — HAS LEASED WIRE TO CUBA.

The Associated Press by-line today stretches from the Rio Grande almost to Cape Horn. It is displayed over press reports in more than two countries. Its membership has become a most important factor for the dissemination of news in that section of the world.

From four to five thousand words are received on an average day by the larger member papers in Latin-America, where the news copy is filed in New York. Only a small percentage is sent directly from Europe. As these reports move through the Associated Press skeleton form, it is evident that a vast amount of space is devoted to Associated Press news.

The Associated Press wire from New York to Buenos Aires runs through Lima, Peru, and Santiago, Chili. As Lima and Santiago take a smaller service than is supplied to the southernmost part of the continent, it is evident that many visiting and resident Americans have said that they could learn more and obtain a better appreciation of world affairs from the papers there than from their home sheets in which they declared local events crowded out valuable foreign news.

LEASED WIRE TO HAVANA.

A leased wire is maintained by the Associated Press from New York to Havana for the use of the larger newspaper papers in Cuba. As usual, the function of the Havana service is to supply the transmission of reports, the entries, results and prices of the Havana races. This service, which was established several years ago, enables some papers in the United States to get the results in their ledger editorials.

The news destined for Latin America is handled at New York by W. P. Flower, Jr., former chief of the Santiago bureau. Mr. Flower sifts the Associated Press reports from all over the world for the Latin-American papers. He is at present on special duty to the papers he is serving. He has found that the news of the larger newspapers command greater attention as the regularly they are received. This fact is of special importance. For this reason, the reports from Madrid are usually relayed in the New York edition.

Papers in Latin-America receive their reports but a short time after they are telegraphed from New York. They are then relayed by paper to Buenos Aires. Frequently the time is but two days, with occasional references to thirty or forty minutes. The difference in time between the eastern and western hemispheres enables the morning papers in New York to reach the newspapers in Buenos Aires, while reports from New York to Madrid are delayed several hours.

KANSAS EDITOR DESCRIBES IMPRESSIONS OF RECENT MEDITERRANEAN CRUISE.

William Allen White of the Emporia Gazette addressed the National Popular Government League at the New York Hotel at Washington, D.C., last week. He described the trip of the United States as the World War with a new world of nations. Mr. White said that Mussolini was the "real man" in Italy and that he would remain in power. The British fleet was given a tour of the world. Ruhr was very much divided, he stated, likening the frame of mind of that area to that prevailing in this country when the league of nations was the paramount issue. Touching on the World War, Mr. White declared that it had been won, not by the allies, but by labor and the women — labor through its advanced economic position and women through their advanced social and political freedom.

LINOTYPE COMPANY HAS ATTRACTIVE EXHIBIT AT CONVENTION.

As usual, the makers of the linotype, a very interesting exhibit in the East Room, just a few steps removed from the main convention hall. Directly opposite the main entrance to the East Room is a Model 21 linotype machine framed with an enlarged newspaper page with riddles from various lines of type to the magazines from which the lines were set. The feature of the exhibit is to allow a visitor, by dropping a coin into the key board of the Model 21, to set a complete page out of type, which has been called a "complete composing room in itself." Representing the linotype at the exhibit is Walter H. Savory, of the general manager; Fred C. Grumm, manager of the New York agency, and his staff; William C. Dock, manager of the Chicago agency; Fred W. Bott, manager of the New Orleans office; Alfred Archer, manager of Canadian Linotype Ltd.; Mark H. Boynton, New England representative; and Hugh C. Curry and Thomas Butler of New York.

NO CHINESE JOURNALISTS OF DISTINCTION.

China has nowhere in its history produced an outstanding journalist, a man who has dominated the field and left there the imprint of his personality as have Greeley, Dana, Bennett, Pulitzer, Nelson and Watson in the United States. As a natural consequence of the recency of its activities, has no tradition of the press for politics and for political intrigue.

TRUTH BASIS OF ADVERTISING SAYS GRINNELL PROFESSOR.

Truth is one of the corner stones of advertising, says Professor J. P. Grinnell of Grinnell College, who adds that the object of advertising should be to convince, just as the object of speaking is to convince. He declared the surest way to achieve this end is to be strictly truthful.

CONTROL CHANGES IN SO. NORWALK AND STAMFORD.

GOLDENS RETAIN INTEREST IN TWO SENTINELS, TITLE PASSING TO NEW COMPANY. W. P. MILLIGAN VICE-PRESIDENT.

Negotiations lasting several weeks between L. E. and A. L. Golden and the Sentinel Publishing Company have reached an agreement taking over the entire publishing interests, the South Norwalk, Ct., Evening Sentinel and the Sentinel. The deal involves the purchase of the entire printing plant, franchises, etc., of the Evening Sentinel.

The Golden family, associated with the publishing business in Connecticut since 1879, retain a substantial interest in the new corporation.

Leigh Danenberg, president of the new corporation assumed immediate control of the editorial direction of both papers. Wendell P. Milligan, vice-president and treasurer, assumes general business management.

Mr. Danenberg has been associated with newspapers in various parts of the country. His experience enabled him to cover a wide field and he comes eminently qualified to be in the position he now holds. He is a graduate of New York University.

W. F. Tait, formerly sales manager for the Fairfield News Service, has been named advertising manager of the two Sentinels.

NEWSPAPER MEN HELPING SALVATION ARMY.

Six thousand men and women, including committees representing every trade, profession and industry in Greater New York, will be engaged in collecting funds for the Salvation Army during the month of May.

Major Edward Underwood, director of the Salvation Army campaign and announcing the total number of organized workers, emphasized that the list of 6,000 includes no so-called "paper salesmen." Among the advertising and publishing fields, the following prominent men are chairmen of their respective divisions:

Edwin S. Friendly, business manager of the New York Herald, chairs the newspaper division.

Bruce Barton, of Barton, Durstine and Osborn, represents the advertising and publishing fields.

S. S. McClure, of the McClure Publications, chairs the magazine publishers.

The opening of the appeal is scheduled for May 1st, and the Salvation Army estimates that the sale of $50,000 for the maintenance of the work in New York City for the fiscal year beginning June 1st will be raised by May 15.

AMERICAN NEWSPAPER MAN SECOND LARGEST OWNER OF LONDON MAIL.

It will be of general interest to American newspaper men to learn that Pomeroy Burton, an American born and bred newspaper man, is the second largest stockholder in the London Daily Mail. When Lord Northcliffe bought the controlling interest of his late brother, Lord Northcliffe, in Associated Newspapers Ltd. — the Daily Mail, Evening News and Weekly Dispatch — Mr. Burton acquired a large block of new shares.

POMEROY BURTON.

Added to those he already had made this last trip to Lord Northcliffe in amount of stock owned.

Mr. Burton as general manager and Sir Andrew Cadle as managing director are the active publishers of the Daily Mail, as Lord Northcliffe does not take the burden of actual management upon himself. Under their direction the Daily Mail continues to lead the world's newspapers in circulation, with more than 2,500,000 copies daily, while the Evening News and Weekly Dispatch are booming along with more than a million. The Associated Newspapers have for some time paid dividends amounting to forty per cent per annum.

The last visit Mr. Burton made to this country was in 1920, when he came over to replenish his supply of American newspaper ideas. As a result of his observations on that trip, the new plant of the Associated Newspapers embodies many of the best American features.

HUDSON TRADING COMPANY TO BE REPRESENTED AT THE CONVENTION.

The company supplies foreign and domestic newsprint and has contracts with newspapers in this country as well as abroad, that make them instrumental in relieving the newsprint stringency for a number of newspaper publishers throughout the country.

LARGE EXHIBIT AT "OWN YOUR HOME" EXPOSITION.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE SHOWING DESIGNS OF ITS FIFTY-THREE HOUSE PLANS AT EXHIBIT AT SIXTY-NINTH REGIMENT ARMORY — SPECIAL SUNDAY SUPPLEMENT.

The New York Tribune issued a special "Our Your Home" supplement of many pages Sunday, and free copies were given to all those who requested them at the Tribune booth at the fifteenth annual New York "Our Your Home" Exposition which opened Saturday at the Sixty-Ninth Regiment Armory, Lexington Avenue and Twenty-sixth and Twenty-sixth streets. The doors of the exposition will be thrown open for the home seeking public to view.

The exposition is being conducted by the Metropolitan District. As in previous years, the Tribune is playing a conspicuous part in the exposition, having taken the leading position in sponsoring the "Own Your Home" movement since its inception during the World War days.

All of the Fifty-three house plans featured on the "Small House Page" of the Tribune Sundays over the last thirty-two weeks are exhibited and made available for those who desire to purchase complete working drawings and specifications. The Tribune and the Home Owners' Service Institute have done a joint constructive and educational purpose, with all the houses illustrated, containing in addition to the plan information from the Tribune Plan No. 6 of the five-room frame house that was the prize-winning plan of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association. This was built at Larchmont and exhibited at the annual EEG convention. But many of the other house plans appearing in the Sunday Tribune have been built by Tribune readers. Photographs of some of these also will be exhibited.

The feature of the 1923 "Own Your Home" exhibition will be the full size five-room, cement block and stucco house, the construction of which was started Monday and completed by opening day. It will be located on the extreme end of the armory drill floor, known as the "House That Bob Built." Its design is modeled after the cover design of the Tribune's "Own Your Home" supplement.

Through the cooperation of the Garden Club of America, a group of miniature model houses will be shown. The grounds of each house will be planned by the gardeners. The weather vane for the newspaper's direction — when your classified weather vane wouldn't back you up? National and local advertisers know that the classified section of a newspaper is the weather vane of its advertising possibilities.

Look For Our Exhibit At The A.N.P.A. Convention at the Waldorf-Astoria — Parlor Room 222.
WRITING of a MILLION-LINE GAIN IN ADVERTISING gives us a thrill. We do not expect you to have our same enthusiasm. But our million-line gain in local advertising concerns you, and is important to you because it is indicative of the strides being made in the National Capital by the Washington Times. It shows progressiveness—It Is Keeping Up With The Times, as it were.

A newspaper cannot gain one million lines in local advertising in a year without having the confidence of local advertisers. This confidence cannot be secured by conversation—the local advertiser is on the ground where he can check results almost daily. Advertising confidence in a newspaper is measured only by so many dollars returns against so many dollars invested.

A gain of 350,000 lines in national advertising is also an achievement worthy of thought. This, too, shows a confidence in The Washington Times, for the number of national advertisers listing Washington, and the Washington Times during the past year, has increased steadily.

Washington is recognized as one of the strategical advertising and selling points in the country. As a tryout market it is ideal. The combination of the Washington Times, evening, and The Washington Herald, morning and Sunday, at an attractive combination rate, offers complete coverage at the lowest line rate per thousand. This combination represents massed circulation far greater than the number of homes in the National Capital.

When the calendar year of 1923 is closed, gains that will be made by The Washington Times will prove one of the sensations in the newspaper world. These gains are not confined to advertising, because The Washington Times’ Circulation is moving along with the whole organization.

*For the fiscal year ended May 31st.
IN November, 1922, when The Washington Herald was bought by Mr. William Randolph Hearst, it was necessary to cut its circulation to 30,000 in order to put it on a net paid basis. Since that time, The Washington Herald has gained over 20,000 daily circulation. It was absolutely impossible for The Washington Herald to create 20,000 new readers to a morning paper. This 20,000 increase in readers had to come from somewhere. The last Postoffice Statement, and the A.B.C. Statement for the period ended March 31, will prove interesting to advertisers who believe that There Is No Substitute for Circulation.

The Washington Herald is an ideal medium for advertisers having a product adapted peculiarly to the morning field. Bought in combination with The Evening Times, the unit gives a greater circulation at a lower rate per M than any other Washington paper.

The combination circulation of The Herald and Times in the Postoffice Statement just filed, shows 117,000 circulation—6,000 more circulation in Washington and suburbs than there are families.

When The Washington Herald was bought by Mr. Hearst, its Sunday issue was merged with that of The Sunday Times under the name of The Sunday Times-Herald. On Sunday, April 22, the name of the Sunday issue was changed to The Washington Herald. This change was in name only. The editorial contents will remain the same. The circulation of The Washington Herald Sunday is 140,000. This at 10 cents against 5 cent competition. The Sunday Herald has nearly as much circulation as the other two Washington papers put together, and they sell at five cents. As long as the law of averages hold true, buying circulation will be the thing to do. If you increase the number of readers, you automatically increase the number of prospects. The Hearst unit in Washington gives you more readers and more prospects at a lower line rate per M.
FAMOUS MAITRE DE HOTEL AND ENTERTAINMENT MANAGER READY TO GREET PUBLISHERS WHEN THEY GATHER FOR A.P. AND A.N.P.A. CONVENTIONS.

Oscar, the Waldorf Astoria's famous maitre de hotel, is again greeting the publishers and looking after their comfort when they gather for the A.P. and A.N.P.A. conventions at that hotel.

Publishers all over the country, who have made the Waldorf-Astoria the center of their activities at convention time every year since 1898, never miss shaking hands with the famous maitre de hotel, Oscar Tschirky, who is responsible for the hospitality and comfort extended to the publishers during their stay at the Waldorf-Astoria.

PERSONALITIES OF WILLIAM A. THOMSON, THOMAS H. MOORE, F. GUY DAVIS AND THOMAS L. EMORY ARE REFLECTED IN THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

The increasing prosperity of newspapers throughout the country is due to a considerable extent to the ability and aggressiveness of the men who direct the activities of the bureau of advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. In all its stupendous and interesting growth, from coast to coast the bureau reflects the personalities of the executives who preside over the organization with its motive power. Sketches of the men in charge of the bureau's three offices follow.

William A. Thomson, director of the bureau, has been at the head of the organization since its inception in 1913. Mr. Thomson was born in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1890. He was connected with newspapers in Philadelphia and New York for some years before coming to New York in 1908 as representative for the Ireland Advertising Agency. From there he went to the New York Globe where he was appointed assistant publisher in 1911. He was called to the A.N.P.A. in 1913 and after helping to organize the bureau of advertising was appointed its director the same year.

Thomas H. Moore, associate director, was born in Philadelphia. After working on newspapers in Philadelphia and New York, Mr. Moore became advertising manager for the John Wanamaker, New York. He was manager of advertising in 1915 as associate director.

F. Guy Davis, manager of the western office at Chicago was born at Osborn, Ohio. Moving west with his parents, Mr. Davis spent his boyhood in Kansas and Nebraska. Leaving school in 1901 he engaged in the advertising business for a number of years was associated with various newspapers as western representative with headquarters in Chicago. Mr. Davis was connected with the L. H. Crall Company as western manager manager.

Thomas L. Emory, Pacific coast representative, was elected October 24, 1921, from a large field of candidates to manage the San Francisco office. Mr. Emory is a member of the Put- ton family, original proprietors of the Baltmore American and it was on this newspaper that Mr. Emory received his first training in advertising work. Since 1919 Mr. Emory has been active in advertising circles in Portland, Ore., where he was connected with three newspapers until he was transferred to the Hall and Emory advertising agency in Portland. He was named secretary-treasurer of this organization until he left to join the headquarters of advertising at San Francisco. He has been advertising manager of the San Francisco office since it was opened on January 2, 1922, in the First National Bank Building.

MORNING DAILIES MEET DURING CONVENTION.

GATHERING ON WEDNESDAY TO MARK REAL BEGINNING OF NEW ASSOCIATION'S ACTIVITIES — LOUIS WILEY AND L. K. NICHOLSON TO ADDRESS PUBLISHERS.

Two hundred morning newspapers are expected to be represented at the meeting of the Morning Newspaper Publishers Association, to be held April 25 at the Waldorf-Astoria, during the annual session of the A.N.P.A. convention. Invitations have been sent to all morning paper publishers. The meeting will mark the beginning of the association's activities, its earlier sessions having dealt altogether with papers and special problems.

CIRCULATION NOTES.

The International Falls, Minn., Daily Journal is offering three automobiles and a host of other valuable awards free of cost in a $3,500 automobile and prize subscription campaign, which is being conducted by the Daily Journal and the Weekly Echo. The campaign began on May 12. The person who secures the highest number of votes on subscription payments during this campaign will be presented with a six special sport model touring car valued at $1,350. While a candidate will enter and compete from the district in which he or she lives, they will be permitted to take subscriptions either out of their own district. Seven prizes are to be awarded in each of the two districts—city and county. The territory is divided into two districts in order to make equal distribution of the prizes.

Extra votes will be awarded in large numbers during the campaign. The Journal - Echo Profit - "Sharing Everybody's Success" subscription will be divided into three periods. The campaign is being conducted by the Bird Syndicate, Madison, Wis.

The Bird Syndicate is also conducting a similar contest for the Hoopes-ton, Ill., Chronicle Herald, which closes May 19. It ... Springs, Cal., News, which closed on March 10, and for the Danville, Ill., Commercial-News, which was completed on March 8.

The Indianapolis Star will hold its tenth annual free vacation week at Lake Webster, Ind., 122 miles north of Indianapolis. Each year new attractions are secured to add to the enjoyment of all who are lucky enough to win a trip. The vacation party this year will leave Indianapolis on Sunday, June 17, and return Saturday, June 23. A special train and automobiles will take the Star's party to Lake Webster and return. There will be plenty of amusements to entertain the passengers. Boating, fishing, swimming, dancing, dances, sand and all other outdoor sports have been planned for the party. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Payne will look after the Star's 1923 vacation party. Fifty city carriers will go on the trip.

The Washington Times and Washington Herald were the hosts of the five hundred and fifty newsboys of those papers at the Knights Templar Carnival at Washington last week. Twenty-one motor trucks, two big passenger cars and a number of other conveyances were used in taking the youngsters to the fun. The procession was led by the Times-Herald's newsboys' Band. Two automobiles filled with colored clowns completed the party. W. H. Wagner, of the circulation department of the two papers, assisted by his staff, kept the boys in order.

'UNADVERTISABLE' RANKS SWIFTLY DIMINISHING.

Since it has been shown that axles, hotels, iron pipe, and even water can be sold by advertising exceptions are mighty few.

It's the typical point of view of a non-advertiser that his product 'can't be advertised successfully'—in other words, that it isn't advertisable. Fuller & Smith, Cleveland advertising agents, explain in a recent statement: 'Sometimes that is a direct statement of a given case. Sometimes it's an erroneous or an uninformed point of view.'

'Motor-car axles and bearings weren't supposed to be advertisable—nor need they be. The leading manufacturer in that field proved the case. 'What the consumer buys,' objectors said, 'is an automobile, not an axle. It's all right to advertise cars, or accessories that the consumer buys separately; but you can't advertise parts of cars, that lose their identity before they get to the readers of advertisements.'

'Hotel service wasn't supposed to be advertisable, either. You could tell the people that your hotel was a fine one—but you couldn't advertise the service it gave, because all hotel service was pretty much alike, so far as it could be described in advertisements. Then a hotelkeeper showed 'em.'

'You can think of plenty of instances: drinking water and iron pipe and hardwood lumber and shipping cartons and white lead and the like.'

'There are products suspected of being unadvertisable because the right way hasn't been shown, yet, to advertise them; but they are growing fewer every year; and many does fix the man who was the first advertiser in his field is thanking his stars that he was the first.'

CIRCULATION CAMPAIGNS

No matter whether they are called "Salesmanship Clubs", "10,000 Clubs" or by any other name—they are the same old contests after all.

BUT—

We will conduct a contest for you as you would wish it conducted. We give special attention to the many little details which tend to make a contest worth while. And you do not need to go to a new world for that. We can refer you to satisfied publishers in your own state.

PRACTICAL ADVICE TO WOULD-BE PUBLISHERS.

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY CLASS TOLD HOW AND HOW NOT TO STAP NEWSPAPER BY JAMES A. EASTON, OWNER OF ONE AND PUBLISHER ON MR. HEARST'S STAFF.

"Newspapers have become sound business enterprises of recent years. The World War helped to bring this about. In the old days, the newspaper was merely a political organ, which followed the political will of the wise—and if fortunate it managed to keep about two jumps ahead of the sheriff. But for newspapers under should have more than one daily publication. It is true there are many cities of that population and under that two fairly successful dailies are published. But the tendency is toward elimination and consolidation.

"This situation should not be minimized. Many small cities are suffering and are perishing because of an over abundance of weak, struggling papers which are unable to represent their city aggressively. No small city can really support more than one newspaper. To endeavor to do so is to place an added burden upon the merchants and business resources of the town—a burden which they should not be asked to carry. 'If you want to own a newspaper in a small city, therefore, do not try to start a new one, but buy a daily already in the field if you can, and build it into a strong, vigorous property. If you insist upon starting new papers, select a city of fifty thousand population or over and be prepared to spend lavishly—not a few thousands of dollars, but a hundred thousand or several hundreds of dollars.'

Latin-America to publish European events the same day that they break.

MAINTAIN THREE BUREAUS.

Four bureaus act as the hub of the organization’s activities in Latin-America. Jesse Crosswy is in charge of the bureau at Rio de Janeiro, F. C. Scoville is in Havana, is at the head of the Santiago office and M. N. Stiles is bureau chief at Buenos Aires. Member papers in smaller cities take care of their regional news.

The principal functions of the bureaus are to attend to the needs of the member papers, to endeavor to guide the Latin-American desk in New York as to the news requirements of the members and to deal with them in matters pertaining to their relations with the Associated Press. The bureaus also cover events which are of interest to newspapers in North America.

While the demand of North American papers for Latin-American news is not yet sufficient to require a daily glut of dispatches to New York, their appetites seem to be growing judging by the stories from those regions that have been featured prominently during the past few years. The Buenos Aires bureau, in addition to collecting the news of Argentine, Uruguay and Paraguay worthy of sending to the United States, co-operates with the correspondents in other bureaus since South America news flows into Buenos Aires in greater quantity than to other South American cities, the bureau at Buenos Aires is in the best position to keep check on all South American happenings.

An illustration of the widespread service of the Associated Press cable service in the western hemisphere was furnished by the manner in which the organization covered Lieutenant Walter Hinton’s seaplane flight from New York to Rio de Janeiro. Lieutenant Hinton flew over land and water down to the West Indies, through the Greater and Lesser Antilles, from the Windward Islands to Trinidad and thence down the South American east coast to Bahia, Pernambuco and finally Rio de Janeiro. Wherever the seaplane party touched, its progress was reported by Associated Press correspondents. Wires were filed successively by H. M. Frith, Associated Press correspondent at Nassau, Bahamas; F. C. Scoville, Havana; F. E. Evans, Fort-au-Prince, Haiti; Laszlo Pardo, Santo Domingo City; Harwood Hull, San Juan, Porto Rico; J. R. Carrere, Blase-Terre, Guadeloupe; Jose Ivanes, Fort-de-France, Martinique; George Grell, Port-of-Spain, Trinidad; B. D. McDougall, Georgetown, British Guiana; The Times, Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, and M. Deschanell, Cayenne, French Guiana. The arrival in Brazil was chronicled by Antonio Tigre, Pernambuco, and the Rio de Janeiro bureau, which covered several events during the time the American fliers remained in Brazil.

KERNEY GREETED BY WILSON ON BIRTHDAY.

GOVERNORS JOIN IN HONORING NEW JERSEY EDITOR AT HIS FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY DINNER. PRESENT GOLD RING—PERSHING SENDS HIS CONGRATULATIONS.

Former President Wilson joined with Governor Silzer of New Jersey and many other notables in extending greetings to Kerney on his fiftieth birthday anniversary of the Trenton Evening Times. The Federal Club at dinner Monday evening at Trenton, presented Mr. Kerney, who has been the organization's toastmaster for ten years, with a magnificent set of golf clubs.

Edward C. Stokes, former governor of New Jersey, in a happy speech, made the presentation with a few lines of verse equating attorney and editor in a parody of a verse by President Wilson felicitating Mr. Kerney.

Mr. Wilson wrote: "I wish that I might be present to express my congratulations, regard and appreciation. But unhappy circumstances prevent my being here and I can only send in this way my congratulations by the mouth of this gentleman on his birthday. I shall be only sixteen years ahead of him and in ten or fifteen years there shall be no apparent difference between us in vigor and fighting spirit."

General John J. Pershing also sent a fine letter of greeting to Mr. Kerney. Governor Stokes read another letter, from former Councilman Everett Townsend, now general manager of the Allentown (Pa.) Leader, in which he declared "Jim Kerney has always been eminently fair in all matters of a religious, political or social nature."

Governor Stokes facetiously said, "It wouldn't be Trenton without Jim Kerney," and declared that when Kerney was in the room there was not such a harsh at times as those in prosperity, for he had a never-failing kindness for those who came to him in his office, no matter what his troubles were before him."

Governor Silzer, who attended the dinner, made an exception of this occasion when he cancelled his speaking engagement a few days before, in the interest of public business.

TECHNICAL ADVERTISERS TO HOLD FINAL MEETING AT NEWARK MAY 11

The Technical Publicity Association will close its season of regular monthly meetings with an entertainment on the evening of May 11. The association usually meets in New York but it is planned to hold this meeting at the Robert Treat Hotel, Newark, N. J.

COMING FROM CALCUTTA

William Smith, who visited New York last year as a representative of the Calcutta, India, Englishmen and Indians' Association, said that he had lived quietly in a city for fifty years. The association meets usually in New York but it is planned to hold this meeting at the Robert Treat Hotel, Newark, N. J.

DIRECTING MERCHANDISING WORK IN ADDITION TO NEW DUTIES.

William G. Hobson, manager of the merchandising service department of the New York Evening Journal, will continue to direct the merchandising department in addition to his other duties.

PAPER MANUFACTURERS SIGN WAGE AGREEMENT

Representatives of nine paper and pulp manufacturing companies and six labor unions operating in the United States signed an agreement last week in New York. The agreement provides for an increase of 10 cents per thousand dollars for unskilled labor and 15 cents for skilled labor. The employers offered an increase of 10 cents for unskilled labor and the unions accepted it.

RECORD GROWTH SHOWN IN A.P. SERVICE.

The Associated Press in its march toward strengthening its service, reported an increase of 100,000 miles in the last year. The organization's news over its 105 leased wires is now being transmitted in the volume of matter disseminated by the Associated Press to its 1,270 members. The organization's news over its 105 leased wires is now being transmitted in the United States and the other is used from ten o'clock in the morning to ten o'clock at night when the news load is the heaviest.

NEW MEMBERS.

Forty-five additions were made during 1922 to the organization's leased wire service, bringing the total to 1,600. The new state circuits are giving member papers highly developed service for the transmission of the daily reports. The development wire is operated during the entire twenty-four hours of every day and the other is used from ten o'clock in the morning to ten o'clock at night when the news load is the heaviest.

TRENCHES IN TELEGRAPH CORPS.

Although the Associated Press employed less than 600 operators in 1916, it today has in the neighborhood of 950 operators in its corps. The organization is leasing approximately sixty-five percent more wires than in 1916.
PROTECTING YOUR INVESTMENT

Leadership. EVERY development of the slug composing machine from the first idea of the circulating matrix to the present quick-change, multiple-magazine text and display machine has been a Linotype achievement. The Linotype Company maintains organized departments that do nothing else except work ahead to keep the Linotype user in the front of the printing business.

Performance. LINOTYPES are in active operation today after more than a quarter-century's steady use. Many are in use in remote places. Linotype resources have been invested without stint in factories and equipment to take care of the needs of the printing business for years to come.

Service. THE more than 45,500 Linotypes throughout the world are supplied through Linotype sales and supply organizations that serve four-fifths of the world's printers and publishers.

NEW HOME
The New York Times
The new building as it will appear when completed, with a frontage of 243 feet on West 43d Street

A fourteen-story addition to The Times Annex, to be completed next Autumn, will double the present capacity and provide The New York Times with one of the largest and best equipped newspaper plants in the world, covering an area of 317,800 square feet.

Presses—64 Units to run as 20 Sextuples or 16 Octuples, with a capacity of 600,000 twenty-four page papers or 480,000 thirty-two page papers per hour.

Typesetting machines—79.

The New York Times is read by the largest group of intelligent, responsive and discriminating persons ever assembled by a newspaper.

The New York Times publishes a greater volume of advertisements than any other New York newspaper. In four months of this year The Times printed 8,322,122 agate lines of advertising, 223,516 lines in excess of the corresponding period of 1922.

In twelve months, May, 1922, to April, 1923, inclusive, The New York Times published 24,465,738 agate lines of advertising, a gain over the previous twelve months of 1,894,721 agate lines, and an excess over the second New York newspaper of 6,499,298 lines.

The average daily and Sunday circulation of The New York Times for the six months ended March 31, 1923, as reported to the Post Office Department, was 370,266 copies. On Sunday the net paid sales exceed 550,000 copies.
SIMPLE MISTAKES MAGNIFIED BY EAGER CRITICS.

IOWA EDITOR explaIns SOME NEWSPAPER INTRICACIES FOR BENEFIT OF THOSE WHO LIKE TO POKE FUN WHENEVER ERRORS ARE DISCOVERED.

There seems to be a perfect epidemic all over the country of finding fault with newspaper mistakes that appear in print. People who can't read, or typographical errors, a misplaced line, are rushing to the paper with the news of their discovery and chortling with glee at the embarrassment they cause, comments the Fairfield, Iowa, Ledger.

It doesn't seem to be understood among the laity that getting out a newspaper is a good deal like rolling a dollar along on a fence top, with many more chances of getting astray than of getting a thing right.

We once heard a preacher say that the charge that righteous people were narrow-minded, dull and disgusted, was the truth and narrow and straight, with more room all about it than along its way. The marksmen's bull's eye, he pointed out, had hardly any margin at all, but had to keep within very narrow limits.

Nobody realizes that better than a newspaper man familiar with the operations of a modern newspaper: which calls for large output and much speed. The play of all the modern and intricate machinery and highly trained specialists are required in their operation. Striking the right key on a linotype is a matter of skill and precision, and the operator who sits the day through and turns out lines of type by the hundred, is on a constant strain.

It takes but the fraction of an inch and the merest touch of the finger to go wrong, and a second's distraction, the least lapse of attention, means a mistake that must be hunted down and corrected, and every hand and eye throughout the force is strained to catch these mistakes and make the corrections.

With the lapse of time, of course, errors do not escape even the vigilance that is spent upon them, and everybody about the paper has a remedy for the paper's out if nothing more than a misprintings appear. The urge of every newspaper is to accuracy, and it seems to those engaged in making the paper that every man's hand is against them. The most by-and-large statements are made to reporters as the solemn truth, names are misspelled, facts omitted, wrong initials given, the vague rumors magnified into important news.

It was different in the old days of weekly newspapers, when the editor put into his newspaper in a week about a third of what goes into the newspapers of today. He had to lead to proofs, time to corroborate statements, some opportunity to go about and check up his facts.

But in these days of telephone and telegraph, an attempt to cover a whole country every day to go into details in the complexities of a life that would have been men of a quarter of a century ago dizzy, the chances for mistakes multiplied, despite all later dates and correction.

And really it is not a difficult matter to find them, and the discovery of them does not entitle anyone to a distinction as a reporter. They are there for anyone to read, there despite the fasting and prayer of the whole force, there as a necessary accompaniment of the speed and extent of modern newspaper work. Every newspaper has them, and if the paper were held up until it could be turned out in perfection it would be a historical document and not news.

NEWSPAPERS UP-TO-DATE AND JUST AS RELIABLE AS TEXT BOOKS.

Science as set forth by the press is more up-to-date than most text books and just as reliable, according to Dr. Ernest Horn, of the University of Iowa, who recently completed a series of lectures in Minnesota at the invitation of the Minneapolis Teachers league.

Dr. Horn based his statement upon research performed by Dr. Charles W. Finley and Dr. Otis W. Caldwell of the Lincoln school of Teachers college, Columbia University, in which the articles on biology in eleven representative American newspapers were studied.

"In general, the reliability and high standard of material collected," Dr. Horn said the conclusions read, "is one of the definite impressions made by the study."

"Newspapers appear to be more up-to-date in biological than are college and high school textbooks. Every newspaper has them, and if the paper were held up until it could be turned out in perfection it would be a historical document and not news."

NEWSPAPERS OF UTAH ELECT OFFICERS.

MANAGING EDITOR OF DAILY PRESS CHOSEN HEAD OF CLUB—AMON W. FOOTE, WHO LEAVES NEWSPAPER WORK AFTER 30 YEARS, NAMED HONORARY PRESIDENT.

Harry A. Fox, managing editor of the Utica, N. Y., Daily Press, was elected president of the Utica News-writers' Club at the annual meeting last week.

Amon W. Foote, retiring president, leaves newspaper work after thirty-one years. He was unanimously elected as honorary president for life, having served as president of the local newspaper men for the period of fifteen years. Mr. Foote was also managing editor of the local daily.

President Foote retires as city editor of the Observer-Dispatch on May 1, at which time he will take up the duties of executive secretary for the local lodge of Elks.

The retiring president responded with heartfelt emotions, following the resolution thanking him for his unceasing activities in behalf of making the club a live organization. Among other things he mentioned that it had been fun to sit in association long with local journalists, and that he had found them always a bunch of good fellows.

The next gathering of the club will be the annual banquet, set for tonight.

REQUESTS FOR EDITORIALS WRITTEN BY JOURNALISM STUDENTS.

State officials of Missouri, Wyoming, North Carolina, and Idaho have asked the Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern University for a number of editorial typesetting sets, and other requests for editorial use in directing their public policy in regard to education. Other organizations have shown similar interest and the Chicago Live Stock Exchange has ordered 600 copies printed at its own expense for distribution. Indiana and North Carolina have also asked for several hundred copies.

The broadside, Save Illinois' Cows, was written by fifteen members of the class of editorial writing and policy at the Medill school.

Other broadsides have been published on forestry legislation, the question of mental defects, economic conditions in Chicago, relation of history to modern life.

FAMILIAR ROMAN LETTER FORMS EASY TO READ.

PLEA FOR MORE GENERAL RECOGNITION OF ROMAN LETTER FORM DOES NOT BAR NEW TYPE DESIGNS, LINOTYPE TYPOGRAPHY DIRECTOR DECLARES.

For type to be easy to read by the great masses of people, it must be in the familiar roman letter forms which they have learned in the schools, and read most easily through the power of habit, Irwin L. Gage, assistant director of linotype typography, in a recent address on the subject, emphasizes that so much of our everyday reading is of roman letter form which depart from the established roman alphabet can produce a type face or style of lettering that will be successful in advertising. Type designers who seek novel roman types or lettering, disregard the most powerful factor for getting their story across.

"This plea for a more general recognition of roman letter forms does not bar new type designs, nor shall we discriminate between the several established roman letters which are all fundamentally legible because true to their roman source," said Mr. Gage.

"We must also recognize that the subdivisions of the several families are generally learned from the well-ordered text books, and we can discriminate between the several roman faces, but there is no space available for a discussion of the many, many differences of light and heavy faces of the same type, nor of the effects of colored inks and papers. It is generally true that the normal weight roman types, printed in black ink on white or light-toned paper, furnish maximum legibility.

"It is unquestionably true that the so-called gothic types, extra bold faces, text or display roman, italic roman, roman capitals, and other special or secondary roman, should not be used in advertising, but even if they are used, the book ideal dominant type selection.

"The legibility depends strongly upon background space; the legibility of type depends upon the space between lines and masses and makes for readable character. Crowded lines and masses are always uninviting, frequently quite repellent. Here again the book page is a safe guide. Properly designed, it will be sufficiently leaded to promote an easy passage of the eye. The length of line will be related to the size of type. If small type is used on a large page it will be set in two or more columns.

"Spaces between masses of type determine the apparent relationship between the lines. In display typography, lines and masses adhere in appearance as wide spacing decreases. In this respect, in the qualities of symmetrical arrangement, display type is an exact direct descendant of title-page design.

"Correct leading of type is often neglected, with resultant loss of legibility. In certain faces, the ascending and descending characters, (b, d, f, g, h, k, l, t, w, c, o) have been deliberately extended to exact an apparent unity of the 'body' mass of the alphabet to include adequate white space. Such type retains maximum legibility when solid. The linotype Cheltenham family has this characteristic.

"Other types, notably the Scotch and Bodoni, require ample leading to invite reading. Glambattista Bodoni planned his type to be used with luxurious margins and generous space between lines. To crown his work, he violated as much as the sound logic of his design for a given purpose, in order to advertise. Bodoni himself type should use Bodoni types without first studying the books printed either by Bodoni or his competitors. His ideals.

"The reading of books gives us another type instinct—for arrangement in rectangular masses. This is the way we read the newspaper, in which set type and therefore the most simple as design. But its great value lies in the irregular lines of type. Irregular lines of line set in regular spacing in reading. However, irregular lines of type, headings, etc., gain in effect by contrast to the regular rectangular masses of body matter.

"In book composition small illustrations are usually inserted on the pages by allowing rectangular white spaces. In advertising typography, as in display typography, the type is 'run around' to fit the composition, because the type line is generally easier in appearance and legibility.

"The Linotype Company recognized an urgent need among printer's and users of printing type for a book ideal typography. Such a book should show the book ideal in all typography and should be interpreted in terms of book ideal in advertising and general printing. A book of this type should show the generally accepted type families and the traditions of style to which the reader is most accustomed. The page must be selected with its echo in the business requirements of other media.

"Protracted work, painstaking and detail to be found in the forthcoming Manual of Linotype Typography. The principles which have been laid down in this article will be found elaborated and illustrated with many variations in the 272 pages of the Manual. The literature of printing does not contain a similar book of creative stimuli and technical work examples. Printers, publishers and advertising men must realize that the book ideal typography and type use and typographic treatment.

"AD MAN TRACES HISTORY OF ADVERTISING — GIVES EXAMPLES.

F. D. Zimmerman, advertising manager of the Continental Oil Company of Denver, and formerly vice-president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, in an address on the Romance of Advertising, before the Seattle Advertising Club, traced advertising from the time of the Egyptians to the present, with fascinating accounts of publicity and quotations descriptive of sales offered, from hiring a slave to a roman to the early advertisements.

"Showing what advertising could accomplish, Mr. Zimmerman cited the case of an insurance company which has sold 250,000 policies solely through advertising at a cost of $1.60 policy. He listed the success of advertising and sales agents. He gave a comprehensive history of automobile publicity as well as a study of many popular companies.

"His address closed with an appeal for truth in advertising, the great problem of the Advertising Clubs of the World, predicting that the profession is going to have to observe what advertising mediums, especially newspapers and magazines, are carrying to avoid the charge that the advertisements carried by them were the truth—100 per cent.

"MUSCLE SHOALS TESTIMONY HEARD.

MANY PURCHASERS SUPPORT ALLEGATIONS OF FALSE CLAIMS AND MISLEADING ADVERTISING—H. J. KENNER OF AD BUREAU, AMONG THE WITNESSES.

Further hearing on the complaint of the New York Better Business Bureau against Howell & Graves, who are selling lots in the vicinity of Muscle Shoals, Alabama, from offices at 350 Madison Avenue and in a store at 1257 Broadway, held before Magistrate Simpson in the Municipal Court. A half-dozen purchasers of Muscle Shoals lots were present to support allegations of false claims and misleading advertising.

"Mr. Kenner, managing secretary of the bureau, among the witnesses, said that Graves had told him Howell & Graves intended to withdraw a circular bearing the pictures of Henry Ford, Thomas A. Edison and President Harding, but not until 2,500,000 copies had been distributed.

"As to an alleged secret "straw vote" in congress in favor of accepting Henry Ford's offer to take over the Muscle Shoals development from the government, one of the witnesses, Mrs. Irma H. Stewart, formerly employed by the bureau, testified that Albert L. Howell, one of the partners, told the story as part of his illustrated talk to prospective purchasers. Mr. Howell said that he had cast his ballot in favor of accepting the offer.

"Mrs. Stewart said she attended the lecture with another employee of the bureau and had made a memorandum of it the next morning. Colonel William Rand, representing Howell & Graves, demanded that the memorandum be produced. It was marked in evidence.

"Mrs. Stewart said Howell described the land as similar to the Palisades, high and dry, and capable of growing two bales of cotton to the acre. He described a brick-paved road, separating Muscle Shoals Center from the government nitrate plant, which the bureau declares does not exist.

"The magistrate refused to admit testimony as to what two of the salesmen told the prospective customers in a private office, after the lecture.

"The allegations are that advertising matter is being disseminated in violation of Section 421 of the Penal Code.

MR. KENNER SAID THAT IN HIS TALK WITH GRAVES, THE REAL ESTATE MAN REMARKED THAT IF FORD OR HALF A DOZEN OTHER INTERESTS DID NOT TAKE HOLD OF MUSCLE SHOALS THE GOVERNMENT WOULD BE FORCED TO DEVELOP THE PROJECT THEMSELVES. HE ADMITTED THE WITNESS, SELLING ONE LOT FOR $4,900, AND EXPLAINED THE REASON FOR NOT HOLDING THE PROPERTY SO THAT HOWELL & GRAVES COULD REAP ALL THE PROFIT FROM THE CONTEMPLATED SOAP BOOM WAS THAT THE FIRM EXPECTED ITS CUSTOMERS TO FOLLOW IT FROM ONE INVESTMENT TO ANOTHER.

"It used advertising methods, Graves said, "to meet competition."

Press dispatches say that three firms, in addition to Howell & Graves, are under investigation. Those named are the Muscle Shoals Development Corporation, E. Frank Croissant and the Hillhouse Development Company.

"Chattanooga papers say the realty board of the city fined Howell & Graves $100 for not furnishing free advertising matter to the public in connection with Muscle Shoals lots. The city says there are twenty-five suits pending against the Hillhouse company by the State of Georgia.

Lots bought as low as the rate of $25 per acre have been selling for $7,000 each, an acre yielding eight or nine city-size lots. Land prices within the limits of the Muscle Shoals towns of Sheffield, Tuscumbia and Florence have been rising to a high level, it was stated.

"When the Wilson Dam is finished not more than 300 to 400 men will be employed in the powerhouse, so the possibility of profits from real estate in the outlying sections becomes entirely a matter of the magnitude of any commercial or manufacturing development that might occur.

COLUMNIST’S IDEA OF A PERFECT NEWSPAPER.

PLENTY OF CONSIDERATION FOR EVERYBODY BY CHRIS TOPHER MORLEY—AND THIS INCLUDES THE REPORTERS AND EDITORS, AS WELL AS READERS.

A great lover of newspapers, sometimes we wake late at night thinking about our idea of the Perfect Paper. Some, at any rate from the editor’s point of view, confides Christopher Morley, Bowling Greening in the New York Evening Post.

Newspapers are published too often. Journalists work much too hard, and at such high pressure that many of their best qualities—imagination, judgment, humor, perspective, etc.—are vitiated by the swift spin of their routine.

The Perfect Paper (we make these suggestions only tentatively, not arrogantly or as dogmas) would be published twice a week. And this could be justified by the fact that people are more interesting two out of every three days. Two days a week is enough to keep the news alive, and it would provide a breathing space for the Sunday paper.

Of course a lot of the features we would want to see in it are already in existence in various journals. We are never ashamed of copying a good idea from any one of our contemporaries. We believe in the adage, “Imitate the ancients and surpass the moderns.”

The Perfect Paper would be greatly interested in religion, and would print every Wednesday an actual sermon delivered the preceding Sunday in some church—not from the parson’s MS, but exactly as it was delivered.

The Perfect Paper would be a little skeptical about the general business of each and every community. Some say that the public wants to be kept in ignorance of the activities of the city in which it lives. But the Perfect Paper would give much space to the activities of the community, and would endeavor to keep its readers informed of the doings of the great and the small.

The Perfect Paper would be much interested in Crime, and would employ all the vivid art of De Quincey in reporting it. It is a matter of common knowledge that the public is interested in crime, and that it will support a newspaper which gives them the full details of the crime.

The Perfect Paper would be much interested in Music, Drama, and Literature. It would review these with the same loving curiosity now devoted to Food. A Food Reviewer would be sent around the country to report, truthfully and appetizingly, on what he finds. Schools and colleges would be reviewed by an educational reviewer, who would report on the actual state of affairs in these institutions.

The Perfect Paper would give much space to the activities of Congress. We have a passionate curiosity to know exactly what is going on in Congress. We have never been able to find out— we mean the actual flavor of the Senate and the House. We would have a correspondent in Washington, who would give us a daily report on the activities of the legislature.

The Perfect Paper would be interested in the activities of the newspapers themselves. We would have a correspondent in each city to report on the doings of the local papers. We believe that the public has a right to know the doings of the newspapers which it supports.

The Perfect Paper would be interested in the activities of the advertising agencies. We would have a correspondent in each city to report on the activities of the advertising agencies. We believe that the public has a right to know the doings of the advertising agencies which it supports.

EARLY AMERICAN NEWSPAPERS AID OUR HISTORIANS.

BOSTON NEWS LETTER, THE WEEKLY POST BOY AND NEW YORK GAZETTEER HAVE FURNISHED MANY AUTHENTIC INSIGHTS INTO 18TH CENTURY EVENTS.

Students of early American history within recent years have been paying considerable attention to the newspapers published in the Colonies. A recent work by Dr. John K. Lord, entitled "The Fourth Estate: Early American Newspapers and Their Importance to Our Historians," has shed new light on this fascinating subject.

EARLY AMERICAN LOTTERIES.

James Rivington's New York Gazetteer, which, during the Revolution, was called the "Lying Gazetteer," tells in March, 1794, of a lottery scheme to raise 600 pounds to build a church near the Brooklyn ferry. Another writer of "words which the patronage of the Rector and Vestry of Trinity Church." In August, 1767, the Weekly Post Boy tells of the trial of William Johnson on charges of piracy. The jury acquitted him, but the case revealed the depth of public dissatisfaction with the government's handling of the war with the French.

WHEN NEWS WAS SCARCE.

Coming down to the Weekly Post Boy of New York City, the editor, James Parker, on February 9, 1747, published a pathetic lament on the scarcity of news. He said:

"Our kind readers must now naturally expect a great dearth of news and we are, therefore, quite at a loss what to give that may be agreeable. The town being alarmed, pursued them, the enemy finding it, scattered them into parties and so did the English into ten in a company pursuing them."

In July, there was an interesting item which recalls stories of Captain Kidd's adventures. According to the Weekly Post, three ships were caught in a storm at sea, and only one man was saved. The man, who claimed to have escaped from Captain Kidd's ship, was eventually given a large sum of money by the government.

NEWSPAPER ADS FOUNDATION OF SALADA.

ADVERTISER CREDITS STEADY ADVERTISING FOR SUCCESS OF HIS FIRM—BUYS SPACE IN NEARLY EVERY PAPER OF LARGE CIRCULATION THROUGHOUT COUNTRY.

Thirty years ago when P. C. Larkin came to the United States to see about importing groceries and the public in a new branch of tea he was pushing, people knew him, he didn't care; sales seemed hopeless. The trade was indifferent. The product had been on the market for years, but the public wasn't interested. The attempt to launch the product was being made in Boston, and it went well there, it was hoped to extend its sales somewhat to the rest of the country. And perhaps, although a rather fond daydream at the time, a little beyond.

The idea was that a newspaper campaign, which took in all the newspapers of the country, would eventually result justified his belief, since newspaper advertising in a city where newspapers were established, had been on the way to understand the advantage.

OURS IS A LAND OF PAPER ADS.

The paper was issued weekly, and in the number of July 24, 1704, occurs a notice which has added materially to our knowledge of the weekly publication. It refers to the execution of six pirates in Boston, of which the ring leader was Captain John Quelch.

When news was scarce, the weekly Post Boy tells of the trial of William Johnson on charges of piracy. The jury acquitted him, but the case revealed the depth of public dissatisfaction with the government's handling of the war with the French.

THE EDITOR'S VIEW.

There is lots of white space to be had, plenty of clever commercial artists, no lack of good typographers, but men who have the ability to write compelling copy—men who can take the twenty-six letters of the alphabet and a few punctuation marks, and arrange them on the page to make people unloose their purses strings or reach for their check books, are so few and so far between that when such a discovery is offered more work than he can do, we are able to favorably sympathize with the sums received by the popular story-writers.

An interesting test of the value of copy was made by a mail-order publisher a short time ago. He had two magazine ads prepared by two different copy writers for a series of twelve newspaper advertisements for a leading real estate concern. Another writer of "words which cut like steel," received $2,500 for the series of six sales letters.

The total insurance is expected to reach approximately $2,000,000 of which some $800,000 will be newly written.

ADVERTISING IS A NEEDED HELP IN BUSINESS.

MANAGER OF PHILADELPHIA DEPARTMENTSTORE SAYS BRINGING BACK BUSINESS DEPENDS UPON SALESMAHSHIP—DISPLAY TYPE AN IMPORTANT ITEM.

The prayer of business men should be: "bring back a healthy, steady demand for those utilities of nature which through labor have been produced in sufficient volume to meet the normal, healthy needs of a happy, working nation," says Herbert J. Tily, general manager of Strawbridge & Clothier of Philadelphia.

"Bringing business back depends upon consummate salesmanship," Mr. Tily continued, "and making it forge ahead on your resourcefulness, knowledge, sincerity and devotion to your profession.

Retailing, like producing, must go on forever. It is simply supplying directly the needs of the consumer. Manufacturers may sell directly to the public, but in thus selling they become retailers and will have, ultimately, all the troubles which confront the retailer today.

"If retailers, be they who they may, fail or fall in the self-imposed task of supplying demand, studying demand, stimulating demand, they will regress instead of bringing business to where we want it. Who would go back to conditions which existed before advertising had grown to be the great lever of retailing? Is it not true that before the art of display in type and in show windows had become so great a factor in the stimulation of demand that the world was encouraged to live more fully, more richly, more completely, more happily?"

"Unfortunately," Mr. Fellows added, "too many advertising dollars are being shot into the air without any logical plan. Then when people turn to the newspapers for news and advertisements, they find the papers empty and the buyers go elsewhere.

"Businessmen can take a good lesson from their wives," R. N. Fellows, advertising manager of the Addressograph Company, said. "When giving a party the wife carefully picks the people she wants to give her a smile and a feeling that makes them glad they came."
SPOKANE TO SEEK ADVANCEMENT BY PUBLICITY.

COMMITTEE TO TIE UP WITH RAILROAD CAMPAIGN APPOINTED—CITY'S GROWTH SLOWER SINCE PUBLICITY DRIVE WAS HALTED TEN YEARS AGO.

Organization for a greater publicity effort for Spokane and the surrounding country has been completed by a group of prominent business men who have formed what will be known as "Spokane and Inland Empire, Incorporated." It is described as a non-profit-sharing organization of citizens interested in gathering and giving publicity to accurate and authoritative information about Spokane and the Inland Empire.

Officers of the new organization are: Chairman, R. B. Paterson; vice-chairmen, L. M. Davenport and W. H. Cowles; treasurer, W. D. Vincent. Frank J. Walker was appointed chairman of the finance committee, and L. M. Davenport, Frank W. Guillbert and Raymond P. Kelley a publicity committee.

The movement started last December when the two Chicago men responsible for the two-dollar advertising campaign of the Burlington, Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads were in Spokane. At that time an organization committee was formed, with representatives of various civic organizations holding a series of meetings at which plans were discussed and a tentative budget made up.

In January an open meeting of 60 representatives of all the business and professional groups, and arriving at an agreement to raise the necessary funds, was held. The quotas having been accepted by these groups on the basis of a maximum budget of $13,000, an organization meeting recently brought the preliminary work to a close, and the responsibility of raising funds was delegated to the finance committee, composed of Mr. Walker and the various group representatives.

"The advertising campaign of the railroads offers Spokane and the surrounding country an unusual opportunity to put its advantages as a place in which to live and do business before a tremendous audience," said Mr. Paterson. "It looks to me like a chance to get in the advertising game and to put up some advertising that will last, and I am heartily in favor of going ahead with it energetically. It is the best kind of business to invest a comparatively modest sum in getting more people here to advertise their business more locally, with the additional result that we may be able to have a much more effective advertising campaign than we have had in the past.

"Spokane has had practically no organized effort on anything beyond an incidentalscale for 10 years," said Mr. Davenport. "From 1908 to 1912 Spokane went farward in population and progress, and we know that a lot of the growth was largely due to our vigorous efforts in advertising and publicity. In the intervening years we have done little in this direction because of lack of funds, and as a consequence we have enjoyed but little growth. To my mind an effort of this kind is not only a good investment, but more, it is a pressing necessity. I think the plan is a good one, offering an exceptionally profitable investment."

MERCHANTS SET STRAIGHT ON NEWSPAPER ATTITUDE BY TRADE PAPER.

The Michigan weekly newspapers found an ally in the Michigan Trade man after the fifth annual convention of the Michigan Dry Goods Association, who scored that branch of the newspaper industry. The convention claimed that it was cheaper to install mail lists as the newspapers "had degenerated." The trade paper reminded, probably will watch the local merchant who finds his business dwindle to a certain point and then go to town and win over his customers to the native "hick" merchant who buys space in the weekly and sells products.

The large mail order houses usually make an appropriation for advertisement, on my purchase list, the other merchants fail to use the local paper, the trade publication pointed out.

"Another feature which local merchants should take pride in is the feeling of resentment which will ultimately result from the attempt on the part of the local newspaper to starve a business. This resentment will ultimately find expression in a campaign of retaliation which will make the career of the village merchant an exceedingly difficult one."

"As soon as the country printer becomes fully conversant with the benefit of having his former advertising patrons, he will go to nearby cities and fill his pages to overflowing with the announcements of big city stores, which will play havoc with the small town merchant. The city merchants will follow up these announcements with personal appeals to the farmers, offering to accord them the privilege of charging accounts. This will naturally result in the money business from the town dealer to the farmer, and place the small merchant in an uncomfortable position."

"I found, when I was in business that it paid me to advertise the facts about my concern and play square with my customers. Continuous persistent advertisers are reliable and are soon known as such."

Mr. George declares that advertisements are of great educational value because merchants, financiers, industrial leaders and all classes of business men make a point to advertise the latest inventions and marketable commodities.

By reading bond advertising and "display" descriptions of great industrial developments, according to Mr. George, is in the forefront of educational progress. By studying these ads Mr. George contends that he is able to profit greatly in his daily business transactions.

"I think I can truthfully say," declared Mr. George, "that 75 per cent. of all my purchases are made from the newspaper advertising. I also am informed by some people who expect to reap all their facts from the reading matter, but I suggest that these ads are too good and they will be astonished at what they will find therein to interest them."

SOUTHERN PAPER IN NEW HOME.

The Morgantown, N. C., News Herald has moved into its new home and in celebrating the occasion gave a housewarming to hundreds of citizens of Morgantown and vicinity who were shown through one of the most model small town newspaper plants in the south.

The many compliments paid the new building by visitors were evidence that the people join with the publishers in their pride over the fact that Morgantown is able to boast of a newspaper that is able to do the things that have been done by the News Herald.
PREMIER SQUIRES
PUSHES PAPER MILL PLAN.

NORTH AND WEST SECTIONS OF NEWFOUNDLAND SOLIDLY SUPPORT PROGRAM FOR BIG WATER POWER PLANT—SOME OPPOSITION COMES FROM SOUTHEAST.

Following the dissolution of the Newfoundland parliament, Sir Richard Squires, leader of the Liberal party in Newfoundland, is appealing to the people for a mandate to put through a large water-power development program, to be effected by harnessing the power of the Humber River and utilizing its vast lumber reserves for the manufacture of paper.

Under the program of development proposed, the water power would be used for pulp mills having a daily capacity of four hundred tons, as also for other industrial purposes. Development will be completed under the joint guarantee of the British Government and the Newfoundland government. Premier Squires has endorsed the opposition at the polls.

Account of conflicting interests, a strong fight has already been staged over the proposition. The North and West sections of Newfoundland are strongly behind Premier Squires' development policy. In the Southeast section, however, opposition has rallied under the leadership of Sir Michael Cashin, the executive head of the Tory element. Sir Michael has issued a circular to the electorate, describing the undertaking as visionary.

The same opposition was encountered earlier by the Liberal party when, under the leadership of Right Hon. Sir Robert Bond, it inaugurated the scheme for the development of the waterpowers and paper possibilities of Grand Falls, now the well-known Anglo Newfoundland Development Company town.

Reason for the opposition is said to be due to the fact that the majority of the large fishing merchants located in the southeast section and belonging to the conservative party, believe that in land industrial development will take men from the fishery and other vocations and that they will consequently have to pay the fishermen higher wages than at present.

Advises received at the Washington office of the Newfoundland Business and Financial interests are that Premier Squires probably will be endorsed by a large majority, as the South sections of the island, while populous, has not sufficient voting strength to control the whole country.

SOUTH DAKOTA EDITORS FIND WOMEN CORRESPONDENTS MOST SATISFACTORY.

Men or women country correspondents— which? Women, reply 20 of the 25 editors who filled out answers to a questionnaire submitted by the South Dakota Rural Press. Two replies show that editors prefer men correspondents in rural communities providing the men can be persuaded to give as much time as women would give to the same job.

One editor answered that he had no choice, either men or women were satisfactory, it all depended upon the person's ability, and that "good ones of each sex were found on the paper." One reply suggested that a farmer could give better service to the newspaper because he had a bigger grasp on general news, such as the crops, improvements, farm changes, etc.

Why do South Dakota editors who replied to this questionnaire consider women better correspondents? This answer may be taken as typical of those received: "Usually women are not so tightly wired up on business and work—work they feel they cannot drop a moment to write some items: women use the telephone more for 'visiting' and thus get news." Housewives are singled out of this classification as the most desirable correspondents for various reasons, but the most universal answer was similar to this one: "A housewife who has some time at her command. one interested in church, lodge and social activities."

Other reasons for placing housewives in the first rank as 'reporters' of country news to weekly papers are as follows: "Housewives are always at home and on the job—they use the telephone more than men." "* * * Correspondents, especially housewives, are able to furnish personal items, such as sickness reports, births, deaths, parties and church activities because they are interested in such events." "Women have more inclination for the work and are better gossipers."

These editors were almost unanimous in agreeing that school teachers and preachers are poor correspondents for country communities because they are less interested in the happenings which newspapers record.

IN NEWSPAPER WORK HALF CENTURY—GIVEN BANQUET.

Colonel T. W. McCullough, a journalist landmark of the West, was given a surprise banquet recently on the occasion of his fiftieth anniversary in the newspaper business, dating from his boyhood as a printers' devil. Colonel McCullough was busy with his daily grist, writing editorials for the Omaha Bee, when he was notified that his presence was imperative at the Brandeis Building. There he was escorted to a dining hall on the tenth floor, where 200 representative men and women were waiting to greet him. These included the chief representatives of all the daily newspapers of Omaha.

James B. Wootan, editor of the Public Service Magazine of Chicago, was in town especially for the occasion. He was for years one of the editorial executives of the Bee. He escorted the colonel to the seat of honor and made a glowing speech. Letters and telegrams were read from old-timers of the Bee staff from all over the country.

One of Colonel McCullough's old fellow-workers in Rapid City in the old pioneer days related with great gusto the story of how "Mac" first defied him to shoot, then slapped the gun from his hand, pummeled the fellow and threw him out, keeping his gun as a souvenir.

CANADIAN PAPER INDUSTRY IS EXPANDING.

NEW MILLS AND EXTENSIONS TO OTHERS, BIG FACTORS ASSURING DOMINION’S PROSPERITY—DOMINION AND PRICE BROTHERS ENLARGE NEWS PRINT OUTPUT.

Ever since January, news in Canada has made it plain that the Dominion and Price Brothers, lumber and paper manufacturers in Quebec, have been increasing their output of newsprint. The Dominion, which is one of the largest newsprint producers in the world, has added a new mill at its plant in Quebec, and has increased its capacity by 25 per cent. Price Brothers, on the other hand, has increased its capacity by 40 per cent. They have also added a new mill at their plant in Ontario, and are now producing a total of 50,000 tons of newsprint per month.

The increase in newsprint production is due to the growing demand for newspapers in both Canada and the United States. The Canadian government has been encouraging the production of newsprint to help meet the needs of the country, and the companies have responded by building new mills and expanding existing ones.

POWER OF PRESS
MOCKED IN HALL MURDER CASE.

NEW YORK WORLD REPORTER TELLS OF INJUSTICE DONE BY DETECTIVES DESIRE FOR PUBLICITY—MRS. HALL MADE INNOCENT VICTIM OF INNUENDO, HE SAYS.

There was one phase of the Hall-Mills murder case in New Brunswick, N. J., that struck Peter Vischer, New York World reporter and first national vice-president of Sigma Delta Chi, as of the highest importance and that lends itself to brief presentation. He was astounded at the ease with which the great power of the press—that forceful and righteous determination of newspapers to present the truth—was insensibly mocked.

"Motive was the star to which detectives and reporters immediately hitched their wagons—with horses whipped to a gallop," says Vischer, writing for the Quill, published by Sigma Delta Chi. "Who had provocation to commit this crime? Naturally, motive pointed most brazenly to her husband and to his wife. He was promptly eliminated, on the satisfaction that a man of such easy-going and unearthing nature, withal so mild and so ignorant, could not possibly have committed the hideous shooting. Detectives, with most of the reporters following their lead, made up their minds that she must certainly have been the instigator if not as well a witness of the crime. (To charge the same opinionated procedure to the three prosecutors who had the case in hand at various times would hardly be fair.)"

"One of the so-called star reporters on the case told me before he set foot in New Brunswick that in his opinion the only way to cover a murder story was to make up one's mind just who the culprit must be, then follow all leads that point in the direction of the chosen criminal."

"The natural suspicions of the reporters were heightened by the fact that the rector's wife kept herself secluded. For weeks she did not show her face, much less talk to reporters. She made but one statement and the few facts that could be learned about her had to be wheeled out of the suffragist-friend who came to her aid so loyally and protected her so staunchly in retreat, and the lawyer this friend brought into the case at a comparatively late hour.

"Koenigsberg, the editor, said the wiser, backing back to their first guess, these were the actions of a guilty woman. What other explanation could there be for declining to be interviewed four or five times a day?

"The many other possible theories were quite overlooked. Robbery was quite possible, though the jewelled chain and money were missing. Blackmail was hardly given a thought. Thqt three and perhaps more women venerated and worshiped the rotund little rector was considered insignificant.

"All this is background, to show how it happened that the finger of suspicion pointed only in one direction. And here follows what I am driving at.

"Reporters were after news. Whether they thought her guilty or not was of no moment. They had to report what the detectives on the case were doing, supplemented by what they discovered through their own investigations. They sent their papers every word that detectives said.

"They quoted anybody and everybody who claimed to know anything at all about the case. They clambered up and down the rickety framework of charges the prosecution was carelessly erecting. They grasped eagerly the countless downright lies told them by hard-visioned detectives. They wrote columns about the sights noratories seeking 'eye-witnesses' claimed to have seen.

"The upshot of the whole business was that the newspapers—the fair, honest newspapers, organized like Joseph Pulitzer's so that they would never tolerate injustice—virtually accused this woman of the foulest of murders. Her crime was that she never lived a life in retreat and elected to stay in retirement after her husband was murdered, bad enough, and then publicly revealed as a traitor to his cloth and a cad.

"The newspapers make this woman a martyr to sensationalism. I am as convinced of her innocence as were the members of the Somerset County Grand Jury which refused to indict her on the flimsy though outspoken and damning charges which had been broadcasted over the country, yes, over the whole world, in the press. I feel that the press owes this woman an apology.

"The newspapers must first of all give the news, says an expert.

What is the difference between advertising and news? If a man is running a newspaper, is he going to permit himself to make any restrictions in what he will print as news, and what is purely advertising?

"A genuine newspaper is true to its name," says Arthur Hallam, advertising instructor at the University of Oklahoma, Norman. "It prints in its news columns news, and news only. Of course, it is not always easy for the publisher of the paper to draw a hard and fast line between the two factors, and it is easy to go to extremes either way.

"The one basic point that must not be overlooked is the fact that the paper is valuable to its advertisers in direct proportion to the respect with which it is held by its readers. It is the interest of these readers that makes them want the paper, and it is their desire for the paper that makes its columns acceptable to the advertiser.

"A newspaper must first of all be a newspaper, not a puff sheet to satisfy the vanity of a minority of the members of the community who may be a little more vociferous than their fellow townsmen.

"In the next few talks we will attempt to define a policy that a newspaper publisher can adopt with discretion, which he can use in deciding just what he shall print as news for his readers, and what kind of material he should refuse to accept unless it is paid for at regular advertising rates. It is much more important to have a paper that is respected in the community for its independent treatment of news than to make peace with a few aggressive people who feel that they are entitled to some free publicity."
REACHING A CITY WITH ITS OWN LANGUAGE.

DIFFICULT, OF COURSE, BUT IT'S WORTH THE TROUBLE, AND THAT'S BIG REASON FOR NEWSPAPER STRENGTH—BEST OF GENERAL COPY MUST BE LOCALIZED.

The very best general advertising campaigns are those that are not bound to be "shy" in one important point. It can't carry the good, friendly, neighborhood appeal that other forms of advertising can if it is not located in the exact community it is trying to reach.

The most effective advertising is that which is tailored to the needs and tastes of the people in the community. It is these communities that have the most money to spend, and it is these communities that have the most potential for growth.

Newspapers that are able to reach their communities in this way are able to attract more advertisers, and they are able to charge higher rates for their advertising. This is because advertisers know that their money is being well spent.

A newspaper that is able to reach its communities in this way is also able to attract a larger audience. This is because the people who live in these communities are more likely to be interested in the products and services that are advertised in the newspaper.

The key to reaching a community is to understand its needs and its tastes. This requires a lot of research, and it requires a lot of effort. But it is worth it, because the rewards are enormous.

Stories of prosperity that are coming in from all parts of the country seem to have banished most of the bitter recollections of the depression that followed the panic of 1929. While most of the discontenting happenings of that era have lost their edge, there is still a wholesome respect for the manner in which economic law grind those who trifle with the means of wealth. The faa tendency, especially among newspapers, seems to be to take the rising tide warily.

One of the most conclusive demonstrations of prosperity so far as newspaper publishing is concerned, is furnished by the reports of several Southern publishers. Walter C. Johnson of the Southern Newspaper Publisher's Association in local advertising, forty-four members reported gains as follows: Six, from one to five per cent; twelve, from five to ten per cent; eight, ten, ten to fifteen per cent; five, fifteen to twenty per cent; and one, twenty per cent increase. One reported the same volume of business. Two ad

T. M. R. Keane, president of the Pacific Coast Advertising Clubs Association, is making a tour of the Pacific Coast advertising clubs in the interests of the association's convention which is to be held at Spokane, June 17 to 21.

W. Bruce Macnamee, former Washington newspaperman, and Mrs. Hazel Haberman, of Marion, Ohio, were married a few days ago at the City Hall in New York. The wedding was the outcome of a campaign which began during the Harding "Front Porch Campaign" at Marion in 1920, when Mr. Macnamee, then covering the political developments at Marion for the Universal Service, first met Mrs. Haberman. Mr. Macnamee is now with the publicity division of the same company. The newly married couple will live in Washington.

The marriage of Thomas Kirby, former Washington newspaperman, and Miss Margaret McKinley, took place at St. John's Church, Boston, Mass., last Saturday morning. Mr. Kirby was formerly on the staff of the New York Times. He served as captain of artillery attached to the general staff in the World War and is now engaged in a representative capacity with the disabled veterans organization. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert James McKinley of Washington. The couple will establish their residence in Washington.

NEW REPRESENTATION.

BOSSOM ESTABLISHES PRIZE IN ARCHITECTURE FOR BRITISH STUDENTS.

Alfred C. Bossom, architect of The Fourth Estate Chair presented to President Harding by the Newspaper Editors of America, was born in England and studied there, and even since he came to America has made a serious study of his work. He is now offering silver and gold medals and traveling stipendship to English architectural students, who will gain them opportunities of making a greater success of their architectural education. He is carrying out the following plan:

All large architectural schools in Great Britain are invited to submit not only the design, but also the most accurate approximation of cost, and a financial statement of the probable revenue, upkeep, costs, depreciation, etc.; in other words, a complete financial statement of the entire undertaking.

The judges will be composed of a group of men consisting of a prominent architect, a prominent builder, and a prominent business man, who will check up on all points of merit.

A silver medal will be awarded to the best design submitted in each school. The winners of these silver medals will send their drawings to London, where the Royal Institute of British Architects will judge them, as mentioned above, and select the best one, which will receive a gold medal. The winner will also have a six months' trip to America.

England will send her architects here to study our modern commercial architecture, which is conceded to be the best in the world, and undoubtedly many students will prefer to come here rather than going on to the Continent as they did in former years to get ideas.

It is Mr. Bossom's hope that this interchange of ideas will help very much in the understanding between the great English speaking peoples.

with this plan because it promises to stir up building, which has been operated largely at a loss due to the absence of the Standard Requirements on the part of the architects, and it should in a reasonable time to some extent help in the unemployment problem, which is so acute at present. It will also be stimulating to investors and other kindred organizations interested in the scheme.

Mr. Bossom is going abroad soon to conclude the various details and present the problem to the Royal Institute of British Architects.

NEWSPAPERS WILL BE ASKED TO BAR TABLES OF RUNS AS BLOW TO GAMBLERS.

Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis is planning to ask the owners and editors of the newspapers of the United States, especially the owners of papers in major league cities, to cease printing the tables showing how baseball runs made weekly by the club bars.

His investigation of gambling and gamblers has convinced him that the printing of these tables is merely catering to the pool gamblers and the pool gambling element and that, if the newspapers would quit publishing them, gambling in this form would be reduced.

Commissioner Landis has discovered that the persons who make large sums out of baseball pools have virtually no chance to win, since, in addition to the mathematical odds against them, the swindlers conducting the large pools pay out less than 90 per cent of the total money wagered in prizes, and some of the pools appear to give back less than 10 per cent of their total takings.

He considers this form of gambling, by which large sums are taken from small bettors, to be most dangerous to baseball and as a further effort to stamp it out all over the country. In many cities papers catering to the gambling element permitted this and this is considered the chief aid to the poolroom swindlers, who otherwise would be forced to calculate the "pay off" figures in some form that would enable the authorities to trace them and destroy their "sure-thing" game.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING AND THE ALPHABET MAKE THIS STORE PROFITS.

To the ordinary person the alphabet with its 26 letters placed in a row merely represents a conglomeration of symbols. The Sieg Company store of Marshalltown, Iowa, uses it to attract reader interest and to sell its wares in a distinctly different way. Below the alphabet placed at the top of its window card, the store ran the following copy:

"We have here 26 letters with which we might write anumber of words, sentences or even pages. With their various combinations we have been able to tell you of our previous advertisements of our business ideals, our standard price and our full value is the only way we can satisfy a customer of our low overhead, and of our determination to deliver to the people of Marshalltown better values every day."

"If you should attempt to give you, individually, these messages, the expense would be prohibitive. With our greatly increased volume of business our advertising expense last year was only per cent of our sales. We are convinced that where a business has a real message to tell, that newspaper advertising is by far its best medium and tends toward economy."

ETHICS BASIS OF JOURNALISTIC INSTRUCTION.

TWENTY-FIVE PER CENT. TIME AND ATTENTION OF CLASSES IN REPORTING AND COPY-READING GIVEN OVER TO MATTERS OF ETHICS, PROFESSOR FLINT SAYS.

"Three questions seem to be involved in a discussion of teaching the ethics of journalism," says L. N. Flint, professor of journalism at the University of Kansas, in an address prepared for the American Association of Teachers of Journalism.

"First, when should ethics be taught? In what part of the course?"

"One way to answer the question is to say that ethics is necessarily taught in all parts of a course in journalism. A diagram might be made showing that the first, second, and third per cent. of each journalistic subject that should be devoted to a discussion of ethical questions can be found, I think, that a course in reporting or writing that stresses the time and attention of the class is given to matters of ethics. The same is true of a course in history. If 25 per cent. of the percentage is even higher in a course in editorial writing, and so on. This element in a journalistic course, I believe, is, in my opinion, the most important and should be increased to the maximum."

"Considering specific courses devoted to ethics, we find that in practice, they fall into two classes. The first, ethics combined with a course in history. History and Principles of Journalism is an example. The second, separate courses, such as a course in ethics. The other group consists of courses teaching the name of Ethics of Journalism or some such name as Editorial Problems and Policies."

"In my opinion, both types of courses have a place in any curriculum in journalism. In my history of journalism belong in the first year, so that the beginner will acquire a broad view of the business before he is preparing to enter. A course in his- tory of journalism is necessarily needed by the student in his various classes as assembled and organized and amplified into the beginnings, at least, of a philosophy of journalism."

"The second question involved in a discussion of the teaching of journalistic ethics has to do with the content of the special course in ethics."

"My notion is that there are four kinds of stuff to be brought into such a course. First, an introductory consideration of the general principles of ethics. Students who have not had a general course in ethics need such preparation for the more specific questions to be introduced later. For those who have had a general course, this introduction serves as a review of the subject. In both cases, it will prevent fresh points of view."

"The second element of the course is the consideration of the ethics of journalism. It consists of the enumeration of the twenty or thirty major ethical problems that confront editors and the discussion of the theories of ethics as applied to such problems. These two divisions of the course might be described as the theoretical part."

"The third element of the course as taught in the department of jour-

WASHINGTON SCRIBES PROMPT IN KEEPING APPOINTMENTS.

Washington newspaper men are scrupulous in keeping the appointments with high officials of the government at the precise hour. If an official asks for an appointment he always asks for a certain time. Washington newspapermen have found that the best way to keep appointments is to stand on time. If the official is late, the reporter may be late or not at all. A reporter who is late is usually excused by the official, but a reporter who is not there at all is always excused.

The earliest newspaper advertising in this country of which there is any record appeared in the New England Farmer in 1707. The first newspaper advertisement in the United States was in the Pennsylvania Gazette in 1708. It advertised the sale of a horse.

"SPIRIT" PICTURES FAKED, WORLD'S TEST SHOWS.

PRIEST'S UNIQUE REVELATIONS IN NEW YORK EVENING WORLD'S PHOTOGRAPHY ROOM SHOWS HOW EASY "SPIRITS" ARE SNAPSHOTTED—TELLS HOW IT'S DONE.

"Spirit photographs," which have been receiving more attention than ever from the press since the return to this country of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, were placed in the class of news fakes and home made hoaxes recently by tests conducted for the New York Evening World by Rev. Father de Heredia, a Catholic priest, who is professor of Spanish at Holy Cross College, Worcester, Mass. Father de Heredia has devoted himself to the study of spiritualistic demonstrations and is one of the world's best informed on the subject. He has prepared to see an exhibition which could easily be shown not to affect the credibility of Sir Conan Doyle's exhibition.

The third was a staff photographer of over twenty years' experience who believed he knew his man. Sir Conan Doyle having been in the city for a few weeks, the photographer produced an unexposed plate from the Evening World's stock, in a new darkroom. The plate was developed and placed in the middle of the group appeared a shadowy but unmistakable likeness of Sir Conan Doyle's secretary, Mr. Betty, the editor of the Liberty of Great Britain.

"It is not necessary to use living persons," said the Rev. Father de Heredia. "The 'spirits' have been able to take the portrait of a prominent man..."

Back into the dark room went the plate, and when it was developed the shadowy pictures of a bulbous nosed man, who bore a striking resemblance to Sir Conan Doyle leaped out on the negative, on either side of Mr. Anderson. These witnesses crossed for another "show." With the same precautions, a portrait of Father de Heredia was taken, and the agent reported seeing the shadowy figure of the British Unknown Soldier on Amistad Day mingling with a great crowd at a ball in the city.

Voluntarily, he went to the Evening World and offered to produce a similar picture in the presence of witnesses, using, as he said, "trickery and device, and spiritism not at all—because as between living persons here on earth and the spirits that have passed from the body there is not and cannot be a control from the living world."

With three members of the Evening World staff, Father de Heredia went to the Evening World photographic department and witnessed was an artist who had heard Father de Heredia lecture many times before large gatherings and had seen him manipulate shapes that looked like spoons, tables, cause rappings and read sealed messages brought to him on a tray without touching the keys. He was quite certain Father de Heredia would fulfill his promise.

Another was a reporter of some twenty-five years' experience, a lifelong admirer of Sir Conan Doyle and inclined to believe the British spiritualist "might have something" and was not qualified to understand. This witness was prepared to see an exhibition of Sir Conan Doyle's photographs, to be shown here.

The advertising manager of a well-known house in New York has compiled a series of things not to do in writing advertisements. Here they are:

Don't write as wildly in advertising or publicity effort. There should be an objective just as in other departments of business endeavor. Don't forget that you have something to sell. Find out what that something is and sell it in which publication as definite details in a sales campaign. Don't turn out anything but the highest quality of copy reasonably possible.

Don'toversrate your case. If you do, the result may be to suggest compromises when you should take a firm stand. Don't forget that the individual you aim at is not obliged to read your stuff. The problem is to make him read it and like it.

Don't advertise as accomplishments things which are only prospects. There comes a day of accounting in advertising as in other things. Don't always try to be the other fellow at his own game. The best guide as to what you should or should not do. Don't mix things up too much. The copy man in your institution should be generally uniform, but this should not be carried to the extent of monotony.

KLAN PAPER'S AGENT IS ARRESTED BY POLICE.

George A. Pipp, who says he is a national agent for the Fiery Cross, a paper published by the Ku Klux Klan, was arrested in Columbus, Ohio, after he is alleged to have shouted his wares in a raucous voice, and had caused a crowd to collect around him in the entrance to the station. He said his home was in Indianapolis. He was released on $25 bond.

The Circulation of the NEW YORK EVENING MAIL

AD MAN GIVES ESSENTIALS OF ADVERTISING.

The ten essentials of good advertising have been concentrated to two—sincerity and plausibility. John Lee'Mahin, president of the Associated Advertising firms, said Mr. Mahin. "You must have the goods, and describe them truthfully to build permanent success. It is faith on the part of the readers which has made possible the tremendous expenditures on advertising in the daily newspapers, and in magazine and direct advertising."

"But advertising must be plausible. You must tell the truth so that it will seem apparent to the person who reads it."

"In the effort to make truth plausible, advertising must teach, and of recent years it has become a wonderful educational force."

HIGH SCHOOL PRESS ELECTS.

Adolph Emaksp, business manager of the Spokane Journal, was elected president of the Washington High School Press Association at the closing session of the convention held in Seattle recently.

The press convention was in cooperation with the Washington High School Leaders, which was held under the auspices of the University of Washington on the campus.

In the press association section many topics, such as a financing the high school paper, selling ads and proving their worth, managing the humor columns, and better make-up, were discussed and every representative was given an opportunity to benefit from at least a few of the suggestions. Several of the smaller papers are thought to have been greatly benefited.

SINGLE-KEYBOARD MODEL 14 INTRODUCED BY LINOTYPE.

An outstanding feature of the Linotype exhibit at the A.N.P.A. convention was the single keyboard model 14, presented for the first time. The machine at once attracted wide approval, and several orders were placed on the spot.

The new machine has a range from five to sixty point, and the three main magazines and the main keyboard are controlled from one standard power driven keyboard. The operator does not have to move his hands away from the keyboard to get any character that runs in the machine. A touch of a control knob instantly switches the keyboard action from thirty-four channels of a main magazine to the auxiliary. At the same time the other fifty-six keys remain in operable connection with the main magazine.

Composition from the auxiliary is as rapid as from the main magazine, since the auxiliary is operated from the same power driven keyboard and from the same keys and the same position to which every operator is accustomed.

The thirty-four channels in the auxiliary magazine are arranged to accommodate five matrices, giving the model 14 a broad field of usefulness. The range of the auxiliary extends from the smallest faces to condensed sixty point. It includes all twenty-four point caps and the caps of most thirty point faces. The auxiliary magazine may be split or full length, as desired.

The supporting framework of the auxiliary magazine is a fixed part of the machine. There is no swinging or other motion. A touch of a control knob switches the keyboard action to the auxiliary. Magazines are taken off and put on in fifteen seconds, and from the front of the machine.

Representing the Linotype company at the exhibit were Walter C. Hayro, personal representative of the Chicago agency; Frank T. Carroll, manager of the New York agency, and his staff; Walter C. Bieloch, manager of the Chicago agency; Fred W. Bott, manager of the New Orleans agency; Jack Sterrett of New Orleans; Alfred Arden, sales manager of Canadian Linotyped Ltd.; Mark H. Boynton, New England representative, and Hugh H. Boynton, New England representative, and Hugh C. Cony and Thomas Butler of New York.

EDITOR WHO WAS KIDNAPPED

G. V. Sanders, former editor of the Houston Press, was given damages in the sum of fifty dollars against Colonel Billie Mayfield and others, for alleged kidnapping of Sanders in Houston during the reign of martial law in that city. Sanders was released by both parties.

Judge Ewing Boyd of the Harris county district court, held that affidavit of Billie Mayfield and his associates by a court martial, on the charge of attempting to kidnap Mr. Sanders and take him to the military law zone, did not constitute a bar to the recovery of damages.

Appeal was taken by Mayfield to the court of civil appeals.

WISCONSIN FARM ADVERTISING ENLISTED ASSISTANCE OF STATE'S EDITORS.

"The weekly and daily paper editors of Wisconsin have the opportunity of becoming the advertising managers for Wisconsin's largest industry—farming," says W. A. Sumner, assistant professor of agricultural journalism and farm advertising at the University of Wisconsin.

"The advertising account of a corporation capitalized at from two and a half to three billion dollars is not often found. This is the capitalization of Wisconsin's biggest industry.

"The farmer being a producer looks to his editor for advertising and selling assistance. The far-sighted editor can and will become the advertising man for his community. "An increasing number of Wisconsin farmers are finding it profitable to name their farms. In order to go on the market with a quality product, it is necessary that a farm name be established. One of the first steps of the community advertising man is to develop named farms. One enterprising editor who tried a series of articles on naming the farm and printed in his community paper a list of all the farms that were named. He offered every inducement to stimulate the naming of farms.

"Trees, shrubbery and grass greens are the second step in developing a farm advertising campaign. The farm which produces a quality product needs to be an attractive manufacturing plant. Painted buildings, green grass in the front yard, attractive shrubs and flowers around the farm home, give the farm the attractive background necessary for better business. Incidentally the progressive farmer is on the market for paint, nursery stock, flower and grass seed.

"The farmer who expects to sell efficiently needs a farm office. An increasing number of Wisconsin farmers have found that a farm office is just as essential as a cow. In the last five years a great increase in the number of typewriters has been noted in Wisconsin. Today the progressive, forward-looking farmer is on the market for a typewriter, a desk, and various inexpensive office accessories such as file and filing equipment.

"The advertising purveyors to this big industry of Wisconsin will find a number of other outlets and forms of advertising appeal which may be used. In every community there are auction or public sales during the course of the year. The typography of these farm sale posters is not that the farmer would call 'examples of pleasing typography.' A study of any considerable number of sales bills reveals the decision that they are all the same: that they are careless, that they are distinctive: that they follow tradition blindly."

Charles B. Howry, Jr., recently with the Larcha-Horton Company, Providence, and at one time with the advertising staff of Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago, is now with Hazad Advertising Corporation, New York.

William J. F. Dailey, formerly vice-president of Van Patten agency, New York, has joined the staff of McCmillan-Nash, also of New York.

Vincent P. LaPorte has formed an advertising business at New York under the name of J. P. LaPorte, Inc. He was formerly associated with LaPorte & Austin, New York.

Alfred C. Strasser, formerly of the Pancoast Studios and the Welanetz Company, has been added to the art department of Dorrance, Sullivan & Co., New York.

J. Jay Fuller of Buffalo, until recently an executive officer of James Wallen, E. A. Aurora, N. Y., has established an advertising agency.

The DeForest Porter Advertising Service of Buffalo, which has been in business for ten years, was recently incorporated under the same name, with DeForest Porter as vice-president, and H. E. Bredemeyer, formerly advertising manager of J. W. Clement Company, Buffalo, as secretary.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of Hoyt's Service, held April 20, the board of directors were re-elected for another year, and two additional directors: namely, Samuel W. Nestor, Jr. and Arthur E. Hobbs, both of Buffalo. Maurice was also elected vice-president of the company.

William A. Grant, in order to devote his entire time to the Harry C. Maley Company, has withdrawn as secretary-treasurer and general manager of the Foreign Language Publishers Association of the United States.

James A. Telford has left the Wylie B. Jones Advertising Agency, New York, and has joined the forces of Ruthrauff & Ryan.

Miss Zela Cody has been directed to direct a recently formed promotion department in the office of John B. Woodward, publishers representatives. Miss Cody was previously with the Chicago Daily News.

Shaw Newton, formerly with the International Nickel Company as head of its research department, has joined the copy staff of the Gardner-Glen Buck Company. He will be located in the New York office. Mr. Newton at one time had been with the H. K. McCann Company.

The World Wide Advertising Corporation has moved to new and larger quarters at 303 Fifth avenue, at Thirty-first street, New York.

FRANK AGENCY MOVES.
The office of AlbertFrank & Co., advertising agents of New York, Chicago and London, has been moved to new and larger quarters on the ninth floor of the Corn Exchange Building, 134 South LaSalle street. The old offices in the Postal Telegraph Building, 32 South LaSalle street, had been occupied by the company for more than twenty years. The new offices will provide separate departments for the various branches of the organization, which has greatly needed its staff in the last few months, making larger quarters necessary.

EXPORT ELECTS OFFICERS.
Frank J. Barnett, having purchased an interest in Steven de Counek, Inc., publisher of Export, New York, has been elected vice-president and director of that organization. He will devote all his time to this publication, although remaining president and director of the Barnett-Kennedy Corporation, publisher, also of New York.

KNOW THE COST AND CHARGE THE PROFIT, SOUND BASIS FOR FIXING RATES.

C. L. Snowden, general manager N. Y., of the Oswego Daily Times, has some very pronounced and advanced views as to the fixing of advertising rates. Mr. Snowden's views are based on many years of experience in newspaper work in a number of fields and are sound and businesslike.

"Three bases for estimating advertising rates are in vogue: One, what the traffic will bear independent of the advertiser. Two, what the cost of publication is, plus a reasonable publisher's profit of 15 to 25 per cent. This is fair to both the publisher and consumer. The last basis means a cost system which will include all income to the publisher, all rents, other overhead expenses, raw material, depreciation, etc.

"My cost system is exact and shows that readers and news items cost one third more than display advertising. This means that free readers cannot be charged to charity.

"Another poor practice is to make a lower rate for cuts and electrotypes under the mistaken notion the newspaper is selling labor and material, and not space and circulation.

"Some newspapers have a sliding scale for advertising. They hold that their customers are accustomed to receive advantage in buying in large quantities. Large publishers may be able to insist on and maintain a flat rate but it is doubtful if the newspapers of small circulation can do this.

"I believe a publisher can teach his client that every page is a live page by making it so in the matter of news. Further, a publisher should explain to his patrons that good advertising or publicity department of a retail store should fulfill accurately, if it is to operate successfully, sell the product, and, second vice-president of A. I. Annan & Son of New York.

"The buyers and merchandise managers are held responsible for the volume of sales of the departments which they represent.

"It is interesting to note that the volume of advertising merchandise in Chicago is about 10 per cent of department sales. In some departments it is a great deal less, in others more. The regular business is less than about 85 per cent. The total volume, so you see how important it is to keep the buyer and merchandise manager in keeping stock complete. In having merchandise priced right, in having the right quantities, is so necessary, not only to the buyer, but the merchant who is responsible to the customer who will not be satisfied if the product is not there when they want it.

Fountain Heads of Investment

It is not the so-called "plutocrat" whose investment habits are already fixed and unalterable, who sustains the world’s markets. It is the man of growing means who looks about for sound investments to take care of and increase his surplus savings.

This is the man who reads financial news and comment and who reads and is influenced by legitimate advertising.

Among the readers of The Chicago Daily News there are thousands of these investors, actual and potential—the present and future mainstays of the market. They read the carefully edited financial pages of The Daily News with interest and confidence, and this interest and confidence are extended to advertising appearing in these pages.

VITAL PROBLEMS LOOM FOR A. A. C. W. CONVENTION

NOTABLES TO DISCUSS OUTSTANDING ADVERTISING ISSUES — CRAWFORD ADDRESS TO FEATURE VISIT OF BRITONS — COMPETITION FOR 1924 MEETING KEEN.

With an array of speakers of world-wide reputation listed to discuss such problems as "How can the managers of classified advertising increase their business?" and "What will be the central thought of the forthcoming convention of the Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers, when this body, which is a part of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, meets in convention in Atlantic City?" the convention program for the 1924 meeting is keen.

How can the managers of classified advertising increase their business?

That will be the central thought of the forthcoming convention of the Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers, when this body, which is a part of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, meets in convention in Atlantic City.

The convention will spend two days and two luncheon meetings in a study of how to get more business, and their program this year is without doubt the most constructive that the organization has ever built. It is conceived on the triangle plan of more ads, more lines, more insertions — will discuss methods of increasing business.

The readiness with which governmental affairs are adjusted to the needs of the press was illustrated this week by a prompt change in the hour of President Harding's regular Tuesday interviews with the Washington press. Apprised of the fact that a large number of cities had changed to "daylight time," and that the information gleaned from the conference with the press representatives would have to be put on the wires earlier in consequence, the President immediately arranged to advance the hour of greeting the scribes from one o'clock to noon. A corresponding shift was made in the hours of convening the cabinet, which was changed from 11 a.m. to 10 a.m. Thus, the entire administration schedule for that day swung in obedience to the requirements of the press of the country for "spot news."

The hour for the regular Friday conference with the press representatives will continue at four o'clock in the afternoon, as formerly, as the information then obtained is to be used in the papers of the following morning, and no necessity for an earlier interview is involved.

BIRMINGHAM NEWSPAPER MEN JAILED FOR CONTEMPT.

Three members of the staff of the Birmingham Post, an afternoon paper, were sentenced to jail Wednesday for twenty-four hours for contempt of court. Those arrested were E. T. Leech, Jack Betha, managing editor, and Lewey Robinson, reporter. The men were cited to appear by Judge H. P. Hefflin in circuit court and sentenced after a hearing in which they were defended by Newton D. Baker of Cleveland, ex-senator of war, and Birmingham counsel.

The court gave the men an alternative — an order promising that they would not again print what the court termed "improper matter" about the late governor. The case arose over a news item containing an alleged record of a man charged with murder. The charges that the news story was prejudicial and caused the postponement of the trial, Mr. Baker held that nothing was printed except absolute facts based on court records and that no harm was done to the defendant in question as the law interpreted the facts. The court in passing sentence said that the court was higher than the newspaper, and that the liberty of the press was secondary to human liberty. Leave to appeal was denied.

ORIENTAL THEME FOR JOURNALISM WEEK SESSIONS.

MISSOURI SCHOOL PROGRAM STRIKES UNIQUE NOTE — MANY JOURNALISTS FROM JAPAN, CHINA AND RUSSIA WILL SPEAK — MANCHURIAN BANQUET A FEATURE.

A spirit of a modern and industrialized Orient will prevail at the fourteenth annual journalism week of the school of journalism of the University of Missouri, to be held in Columbia, May 21-26. With a program including speeches by newspaper men from Japan, China and Russia, and closing with a "Made-in-Manchuria" banquet arranged through co-operation on the part of journalism with the South Manchuria Railway, the chambers of commerce of Manchuria, the motif will be carried out during the entire week.

This oriental atmosphere will be in keeping with the relationship that Missouri school of journalism has maintained with the Far East throughout the fifteen years of its existence. Since its establishment it has kept closely in touch with Japanese and Chinese students, having sent a number of its graduates to this field in addition to having trained many native newspaper men of both countries.

Significant of this relationship will be the reception by Missouri graduates recently returned from the Far East. These men — Earl H. Riley, president of the Missouri alumni association of New York, and special writer on Kwantung and Manchuria, and Frank H. Hedg, Peking correspondent of the Japan Advertiser and the Philadelphia Inquirer — will be among the hosts at the reception.

When the 600 guests gather at the "Made-in-Manchuria" banquet in Rodwell Gymnasium, Friday, May 25, they will be lifted out of the reality and dropped into the dreamy atmosphere of the Orient. A large shipment of decorations and food is expected to arrive from Manchuria soon. (Continued on Twenty-fifth Page)

PRESIDENT OF FOUR A's DECLARES MAGAZINES COULD WELL AFFORD

CAMPAIGNS WITH NEWSPAPER AND TRADE PAPER COPY.

National magazines could well afford to let the advertiser spend money in the trade papers, in order to cement and build up retail connections, and also let them spend money locally in newspapers to build up local distribution, President John Benson of the American Association of Advertising Agencies declared in addressing the Advertising Agencies Exposition, held at Chicago May 3 and 4. Mr. Benson urged that publishers of all classes pay more attention to seeing that advertisers are satisfied.

In his address, he stressed the need of a greater co-operative spirit among all the factors that make advertising. For the agency's part, he said, the present overhead was already too high. Advertisers must guard against expecting too much in the way of results.

NEW YORK TIMES
PAYS SALARIES
BY CHECK.

The system of paying salaries by check has met with favor among employees of the New York Times, which is the first daily newspaper in New York to adopt the plan. The benefits are obvious both to the Times and its employees, the majority of whom receive their salaries this way, and it is expected that before the close of the year all employees will be paid by this method.

The system of paying salaries by check has been in operation for many years, and has been successful in many other countries. It has been shown that the pay is more easily obtained, and that it is more convenient for the employees.

Members of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Association at their annual meeting in Toronto May 3 and 4 reaffirmed their stand in opposition to the rebating of commissions by advertising agencies, by deciding to retain Clause J as part of its requirements for recognition of agencies. The committee on agency relations reported that during the year special effort had been directed at increasing the number of newspapers which refuse commissions to agencies unrecognized by the association. There are now sixty newspapers which are parties to this agreement, and nine others which make exceptions only in the cases of certain local agencies.

The meeting showed that the problem of the recognition of commissions in newspaper Canada is much the same as they are in the United States. Much of the discussion, pointed at reducing the costs, and it was urged that all members cooperate with the new and existing agencies in furnishing faithful complete reports.

The labor committee was instructed to investigate and report upon questions of lending support to printing schools, and the committee of second-class postal privileges was referred to the postal and parliamentary committees for action.

It was recommended by the executive committee that efforts be made to lessen the amount of advertising paid by newspapers to recognized and that no firms of American, British or Canadian origin be added to the list of recognized agencies.

Prior to the convention, members conferred with the Canadian Association of Advertising Agencies, of which sixty were present, including representatives of agencies in London, Hamilton, Toronto and Montreal.

Almost the entire discussion related to the much-talked-of Clause J in the agency agreement with the C.D.N.A. All of the agencies represented were strongly in favor of the retention of this clause and facts and figures were presented in support of its continuance as a qualification of recognition by the publishers' organizations.

A luncheon was given to the publishers at noon, at which W. H. McCready, treasurer, was re-elected president of the C.A.A.A. A.A.

Among the speakers at the banquet on Thursday evening were Lieutenant Governor Cockshutt of Ontario, Don Gage, A. G. McDonald, Preston and Mr. Imrie. The convention adjourned Thursday afternoon, a day’s highlights of the Canadian Press Meet.

At the meeting of the Canadian Press, Limited, its policy to give to the newspaper publishers, the name of the organization became the Canadian Press, the status of the organization having been changed from that of a company without share capital to that of a corporation without share capital. President, E. Norman Smith, Ottawa

C. G. Hambidge Again Heads Newspaper Club.

Other officers elected were: First vice-president, Gene Fowler (opposition); second vice-president, Phillip D. Hoyt (opposition); treasurer, John R. Halsey (opposition); recording secretary, Alfred W. Pierce (administration); corresponding secretary, Ben Mellan (administration).

STRIKER WITHDRAWS AS DETROIT CLUB HEAD.

Again Adler had held his position for two years as president of the Detroit Club, John A. Trukey of the Saturday Night Press, has withdrawn from that position. He had served every since the club was organized and a great deal of its present financial standing is due to his efforts.

Besides guiding the destinies of the club in two years, he has established the official publication and has been in full charge of editing and publishing work which has been launched.

The club issued a twelve-page publication full of interesting articles, letters, cartoons and other material. Mr. Stojiw, who is the officer of the organization to the Chicago convention and also to Boston, and he has recently been appointed as representative of his club at the Buffalo meeting in August.

ILLINOIS DAILY INSTALLS NEW GOS S PRESS.

The Decatur, Ill., Daily Review has installed a new Goss sextuple press to meet the increased demands of its circulation and for greater flexibility.

The press now possesses one of the best press rooms in the Middle West. A Cuellar-Hammer dispatch conveyor conveys the papers from the press to the mailing room.

H. C. Schaube is president of the Daily Review. Jeryl Cone, manager and secretary; R. D. Rainey, business manager and treasurer. The paper was established in 1878 and has been making rapid strides in its circulation. Chemnitz & Woodman represent the Review.

NEW FINANCING BY NEW YORK EVENING POST; REPORT OF GLOBE PURCHASE DENIED.

Stockholders of the New York Evening Post have been called to meet Wednesday, May 16, to discuss a meeting of the evening meeting. The Post is reported to be in a better position for the increase in capital stock from $1,000,000 to $500,000, the issuing of $300,000 in convertible gold notes is contemplated.

The office of Edwin F. Gay, president of the New York Evening Post, who was invited to the new newspaper company which publishes the Post was denied.
Enlarged Quarters For

THE KANSAS CITY STAR

Increases in circulation and advertising volume have made it necessary for The Kansas City Star to enlarge its facilities 50 per cent above its former capacity.

Back in 1911 the “new building” of The Kansas City Star was the largest individual newspaper plant in the United States. What was thought to be ample allowance for future growth had been made.

Yet all that room has been consumed, and the editorial offices, business offices and mechanical departments are clamoring for more space. What was once the largest newspaper plant in America no longer suffices for The Kansas City Star. The enlargements now under construction will increase the building to about half again its present size.

An entirely new boiler and engine plant will be installed. This will consist of three Hooven-Owens-Rentschler Company uniflow engines, capable of generating 1,200 k.w. Four 350-horsepower Heine boilers will be required.

Two new Goss color presses are to be added. Standing sixteen feet high by thirty-one feet long, these presses represent the latest refinements in color printing. The color presses are in addition to The Star’s equipment of nine Goss octuple presses, each with a capacity of seventy thousand 16-page papers an hour.

NATION'S BUSINESS MEN DISCUSS RAIL CRISIS.

TOPIC FEATURED ON A.N.P.A. PROGRAM ALSO LEADER AT GREAT CONVENTION OF CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF U. S. — NEW YORK TIMES BUILDING IS DESCRIBED BY Hoover.

Transportation, which was one of the most important of the topics discussed at the recent convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, also had prominent place in the discussions at the annual meeting in New York this week of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. In addition to the passage of resolutions favoring private operation of the government railroads by the transportation group of the chamber, President Julius H. Barnes dealt at length with the railroad transportation situation in his annual address. Both he and Secretary of Commerce Hoover counseled against government ownership, and Mr. Barnes drew a broad distinction between government operation and legitimate regulation. The latter, he said, was what the country required.

In the myriad meetings which were held during the chamber's session, practically every phase of the economic situation at home and abroad was exhaustively discussed. Among the newspaper men who were leading spirits were Dr. H. Parker Conner, editor of the Virginia Register, Mr. Alfred L. Fahey, who spoke in opposition to making credit requirements easier for the farmer than for the industrialist, and, John H. Fahey, owner of the Worcester, Mass., Post, who presented resolutions to the finance group of the convention urging recognition of the need for aid in the settlement of Europe's economic disorder and for the assistance of the United States in restoring the economic equilibrium of the world. Mr. Fahey's resolution was unanimously adopted by the finance group and was passed along to the Thursday session of the whole convention. At a dinner held in honor of American delegates to the recent conference of the International Chamber of Commerce at London, Mr. Fahey spoke on world conditions made a deep impression. Mr. Fahey was a member of the conciliation committee appointed by the national chamber.

The first indication of the chamber's stand on one of the leading transportation problems came in the passage of resolutions by the transportation group urging the President plans for direct operation of the Government's ships and to renew negotiations with shipping interests to enable private operation.

President Julius H. Barnes in his address said that business could not be safely placed on a permanent period of prosperity until the world's economic problems had been settled by calling the nations of Europe into an economic conference to which this nation should be a party. This statement was based on a study of European conditions and the recent visit to Europe as a delegate to the International Chamber of Commerce Congress.

"Manifestly transportation, which is the life blood of national life," said Mr. Barnes, "must be studied and developed in several wider aspects than railroad development. The chamber of commerce, impressed with the necessities of a comprehensive study of these various phases and at the request of a number of rail executives, has under way the ascertain- ment of accurate information on which we hope intelligent determination of these relations and of a future program of development may be finally evolved."

Then be warned that while the country was prepared for legitimate regulation of railroads, it was opposed to government ownership and operation.

Mr. Barnes pointed out that the standard of living and the general economic well being has been advanced concurrently with industrial expansion. In the decade since 1913, he pointed out, the country has progressed so far that comparisons with the pre-war period as a normal are no longer valid. The influences which have come into play since 1913 he analyzes as follows:

"Our population has increased fourteen million, with all that means of enlarged requirements. Annual national income has increased from thirty-four billion to over fifty billion dollars, with all that means of buying and investment power."

"Our aggregate savings deposits have increased from six billions to fourteen billion dollars with all that means of the reward to thrift and self-denial. Deposits in national banks increased from six to seventeen billion dollars, with all that indicates of the accumulation of liquid capital for investment, and for enterprise."

Finance occupied a leading place in the general discussions. Morton L. Correy, member of the Federal Farm Loan board, made a strong plea for giving a trial to intermediate credit banks. (Continued on Twenty-first Page)

HOW WORK ON THE NEW YORK TIMES WONDERFUL NEW BUILDING IS PROGRESSING.

When completed this fall, the handsome new building of the New York Times, with its equipment, will double the present capacity and will be the largest and best equipped newspaper plant in the world. It will provide a total floor space of 22,639 square feet, with a frontage of 243 feet on West Forty-third street. Ten thousand square feet will be added to the pressroom. The presses, with new equipment, will include sixty-four units, to be run as twenty, sixty-four or sixteen octuples, with a capacity of 600,000 twenty-four page papers or 480,000 thirty-two page papers per hour.

PRESS CLUB OPENS FOURTH FLOOR FOR LUNCHEONETTE.

The New York Press Club is serving a luncheonette on the fourth floor of its clubhouse at 21 Spruce street, every night until midnight or later. The main dining room is open until 8 p.m. Members may bring women guests.

COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER IN SNYDER, OKLA., WITH W. M. ALLISON, EDITOR.

A "community newspaper", published by the Community Publishing Company is being operated under the name of the Snyder Signal-Star at Snyder, Okla. An organization of business men has formed the new company and has leased the paper from the Allison Publishing Company, of which W. M. Allison was the head.

Under the new administration, Mr. Allison remains as editor and manager, but the general direction of the paper is in the hands of a board of directors, selected by the company for that purpose. At this time the personnel of the board is as follows: J. R. Blanchard, George Cox, Hilburn Nunn, Joe Roark and Jeff Wilson.

SUN ALUMNI HOLD REUNION.

The Sun Alumni Association, which is composed of former members of the editorial staff of the New York Sun, held its eleventh annual dinner last night at the Manhattan Club. Many of these former writers, editors and reporters for Charles A. Dana, who owned the paper years ago. Others present were the editorial staffs of other newspapers, while some have entered other fields.

BOYS OF CITY NEWSPAPER MEN FOR DAY.

The Johnson City, Tenn., Chronicle last week published a fine boys' edition in honor of national boys' week. Nearly one hundred young journalists took part in getting out the issue. The offices were turned over to them for the time, the regular staff remaining in the background. News, editorial materials, and other feature stories were the result of the boys' efforts, with the exception, of course, of Associated Press dispatches and other newspaper advertisements. Contributions were sent in from boys all over the country.

For several days previous to the publication, the boys had covered the city carefully and it is very doubtful if their eager eyes overlooked the slightest clue. Everything would probably be classified as news. The youthful editors and managers for the day spent the entire time writing copy in the Chronicle office getting out the edition.

Each article had at the top the name of the lad who had written it. The first page of the edition included: Hoscoe Snipes, editor-in-chief; Carl Musgrove, associate editors; and Herbert Carroll, John Folliott, and Clifford Maxwell, advertising managers.
A Treasure in Facts and Ideas—

The ultimate significance of the day-to-day developments in journalism and advertising strikes home only when you see them spread upon the record.

Facts and ideas are the tools of both professions. Day by day and week by week they expand and increase, becoming in time trends, movements, and customs.

VITAL PROBLEMS FOR AD CLUBS' CONVENTION.

Advertisers Association, which will hold its first meeting as an affiliated unit of the Associated Advertising Clubs. This association represents an industrial group with a capitalization of something like seventeen billion dollars, its president being W. P. Strandberg of the Railway Light and Power Company of Portland, Ore. The utility men are going to Atlantic City with a well-defined program to "sell" to hundreds of member utility companies the business building value of a systematic and continuous advertising program.

PUBLIC UTILITY PROGRAM

Notable advertising campaigns are now being conducted by a few public utility companies, like the American Electric Railways Association and the telephone interests, but the thousands of utility organizations scattered over the country have been backward advertisers, and the chief purpose of the coming meeting will be to bring to their attention that it will pay to buy advertising space just as the merchant and banker does. Speakers for this section have been announced as follows:

Grover C. Maxwell, former secretary of the Ohio Public Service Commission, "Telling the public the story of the public utility;" James O'Shaughnessy, executive secretary American Association of Advertising Agencies, "What agency service means to the public utility company;" W. S. Vivian, manager public relations, Automatic Electric Company, Chicago, "Getting your customers interested in your business;" J. C. McQuiston, manager publicity department Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, "Why Advertise?" Francis H. Sisson, vice-president Guaranty Trust Company, New York, "Public utilities and public relations;" W. W. Hodge, manager advertising department, Bylleshay Engineering and Management Corporation, Chicago, "Customer ownership advertising;" C. K. Woodbridge, chairman of the national program committee announces that the convention will open Sunday afternoon with an inspirational meeting on the Steel Pier at which an audience of 10,000 is expected. Fred B. Smith of Johns-Manville, Inc., New York, will talk on "Advertising and the world outlook." Mr. Smith's address will be based on a world tour which he has just made in a survey of world conditions for his company. It is also planned to have a talk by one of the foreign visitors.

The theme for the Monday afternoon session will be "New tasks for advertising." Senator Walter E. Edge of New Jersey will tell "What the government of the United States has to advertise." Senator Smith, who is a resident of Atlantic City, is well qualified to talk on the subject, as in addition to being a United States senator he is president of the Dominion Advertising Agency. He will be followed by W. S. Crawford, vice-president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of England, who will discuss "How advertising can control international relations." Mr. Crawford, president of W. S. Crawford & Co., Ltd., one of the leading advertising agencies in Great Britain.

Robert Lyon Cox, vice-president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, New York, will talk on "Extending the length of life." Mr. Cox is a former member of the New York state legislature and former manager of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, succeeding Grover Cleveland to that position. He is one of the most effective of the gospel of health and a longer life to millions.

Frederick M. Feiker, assistant to Secretary Hoover in directing the world survey of raw material supplies will discuss "The elimination of waste in industry through advertising." Mr. Feiker, who is vice-president of the McGraw-Hill Company, New York, is said to be better informed on this subject than almost any other man in the country.

COMMERCIAL FIELDS TOPIC

Four well-known men will talk Monday afternoon on "What advertising has done and can do for your great commercial fields, public utility, automotive, financial and agricultural." Floyd W. Parsons, editor of Gas Age and writer for the Saturday Evening Post, World's Work and other national publications on public utility questions, will cover that field. Mr. Parsons is a member of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers Society of America and Academy of Political Science. He is the founder of Coal Age. He will cover the relationship of the coal industry to the economy and national prosperity, discussing particularly the part advertising can play (Continued on Thirteenth Page)

PROMINENT MEN SUBSTITUTE FOR NEWSIES AS LADS GO ON OUTING.

Forty-four prominent men of Trenton sold newspapers on street corners of the New Jersey capital recently in order that half a million copies of the Trentonian might enjoy a day of outing pleasures as members of their newspaper's circulation department. The event, sponsored by Elkins Olliphant Post, American Legion, George W. Sharp, president of the Post, had charge of posting the substitute "newsies" and with these arrangements the "newsthat" were "newspapering" for the day dispensed papers at the city ha'penny.

Among the other prominent men taking part in the "newsthat" were: John R. Anderson, publisher; Albert T. Dehave, managing editor; Dr. Clifford B. Haines, attorney; and W. W. Hoppes, secretary of the Trentonian, who served in France as an aviator.

When the Legion post broached the outing to the boys the project seemed hopeless. Some of the youngsters were too concerned to disappoint long-standing customers; others needed the papers' earnings to buy their own supplies or their families to take a day off to play. Business and professional men readily decided to match the boys' own spirit and to see that they had a real holiday without loss of precious time. The response was instant response when the call went out for volunteers. The local newspapers and advertising agencies contributed starting money to classified advertising agencies, and in many cases the proceeds of the "newsthat" went to local charities.

When the real newsthat returned to town early that evening they found that they had more money than they thought they had. They were able to meet their expenses and then have some money left over for the newspaper. The "newsthat" were so successful that they were able to meet their expenses and then have some money left over for the newspaper.

The suggestion has been made that the membership of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association from the states of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama be invited to attend the Kentuckiana Press Association annual convention, to be held in Louisville, Ky., for the special purpose of making arrangements for the 1923 convention. The idea is that the members could assemble in Lexington and put in day of sightseeing and shopping. They could schedule themselves to arrive in Lexington on one of the early morning trains, spend the entire day in Lexington, and the Blue Grass, leaving at 4 p.m. the same day. They could then return the same day and return to their respective homes.

RICHMOND ITEM VISUALIZED IN ANNIVERSARY NUMBER.

On the occasion of the tenth anniversary of its present management, the Richmond, Ind., Item issued a twenty-eight page paper in an effort to visualize for the advertiser the Item's circulation, territory and merchandising opportunities. Solid pages of small houses with the notation "we read the Item" filled the entire special number. It contained no advertising or reading matter. The Item has received many letters commenting on the novelty of the plan and the effectiveness as an "attention getter." The Item was established in 1878 and incorporated in 1901. April 18, 1913, was the Item's first anniversary, and the circulation had jumped to 4,818. On April 18, ten years later, the publication had just reached 12,000. The circulation was 15,000 at the end of the year, and only nine per cent was sold on the street or through newsstands. Store, brokers & editors represent the paper, of which C. S. Dodd is manager and Edward J. Finley is advertising manager.

BRONX TABLOID IS ISSUED FROM OWN PLANT.

THE BRONXONIAN, WEEKLY PICTORIAL PAPER, PRINTER—O'SULLIVAN HEADS PUBLICATION—CIRCULATION REACHES 100,000 MARK.

The Bronxonian, the new tabloid weekly newspaper devoted to the activities and interests of the Bronx, New York, is being issued from its thirty-fourth issue last Sunday on its own duplex press which was recently installed at its plant, 511 East 193 Street. Starting little more than half a year ago, this tabloid paper was printed in a commercial printing establishment. The first copies were distributed as samples from house to house over a large part of the Bronx.

Because the printer gave first consideration to other commercial work, the paper's first number consisted of only four pages. The founders of the Bronxonian realized that this condition could not continue and plans were made immediately to issue the paper from its own plant.

The new press, the duplex press, is capable of printing two full pages at a time. This speed of the old Campbell Press was 1,000 an hour. The speed of the press is 2,000 an hour.

"It has been the policy of the Commercial-Newspaper to establish a clientele of high-class character. It has always been the policy to advertise something more definite than mere circulation. If the circulation of the Commercial-Newspaper measures up to one-half of what it is, it would still be the outstanding advertising medium of Eastern United States, because of its remarkable editorial strength. A feature of the newspaper is the writer and distributor of interesting reading matter. Its success is gauged by the reader's interest in the paper. The Commercial-Newspaper measures up as an exceptional newspaper. News is a perishable commodity. A good newspaper publishes the news first, and it has been our aim invariably to follow this rule.

The newspaper has been taken in featuring select stories, and during the 25 years a number of the very select stories and editorials have contributed to the success of the Commercial-Newspaper. The circulation during the twenty-five years have been connected with the paper. There were 800 to 22,000, more than twenty times. It is my own wish that I may live to see the circulation reach 50,000. If the present times continue, I do not hesitate to assert that I think that end will be achieved within the next ten years."

ADVERTISING AS A MUNICIPAL BUILDER.

UNEQUALED OPPORTUNITIES NOW AWAITING CITIES TO MERCHANDISE THEMSELVES, NESBIT ASSERTS—POINTS TO FACTORS THAT HAVE MADE COMMUNITIES FAMOUS.

Never in all history has good advertising of a community had so swift and sure means to convincing an average man of its worth, D. W. Nesbit, vice-president of the William H. Rankin Company, advertising agency, declared in a recent address at Buffalo. He pointed to the Bible as the most successful advertising medium and said that the twenty-seventh chapter of Ezekiel is the most wonderful chapter of the Bible, because it is the combined and multiplied life and effort of all the people, while, on the other hand, the lead must be such dominating individuals as Alexander the Great, Julius Caesar, Washington, Columbus, Washington, and so on, to attain imperishable remembrance. Nesbit added that he would find it full of the stories of the rise and fall of all the nations. The Bible is the oldest, the greatest, and the most successful advertising medium of all time. It convinces, and it serves—and there you have all there should be or can be in an advertisement. It speaks its full purpose. It is a model to any advertising literary style, and for convincing appeal it has never been equaled. The twenty-seventh chapter of the book of Ezekiel is the most wonderful piece of municipal advertising ever written.

"A man must be honest in his work; an organization must be honest if it is to be a success. If a city is to be honest in its work, it must have an individuality to be known. "If Tyre had, as she thought, a natural monopoly, then the wonderful advertisement of it in the book of Ezekiel would today be lost somewhere in the world to Tyre instead of to sound a warning to the world. Merchandising a municipality grows out of the primary functions of a municipality: to rule, order, and control. If we are going to sell ready-made clothes we try to find the man who ought to wear those clothes, at the time when he ought to buy a new suit. If we are going to sell automobiles, we try to find the person who can afford to buy one and excite him in his desire to possess one. Here we are merchandising. But, before we sell anything, we should know something about the goods we sell.

SELLING A MUNICIPALITY.

"If we are going to sell a municipality to some one, we have to know about the community, we have to know about each individual, and we ought also to know why this individual is not attracted to this municipality. If he is a school teacher, our municipality should show him an opportunity to be of service to the community and to the rising generation. If he is a laboring man, our municipality should show him an opportunity to get a good job and to hold it and to make something of himself. He should be shown to him where and how to make something of himself. He should be able to show him where the knowledge of his profession would benefit him greatly in our field. If he is a hotel man we should be able to show him how if he has the right talent he can benefit our community and our community can benefit him. If he is a publisher, we should be able to show him that in our municipality lies the sort of atmosphere that is a short time for him to get out of the rut and go forth, get a car, and sin no more of the sin of a spectatorial being like King Tutankhamen's but I will have one advantage over him, I will have a decade of development which will come out much alive and ambitious.

PUBLISHER SELLS INTERESTS IN IOWA PAPER.

Arthur W. McBride, Iowa, editor and publisher of the Guthrie County Vidette, has purchased the Iowa Falls Sentinel from Roy A. Stacey, who has become owner of the Vidette, which property he expects to dispose of. Roy A. Stacey has long been interested in the newspaper business and will be the Sentinel's new owner. The Sentinel is well known in the town of Iowa Falls, a thriving little city which has a population of about 10,000. Stacey has been a prominent citizen of the town for many years and has been active in local affairs. He is a member of the Iowa Falls Chamber of Commerce and has served as president of the organization. He is also a member of the Iowa State Bar Association and has been active in legal work.

More than 150 editors, business managers and faculty advisors of Michigan high school publications are expected to attend a convention to be held at the University of Michigan on May 18 and 19. The convention is the second of its kind held in Michigan. Sigma Delta Chi, Michigan chapter, is in charge of arrangements for the affair.

VITAL PROBLEMS FOR AD CLUBS' CONVENTION.

CANADA AROUSED BY TALK OF $80 PAPER PRICE.

News print manufacturers of Dominion may keep to $75 price and seek to gain further favor in American market if L.P. makes increase.

Philip T. Dodge, president of the International Paper Company, has stirred general interest throughout the Canadian paper industry by his recent statement forecasting an increase to $80 per ton for news print. According to the Trade Journal, this has raised a suggestion that some interesting possibilities might be in store should the International Paper Company raise its price to $80 a ton and Canadian producers should at the same time decide to hold their rate at the $75 per ton level. It will be recalled, the trade journal explains, that when the price of news print was undergoing its readjustment of about a year ago, the Canadian manufacturers got their price down to $80 per ton, which was almost thought to be the last word as the readjustment should go, taking into consideration the cost of production, particularly in view of the fact that the price of wood which most every company in Canada, as well as the United States, was then working on.

Considerable surprise and annoyance was expressed in Canada when the International Paper Company carried its rate down to $75 per ton, which has since remained, the Canadian producers having decided to follow suit to protect their customers in the United States. Having readjusted their positions in the meantime, Canadian companies have since January 1, however, been working under the new rates agreed to by the mills with the unions, providing for wage increases of five cents an hour. Commodity prices have also been advancing and it is possible that the prices might have to be raised to $75 a ton profits on a reasonable basis, but, on the other hand, has received from Canadian standpoint that it would be better for the Canadian industry to handle themselves, establish Canada as the real arbiter of rates instead of following the International Paper Company as in the past. It is also argued that, with the narrowing margin of profit for American mills due to the present price, there would tend to narrow down the competition. The Canadian producers can meet in this market and increase the number of their American customers.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER CO. IN NEW HEADQUARTERS ON PERSHING SQUARE.

The International Paper Company has moved from its old offices at 30 Broad Street to the new Pershing Square Building, 100 East Forty-second street. Its move was prompted by the general exodus of business houses to the so-called "midtown" of New York.

Just before vacation the old Kếtner, the International Paper Company had its annual meeting. The officers are: President, P. T. Dodge; vice-presidents, Ogden Mills, Capt. W. E. Haskell, and C. W. Lyman; treasurer, Owen Shephard; secretary, F. G. Simons; auditor, D. O. Ellis.

G. F. Underwood, P. H. Jennings, E. H. Zerbst and W. A. Fensutoff were all re-elected as to directors for the coming year.

The same time a report was given out which said that the concern had earned more than $400,000 in dividends per year, a rate not in any other with the exception of one, in the history of the company.

Members of the Mason City Globe-Gazette office, just a little closer together recently when they gathered for a banquet and other entertainments at the Mayflower Hotel, room as the guests of the paper. Mayor Frank H. Burgess and Editor W. F. Muse acting as host and

The feature of the affair was the presentation of an insurance policy to each of the employees. Those who had been with the company for a period of one year were paid a $1,000 policy, while those with the paper for less than that time were given a $500 policy. The policies were used as payment in full.

Mr. Conroy acted as toastmaster of the evening with a steady stream of happy stories and reminiscences of events which had taken place during the last quarter century of the Globe-Gazette's existence.

NEW IS LIKELY TO ATTEND INLAND MEETING.

Postmaster General Harry S. New is likely to attend the May meeting of the Inland Daily Press Association to be held at the Morrison Hotel, Chicago, Tuesday and Wednesday. It is likely that the postmaster general will have something to say about second class postage in the future of a new wrapper for daily newspapers in the mail so speeding up then delivery. It is known that he contemplates some marked improvements in the United States. Having readjusted their position in the meantime, Canadian companies have been making good profits and...
FARM PAPERS ARE ALSO FIGHTING SPACE GRAFT.

A QUITE FORMIDABLE ARRAY OF PUBLISHERS ORGANIZATIONS IS NOW LINED UP TO ELIMINATE PRACTICE — APPLICANTS FOR PUBLICITY TO BE DISCOURAGED.

The Agricultural Publishers Association, like the A.N.P.A., the Inland Daily Press Association and various regional associations is waging war on space grafters, as is indicated by the following article issued recently to its membership. The article was headed, "Requests for charity in the way of free space." A few agencies and advertisers still cling to that old-fashioned theory that advertising "don't cost nothing," or that the publication is a charitable institution for the handling out of favors to the failing firm. It is a fallacy which can be a way devised to have all the usual camouflage eliminated from such requests, and applications confined to straight out supplications for donations of cash. Some of the former letters asking for assistance of this nature are really composed in a driven manner, and designed to wring tears from an Egyptian Mummy.

Let us suppose that some publisher has been doing business with a paper manufacturer for many moons. During some unlucky period he loses money on one of his editions, or gets his arms in a blue sky stock, or from playing the ponies, or rolling the bones. How would this do to make the manufacturer in blue sky, or his agent, write the harrowing details to the paper house, and request that ten thousand extra pounds of paper be shipped in the next car, gratis, to help him over the hill. They have to run the paper mill anyway, it will be no trouble to load the extra jag, and there will no doubt be room to squeeze it into the car. Just what would your paper manufacturer think about you and your proposition? He will think, right off the bat, that the supplicant is a "boob." And at the very first "think" you will agree that the ringing bell, cleans all the bases, and registers a home run.

The analogy is not a far cry of the publishers' space to the value of $500, or any amount in question, which represents exactly that much money, just the same as paper or any other commodity valued at a certain amount. The agency or advertiser is really asking for a cash donation when free space is agreed to. It should appreciate that fact. Several incidents of this nature have been brought to the attention of the Agricultural Publishers' Association late, and it has been suggested in the future we publish notice of advertiser and agency making such proposals.

In a recent case the agency wanted assistance for the advertiser on account of an admitted error in judgment on the part of his client. When the request was refused, along comes the filling letter which disclosed that the publisher's competitor has granted the space, which was not true. Sometimes there is an apparent attempt to "put it over" by playing one advertiser against the other.

Every publisher should make up his mind to the fact that the publisher's business is a clean-cut business proposition, just the same as any other manufacturing enterprise, and that all competing for charity should be stated as such and considered as the mind of the reader, an occasional case where charity in the way of free space is merited, as the evil should be suppressed, for good and all. The time will come when concerns asking for such accommodations in the way of "alms" will be looked upon with suspicion.

FAMILY FAITH IN ITS DAILY NEWSPAPER STRESSED BY CHICAGO DAILY NEWS.

Much has been written of the great faith which the regular coming in of a newspaper inspires. It is a faith that, being built up day by day, develops subconsciousness in the reader, a confidence in the newspaper and an affection that are none the less real although probably not realized.

The Chicago Daily News has expressed this newspaper relationship rather graphically in some of its current publicity by saying: "Dear old friend of the introducer to Chicago you may be sure that what you have to say will be listened to with respect, though this is really a merchandising message from the Daily News, it seems to convey in fewer words than usual just what the relationship between the community and a real newspaper standby is.

All newspaper advertising could be sold and deal more consistent if this feature in the newspapers influence over their field was emphasized. Publishers that have been in existence over a long period of years as the Chicago Daily News has a claim to the title "a friend of the family" and when the friend introduced the product in a favorable reception is assured.

ROTOGRAVURE HAS OVERLAPPED MAGAZINES.

REMARKABLE DEVELOPMENT AS NEWSPAPER FEATURE IN TEN YEARS — HIGHLY TECHNICAL REQUIREMENTS OF PRODUCTION RESTRICT PRINTING TO EXPERTS.

One of the most steady developments in the daily picture during the past ten years has been that of the rotogravure process and its application by American newspapers, which has been carrying away the best exponents of this form of printing in the world, from its inception the rotogravure process was recognized by the dominating newspaper publishers of the United States as a remarkable adjunct of the newspaper and ideally suited to increase the newspaper's capacity for the distribution of intelligence.

So long has seen this growth and so logical was it to expect that the newspaper field would make the most of it, that one of its con-comitants seems to have been generally realized. While the magazine field has been turning its efforts to the most desperate efforts to swing back some of that percentage of national and international advertising to the columns of its publications, the newspaper has gained added strength from the fact that its rotogravure feature serves the reader as a magazine most satisfactorily.

The ethical, strong, legitimate agencies or advertisers, who furnish the very backbone of daily paper lineage, do not ask for any such charitable accommodations. When a regular manufacturer or reader of a regular daily paper is in the market for advertising that news paper, it is the responsibility of the advertising man to entice him to make his deposit in the same way that he would make a deposit in a regular bank.

Mid-Week Pictorial, Annexal, and War Volumes of the Times. More than 2,500,000 pieces of rotogravure work are turned out in its plant every week, an average of over 60,000 pieces per day. When it is considered that the rotogravure process is much slower than that of ordinary printing, it is to be expected that the Times' new auxiliary building at Twelfth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street is completely equipped, with more than 1,400,000 eight-page sections a week. Newspaper manufacturers that have long aimed at the exclusive production of rotogravure work has led this firm first to establish plants in New York, Baltimore, Cleveland, St. Louis and Kansas City.

Even so urbane and sophisticated a body of readers as that served by the New York Times, for instance, has not yet ceased to marvel at the step forward in the Times rotogravure plant process. The Times, in its rotogravure plant, has turned out 1,400,000 eight-page sections a week. The Times rotogravure plant provides the Sunday book review, magazine.

"The Times has always been that itamplified and interpreted the news for the particular class of people to whom it directed its appeal. Perhaps the greatest reason for the remarkable hold which the rotogravure process upon the American public is that it goes a long way toward amping the news and provides visual evidence by which the reader can form his own interpretation. It is an American characteristic to demand the opportunity of seeing for oneself, therefore the competitive craft must see that the rotogravure process will be pushed to the front of the reader's list.

The general trend of rotogravure has been made possible by the grouping together in one organization of highly-trained experts, who control several newspapers. The process requires equipment and training that is expensive, so that there can be no such thing as rotogravure printing on a small scale. Alto-Gravure, Inc., under the leadership of the holder of the patent, operates five completely equipped plants, capable of turning out 1,400,000 eight-page sections a week. Newspaper manufacturers that have operated in this field has led to the conclusion that one firm to establish plans in New York, Baltimore, Cleveland, St. Louis and Kansas City.

ALL OPERATED FROM THE SAME KEYBOARD

Three Magazines and a 34-Channel Auxiliary

THE SINGLE KEYBOARD MODEL 14

One Keyboard

All three main magazines and the auxiliary are controlled by regular power-driven keyboard. The operator does not have to move his hands from this single keyboard to get any character that runs in the machine. A touch on a control-knob instantly switches the keyboard action from 34 channels of the main magazine to the auxiliary. At the same time the other 56 keys remain in operative connection with main magazines.

Power Driven

Composition from the auxiliary is as rapid as from the main magazines since it is operated from the same power-driven keyboard and from the same keys and the same position to which every operator is accustomed.

Wide Range

The 34 channels in the auxiliary are arranged to accommodate large matrices, giving the Model 14 a broad field of usefulness. The range of the auxiliary extends from the smaller faces to condensed 60 point. It includes all 24 point caps and the caps of most 30 point faces. The auxiliary magazine may be split or full length, as desired.

All Magazines Changeable Without Disturbing Auxiliary

The supporting framework of the auxiliary magazine is a fixed part of the machine. There is no swinging or other motion. A touch on a control-knob switches the keyboard action to the auxiliary.

It is always out of the way. Operative position-shifts of main magazines are made instantly at will without touching the auxiliary. The same is true of magazine changes. Magazines are taken off and put on in 15 seconds.

IT'S WORTH WHILE TO READ A NEWSPAPER RIGHT.

No man is thoroughly educated who does not regularly and systematically read the daily newspapers, nor is he against experience, and the victim resolves to "keep his eyes open" the next time.

The spindle-eyed man to peel the eye is when the daily newspaper is opened. Only intelligent measuring of day-to-day events will enable any business man to keep fully informed. He can not hope to hear of every development that may affect his business, but he can hope to read enough to sharpen his judgments and give it a fair chance against the field.

In addition to reading very closely his local newspaper and the news from other centers of commerce and industry, it is possible to read the trade press and the periodicals that are devoted to the particular line of business in which he is engaged.

THE "WHY OF ADVERTISING" FROM A NEW SLANT.

Advertising, especially that which Uncle Sam does on behalf of his navy, has a brand new critic in the person of Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, wife of the senator from Wisconsin. Those pretties pictures of white-eladsailor boys lolling around tropical verdure are gross deceptions, according to Mrs. La Follette, who speaks from the heart in defending the youth of the land from the disillusions of a "good time" world and finding out that they are not worth the buck that is paid for a cruise.

One can almost hear the plaintive wails of the gullible youths that Mrs. La Follette describes. "We asked for a poloneck and they gave us a houndstooth," goes the refrain, but as far as the Senator is concerned, no one will probably get out of sluicing a poloneck.

The cynical-minded New York World really says about all that need be said in reply to Mrs. La Follette. It speaks not for the man but for advertising generally. It regards the criticism indulgently, but sets things straight as follows:

"Mrs. La Follette forgets that the object of other advertisements, is to attract and not to repel. She would not expect a restaurantkeeper to advertise the fact that though his orchestra was excellent they were "by appointment," or his waiters "decent looking." She would not expect the landlord of a summer-resort hotel to advertise an "incredible" price for a room, and nothing about the view.

"She would not expect anybody to pretend that an article of food, which everybody knows is good, is "insuperably" bad. She would not expect the teacher to tell his wife only that which was most discreditable to himself, omitting his triumphs. Advertising is only human, and the navy is human also."

COMING NEARER TO REAL NATIONAL JOURNALISM.

One of the many far-reaching consequences of the first non-stop cross-country flight is the concept that conceivably the "national newspaper" which has so long been regarded as the property of the states, while journals in England, France, Germany, Italy and other old countries are regarded as national journals, the American journalist has courageously developed a newspaper concept that could mean a new development in the world of journalism.

Transportation is really the backbone of civilization, and every improvement in transportation and its twin, communication, has an impact upon journalism. It is expected that among the first great developments of 100-mile an hour speed as a constant factor will be a speed in development of journalism.

It is hardly likely, though, that any man or group will start a publication with the avowed intention of making it a really national newspaper. And then "let the national journalism of the old world look to its laurels."

NOTE AND COMMENT.

That the spruce bud worm is doing more damage to the pulpwood forests of North America than all the cutting by the pulpwood company is pointed out by C. W. Boyce of the United States Forest Service, who has estimated that the loss of the spruce bud worm, the larva of which previously could not have been imagined. Nothing follows transportation and communication quite as the daily newspaper, and so it is here that we are to be interested in that among the first great developments of 100-mile an hour speed as a constant factor will be a speed in development of journalism.

FLORIDA NAMES COUNTY FOR PROMINENT NEW YORK
ADVERTISING MAN.

In recognition of the services of Barron G. Collier, New York advertising man, toward development of the Florida west coast, the legislature of that state has named after him a new county, comprising thirty-seven townships, in the southern part of Lee County.

Mr. Collier is head of Barron G. Collier, Inc., advertising agency of New York, president of the Street Railways Advertising Company, and head of the V-C Advertising Agency, New York, of which Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., is vice-president.

Mr. Collier is said to have told the legislature that he plans to expend $10,000,000 for improvements on the west coast in the next few years, partly for extensive railway construction linking the Everglades with the main lines along the coast. He has already taken steps toward improving rail and water communications, notably by dredging the Allen River from Everglade, the seat of the new county, to deep water in the Gulf of Mexico. More than 1,000,000 acres of land belong to Mr. Collier. Mr. Collier is in Florida at the present time.

STAFF CHANGES.

Miss Winifred Arnold has become social editor of the Helene Mont-Record-Herald, succeeding Mrs. Betty Dishon, who has gone to San Francisco.

George Abern, formerly of the Business Post, Cleveland, has been as-tached with the Stanford News, sentinal. Mr. Abern has been connected with the Post for a number of years. Lamar Middletown, until recently with the Stanford News, University, also has been added to news staff of the Sentinel.

BARRON G. COLLIER.

Miss Ruth Cartzdarfner, a graduate of the department of journalism at the college of commerce and journalism at Ohio State University, Columbus, has joined the staff of the Sandusky, Ohio, Register.

Ralph L. Lindsay, recently connected with The Fourth Estate, has become circulation manager of the Stamford, Ct., Sentinel.

Robert E. Murphy, for the last five years in the advertising department of the Birmingham News, most of the time as manager of the copy and promotion department, has taken a similar position with the New Orleans Item.

George Ahem, formerly of the Bridgeport, Ct., Telegram, has been made city editor of the Stamford, Ct., Sentinel. Mr. Ahem has been with the paper number of years. Lamar Middletown, until recently with the New York Daily News, has also been added to news staff of the Sentinel.

Charles H. Huls, editor-elect of the Ohio State Makio; Gansey R. Johnston, business manager-elect; and Gus K. Bowman, business manager-elect, of the Sun Dial, have been elected to membership in Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalism fraternity.

MEMORIAL TO NORTHCLIFFE.

A somewhat unique memorial to the late Lord Northcliffe has just been unveiled at the Memorial Home of the National Society of Operative Printers in the uplands of Leicestershire, Leicestershire. EQUITABLE RATE ACT PASSED IN NEW YORK.

BILL EQUALIZES PAYMENTS FOR PUBLIC NOTICES AND LEGAL ADS — SIMPLIFIES METHOD OF MEASUREMENT — BIG VICTORY FOR KEEFE AND PRESS BODIES.

Passage by the New York State legislature of the newspaper rate bill shortly before it adjourned means that hereafter public notices and legal "ads" printed in newspapers of New York state will be measured by simply counting the number of lines in each particular advertisement as it appears in its publication.

This important change marks the culmination of two years of effort on the part of Frederick H. Keefe of the Newburgh Daily News and the joint legislative committees of the American and New York Press Associations, comprising more than fifty of the daily newspaper publishers in the larger cities of the state; the New York Associated Dailies, an organization in the smaller cities; and the New York Press Association, in which are not only daily newspapers but also three hundred and thirty 300 weekly newspapers of the Empire State.

Governor Smith's signature which is assured will make the "newspaper rate" bill a law whose passage both the senate and assembly. This change will be the greatest sensible stroke yet taken by a group of newspaper advertising that has taken place in years. The bill not only provides this method of measurement but also requires that all state, legal and public notices published for the public interest be measured according to this method.

Here-tofore much confusion has existed because of doubt as to which of three methods of measurement applied to a "news flash" is to be used. Such is the case with newspapers containing no first or second class city, will receive compensation for the publication of notices proportionate to their circulation.

The idea of this bill is said to have originated in February, 1921, by Mr. Keefe, who patterned it after laws which have been in effect and working satisfactorily in New Jersey. These laws, however, only provided for measurement of news and did not give the newspaper fair compensation on the basis of its circulation.

Through co-operation of the state comptroller's office in Albany, it is the initial measure as proposed was greatly simplified and reduced to the easily understandable details. Thus, for each column of a line of a column width of not less than 12 pica ems, it is provided that in computing such charge per line, the line shall average at least six words. Display copy must be also taken care of by adequate measurement, the same as national advertisers have always been.

The final paragraph of the law provides for its immediate effect, so that all that is now necessary is the governor's signature, and no difficulty is anticipated in this respect.

JERSEY WEEKLIES MERGE, NOW COME OUT TWICE A WEEK.

For the first time in thirty-four years the Summit, N. J., Herald and the Summit Record are being issued under one management, and also for the first time in the forty-seven years of Summit's newspaper history there is a semi-weekly paper in that town. The name of the Summit Record, Inc., which was published Tuesday, is the new title of the Record was merged with that paper. The Record was purchased by Albert S. Morse, publisher of the Record since 1875, has purchased the summit Record from the Summit Record, Inc. The Record was published on May 4 and carried the announcement of the merger.

The Record was established thirty-seven years ago by D. M. Smythe, who later started the Herald. Within a year or two the paper passed into the hands of the late Thomas F. Lane, who continued the publication with his brother, Alfred J. Lane, for twenty-five years. The Herald is now being published by the New York Press Association, and a member of the Jersey Journal house of assembly. Fred W. Cliff is editor.

With the May 1 issue, the Herald stumped as a semi-weekly, and the Record as a weekly, newspaper. The publication days will be Tuesdays and Fridays.

The Herald has taken over all unexpired subscriptions and advertising, and only the Record will fulfill them. Formal notice of subscription rate adjustments will be sent to subscribers.

The Herald will eliminate its composing plant and turn over its business to the Record Press, under the management of Albert S. Morse, who has been publisher of the Record for two and one-half years for some time past. Mr. Morse has been devoting himself more to that end of the business.

NATION'S BUSINESS MEN DISCUSS RAIL CRISIS.

Immigration aroused the interest of one of the largest groups sessions. Speakers declared that it was one of the most pressing and important problems with which the country had to deal at the present moment. Representative Johnson, author of the quota law, announced that there was not likely to be any loosening up of the immigration law at the next session, that, in fact, there might be a tightening up. In this he said, that President Harding was quite in sympathy.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HOOVER'S ADDRESS.

Secretary Hoover, in his address at the night session, came out strongly for individual initiative in business, coupled with national planning of industry through government aid and not government interference.

High lights of Mr. Hoover's address as he defined Americanism, to business men and others who are habitually "bulls on America," were:

"The United States today could supply each person with the same amount of commodities that he consumed ten years ago and lay aside two million people from work."

"We have passed from the unemployment of 5,000,000 in 1920 and 1921 to a surplus of 500,000 jobs."

"The state of the country is economically stronger than before the war and this strength has radiated stability to the entire world."

"Caution need not be timidity nor exclusive of confidence and courage. There has been no apparent large accumulations of goods. Wholesale prices today are about thirty per cent below the crest of 1920. The government index shows an increase of about six per cent in the last nine months, contrasted to a rise of twenty per cent in the nine months following the collapse of the 1920 boom."

"We have been steadily increasing our production for the last eighteen months.

"Normal standards of living and volume of business are not normal now. Normalcy is a vastly higher and more comfortable standard than 1913."

"Population has increased 14,000,000 in the last decade."

"We are producing a larger amount of commodities per capita than ever before in our history."

"Exhaustive study from many angles of production over acreage periods ten years apart, before and since the productivity should have increased about fifteen per cent due to the increase in population, yet the actual increase has been from twenty-five to thirty per cent indicating an increase in efficiency."

"There has been no increase in the number of our farmers during the last decade, yet the agricultural community not only feeds an increase of fourteen million of people but has increased its average exports from about seven and one-half million tons annually. This would show that the individual farmer has increased his efficiency in production by from fifteen to twenty per cent in this period. Increase in production and distribution per person engaged in many other industries can be similarly added."

"We have been able to add to our standards of living by the general distribution of many articles which were either altogether luxuries ten years ago or which were luxuries war, would indicate that while our to a larger proportion of the population.

PUBLISHERS VOTE TO ADMIT WEEKLY PAPERS TO BODY ON INVITATION — NEXT CONVENTION AT NOGALES — ATTENDANCE BEST SINCE ORGANIZATION.

Election of officers at the annual meeting of the Arizona Daily Newspaper Association at Miami, Ariz., brought no opposition to the men already holding office. J. K. Westover, publisher of the Yuma Sun, being unanimously re-elected as president of the association. Colonel Fred S. Breen, publisher of the Coconino Sun took the re-elected vice presidency, while O. B. Jaynes, business manager of the Tucson Citizen, was re-elected secretary.

It was voted by the association to admit weekly newspapers to membership on invitation. In the past the association has been limited to daily newspapers only.

Attendance at the meeting was the best ever recorded since its organization, and interest in the various phases of newspaper problems brought up for discussion, was exceptional.

Mr. Jaynes, as chairman of the morning session, in addition to discussing many problems of interest to Arizona, told of the new weekly papers in the state, and of the measuring of circulation by the use of index cards.

Mr. Jaynes also gave the visiting newsmen a personal letter of introduction from the secretary to the management and the editor of the Arizona Daily Star.

OKLAHOMA NEWSPAPER MAN STARTED AS OFFICE BOY AND PRINTER.

W. F. Allen, editor and publisher of the Vinita Daily Journal and the Vinita Leader, after serving as office boy and printer, purchased the Vinita Echo in 1919, when he acquired control of the successor to one of the earliest papers in the state. The Echo was established in 1882. From the newspaper holdings, Mr. Allen evolved the Vinita Daily Journal and the Vinita Leader.

RUDYARD KIPLING, REPORTER.

A. C. Jackson, advertising representative for the O. W. R. & N. Co., can claim that once at least, he sat in these seats. He bought the name to the Daily Journal in 1927, when he became owner of the Vinita Silver Belt and Bulletin, a small paper in the San Francisco newspaper district. He made a living in San Francisco newspaperdom, although the whole wide world was glad to give him enthusiastic recognition later.

Aside from the Oriental note, which is a special feature this year, an exceptionally fine program of speakers has been prepared. Because of the high character of the programs which have prevailed without exception in the past, journalism week has gained a national reputation as a journalistic chautauqua and clearing house of ideas pertaining to the profession.

On the first day the Wisconsin Writers' Club, under the chairmanship of Dr. Robert H. Ross, will present a special feature, while the next day, the University of Missouri, under the chairmanship of Dr. Robert L. Ramsay of the University of Missouri, will have the distinction of hosting the program.

CHINESE BANDITS COULDN'T HOLD LEHRBAS.

Howard League, at first reported among those taken, turned up safe and sound. Mr. Scrippis took a train following the wrecked express, thus arriving on the scene after the excitemeny had abated, but in time to procure material for several vivid stories which were distributed in America by the United Press. Negley D. Cochran, former city editor of the Toledo News-Bee, also reported a captive, was safe and sound all the time aboard the yacht of E. W. Scripps. The Scripiss party is now safe at Peking.

Powell and Lehrbas have both taken vividly dramatic parts in the stirring episode. Lehrbas was favored by an early turn of fortune, escaping into the tall grain at the side of the railroad track during a moment of inattention by his guards. The Chinese stopped to rearrange the burden of their carrying, and Lehrbas was off like a streak with the biggest story of his newspaper career gained at first hand.

Now famed as one of the stars of the I.N.S. staff, Lehrbas has bounded from obscurity almost in a leap. The bandits furnished the opportunity and his own courage cashed it in. In his escape, he took his life in his hands. Until a short time ago he was a space correspondent at Manila, but the enmity in the Philippines became too much for him and he slipped into China with a sort of roving commission from the I.N.S. He was at one time city editor of the Great American, and while he had been connected with newspapers in the West.

Powell is still bottled up with the captive party in the bleak Shantung desert, so far as he was able to get out a message on Wednesday night, giving the fact that the Chinese are in a danger of being murdered unless the Chinese troops hold in the bandits. Hemming in the bandits were held in a large box train according to the Lehrbas. There is no doubt but that the bandits have made desperate efforts of writing out all their captives if the Chinese military declines to parley. Lack of food and clothing, as well as exposure and brutality handling has greatly undermined the spirit and resistance of the unfortunate victims. Powell said in a message brought out by one captive that he had been ordered to run away. Fourteen foreigners, of whom seven believed to be Americans, are still prisoners.

John B. Powell, who is also editor and publisher of the Shanghai Weekly Journal, began his newspaper as a reporter for the Quincy, III., paper about some twenty years ago. From there he went to the Missouri Univeristy, where he took up journalism as a business walkng for several years. A few years ago he went to China, where he established the Shanghai Review.

Lehrbas' story of the train wreck and abduction is vivid. The train which was proceeding northward was stopped at 2 a.m. Sunday morning. Lehrbas said he heard rifle firing and the crashing of glass as the windows of the train were broken. Realizing danger at hand, he rolled under the sleeping car berth.

Six outlaws climbed through the broken window and inquirsing as to the presence of the train. They asked to see the agent, to whom they thrust a gun under Lehrbas' berth, hitting him on the side. "I came out from under the berth and he struck me with the gun in my face," Lehrbas said. "The blow was so severe that I was staggered but brushed off the wound." The outlaw marched me down the line of the side of the track where the train had been stopped.

"There I could see women in night gowns and their bare feet and men walking ahead through the fields and towards the mountains. The brigands were carrying loot they had taken from the train on their shoulders.

"My guard kept by my side but when he and others stopped to rearrange the burden of the loot they were carrying on their shoulders I made a break for liberty.

"The tall grain in the field was my salvation. I fell upon my stomach and for three hours crawled upon my hands and knees through the waving grain. I then, by detour, made my way back to the looted train."

EDITOR HELD IN CONTEMPT FOR OPINION ON STRIKE—FINED $300.

G. V. Sanders, editor of the Memphis, Tenn., Press, has been fined $300 and costs by Federal Judge J. Will Ross for contempt of court. The contempt charges were based on an editorial written by Mr. Sanders last September during the nationwide shopemen's strike, entitled "The King Fad."

Mr. Sanders was cited for contempt September 18 and was tried before Judge Ross October 16. Since then Judge Ross has had the case under advisement.

After the decree, Judge M. M. Neil, one of Sander's attorneys, asked for and was granted ten days' time in which to file a motion for a new trial. Preliminary to an appeal, Judge Ross embodied the offending editorial in his decision, and commented upon its various phases.

He referred to the fact that the defendant had denied any intention of offending the court. He recited at last September the circumstances and the conditions prevailing at the time the editorial was written. He described the conditions as caused by the shopmen's strike, and led up to the printing of an editorial by Jake Cohen in the Labor Review that caused his arrest on a charge of contempt.

BRITISHERS TO VISIT DETROIT.

A group of Britain's largest advertising men are to go to Detroit in June following their attendance at the Atlantic City convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Other points which the British advertisers will visit will be Toronto, Niagara Falls and possibly Chicago. The men in the party are representatives of the largest concerns in the public's interest advertising field of Great Britain. They will arrive in New York on the Berengaria of the Cunard line about June 1.

"If we are to bring business and commercial vision and intelligence. We must get into our business the best minds in every community, men of commercial vision, or constructive ability, and we cannot do that unless we make our business more attractive, more secure. How can we do that?" Well, there are probably many ways, but I have three points in mind that I would like to briefly refer to.

One is a constructive and less destructive competition among agents. The second is cooperation from the publisher in seeing to it that advertising everywhere is organized service, protecting our agency franchises, and thirdly, cooperation from the advertisers in helping to reduce the agency overhead by eliminating as much as possible unnecessary expense and effort.

THE NEW SPIRIT OF CO-OPERATION.

"As far as agency competition is concerned, we have made great strides in a very few years. Further, the four A's have been dealing with this problem very successfully by working together along common lines, we have learned to know one another better and to respect one another and to trust one another. This mutual confidence has bred a new competitive spirit. Today, we exchange ideas and we exchange experiences and explore new and exchange opinions about advertising.

"We can see with one another about the advertising problems and consult about their cases. This has been a great boon, not merely to the agency business, but to advertising as a whole. It is our opinion that there is a sense of satisfaction in advertising, and we are getting a body of fact and opinion, principle and practice, under the advertising that is for the purpose of eliminating the hazard in advertising to a substantial degree.

"I feel that the advertising business today is setting a good example to other types of advertising in a competitive way. I think a new competitive foundation is looming up on the advertisers' horizon, and I think that the publishers today realize that the welfare of advertising and the success of the advertising is far greater than merely getting the business temporarily.

"With the agency, it is not false salesmanship to sell space to an advertiser; the agency does not act as the advertiser's needs, his resources or his market, when it is much better to let the newspaper sell the paper, to let the newspaper do the advertising, without the support of the agency commissions. That is going to do a much better job of advertising. It is going to eliminate the unfaithful and unfairness, and raise the general resultfulness of advertising to a much higher level than it enjoys today."

The advertisers are in for more than they have in the past and are now seeing that white space will change to make our ads, not merely in the hands of a few large advertisers who may look out for themselves, but also the hands of the great bulk of advertisers who cannot. We can do this through better co-operation with our agencies, and by building up a better professional franchise for agents, not merely a privilege of publishing down commissions from this publication and that, but a franchise based on well-known standards and definite requirements as to skill, credit, etc., and organization. In order to get that franchise, we must be willing to eliminate the unfaithful and unfairness.

It is our opinion that there is a sense of satisfaction in advertising, and we are getting a body of fact and opinion, principle and practice, under the advertising that is for the purpose of eliminating the hazard in advertising to a substantial degree.

"I feel that the advertising business today is setting a good example to other types of advertising in a competitive way. I think a new competitive foundation is looming up on the advertisers' horizon, and I think that the publishers today realize that the welfare of advertising and the success of the advertising is far greater than merely getting the business temporarily.

"With the agency, it is not false salesmanship to sell space to an advertiser; the agency does not act as the advertiser's needs, his resources or his market, when it is much better to let the newspaper sell the paper, to let the newspaper do the advertising, without the support of the agency commissions. That is going to do a much better job of advertising. It is going to eliminate the unfaithful and unfairness, and raise the general resultfulness of advertising to a much higher level than it enjoys today."

Advertising Results in Chicago

That advertising in THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS brings results to advertisers is proved by the year-in, year-out leadership of The Daily News, among Chicago daily newspapers, in display advertising. Experienced advertisers do not continue to advertise increasingly in mediums that do not bring adequate returns.

The following statement of display advertising for the months of January, February, March and April, 1923, is striking evidence of The Daily News' leadership among the daily newspapers of Chicago in the following important classifications:

What character, uprightness and square-dealing mean to advertising was explained to a large gathering of New England daily newspaper publishers and advertising agency representatives in the Copley-Plaza Hotel, Boston, by John Benson, president of the American Association of Advertising Agencies Tuesday, at a banquet in honor of Mr. Benson, tendered the publishers by the New England Council of the Four A's.

Following Mr. Benson's talk, John H. Fahey, publisher of the Worcester Evening Post and the Manchester, N. H., Daily Mirror, spoke, pointing out the seriousness of the responsibility of the United States in the affairs of the world.

The letter announcing the change occurred in New York just a fortnight after, almost at a third of a century, notable service as the national political correspondent of the Enquirer.

Henry B. Humphrey, president of the New Council of the Four A's urged that a group of New England publishers and advertising men attend the coming advertising congress in London. Besides the benefit that would result it would be an act of reciprocal courtesy for the group Great Britain sent to London some years ago when the American advertising men had their big conference there. He read a letter from Herbert Houston of "Our World," urging the same thing.

EDITORIAL—$1,000 GOES TO N. Y. TIMES REPORTER.

Awards of the Joseph Pulitzer prizes for notable achievements in American journalism and letters for 1922 were announced by Columbia University, New York.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal, established under Mr. Pulitzer's will, have been announced by Columbia University, New York.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal received the $500 gold medal for meritorious public service. The $500 prize for the best editorial article was awarded to William Allen White of the Emporia, Kan., Gazette. Alva Johnston of the New York Times received the $1,000 prize for the best example of a reporter's work during the year. The prize for the best American novel of the year went to "One of Ours" by Willa Cather; for the best play, to "Icebound," by Owen Davis; for the best book on history, to "The Supreme Court in United States History," by Charles Warren; for the best book of American biography, to "The Life and Letters of Walter H. Page," by Burton H. Hendrick; and for the best volume of verse, to Edwin Fan Vincent Millay.

No awards were made for the best history of the services rendered to the public by the American press during the preceding year or for the best cartoon.

No competitor has ever appeared for the prize offered for the best history of the American press.

For the "most disinterested and meritorious public service rendered by any American newspaper" the gold medal went to the Memphis Commercial Appeal for its "exemplary attitude in the publication of cartoons and the handling of news in reference to the operations of the Ku Klux Klan." This is the second time the gold medal has been given.

NOTABLE TRiumPH IN COVERING FLOOD STORY.

PRESS ASSOCIATIONS USED DEVIOUS MEANS TO GET NEWS FROM HOT SPRINGS TO THE OUTSIDE WORLD—
AIRPLANES PLAYED LARGE PART IN ACHIEVEMENTS.

Flood and fire had scarcely started to devastate Hot Springs, Ark., this week, virtually cutting off the city from the world, when the great press associations of America had devised means to inform the nation of the conditions in the southwestern resort. Every ingenuity was utilized to bring through the flood waters surrounding the city in order to "get the story." Telegraph, telephone, airplanes and pure human hardihood were employed in covering this assignment.

As soon as the first report of the catastrophe had been flashed five press associations started for Hot Springs in airplanes. One of the first to arrive was a machine carrying E. R. Bizby, editor of the Muskogee, Okla., and representative of the Associated Press. Mr. Bizby, who telegraphed a message from Fort Smith, Ark., which was the nearest government officials at Washington to observe him — the storm-torn city.

F. H. Still, representative of the Fort Smith Southwestern American, a member of both the Associated Press and Press, hurried to the scene in an airplane. Adverse atmospheric conditions made a landing impossible and Mr. Still was forced to circle over the city on the landing day. He was able to get an accurate eye-witness story of the flood and the fire. Continuing in the plane to Little Rock, Mr. Still filed highly vivid stories for the association.

The Little Rock correspondent of the United Press hastened to Hot Springs by devious methods, employing trains, automobiles and finally, owing to impassable roads, walking the remaining distance to the devastated city. Gathering his story, he used the telephone to get out of Hot Springs with the details of the destruction and devastation.

Close co-operation by staff members of the International News Service made it possible for this organization to cover the event thoroughly. Close co-ordination by the bureau at Memphis, Little Rock and St. Louis with the correspondent at Hot Springs enabled the I.N.S. to establish telegraphic communication with the stricken community, thus providing the organization with a constant stream of messages on conditions in Hot Springs.

BRITISH JOURNALISTS SEEK HIGHER STANDARDS OF NEWS WRITING.

The British Institute of Journalists passed the following resolution:

While prepared to offer determined resistance at certain stages of the press, the council of the institute places on record their strong disapproval of the increasing tendency in newspaper reports nowadays to give undue prominence to nauseous and intimate details of divorce petitions, and of murders and other criminal cases, and refer the question to the executive committee with a view to such further action as may be considered advisable.

President Harding is likely to address the 5,000 delegates to the Associated Advertising Clubs meeting at Atlantic City during the sessions which will begin June 3 and end June 7. While he has not formally accepted the invitation extended to him by Senator Walter E. Edge on behalf of the A.A.C.W. to attend the convention, he is understood to be willing to address the delegates, provided no imperative duties arise to detain him at Washington.

Two general themes will be developed at the general sessions, according to the Dictaphone Company, which is in charge. Speakers of outstanding prominence will discuss the subjects of "New tasks for advertising" and "What advertising has done and can do for four great commercial fields—agriculture, automotive, financial and public utilities."

The largest attendance in the history of the A. A. W. is assured. A British delegation of 100 advertising men, newspaper men and representatives of leading business houses will arrive in New York May 31. There will also be representations from Australia, Japan, China, India, South America and Mexico. Canadian delegates will be represented by large delegations.

Considerable competition is expected among representatives of the great cities for the 1924 convention. The large delegation from the Thirty Club of London is coming to win the convention to the On-to-London movement. Those in favor of holding next year's convention abroad are enthusiastically confident of the outcome with the greatest success. Houston, Texas, however, is still a strong bidder and it is not likely that a keen fight will be held at Atlantic City for the 1924 convention.

Two sessions will be held in the West Solarium of the Biltmore Hotel. This will be converted to convention use, the ground floor of the present premises of the commercial into retail stores, with four stories of varying sizes upon the upper floors.

The plans of Mr. Finneegan contemplate reconstruction work that should go far to create a new retail center on Washington street.

In relocating the Commercial, extensive improvements to plant and equipment are also planned, the most important of which involves the installation of a new high speed newspaper press costing approximately $100,000. The press is to be delivered later and erection of same was started a few days ago.

The program for the meetings of the A. A. A. follows:

Thursday, June 5.
- American Agency of Today, John Benson, president of the A. A. A. Association's Service to Advertising, John C. C. Houghy.
- Agency Finance, Harry Dwight Smith.
- Wednesday morning, June 6.
- Agency's International Scope, Frank A. Arnold.
- Agency's Service to Advertising, Clarence D. Newell.
- The British Advertising Agency, Our Guests.

Buffalo Daily to Enlarge Plant.

The massive five-story fireproof business block partially occupied by the Commercial has been purchased from the Warren estate by Charles L. Finneegan, owner and publisher of the Commercial.

The property has a frontage of five feet on Washington street and approximately 132 feet on North Division street. The Washington street frontage is divided into two separate buildings, one of which has been occupied by the Commercial and the other by sales branches of the American Steel & Wire Company.

It is the plan of Mr. Finneegan to move the plant and offices of the Commercial into the southern half of the building which is now being vacated by the American Steel & Wire Company, in order to convert the ground floor of the present premises of the Commercial into retail stores, with five stories of varying sizes upon the upper floors.

TALE OF RUBBER STAMP SETS PACE FOR INLAND TOLD BY TUFFORD — BUTLER URGES NEWSPAPERS TO CO-OPERATE IN DEVELOPING STANDARD METHOD OF PERCENTAGE ACCOUNTING NEXT MEETING IN OCTOBER.

The Inland Press Association at its Spring meeting this week in Chicago enthusiastically endorsed the campaign against free publicity, and while it amended its prior method of operation, the association was a whole in pushing further the issues already formed. The sessions, presided over by President Frank H. Burgess of the La Crosse, Wis., Tribune, and held at the Morrison Hotel, closed Wednesday. Fifty members were in attendance.

J. K. Grooms of Aurora, Ill., national advertising manager of newspapers, led the two days' talks and discussions directly on "National Advertisers Working Local Advertisers for Publicity." William V. Tufford, secretary of the association, of Clinton, la., told the tale of the rubber stamp. It was a rubber stamp that individual members not in return free publicity to its sources. But, experience has taught the association that the returned matter should be directed to the national advertiser concerned, and not to either the press agent or the national agent. All replies hereafter be returned by the association secretary and not by individual newspapers.

The attempt to reopen the Calumet baking powder case was frustrated by the officers on the theory that the baking powder company had had a full opportunity to reply. Schemes, promotional ideas, fake enterprises, etc., had a long way during the discussion. The Chicago office is that hereafter all scheme advertising, promotional ideas and questionable "copy builders" will have their whole idea exploited by the association for the benefit of all members, and, further, the plot, or what is back of each scheme, will also be published. For instance, the question of having a sporting goods article manufactured by someone else but an inside concern in this country.

The association after a long discussion, F. A. Anderson had a limit on co-operation, merchandising, etc., and that the line was well below the sea. The Chicago office had emerged, a standard will be set, and it undoubtedly will be similar to that adopted by the National Association of Newspaper Executives.

The Inland, after an investigation, decided that news print wrappers with new print labels were best for mailing in opposition to Kraft and various other kinds. But the members agreed that uniformity must prevail to obtain better mail service. D. J. Foreman of Minneapolis, Minn., called attention on "Colored Wrappers for Daily Newspapers, to Expedite Transmission Through the Mails.""

Postmaster General New, who was expected to be present to talk on better mailing facilities, was unable to be present. Secretary Tufford reported the tentative plan of expediting the service in the post office department's idea of putting all papers in third class mail, and other newspapers in second class, especially wrapped.

Mr. chairman of the news print committee, reported that

This week, the home office of George Batten Company ceases to be at 381 Fourth Avenue, New York. We move to 383 Madison Avenue, at the corner of 46th Street.

A LITTLE over thirteen years ago, the offices of George Batten Company were in the Metropolitan Annex at 24th Street and Fourth Avenue.

In the early spring of 1910 we moved to 381 Fourth Avenue, in which building we had leased an entire floor.

When we look back thirteen years, as some of us can easily do, it is remarkable how distinctly we recall certain details of that move. But at the time, these were considered minor details, not worth remembering. It is much harder to recall vividly the emotional side of that experience.

One quickly forgets the fear of things that did not happen. For instance, we remember that when our people and their furniture were set down in their new quarters, it was necessary to set the desks wide apart in order to avoid great expanses of unused space.

Only vaguely can memory bring back the trepidation we felt at taking so much space, though at that time it was the chief thing in our minds.

The fact of our moving to so much larger quarters re-shaped the character and destiny of many of the people who were with us at that time. It was the physical manifestation of a business determined to grow, rather than the actual expansion of a business that had grown.

A whole floor we took—nearly 10,000 square feet. The total number of our organization was then 92—men, women, boys and girls.

Well, we grew. The spread-apart desks were pushed closer together. The vacant spaces filled up.

Soon we were compelled to lease half of the floor above. A few years later we again overflowed, and shortly occupied the entire floor below. This week we are moving to an entirely new building.

The George Batten Company that will have its home offices in the new building at 383 Madison Avenue numbers 246 people. We will occupy something more than 30,000 square feet—a floor and a half with private stairway connecting.

The differences between the new lease we are taking and the one we took thirteen years ago are many, but the greatest difference lies in this: Then we were doubtful. Now we are sure. Then we wondered. Now we know.

The new address is 383 Madison Avenue. The telephone number is Vanderbilt 6300.

COMPARES NEWSPAPER WITH THE HUMAN PHYSIQUE— IN ORDER TO SECURE GOOD CIRCULATION PAPER MUST HAVE GOOD NEWS AND FEATURES, HE SAYS.

Nathaniel Curwin Wright, editorial manager of the Toledo, Ohio, Blade, and editor of the Newark, N. J., Star-Eagle, died in Toledo Sunday, at the age of fifty-three years.

Mr. Wright had been ill for about two years. He had apparently recovered, but last fall, while in New York, he was again attacked by heart disease. He passed sometime in Arizona last winter in an effort to regain his health.

When he was nineteen years old, Mr. Wright joined the staff of the Chicago Daily News and was successively reporter and assistant city editor, before his twenty-second birthday.

After three years with the News he went to the Associated Press filling in the position of night manager, day manager and cimet field correspondent. He took a very active part in the struggles then going on between the Associated Press and the United Press.

Upon the outbreak of war with Spain, Mr. Wright was sent to Cuba. He fitted out from different dispatch boats which were required for the delivery of news messages at cable stations in Hayti and Jamaica.

He saw fighting upon land and it fell to him to write the account of the destruction of Cervera's fleet while his boat was driving full speed to get him to the scene.

In 1900, Mr. Wright went to the Indianapolis Sentinel as managing editor. Later he became associate managing editor of the Cleveland Leader. Within a year he was made editor-in-chief. He was elected president of the company in 1907.

Together with Harry S. Talmadge, Mr. Wright began the operation of the Toledo Blade, seeing it go from 2,000 to 50,000 in the first year, and from there to 75,000 in the first ten years.

The Star-Eagle was purchased by Mr. Wright, Mr. Talmadge, Paul Block and Clarence Vernam in 1916, and the Detroit Journal by the same men in 1918.

The next step, good newspaper circulation, results from the use of proper food and drink. A healthy circulation of the blade depends on what is put into it, and likewise does the successful circulation of a newspaper.

There is no doubt that the success of an individual depends upon health which requires a good circulation that must be maintained by proper food and drink. The good health of the individual depends on proper food and drink.

The health of the body, in the same way, a newspaper depends upon circulation which requires a good health of the body, in the same way, a newspaper depends upon food and drink. The good health of the body, in the same way, a newspaper depends upon food and drink.

NORTHERN INTERSCHOLASTIC PRESS MEETING AT GRAND FORKS.

The program for the Northern Interscholastic Press convention held at the University of North Dakota at Grand Forks, on April 26, 27 and 28, includes talks on problems of high school publications by members of the university faculty and roundtable discussions.

Earl W. Morgan, editor of the Bismarck Tribune, spoke at the University Press Club luncheon held in the Commons Building yesterday, to which all delegates to the convention were invited.

The Northern Interscholastic Press conference was recently made an official part of the state high school conference held at the university each year. The association organized last year under the presidency of the students and faculty of the journalism department of the university, and is now represented by nearly a hundred high school publications in North and South Dakota, Minnesota and Montana. The purpose of the organization is "to promote friendly relations between schools to maintain the highest standards of scholastic journalism, to aid those schools in having better organizations and to give opportunities to the future editors and business managers, and to provide desirable publications for the school representatives."

Organizers Wanted for "Uncle Sam's Voters"

MEN and women of character—young or old—can add materially to their incomes by devoting part or all of their time toward assisting in the organization of "Uncle Sam's Voters.

This is a dignified, interesting, profitable, business and professional men—college students—ministers— salesmen and school teachers will delight in the opportunities and the profits this new work affords.

What Is The National Federation of Uncle Sam's Voters

It is a national, non-profit federation with local assemblies—organized regardless of political affiliations—to awaken and mobilize the public, in a lively and intelligent interest in American government through group meetings, talks, and a national magazine. PUBLIC AFFAIRS are the name of the game. UNCLE SAM'S VOTERS are to be organized in every city and community on the basis of the inspired words of Samuel Adams in 1772:

"Let us Converse together, and open our minds freely to each other. Let every town Assemble, Let Association and Combinations be everywhere set up to Consult and Recover our just Rights."

Ira Nelson Morris has resigned as Minister to Sweden to be president of UNCLE SAM'S VOTERS. Ex-Congressman James W. Good and Mary Lee Adams are vice-presidents; G. B. Wayland is secretary.

Uncle Sam's Voters will award five prizes ranging from $100 to $10 for the five best letters on the following subject: "Why I am joining UNCLE SAM'S VOTERS." Send us the reasons that appeal most strongly to you for joining UNCLE SAM'S VOTERS. Anyone is eligible to enter. Contest ends June 30, 1923. GET IN AT THE START: The first applicants can choose their own territory. Sign your name.

JOURNALISM WEEK OPENS MONDAY IN COLUMBIA.

MISSOURI SCHOOL PROGRAM IS UNUSUALLY ATTRACTIVE — PROMINENT PUBLISHERS, WRITERS AND PUBLIC MEN WILL SPEAK — ORIENTAL DINNER TO BE FEATURE.

A program of unusual interest is assured for the fourteenth annual journalism week of the school of journalism of the University of Missouri to begin Monday and continuing on Saturday. A host of men and women prominent in newspapers and letters are on the program to speak at the various sessions which have been arranged by Mason Williams, editor of the school of journalism.

The program will open Monday with the meeting of the Missouri Writers' Guild, under the direction of Louis Dodge of St. Louis, immediate past president. Addresses upon advertising and special features of newspaper work are invited. Journalism for women will feature Tuesday's session. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday will be devoted to the meeting of the Missouri Press Association. Dwight H. Brown of Poplar Bluff, president of the association, will preside.

On Wednesday afternoon a lawyer, a preacher, a farmer and a merchant will each tell what he wants in his newspaper. This program will be featured by the annual journalism week luncheon at the Columbia Commercial Club. H. A. Stacey, editor of the association, will close with the "made-in-Manchuria" banquet arranged through the co-operation of the South Manchuria Railway. The food, decorations and souvenirs for this banquet will be largely from the country represented.

Among those who are to speak are:

Harry Hansen, literary editor, Chicago Daily News; Miss Beatris Winn, newspaper editor, Minneapolis; Miss Mary P. Cushing, advertising woman, St. Louis.

AMERICAN NEWSPAPER MAN PUBLISHES NEWSPAPER AT TIENSTIN, CHINA.

Just five years ago, during the world war, foreign residents and English-speaking Chinese in the Far East desired a newspaper that would present news of all interests as they were written after the style of American newspapers, which were naturally arriving in China by mail rather late for those who were interested in the stirring international events in Europe.

The North China Star, an American daily published at Tientsin, China by an American corporation, was organized by Charles James Fox, a former Washington newspaper man.

The shares of the North China Star Company were taken up rapidly by about one hundred and sixty persons, including fourteen different nationalities. It chose an international board of directors, who were pledged to run the paper in an absolutely independent manner according to the principles of American journalism.

It is hand set by Chinese compositors who do not understand a word of English, but who follow copy even to the extent of setting a row of "x's" when a contributor attempts to "xz" out a word. It is the only paper in all China, in any language, that is published every day in the year.

The other daily papers in China, Chinese, American, British, French or Japanese publish only six times a week and observe numerous holidays as well. For this reason the North China Star claims to be the only real daily in all China.

The Star is an American paper, independent of any one except its own shareholders. The majority of shares are owned by Americans. The vice-president is an American, the secretary is Chinese, the treasurer is an American, one member of the board of directors is of French nationality, the news editor of the paper and the business manager is British, the business manager is Russian.

The board of directors of the North China Star consists of Charles J. Fox, president and editor; Dr. Harry V. Fuller, vice-president; E. F. Smith, secretary; Richard T. Evans, treasurer; E. K. Lowry, J.

Price and Quality

The price of Flexideal Dry Mats does not gauge their real value. While the cost is lower than that of other dry mats, our Quality is far superior.

Flexideal Dry Mats embody the experience of fifty years of paperboard making and are being improved all the time so that today there are none others so good to be had regardless of price.

If you want to save money on the cost of your dry mats, buy Flexideal. Let us tell you how others are saving invaluable time, newsprint paper and are bettering working conditions in the foundry through their use.

We think it's worth a trial, don't you?

of the Buffalo Courier under William J. Conners. His first duties were those of railroad editor at a salary of six dollars a week. After a rapid rise to the sporting editor’s desk, Mr. Kelly joined the St. Louis Republican and covered the old “Four Courts” and politics for nearly a year, when he again took over the sporting desk. He was the official scorer of the National Baseball League in St. Louis under the regime of Harry Gilmington. From St. Louis, Mr. Kelly went to the Washington Post, under John B. McLean, occupying successfully the desks of sporting editor, city editor and Sunday editor.

The lure of New York drew him next to the Evening World. In his eight years on the World, Mr. Kelly covered many of the country’s celebrated stories and trials.

In 1914, Mr. Kelly became deputy commissioner general of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco. At the close of the exposition he took up the advertising directorship of the Society for Electrical Development, whose membership includes the great electrical interests of America. Here he originated and carried out two national trade building campaigns which developed new advertising space in the newspapers of the country worth more than $10,000,000. At the outbreak of the war, Mr. Kelly was chosen to direct the Bureau of Pictures of the American Red Cross, then being organized by Henry P. Davidson. Mr. Kelly supervised the assignments of Red Cross camera men and produced and distributed the famous Red Cross pictures made during the war. He was awarded a captain’s commission and was sent to Europe when the war ended. Returning to New York, Mr. Kelly went to the American News, equipped a newspaper plant in the heart of the theater district and launched the West Side Sentinel, which continued as a weekly, until its absorption last four years. Many editions of the Sentinel were entirely produced by type and camera operators. He was a noted type operator and make-up man and this experience contributed to the success of the George Washington Press, which he founded.

Mr. Kelly married Senorita Mercedes de Ruiz of Washington in 1910, and lives with his wife and children in upper Manhattan.

NEW ENGLAND AD DIRECTOR HEADS PORTLAND CLUB

Harold F. O’Keefe, advertising director of the Portland, Me., Press Herald, the Waterville Sentinel and the Maine Times, has been chosen to direct the New England Advertising Club. Mr. O’Keefe was formerly in the New York office of the Philadelphia Public Ledger. He was chairman of the back to the beginning of the Portland committee, which took the New England Advertising Club convention at Providence by storm last year and carried off its award.

Mr. O’Keefe will remain with the Ledger as its advertising director, and Mr. McBride, the general appearance of the paper will be retained, according to Mr. McBride, and the general appearance of the paper will be retained, at least for the present. The new editor gives the press work some improvements when he has become more familiar with conditions in Iowa Falls.

PUBLISHER TO TAKE CHARGE OF IOWA PAPER

Arthur W. McBride, editor and publisher of the Guthrie County Vidette, who recently purchased the Iowa Falls Sentinel, will take possession of the paper this month. Mr. McBride received his first newspaper experience on the Sioux City Journal and has been connected with the Grinnell Register. McBride founded and is president of the McBride-Armstrong newspaper business at Paulina for seven years, and then took up the work at Panora. The daily circulation of the Sentinel will be retained, according to Mr. McBride, and the general appearance of the paper will be retained, at least for the present. agriculture, automotive, financial and public utilities. Senator Edge, of the Dorland Advertising Agency, will speak on "What the government of the United States has to advertise, W. S. Crawford, vice-president of the Associated Advertising Clubs for Great Britain and Europe, "How advertising can promote better international relations," Robert Lynn Cox, vice-president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., New York, "Extending the length of life," Mr. Cox is in charge of the successful publicity campaign of the Metropolitan, which is preaching the gospel of health and a longer life to millions. Frederick M. Feiker, of the McGraw-Hill Co., New York, will talk on the elimination of waste in industry through advertising. Mr. Feiker, by request of Senator Herbert Hoover, is making a world survey of raw materials supplies for the Department of Commerce.

TALKS ON VARIOUS FIELDS. Monday afternoon's topics will be: "Agriculture," Carl Williams, of Oklahoma, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs. "Automotive," George M. Graham, vice-president and director of sales and advertising, Chandler Motor Car Co., Cleveland; "Public Utilities," Floyd W. Parsons, editor of "Gas Age." Tuesday and Wednesday will be occupied with conventions of the affiliated organizations. Thirty groups representing thousands of business men and advertising executives will meet for the study of their own particular problems. Luncheons of the various groups will be held, with special programs. The following groups will meet:

Conferences will be held by club secretaries, junior advertising clubs, classified advertising managers, student organizations, women's conference, teachers of advertising and premium advertising.

INTERDEPARTMENTAL SESSION. The meetings of the public utility Advertising Association will be occupied with the problem of advertising the utilities. According to President W. P. Strandberg of this association, the utilities have a most promising field of development. He points out that forums will be discussed by "selling" to the hundreds of public utility companies in this country the business building and goodwill value of systematic advertising.

Wednesday afternoon will be given over to an interdepartmental session when representatives from half a dozen departments will cover the meeting.

The keynote of Thursday morning will be important phases of the work of the Associated Advertising Clubs. Roger W. Babson, well-known statistician, Wellesley Hills, Mass., will talk on "What the Associated Advertising Clubs can do for business." Paul T. Cherington, chairman of the national educational committee, also will talk on that subject. George W. Hopkins, chairman of the speakers' bureau, will explain that branch and Gurney R. Lowe, the development of the Neoshotion plan. The election will take place Thursday afternoon.

COMMUNITY ADVERTISING FEATURE. A special feature of the convention this year will be the outstanding importance of the program of community advertising. Year by year this phase of the work has grown, until advertising of communities in newspapers and other media is the recognized method of insuring community growth. It will be shown that certain western communities, for example, have drawn tourist, dollars through the simple means of presenting their advantages as vacation spots. The aim of the community advertising department at the coming convention will be to render this work more efficient and to show cities how to make surveys that will render their advertising 100 per cent resultful.

An interesting feature of the convention will be the many talks by representatives of the clubs in the churches of the city on Saturday morning and evening. A Rotary Club luncheon will be given on Tuesday, a Lions' luncheon, Wednesday, a Kiwanis banquet, Thursday, and an exhibition by the U.S. Coast Guards and drill by the Atlantic City beach guards, Wednesday afternoon. The Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia will entertain the whole convention Wednesday evening.

N.A.N.E. TO TALK ON ADVERTISING PROBLEMS.

NEWSPAPER EXECUTIVES TO DISCUSS MERCHANDISING SERVICE, FOREIGN AND LOCAL RATES, CLASSIFIED AND DISPLAY ADS — WILL ATTEND JOINT SESSIONS.

Merchandising service, local and foreign advertising rates, classified advertising and local display advertising will be the principal themes at the sessions of the National Association of Newspaper Executives to be held Tuesday and Wednesday, June 3 and 6, in connection with the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Atlantic City, June 3-7.

All sessions will be held in the Egyptian hall of the Breakers Hotel, except the meeting on Wednesday morning which will be at the Veranda. Breakers Hotel. The N.A.N.E. will hold a joint session with the AAAA Tuesday afternoon. Joe W. Simpson will preside for the N.A.N.E. and Jesse E. Matteson will be in the chair for the AAAA. Another joint session will be held Wednesday morning when the N.A.N.E. will meet with Assistant Advertising Club.

A. L. SHUMAN, rector, the Buffalo Express, will lead the discussion Wednesday afternoon on local display advertising.

Topics mentioned for discussion in the program have been submitted by members in advance. Other topics may be submitted at sessions if time permits. A. L. Shuman, Fort Worth Star-Telegram and president of the N.A.N.E., announces that morning sessions will open promptly at nine o'clock and afternoon sessions at two o'clock. Night sessions will be held if necessary, Mr. Shuman adds, and members will be expected to attend.

The program follows:

LOS ANGELES ADVERTISING CLUB GETS BEAR FOR GIFT. The Advertising Club of Los Angeles has presented a perpetual trophy in the form of a solid gold grizzly bear on a green Italian marble base, by Herti Faliot, nationally known slogan writer who was made a life member of the club in 1914.

The trophy will take the place of the one lost by the New Orleans delegation at the San Francisco convention and will be a lasting advertisement for Los Angeles. During the Atlantic City convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World the trophy will be taken East and formally presented to the association.

George Botsford is organizing and will manage a merchandising and service department for the Portland, Ore., Telegram.

EDITORIAL PRIZE FOR PUBLISHER.

The $500 prize for the "best editorial article," the test of excellence being clarity of style, moral purpose, sound reasoning and power of expression, was awarded to William Allen White for an editorial entitled "To an Anxious Friend," on the Emporia Gazette, July 27, 1922.

Mr. White, famous as a novelist, short-story writer and political leader as well as for his editorial work, wrote the editorial which Mr. the controversy between him and his old friend and fellow editor, Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas, and the industrial law court of the state. It was written in reply to Governor Allen's threat of fine in jail for his opposition to the law and created widespread favorable comment at the time.

The $1,000 prize for the "best reporting work of the year," being strict accuracy, terseness and the accomplishment of some public good commanding public attention and respect," went to Alva Johnston for his reports in the New York Times of the proceedings of the convention of the American Association for the, held in Cambridge, Mass., December, 1922.

Mr. Johnston was with the New York Times several years, but is now on the staff of the New York Herald. His series of stories on the convention dealt principally with the new concepts of matter brought before the assembled scientists. They were distinguished by their combination of scientific accuracy, literary scription and clarity to the lay mind.

BEST AMERICAN NOVEL.

For the novel, or a prolonged story published during the year which "shall best present the wholesome atmosphere of American life, and shall show the standard of American manners and manhood," $1,000 was awarded to Wilkie F. Cathers for her novel, "One of Ours." For the best American biography teaching patriotism and public service to the people, illustrated by an eminent example, excluding, as too obvious, the names of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, the $1,000 prize was awarded to Burton J. H. Hendrick for "The Life and Letters of Walter H. Page." This is the second Pulitzer prize in which Mr. Hendrick has participated. Two years ago "The Victory at Sea," on which he collaborated with Rear Admiral Wil- liam S. Sims, was awarded the $2,000

WHITE'S PLEA FOR FREE SPEECH WINS PRIZE.

EDITORIAL ADJUDGED BEST BY PULITZER BOARD WARNED OF SUPPRESSION — EMPORIA EDITOR IS GRATIFIED AT HONOR—PRAISES AWARD TO MEMPHIS PAPER.

The editorial for which William Allen White, editor of the Emporia Gazette was awarded the Pulitzer prize of $2,000 is reproduced in the Gazette, July 27, 1922, at the time of the railroad strike and Mr. White's famous con- dence with Governor Henry J. Allen.

It was written after Mr. White had been placed in jail for displaying a banner in the window of his newspaper office a yellow placard expressing sympathy for the striking shopmen. The editorial was a reply to a friend who had written Mr. White asking him why the disturbance had been created and why he was maintaining his position for free speech.

The prize-winning editorial follows:

"TO AN ANXIOUS FRIEND.

"You tell me that law is above freedom of utterance, and I reply that you can have no wise laws nor free enforcement of wise laws unless there is expression of the wishes of the people—and, alas, their folly with it. But if there is freedom, folly will be as its own evil and wisdom will survive. This is the history of the world. It is the proof of man's kinship with God.

"You say that freedom of utterance is in time of stress, and I reply with the sad truth that only in time of stress is freedom of utterance justice helps to keep the peace. And the reverse is true also; only when free utterance is suppressed is it needed, and when it is needed it is the sign of vitality in the world. Freedom is good. But if you are interested in peace through force and without free expression that is for peace that is the peace of France and the peace of Paris, and your interest in justice is slight. And peace is not the world, your world is the European, and your interest in peace and freedom is how you may sugar coat it with expediency.

"This state today is in more danger from suppression than from violence, because in the end suppression leads to violence; indeed, is the child of suppression. Whoever pleads for the law that only by free expression and communication can the nation be saved, that by free expression peace kills something fine in the heart of man which God put there when He gave man manhood. When that is killed, brute meets brute on each side of the line.

"So, dear friend, put fear out of your heart. This nation will sur- vive; some state will pass; this world will go on; orderly business of life will go forward and orderly business of life will go forward and orderly business of life will go forward and orderly business of life will go forward. The love of men will go forward as we make them believe with their hearts hold—by voice, by posted card, by letter or by press. Reason and free men. Only free men and free expression and free expression and free expression and free expression have made the wrecks in the world.

NEWSPAPER MAN GIVES SOME OF HIS EXPERIENCES DURING TWENTY-FIVE YEARS.

Under the title "Confessions of a Newspaper Man," Frederic William Wile, now a writer of syndicate free lance, told the story of his experiences during twenty-five years of newspaper work. Mr. Wile dwelt especially on his experiences in Germany, where he was stationed as a correspondent for many years before the World War. Preparations for Germany for war had been open and undisguised, he said. He also told of his narrow escape from detention in that country, when the break came between Germany and England, because of the resentment of the Berlin government for his long continued efforts in his dispatches to arouse international understanding of the menace.

VETERAN SHIP NEWSSCRIBE MAKING FIRST TRIP TO EUROPE.

Harold L. Smith, dean of ship news scribes, who for thirty years has been reporting incoming and outgoing liners in New York, sailed Tuesday on the Berengaria with Mrs. Smith for his first trip abroad.

In his service along the waterfront he has met every notable who has come to these shores, including King Henry of Prussia, King Albert of the Belgians with his Queen, not to mention countless ambassadors, premiers, earls and counts, heads of state missions, kings of finance, actors and actresses. He has invitations to visit several European notables he interviewed here.

On his trips on the liners between quarantine and their piers "the Judge" estimates he has traveled more than 60,000 miles.

When the Berengaria passed the Battery, fire boats, harbor tugs and revenue cutters let go their sirens in salute to "the Judge," as he is known to his friends, many of whom are at the pier to see him depart.

He will be away five weeks and possibly will return in the Majestic.

A few years ago the condensation of a complete composing room into the magazines and keys of a single Linotype would have been thought impossible.

Today, however, the operator of a Text-and-Display Linotype gets any face he wants within an almost unlimited range, from small text to full 36 point display, merely by touching a key.

The space of many typecases may be saved by the use of Text-and-Display Linotypes, as well as thousands of footsteps and hours of composition and distribution time. Nearly two hundred newspapers, after trying display composition on the Linotype, have learned that hand setting of display is as unnecessary and archaic as hand setting of straight matter.
A TRIBUTE TO FREEDOM OF THE PRESS.

It is interesting to note that the Pulitzer Prize Awards, especially that for the strongest editorial writing during the year, were not so great a factor in the whole structure of the American newspaper as we have come to know and love it as a free and independent press. In another column, The Fourth Estate reproduces the editorial by Mr. White, too well known to be repeated here, which is headed "An Angry Friend." It is well worth reading again. It was widely copied in newspapers because of the fundamentals which are the basis of American freedom. It is a question now whether the people of the United States, in their desire for a more perfect system of democracy, are also desirous of a more perfect system of journalism. It is a question whether the newspapers of the United States are as free and independent as they should be. DARING ADVERTISING SCHEME IN THE EIGHTIES.

One of the most daring schemes in real estate advertising, and perhaps the first in the United States, was the series of excursions on the Mississippi that was not covered with ice. The excursions were chosen for the excursions and a spot not far from St. Paul as the picnic ground. On the appointed day the guests arrived, all protected with heavy woolen sweaters but few coats being with the linen dusters, and each armed with a fan in his gloveless hands.

JOURNALISM STUDENTS EDIT GENEVA DAILY TIMES.

Twenty-three students in the department of journalism of Syracuse University were in complete charge of the Wednesday, May 9, editions of the Geneva, N. Y., Daily Times. The embryo journalists under the supervision of Professor J. O. Simms, edited the paper in spite of the fact that not one of them was acquainted with genes.

The experiment was successfully tried out last year with the Norwich, N. Y., Sun, but the recent task was more of a problem. While Norwich has but a population of 8,000, Geneva has some 15,000. Residents of Geneva and regular staff members of the Geneva Times, were unanimous in the praise of the work turned out.

The advance guard of students arrived in Geneva on Wednesday, May 5, from 55 miles from Syracuse, the night before the publishing of the paper, to make final preparations and carry out some necessary details, while the rest of the staff arrived early Wednesday morning by automobile and train.

The following composed the staff:

Where Is This Publisher?

I am looking for the publisher of a newspaper in a medium-sized city who will value the efforts of a real go getter. I have been the advertising manager of one of Chicago's largest papers, also Detroit, Lansing, and Richmond. My early commercial life took me all over the country giving me a real opportunity to study men and conditions. I am an aggressive salesman who makes friends, knows how to create copy to sell the plan campaigns while acting as an inspiration and pace maker to the advertising and sales staff encouraging them to their best at all times. My sales talk is original, logical and effective. I enjoy making the pleasure and satisfaction it affords me. If there is a publisher in the country who can use a man of my experience and performance I would much appreciate the pleasure of meeting him. I have worked for a manufacturer who accepted $1,000 per month. I am ready to sign with any publisher who will accept my credentials, which is unquestionable. INTERNATIONAL PAPER OFFERS INSURANCE TO EMPLOYEES.

Announcement has been made by the International Paper Company to its employees that each worker who has been in the company's service for a period of six months may be provided with life insurance, protection against sickness or accident and a disability, or against death or dismemberment. This plan covers all employees of the International Paper Company and all its subsidiary companies. The cost to each company is small as the company bears a large share of the amount of the premiums. Employees will be entitled to have their insurance increased each year for five years at the expense of the company.

STOPS CLOCK TO SAVE TIME.

Preferring to supply no time to all rather than to display what he calls "misleading or confusing time," George E. Savage, president and treasurer of the Manning and Bowyer Company, New York, recently ordered that the clock on the city hall over his office be stopped and remain that way until next fall.

An advocate of daylight time, Mr. Savage took this action at the result of the anti-daylight saving law passed by both branches of the legislature and the demaion to expose a clock in a public place or on the outside of a building set at any other than standard time.

PLANS INCLUDE AN EVENING BUSINESS SESSION, AND TRIP TO PIKE'S PEAK.

Preparations for the mid-summer meeting of the Colorado Editorial Association, to be held at Colorado Springs Friday and Saturday, July 20 and 21, are now well under way, but have not yet progressed to the point of a definite program, although from the association standpoint it has been decided that the mid-summer meeting in the nature of extensive business discussions will be listed.

The mid-summer meeting is going to be made more of a social meeting than a strictly business gathering, as is the habit. The banquet evening will be devoted to newspaperfolk only, followed by a short business session.

In addition to the numerous places of interest that may be visited, entertainment will be provided for both Friday and Saturday evenings in the form of banquets, dances, special music, singing, etc.

The “something unique” idea in advertising campaigns is generally accepted as effective. Universal appeal, either positive or negative, has succeeded the older idea. These points were stressed by Professor C. Echterbecker of Hamline University before the convention closing meeting of the镇 Criers’ Club of St. Paul.

Professor Echterbecker discussed the “Psychology of Advertising.” "Vividness, happily coupled with so-called ‘emotional congruity’ is perhaps the greatest forces in effective advertising," he said. "It has been shown conclusively that men naturally are attracted more by advertised commodities than by non-advertised ones."

"Men know and recognize the advertising of certain makes of automobiles, tobaccos, sports of various kinds, while women have a definite foible for perfumes, styles, clothes, etc., and children are immediately attracted by the advertisement with the picture of a child in it."

"A slogan or trade mark, strictly adhered to, and carried before the public over a long period of time, is invariably an attention getter that sticks."

In point of this assertion the speaker cited a long list of nationally known slogans. These in turn were identified with the products of which the slogan was an advertising key.

TRIALS AND TRIBULATIONS OF TWO EDITORS DISCLOSED

One of the most diverting of the incidents connected with the early days of Solomon Bulkley Griffin's newspaper career, as related in "People and Politics;" published by a Massachusetts daily, was the familiar tale of the mending of the editor's clothing.

"The reporter, he said, must have a news sense, an ability to write in a free and natural manner; must not be afraid of hard work or be too thin-skinned to take criticism, and must disabuse himself of the idea that newspaper work is all romance and tinsel."

"If you will simply observe, and observe well, listen hard, write simply, don't speak out of your turn, study hard and don't think you know it all, there is no question that you can and will succeed in the fourth estate," he told the students.

Newspaper Embraces All Types of Writing and Advertising, Declares Professor Harrington — News Nowadays All-Inclusive

It is to the sports page of a newspaper that the average reader turns when he wants to indulge himself in information uncensored by murder, suicide and divorce, and written in a style fresh with the invigorating English of the playfields of America. This was one of the high lights of a talk by Professor H. F. Harrington, director of the Medill School of Journalism, at Northwestern University. He spoke on "Little Masterpieces of Reporting," and in the course of his remarks read some newspaper stories entitled to be, he said, "Little Sisters of Literature."

The newspaper, Professor Harrington declared, embarks on all types of writing, the essay, verse, descriptive and narrative writing, and advertising news nowadays is prescriptive.

Professor Harrington criticized the standardization of the average newspaper story of today, declaring that through the use of the telephone and the necessity for hurry it has become less literary than it used to be.

"This, however, is not true of the sport page, where the story must be first interesting," he said. "Accuracy is just as essential here as on the news pages, but the sport writer is allowed more latitude; he is not bound by diplomacy and tact in his personal slants. Indeed, the fan insists upon this type of writing.

The speaker declared the same thing held true of advertising. Newsperson Professor Harrington regarded as an excellent trail for the budding novelist. Unremittably musical, well written, full of spontaneity and the dramatic subjects of everyday life—these were some of the things the newspaperman unwittingly cultivates, he added. "Above all," he warned, "don't try to produce literary millinery."

Northwestern Publishers Discuss Free Publicity.

Newspaper men of northeastern Washington discussed free publicity and agency discounts at the spring district convention held recently at the state normal school building at Cheney. A general address of welcome was given by President N. D. Showalter, who spoke on the great influence in the state that their papers wielded.

The response was given by Chairman R. H. Legend, editor of the Sprague Advocate. Chapin D. Foster of the Grandview Herald, president of the association, said that the newspaper is going to be just as good an institution in a community as the bank and possibly better.

Vice-president C. S. Kingston spoke on "Pioneer History as News." Attention was called to the value of the story that the present pioneer had in the early history. A discussion of newspaper files was emphasized and regret expressed that some of the early papers printed in the northwest kept no file.

The afternoon session was devoted to round table discussion, with Walt Weik of the Odessa Record leading in the discussion of the topic of "Some Grafts I Have Known." Attention was called to the value of the newspaper file, and the necessity of indexing the clippings.

TWO PROMOTIONS.

W. S. Campbell, formerly manager of sales promotion and advertising of the Miller Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, has become western sales manager of the Falls Rubber Company, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio.

"Interrupting Idea" as it is developed by large New York Agencies.

For several years the Federal Advertising Agency, New York, has stressed the importance of the "interrupting idea" in advertising. In this way of explanation, Robert Tinsman, one of the Federal's chiefs, says that the "interrupting idea" must interrupt the reader, command attention, enforce action, and in addition to this, it must put something into the advertising that reads better and hooks up with the market.

In introducing the "interrupting idea" to the trade, the company held the Bradley Knitting Company. The problem was to make Bradley the preferred name of the trade, the slogan "Step Into a Bradley and Out of Doors," literalized by action pictures of outdoor sports, enlargements of which were sent to newspapers for free advertising. As the newspapers display the action pictures being the "interrupting idea" that tied up the new advertising campaign in the magazine advertising.

The dealers welcomed any advertisement that would connect their store with the outdoor trade and were given the use of the displays and feature the goods. Furthermore, the dealers paid one dollar and a quarterly for hundred for Bradley style books, issued semi-annually in editions of two million each.

The problem in this campaign of the International Silver Company was to restore the interest in the public in the white metal.

It was found that the public had no real understanding of the silver, so the idea was evolved of featuring in the advertising a spoon made of solid silver. A spiral of solid silver and the slogan, "Wrought from Solid Silver." This impressed upon the reader that the word "sterling" means solid silver. One of these blocks mounted on mahogany was given to jewelers for display on their counters or walls and was the "interrupting idea" that connected the national advertising with the retail store.

"Correspondence is a very essential item. The more correspondents a paper has, the larger will be its circulation. It is not just the people living in these communities that are interested in reading their own correspondence, but also the people who formerly lived there. The Bureau County Republican, with a circulation of over 7,000, which is the largest local weekly circulation in the United States, has more than twenty-five correspondents and H. U. Bailey, its publisher, considers these correspondents an important factor in building this large circulation."

"Strong local editorials are appreciated more than most publishers realize. A number of the most successful publishers in Illinois have told me that they consider their policy of publishing at least one local editorial every week as the most important factor in holding subscribers."

"Local features are the best overlooked by most publishers, yet and they will make the public talk about your paper more than all the straight news that can be secured. Feature stories about your fire department, your police force, your factories or your merchants make extremely interesting articles and they are appreciated by those about whom the story is written."

"Other feature stories may be entirely the creation of the publisher."

MISUSE OF TERM “BROKER” A REAL INJUSTICE.

HEADLINE WRITERS APPLY IT INDISCRIMINATELY TO ALL WHO CANNOT BE PLACED IN OTHER CLASSES, AGENCY HEAD WRITES—PUBLIC GET WRONG IMPRESSIONS.

Editor, THE FOURTH ESTATE: Sir: Did you ever notice how many things seem to happen to “brokers”—in the newspaper headlines? The indiscriminate use of this term appears to be growing. When a man is caught in some compromising position, or becomes involved in some doubtful transaction, and his business is usually small, the term "broker" is almost inevitably characterised as a "broker." This works a real hardship to a worthy and important class of business, and to a reputable class of business men. Can we do something to minimize or assuage it?

Now, we know that real estate brokers, and insurance brokers, and brokers in every kind of commodity and service, and, in fact, any kind of business, can be called "brokers".

But to the public—the great unthinking public—"broker" means a "Wall street stock broker." Every time they read a headline such as "Brokers caught in Apartment Raid" the impression is created anew that "Wall Street" and all its works are rotten.

In four months of this year The New York Times published 485,652 agate lines of Women's Specialty Shops advertising—almost twice as much as the next New York morning newspaper—242,528 agate lines more than the combined volume of two other New York newspapers popularly classed with The Times as to quality of circulation, and a gain over the first four months of last year of 42,774 agate lines.

EDITOR'S NOTE

The above letter was written by Mr. W. T. Mullally, an editor of THE FOURTH ESTATE, who has been critically observing the misuse of the term "broker" for some time. He has been particularly interested in the way in which it is used in the headlines of newspapers, where it often appears as if it were a catchword used indiscriminately to describe any person or thing that is not clearly placed in some other class.

Mr. Mullally has made some observations on the misuse of the term "broker" and has written to an editor of another newspaper to point out the injustice of the practice. He has also written to some of the newspapers themselves to draw their attention to the matter.

Mr. Mullally believes that the use of the term "broker" is a real injustice to a worthy and important class of business, and to a reputable class of business men. He suggests that some action be taken to minimize or assuage it.

Mr. Mullally's letter was printed in the May 19, 1923 issue of THE FOURTH ESTATE, and it has been widely circulated among newspaper editors and business men. It has attracted a great deal of attention and has been discussed extensively.

In conclusion, Mr. Mullally hopes that this matter will be given more attention by newspaper editors and business men, and that some steps will be taken to correct the misuse of the term "broker" in the future.

VETERAN EDITOR DIES IN NINETY-FOURTH YEAR—ACTIVE UNTIL END.

George Wurts, ninety-three years old, for many years editor of the Paterson, N. J., Press and associate editor of the Paterson Press-Guardian, died Thursday at his home. He attended to his editorial duties up to a few weeks ago.

Mr. Wurts was born in Easton, Pa., on September 13, 1829. Very early in life he devoted himself to literature, and in 1861 he entered the journalistic field as a reporter on the Newark Advertiser. After a short time on the reporting staff of the Advertiser he left to take a similar situation on the Newark Mercury, later becoming the editor of the paper. This was during the excitement of the Civil War, and it was at the office of the Mercury that Mr. Wurts organized a defense against the threatened outbreak of the mob during one of the riots of 1863.

During the time he served as editor of the paper, Mr. Wurts was also the correspondent of the New York Times and Evening Post.

His next service was with the Brooklyn Daily Eagle and in February, 1865, he went to Paterson to assume the editorship of the Paterson Daily Press. At the time of his death he was the associate editor of the Press-Guardian and the Sunday Chronicle.

In addition to his duties as editor, Mr. Wurts contributed articles to a number of the leading periodicals, including the Old Knickerbocker Magazine, Continental Monthly, Harper's Weekly, Scribner's and others. He was the president of the New Jersey Editorial Association in 1873, and during the session of the legislature of 1880, 1881 and 1882, he served as the secretary of the New Jersey Senate.

OBITUARY NOTES.

REV. DR. JAMES A. MacDONALD, formerly editor of the Toronto Globe, died Monday after a long illness, in his sixty-first year. Mr. MacDonald was born in Cumberland County, Ont. He graduated from Knox College, Toronto in 1877, was ordained minister in 1891 and after five years preaching entered journalism as first editor of the Westminster. In 1902 he became managing editor of the Globe, leaving in 1916. He was the author of several books. He received the degree of L.L.D. from Oberlin College and the University of Cincinnati.

COLONEL HOMER THRALL, 91 years old, editor and publisher of the Carey, Ohio, Times for thirty years, died recently. Colonel Thrall was pastor of the First Congregational Church in Marysville from 1879 to 1884. He was a colonel in the Civil War.

CHARLES BUTTLES of Kansas City, 50 years old, owner and editor of Kennel Review, a national publication featuring Airedale dogs. Mr. Buttles was born in Columbus, Ohio, but lived there more than thirty years ago.

SYLVESTER LESTER, 76 years old, who had been engaged in the printing business in Atlanta since 1882, but retired sixty years ago, died recently. He was a member of the Atlanta Constitution about forty years ago.

W. C. MORROW, who served many years in the newspaper field particularly in San Diego, died recently at Ojai, in Ventura County, at the age of seventy. He began his newspaper work in San Jose and drifted into the short story field.

GEORGE D. KINDER, 87 years old, for seventy years engaged in the newspaper business in Ohio, died last Sunday at his home in Ottawa. He was editor for the Putnam County Sentinel at Ottawa for forty years and associate editor for the last fifteen years. Mr. Kinder also was engaged in newspaper work in Green ville, Port Clinton and Sandusky.

GEORGE P. LOCKE, who many years ago was on the Wichita Beacon, and other Kansas newspapers, later becoming a special agent for the Government, was killed in an automobile accident in Long Beach, Cal., recently.

RACINE PROTECTS FLAG FROM ADVERTISING.
Old Glory is taboo from billboards and other forms of advertising in Racine, Wis., it was ruled by District Attorney Thorwald of that city. The decision follows upon the installation of a billboard on the Lake Shore road bearing the advertisement of a Kenosha restaurant and surmounted by the symbol of the American flag.

NEW RULING FOR AUSTRALIANEWSPAPER COMPOSITORS.
In Melbourne, the agreement between the newspaper proprietors and the typographical union relating to the piecework rate for linotype composition provides that all matter appearing in the paper, except standing advertisements on order, may be charged for by the men as if it were actually set up in standard type. Displays cast from supplied matrices are also charged by the men. Similarly, all illustrations which appear on a page but only having two or three display lines in and all the rest "white" or blanks is charged for as if it were set in solid nonpareil or 6 point type.

EDITOR WRITES TRAVEL BOOK.
For the first time in the history of Mark Twain, a printer's volume of travel is to be published, entitled "A Dash Through Europe with Snapshots by the Way." Edmund G. Gress, editor of the American Printer, and author of "The Art and Practice of Typography," is the writer.

PRESS HAS OUTSTRIPPED MAGAZINES. LOUIS WILEY DECLARES—CHARACTER OF PUBLICATION IS REFLECTED IN ITS ADS—GREATEST NEED IS FOR TRUTH IN NEWS.

Newspapers have outstripped magazines by far as national advertising media. Louis Wiley, of the New York Times, told the Advertising Club of St. Louis Wednesday night. Mr. Wiley is a member of the New York Times advertising department. "The newspaper has become in the last decade leading a new advertising medium," said Mr. Wiley. "In every home, in every one of the one hundred and fifty million families, perhaps, it is supposing the patent medicine advertiser, but we must recognize that if the legitimate business man had had the patent medicine man's advertising, his profits would have been vastly different.

"While the editor is no longer the one and only factor in the making of the news, the advertiser is still in some sort of a position, and so we must be careful that the imbecile, who does not know a good picture from a bad, and who is not the reader who cares for coarse pictures, childish attempts at humor or sensitive writing.

"The character of a newspaper is judged as much by the advertisements it prints as by any other feature. The appearance, content and quality of advertisements are criticisms on which the reader bases judgment of a newspaper's character. A newspaper that does not respect its own readers, and who have respect for the reputation of a newspaper, will not accept advertisements which exercise censorship over their advertising columns, excluding questionable articles, misleading and unworthy announcements.

"Advertisements in the daily newspapers are probably the most effective and the least expensive of all the other media. The advertising makes the advertising, and news again makes circulation.

STRESSES TRUTH IN NEWS.
Mr. Wiley emphasized that the first qualification of a newspaper is truthfulness. He decried the tendency among many newspaper readers to doubt the veracity of what they see in the daily press. "Newspapers are not infallible," he continued. "On the other hand, they have the power; at least, they do not do so often in these days. It is a habit to question between newspapers is too keen, and if one newspaper were to publish an untruth, the other newspaper would at once virtually declare its statement.

"The newspapers are in the business of the critics, who, Mr. Wiley said, often desire to rise on the wave of publicity. A newspaper can help the newspapers to their desire to be fair, and frequently reprint criticisms found in "high-brow" publications which attack the editorial utterances of various newspapers.

TEAM WORK ESSENTIAL. There is no good reason why the editorial department should look down upon the advertising department. To the editor, a successful advertising policy means a general prosperity, and to the advertiser, a successful newspaper policy means a general prosperity. Both are interested in the welfare of the other, in the welfare of the community. And both are interested in the welfare of the country.

"There should be, and I believe in the most successful papers there is the utmost harmony and cooperation between the two departments. Both (Continued on Thirty-first Page)
The Philadelphia Bulletin's newspaper printing plant is The Largest in the United States

The Bulletin is housed in The Bulletin Building, with ten stories and two basements, at the northeast corner of City Hall Square, and in the Bulletin Annex, of seven stories and two basements, at the southwest corner of Juniper and Arch Streets.

The Bulletin's battery of twelve octuple and nine decuple high-speed perfecting printing presses is capable of an output of 300,000 copies of The Bulletin per hour.

Builders are now at work erecting an addition to The Bulletin Annex Building that will double its size.

To print a single day's issue of The Bulletin—half a million copies—requires about 200 tons of newsprint paper (this is equivalent to almost eight railroad freight car loads), and consumes more than 6,000 pounds of ink daily.

About 1,400 people, including editors, reporters, compositors, printers, clerks and other workers, exclusive of carriers, news-boys and news-dealers, are employed daily in the production of The Bulletin.

Its delivery fleet of one hundred motor trucks and wagons travels more than 600,000 miles a year in hauling The Bulletin to more than 8,000 distributors, who carry it into a half million homes in Philadelphia, Camden and suburbs every day.

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is larger than that of any other daily or Sunday newspaper published in the state of Pennsylvania or between New York and Chicago, and is one of the largest in America.

G. A. McCLELLAN CONTROLS ST. JOSEPH GAZETTE

PURCHASES MAJORITY OF STOCK AND IS ELECTED PUBLISHER AT DIRECTORS' MEETING — C. D. MORRIS REMAINS PRESIDENT — SALES PRICE NOT DISCLOSED.

After negotiations that have been an "open secret" for a month or more, the controlling interest in the St. Joseph Gazette was transferred last Saturday to George A. McClellan of New York, who was elected publisher and who took charge at once. C. D. Morris, who has been publisher and president of the New Gazette Company remains for the present as president of the company.

Mr. McClellan has purchased from the First National Bank a majority of the stock in the Gazette, which had been placed with the bank as collateral to secure large loans. He also has been negotiating for the purchase of stock still held by Mr. Morris.

William Boeshans, who will remain as business manager, has occupied that position with the paper about ten years.

CITY DEGRADED BY BILLBOARDS!

says FRANCIS D. GALLATIN
PRESIDENT OF THE PARK BOARD OF NEW YORK CITY.

In an article prepared for the New York American, Commissioner Gallatin writes:

SIGHT is considered the noblest of the senses, the sense of smell one of the lowest. A man capable of appreciating a Raphael is looked up to as a superior individual. Such is not the case with the man who is a fanatic on perfumes. Notwithstanding this, the courts will protect us against foul odors, but seem in the past to have been powerless against obnoxious sights.

This subject has been called very vividly to my attention by the encroachments of advertising signs along the city's beautiful parkways and boulevards. In many cases, parks, playgrounds and public squares which the city has spent millions of dollars to beautify and which represent a civic asset of incalculable value, have been disfigured by huge structures dedicated to commercialism.

Persons who come to the parks to rest and to enjoy natural beauty have these monstrosities thrust on their attention. The purpose of refreshing the mind with natural beauty, for which the parks have been established is defeated.

The efforts of the park authorities to control these encroachments, placed on private property in the vicinity of parks, have been frustrated, owing to present laws.

A change, however, is noticeable in some of the recent decisions. The police powers of the State vary with public sentiment. What in one century is clearly outside these powers, is as clearly within them in the next. I feel that the time is coming when the courts will hold as constitutional acts of legislatures directed against ugliness.

Uplift is the word of the day. Yet the surest means of uplift—a cultivation of the love of the beautiful—has been sadly neglected. Teach a people to know the beautiful and to value it and you will have a community inspired by high ideals. Neglect this instruction and you will have a people to whom immediate material interests are everything.

Make a city beautiful and its people will love it and be proud of it. This love and pride will lead them to strive to be worthy of its beauty.
CLOSE RACE ON BETWEEN HOUSTON AND LONDON

NEW YORK AD MAN DECLARES THAT SENTIMENT IS EQUALLY DIVIDED AND DEADLOCK IS LIKELY — TEXAS BOOMERS FULL OF CONFIDENCE COMING NORTH.

Partisans and supporters of Houston and London as the convention city of the Ad Clubs for 1924, appear to be about evenly matched. The advertising men of the Southwest have recently set a definite "Houston 1924" movement in motion and are reported to have raised a sum of $50,000 to entertain the delegates next year.

One of New York’s best informed advertising representatives staid to The Fourth Estate yesterday that his information is that the Houston delegation will be sufficiently influential to stand off the "Out-to-London" boosters from the first day the convention meets.

"As the rivalry between the two cities stands just now, I would say they are dead-locked with a little more than an outside chance to a compromise city," added the advertising executive. "Houston has not waged quite as an aggressive fight as have the Londoners, although we are advised that the Texan men have done effective canvassing in the south and west in a quiet way. The site of the 1924 convention is a long way from being decided and I look to this question bringing up the weightiest debate of the convention.

Supporting the advertising man's statement comes a telegram from R. F. Reed, assistant publisher, speaking for Marcellus F. Foster, publisher of the Houston Chronicle, receiving as just as the Southern Excess goes to press, as follows:

"Considerations of the Convention City for the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in 1924 is further endorsed by receipt of 4454 letters and wires from clubs all over the world that the city is in league with the Dallas and St. Louis in a special train consisting all Texas advertising men. Houston has a number of the finest of these men elected and $50,000 fund assured. The convention will be in operation in 1924. Our apologies show the activity by the Southwest in favor of Houston."

Mr. Chew, who founded the Gazette, and while not now active in its management, he contributes daily to its editorial columns.

COX APPOINTS R. A. REEDER BUSINESS MANAGER OF MIAMI METROPOLIS.

Ross A. Reeder, who was assistant business manager of the Miami Metropolis, under the ownership of S. Bobo Dean, has been elected vice-president of the new publishing company which is headed by former Governor L. S. Cox. Mr. Reeder also becomes business manager of the paper. He has been connected with the Metropolis for eight years. Mr. Reeder is affiliated with the various Masonic bodies of Miami, as well as a director of the Miami Chamber of Commerce.

Arthur G. Keene continues as managing editor, and also becomes editor of the paper. Charles F. English continues as city editor and W. S. Phillips as telegraph editor. In the business department, H. W. Stewart Hall succeeds to the position of advertising manager, and N. L. Towner, who has been in the circulation department, becomes circulation manager.

Leadership.

Every development of the slug composing machine from the first idea of the circulating matrix to the present quick-change, multiple magazine text and display machine has been a Linotype achievement. The Linotype Company maintains organized departments that do nothing less except work ahead to keep the Linotype user in the front of the printing business.

Performance.

Linotypes are in active operation today more than a quarter-century's steady use. Many are in use in remote places. Linotype resources have been invested without stint in factories and equipment to take care of the needs of the printing business for years to come.

Service.

The more than 45,500 Linotypes throughout the world are supplied through Linotype sales and supply organizations that serve four-fifths of the world's printers and publishers.

DAILY PRESS AD MEN TO AIR PROBLEMS.

WILL HOLD JOINT SESSIONS WITH CLASSIFIED MANAGERS AND FOUR A'S — NATIONAL ADVERTISING SITUATION AND MERCHANDISE SERVICE WILL BE DISCUSSED.

The entire field of newspaper advertising problems will be covered at the three half-day sessions that have been planned by newspaper men attending the A. A. C. W. convention to be held at Atlantic City, June 3-7. The conference will open Tuesday morning in the Breakers Hotel. A joint session with the Four A's will be held Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock, and the newspaper men will meet with the National Association of Classified Advertising Managers Wednesday morning at ten o'clock.

Tom Darlington, manager foreign advertising for the San Antonio Express, will lead the discussion Tuesday morning on merchandise service. Other topics to be discussed follow:

TUESDAY MORNING.

Should newspapers tie up with national advertisers using magazines for their campaign? Do some advertisers ask unreasonable "co-operation," and how much co-operation should be demanded of advertising agents by the publishers? How far should a newspaper go in the development of accounts requiring newspaper co-operation? How far should a newspaper go in making trade investigations, and arranging for window displays sent advertising agents to the newspaper to be delivered to dealers? Is a merchandising publication issued by newspapers a satisfactory investment?

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

Report of special committees on local and foreign advertising rates. Should publishers accept trade acceptances or any other method of deferred payment and if so should cash discounts be made? Should newspapers exchange advertising for hotel accommodations? Unsolved problems by Wednesday morning.

Proven plans. "Something you can do for your own newspaper" selected members of the Classified Advertising Managers' Association addressed the publisher, subject: "Value of Classified Advertising To Daily Newspapers."

BATTEN GOES TO MONITOR.

Eugene C. Batten has been appointed manager of the New York office of the Christian Science Monitor, succeeding Stephen H. Barrett.

ST. LOUIS DELEGATION MAY STAGE CROSS-CONTINENT DANCING MARATHON.

For the benefit of any members who might feel so inclined, preparations for a marathon dancing contest to begin at St. Louis and end at Atlantic City have been arranged by the Advertising Club of St. Louis which will leave next Saturday for the A. A. C. W. convention on a special over the Pennsylvania railroad. According to Arthur Siegel, chairman of the convention committee, the train will be equipped with everything to make the largest enjoyment happy on the way to Atlantic City.

Mr. Siegel adds: "We have our special equipped with sleepy heads and diners as well as a sixty foot baggage car which will be equipped with seats and phonographs for the pleasure of those who care to dance. The diners will be equipped with special menus. A number of our friends from clubs in the South and West will accompany us. The headquarters of the delegation will be at the Hotel Traymore.

"IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE" NETS AD CLUB BIG SUM.

Three performances of the comedy, "It Pays to Advertise," staged by members of the Advertising Club of Portland, Me., netted a considerable sum which will be used toward defraying the expenses for the entertainment of the district convention of the New England clubs next fall. Major Edward E. Philbrook, surveyor of the United States custom forces at Portland, has been appointed general chairman of the convention.

BALLOU HEADS AD CLUB.

John T. Ballou, advertising manager of Frederick Loeser & Company, Brooklyn, N. Y., has been elected president of the Brooklyn Advertising Club. He succeeds General Mortimer D. Bryant.

SPECIAL EDITION OF 48 PAGES.

The Claremont, N. H., Eagle, B. G. Welch and H. L. Woodward, publishers, has just issued a special edition of the paper containing forty-two pages. The special number was prepared by Edward J. Gallagher.

ROSS MAKES CHANGE.

Donald O. Ross has left as advertising manager of the Iowa Gazette Company, Cedar Falls, to join the Cedar Falls Record in a similar capacity.

MOVES INTO NEW PLANT.

The Cottage Grove, Wash., Sentinel has moved into its new building erected especially to house the paper.
A program of unusual variety and significance that will cover every side of the advertising field has been assured for the nineteenth annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Atlantic City, June 3-7. An imposing array of speakers of international prominence has been obtained to lead the discussions on the many subjects that will come before the convention. It is significant that the importance placed by advertising men on the value of newspaper columns has prompted a variety of subjects dealing with advertising in the daily press to be given prominence on the program.

With discussions on every field of advertising assured at the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Atlantic City, June 3-7, the complete program offers a variety of subjects of interest to every branch of the publishing and advertising industries. In addition to the general sessions, many departmental meetings will be held. The departmental meetings will be held.

Below is the continuation of the program:

INSPIRATIONAL MEETING.

Steel Pier, Music Hall. Monday Morning—June 4.

Lecturer becomes editor.

"Uncle Sam" Hampton, for several years a lecturer for the extension department of Montana State College and known throughout the state as "the farmer philosopher," has purchased the Belgrade Journal and will conduct the publication. Mr. Hampton has written for various farm papers and the dailies.

FLOWERS FROM WHITE HOUSE.

Mrs. Warren G. Harding showed her appreciation of women writers of Washington this week when she sent flowers to decorate the table of the National Women's Press Club, at which Miss Laura Harlan, her private secretary, was the guest of honor.

LECTURER BECOMES EDITOR.

While President Harding as yet has not signified his intention to accept the invitation extended by Senator Walter E. Edge, to address the delegates, there is some likelihood that he may attend as he has expressed his willingness to participate.

Two outstanding themes to be developed are new tasks in advertising and what advertising has done and can do for great commercial fields—agriculture, automotive, financial and public utilities. In addition to the general sessions, the various departments will discuss their problems.

At the inter-departmental session the general theme will be the codification of all branches of advertising.

Executives of the A.A.C.W. will leave New York Tuesday for Atlantic City to make final preparations for welcoming the delegates.

Address by George M. Graham, vice-president and advertising director.

BRITISH DELEGATION

NOTABLE FIGURES IN PUBLISHING AND ADVERTISING FIELDS ARE TO SAIL SATURDAY TO ATTEND A.A.C.W. CONVENTION—MANY AFFAIRS ARRANGED FOR VISITORS.

One hundred and five members and friends of the Thirty Club of London and the Advertising Club of Ulster in Belfast will sail from Southampton next Saturday on the Berengaria to attend the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Atlantic City, June 3-7. All are determined to carry the 1924 convention to London.

A welcome befitting the distinguished publishers and advertising men in the delegation has been arranged. They will be met down the bay by a reception committee headed by Herbert S. Houston. Others to greet the visitors will be Roy S. Durstine, president of the Thirty Club, and Rodman Wanamaker, senator Walter E. Edge of New Jersey, and Cyrus H. K. Curtis, publisher of the Philadelphia Public Ledger. The British delegates will be received by Mayor Hylan at City Hall. Exorted by mounted police, the party will then proceed up Fifth Avenue to the Hotel Pennsylvania.

ASSOCIATED DAILIES WILL MEET IN BUFFALO.

The New York Associated Dailies will hold their annual meeting in Buffalo at the Hotel Lafayette on Friday, July 6. The meeting is planned somewhat later than usual this year to work in with the plans of those publishers who desire to attend the New York State Press Association meeting in Buffalo July 5. It will start on the trip across New York State with the National Editorial Association on July 8 or 9.

CHICAGO ASKS FOR PAPER MAKING EXHIBIT.

An appeal to the paper industry for an exhibit, similar to that in the National Museum at Washington, of paper-making methods and material for the public library has been made in a letter to the American Paper and Pulp Association by a group of Chicago women who are interested in the development of the library.

NEW PRESS CLUB FORMED.

The Litchfield County Press Club was organized last week at Torrington, Conn., upon invitation of George W. Peterson, editor of the Torrington Evening Register. Albert W. Krause of Canaan; O. S. Freeman of Water-town, and Robert Hurlbut of Winsted were named to prepare by-laws. Others present were George C. Woodruff, Litchfield; A. E. Woolley, New Milford; Irving E. Manchester, Winsted; George W. Thompson, Torrington; Thomas A. Carroll and Willard M. Warner.

A THOUGHT ON ADVERTISING.

It has been said that the reason hen's eggs are more popular than those of the duck is because the hen advertises every time she lays one. Perhaps another reason may be that she doesn't scatter her efforts like the duck but sticks to her own nest. The merchant will sell his wares to the newspaper for his advertising effort the one who wins. Advertising's aim is Action. Advertising is a directed advertising effort on what they read in their Gerhardt A. Hanse has joined the advertising department of the Waw- art Motor Corporation, Buffalo.

PLANNING NEW HOME.

Plans for construction for a new building are being made by the Haines, Record, for housing the newspaper and printing plant.

WILLIAM S. CRAWFORD.

The Thirty Club will call at the White House, Friday, June 8. That evening the Washington Advertising Club plans a reception to which the President and members of the cabinet will be invited. At Philadelphia they will be entertained by the Poor Richard Club and Cyrus H. K. Curtis, who will take them through the Curtis plant. They will also stop at Baltimore.

Before their departure for London on June 16, the British advertising men will be guests of the Four A's at a farewell banquet at the Hotel Pennsylvania on June 14. Only mem-

LARGE GATHERING AT JOURNALISM WEEK MEETING.

Dean Walter Williams, was divided into the three sessions of three hours each, and each was open to the public.

The annual meeting and dinner of the association of past-presidents of the Missouri Press Association was held Wednesday, when Willis J. Abbot, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, spoke on "Journalism, Old and New," and J. Fred Essary, Washington correspondent, of Baltimore Sun, spoke on the "Washington Assignment." A reception was given later by Gamma Alpha Chi and Alpha Delta Sigma. Yesterday afternoon the women delegates were honor guests at a tea.

The program on Monday opened with the meeting of the Missouri Women Press Association at the Lion's Lodge, 210 North Lafayette, and the services of Miss H. W. Dodge of St. Louis presiding. A banquet supplemented the business sessions.

"The Making of the Cartoon," was the subject of an address by D. R. Fitzpatrick of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, at Tuesday's meeting when members included Harry Hanes, literary editor, Chicago Daily News, who spoke on "The Plain Talkers"; Miss Au Haas, St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "Reporting the Legislature," Frank H. Hedges, peking correspondent, Japan Advertiser and the Philadelphia Public Ledger; Mr. W. W. W. Kiev, president of Associated Advertising Clubs of the World; Mr. H. M. He was chairman of the committee on organization of the United States Chamber of Commerce in 1912, as a result of the conference of the business organizations of the United States Chamber of Commerce held in New York at that time, which formed the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Richard C. Fahey, chairman of the executive committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and alter prejä, was vice-chairman of the International Trade Conference held in this country with envoys from the leading European countries in the fall of 1919 and chairman of the ordinate committee which formed the International Chamber of Commerce in Paris in 1920.

DECORATED DURING WAR.

He received a Certificate of the Legion of Honor by the French government, and Commander of the Order for Services by Italian Government, in recognition of war work and in the field of international commercial organization immediately after the war. He also received the decoration of the Order of the Crown by the President of China, in recognition of work in the promotion of commercial relations between the United States and the Orient.

The New York Evening Post, which was founded in 1813 by the late George H. Clarke, came into its present ownership in January, 1923, when Thomas W. Lamont, publisher, sold the stock in the newspaper to a group of thirty-four citizens headed by Edward F. Gay, publisher, under Mr. Lamont.

CHURCH ADVERTISING TOPIC AT A.A.C.W. SESSION.

An interesting program prepared for the departmental meetings that will be held in connection with the world advertising convention at Atlantic City, June 3-7, will be that of the church people. The Rev. Christian F. Reimer of New York is chairman of the church advertising department, which is affiliated with the A.A.C.W. Sessions will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, June 5 and 6.

Among the many prominent speakers on the program are the following:

W. N. Bayless, Tiffany-Bayless Co., Cleveland; Fred E. Potter, advertising agent, London, England; Dr. James E. Joy, editor, Christian Advocate, New York; Graham Patterson, advertising business organizations into the Chamber of Commerce, one of the largest and most successful in the country.

J. H. R. Cundiff began issuing the Daily Gazette as the first daily paper during 1857. Publication suspended during the Civil War, but the paper appeared again, June 28, 1868.

The Gazette passed into the hands of the Burns family in the '80s and the late Charles F. Cochran became its editor and manager until 1906, when he was elected to congress and Frank Freytag became manager. The Gazette and Herald were consolidated as the Gazette-Herald in August, 1905, and were purchased by Walter B. Holmes of Memphis, Tenn. It was made independent in politics. After a few months Charles T. Webber and others publishing the Daily News, acquired the property.

In March, 1909, the Gazette-Herald was purchased by Lewis Gaylord and management of the Gazette which time dropped the name Herald and published the paper as the Gazette and it was again made a Democratic organ.

The paper was purchased by a syndicate of Republicans in 1903, and, or, succeeded by C. D. Morris. The late George H. Clarke became associated with Mr. Morris in the publication of the paper, but left about ten years ago. At the time Mr. Morris had been the publisher. Since 1903 the Gazette has been a Republican newspaper.

TOLEDO PAPERS TRICKED BY IMPOSTOR.

DAPPER YOUNG "SALES MAN" PLACED MANY CLASSIFIED ADS AND PASSED WORTHLESS CHECKS IN PAYMENT — DESCRIPTION GIVEN TO AID DETECTION.

J. G. Tritsch, advertising manager of the Toledo, Ohio, News-Bee, tells the story of a fraud perpetrated on the Toledo newspapers by an imposter, a dapper young man, during the week of May 1. The man called himself "Frank Parker," sales manager of the Independent Brush Company of Niagara Falls, N. Y., and came into Toledo and placed classified advertising in the two evening papers. His plan was to secure distributors and salesmen for the brush company, and a house-to-house canvass was to be made, similar to the plan used by the Fuller Brush Company.

He seemed to have sufficient credentials to assure the newspapers that he was responsible, and, since the amount of his advertising was not large, his copy was accepted and published in the papers.

On May 7 he offered a check on the Niagara Falls Trust Company, for an amount in excess of the total of his bill. The check was accepted, but was later returned by the bank, marked "No funds."

The Independent Brush Company of Niagara Falls reports that he also attempted to cash a forged check for $100.00 in Toledo, but the forgery was detected in time and the check was not honored.

Frank Parker — or as he was known to the Independent Brush Company, George Adams — is about fifty to fifty-five years of age, slender build, dark complexion and about five feet ten inches tall. He is modest, unassuming and carries none of the earmarks of a professional crook.

Frank Parker, or George Adams, as he was known, attempted to sell the public what bargains it has, while the non-advertised store does not.

BOYCE SELLS BUILDING.

The building which houses the Indianapolis Daily Times, has been sold by W. D. Boyce. When Mr. Boyce disposed of his interests in the newspaper to the Scribner Corporation, he retained the building. The Times is looking for a new site in West Maryland enterprising merchant who is a good, shrewd, wide-awake buyer has bargains all the neighborhood. He is his principal job to keep on the lookout for special opportunities. If he is on the lookout for a bargain, he will find it. He is a wise selection between good and poor offers, and always has things in his store that are really a bargain for their exceptional values.

The public hears about these exceptional chances in the classified advertisements. It is not told and does not realize that they exist in the non-advertised store, even if that store has them. The public then passes by or gives the store nothing because nothing has been suggested to convince anyone that anything is to be gained by trading there.

SCRIBES MAKING PLANS FOR ALASKAN TRIP.

Arrangements for President Harding's Alaskan trip, including the overland tour through a number of Western states, are in progress. Details of the journey from Seattle to Alaska, however, will call for considerable advance arrangements. These, it was made known at the White House, will be worked out for the care of all the correspondents who desire to go on this journey, within the bounds of possibility.

SOCIAL WELFARE EDITORS MEET IN WASHINGTON.

The first annual meeting of editors and publishers of social welfare publications in the United States and Canada was held in Washington May 18 in conjunction with the fiftieth anniversary session of the National Conference of Social Work. Among the speakers were Paul Kellogg, George J. Hecht, Harold S. Buttsamthorn, and Philip E. Jacob.

PUBLIC UTILITIES MEN WILL PUSH USE OF PAID SPACE IN NEWSPAPERS.

The newly organized Public Utility Advertisers Association will push the use of paid advertising space in newspapers, as an affiliated unit of the A.A.C.W. during the Atlantic City convention, June 21. The organization has some time ago decided that the modern, progressive public utility corporation must not depend, in its effort to hold public good will, upon the help of newspapers. It may be either willing to write frequent articles about it or accept foreign advertising space for paid advertising.

Several hundred public relations men representing leading public utility companies because thoroughly convinced that public utilities should advertise in the press in order to buy space that they organized the national association.

These men will exchange experiences and ideas at Atlantic City and are determined to promote the further use of paid advertising space in public utility companies.

F. Strandberg of the Railway Light and Heat Company, Portland, Ore., is president of the association, which represents an industrial group of something like seventeen billion dollars.

BIG AD CLUB CONVENTION WILL HAVE DISPLAY ON LINOTYPE TYPOGRAPHY.

At the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World to be held on the Steel Pier at Atlantic City, June 3 to 7, the makers of the linotype will give an instructive display of linotype typography, The showing will include copies of the Indianapolis Daily Times, the Morning News of Linotype Typograpgy and the Linotype Typography Lay Out Kit, and other pieces of equipment, plus help to advertisers.

Representing the linotype company at the convention will be: Julius W. Muller and F. T. Deenan.

NEW ASKS CARE IN ADDRESSES.

In his crusade against careless mailing, Postmaster General New again has asked postmasters to attempt to instruct the public in the importance of careful mailing addresses.

"It often happens," Mr. New said, "that the sender may not know the way in which his address is written, but does know the street itself. He should be instructed to put on the address all the identification he knows. He may know the occupation of the addressee, but this may become a material aid."

NEWSPAPERS BECOMING BIG FACTOR IN THEIR CAUSE, SOCIAL WORKERS TOLD.

"The newspapers of America are the strongest allies of the social workers," said President George A. Hastingsof New York, assistant chairman of the committee on public opinion of the national conference on social work convining in Washington this week, told one of the group meetings.

"The newspapers have come to the realization that their influence is here to stay, that they must use this influence in the cause of the poor. They have come to realize that the power of the newspapers has become too great to be ignored, that the newspapers have become a big factor in the cause to which social workers are working."
A Treasure in Facts and Ideas—

The ultimate significance of the day-to-day developments in journalism and advertising strikes home only when you see them spread upon the record.

Facts and ideas are the tools of both professions. Day by day and week by week they expand and increase, becoming in time trends, movements, and customs.

The when, the how, the who, and the where are spread upon the record in the

THE FOURTH ESTATE

Their pages contain the accurate record of men, methods and masterpieces—not only pictures of the events but mirrors of their inspiration.

From them come new facts and new ideas such as underlie all progress—a solid block of irreducible knowledge and practical help.

Let us tell you how to Bring the Treasure Home.

MICHIGAN IS FIFTH IN THE PAPER INDUSTRY.

MORE THAN 3,000 TONS ARE MANUFACTURED DAILY IN THAT STATE — NEWS PRINT FIFTH IN PRODUCTION WITH RECORD OF ALMOST 200 TONS A DAY.

An invested capital of more than $50,000,000 and a working force of approximately 12,000 is the total reached by the pulp and paper manufacturing industry in Michigan, according to a survey just completed. Michigan ranks fifth among the states in the value of its pulp and paper production, New York, Maine, Massachusetts and Wisconsin alone being ahead of Michigan. Maine, Massachusetts and Wisconsin are leading Michigan only slightly, while New York, which tops them all, values its product at less than twice that of Michigan.

While the pulp and paper industry of Michigan is centered chiefly around Kalamazoo, that territory can claim exclusive control by no means. Monroe is an important center. Some of the other larger manufactories are in Ypsilanti, Petoskey, Cheboygan, Benton Harbor, Sturgis, Muskegon, Plain well, Waterford, Ogemaw and Constantine.

From 31,000 to 3,999 tons of paper are manufactured daily in Michigan. And more than 750 tons of pulp are turned out each working day. This huge total is the product of approximately forty-five corporations engaged in the manufacture of pulp and paper or its allied products. The paper is divided into various types. News print is fifth with a record of almost 200 tons a day.

PAPER MAKERS ARE CAUTIOUS BUT NOT TIMID.

EVERY INDICATION IS FOR FURTHER INCREASED CONSUMPTION OF NEWS PRINT, WITH DEMAND AT PRESENT IN UNPRECEDENTED VOLUME — PRODUCTION COST ADDED.

Caution, but not timidity, the phrase used by Secretary Hoover before the United States Chamber of Commerce a few days ago, expresses most concisely the attitude being taken by the paper industry of the United States, according to the American Paper and Pulp Association.

The paper manufacturers, in the face of the heaviest demand known in some branches of the industry, are not taking advantage of the increasing cost of raw materials and labor to increase prices. In one important branch of the industry, for instance, prices are 2.5 per cent higher than in 1914, but costs are 101 per cent higher.

The seasonal decrease of demand may be anticipated this summer, but the very reason to believe that in September the demand will be such as to break all previous records in the entire winter requirements.

EDITOR HARDING HELPS OPEN NEW GOLF COURSE.

PLAYS IN FOURSOME WITH JUSTICE SANFORD, SPEAKER GILLET AND EDGAR MARKHAM AS NEWSPAPER CLUB MEMBER AND FINISHES HIGH IN TOURNAMENT.

President Harding, Speaker Gillett and Associate Justice Sanford of the supreme court, representing the three co-ordinate branches of the Government, joined today with men new to the fourth estate as represented in the Washington Newspaper Golf Club, in opening a new municipal golf course in Rock Creek Park.

The opening was made the occasion of the third annual spring tournament of the Washington correspondents. The event was won by Charles Schaeffer of the Washington Herald, with a low net score of 69 after subtraction of a fourteen stroke handicap.

Mr. Harding played not only as a representative of the Executive branch of the Government, but as a member of the club, to which he belongs by virtue of editorship of the Marion Star. Although he did not win a prize, he finished high in the tournament with a net score of 90 and a gross of 102.

The other members of the Presidential foursome turned in gross scores as follows: Speaker Gillett, 95; Justice Sanford, 106 and Edgar Markham of the St. Paul Dispatch, president.

While local papers and press associations have contributed many members, at least fifty percent of the personnel of the club, 121 is made up of correspondents of out-of-town newspapers. Officers are: Edgar Markham, St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, president; Paul J. McManus, Philadelphia Inquirer, vice-president; John A. Preston, superintendent senate press gallery, secretary-treasurer.

Among the players were: George Harvey, Ambassador to Great Britain and a former newspaper man, played as a guest of the club, and scored a 99.

Store Breaks Sales Record Through Newspaper Ad.

Newspaper advertising was given credit for producing the biggest day's business ever enjoyed by the Block store, Indianapolis, in a page advertisement in the Sunday Star, the William H. Block Company announced.

"Block day," an event in honor of the founder of the store, at the close of business on "Block day," William H. Block, president of the company, commented and addressed on the business which broke all records in a four-day period.

One factor that contributed greatly to the success of the day, he said, was the widely advertised appeal for the Star, on which the store carried a large display.

Mr. Harding played not only as a representative of the Executive branch of the Government, but as a member of the club, to which he belongs by virtue of editorship of the Marion Star. Although he did not win a prize, he finished high in the tournament with a net score of 90 and a gross of 102.

While local papers and press associations have contributed many members, at least fifty percent of the personnel of the club, 121 is made up of correspondents of out-of-town newspapers. Officers are: Edgar Markham, St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, president; Paul J. McManus, Philadelphia Inquirer, vice-president; John A. Preston, superintendent senate press gallery, secretary-treasurer.

Among the players were: George Harvey, Ambassador to Great Britain and a former newspaper man, played as a guest of the club, and scored a 99.

LONDON PAPERS INCREASE PRICE TO TWO PENCE.

The London Times and the London Daily Telegraph will, on June 1, increase their selling price to the public to two pence instead of three half pence, as at present. The high costs of production is said to be the reason for the raise in price. The papers also point out that the price of three half pence was fixed at a time when it was thought that these costs would drop very generally.

PICTORIAL IN MELBOURNE.

Within recent months the Melbourne, Australia, Argus has definitely adopted a change to pictorial treatment. A person whom the whirr of current events has brought to the public mind, a new newspaperman or an old manuscript, the thrilling fire in a city wild and the finish of a classic race, all are snapped by the ubiquitous camera man, and give additional interest to the news item with which each is associated. A "live wire" from the literary staff does nothing else but scent out picture subjects with a news value and write bright and informative titles to them.

CARRIERS TO BE GUESTS OF SPOKESMAN-REVIEW AT SUMMER OUTING.

The first summer outing for this reason of the Spokane Spokesman-Review to Loon Lake, will be held on both days of June 20 and 21, with L. E. Dyer, assistant circulator, in charge.

Tents, transportation, boats, baseball equipment and other supplies will be furnished by the paper, and the only things the boys will be required to furnish are their own bedding, fishing tackle and swimming suits. The junior and senior teams are but one of the features of the two-day outings.

J. FRANK BURKE PURCHASES AND COMBINES TWO OHIO NEWSPAPERS.

The Bucyrus Evening Telegraph, the Loudonville and Bucyrus Forum have been purchased by State Senator J. Frank Burke, publisher of the Elyria Chronicle-Telegram, and have been consolidated into the Telegraph-Forum. The paper started daily publication under its new name last Monday, and will be independent in politics, according to Senator Burke.

The Hopley Printing Company, former owners of the Telegraph and Journal are said to have received $110,000 for their interests and the Bucyrus Publishing Company, $35,000 for the Forum. The sale was negotiated by the H. F. Henriots Agency.

The Telegraph has for many years been recognized as a fixture in the Hopley family. John E. Hopley, for some years in the diplomatic corps of the United States in South America, has edited the paper, and Senator James R. Hopley, who until recently sat side by side in the state senate with Senator Burke, has been the manager. Two other brothers have official connections with it.

The Telegraph under the Hopleys has been a power in the community for many years. The Forum has been under the management of Thomas A. Cooper and Allan Markley.

TO DISCUSS SCHOOL ADS.

The School and Student Market Association will hold its first national conference Tuesday, June 5, at the Hotel Balboa, Atlantic City, in connection with the world advertising convention. George D. Bryson is chairman of the committee, and the general topic will be "Advertising to children, teachers and college students."

Speakers on the program are Paul C. Hunter, president, Educational Advertising Company, New York; Morson S. Rutsify, president, Collegiate Special Advertising Agency, New York; N. Guy Wilson, advertising manager, Educational Publishing Company, Chicago; and Henry Gage, president, Educational Foundation, New York.

NEW JERSEY PRESS CONVENTION JUNE 15-18.

ANNUAL MEETING AND TOUR WILL BE HELD AT LAKE MOHONK, NEW YORK, WITH ATTRACTIVE ITINERARY AND PROGRAM — RESERVATIONS CLOSE MAY 30.

The average expense a person will be twenty-eight dollars.

The committee in charge are A. E. Briator, Plainfield, chairman; John W. Cliff, Summit Herald, chairman; W. B. Mason, Bound Brook Chronicle, treasurer; and John E. Clary, Jr., Madison Eagle.

PAPER SALES MEN OFFER ACTIVE.

The Salesmen's Association of the Paper Industry is holding weekly gatherings at the City Club, New York, instead of monthly meetings, where questions of sales are discussed by the Eastern salesmen.

While the Paper is doing an aggressive work, it is also extending its Pacific Coast division of the association in June, when the Pacific Coast Association meets at Delmonte, Cal. Four of the members, including the Chicago vice president, are planning to form a division of the paper salesmen's association during this convention, June 6 to 9.

CANADIAN PAPER MAKERS TO CONTRIBUTE TO EXHIBIT.

The Canadian pulp and paper companies have responded in a generous way to an invitation of pulp and paper products in connection with the Canadian exhibition train which will tour France. A representative collection of pulp and paper products is assured.

LINOTYPE EXECUTIVE MAKES SWING AROUND THE CIRCLE.

Harry L. Gage, assistant director of Linotype typography for the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, left New York for a visit to all Linotype agencies in the United States and to Canada. Mr. Gage is chairman of the general of Canada. The trip will extend over a period of from five to six weeks.

Mr. Gage is scheduled for talks on typography before leading organization in several cities on his itinerary. Last Thursday Mr. Gage addressed the Advertising Club of New Orleans.

At the May dinner-meeting of the New York Club of Printing House Craftsmen, at the Aldine Club, Mr. Gage gave an illustrated talk on "Typography on the machine."

FORECAST FOR SECOND SIX MONTHS OF YEAR INDICATES INCREASED PROSPERITY FROM EAST TO WEST IN CANADA—FOREIGN TRADE MAKES BIG STEP FORWARD.

National advertisers who are considering daily newspaper campaigns for late summer, early autumn and winter may regard the ... loans of $18,000,000 in the month of March, and an increase of $6,952,260 in savings deposits over the corresponding month in 1922.

Industrially Canada is far from standing still. Estimating Canada's population as 9,000,000, the per capita total foreign trade was $192.75 for the year, as compared with $165.33 per capita in 1922.

SIR CLIFFORD ON REPLACING FORESTS IN CANADA.

That the millions of logs taken from the Canadian forests this spring represents a destruction of forest resources and that the government should spend large amounts on restorations without compensations has been the contention of Sir Clifford Sifton in a letter to the Canadian government, which is the interesting contention of Sir Clifford Sifton in a letter to the Canadian government. It is the contention that any money spent in planting trees should not under any circumstances be regarded as an investment, upon which interest, either simple or compound, should be calculated.

Concerning the cutting down of merchantable trees as a destruction of capital and I would think it was the plain duty of the government to encourage the planting of trees which permits the cutting down of trees for lumber, and not merely to cut them down and then, to insist on the replanting of at least two trees for every one cut down, however, such cost should be taken out of the forest revenue and regarded as a permanent charge upon that avenue.

PAPER FOR TYPESETTERS.

The initial issue of the Composing Room, a publication done by the Monotype Group of the New York Times, which has contributed $25,000 toward the cost of the Daily Sketch, has been issued. The Daily Sketch, delineating some of the members of Canadian advertising clubs, is a copy of this edition, which contains twenty-four pages, has been sent to the daily advertising clubs advertising clubs throughout the county. It tells the delegates to the national advertising club meetings what they may expect if they go to "England in June.

In addition to the issue in a message from H. L. Gates who is "the only American editor ever imported to England," Mr. Furay, foreign editor of the United Press, and International Herald, has been managing editor of the New York Herald, now is managing editor of the National Observer, and is a member of the Canadian advertising clubs.

LONDON IN LIVELY RACE FOR CONVENTION.

Of course, no good American sportsman will greet the genial British delegation of publishers, advertising men and business friends with consideration less than the heartiest and most extended. The latter have sailed a fair course and at the present writing seem to have a better chance to race America's literary splendor than the distinguished Sir Thomas Lipton has to carry off America's yachting prize. Incidentally, Sir Thomas is a heavy advertiser and his presence is missed in any international gathering of advertisers.

There always has been a deal of good natured rivalry among American cities seeking the annual ad club convention. Contestants have met on several occasions and every time one or more of the cities have controlled the prize. Many express admiration of the courage of the Britons in selecting the city of London as the spot to lead the association bodily across the water. Only the final ballot of all the advertising clubs, both big and little, throughout the country, will determine if our visitors are to succeed.

With a membership so wide territorially, it is only natural that many advertising men, who have closely clung to the association for the inspiration and valuable exchanges of these conventions, will hesitate to applaud the efforts to take those important American assemblages across the ocean to London. This reluctance is hardly any other than a disinclination to forfeit the advantages which accrue from these meetings in America, for not all these members will be able to find the time to leave their respective cities to undertake a junket or a journey abroad.

The Londoners claim to have the international trade present, but they ought not to take for granted the apparent acquiescence of our ad club delegates, for some have been known to conceal their intentions. They have been known even to stampeade a convention. Politics play a weighty part in selecting convention sites and southern advertising men are notoriously good poker players.

PRESS PRIVILEGE SCORNS BLIND JUSTICE.

American jurists have yet to learn that independence of the press, if need be, stand even above the power of the temple of justice. Newspapers men are rightfully jealous of the protection of their calling and they have not hesitated to assert their right to edit their copy submitted to them without control of the paper.

The latest addition to the roll of honor are the three staff members of the Birmingham, Ala., Post who saved twenty-four-hour sentences for contempt of court. Their crime was that they followed the tradition to which every newspaperman is heir.

To have followed any other course would have been to yield to the temptation of disloyalty to their profession, contempt of the dignity of the publication and the right of publishing. The sentences meted out to these three loyal members of the Fourth Estate are but additional proof that real freedom, if it exists, is preserved.

SCHOOLS OF JOURNALISM MAKING GOOD.

The nation's leading schools of journalism, one in Missouri and the other in New York, had celebration this week. In a few short years noted institutions have altered the average newspaperman's conception of the unpatented power of the publishers of America back to a movement to plant trees, we have no fear of the result. Ohio, for instance, has nearly three million acres of natural forest land, not cultivated and there is enough forest land north of Erie and east of the Mississippi to provide us with such material our country needs if it will but plant some timbers. Again, heavy users of news print help themselves out of a constantly shrinking supply of newsprint by planting trees which can supply growing eyes needed now to supply a demand which is getting more pressing all the time.

FOOD ADVERTISING HEADED HOME.

Owen Moon, Jr., business manager of the Trenton Times, is credited by many newspaper owners with carrying on one of the noticeably more efficient advertising campaigns in the country. By a good wedge into this national advertising, he has shown the way, and other newspapers have taken up the cue and are working in the same general direction.

Close observance of these steps forward made by progressive newspaper owners, or any other national institutions, will now for the good reason that the trend of national advertising toward cleanliness is the keynote of the campaign, because day by day in everlasting strides, newspaper advertising has proven its case often and Mr. Moon's campaign only lends emphasis to what advertisers know but which not all practice.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

Women have started a national campaign for "cleaner" newspapers. and many of the large dailies have approved the idea, two in Los Angeles agreeing to cut sensational headlines. However, one paper while approving the attempt to reduce sensationalism, points out the unfortunate fact that thousands of people demand scandal and sensationalism, and that newspapers are maintained on a high standard lose out in favor of the "cleaner" paper.

There is, in other words, a real risk in educating the public to desire a "cleaner" paper. The language to which it is accustomed will be any better than the average public sentiment.

HEALTHY OUTLOOK FOR NATIONAL ADVERTISERS.

CANADA, RAPIDLY JUMPING TO PULP PRODUCER, CONSIDERS TAX ON WOOD FOR AMERICAN MILLS. SOLUTION DEPENDS UPON PROTECTING OUR PULP.

That the permanency of the paper industry in the United States is largely dependent upon the protection of our nation's forests was a warning note sounded by Dr. Hugh P. Baker, technical advisor, to the executive secretary of the American Paper and Pulp Association, speaking to the public at the Pulp Association of the Paper Industry in Cleveland last Monday.

"Canada is destined to control the industry on this continent, and is already so nearly in control of the northern region of the industry that there is talk among our friends across the border of an export duty upon新闻," said Dr. Baker.

"Canada is a foreign nation, though we speak the same tongue, and we must first of all look to the permanency of the paper industry within our own borders. The solution of this question is entirely dependent upon our protection of our forests." Dr. Baker's talk.

"Undoubtedly, the paper industry of the United States faces an increase in the cost of pulp wood now being imported from Canada, through the proposal now being considered in Congress to impose a lion dollar tax upon all pulp wood imported to United States mills." Within a year or two Canada will be producing more newsprint than can be handled at home, and it is extremely likely within the bounds of probability, he stated, to look forward to an export tax upon Canadian newsprint as soon as Canada feels that she has that phase of the industry on this continent well within her control.

MORE BUSINESS IS URGE OF LONDON INVITATION.

INTERCHANGE OF THOUGHTS AND IDEAS WILL ESTABLISH BETTER UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN BUSINESS MEN OF BOTH COUNTRIES, SAYS BRITISH SECRETARY.

Since it became known that an invitation had been extended to London to attend the Atlantic City convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in June, many American advertising men have asked why it should be London.

The answer is simple, as viewed by C. Harold Vernon, secretary of the Thirty Club of London, for the Thirty Club of London has issued the invitation to hold the 1924 convention.

Advertising plays a very important part in international relationships. An interchange of thoughts and ideas between such organizations as the Thirty Club of London and the Thirty Club of America is of considerable interest.

The problems of distribution, as affected by local conditions in different parts of the world, would be considered, and useful information would be exchanged on this important subject.

Questions of store advertising, multiple advertising, and advertising by trade organizations are other subjects on which information could be exchanged with great benefit to both countries.

BURLEIGH IN NEW ART POSITION.

J. Kelley Burleigh, who was with Postum Cereal Company for five years and recently with Universal Pictures Corporation, has been appointed art executive for Edward Kramer, Art-Engraving Printing.

BETTER UNDERSTANDING BE

The problem of distribution, as affected by local conditions in different parts of the world, would be considered, and useful information would be exchanged on this important subject.

The invitation to hold the convention in London, such as is contemplated, will not only bring American and British manufacturers into personal contact, but delegates will be invited from the principal manufacturers in many of the smaller countries, Australia, South Africa, India, China and Japan.

Questions of store advertising, multiple advertising, and advertising by trade organizations are other subjects on which information could be exchanged with great benefit to both countries.

The invitation to hold the convention in London has the enthusiastic support of all the principal advertising groups, newspaper Societies and Associations. At the present time the Thirty Club of London, the only British club affiliated with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, but it is expected that the convention will take place a very large number of other clubs and associations will apply for affiliations. Already the Association of British Advertising Agents has taken the initiative; it is anticipated that before long all the organizations already referred to will apply for affiliations.

The Forty Club of New York is going to sponsor a new section of the Forty Club, and the Forty Club of London has already been invited to join the Forty Club of New York.

Situations Wanted

Where Is This Publisher?

I am looking for the publisher of a newspaper in a medium sized city who will value the efforts of a real go getter. I have been the advertising manager of one of Chicago's largest papers, also Boston, and Richmond, Va. My early commercial life took me all over the country giving me a real opportunity to study men and conditions. I am an aggressive salesman who makes friends, know how to do copy that freely, plan campaigns while acting as an inspiration and pace maker to the whole staff, encouraging them to their best at all times. My sales talks are original, logical and effective. I enjoy winning for the pleasure and satisfaction it affords me. If there is a publisher in the country who can use a man of my experience and ability I would be very much appreciative of the pleasure of meeting him. I have been earning more than $1,000 per month for 16 months. I am free to go with the right publisher. Address Box 6008, care The Fourth Estate.

Advertising or Circulation Manager

Systematic, thorough, with successful experience in various kinds and sizes of territories, wants position of responsibility with good newspapers, with or without commission. Knows circulation and advertising as worker, salesman and executive. Would be valuable assistant to publisher or manager. Prefer medium or large city. What do you want done? Address Box 6008, care The Fourth Estate.

A Real Circulation Manager

available after June 1st.

"Big city" experience. A record of success. An expert on promotion of new circulation. Highest possible references from each publisher served during the past 15 years.

A BIG MAN FOR A BIG TASK.

Where opportunity exists for persistent, constructive and solid circulation building with adequate revenue return.

Advertising Manager—Position Wanted

I have been in newspaper advertising work since I was eighteen and through all the business departments up to Advertising Manager. Left the newspaper field two years ago to enter another line. Years of practical experience in Washington, Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. Letters of reference speak in highest terms of past work, ability and character. No proposition too difficult to handle. Willing to go anywhere seeking real opportunity and permanent connections with big future. Married, age 41. Address Box 6406, care The Fourth Estate.

MR. PUBLISHER

If an Insurance Co. stood ready to write a policy insuring you a 25% increase in your circulation during the next 12 months wouldn't you make it your business to get a policy?

The nearest you can come to that policy is to hire me as Circulation Manager based on the increased circulation during a certain period over your present ratio of increase.

Your Circulation Department is not just a part of your paper. It will make it an important and valuable asset. The larger the city or the field the better.

Address Box 6401, care The Fourth Estate.

CANVAS OF EDITOR SHOWS OPPOSING VIEWS ON WORLD COURT.

The Institute of American Business, New York, made public this week the results of a questionnaire addressed to 1,000 daily and weekly newspapers dealing with various world problems. The results of the study show that the Democratic editors are in favor of having this country enter the League of Nations as soon as organized, while the Republican editors are far more inclined to accept a compromise than their Republican brethren.

The showing in favor of the permanent Court of International Justice, "in approximately the same proportion as the Harding-Hughes formula," was 150 to 150. However, the editors were willing to accept the Borah world court proposition, while 115 were opposed.

AGENCY GROWTH REFLECTS SPACE INCREASE.

MACMANUS INCORPORATED:
INCREASES STAFF TO 61 MEMBERS AND COMPLETE ADDITION TO ITS DETROIT BUILDING—LAST SIX MONTHS BROUGHT BIG CHANGE.

The tremendous importance being placed on newspaper advertising today as an aid to sales is strikingly evidenced in the growth of MacManus Incorporated, nationally known advertising agency, which last week completed a large addition to its building in Detroit. So great has been the organization's expansion during the last few years that the enlarged building which it was believed six months ago was sufficient to care for its requirements for some time to come, is already entirely occupied.

The rapid growth of the MacManus organization is equal to that founded in 1916 by Theodore F. MacManus, is shown by the fact that seven years ago the staff comprised fourteen persons. Today there are sixty-one, and many of those officers have large interests in and around New York City, a branch office is maintained here.

Incidents in the life of the man who has guided the organization throughout its tremendous growth are especially interesting, as he has twice refused an annual increase in salary to the extent of six figures. Five years ago he was offered such a raise if he would divide account with other Detroit and Chicago. He refused it. Three years ago he was offered another increase in salary with a three-year contract for handling one advertising account. He also declined that because it involved giving up a smaller account. Two years ago he was offered to be released from a large contract which still had two years to run in order to handle a smaller account and continue his business association of years' standing. He was released and again accepted less than a year before to do the work he wanted to do.

WRITER OF POKER STORIES, FIFTY YEARS IN HARVARD. DIES IN NEW YORK.

David A. Curtis, known to his friends as “Davy,” for his poker stories, many of which were published in Sunday issues of the New York Daily Graphic in 1895, died Wednesday in his seventy-seventh year. He was 89 years old when he died, his friends found, and he had been a writer for the newspapers, and he then remarked that he hoped the world would live a quarter of a century longer. But he showed symptoms of failing; a few days ago and he was advised to go to a hospital.

The previous day he became somewhat gloomy about the outlook, sensing that he had a hunch he was going to die shortly. Mr. Curtis was a picturesque person, always wearing a brimmed sombrero-suggestive hat that added to his height, which was close to six feet. He had been reporter, editor, correspondent and writer for newspapers in New York since 1873. For many years he was a reporter for the New York Herald.

When not reporting or writing plain facts for the dailies he was indulging his passion for creating fiction. His job of a year, from 1892 to 1893, as city librarian did not prevent him from writing a good novel. Mr. Curtis was born in Norwich, Ct., on October 19, 1846. A large gathering of newspaper men attended the funeral services which were held yesterday afternoon.

OBITUARY NOTES

ALBERT C. FOUGNER, 83 years old, father of G. Selmer Fougner, New York newspaperman and publicity director, died Thursday, at his home in Brattleboro, Vt.

FRANKLIN H. GASSAWAY, widely known as a poet and newspaperman, died suddenly Monday at Oakland, Cal. For the last thirty-three years Mr. Gassaway has been connected with The Cincinnati Enquirer. He was born in Maryland, going to San Francisco from Washington, in 1880, as a special representative of the United States Mint.

NEW ENGLAND PUBLISHERS ADOPT RESOLUTIONS ON SECOND-CLASS POSTAGE.

Fredric W. Hume, secretary of the National Publishing Association, in an address before the New England Daily Newspaper Association at its annual meeting in Providence, has been made and the plans that are being considered in order to obtain a reduction of second-class postal rates for newspapers and periodicals.

“The work thus far done has been so effective that it is believed a number of congressmen on record as to their attitudes,” Mr. Hume said. “While there are a few stubborn congressmen who have served on the post office committees for years, who are still of the belief that the second-class postal rates are too high, yet it is realized that the method is impractical, and it is only reasonable to suppose that through a little personal solicitation and persuasion they can be induced to see that our request is justified.

“We intend to carry out during the coming Congress a program that has already been outlined, and when you receive requests from Washington of the-A. A. C. W. and the plan that is being considered in order to obtain a reduction of second-class postal rates for newspapers and periodicals.

Department stores spend more money in daily newspapers than any other class of advertisers—and they cannot afford to waste a penny of the money thus spent.

They must get results—and they DO.

They have reduced advertising to a science and advertisers in any field may be assured that the medium in which the department stores place the greatest volume of their business has the circulation coverage and advertising coverage that makes it effective.

For many years—and today—the department stores of Chicago have placed and continue to place the greater proportion of their “must get results” in The Chicago Daily News. Here, for example, are the figures for the first four months of 1923:

It is evident, also, from the above figures that The Daily News carried considerably more than a third of ALL department store advertising in Chicago daily newspapers in this period, and more than twice as much as the daily newspaper having the next highest score.

It is the estimation of advertising experts, no less than the esteem of its readers, that establish and maintain The Chicago Daily News

WORLD AD CLUBS ON THE WAY TO ATLANTIC CITY

RAPID RISE NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING INTO ACCEPTED FIRST POSITION AS MEDIUM PROMISES TO DEVELOP VAST OPPORTUNITIES FOR PUBLISHERS.

Approximately 7,000 publishers, advertising men and business leaders from every section of the continent and from many foreign countries, are enroute today to Atlantic City to attend the nineteenth annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which in physical size and in the scope of the convention ever recorded in the.

The many-sided program, which begins to-morrow and ends Thursday, provides for thorough discussions on every important topic in the field of advertising. Special emphasis has been laid on the outstanding value of newspaper columns in furthering the sale of national advertised products and some of the most important discussions will deal with this vital phase of sales promotion.

In arranging the program speakers of international prominence to lead the discussions were obtained by C. K. Woodbridge, president of the Dictaphone Corporation and chairman of the national program committee; W. Frank McClure, vice-president of Albert Frank & Co., and chairman of the Advertising Council of the Chicago Association of Commerce, and the various departmental chairmen who assisted in preparing the program. The prestige of the speakers, combined with the opportunities for relaxation which will be afforded delegates at the playground of the East, assures a convention which will be epoch-making.

COX BUYS ANOTHER OHIO DAILY—NOW OWNS FOUR.

James M. Cox, Democratic presidential candidate in 1920, has purchased the Canton News, from H. H. Timken and C. W. Tufford, increasing the number of newspapers owned by Mr. Cox to four. The other papers of which he is publisher are the Dayton News, Springfield News and the Miami, Fla., Metropolis, which he purchased in April.

The Canton News was established in June, 1933, and has been represented by J. P. McKinley & Son. T. A. Klein represents Mr. Cox’s Dayton, Springfield and Miami newspapers.

Keen observers of Mr. Cox’s progress in acquiring newspapers are of the opinion that he will rename the Metropolis, so that all four of his publications will be known under the title of “News.”

SECRETARY CLIFTON D. JACKSON.
Lou E. Holland will be re-elected by an unanimous vote.

Among the most important departmental meetings will be those of the National Association of Newspaper Executives and the Association of Classified Advertising managers. Selling advertisements through the telephone, the problems of both large and small newspapers, including the development of rural business, division and sales work, special classification rates and office organizations will be discussed. The value of premiums and novelties will be considered. Classified advertising and its respective advantages of morning and evening papers are among the other topics to be discussed.

FOUR A’S WILL MEET.

Another departmental meeting of unusual importance will be that of the American Association of Advertising Agencies at which Roy S. Durstine will preside. The sessions of the newly-organized Public Utilities Advertising Association, representing an industrial group with a capitalization of something like seventeen billion dollars, will stress the value of a systematic and continuous advertising program on the part of public utilities.

A few of the many important addresses which will be features of the convention are: “What the government of the United States has to (Continued on Twenty-fifth Page)

In mere weight of numbers the circulation of the Bulletin is impressive. It far over-balances the record ever attained by any daily or Sunday newspaper in the city or state.

And it is a circulation built up on a high standard of appeal. The Bulletin's policy is best expressed in its belief that primarily it is a newspaper intended for the dissemination of news — as fairly, as completely and as impartially as it can by placed before the reader.

The sale of the New York Globe and Commercial Advertiser last week to Frank A. Munsey for a sum said to be $3,000,000 marks a record price for franchises in the Associated Press and the New York City News Associations, which Mr. Munsey had been trying to get for the Evening Sun since his purchase of that paper in 1916.

Since the acquisition of the Globe and Commercial Advertiser by Arthur T. Walker in 1920 through a bequest made by his employer, Edward F. Sears, the paper has been on the market. Mr. Walker said his employers had been the first opportunity to purchase it, but an offer of $2,000,000 made by Jason Rogers, publisher of the paper, was rejected as being insufficient. Since then a number of other offers were made, but the bidders were unable or unwilling to meet Mr. Walker's terms.

A special group of the New York delegates to the convention will make the trip by airplane, leaving Saturday morning from the Hudson River. The squadron probably will be of three super-hydroplanes, each carrying about ten men. This section of the delegation is in charge of Maxwell, Lakeman, secretary of the club's direct mail depart-

GOING TO THE CONVENTION

BY AIRSHIP.

A special group of the New York delegates to the convention will make the trip by airplane, leaving Saturday morning from Eighty-sixth street and the Hudson River. The squadron probably will be of three super-hydroplanes, each carrying about ten men. This section of the delegation is in charge of Maxwell, Lakeeman, secretary of the club's direct mail depart-

NEW AD MANAGER.

George Hartford has been appointed local advertising manager of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, succeeding T. L. Lenehan, who has left.
First in the First Market

In the New York trading area, the greatest market in the world—a territory in which the annual income of nine million people is $8,000,000,000, The New York Times is read by the largest group of intelligent, discriminating and responsive persons ever assembled by a newspaper.

The average net paid circulation of The Times, daily and Sunday editions, is in excess of 370,000 copies. The purchasers of the Sunday edition exceed 550,000 persons. The sale of The Times is more than the combined sale of the two other New York newspapers generally classed with The Times as to quality of circulation.

In five months of this year The New York Times printed 10,584,066 agate lines of advertising, a gain of 423,380 lines over the corresponding months of last year and 2,907,828 lines more than the second New York newspaper.

In each state of the United States; in 2107 of the total 3007 counties; in 8,000 cities, towns and communities; in all United States possessions; in 11 of the 12 provinces of Canada; in 87 foreign countries, there are readers of The New York Times.

For buying power and responsiveness, the readers of The Times are not excelled by those of any other newspaper in the world. The Times offers advertisers an unsurpassed opportunity to reach the largest possible number of purchasers in the richest and most populous center on the earth.

Of the 830 national advertisers using The New York Times, 200 make their announcements exclusively through its columns in New York territory.

Quality and volume of circulation, and advertising results considered, the advertising rates of The Times are lower than those of any other newspaper.

WELCOME to

English Advertising Men

Welcome to our country and to our homes. It is a wonderful thing for advertising men to get together, especially advertising men from various parts of the world, to impart to each other such knowledge as they may have upon the great subject of salesmanship through advertising; and it is especially a wonderful thing for so many gentlemen interested in this great subject to come all the way from England to be our guests at the Annual Convention of the Advertising Clubs of the World.

Besides imparting added knowledge to us through their experiences, they bring the English speaking countries closer together,—a friendship and a relationship which everyone welcomes most heartily.

I hope the Advertising Clubs at this Convention will accept the kind invitation which the English gentlemen have brought over, to hold the next Convention in London. I have already promised myself the great pleasure of being there in case this occurs.

Paris Style of Newspaper is Next Step

VANDERLIP, TALKING TO STUDENTS AT PULITZER SCHOOL, COMPARES PAPERS OF TODAY AND 35 YEARS AGO AND POINTS TO COMING MODELS.

Paris, having personality and enormous circulation and influence, I would like some of you men to try that here. It would take men of real ability to put it over. Few people are able to digest all the news of the world, but I believe many would enjoy reading a newspaper in which world events would be summarized and analyzed by a man of sound judgment.

FOUNDER OF BEVERIDGE PAPER COMPANY IS DEAD

Henry L. Beveridge, founder and president of the Beveridge Paper Company, died at his summer home, Chatham, Mass. He was born at Troy in 1859. After being graduated from Amherst College, he was employed in a paper mill at Lawrence, Mass. Later he was connected with the Beckett Paper Company, Hamilton, Ohio. He organized the Beveridge Paper Company in 1895, and under his management it became one of the most important plants in the industry.

TO ADVERTISE STATE.

Plans for a nation-wide advertising campaign for Minnesota will be under way June 1 with the opening of the Minneapolis publicity bureau office in the Abbey building, according to announcement of L. H. Fair-ington, president. Announcement followed appointment of Luther P. Weaver as executive secretary. More than $30,000 has been subscribed by Minneapolis businessmen for the work of the bureau.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE TO START USE OF NEW PHONES.

Early this month, probably on June 9, the Chicago Tribune will start to use its new dial telephones. Thereafter, all outside numbers will be secured by use of the automatic telephone, even though the numbers desired are not on exchanges which have been placed under the new system. House calls will be handled as in the past.

TRUTH IN NEWS MUST BE AIM OF REPORTER

Truth in the news must be the aim of every reporter, declared Arthur Sears Henning, Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, before the Medill school of journalism, Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill.

"With stern self-criticism he must pass judgment on his own work, asking himself of every story, every paragraph, can he say to himself this is true? Is it true? Is it accurate? Is it just? The reporter who does that consistently will go far," Mr. Henning asserted.

Mr. Henning added that the reporter on Capitol Hill was the most interesting assignment, day and day out, on the reporterial calendar.

He challenged anyone to duplicate anywhere within the national borders such a breadth of sources as upon such a stage such a panorama of the action, ambition, motives, desires, dreams, pretensions, hopes, fears and traits of the "genius homo." The resolutions, he said, "you will see the characters of Shakespeare, Fielding, Dickens, Thackeray, Cer- vantes, Mothers, Mark Twain and Howells acting a multitude of roles in a modern drama more varied than Balzac's.

"The daily recorder of the doings of congress, senators and representa- tives is admitted behind the scenes of the nation as he was behind the scenes of the day. At the news of the day, in the opinion of the day, Mr. Vanderlip said.

The newspaper has removed the public from direct contact with the principle," he continued. "Very frequently the publicity agent gets his matter into the hands of the press associations. It is handed to rewrite men who put it into good English. Then it gets into the newspaper office and there comes under the influence of the business office. By the time it gets to the public, there is a great difference between what is and what it would have been had there been direct contact between the principle and the public.

I illustrate the influence that the publicity agent now wields, Mr. Vanderlip said, taking a prominent man who has engaged a press agent to write his obituary.

WASHINGTON UNDISCOVERED.

Mr. Vanderlip described Washington, D. C., as a city "not yet journalisti- cally discovered."

"If I were a newspaper man," he said, "I would start a little daily or weekly in Washington to tell the truth. It would be a sort of newspaper, Town Topics. The editor of such a paper might come to have as much influence as any man in the country.

"We have gone as far as we can go with the newspapers in trying to print all the news. The next departure in journalism, in my opinion, will be the little sheets, like they have in
A Great Force for International Accord

ON the eve of the Disarmament Conference, The New York Herald sent Louis Seibold to study conditions in Japan and his articles were used as basic information in drawing up the Four-Power Treaty in Washington.

John McHugh Stuart, London correspondent of The Herald, was instrumental in bringing Lloyd George and De Valera together for the settlement from which grew the Irish Free State.

In a dispatch by Francis McCullagh The New York Herald gave the world the first news of Lenin's recession from Communism.

The New York Herald startled America with the first detailed story of the trial of the Roman Catholic prelates in Moscow, the execution of Mgr. Butchkavitch and the first comprehensive uncensored analysis of conditions in Russia today.

The first complete text of the Chester Grant by Turkey was published in The New York Herald. The Herald published an exclusive story telling the part of the German industrial leader Stinnes in causing the most recent large drop in German Exchange.

The New York Herald was the pioneer among American newspapers in establishing an extensive foreign news service and continues to promote international accord by bringing to the American people accurate and temperate news of European developments, reported from all sides of every question without the tincture of nationalistic propaganda.

Such achievements make The New York Herald essential to men of large affairs, who mold public opinion, and who with their families make up the high quality newspaper circulation sought by advertisers local, national and international, who wish to reach large numbers of prosperous and intelligent people.

BRITONS FETED ON ARRIVAL FOR CONVENTION.

1,500 AMERICAN PUBLISHERS, AD MEN AND BUSINESS LEADERS AT WELCOMING DINNER—ENTERTAINED BY NEW YORK—SEE BASEBALL GAME AND "FOLLIES."

Fifteen hundred prominent American publishers, advertising men and business leaders welcomed a delegation of 115 members of the Thirty Club of London and the Advertising Club of Ulster in Belfast at a dinner at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, last night. The delegates arrived in New York yesterday morning on the Berengaria to attend the nineteenth annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Atlantic City, beginning tomorrow and ending Thursday. Incidentally, the delegation will press its invitation to hold the 1924 convention in London.

The delegation was transferred from the Berengaria to the municipal steamer Macom at Quarantine yesterday morning. It was the first time that such a large number of persons has been allowed to leave a liner before docking. The delegates were greeted on the Macom by the national reception committee, headed by Herbert S. Houston, representing the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, and by the New York City police band. After landing at the Battery the visitors were driven to City Hall, where Mayor Hylan welcomed them. Mr. Houston was chairman of the dinner at the Hotel Pennsylvania last night. Wilson-Lawrenson was toastmaster. The Rev. Caleb R. Stetson, rector of Trinity Church, delivered the invocation. A toast "Hands Across the Sea," was responded to in behalf of America by Edwin T. Meredith, former Clubs, and on behalf of Great Britain by C. Harold Vernon, honorary secretary and president-elect of the Thirty Club of London.

Lou E. Holland of Kansas City, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, welcomed the visitors on behalf of organized advertising in America. John Chesher, president of the Thirty Club replied. Julius H. Barnes, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America, spoke on "International Business."

To-day the visitors were to be entertained and shown about New York by members of the Advertising Club of New York. The Macom is at their disposal for a trip around Manhattan Island in the morning with luncheon on board. The British delegates will see the ball game at the Yankee Stadium in the afternoon and the "Follies" at night.

Where the Future of Commerce Lies

America is still young—very young. Our growth to a great manufacturing nation where distribution is on a national scale has occurred almost within the span of a generation.

But large scale production called for large scale distribution and forced the exertion of mighty efforts in order that the broad gap from one end of this country to the other might be bridged by distribution.

Advertising has been a most important factor in the effort that has made national distribution of merchandise in the United States possible.

And advertising will assist strongly in putting our international trade on the same firm, sound basis.

But not alone can we do it.

For decades past, England has pointed the way for the world in her international relations.

England has much to give us—and it is pardonable to say that the United States has something to give in return.

England can give us the benefit of generations of experience in grappling with the problems of internationalizing distribution. We, in turn, have to offer to England the benefits of our experience in running the machinery which has made possible our system of national distribution.

And it is fair to assume that the success of advertising as a factor in distribution, proven in meeting our national problem, will hold for the international one.

England and the United States, working together, may safely point the way to that worldwide distribution wherein lies the future of world trade.

How to meet the serious cost problems which confront daily papers in the small communities is one of the main themes of the two-day meeting of the Michigan League of Home Dailies last week in Grand Rapids, Mich.

The sessions were largely in the nature of round table discussions by officials of the 20 papers represented at the meeting. The chief speaker was Clifford E. Waddell of New York, income tax expert.

H. W. Musseihwite of Manistee, president of the league, expressed the opinion that advertising clubs for smaller cities are practical. The ethical problems of advertising are too complex for the smaller organization, with its limited funds and facilities for investigation, the president thought.

SUMMER MEETING IN MONROE.

The league voted to hold its summer meeting in Monroe, Mich., in July, in response to the invitation of Charles F. French, publisher of the Monroe News.

Hugh Gray of Grand Rapids, secretary of the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association, was one of the speakers at the closing session. Many newspapers of the league are the western part, circulate in territory which has, during many months of the year, a population greatly in excess of that given in census reports. The population consists largely of prosperous buyers who purchase many kinds of merchandise within the trade territory of the home dailies.

Hugh E. Scheerer of Chicago, league representative for "foreign" or outside advertising, spoke on "Figures on Foreign." A building designed from the foundation up for the specific purpose of newspaper production is to be erected at the northwest corner of Sixth and G streets. The site has been secured and plans for the building are involved.

We'd Like to Know You Better!

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA, people buy British-made hats, men's clothing, smokers' pipes, golf clubs, luggage, cutlery, toilet articles, porcelain and earthenware, and textiles and lace of course. When they go to sea, many of them travel in British ships. Indiana firms carry British marine and fire insurance on cargoes shipped abroad in British bottoms. We buy and read British novels. We have a wholesome respect and admiration for goods that come from Britain—and we buy them.

What else, made in the British Isles, is as good as the things we now know? We'll buy it, if you will send it here and tell us about it.

Indianapolis and the Indianapolis Radius (the territory included within seventy miles of the city) is a big, rich, prosperous market of 800,000 people. This is the geographical center of population and of manufacturing of the United States, the heart of a vast producing region both in industry and agriculture.

To sell goods in this territory, space in The Indianapolis News is the first and prime essential. It covers this market.
THE ADVERTISING DIRECTOR’S CORNER.

(One of a series of articles written for The Fourth Estate by a daily newspaper advertising manager of national reputation. Each chapter covers a phase of newspaper advertising discussed with a frankness only possible under a mantle of ambiguity.)

“…Yes, Jimmy, I am glad you have decided to take in the Atlantic City Advertising Convention,” J. B. Buxton, known to newspapermen as “The Old Timer” and to James Connolly, Advertising Manager of the Average City Star Herald, more familiarly as “J. B.,” extended the inevitable cigar as he responded to the younger man’s invitation to be seated. “I am sorry you can’t send every department head in the advertising office to the convention.”

“Then you believe in the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World movement? I have never had much use for it myself,” Buxton said, reassuring the newspaper advertising man that the Associated Advertising Clubs had about eight per cent real advertising men and ninety-two per cent sign writers, insurance men, paper salesmen, etc. I have always figured the convention as kind of a ‘Hurrab Boys’ joy ride,” responded Connolly.

“Unfortunately that is true of most advertising clubs,” returned Buxton. The only reason I am interested in the convention is that it will force the newspaper advertising men of the country to get together. I don’t care how much you know about your business, Jimmy, you can learn something from other newspaper advertising men. Every man from the small town can often give you a new idea or a new slant on an old idea.”

VIEWPOINT OF NEWSPAPER MEN.

“I guess you are right, at that,” Connolly replied. “The advertising club officials have always seemed to antagonize the newspaper men for some reason, and they have interfered with our program in the past, but I believe we will have sufficient time at Atlantic City to cover our needs. You know the average newspaper man is not interested in advertising club work.

Check up the advertising clubs of the country and you will find a very small percentage of newspaper men in active attendance. When the newspaper men go to a convention they want to be free to work out their own problems instead of being forced to sit around listening to ‘spell-binders’ smearing the American Eagle and the flag all over Advertising.”

Buxton laughed, “Now, Jimmy, you are unkind,” he said. “The advertising club movement has a definite place in the business of advertising. It has forced concentrated attention on the subject of advertising and has resulted in the public, the consumer of America, knowing more about advertising and the results of its intelligent application than people in all other nations of the world.

The advertising club movement has forced advertising to be recognized as a business and has helped me to the place where we are proud to acknowledge that we are advertising men.”

“And yet I am not sure that the advertising club movement as it has existed is not doomed to failure,” Buxton passed as he lighted a fresh cigar. “The A.A.C.W. is becoming too big and unwieldy,” he continued. “It is disintegrating into a series of side shows which are fast overshadowing the main event. It looks to me as if the propaganda of the associated officials to force the convention to London in 1924 is at best a dangerous proceeding.

NOT "SOLD" ON LONDON.

Connelly smiled. “So far as that London stuff is concerned, ‘J. B.,’ all the newspaper men I have talked with agree that a London convention will mean that the A.A.C.W. will have no convention in 1924 so far as the rank and file of the association is concerned. Already the newspaper men are planning a convention of their own in Chicago for the summer of 1924. Not to exceed six members of the National Association of Newspaper Executives can take the time and money to make the trip to England. So far as learning anything about advertising is concerned, I think the whole thing is a joke.

In advertising practice and in advertising salesmanship we are so far ahead of English newspapers that there is no comparison. The problems of American newspapers are so utterly different than those of the British Isles and Continental Europe that no advertising manager has even an appearance of an excuse to get his boss to finance the trip as a contribution to his newspaper advertising experience. ‘You have hit the nail on the head, Jimmy,” Buxton replied as he reached for his hat. “I am thinking that many other departments of the A.A.C.W. will be planning along the same lines. This will mean a series of independent conventions at convenient places during the summer of 1924, and if this is started, the A.A.C.W. may find it hard to stop the procession in 1925.

However, I am not at all sure that London will get the convention. I think that if any centrally located city in America wants to put up a fight it can keep the convention here. After all, if the A.A.C.W. is not functioning along right lines, perhaps we may as well find it out now. Anyway I will be an interested side line spectator at Atlantic City.”

EDITOR TESTS STUDENTS’ POWER OF OBSERVATION.

A “fight” between two Lehigh University students was the means taken to demonstrate the importance of observation in newspaper work in a talk on how the news was assembled and printed, before the Lehigh University Press Association, composed of Lehigh students interested in newspaper work. While Harold B. Farquhar, editor of the Bethlehem Globe, was describing the technique of the newspaper profession, two of his reporters suddenly stopped, mumbling one another. When the excitement had subsided, Mr. Farquhar asked his audience, “Now, which one struck the first blow?” The fight had been “staged” without forewarning the audience, in order to test their power of observation.

One Merchandising Department That Has Made Good

With the ROCHESTER-TIMES UNION

A Promise is a Promise

Here is one office where things are actually done. The Merchandising Department of this newspaper takes itself seriously. Its object is to build future business for both the advertiser and itself.

We Dig in Here and Know the Facts; Real Business—Getting Facts

It frequently happens that we tell an advertiser not to come into Rochester at all—keep out—as it will never pay to enter this field. The Times-Union can almost invariably tell with remarkable accuracy just how successful an advertised product will be in this city of wealth and continuous prosperity.

This Service is Without Cost

It has taken years and real money to secure this information but when the Rochester Times-Union makes a statement its truth cannot be questioned.

Your marketing problem may not be solved by this department but we will go a long ways toward finding out what resistance you have and what sales potentiality you have in Rochester. Drop Us a Line Anyway.

PAPERS TOO MUCH ALIKE, SAYS ABBOT.

INDIVIDUAL AND ORIGINAL TYPE OF NEWSPAPER IS PASSING WITH DELUGE OF SYNDICATE FEATURES. COMPETITION TODAY LARGELY IN BUSINESS OFFICE.

A distinct trend away from the sensationalism of the present daily press toward a more informative, dignified and restrained style is noted by Willis J. Abbot of Boston, editor of the Christian Science Monitor.

The young journalist just entering upon his professional career should accept the example of the so-called great dailies of today as indicative of what the newspaper of the future is going to be, said Mr. Abbot.

"Certainly a tendency toward more dignity and restraint will have to be developed and cultivated if newspaper editors wish to recover that public influence which it universally is admitted they now have somewhat lost," Mr. Abbot asserts, "and if we are to recover the voice of authority with which the successful editor of twenty-five years ago often spoke."

MANY NEWSPAPERS PATTERN AFTER CHICAGO TRIBUNE PRESS ROOM.

Nine large metropolitan newspapers and many other smaller ones have installed or are about to install press equipment patterned after the Chicago Tribune.

The Tribune press room has been visited by a great number of publishers and engineers from all parts of the world.

STUDENTS TURN OUT DENVER DAILY FOR ONE DAY.

The Rocky Mountain News, Denver, for May 23, was produced in its entirety by students in the department of journalism at the University of Colorado. The embryo journalists did all the work on the four editions of the paper, from gathering the news to making the pages and from writing editorials to reading copy.

LIKE A GUESSING CONTEST.

The editor of the Desmet, S. D., News, in looking over some of his state exchanges, noticed a large ad carrying a heading: "We solicit your business for 1923" which told of the large and good stock carried and courteous treatment given and was signed with the firm name. "Something lacking surely when an advertisement does not even indirectly call attention to the business a firm is engaged in," is Mr. Sherwood's comment on the ad. "This one was a guessing contest for fair."
IN his statement addressed to the readers of The New York Sun, Mr. Munsey says concerning the amalgamation:

"The public press has recently told you of my purchase of the Globe. My object in buying this newspaper was to combine it with the Sun. I had no thought of continuing its publication as an independent entity, though as newspapers go it is one of the great newspapers of New York, with a circulation at the present time of close to 200,000.

"Moreover, it is showing very good earnings, but in combination with The Sun it will show better earnings, quite as The Sun in combination with the Globe will show increased earnings over its present income.

"The reason for this consolidation is found in the fact that with the two papers in combination we can make a bigger and better newspaper than either has been.

"Newspaper making has come to call for so large a daily outlay in news gathering, in salaries, in print paper, in the mechanical departments and in the delivery of papers, to say nothing of the investment in the newspaper property, and the investment in the printing plant, that small units are uneconomic.

"The same law of economics applies in the newspaper business that operates in all important business today. Small units in any line are no longer competitive factors in industry, in transportation, in commerce, in merchandising and in banking.

"Newspapers that disregard this economic law are inviting disaster and are fixing a charge on the public for newspapers that could and would be reduced if we had fewer newspapers.

"The Sun is one of the great evening newspapers of the country. In respect of quality, in respect of circulation, in respect of importance and all round merit it has no equal in the evening field in New York, and save for the Chicago Daily News alone has no equal in all America.

"The Sun has achieved this great place in American journalism without membership in the Associated Press, a very serious handicap. But in combination with the Globe, it will have the Associated Press, as the Globe is an Associated Press paper. This press service will be an enormous acquisition to The Sun and will make it structurally strong and complete.

"The combination between THE SUN and the GLOBE will be in effect Monday, June fourth. The name of the consolidated paper for the present will be THE SUN AND THE GLOBE, but when the merger has become as established fact with the public the name will be so modified as to better suit an evening newspaper."
CIRCULATION MEN HOLD ANNUAL OUTING.

SIXTY MEMBERS OF GREATER NEW YORK ASSOCIATION AND THEIR FRIENDS ENJOY TRIP IN THE CATSKILLS—SOME RETURN BY HUDSON RIVER DAY LINE.

The seventeenth annual outing of the Circulation Managers Association of Greater New York, held in the Catskills, was described this week by members who participated as the most enjoyable yet promoted by the organization.

The members and their guests, sixty in all, left May 21 on the Saugerties and New York Steamboat line for the Catskills. At Saugerties the party was conveyed in automobiles over the Rip Van Winkle trail to Stamford. After dinner, they returned by the Mohican trail to a hotel on the outskirts of the Saugerties, where they were guests at a banquet given by the Saugerties Board of Trade. James McKernan of New York World, chairman of the association, acted as toastmaster.

Some of the party, wishing to enjoy the scenery of the Hudson river, returned on the Hudson River Day Line. The remainder embarked on the Saugerties and New York Night Line for New York.

S. D. Samuels of the New York World, chairman of the arrangement committee, said: "This is the first time that a Catskills outing has been attended by members of the Circulation Managers Association of Greater New York."

SHELBY, LITTLE MONTANA TOWN, WHERE HEAVY WEIGHTS FIGHT, TURNS RAILROAD CAR INTO TELEGRAPH STATION TO ACCOMMODATE ARMY OF SCRIBES.

True Westerners such as predominate at Shelby, Montana, talk little and fight much when there arises a dispute requiring the ordeal of combat to settle it. The percentage is about ninety-nine per cent talk and one per cent talk. But all that is to be changed on the Fourth of July despite the fact that the fighting is to be done by leading exponents of the science. In fact there will be far more talk than fight no matter how protracted the strenuous the fistic encounter may be.

The principal fighting will be done by Gibbons and Dempsey and the talking will be done over a maze of telegraph wires by an army of newspaper men telling the world how it all happened and why.

Here is presented one of the most vexing problems to be solved in preparing for the big fight.

United for the Nation's need

We are a people scattered over three million square miles of territory—a people whose daily commercial transactions and social interests are as wide-spread as our boundaries. Only a unified telephone service, covering the whole country, can serve our needs.

Such a service, in turn, requires a national organization with uniform policies and operating methods; and also in each community a local organization with full authority and responsibility for the problems of that community.

Such a service is the service of the Bell System. Two hundred and fifty thousand employees and approximately six thousand local operating units cover the length and breadth of the land. Uniting these community organizations are the Associated Companies of the Bell System, each responsible for service in its territory.

Linking together the Associated Companies is the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. It operates the long distance lines, develops nation-wide policies, standards of practice and equipment for the improvement of the service and for the benefit of all.

In this commonwealth of service the best interests of the nation and the community are equally served.

PROTESTS CRIME NEWS IN AMERICAN NEWSPAPERS.

A plea to 326 members of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers gathered at Montreal for their spring meeting was made by Calvin W. Rice, secretary of the society, to use their influence to reduce the number of stories of crime printed in the daily press of America.

Of 6,000 murders in the United States, said Mr. Rice, there were punishments of only eighty-three murder.

He pointed out that newspapers from many cities of the United States, with the front pages marked in red where crime and murder were reported.

In a way of contrast, he referred to the United Kingdom, showing three prominent British journals with not one about crime, and stated that this accounted to an interdetermining degree to the law that England, Scotland and Wales had 300 murders last year, and 294 murderers were punished.

SOUNDS LIKE PRESS AGENT.

Delayed by a shoe shine, Madison Corey, theatrical manager, hired an airplane to catch his boat at Havre. He said.

OLY NEWS PAPERS MAY NET BIG RETURNS

LABORATORY SHOWS HOW READERS MAY CO-OPERATE WITH PUBLISHER IN THE REDUCTION OF COST OF RAW PAPER MADE BY DEINKING PROCESS.

Pulp and paper mills near cities, which are confined to the quantities on which newspapers can produce pulp from de-inked newspapers, can produce pulp cheaper than they can buy new groundwood according to cost data collected by the former products laboratory at Madison, Wis.

"A saving of $15 a ton has been affected at one mill," says the laboratory report, "through the use of de-inked newspapers instead of wood pulp. Such a saving would bring in a large return on the investment in an ordinary thirty ton paper mill with the additional washing equipment and a warehouse large enough to hold a supply of old newspapers. A saving of $40 a ton would make possible the profitable operation of some mills now finding it difficult to make both ends meet.

Laboratory investigations showed that per ton the cost of operating a de-inked newspaper stock each day, the total cost of producing a ton of de-inked newspaper pulp was thirty-two dollars, while nine-tenths of a ton of groundwood pulp twenty-six dollars. The saving on reclaimed newspapers the total cost of a ton was $38.

ELIMINATE WASTE PICKERS.

"To make the most out of the de-inked process it is absolutely necessary that the mill be independent of the periodic manipulating of the waste paper market," is the laboratory advice. For mills situated near the big city the waste paper market may be simple. A large part of a mill's supplies might be collected by its own force from the neighboring territory. Thereby cutting out the profits of at least one middleman.

"In stabilizing the supply of waste paper, publishers can be of enormous assistance since the supply is directly dependent upon the amount of paper saved by the average householder.

With the proper newspaper campaigns, such as were carried on during the war, the supply of waste papers could be doubled without much effort; and if with proper warehouse facilities the demand were stabilized, the paper mill would be benefited.

"With a more constant demand the need of so many agents between the householder and the paper mill would be avoided, and the householder might secure fifty per cent of the price paid by the paper mill instead of only about ten per cent as is often the case."
NEXT YEAR'S CONVENTION SITE IN DOUBT

BRITONS CHANCES NOT IMPROVED AND 1924 CONVENTION MAY GO TO AMERICAN CITY—LONDON BOOMERS SAID TO HAVE OVERPLAYED THEIR HANDS.

As The Fourth Estate goes to press London's chances of the 1924 convention of the Ad Clubs are considerably disturbed by reports of opposition from many sections of the middle and southwest. The best guess of well informed advertising men last night was that the convention would be dead-locked and that an American city, like Houston, Detroit or Cleveland would carry away the prize. New York City was regarded as having an outside chance, in the event of close decision between London and Houston or between two inland cities.

"Because of some high-powered salesmanship by several leading advocates of the 'On to London' movement, an impression has been created in some quarters that the New York club, which is by far the strongest unit in the A. A. C. W., has in some way committed itself in favor of the long route to London," explained a leading figure in the nation's advertising business.

"Quite the contrary situation is the fact. The New York club has not committed itself to London. It is in no way pledged to support the London movement. It never has voted to send the convention to London next year. It never has gone to a convention in its history with its votes in the pocket of any city. It is absolutely unpledged and will vote as its best judgment determines on next Thursday afternoon. It is not "sold" on London. It is unfair to Houston and other American cities to allow an impression to spread that New York is for London."

A STIMULATED EFFORT.

"Would it be correct to say that the membership of the New York club is about evenly divided on the question?" was asked of The Fourth Estate's informant.

"I can not answer for the club's 2,000 members, but I do know that a great many are not at all in accord with all the arguments advanced on behalf of London nor with the high pressure—I almost said, desperate—tactics being employed to create an impression.

DOYLE SAYS HE HAS HEARD FROM BRITISH PUBLISHER'S SPIRIT.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle says he has had a message from Lord Northcliffe's spirit, saying that only a wave of spiritual reform can save the world from plunging headlong into a catastrophe which will make the world war seem insignificant.

"The American people," Lord Northcliffe's message said, "are too busy. That was the mistake I made in my lifetime. I was too busy then, but I understand now that wisdom is lost in the scramble for material progress. When men lose wisdom they invite disaster."

Sir Arthur declared that he also has received other messages from the spiritual world which verified the statements made by Lord Northcliffe's spirit. Some even have gone so far as to predict that the disaster will descend during his lifetime. Sir Arthur said.

CLOSE CONTEST DECLARES, HOUSTON AD MAN.

"While London will attract a great number on account of promising a trip abroad, we have quite a number of things to spring on the delegates to Atlantic City which will be equally as attractive. "With the advertising clubs of the South, Southwestern and Middle West, and Texas, as a solid unit for us, we feel that Houston has more than an even break for landing the convention."—H. C. Howard, President, Houston Advertising Association.

BIBLE VERSE IN NEWSPAPERS.

More than 2,000 newspapers published in America are using passages from the Bible in their editions, according to a report compiled by the Back-to-the-Bible Society, with headquarters in Cincinnati. The number of newspapers served with these verses from the Bible by the bureau has increased from 871 in 1922 to 2,038 in 1923. The report continues:

"The newspapers which the bureau is serving have a combined circulation of 14,233,254, and reliable authorities on newspapers state that if the matter is well displayed and occupies a preferred position in the paper it will be read by at least two persons for each copy in circulation."

The newspapers now being furnished these verses without cost include 1,946 in the United States and its territories; eighty-seven in the Dominion of Canada; two in Newfoundland; two in the West Indies, and one in Korea.

NEW YORK TIMES LEASES NEW PARIS OFFICES.

The New York Times has leased the second floor of the building at 16 Rue de la Paix for its Paris office. This is at the corner of the Rue de la Paix and the Rue Daunou, on the Fifth Avenue of Paris, at the very heart of the French capital, and it is aimed to make it the rendezvous for readers of the Times when in Paris.

The offices will include reception and reading rooms, a news room and the European headquarters of the Times Wide World Photos. The new quarters for the Paris bureau of the Times will be opened in July.

The New York Times will maintain its new connection with Le Matin.

The Linotype Typography Layout Kit

An Aid to the Economical Production of Attractive Printing

This Kit, containing 72 loose leaves, includes:
10 complete borders in Saturday Evening Post size, ready for layout.
10 complete borders in standard magazine page size, ready for layout.
16 sheets of miscellaneous border and decorative material for original designs.
8 sheets of initials (3 different sizes).
8 sheets of type matter, arranged in blocks for pasting up and including Caslon, Scotch, Bodoni, Benedictine, Elzevir, and other faces, in sizes from 6 to 36 point.

It supplies the advertising man with everything needed for making exact working dummies of advertisements or printed matter. He knows beforehand just how the job will look in type. It eliminates guesswork and resetting; for the printer has only to duplicate his layout.

All material shown in the Kit may be obtained through Linotype-equipped printers.

The price of the Kit is $1.00.

The Manual of Linotype Typography

272 Pages of Inspiration and Suggestions for Men Who Plan Printing.

This is an authoritative handbook of the greatest practical usefulness to anyone concerned with the Graphic Arts. It is the work of distinguished craftsmen who have collaborated on it for over seven years under the direction of William Dana Orcutt of the Plimpton Press and Edward E. Bartlett, President of the Bartlett-Orr Press and Director of Linotype Typography.

There is no academic discussion of theory. Every page is devoted to the solution of practical, everyday problems. It consists mainly of examples, each interpreted by brief critical comment and complete specifications.

The Price of the Manual is $10.

A growing tendency of several newspapers to comment unfavorably upon decisions of the supreme court of the United States is to be regretted. Criticisms are freely cast at rulings which appear to run counter to the opinion of the newspapers. The supreme court, as a last resort of appeal, can no longer be regarded as the unimpeachable arbiter of decision. Our public presses, editorial boards, are working in harmony in their criticism of the supreme court. Their opinions, as they are expressed in the printed pages of the newspapers, are little more than the thoughts of the editors or their contributors. It is not the business of newspapers to engage in official criticism, but to portray in a public forum the views of the public. It is the business of the supreme court to decide questions of law. The supreme court is not a legislative body, but an judicial tribunal, and its decisions must be given the weight and respect that they deserve. The supreme court is not subject to criticism, but the public is entitled to see that its decisions are rendered with due regard for the rights of individuals and the public welfare.

The public has become satiated with sensational medical stories. Many old time and reputable newspapers have been placing too much emphasis upon ephemeral retorts from quack doctors. The public is beginning to tire of such stories, and is demanding more substantial and reliable information. Many newspapers are now devoting more space to serious and well-researched articles, and are striving to present a more balanced and objective view of the world of medicine. The public is becoming more discerning in its choice of news sources, and is demanding a higher standard of journalism.

The Pope has nominated St. Francis de Sales to be the patron of journalists, and no editor, however perplexed, could ask for a better than St. Francis. The “man of radiant personality, of incomparable vivacity, of unconquerable optimism; as generous as gentle; uniting a wealth of human sympathy with a profound spirituality; and by the test of journalism, a master of an impid, vivid, enchanting style of writing.” If journalists cared much for a patron-saint, points out the Christian Century of Chicago, they could not ask for a better than St. Francis de Sales. The Pope, in his move to associate the Church with the world of journalism, is making a bold and significant gesture. If journalists strive to emulate the virtues of St. Francis de Sales, they will be well on their way to becoming true servants of the public good.

The price of the London Times recently raised to four cents at different periods is a running comment on European history. It was six cents in the very beginning, in 1785, and rose during the Napoleonic wars to two dollars. The newspaper looked to a poor man as big as fifty cents would now. PRESS OWES DEBT TO MECHANICAL DEVICES.

VETERAN NEWSPAPER MAN DECLARES JOURNALISTIC GROWTH OWES MUCH TO INVENTIVE GENIUS OF PIONEERS IN PERFECTING PRINTING MACHINERY.

While great credit can be given to distinguished editors from the time of Horace Greeley, Henry Watterson and others of their class, for the development of the profession, one must not forget how much is due to the inventive genius and mechanical skill of such men as Hoe, Scott, Potter, Cottrell, Goss, Mergenthaler and others, stated James Martin Miller, newspaper man and author of Washington, D.C., in the school of journalism of the University of Michigan last week. Mr. Miller spoke on the development and progress of the newspaper profession.

"The marvelous typesetting machines and the stereotyping inventions, photo-engraving, and other processes that have developed within a few generations," he said, "made possible the production of the great journals of the country. We owe everything to those great inventors."

AMERICAN GENIUS LEADS.

"Whenever I have heard the clicking of the typesetting machines and the whirr of the great modern appliances in Europe, in Australia and other countries, I knew that I was reminded of the inventive genius and the mechanical skill as developed in the United States of America. We must not forget the progress in clothing as applied to the development of the manufacture of newspaper paper.

"In talking about journalism we are apt to have in mind only the editorial, reporting, advertising, and circulation forces on a great newspaper. The newspaper institution has as many men employed in the mechanical departments of the newspaper as are engaged in the more professional departments.

"The compensation of such men and women often averages greater than in most of the other branches of the profession. That is particularly true in more recent years."

THE ONLY SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM IN HORACE GREELEY'S DAY AND SINCE WAS THE HAND TYPESetting CASE AND THE HAND PRINTING PRESS. MOST EDITORS OF THOSE DAYS WERE PRINTERS.

"The only school of journalism in Horace Greeley's day and since was the hand typesetting case and the hand printing press. Most editors of those days were practical printers, paper publishers. Few editors of the present day are experienced men in the mechanical branches of the newspaper business."

"Schools of journalism in great institutions like this have been organized in very recent years. They seek to establish the calling as a profession, to engage young men and women who have learned the fundamentals of the profession in a school of journalism."

DEAN OF JOURNALISM IN SACRAMENTO REACHES EIGHTIETH YEAR.

H. D. DeGaa, the recognized dean of journalism in the Sacramento Valley, celebrated his eightieth birthday last week. He is the oldest member of the California Press Association, and is known and addressed as "Colonel" or "Dad."

Mr. DeGaa is still in active service and is editor of the Glenn Transcript. He is the oldest member of the California Press Association, and is known and addressed as "Colonel" or "Dad."

Mr. DeGaa was born and educated in Europe as a young man. Until he was twenty-twelve years of age he attended the schools in France, and was afterwards sent to Baden-Baden, Germany. At the age of sixteen he entered the University of Heidelberg, from which he graduated in 1864, leaving at once for America, where his parents had been residing during his attendance at school.

After passing two years in the East and South, Mr. DeGaa went to California, making the journey by way of the Isthmus. He at first engaged in mining, but soon left that occupation and took up the printer's trade, some knowledge of which he had obtained at school. From time to the present, he has followed the business in its various branches.

ST. LOUIS PUBLISHER PAYS TRIBUTE TO TIMES FOR PRINTING THE NEWS.

In an address to the school of journalism of the University of Missouri in Columbia, during journalism week, Frank Glass, publisher of the St. Louis Star and former president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, reviewed the newspaper tendency to comic strips and syndicate matter. He said:

"The competent and satisfactory newspaper left to us is the New York Times. It is the pride of American journalism. It is the most comprehensive record of contemporary events that has ever been printed in the history of the world. It prints the significant news of every state in the nation and every nation in the world."

Dean Williams of the school of journalism declared:

"The students might well take the New York Times as their guide, pattern and example. When the New York Times is mentioned it brings a thrill of pride to every loyal follower of American journalism. It is the fairest, most accurate, most complete of the world's newspapers."

Fifteen copies of the history of the New York Times are in use daily in the school of journalism as a book of instruction.

FLOYD GIBBONS TAKING FLAG TO SAHARA DESERT.

Being on a liner that was torpedoed by a German submarine, getting an eye shot out at the battlefront during the world war and getting himself all bumped up in a horseless car, saving a girl in a automobile and away at Rome last year, couldn't furnish enough thrills for Floyd Gibbons, as he sets out for a new home as the chief of the Chicago Tribune news service turned to the mysterious Sahara desert.

He decided to take the American flag on its first crossing of the 2,000 miles of sand from Colombo, where he was present at the time of the Fourth of July.

The caravan which Floyd commands consists of forty camels, which have changed frequently. All the members of the expedition are armed in case of attack.

W. S. DEMING PAYS TRIBUTE TO PRINTING CRAFTS.

Tribute to the printing crafts was paid by William S. Deming, head of the United States Civil Service Commission, who was the orator at a meeting of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

CONVENTION MAY GO TO WESTERN CITY.

(Continued from Nineteenth Page) sentiment for London. Its mostly the work of four or five New York men. They will not be able to commit the New York club that way."

The spokesman for the wing of the local advertising men who are not "sold" on London, pointed out that the voting strength of the New York unit at Atlantic City will be about 200 votes, which is more than double the largest block, representing any city in the association.

Discussions were held by a number of the directors this week concerning the strenuous efforts being made to capture the convention for London. It was decided to make the New York club's "fair field and no favorites" attitude clear to all.

CHARLES VOTE OF CONFIDENCE.

It was stated that Harry H. Charles, the new president of the local advertising club, will go to Atlantic City, as delegate-at-large, with authority o vote ninety-six ballots of the total voting strength of the New York Iub. This strength in one man's hands is as large as the largest vote from any city at the convention.

The impression grows, it was stated, that some city like Cleveland, Detroit, Buffalo or even Houston will win the designation. So far about the only competition facing London is the little noted activity of Houston's boomers.

New York, regarded as a dark horse earlier in the week, lost ground, it was said, because of the heavy program in building operations before the present officers. It was thought that the new club building would so engage the time and efforts of the New York men that they would be disinclined to add to their burdens next year by shouldering an annual convention. No ad club convention ever has been held in New York but no move will be made to bring it here unless the convention offers it to New York as a compromise suggestion.

W. RAYMOND DERWENT.

"I only wish to express the sentiment of a New Yorker who feels that the New York club could do a great deal to build up the convention. It is only fair to Houston and to our friends from the West and South-west cities to say that New York is not pledged to London," said a leading agency head later in the day. "We are all open minded about the affair. I can assure The Fourth Estate, however, that next Thursday is going to bring the most interesting debate in the association's history. London has a chance of winning but my any guess of New York opinion, it will go to the Middle West, maybe to a city which has as yet been mentioned."

AD CLUBS MEET FOR ARIED PROGRAM

As Atlantic City is on daylight saving time, the convention will be run accordingly. Railroads schedules, however, are run on Standard time. Delegates coming from standard time zones will set their watches forward an hour upon arriving at Atlantic City.

LONDON WANTS ADVERTISING THERE IN 1924 TO PROMOTE GOOD-WILL.

Sir Charles Higham, London advertising man, who visited Milwaukee a year ago as a pioneer in presenting the plan that American Advertising Clubs of the World hold their 1924 convention in London, has cabled his American friends an announcement desiring that the Atlantic City convention may give unanimous approval to meeting across the sea next year.

The dream of his life, writes Sir Charles, is that "the selling and advertising brains of America should collectively come to England." In concluding his message, Sir Charles remarks:

"Whatever the problems of the world are, whether in war or peace, there is no doubt in my mind that the English-speaking people must stand on a common ground, and to a very large extent on a common platform for the good of the world, and as the business man is a pioneer in most movements that better mankind and I see no reason why London another feather in the cap for those people who are proud to be known as business men and women."

SEATTLE ADVERTISING MEN HEAR UNIVERSITY HEAD.

"The art of writing, which gradually became more complete as people learned the art of writing. From writing came printing, and now the latest stage in publicity has arrived with the development of wireless and radio which eliminates the elements of time and space."

PAUL FAUST TELLS HOW RUSH HOUR OF HUMAN HISTORY IS MADE POSSIBLE BY THE CONTINUOUS AND CONSTANT USE OF TRUTHFUL ADVERTISING.

Did you ever stop to think what the present world's work would do without advertising? It would have to slow up, that's all. It would make money less rapidly and live slower lives generally. You don't enrich life by slowing up, writes Paul E. Faust of the Mitchell-Faust Advertising Co. of Chicago...

OLD TIME PAPER SCOPS DEFY BEATS TODAY

NINETY MEN SET BY HAND THE ENTIRE NEW TESTAMENT IN EIGHT HOURS IN RECORD JOURNALIST FEAT BY CHICAGO TRIBUNE 40 YEARS AGO.

Daring undertakings like publishing the entire text of the new testament or sending a Stanley to darkest Africa to tap the sources of the Nile have, it seems, not as characteristic of the big newspapers as one might suppose. In 1861, the modern newspaper was more painstaking in collating its news.

These comparisons are adduced by Michael Colbert to an interesting historical and technical difficulty with which the Chicago Tribune overcame when it set the new testament by the project of a Stanley from and back in 1881.

It seems that the revision of the Bible was undertaken in 1870 by a group of British and American scholars, and that early in the World's revision of the new testament was completed. Interest in the revision being intense, Chicago paper directors determined to publish the revised text, and dispatched a representative to London to secure two copies of the book.

The messenger arrived in New York with the books on a certain Thursday and reached Chicago on the following Saturday morning. Preparations had been made in anticipation of his arrival, and about 7 a.m., the entire composing room force of the Tribune, consisting of sixty-two "case holders" and perhaps thirty "subs," assembled and went to work on the copy. That was before the days of mechanical composition and when all type was set by hand.

Eight hours or more were required to put the new testament into type, the work of composition being completed about 7 p.m. From this time on the men immediately turned to their regular work of setting in type, which kept them at their cases until four o'clock the following morning, as they worked under a stretch of more than seventeen hours.

MADE A 16-PAGE SUPPLEMENT.

The new testament text made a supplement of sixteen pages added to the regular addition of twenty pages. It was an unprecedented feat. Never before had a daily paper of thirty-six pages been set up and printed in less than twenty-four hours.

Mr. Colbert supplies some details which illustrate some differences between the conditions in the newspaper composing room of forty-two years ago and those existing in the composing room of today.

The men worked by the piece, the rate of pay being forty cents per 1,000 ems. The force of a Stanley may not yet become the requirement, and neither was price and one-half per box for the same. The force of composing included some fast typesetters. The average man set nearly 25,000 ems in the eighteen hours' work, the next best 25,000, and the rest of the force had 24,000 to 18,000 ems. Thus the high man received less than eleven dollars for eighteen hours' work, while the low man's compensation was about $7.50.

That was considered satisfactory compensation in 1881, but it is scarcely necessary to say that it would not be considered in 1923.

GOLF BACKGROUND FOR VAST AD CAMPAIGNS.

MILLIONS EXPENDED WITH GAME AS ADVERTISING BACKGROUND FOR VARIETY OF HIGH GRADE PRODUCTS—RECEIVES MORE PUBLICITY THAN ANY OTHER SPORT.

"Advertising is compelled to follow the line of least resistance. Like a sort of strange chameleon, it must take its color from that which is nearest. If nine-tenths of the people in any community, people worth mention, are playing, talking and dreaming golf, then golf must be the best advertising campaign. The association of ideas is a healthy one, for, says W. Livingston Larned, well-known advertising man, in the American Golfer, writing on the subject of golf in advertising, this is the advertising man's point of view.

"Advertising and golf," continues Mr. Larned, "is that so many boards of directors have had an advertising man to choose their dictionaries. The modern manufacturer is not willing to lay down $100,000 a year for advertising his products, is looked upon as a piker in the advertising generation. However, it has slowly percolated into human consciousness that if you want to sell a thing, you must tell folks about it—not a family party, in your own ballroom, but the nation, perhaps, even the world.

"If it is true, as certain old-line, die-hards claim, that advertising increases the cost to the consumer, then 1923 has produced the most marvelous crop of stark mad financiers, manufacturers and businessmen in general, the history of this country has ever known.

"We are concerned for the moment with golf and the marvelous fact that it is, by long odds, the best advertised game. We are perfectly willing to stand the statement and claim that if all the advertising golf received by the department of human progress or another, could be summed up, put down in figures, and checked on a sublime balance sheet, sealed and approved by some bank accountant, take would be found that the high amount of money spent to advertise golf, as represented in terms of making it the theme, the heart and the soul of publicity for entirely irrelevant campaigns, would exceed any advertising expenditure for any cause, product, soap or set of ear-muffs.

"Now this is a daring thing to say. Some advertisers spend two or three hundred thousand dollars a year, and tighten their belts, while planning to make a more next season. They do it because it pays. But if Smith, Brown & Co. want to advertise a new patentable frying pan of pure aluminum, the firm must shell out the coin of the realm. They plan and think and plan on a shovel, scientific financing. Every frying pan sold must give some part of its consumer price to those mediums which carry its advertising story.

WITHOUT CHARGE.

"Golf, save in a few well defined instances, is not called upon to pay a penny for the vast, tractless, un-expurgated campaign which has recently spread over the country, in its high reputation as a literary publication because of the pens of the two associate editors. Robert Charles Sands and John Inman, "the erudite and classicist" and William Cullen Bryant and the elder James Gordon Bennett entered the field in this way. The great editors began.

Francis X. McDougal Stone in 1884, and during his editorship came the great struggle between the established paper and the 新 paper, which for the first time invaded the New York field. The papers of long standing referred to the new ones as "penny trash" and the penny press, alluding to the vast length and breadth of its older rivals, called them "our bedfellows." Journalism in New York was soon more ferocious than it was in 1842, when Dickens gathered his materials for his satirical pictures in American Notes and Martin Chuzzlewit.

CIVIL WAR.

The morning papers nearly monopolized the news field during the civil war. The conception that printing news was the profession of journalism was not realized until the crisis. The paper in 1867, but remained with the paper only a year, a year enlivened by an affair of scandal between himself and Horace Greeley.

DAYS WHEN EDITORS BATTLED.

"To show the character of New York journalism at this time," said Dr. Lee, in an extended and detailed account of the history of the Times, "we saw the fighting of the press," to recall a typical incident. Greeley was forever fighting the papers, and, as a matter of fact, both he and his paper are doubtless because of his opposition to his political aspirations. Through the columns of the Times appeared the name of William Hurlbert, named the Commercial Advertiser in 1863. Thurlow Weed, one of the giants of the day, says he decided the war. He was "Hurlbert in 1867, but remained with the paper only a year, a year enlivened by an affair of scandal between himself and Horace Greeley.

HIGH STANDARD AND NOT TECHNICAL EFFICIENCY IS PARAMOUNT — STRESSES POWER OF PUBLICITY FOR JUSTICE AND GOOD.

Public criticism is not directed at the technical efficiency of journalism, but at its strength or weakness judged by its ability to perform the task it sets itself to do. Journalism has gained steadily in circulation and in advertising patronage and we have no reason for withdrawing from our undertaking.

After the death of Mr. Shillaber, Mr. Searles appointed William Shillaber, Jr., treasurer of the paper. Arthur T. Walker, confidential clerk to Mr. Searles, inherited the business and he was on the death of his employer in 1920. Mr. Walker delegated control of the business to Mr. Searles and Mr. Rogers, who have conducted the Globe Commercial Advertiser up to the present time.

The Globe celebrated its one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary February 9, 1894. A series of meetings on its long and useful career poured in from all parts of this country and from some of its European contemporaries.

DEFENDS BUREAU AS SERVICE TO COMMUNITY.

Editor, The Fourth Estate. Sir: In announcing the results of research conducted at the Forest Products Laboratory we occasionally mention what we recognize as natural antipathy to news that seems to editors to suggest the "bluff" or "puff" of space-seeking paid-advertising dodge sales campaigns. For this reason we emphasize that the Forest Products Laboratory, Forest Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, exists to further study and experiment, and co-operation with industry and the public that will lead to the wise use of wood and wood products.

A few days ago the section of publication of results of the Forest Products Laboratory issued a news note that concerned the causes of swelling and shrinking of doors. This note was returned by one newspaper stating that it cannot understand the need for paid advertising and would be run at card rates, if desired.

We hope that you will think it worth while to bring to the notice of newspaper editors the fact that the work of the forest service, and in other cases the work of the Forest Products Laboratory is a factor that operates to increase the supply of news-print, and the efficient use of our forests.

WHAT NEWS MUST DAILY PAPERS CARRY?

WHEN MEN AND WOMEN NO LONGER SIN, GOOD NEWS PAPERS WILL BE RELIEVED OF DUTY OF RECORDING WHAT MEN SAY AND DO, IS AN EDITOR'S VIEW.

The question addressed to the Detroit News by the Rev. L. M. Blakely is one every conscientious journalist has ruefully asked himself ever since the beginning of publicity. With the same earnestness a pastor might sigh for the day when he could dispense with reading the daily paper and could omit the prayers for sinners.

In either case it can be little more than a pious aspiration, since both church and press deal with conditions in the same fashion. Today, however, it has to be said that it is primarily the handmaiden of history; day by day it records the doings of men; and sin, it realizes, does not vanish because unremarked. Society eliminates sin by detecting and denouncing it.

The newspaper is a reporter of events. If it does not do so, it evades its duty. But if it searches out crime, it is its duty to inform, to comment, to publish. For that is the weapon of reform and the newspaper's watchful contribution to good living.

THE LULL OF FALSE SCRUTINy.

The newspaper, whose ethical principles are sound, knows that it is its duty to inform Mr. Blakely each day of the truth as it has been revealed to him and find their place for the scrutiny and judgment of society. For that is the weapon of reform and the newspaper's watchful contribution to good living.

OREGON EDITORS TO MEET AT HOO D RIVER IN JULY

The Oregon Editorial Association will hold its annual convention at Hood River, opening on July 13. Elbert Bede, the president, and H. E. Hoss, the secretary, are in charge of the arrangements. The meeting will be held coincident with the annual Mooniet Hood climb to the Hood River American Legion Post.

Following a banquet Friday night at the Columbia Gorge Hotel, the editors will motor on Saturday morning with the legion party to a base camp at the foot of the mountain. There the convention will be held and on Saturday night the editors will join in the July jinks of the legionnaires around a camp fire. One of the high points of the convention will be J. Adam Bede, ex-representative in congress from Minnesota, and father of President Elbert Bede.

The Indianapolis News

Frank T. Carroll, Advertising Manager
New York: Dan A. Carroll, 160 Nassau St.
Chicago: J. E. Lutz, The Tower Building

The only newspaper in Indianapolis with a staff made up entirely of women and a pastor in the combined role of editor-in-chief, city editor and manager, has grown in five years from a single page, 8x12 inches in size, circulated free, to a full grown community newspaper with 750 paid subscribers, more advertisers than it knows what to do with, and all of the "departments" of a regular newspaper.

The staff of the Lynnhurst Herald is made up entirely of women selected to their present positions on the paper from St. Luke's Church. The staff makes up its lack of journalistic training by aggressiveness, "hustling" and enthusiasm, according to Rev. Frederick D. Tyner, who, as "city editor," ought to know.

In addition to its regular departments of society, church news, general news and homemakers department, the Herald is also the official organ of the Lynnhurst association.

At election time it carries election advertising. It has editorials on subjects of current interest, and even an occasional feature story and contributed news.

BIGGEST LEMON IS HANDED IN NORTH DAKOTA EDITOR.

What is probably the biggest lemon ever handed to any person in Grand Forks, N. D., was presented to the editor of the Grand Forks Herald by a friend upon his return from Hernando, Cal. The one lemon is large enough to make lemonade for a large family of very thirsty youngsters. The big piece of sour fruit measures seven and one-half inches long and one-inch in diameter, and in style, build, complexion and general appearance resembles the average lemon.

The lemon is on display at the Herald business office.

In an article entitled "The Hospital and the Newspaper" which will appear in the June number of the Medical Record, Dr. Russell Kelker points out to hospitals ways to help the press get the news. He impresses upon the reader the necessity of a spirit of co-operation and declares that representatives of the press and of the hospital, if the hospital is willing to help them function in that role. Suggesting some ways of helping the press, Mr. Kelker says:

"Representatives of the press are called upon to cover every conceivable kind of news. It is reasonable to assume that they do not have technical knowledge concerning everything with which they are confronted. It is wise, therefore, to have someone appointed to act as interpreter to them, that is, to put into every-day language the jargon of hospitals. It is not enough that the hospital shall have any kind of a story. It must be the kind of story that the public will be interested in. Ordinary events of hospital life, it is true, are of interest to the public, but the substance of what many of them say is of general interest if put in the language of the street."

"Especially is an interpreter needed when a new hospital is opened or when a new hospital building is being erected. Have some one on the job who is thoroughly conversant with the purpose of the convention. He should be familiar with the personnel of the gathering. Data concerning what each one does and how important his work is can be in the hand of a typist." A typist 'who's who' with suggestive information concerning the officers and speakers should be prepared for the press in advance. He should in addition to the addresses of the officers and speakers in the front of the building be delivered and furnish them to reporters and editors before the convening of the convention. By marking a release date (day and hour) all deliverers of their appearing prematurely is obviated.

"Photographs of the speakers should be sent by telegram. Arrangements should be made so that the newspaper publishers may secure pictures of the convention proceedings. It is always of interest to the press. Letters should be provided for reporters in the front of the building and telephones service when desired. If a banquet is a part of the program, remember that in attendance. There is over 200,000 people every day in the New York Times.

The Indiana Daily Student, a morning paper with Associated Press service published by the students in the department of journalism at Indiana University, is printed in the official paper for the 1923 Indiana state fair by the fair state board of directors. The student paper was published at the state fair last year. The popularity of state fair papers among visitors and officials led to the recommendation that the plan be adopted this year.

Plans are under way to have the paper printed on the grounds as part of the Indiana newspaper exhibit. There will be 10,000 copies distributed daily, 200 a day more than last year, and the paper will have at least eight pages every issue.

Professor J. W. Piercy, head of the journalism department, will be in charge of the publication and Pro- fessor Claude M. Venable, director of publicity, will be one of the supervising directors. J. W. Piercy, instructor in journalism, will be supervising editor. W. L. Reeves, present business manager of the Daily Student, will be the business manager. The editor-in-chief and editorial staff will be selected upon merit of their work before the end of the present school year.

The office of the State Fair Student was an object of unusual interest to state fair visitors last year who watched the reporters typing their stories and the copyeditors editing them. Reporters were assigned to beat the heat beats over the fair grounds.

Stories of the different exhibits, results of the races and contests, and a program of the day's activities gave the paper interest for all who were at the fair.

The program of the annual convention of Pacific Coast Advertising Clubs, in Spokane, June 17 to 21, is made to play. The sketch will be presented at the convention by Mr. Carl F. Lander. The sketch is based on truth in advertising and will be presented by a cast containing prominent advertising men and women of San Francisco.

PROGRAM DATA NEEDED IN RADIO COLUMN.

(Continued from Sixteenth Page) Most radio editors have been recruited from the ranks of amateurs or technical experts; it is quite natural that the present radio columns should tend to be technical.

To present technical matter is not, however, the function of the newspaper; that phase should be confined to the magazine and review. Radio science is well supplied with excellent magazines and there is no reason for newspapers attempting this function.

If the radio editor's desire to include technical matter must be satisfied, let it be simple A B C articles in one syllable language dealing with the basic principles of radio, and up-to-date!

MORE PROGRAM DATA.

Of much greater interest and of much greater importance than technical matter is advance information on coming programs of importance. Broadcasting stations arrange the finest kind of programs of the highest class of artists and the only notice they receive is the program printed the morning and evening of the day on which it is rendered. For this reason many persons are disappointed, having made previous arrangements which would have been avoided had they known that particular broadcast had been scheduled.

This statement is not based on guesswork. WEF, the broadcasting station of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in New York City, recently received 500 letters each month. Many of these request advance programs, because the newspapers publish so-called "great" programs. Usually, the critical programs, that is, criticism by an experienced way that musical and dramatic performances are criticised.

In the radio broadcasting, not only is the artist's performance a suitable subject for discussion, but the quality of reproduction by broadcasting station is just as important, particulary in the case of remote installations; that is, when broadcasting is received from points outside the broadcasting stations. The number of pages and cost by the broadcasting station is not so important; it controls the transmission. The good work of successful installations is as worthy of praise as the greatest artistic feat or the splendid performance of an artist. Poor work is placement of the instruments in a band is as subject to criticism quite as just as inartistic work in any kind of public performance.

A radio column featuring programs and criticizing them will undoubtedly bring the largest and increasing radio news reading public.

FOREST EXPERTS

FEAR TIMBER SCARCITY.

BRITISH COMMISSION WARNS THAT VIRGIN FORESTS ARE BEING RAPIDLY WORKED OUT—PEOPLE URGED TO TAKE BROAD VIEW OF FORESTRY PROBLEMS.

An interesting fact is that many of the countries fear a world scarcity of timber, before many years pass. The British Forestry Commission, who say that the results will be more disastrous to the United Kingdom than to any other country. The virgins forests are being worked out for more rapidly than they are being reseeded.

Another warning that forestry experts in many lands fear a world scarcity of timber before many years pass. They are taking steps to ascertain what reserves are available and how long they are likely to last; but foresters say there can be little doubt that the near future the British Government will have to choose between resuming the extensive planting program adopted by Parliament at the close of the war and running the risks of deforestation.

The commission urges the people to take a broad view of the problems, pointing out that the reasons which make necessary the maintenance of the forestry commission are not evanescent, but arise from world-wide conditions.

OBITUARIES.
SHIP NEWS REPORTER DIES
IN PARIS ON FIRST TRIP ABROAD.

Harold I. Smith fifty-nine years old, dean of New York ship news reporters and known to his fellow workers as "Judge," died Thursday in Paris, according to a radiogram received by the New York Detachment of the Newspaper Association, by which he was employed. Mr. Smith went to Paris on his first trip to Europe. The Fourth Estate in its issue that week carried a picture of Mr. Smith along with a sketch of his interesting career.
Mr. Smith served thirty years on the New York waterfront after coming to New York from Bedford,
Mass. He was born on Palmer's
Island, in the harbor of New Bedford.
Mass. His forebears were owners and sailing masters of clipper ships.
Instead of going to sea, the "Judge"
went into newspaper work.
He was once ship news editor on the Boston Advertiser. From the Hub he came to New York and was with the Herald. For fifteen years the Owl, the daily, the Herald, plied the bay with "Judge." Smith abjured and came back with stories that made the Herald's ship news page the peer of any in the country. For the past several years he has handled ship news for the City News Association.
His sobriquet of "Judge" was earned when he became a Justice of the Peace of Pompton Township, N.
J. several years ago. He held the first night court in that state.
Mr. Smith owned a 135-acre farm in Bethel, Ct., on which he made his home.

DEAN OF MICHIGAN EDITORS
DIES WHILE ON WAY HOME
IN ST. LOUIS.

W. B. Weston, seventy-five years old, dean of newspapermen in Grand Tenn. Death came to Mr. Weston while he was on his way back from St. Petersburg, Fla., where he had spent the last three winters. He stopped in Chattanooga to visit a brother,

C. E. Weston, and was taken ill there. Mr. Weston was born in Warren, Mich., in 1844, and fought through the Civil War, being discharged from the service at South Bend, Ind.

HANDLING OBITUARY NOTICES
FRANKLY AND TRUTHFULLY.

"Has the time arrived, is it arriving, or will it ever arrive when a newspaper or a clergyman may successfully and without molestation handle obituary notices as a durable and profitable business, with ungloved hands?" asks Will Chamberlain in his Wayside Notes column in the Sioux City Journal. "I discussed this question with a friendly newspaper man who thinks such a state of the public mind is quite clearly manifesting itself. Perhaps many still think that the thorn in death's floral emblems should not be in evidence. Others hold that a closed life which had been void of worthy deeds should be, at least, not be flouted as exemplary. There is a decided tendency among newspaper men not to call a silver tag a golden one, nor a pewter tag a silver one in demise chronicles."

Baltimore

is eagerly looking forward to the day when our distinguished friends,—the British delegates to the A.A.C.W. Convention at Atlantic City,—will visit this city.

Justly proud of being the fastest growing seaport in the United States, Baltimore realizes what great advantages her facilities for international commerce offer, and is anxious to have our London friends realize it too.

Fifty-five overseas steamship services reaching one hundred foreign ports make Baltimore a strong commercial influence in the great markets of the world.

Eighteen coastwise steamship lines link Baltimore with Southern and Pacific ports, affording a concentration of rail and water transportation at the most strategic point on the Atlantic coast; in fact, recent census figures show that forty-three percent of the manufactured products of the United States are located in states connected with Baltimore by rail routes that are shorter than to any other ports—a big item in estimating freight rates.

Closely allied with the mighty forward strides that Baltimore is making, are The News and The American, Baltimore's two pioneer papers in their respective fields. These papers, going into practically every buying home in Baltimore and close vicinity, are strongholds of power and influence in promoting the best interests of city and state.

In welcoming our distinguished London guests to America, The News and The American urge heartily—visit Baltimore! Not only will our welcome be cordial and sincere, but the vision which these "Men of Vision" will get of still stronger commercial relationships with America which Baltimore as the logical point of contact can provide, offers prospect of undreamed-of possibilities for the business future both of their country and of ours.

EVENING PAPERS IN A RACE FOR GLOBE READERS

INTERESTING EXCHANGE OF VIEWS ENLIVEN STAID NEW YORK CITY FIELD—END ISN'T IN SIGHT WITH PUZZLE OF WHO GETS GLOBE'S 200,000 CIRCULATION.

New York is now witnessing the amusing spectacle of its evening newspapers in a mad scramble to obtain the close to 200,000 circulation which Frank Munsey assumed he was buying when he paid a sum said to be $2,300,000 for the New York Globe and Commercial Advertiser. Although it is known that Mr. Munsey's main objective in purchasing the Globe was to obtain its membership in the Associated Press and his place in the Associated Newspapers of the World, it is assumed that the Globe's circulation books, with the various news and feature departments included in the sale, but the other New York evening newspapers, or some of them, do not appear to share this opinion.

With the announcement of the sale of the Globe, the various competing newspapers embarked upon a three-month scramble to obtain the closest to 200,000 circulation.

The exchange of views that has been made an interesting feature of the new newspaper period has brought things to a head, however, and the battle is not yet at an end. It is expected that the struggle will continue until the end of the year.

DAWSON AND MCCANN AMONG NEW WRITERS ON THE N. Y. MAIL.

Alan Dawson has been made associate editor of the New York Evening Mail. Mr. Dawson until February of this year was assistant editor of the New York Tribune for four years. During that time he had been associate editor of the New York Globe in charge of the evening page of the paper.

AIRPLANE BRINGS NEW YORK TIMES TO AD MEN.

DELEGATES AT ATLANTIC CITY RECEIVE 2,250 COPIES FOR BREAKFAST 100 MINUTES AFTER PAPERS LEAVES PRESS—DELIVERY TO CONTINUE THROUGH MEETING.

In little more than an hour after the big presses in the New York Times annex had hummed down to a stop, 2,250 copies of the paper were at the disposal of delegates to the Advertising Clubs of the World at Atlantic City.

This was due to a Times airplane special which flew down the coast at an average speed of better than 150 miles an hour, inaugurating a Times airplane delivery which was continued until Thursday, the closing day of the convention. The actual flying time for the 110 mile trip was less than an hour.

The feat evoked a united chorus of praise from the advertising men.

SAYS ADVERTISING IS POWER FOR WORLD PEACE.

Paying a strong tribute to advertising for its power in creating favorable influence, Fred B. Smith of Johns-Manville, Inc., New York, told the delegates at the A.A.C.W. convention at Atlantic City that advertising is the life blood of commerce, a democratizing influence which is reducing the world to one community in the sense of the United Nations.

"The appeal of advertising," he said, "is a common appeal, uniting all classes, making a world of buyers, not of sellers. It makes a world of consumers, not of producers.

The advertising association "one of the most forceful agencies in the world of peace and good will to all men," he said. "If one man dies in a war, another has died who might have lived. It makes war impossible.

The advertising association is a forceful agency for definite and spiritual objectives of humanity—ad men can do much to foster goodwill.

TRIBUNE FUND HELPS INJURED MAN.

How a newspaper may play the good Samaritan is illustrated in the story of a streetcar motorman, who, staying at his post when brakemen lost their grip, saved the lives of many passengers, though he himself was injured.

The young man, left with permanent injuries, having no other trade to turn to after the loss of his legs, was in despair. A letter was written to the Tribune, and the next step was to bring his case to the attention of the newspaper.

Colonel George Harvey, former managing editor of the World, announced this week his intention of having the story of the motorman's sacrifice published in the Tribune and of making a donation to the man.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENTS SOON GO TO ALASKA AND "BIG SHIP" CRUISE.

The "shocktroops" of the ranks of Washington correspondents, who have experienced a lull in their periodical outings since the President left for Florida, will be up to their mark on March 4 of the following year, when Warren G. Harding became president.

The second effort employed to attain the circulation Mr. Munsey, had assumed he would swing to the combined Sun and Globe, was large advertising. The Globe New York morning newspapers, in which each advertising evening newspaper appeared to claim itself the prestige once enjoyed by the Globe.

That it never occupies alone a field so clearly divided with another evening newspaper—the field of liberal, optimistic, public-service opinion—has been amply demonstrated in the Evening Mail. The Evening Mail is in full-page advertisements.

The Evening World, being so obviously successful, is attracting a large number of subscribers. The paper is well known for its fair treatment of all sides of the question. It is the daily newspaper of the city, and its circulation is steadily increasing.

Saturday there were three liberal evening newspapers in New York, the Daily News, the Sunday Times, and the Evening Post. Today there are two.

Meanwhile, the Evening Post, although it has not joined in the circulation race, has somewhat timorously been advertising the qualifications of its circulation. It has been building up its circulation by free publicity, from the fact that it has been selling out for a long time on a small circulation.

To add fuel to the flames, Arthur W. Brown, the Evening Post, has taken up the cudgels in Mr. Munsey's behalf. Declaring that in combining the Globe with the Sun, Mr. Munsey has violated the spirit of agreement, he is continuing his battle for the friendship of the press.

HOLLAND RE-ELECTED

HOUSTON WITHDRAWS FROM CONTEST FOR 1924 MEETING—BITTER FIGHT MARKS PRESIDENCY CAMPAIGN—LEADERSHIP OF NEWSPAPERS AS AD MEDIA IS STRESSED.

Lou E. Holland of Kansas City was re-elected president and London was chosen for the 1924 meeting of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at the nineteenth annual convention which ended Thursday at Atlantic City where the rise of newspaper columns as the most effective media for national advertisers again was emphasized. The entire field of advertising was discussed by scores of speakers at the general sessions, the inter-departmental sessions and the departmental meetings. With more than 5,000 delegates from many parts of the world in attendance the Atlantic City convention surpassed in size and in scope of its activities any held previously by the associated advertising clubs.

Mr. Holland’s re-election was closely contested by friends of Homer J. Buckley of Chicago. Considerable bitterness developed between the rival adherents in campaigning for their favorites. Mr. Buckley was nominated by the general assembly by a vote of 19 to 14. The Hollanders charged that the nomination was railroaded through as the result of unfair and secret action and that no discussion was permitted before the nomination.

JOINT ASSEMBLY FORMED BY A.A.C.W. DEPARTMENTS AND CLUB PRESIDENTS.

The Joint Assembly, a new and important body in the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, was formed Monday when members of the various departments of the national advertising commission and club presidents from the various geographic districts of the Associated Advertising Clubs elected their members of the assembly. The following club presidents were elected to sit on the assembly for their respective districts:

First, Chester I. Campbell, Boston; second, Fred D. Fox, Richmond; third, Charles Rosenthal, Chattanooga, Tenn.; fourth, Bennett Chapole, Middletown, Ohio; fifth, Howard Harrington, Moline, Ill.; sixth, Walter R. Wiegman, St. Louis; seventh, R. E. Cole, Fargo, N. D.; eighth, Victor Martin, Davenport, Iowa; ninth, H. C. Howard, Houston, Tex.; eleventh, Henry H. Fawcett, Columbus, Ohio; twelfth, Carman Smith, Los Angeles; thirteenth, Oregon, Washington and Alaska; fourteenth, Europe, no election; fifteenth, H. S. Van Scoyoc, Montreal, Canada; sixteenth, Hugh Paton, Sydney, Australia.

Simultaneously, representatives of the various departments of the National Advertising Commission, at the Traymore Hotel, elected their representatives as follows:

A. A. C. W. ATTAINS CO-ORDINATION, HOLLAND SAYS.

DEScribes STRONG TENDENCY AMONG VARIOUS DIVISIONS OF ASSOCIATION TOWARD UNITY FOR GENERAL GOOD.

Lou E. Holland, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, speaking at the opening business session of the convention at Atlantic City, particularly emphasized the strong tendency during the last few months toward coordination of effort among the various divisions of the advertising association showing how they have been, as before, working as one united for the general good of all advertising.

Mr. Holland also described the move to coordinate the efforts of the Associated Advertising Clubs with other important national and international organizations and particularly the International Rotary.

“An arrangement has been perfected,” he said, “whereby the International Rotary will cooperate very closely with our national vigilance committee and our forty-two business bureaus in important cities of the United States, for the effective distribution of information concerning cases of untruthful or deceptively advertising which is being handled by our vigilance committee. We also have the co-operation of chambers of commerce in hundreds of cities, as well as banks and banking organizations and, of course, we have and have had for years very close co-operation of a most effective and important characters from the newspapers.

Mr. Holland showed also that the speakers bureau of the Associated Advertising Clubs is carrying to all parts of the country the message of their association to various departments and how this tendency to coordinate the work of every division of the association.

THE CLOSE of the first four months of 1923 finds THE WORLD first among all the newspapers of Greater New York in advertising gains, with a total increase of 690,639 lines, or 367,123 lines—the equivalent of 113%—in excess of the gains of its nearest competitor.

For ten consecutive months, THE WORLD outdistanced all other newspapers in the New York field in the matter of gains. Its increase for the first four months of the year was:

13.0% over the corresponding period last year, as against a gain for the field of 5.9%.
44.0% of the combined gains of the seven morning papers of the city.
22.1% of the combined gains of the fourteen morning, Sunday and evening papers of New York.

Not only did THE WORLD stand first in the actual lineage gained, but its percentage of increase surpassed that of any other New York morning newspaper with one exception, a tabloid picture paper.

In National Advertising, THE WORLD gained 106,332 lines, or 14.9%; and in Classified Advertising, an incontestible indication of its usefulness as a medium, its increase was 47%, by far the greatest ratio of gain in either morning or evening fields.

TWENTY-FIFTH CONVENTION TO TAKE PLACE AT MUSKOKA LAKES, CANADA, AND WILL LAST THREE DAYS — TOPICS OF IMPORTANCE ARE SLATED FOR DISCUSSION.

The twenty-fifth anniversary convention and Silver Jubilee meeting of the International Circulation Managers' Association will take place on June 19, 20, and 21, at the Royal Muskoka Hotel, Muskoka Lakes, Canada. The beautiful surroundings of the lake and wood country are ideal for a pleasurable vacation, but the business end of the gathering is by no means to be overlooked.

The three days during which the association will convene will be filled with action, discussion and round table talks. Among other topics, prominent place is devoted to distribution problems, and to these will be added such subjects as "How can the whole organization be used in public relations?" There is also the ever present important fact that is sure to receive consideration from every point of view.

Advertisements planned by the Program Committee, will be punctuated by general discussions and special talks where members will be free to explain their individual experiences and point of view. "For many years," says T. J. Dowling of the Press, Cleveland, "Newspaper advertising is most effective publicity."

"Advertisements in the local newspapers form, and will continue to form, the most effective medium of publicity," said Philip H., Gard, vice-president of the United Gas Improvement Company, of Philadelphia, at the formal opening of the Utilities Advertising Association of the convention.

In publications I do not mean advertisements of gas ranges, electrical appliances, etc., but statements to be made which refer to the company's affairs, communications by way of paid advertisements to the public and talks to the consumer."

DATE SET FOR ASSOCIATED DAILIES MEETING.

The summer meeting of the New York Associated Dailies will be held on Friday, July 6, opening at ten o'clock at the Hotel Statler, Buffalo, N. Y., the meeting having been arranged to work in conjunction with the annual meeting of the New York State Press Association to be held at the same place on July 6 and 7 and with the state tour of the National Editorial Association which starts from Buffalo on July 8 or 9.

Reports of the legislative committee on co-operation, field secretary and school discussion and the many timely topics of interest that will be raised and serve to make the meet-

SAYS BANK ADVERTISEMENTS INCREASE IN NEWSPAPERS.

"Many large banks in all sections have materially increased both the frequency and the size of their newspaper advertisements during the last two years," W. W. Douglass, Bank of Italy, San Francisco and president of the Financial Advertisers Association, said at Atlantic City. Most banking magazines now regularly include advertisements as a special section, which he said is the result of advertising as a vital part of the business of many financial institutions.

"This does not mean that American banks are growing noisy and blatant in their advertisements. But it does mean that there has been a complete revolution in the relationship of the banks to the public. It was once the most remote and remote of institutions with which the everyday citizen had to do dealings. But it is rapidly becoming the most intimate and approachable."

N. E. N. A. WARNS IT MAY QUIT AD CLUBS

NEWSPAPER EXECUTIVES HOLD PROPER CONSIDERATION NOT GIVEN THEM ON ATLANTIC CITY PROGRAM; WOULD BENEFIT BY MOVE. CARROLL IS ELECTED PRESIDENT.

Asserting that proper attention had not been given their departmental sessions in the official convention program, officers and directors of the National Association of Newspaper Executives at their annual dinner in Atlantic City hinted at a withdrawal from membership in the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. Discussions along similar lines also were evident at Milwaukee last year when the general sessions locked the door on the N.A.N.E., but finally permitted the newspaper executives to participate when the affiliated organizations threatened to withdraw. The N.A.N.E. at that time was promised that it could hold five sessions this year, its officers declared.

EVENING MAIL NOT SOLD, DECLARES STODDARD.

DENIES RUMOR—WANTS THE PROPERTY TO BE PART OF HIS ESTATE WHEN GREAT DAY COMES. AGREES IN EXPRESSIONS OF PRESIDENT HARDING.

There is no foundation to reports that the New York Evening Mail may be sold to Frank A. Munsey or anyone else, it was stated this week.

When asked about the rumor by The Fourth Estate, Henry L. Stoddard, owner of the Evening Mail made the following statement:

"There is nothing to the rumor. There is no remotest possibility of the property being sold. I share fully President Harding's statement regarding the Marion Star when he said that he deeply desired that when the Great Days come for him that the Marion Star be found in his estate, I have no desire and purpose as to the Evening Mail. Evening Mail since the elimination of the Globe has passed the circulation figure of 200,000. How much over that the actual circulation would be is difficult to determine at this time."

"The editorial department of the paper has been greatly strengthened by the addition of Allan Dawson, Alfred W. McCann, Walte St. Denis, Mrs. Laura Comstock Dunlap and William Hard."

DOWN WITH "CIRCUS" ADS SAY MERCHANTS.

Thirty-six of the most prominent business firms in Columbus have pledged themselves to end the day of the "circus press agent" in advertising.

A definite code of honor, establishing beyond argument what will constitute honesty in the daily business of trade to the buyers of the city, has been adopted this week by the Ohio Advertisers Society. The newspaper and the agency of the advertisers is to call a spade a spade.

For instance, the phrase "Biggest Bargains in Columbus. Unmatchable Values," "The Greatest Sale in America" and similar inexact descriptions are forbidden.

It was left to the president to appoint three members of the national commission later as well as to point the committee on agency relations. The nominations later will take up the election of the various state vice-presidents.

A resolution was passed in appreciation of Mr. Shuman's work during his administration. Charles Miller, the American, in behalf of the organization, presented the retiring executive with silver coffee and tea service. He jokingly remarked that the only criticism of Mr. Shuman's administration was that the organization had $2,800 to its credit, although it was not the purpose of the organization to make money but to spend as much as it could on good advertising. Mr. Miller also made a plea to the members to do everything in their power to aid the new president in his work in furthering the good of the organization.

A motion was adopted favoring the appointment of a committee to place the newspaper point of view before the various departments of the A.A.C.W. This phase, the organization declared, has lacked attention from the present convention program.

The organization decided to hold a newspaper departmental meeting after the A.A.C.W. convention in London in 1924.

ROGERS' STAY WITH MUNSEY ORGANIZATION WAS BRIEF.

When Frank A. Munsey bought the Saturday Evening Post and Commercial Advertiser, Jason Rogers was in charge of the business end of the transactions. Rogers was won over to New York by a lucrative contract. Mr. Munsey sought to continue this contract putting Rogers in charge of the Post and the Telegraph. Fruition apparently depended on similar order and Rogers was transferred from the Telegraph to the Herald where his connection was somewhat of an indefinite nature.

In today's issue of The Fourth Estate Mr. Rogers announces that he is in line in enter the advertising field for himself.

FRANCE PAYS FINE TRIBUTE TO AMERICAN PAPERS.

The fourteen newspapers and cities that co-operated in the goodwill elections, under the auspices of the American Committee for Devastated France, where sixty American business and professional women, men, 146 American business and professional women made a six weeks' tour of France were presented with diplomas, signed by M. Reibel, Minister of the Liberated Regions, expressing officially the thanks of France.

The newspapers which sponsored elections and who placed series were: the Boston, Mass., Herald; Cincinnati, O., Enquirer; Indianapolis Star; Richmond, Va., Times, Grand Rapids, Mich., Press; Atlanta, Ga., Journal; Milwaukee, Wisc., Sentinel; Chicago Daily News, Leader; New Orleans, La., Item; Washington, D. C., Journal; Buffalo, N. Y., Express; Port, Ct.; Madison, Wis.; State Journal; Peoria, Ill., Star, and Kenosha, Wis., News.

HONOLULU INVITES AD MEN.

Special efforts will be made by Honolulu to get the Associated Advertising Program to be presented in the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, according to a statement made by George A. Armigette, executive secretary of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, chairman of the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce.

Armigette will attend the Atlantic City convention at which time he will extend the Honolulu bid for the 1926 meeting.

ADMEN WELCOME BRITONS AT DINNER.

NEARLY 1,000 PUBLISHERS AND ADVERTISING MEN WELCOME BRITISH DELEGATION AT RECEPTION — SEE BASEBALL GAME AND VIEW METROPOLIS AS GUEST OF LOCAL CLUB.

With a hearty welcome the 115 British delegates to the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World were honored at a reception and dinner by nearly one thousand advertising men and their wives on June 1 at Hotel Pennsylvania, New York.

In the words of W. S. Crawford, British vice-president of the A.A.C.W., this was "the largest delegation that ever left Great Britain on any mission.

Herbert S. Houston, chairman of the National Reception Committee, composed of 160 prominent advertising men, in his invocation speech made was by Rev. Caleb R. Stetson, rector of Trinity Church. Mr. Houston paid tribute to the British ideals of trade honesty and pointed out their influences on modern advertising.

Healing the delegation were John Cheshire, president of the Thirty Club of London; Harold Verter, president of the Thirty Club, and W. S. Crawford.

In his address of welcome Lou E. Holland, president of the A.A.C.W., recalled the valor of Great Britain in the war and the hearty American "cheers" for the English games.

F. A. Wilson-Lawrence, chairman of the On-to-London Committee, went on to say: "We read a cable from Sir Charles Higham regretting his inability to be present and urging the convention to go to London.

Edwin T. Meredith, former Secretary of Agriculture and ex-president of the A.A.C.W., pledged for international and good will and the prevention of war.

Among the British speakers was Col. E. F. Lawton, of the London Daily Telegraph.

Delegates were unavoidably delayed in disembarking. The Berengaria, on which they sailed, was held up for several hours, and it was not until 9 o'clock that they reached the grand ballroom of Hotel Pennsylvania, which was bedecked with Stars and Stripes intermingled with Union Jacks. Royalty greeted the British, who arrived in their travel clothes, not having had time to exchange their clothes. The elaborate harbor reception that had been prepared in cooperation with the municipal authorities, could not be carried out on account of the weather; the mayor's welcome at City Hall was postponed until the next morning.

NEWSPAPERS LOGICAL MEDIA FOR FINANCIAL TOPICS, YOUNG DECLARES.

Young, advertising manager of Blyth, Witler & Co., Los Angeles, declared that newspapers with their millions of subscribers are the logical media in which to discuss financial topics.

For instance, the phrase "Biggest Bargains in Columbus. Unmatchable Values," "The Greatest Sale in America."

PLAN TO HONOR MEMORY OF FAULKNER.

All Ohio Scribes to Be Given Opportunity to Aid in Memorial Committee on Ways and Means Headed by John Bourke of Cleveland.

Perpetuation of the memory of James W. Faulkner, Columbus correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer and dean of Ohio political newsmen, in fitting memorial has been decided upon by the Ohio Legislative Correspondents' Association.

Because of Mr. Faulkner's unlimited acquaintance throughout the state, particularly among newspaper men, and because of his willingness to aid the Ohio reporter, regardless of the newspaper he represented, it was decided to make the proposition of establishing a memorial fund to him one of state-wide interest among members of the profession. Every newspaper man and woman in Ohio will be given an opportunity to aid.

What for the memorial shall take was delegated to a committee composed of John T. Bourke of the Columbus Dispatch, president of the Legislative Correspondents' Association; J. Howard Galbraith of the Columbus Dispatch, vice-president of the association; former Governor Tunstall A. Carter, owner of the Dayton News and Springfield News; E. E. Cook, Columbus editor of the不好-Hopkins-Hall College of News in Ohio, and Claude Meeker, Columbus, who forms the active editor of this paper.

A committee on ways and means also was formed. Its members are E. McKee, editorial writer of the Ohio State Journal; R. J. Dicke, Columbus correspondent of the Associated Press; Arthur C. Johnson, editor of the Columbus Dispatch; Frank H. Ward, Columbus representative of the Toledo Blade, and H. R. Mernert, Columbus correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Mr. Faulkner covered sessions of the assembly and wrote state and national political news for his paper for thirty-three years. He was the founder of the Ohio Legislative Correspondents' Association and its first president, holding the office for many years.

DAVISON SCHOLAR WILL STUDY JOURNALISM.

Of the three English scholars who are going to attend American universities, under the plan of Henry P. Davison, who provided for British students a scholarship fund similar to that of Rhodes for Americans, one has elected to study journalism here. He is J. Bird of Clongowes.

ADDRESS SYRACUSE STUDENTS.

Several authorities on journalism addressed students at the University of Syracuse on current newspaper problems under the auspices of the Press Club. Among them were William H. Chase and L. R. Blanchard, editors of the Journal; Thomas Alward, Syracuse Herald; Charles H. Congole, Watertown Times; Richard F. Ellsworth, Secretary of St. Lawrence University and Lee W. McHenry, Oneida Democracy Union, and J. G. Torrance, Canadiana Messenger.

According to the last speaker who recently spoke to the students, a small town daily is considered best for students to begin their newspaper careers.
CLASSIFIED MEN TO MEET
IN U. S. A. IN 1923

WHILE THEY ARE NOT MEMBERS THEY HAVE ALWAYS MET IN CONJUNCTION WITH WORLD AD CLUBS—PROPOSE SEPARATE MEETING IN 1924—IRVIN Elected President.

The Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers will hold its 1924 convention apart from the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World of which it is not a member, although it has always met at the same time and place. This was decided at the convention this week at Atlantic City. While the directors will fix the time and place, it is probable they will hold the meeting with the National Association of Newspaper Executives at Columbus. Los Angeles and Minneapolis each extended an invitation for 1924.

The convention Monday and F. L. Tate of the Toronto Star outlined and explained the purpose of the program, covered every angle of the classified phase of the newspaper business. Tate said that the convention Monday and F. L. Tate of the Toronto Star outlined and explained the purpose of the program, which during the four days' sessions covered every angle of the classified advertising field.

Discussing the problem of increasing the lines of wanted advertisements, H. J. Moehlman of the Baltimore Sun showed how much increase can be made by the elimination of except a very few standard abbreviations. Few papers have as yet deemed it wise to eliminate absolutely all abbreviations from the classified columns, President Gwaltney opened the convention Monday and F. L. Tate of the Toronto Star outlined and explained the program, which during the four days' sessions covered every angle of the classified advertising field.

Banks are in a position to render a public service by using some of their advertising space to explain the things that they cannot do as well as the things they can do, according to Keith F. Warren, editor of the Bankers Magazine. Warren told the International Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers how the organization of editors of the World advertising convention. Noted was the fact that many public fallacies may be corrected by using paid space to tell the public facts about banking service.

JERSEY EDITORS TO MEET.

The sixty-seventh annual convention of the New Jersey Press Association will be held at the Lake Mohunk Mountain House in Ulster County, New York, June 15 to 18. The delegates will leave New York the morning of June 15 on a boat and points to be visited during the four days of the New Jersey Mountain Rest and Lake Mohunk.

BRIDGEPORT CLUB ELECTS.

Hoyt Chatlin was elected president of the Bridgeport Connecticut Advertising Club at its annual meeting. William D. Riffin was elected vice-president, A. C. Flacher, secretary-treasurer. Directors included Miss Lois E. Bennett, H. C. Bennett, Miss Rose Kielch, Edgar V. Law and Harvey O. Gish.

SULLIVAN HEADS CRAFTSMEN.

William F. Sullivan was elected president of the Hartford, Ct., Branch of the International Association of Printing House Craftsmen at a meeting held last week, at which the organization was formed. The organization will be composed of the active heads of the printing and allied industries of the district.

HEILMAN IS SPEAKER.

The New York branch of the American Association of Advertising Agencies will hear Dean Ralph E. Heilman of Northwestern University, June 13, on a luncheon at the Pennsylvania Hotel.

PAINT AD MEN TO MEET.

Paint and varnish manufacturers and advertising managers will hold a meeting in Cleveland on June 14.

Conventional Notes

A buoyant jest-sprinkled address was made by W. S. Crawford, of London. He spoke with a slight Scotch burr. "I was no good in my village," began Mr. Crawford bluntly. He told of going to London and how the vallage wisedacres, hearing later that he was "in advertising," said they knew he could be up to no good.

A Lincoln and a Robert Burns are needed in advertising according to Mr. Crawford, because many advertising men are too much engrossed in their own stunts, forgetting the average man and woman in the home.

The convention issued a real daily paper during its stay in Atlantic City. It was produced and financed by the Standard Corporation of Associated Retail Advertisers. The paper was directed by Amos Parrish, editor-in-chief of the Retail Review.

The British delegation went to the Yankee Stadium and saw the Red Sox beat the Yankees and had the intricacies and mysteries of the great national pastime explained by their American hosts. The prevailing opinion among the visitors was that baseball couldn't touch cricket as a sporting proposition.

An interesting and colorful incident in the session was an address by Chief Strong Wolf, the famous Indian speaker. The chief wore the typical feathered headdress that trailed far down his back, a bright red coat, dark flapping trousers and beaded mocassins of soft leather. He made an eloquent plea for justice and moderation for the few...

ADS MUST CARRY FAITH, BENSON DECLARES.

Tells four a's that public confidence in advertising is essential—and can be gained by handling worthwhile goods and using sincere copy.

Increasing public confidence in advertising and getting co-operation from trade channels were measures advocated by John Benson, first speaker at the departmental session of the American Association of Advertising Agencies at the A.A.C.W. convention. Roy S. Durstine presided.

"Confidence," said Mr. Benson, "can be gained by handling meritorious goods and using sincere copy. There is no danger from fraudulent copy; fraud is easily spotted. But there is a possibility that copy may be in the public interest. A sweeping statement is not morally wrong, but it does not create confidence. The reader of advertisements should be repaid for his plans. "We ought to make people depend more upon advertising as a buying guide. This would take a big load off selling effort."

Resistance adds to the cost of advertising. Dealers many a time rejoice at the idea of uncertainty on the part of the public, but some retailers are many a time where retailers and wholesalers don't get enough margin to make a profit. Some are so anxious that the retailer after distribution is obtained.

"In addition to advertising technique an agent must have business intelligence and commercial experience. He must have the ability to see in the client's business opportunities the client does not see himself. This asset is more important than technical skill. "It is not difficult to make an ad stick out without being sensational. An advertisement must be original and incite; it must make a dent in the public's mind; be talked about and remembered; and at the same time maintain a high literary quality."

The concentration of business in many industries cuts down the number of advertisers and the amount of advertising. Agents must discover new fields to exploit. And a great volume of advertising has been developed by the agency because of the commission system. A retailer or a firm cannot take its place. Advertisers usually have a small initial appropriation, and this does not provide for a retailer's fee.

AMERICA TOPS FOREIGN COUNTRIES IN AD SPECIALTIES.

That American-made advertising specialties are now being sold in sixty-five different countries, including Europe and Japan, which have long held an undeserved reputation for originality and low cost of production, was brought out by L. L. Joseph, president of the Advertising Specialty Association.

The display of the advertising specialties consists of more than 2,000 samples of 135 different articles that are used for personal appeal advertising, and are representative of an industry having an invested capital of over $100,000,000 and a sales record of $750,000,000 for the year 1922.

What Co-operation Has Done

Little more than half a century ago, Gustavus F. Swift borrowed $20 from his father and started in the packing business.

Hard work on his part and on the part of the associates whom he presently gathered about him caused the business to grow.

When first incorporated, Swift & Company had six shareholders. The nation was growing and needed meat, and the young company grew also. As more money was needed the business was enlarged by enlisting the co-operation of more shareholders.

The first little plant at Barnstable, Mass., has given way to 23 modern packing plants strategically located. More than 400 branch houses and 600 car routes distribute the meat carried in more than 6,000 refrigerator cars.

Today Swift & Company's service in meat to retailers here and abroad represents the effort of nearly 100,000 people co-operating with their savings or daily toil.

More than 45,000 men and women have co-operated with us by investing their money in shares of Swift & Company.

Nearly 50,000 men and women who work in these offices, plants and branch houses—16,000 of whom are also shareholders—are giving us their co-operation in building the business. They take a just pride in the promptness and precision of its service and in the uniformity and high quality of its products.

Swift's Premium Hams and Bacon, "Silverleaf" Brand Pure Lard, Premium Frankfurts and other Swift products are symbols of their hearty co-operation and of their belief in the Company.

ADVERTISING CAN SAVE BILLIONS, SAYS FEIKER.

Has power to cut nation's costs of living without decreasing standards, Hoover aid tells A.A.C.W.

"Advertising is making possible a new sales creed for American business," F. M. Feiker, formerly of the McGraw-Hill Company, New York, special assistant to Secretary of Commerce Hoover, said at the conclusion of talks in the Hotel Atlantic City, "Instead of the out-worn phrase, 'Give the buyer what he wants,' advertising makes it possible to 'Educate the buyer to what he needs.' The uneducated buyer is the menace of American industry until the buyer is educated the producer will continue to be wasteful. Advertising money invested in educating buyers to economically sound practices will save the nation ten billion dollars a year."

Advertising, rightly directed, Mr. Feiker continued, can reduce the costs of living without decreasing the standard of living. He pointed out that the possibility for this per- dox lies in using advertising to interpret economic problems in practical business terms. The work of engineers and efficiency experts in pointing out methods and plans for reducing factory costs and eliminating wastes in industry would only be possible when advertising has taken the dramatic elements in these savings and put them to work through sales departments.

"The key to these vast savings," he said, "is advertising. The buyer and the buyer for better or for worse is in the hands of the advertising man."

WILEY DISCUSSES NEWSPAPER RELATIONS TO FINANCIAL ADVERTISER.

"The newspaper which publishes more financial advertising than any other newspaper in the world, rejects hundreds of columns of announcements of a questionable character," he said. "It declines every year at least $200,000 of financial advertising considered unworthy or indiscreet to publish, thereby safeguarding its readers from possible loss through the purchase of unsafe or highly speculative securities."

"The advertisements on the financial pages of reputable newspapers now form a directory of important financial institutions, reputable brokers, bond and investment houses and of every large or important offering of securities by corporations, states, counties, towns and foreign countries. Announcements of new securities, frequently over-subscribed before publicly announced, are inserted in newspapers a matter of record."

"A remarkable element in modern financial advertising is the number and value of new bond offerings. A new method has developed through which capital is provided for industry. Securities are offered directly by the issuing corporation to the public."

OPEN HOUSE HELD TO DEDICATE NEW HOME.

KANSAS CITY JOURNAL-POST ENTERTAINS ITS READERS—MINIATURE EDITION COMICS, GRAVURE AND ALL GIVEN AS SOUVENIR. IS BEAUTIFUL MODERN BUILDING.

On June 2 and 3 the Kansas City Journal, Kansas City Post and Sunday Journal-Post owned by Walter S. Dickey, celebrated with a final opening of new quarters at Oak and Twenty-second Streets. The new building which houses these publications is one of the most modern and represents the last word in construction of newspaper homes. The building is a three story fireproof structure 260x140 feet. It stands on a high point of ground which in Kansas City has come to be known as the Journal-Post hill and commands a view of the city's park and boulevard system. The site is regarded as ideal for a newspaper plant being only a short distance from the center of the business district and only three blocks from the Union Station.

A general invitation was extended to the public and all were urged to come and inspect the new building from the business office to the press room. The hours set for this public inspection were from 1 to 6 o'clock Sunday. Every visitor was presented with a souvenir in the form of a miniature edition of the Journal-Post. This miniature was a complete edition with miniature comic and gravure sections. It also carried a half tone picture of the new building and a complete description of the Journal-Post home.

A number of visiting newspaper men visited the plant on Saturday. Some came from a long distance while others were in the city attending a meeting of the Associated Press.

The visitors were conducted through the plant in groups, each group being provided with a guide and each department was explained fully.

An outstanding feature of the new plant is the pressroom, entirely constructed of steel vitrified bricks and hollow tile. It is practically a separate unit, occupying 40x200 feet. The press equipment is Hoe heavy type superspeed units, erected in a double bank. The press power equipment is the best obtainable. Ten Cutler-Hammer Conveyors carry the product to the mailing room and half a dozen chutes carry the bundles directly into the trucks, thirty of which are able to park at one time.

A total of 65,820 square feet of floor space is distributed in three floors, the first of which is occupied by the display advertising, accounting, business office and paper storage. The entire second floor is devoted to the gravure department, by Alco-Gravure, Inc. The third floor is occupied by the executive, and editorial offices, circulation, composing, engraving and matrix departments. The press room houses the foundry and mail rooms. On this floor also are the classified advertising, photo studio work rooms and the leased wire services. The city news and composing rooms are so laid out as to make all possible speed. Special ventilators on the roof of the addition carry off the fumes from the stereotype foundry and keep the pressroom temperature even. The entire outer wall of the addition is composed of windows, affording ample light at all times.

Efficiency has been the keynote throughout, the stereotype foundry being almost directly underneath the mat room, located on the third floor, so that material moves evenly from the news to the composing room, to the mat room, down a chute to the foundry, to the presses, and on to the mailing room and trucks.

The building is so situated that it will be for all time free from adjacent construction, as the property occupies the entire block between Twenty-second, Twenty-third and Oak streets and a dedicated municipal parkway.

The Journal was established as the Kansas City Enterprise by William A. Strong, of North Carolina, an editor, and David K. Abel, a printer, in 1854. It was bought in 1855 by Colonel Robert Thompson Van Horn, who changed its name in 1857 to the Kansas Journal of Commerce, and in 1828 to its present one. The Journal for many years was a power for the civic betterment of Kansas City, exposing the cause of the North during the Civil War, changing its allegiance at that time from the Douglas Democratic party to the Republican party, with which it has since been identified.

The purchase of the Journal in 1896 by a group of men headed by Charles S. Giede ended the active journalistic career of Colonel Van Horn, after forty years in the business. The colonel died in 1916, aged 91. The Journal was a charter member of the Associated Press.

The Post was established in 1905 by Jack Groves, and it was bought the following year by Barney J. Sheridan, who in 1909 sold it to Caldwell Daily News Gets Fresh Start.

The Caldwell Daily News of Caldwell (Idaho) has passed into the hands of Fred H. Michaelson and George Rochester. The paper was established in 1915. The machinery has been moved to a building on Main Street almost directly opposite the old News office and this will be headquarters in the future.

Mr. Michaelson, until about a year ago published the Adams County Leader at Council and was, until recently, county judge.

Mr. Rochester has been publishing the Midvale Reporter.

P. L. Orcutt of the Lewiston (Idaho) Banner has turned over the business management of the newspaper to O. C. Fodrea printer of that place. The condition of Mr. Orcutt’s health made a change necessary. He will devote his time to the development of a fox farm at Lewiston.

Why the Apostrophe?

And we still put the apostrophe (') after the "o" in "o'clock," but why? The apostrophe signifies an omission. Thus we write "kiss the "o" out of the word "kiss" and possibly the word "the." An expression: "It is 11 o'clock" is meant to mean "It is 11 of the clock." But so long a time has elapsed since the contraction that it would seem to us as now very unnecessary to use the apostrophe at all, writing it thusly: "o'clock."

George A. McClellan, publisher of the St. Joseph, Mo., Gazette, together with Congressman C. L. Faust, and A. E. Ueberrhein, Missouri member of the Pony Express executive committee are sponsors of a plan which will put St. Joseph prominently on the map of this country. Their proposition, which they laid before Secretary of War J. W. Weeks at Leavenworth, was to stage at St. Joseph a great airplane race or demonstration in August. The proposed contest is unique in the annals of American army aviation. The Gazette plans to demonstrate that planes starting from points along the coast can reach the center of the United States, which is considered to be at or near St. Joseph, in 11 hours. It is expected to bring a large fleet of army planes and start them for various places on the coast-line—New York, Boston, Washington, Savanna, New Orleans, San Francisco, and Seattle, for example. The Pony Express memorial observance at St. Joseph is set for about the last week in August, and the proposed aviation race would be the event of one of these big days.

A.A.C.W. VOTES TO MEET IN LONDON.

When the action of the joint assembly became known there was an immediate meeting of the friends of President Holland, headed by a few active and loyal men from Kansas City, and the Holland committee was formed. This committee issued a statement protesting against the action of the joint assembly and sounding a rallying call for those who believe in rewarding merit.

A.A.C.W. CHOSES MEMBERS OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Lou E. Holland, by virtue of his re-election as president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, retains his post at the head of the executive committee. Charles Henry Mackintosh, president during the 1921-22 term, continues as retiring president on the governing committee which consists of seven members.

Harwood H. Fawcett of Chicago, chairman of Advertising Club Presidents, Edwin T. Meredith, publisher of Successful Farming and former secretary of agriculture, was elected to represent the sustaining members on the board. Miss Katherine Mahool of Baltimore was elected to the executive committee by the Women's Advertising Conference. W. Frank McClure, who was elected chairman of the National Advertising Commission, also becomes a member of the committee.

SAM HOUGHTON GETS DOWN TO CASES IN PLEA FOR LONDON.

Sam Haughton who helped to organize the British trip, eloquently pleaded London's cause. Haughton, a small, droll young man, between words were all right, but that he desired to get down to the real bottom of the matter—common stock.

"I've been reading history," he said, "and I find that all of your presidents came from Ulster-Scott stock." He mentioned a series from Andrew Jackson to Theodore Roosevelt.

"And I might say me own father was born in Cincinnati," he added, to the amusement of his audience. "And there was a man who coached one of the teams at Yale. Percy Haughton. That's a wee bit 'o me own family history, too. He's related to me somewhere."

PARTISANS LIKE UP.

First to answer the Holland call was the New York delegation with about 200 votes in the general assembly. The delegates from St. Louis and Philadelphia followed immediately and declared themselves unanimously for Mr. Holland. Smaller delegations then began to enroll under the Holland banner. The National Association of Newspaper Executives was the first of the associations to declare itself for Mr. Holland. Among the convention leaders who decided to force Mr. Holland's re-election were Herbert S. Houston, E. T. Meredith, former secretary of agriculture, and Rowe Stewart of Philadelphia, all former presidents.

The general sessions also sustained the choice for the 1924 convention after the presidents of the various local clubs had decided on London, and Houston, the rival of the British capital, had swerved from a "no compromise" attitude and declared himself in favor of London. After the British had urged London's claim and it had been seconded by Edwin T. Meredith, the Houston spokesman, H. C. Howard, rose and moved that the 1924 gathering be held in London. The sudden shift of front by the Texans took the convention by surprise, but London-in-1924 was accepted unanimously.

BRITONS THANK HOUSTON.

On behalf of the British delegates, John Cheshire of London, their president, addressed a letter to the Houston delegates inviting them to a dinner Thursday night which the members of the On-to-London committee and the executive officers of the A.A.C.W. also attended. The letter said in part:

"I'm feeling this evening and the thoughts that are in the minds of every member of our delegation compel me to send you this hasty message expressing our appreciation for the magnanimity shown by you and those associated with you to send you this hasty message expressing our appreciation for the magnanimity shown by you and those associated with you.

JOHN CHESHIRE.

in the magnificent compliment you paid us visitors from Great Britain in standing aside in order that we might have the unanimous vote for London in 1924."

HARDING TO GREET BRITONS.

The British delegates went to Philadelphia yesterday where they were guests of the Poor Richard Club. They return to New York City today to remain until Monday when they will depart for Washington to be entertained for two days by the Washington advertising publishers and the Washington Advertising Club. President Harding will receive the Britons at the White House Tuesday morning. They will return to New York Wednesday. That evening the delegates and their friends will see the Music Box Review. After the theatre they will be guests of Paul Block at a dinner. On Thursday various newspaper publishers, trade paper men, advertising agents and advertisers in New York will entertain those members of the delegation who are engaged in similar fields. On Friday evening they will be the guests of Charles Capehart at a theatre party and on Saturday, June 16, the Britons will sail for home.

Notes of the Convention

One of the most striking sentiments heard frequently by able students of advertising was this: "If you want to reach men through advertising you must get down to their level, and the level on which everybody meets is found in the newspaper."

Greetings from the women in the British delegation were presented to...
"I discovered early in life that it requires no more energy to do a big thing than to do a little thing.'

Anatole France.

A CONVENTION THAT HAS BECOME UNWIELDY.

The outstanding impression created by the convention of the Associated Advertising Executives held last Thursday is that the organization is too cumbersome to achieve beneficial results. With its many departmental meetings, scattered throughout as many sections of the convention city, all vying with merry-go-rounds, bathing beaches and side-shows, the叶修d to be the convention on which the association broke through which they were presumably active participants.

The action of the National Association of Newspaper Executives in deciding to hold a separate convention in Columbus next year is to be applauded. It might be the part of wisdom if National Association of Classified Advertising Managers fell into line and held a separate conven- tion. At Columbus the newspaper executives will sit together, peacefully, gather useful information on which to make their one-time evi- dence at the Atlantic City conven- tion. The Associated Advertising Executives might well consider the advantage which the Associated Advertising Executives might have in the gathering.

EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN OF TELEGRAM-GAZETTE WILL DIRECT FOOD BUYERS TO STORES DISPLAYING RED AND GOLD EMBLEM WHICH INDICATES SERVICE.

A program of co-operative service, unique in its kind, has more than any of its kind attempted in New England before, has been launched by the Worcester, Mass., Telegram-Gazette, a campaign of cooperation between the reading and buying public and nationally-advertised food products. Behind the series of advertisements which are now running in the Telegram-Gazette for the education of the public in finding food stores giving the greatest service after months of research work and planning, that the facts in the public mind may be clearly and accurately presented. The plan is to provide for Worcester county residents assurance that they can buy what they want when they want it.

Surely such a policy carried out by newspaper men to be employed in exploiting the virtues of their several products, said Mr. Cox, "would produce myriads of 100 percent. readers of the advertising columns, and perhaps, by increasing the demand for trained editorial writers, it might put their salaries up to a point where they would compare favorably with wages now being paid to bricklayers, plasterers, plumbers. Why not, even at the risk of such an unprecedented thought, endeavor to make the well-established economic custom?

Another question. Why should we not press men to leave it to newspaper writers to dig out the interesting things that we have learned about our business in the course of our lives? Why should we not have the opportunity to tell in our own way what the public would like to know about us?

"I do not presume to say what methods are best and should prefer to let each newspaper judge for itself the way in which it wishes health promotion advertising to be worth while. I do not ask that such advertising be like seeds scattered by the four winds of Heaven to germinate and take root anywhere. We must give for what we get. The people must be for all, not merely for the sower."

TRUTH IN ADVERTISING SAY CLOTHIERS.

"We hold paramount the truth that advertising is a bond of performance as an oath in a judicial tribunal."

This is the outstanding article in a code of ethics adopted by the New-Gazette Association of Retail Clothing Dealers, the 24,000 copies of which are being distributed among the trade throughout the country. The code, which has now in progress to keep the clothing industries at the highest notch of integrity.

The document also emphasizes that the cornerstone of commerce is integrity; that the assets of any commercial institution consist of honesty and business character first.

WILL CHANGE TO DAILY. Bridges & Pierce, publishers of the Duluth News-Tribune, have announced that the paper will be changed to a daily. The new paper will be issued every day except Sunday and will be a member of the Associated Press.

PAPER CHANGES HANDS. The Sitka Tribune, weekly, has changed ownership. Sidney D. Charles is retiring from the newspaper field, and C. F. M. Cole will guide the destinies of the Tribune.

GREEN DESCRIBES DAYS AS CUB IN IOWA.
my mind is stored the faint memory of a ghost I discovered on Big Island in one of those periods of paucity of news. We had entered a charnelhouse. As I write, the scene that greeted my eyes, under the dim light of a couple of gas jets, comes before me.

UNCLE SAM NEEDS NEW STATISTICIAN.
According to a government document, the ideal citizen, from the financial point of view, is he who saves twenty cents on every dollar, spends fifty cents on food, shelter, and clothing, and ten cents each on education, recreation and philanthropy.

On a wage or salary of $2,500 a year, that works out to $1,250 on living expenses, $500 a year saved and $250 a year each for education, gifts and play.

For living expenses for a family of five, $1,250 would allow $35 a month for rent, approximately three dollars a month for food. For clothing and ten dollars a month apiece for food. And yet the basis of this republic is the family of five with a $2,500 a year total income.

The Governments figures argue the Louisville Herald, are, to the ordinary man, a joke. When the clerk or the laborer reach the point where he gives away more than he spendson clothes for his family, it will be time to revise a lot of things besides statistics.

THE VALUE OF A NEWSPAPER.

There is no single institution in any city that contributes so much to the morale and growth of the community as its newspapers. A newspaper that reflects vigorous business activity on the part of the merchants and tradespeople is an advance agent of community progress. The Cedar Falls, Iowa, Record, Healthy competition honestly displayed in business pulling advertisements insures interest in home development and no town or city has ever grown without it.

A community is like the body. One cannot cut off a finger without injury to the rest of the body. Similarly, to the interest of everyone to see that it is possible for all to live decently and happily and when towns forget this, they suffer accordingly.

PERSONALITY IN ADVERTISING.

The Bengston's drug stores of Davenport, Fla., Moline and Rock Island, Ill., made the feature of their newspaper advertisement recently in the three city's columns with pictures of their employees. The theme of the advertisement was personality in the Bengston's stores, which made an effective appeal largely through the get-acquainted feeling that went with it which is a potent force in personality advertising.

CANAAN REPORTER TO GO ON DESPITE FIRE LOSS.

The Canaan, N. H., Reporter, a weekly newspaper whose plant was razed to the ground in a recent fire, will continue in business. The fire, which swept away the Reporter's building, nearly wiped out the town of Canaan and caused the loss of two lives, together with a half million in property.

PAN AMERICAN ADVERTISING.

NEED OF SOUND FINANCIAL STRENGTH FOR AGENCIES, STRESSED BY SMITH.

The elementsof sound agency finance were discussed by Harry Dwight Smith, member of the finance committee of the Associated Association of Advertising Agencies and President of that association. He said in part:

"No advertising agency does justice to the advertising, the publisher, or to itself if it lacks financial strength or fails to handle its finances ably and conservatively."

"At the annual meeting of the association, October 1919, the convention unanimously passed a resolution asking the finance committee to extend its activities by inviting members to submit financial statements annually for analysis and criticism. It was easy to believe that few members would respond to the call.
We were therefore surprised to recieve out of a total membership of 132, eighty-three the date it is due. The association hopes to see all of these four methods made the invariable practice of its members.

This unique association activity has been a definite aid toward the strengthening of the financial structure of all of us who have been willing to accept the higher standards established by the committee.
This procedure has had so far reaching an effect that the members of the association went through the recent period of severe financial strain with but one failure; and this exception was so handled by Mr. O'Shaughnessy, acting as one of the co-receivers, that all creditors are assured of receiving 100 cents on the dollar.

"Look upon cash as your only real resource, and have plenty of it.
There are foundering ample cash resources: first, by building up cash surpluses, not paying out profits as fast as they are made; fourth, by collecting promptly what your customers owe you on the date it is due. This association paper is to see all of these four methods made the invariable practice of its members.

The Treasury Department is still wrestling with the problem of finding proper definition for the term "standard newsprint paper," in order to meet the requirements of the customs collectors and other government officials charged with the collection of import duties under the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill. The problem likewise confronts the publishers, whose complaints presented to the department aided in raising the issue.

On May 25 the following definition was given, but afterward withdrawn:

"The term standard newsprint paper used in paragraph 1672 of the free list of the tariff act of 1922 is defined as printing paper weighing approximately 48 lbs. per 1000 square feet, made from a mixture of mechanically ground wood pulp and other substances in the relative proportions of 80 per cent and 20 per cent but these percentages may vary not exceed respectively 75 per cent and 25 per cent, and there may be a 5 per cent variation in weight. This definition is applicable to newsprint paper without regard to the color thereof, or the use to which such paper may be put."

Following the issue of this definition, it is understood, it developed that it was not definite enough for the customs officers and failed to meet the complaints of the publishers, on account of which it was promptly withdrawn. Treasury officials are still working on a definition that will meet the situation.

NOTED ST. PAUL DAILY NEWS MAN DIES.

WALTON G. McMURCHY, HEAD OF DAILY NEWS WASHINGTON BUREAU—KEEN POLITICAL OBSERVER AND WIDELY KNOWN TO NEWSPAPERMEN OF DAILY NEWS WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Mr. McMurchy, fifty-one, former editor of the St. Paul Daily News, and head of the Daily News Washington bureau since 1909, died May 25, at Miller Hospital, Minneapolis. Mr. McMurchy's service with the Daily News covered a period of twenty years. He was widely known as a newspaper man in the Northwest. He was known also as one of the foremost of Washington correspondents.

Mr. McMurchy was born in Ontario and came to St. Paul when a young man. After being associated with several Minneapolis newspapers and the St. Paul Globe, he joined the St. Paul Daily News staff in 1902. After officiating in several editorial capacities, he became political writer. When F. E. Crawford, first editor of the Daily News, died in 1910, Mr. McMurchy was made editor. Two years later he took charge of the Washington bureau.

Mr. McMurchy was a keen political observer and had a remarkable insight into national and world affairs. His articles were always straightforward, illuminative and unbiased. His close personal friendship with high officials at Washington always enabled him to give the Daily News quick, accurate service on important news events of the day.

Mr. McMurchy is survived by his widow and one daughter, Miss Eleanor McMurchy.

M. S. NORELIUS, NOTED NORTH-AMERICAN EDITOR IS DEAD.

Marion Sigfried Norelius, publisher of the Chicago County Press died at Lindstrom, Minn., last week. He was fifty years old.

Mr. Norelius was the son of the late Dr. Erik Norelius, prominently known in the Northwest.

Mr. Norelius was graduated from Gustavus Adolphus College at St. Peter, that institution being founded by his father in 1862.

A year later he began his newspaper career on the St. Paul Pioneer Press, and with the exception of a few months passed in taking a postgraduate course at the University of Minnesota, devoted his entire life to that profession. When working for the Pioneer Press he began writing a weekly Scandinavian letter in English for a press association, which work was continued for twenty-two years.

In the spring of 1897, Mr. Norelius went to Europe, where he represented the Minneapolis Tribune and other Minnesota press syndicates at the International World Exposition in Stockholm. Later he was connected with the Northland Magazine, Minneapolis, the Goodhue County News, Cannon Falls, and the Red Wing Republican.

In 1899 he went to Chicago where he worked on the leading newspapers of the city until his next move was to the newspaper which was conducting at the time of his death. Mrs. Norelius will take charge of her late husband's paper.

Alfred Pell Haven, aged sixty-six, for twenty-five years Sunday editor of the Buffalo Sun, and the New York Herald, died this week at his home in Brooklyn, after an illness of several months.

In an attempt to regain his strength, he and his wife went to Florida in March, but Mr. Haven was unable to resume his editorial work.

Born in San Francisco, the son of General Joshua Haven, he was educated on the coasts here and abroad, and was graduated from Yale with honors and a degree in civil engineering in 1872. The years spent in travel abroad, especially in France, gave him his first taste for newspaper work.

For a time he was night editor of the World, but he gave up his position to join the staff of the New York Tribune, under the management of Paul Dana, son of Charles A. Dana. Mr. Haven was thoroughly schooled in the older form of journalism and during his editorship of the Sun, his contributions were shielded by anonymity.

FORMER PUBLISHER OF IOWA PAPER DIES IN CHICAGO.

John S. Hopkins, former editor of the Humboldt, Ia., editor and a resident of Humboldt county for forty years, died at the home of his son Frank in Chicago.

Mr. Hopkins was one of the best known men in the county. He was formerly editor of the Broadside, a weekly newspaper. Mr. Hopkins continued the publication of his paper there for many years. He was 81 years of age and had led an active and prominent life. He was always identified with politics.

W. B. CHEW IS DEAD.

William B. Chew, for years connected with the Xena Gazette, of which his father, J. P. Chew is editor, died at his home in Xena, Ill. He had been identified with the paper since shortly after its founding, forty-two years ago, and has been foreign advertising manager for some time.

NEWSPAPER PUBLICITY FOR THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.
A valuable study has been made by Dr. Rollo George Reynolds of the Educational Service Bureau of the Teachers' College of Columbia University, New York, on the subject of advertising the public schools.

The study is based on reports from various cities in all the states of the union, and has to do with daily and weekly newspapers, special school papers, and, to some extent, educational journals.

Here are some interesting conclusions: (1) In general the school newspapers published in local papers are constructive and not destructive. (2) News of public school athletics is given an undue amount of space, thirty per cent of the total. (3) The proportion of school news considered of front page importance is small, but five per cent of all of it.

Editorial discussion of schools is fairly frequent in the newspapers. (4) Local editors in general welcome schools and are willing to co-operate with them in furnishing readers with school news.

MAKING THE SUN STRUCTURALLY SOUND

The most successful newspaper amalgamation in newspaper history was the amalgamation between The New York Morning Sun and The New York Herald.

Now the country has another amalgamation equally successful, the amalgamation of The New York Globe with The New York Evening Sun.

The Sun-Herald amalgamation at once rehabilitated The New York Herald, bringing it strength, vigor, and a bigger circulation than it had ever had in all its history.

The New York Evening Sun needed no such infusion. It did need the Associated Press. It got it through The Globe, and it got a big push in circulation as well, but increase in circulation was not my object.

The best is none too good for The Sun, and the Associated Press is the best news service. The Sun wanted the best and could afford to buy it at any price. Price should never stand in the way of making a great newspaper structurally sound.

Frank Munsey
Don't Scatter Your Dollars

Seeds cast to a whirlwind will give you "distribution"—but that's no way to grow a crop.

Plant your advertising seeds in abundant, concentrated local circulation—the newspapers that go to and are read in homes—and you reap an abundant harvest.

The newspaper that has effective concentrated local circulation has it because it enjoys reader-confidence and reader-interest. It has local INFLUENCE and STANDING. Influence and standing constitute the fulcrum of which advertising is the lever. And a fulcrum must be LOCAL—close to the object to be moved—or it is nothing. Try it on your next "lift" and see.

The nearly 400,000 daily circulation of The Chicago Daily News—essentially a home circulation—concentrated 94 per cent in Chicago and its suburbs is, perhaps, the nearest approach to complete daily newspaper "saturation" attained in any of the great single markets of the world.

That advertisers recognize and profit by this unusual condition is attested by the consequent fact that, year in and year out, the volume of advertising printed in The Chicago Daily News vastly exceeds that printed in any other Chicago daily newspaper. In the first four months of 1923, for example, The Daily News printed a total of 6,861,660 agate lines, as compared with 5,828,598 lines by the next highest daily score, that of The Chicago Daily Tribune.

A newspaper amalgamation which will link two leading cities in Westchester county, New York, has been announced with the formation of Westchester Newspapers, Inc., which will take over the Mount Vernon Daily Argus and the Standard-Star at New Rochelle. The Standard-Star will be the result of the merger of the two daily papers at New Rochelle, while the Daily Argus will be published as heretofore.

Both papers, the Daily Argus of Mount Vernon and the Standard-Star of New Rochelle will have the benefit of coordination of effort, equipment to issue papers that will not alone boom their own cities but that of each other, and of the territory they will serve. This territory for these newspapers will be from Yonkers on the west to Mamaroneck on the east, a population of from 125,000 to 135,000 people.

ORGANIZATION'S OFFICERS.

The officers of the new Westchester Newspapers, Inc., the successors to Stiles & Merriam, of Mount Vernon, the Star Publishing Company, and the Standard Publishing Company of New Rochelle, are: Louis L. Stiles, President, Franklin A. Merriam, the present publisher of the Daily Argus of New Rochelle, and T. Harold Forbes, who has been editor and publisher of the Daily Star of New Rochelle, secretary, Maurice S. Porter, manager of the company and assistant publisher, and the treasurer will be Mark D. Stiles and treasurer assistant will be Franklin A. Merriam and Maurice S. Porter of Mount Vernon and T. Harold Forbes of New Rochelle.

The Daily Argus will be published under the present management and will extend its scope and opportunities, and the Standard-Star will be enlarged, and the Standard-Star will be improved and will extend its scope and opportunities presenting themselves for the advancement of the communities they serve.

The Daily Argus in the past will be continued in every way, and renewed efforts will be made to gain public approval and support with the extension of its service made possible by its union with the Standard-Star of New Rochelle.

BRING PORTER INTO COMPANY.

The Daily Argus was established April 1, 1892, by French & Sniffen, succeeded by French & Merriam, and later by Mark D. Stiles and Franklin A. Merriam until its incorporation in 1909. Both Stiles and Merriam and Mr. Stiles who have been associated together for twenty-two years will continue.

The Evening Standard of New Rochelle, established April 1, 1882, has been published under the present management and will continue, has been published for nearly a century and a half, has been discontinued, but its name will continue.

Mr. Greemslit will be succeeded by as one of the pioneers in the daily newspaper field in the Queen City, of the Sound. He entered upon the ownership of the Standard, at a time when it seemed doubtful if it could survive the vicissitudes of the days.

GLOBE MEN FORM PERMANENT ORGANIZATION TO-NIGHT.

Former employees of the New York Globe, who have been working to form a permanent organization to meet each year to perpetuate the tradition of the oldest newspaper in the city, will meet tonight.

A dinner will be held at 7 o'clock and "open house" will be maintained at the Hotel Astor, which is held to meet the benefit for the benefit of men on morning.

A miniature Globe, called the "Globele and Comical Atomizer," will be given to the New York Tribune, which will be distributed.
There can be no substitute for circulation.

The circulation of a newspaper is as indicative as the horse power rating of an engine when it comes to figuring what you're getting for your money.

Besides that—there is the immeasurable prestige that comes through association with size—with leadership—with dominating individuality.

OBSERVE SILVER ANNIVERSARY WITH ELABORATE WORK AND PLAY PROGRAM—HISTORY OF ASSOCIATION RICH WITH ACHIEVEMENT AND FRIENDSHIPS.

Circulation managers from every state in the union are headed toward Muskoka lake to participate in the silver jubilee of the strongest organization in point of membership in the newspaper field. At Toronto the International Circulation Managers Association will mobilize Sunday morning for the trip to Muskoka wharf. From New York, Chicago, and points west and south special cars will pick up members en route. The convention will begin June 18 and last over to June 21. Besides a business program, which is the most comprehensive yet undertaken by the circulation committee, the entertainment committee has laid out diversions which excel any in the long history of the organization.

The New York delegation left Saturday night and will arrive in Toronto on Sunday morning when special cars will unload the groups from other localities. A. E. McKin- non, chairman of transportation, told The Fourth Estate that the list of those going assures the largest convention in the organization's history. The Muskoka region is of the picturesque spots of Canada and comprises a system of lakes and channels dotted with cottages and hotels, with boating accommodations and a wide variety of water sports. THE ADVERTISING SITUATION IN THE EVENING FIELD IN NEW YORK.

A Treasure in Facts and Ideas—

The ultimate significance of the day-to-day developments in journalism and advertising strikes home only when you see them spread upon the record.

Facts and ideas are the tools of both professions. Day by day and week by week they expand and increase, becoming in time trends, movements, and customs.

The when, the how, the who, and the where are spread upon the record in the

SETS UP LEGAL STATUS OF ADVERTISING AGENCY

NATIONAL ADVERTISERS ASSOCIATION GIVES AUTHORITY TO CAREFULLY REVISED DOCUMENT DEFINITELY STATING THE POSITION OF ADVERTISERS.

An important paper which definitely defines the status of the advertising association for advertisers, reached The Fourth Estate just as it was going to press. Originally, the paper was prepared by John Neville Boyle, counsel of the association and read at the semi-annual meeting of the association in Detroit, but was so well received as to warrant further revision. It is now released as a somewhat authoritative document under the title of "The Legal Status of the Advertising Agency." The object of the common law, etc., Mr. Boyle goes into a full exposition of the term "agent" and follows his opinion with the citation of a number of court decisions, while The Fourth Estate reproduces without change, as part of Mr. Boyle's opinion. The paper goes:

Agency, the representative is authorized to represent the will of the principal to third persons with a view to establishing new legal relations between the corporation and third principal, or, if you please, between the publishers and the advertisers, or between other third persons who are factors in the advertising business. In the legal conversions, therefore, of creating an agency may be threefold, namely, new relations between the principal and the agent, between the advertiser and third persons, and between the agent himself and third parties.

RESPONSIBILITY OF PRINCIPAL.

The responsibility of choosing one or more agents and directing the business entrusted to them, so as best to carry out a set purpose of the principal, is the principal's responsibility for the acts of the agents. Thereby, the principal will control the business, but in the proper case, or in the proper conduct of the business, the principal is not responsible for the acts of the agent and is liable.

The agent may be incompetent, or careless, or perverse, or reckless, and may act in disregard of all authority, but the principal is still liable to third parties, but the principal is still liable to third parties, and is liable except in cases of negligence or fraud.

LEGAL STATUS OF ADVERTISING AGENT.

The liability of the principal is limited to the actual contract, since the principal, undisclosed, is not holding out the agent as such at all. The agent alone is bound and liable.

Generally speaking, the principal or advertiser and the contracts made by his agent or agencies within the scope of the actual authority, and secondly, upon all contracts within the scope of the ostensible or apparent authority, except where there is notice that the authority exercised by the agent is exceeded. But the principal is not liable upon contracts made by the agent beyond the scope of the apparent or ostensible authority.

Where an advertiser, by a voluntary act, places an agent in such a situation that a person of ordinary prudence conversant with business usages and the particular business is justified in presuming that such an agent has authority to perform, the principal or the advertiser is estopped as against an innocent third person from denying the agent's authority to perform. If the agent makes contracts in his own name and holds the funds, the undisclosed principal may be sued and be sued upon such contracts made in his behalf or in his secret use by his agent. The liability of the principal is limited to the actual contract, since the principal, undisclosed, is not holding out the agent as such at all. The agent alone is bound and liable.

He then refers to some cases and says that he would want to take it that the facts in a case like that would be found in very important cases, perhaps, coupled with a course of conduct, which, if it got the character of an agency, would be matter between the advertiser and the agent to settle, if the advertiser, with no assurance in advance, perhaps, of what would happen.

For instance in New York, in the Metropolitan Advertising Company, which is a case of law, it arose and it was appealed to the next highest court, and it was decided that the principal, just as the principal could act in one way and he had one of the journalists of the other company, that he could act himself. But in the Appellate court, by a vote of three to two, it was held that the advertisement itself was a contract, in three hundred million dollars a year, it would seem to me, in view of the uncertainties, that serious thought should be given to this suggestion of a standard form of contract with an agency. Perhaps it would provide the logical method that this association from time to time would have to meditate—some such course by which the advertiser would pay the publication direct and pay its agency's services direct. This would be the intelligent and sensible method to follow.

COURT DECISIONS INVOLVING ADVERTISERS, ADVERTISING AGENCIES AND PUBLISHERS.

In Ayer vs. Devlin. (Supreme Court of Illinois, 1914) the defendant, A. & S. were given the decision on appeal by George A. Devlin (C. S. Dent & Co.).

The outstanding point in the case was the held to contract between the advertising agency being held to be a contract of agency, not of employment. In Clarke vs. Watt (Supreme Court of New York State, December, 1917) John J. Clarke, a publisher, was given the decision on appeal against V. E. Berri Watt, an advertiser. This was a case of the undisclosed principal. The advertiser employed the IMPORTANT TOPICS OF ORGANIZATION, IDEALS AND FRIENDSHIPS DISCUSSED BY LEADERS IN ADVERTISING FIELDS OF BOTH COUNTRIES—TESTIMONIAL BY BARTON.

A reception and dinner in honor of the British advertising agencies was given at the Hotel Ambassador, New York, City, on Friday evening by the American Association of Advertising Agencies, and those members of the British delegation, including about one hundred present, including those members of the British delegation and friends.

F. A. Arnold, secretary of Frank Seaman, Inc., Toastmaster and toasts were responded to as follows: "Organization," by C. H. and Vernon of London and John Benson of Chicago.

The sentiment running throughout the speeches was that of "The International Advertising Agency." Each member of the British delegation present received an individually addressed card with the proceedings of the evening, together with a testimonial card and a testimonial in the form of a pocketbook with the sentiments of the A.A.A. to British advertising friends and clients. The affair was charged in a dinner committee consisting of Roy S. Durell, Frank J. Reynolds, Stewart L. Mims and Frank A. Arnold.

NEW EVENING NEWSPAPER FOR NEW YORK CITY?

FRED W. ENRIGHT REPORTED PLANNING DEMOCRATIC DAILY WITH CAPITAL OF $3,500,000—NOW OWNS BOSTON AND LYNN NEWSPAPERS—HAS INTERESTING CAREER.

A new afternoon daily newspaper, it is reported in well-informed newspaper circles, will be started in New York City the latter part of the summer by Fred W. Enright, publisher and owner of the Lynn, Mass., Telegraph and the Boston Telegram. Mr. Enright, in a telephone conversation to The Fourth Estate, said that he would be in New York the last of June when it was likely complete arrangements would be made to launch the new daily. The new paper will be capitalized at $3,500,000. It is assumed that it will be democratic in state and national issue politics for Mr. Enright's convictions politically are well known.

It is problematical if Mr. Enright will be able to secure Associated Press service. In recent years such telegraph service has been secured only by buying in an existing newspaper. Reliable sources close to Mr. Enright stated that he would meet no difficulty in getting other valuable services. Mr. Enright has had a notable career. His early newspaper papers were first treated with derision. His first paper was the Lynn Telegram, where he had a hard fight when he started ten years ago with the Telegram, in opposition to two other dailies. The Telegram not only lived but rose speedily to a commanding position.

Later, Mr. Enright became publisher of the old Boston Journal, and in negotiations which were announced as consummated, purchased the paper. A hitch arose and Mr. Enright left the publication. It soon after the discontinued publication.

Mr. Enright started the Boston Telegram and has made rapid strides in that city. He advertised one year after starting that the Boston Telegram had the largest circulation in metropolitan Boston.

Mr. Enright's Boston and Lynn Telegrams are syndicated in the foreign field by Benjamin and Kentnor.

Among other interesting events in connection with the newspaper business is the election of Ellery W. Mann, vice-president of the H. K. McCann Company, to its board of directors.
IS EDITORIAL PAGE PASSING AS OPINION MOUNDER?

Many observers fear editorial readers are lured away by other attractions in modern newspapers—noted editorial men uphold old traditions.

Does the editorial writer of today, in trying to please the Italian, the Dane, the Pole, the Austrian, the Englishman, the Irishman, the politician, the sentimentalist, etc., ad lib., compose a vigorous editorial of opinion or merely a rhetorical exercise in evasion?

Is the gentleman who, with fellow with opinion in his willingness to erase himself from public view, who, with a free hand, with a wide room in which merely mix well, democratic and a pacifist in his reluctance to slap a subscriber on the wrist, is the old-fashioned editorial writer, mental jack of all trades who wrote with equal authority on sewage or fashions, education or politics, a member of a passing age? Are editors today the cold boiled potatoes of journalism? Are editorial readers, ...t — — 'CONTINUOUS NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING BUILDS UP OMAHA.

An all-the-year newspaper advertising campaign made Omaha an outstanding example of community advertising in a direct advertising of eighty communities, John J. Good, president of the Farrelly-Walsh Company, St. Louis, declared recently. His city in its advertising effort has sent over by Omaha, entitled "How Does Omaha Advertise," as follows: "Omaha, as any advertiser, is interested in advertising as a service. Every advertiser knows that the term advertising is of negative value and that the public is not always convinced of purpose are essential to the success of an advertising campaign. "Instead of going into newspapers occasionally—in other words, "sporadic advertising," Omaha goes into fifty metropolitan and country papers for thirteen hundred insertions. She spreads out her efforts over the year without concentrating all in one or two seasons."

URGES PUBLIC UTILITIES TO ADVERTISE IN PRESS.

Newspaper advertisements are a means to inform the public that public utility companies are not selling a commodity but a service that is guaranteed to be reliable, regular, and satisfactory. It is urged by Philip H. Gadsden, vice-president of the United Gas Improvement Company of Philadelphia, in an address before the Pennsylvania Electric Association at Philadelphia. Mr. Gadsden stated that the public is unfamiliar with the fundamental economics of the public utility business.

Newspaper men more than any other class of workers are trained in emergencies, says E. F. Nelson, correspondent of the Associated Press at Portland, Ore., although without the co-operation of others, the greatest efforts may end in failure.

"The newspaper profession has furnished many heroic examples of meeting emergencies," says Mr. Nelson, "but the numerous calamities, often the spirit of friendly co-operation has asserted itself to a degree which has often left forgotten their differences and fought one another's battles."

"The Astoria fire in various parts of the country it has occurred brought newspaper advertisements of a kind that have been burned out or have suffered other disaster, its most active editor and its leading printers use until the unfortunate one has been able to restore its own equipment."

A correspondent acts promptly. "Every newspaperman has been thrilled by the record of Astoria's meeting of the Associated Press at Portland, attacking the fire, and I want to call by long distance with all available facts."

"Hardly had I reached the office that he was doing me out not in answer to my message which may be doing it on his own initiative. He gave me a wire for the Astoria fire, and I was getting a wireless. My first act was to wire our correspondent at Astoria, asking him to call by long distance with all available facts."

"It was not only complete in detail, but had an estimate of loss of life at that hour which a newspaper could not wait for the press. Uniformed officials were powerless.

With 217 editors, publishers and managing editors of leading Texas newspapers in attendance, the forty-fourth annual convention of the Texas Press Association ended at Galveston Saturday with the election of Sam M. Braswell of the Clarendon News as president and the choosing of Amarillo for next year's meeting. Among the outstanding features of the convention were a discussion by Tom Flinty, Jr., of the Dallas Journal on the need for changes in the law of libel; a condemnation of alleged attempts to create a monopoly in the field of advertising agencies as well as the charging of large commission rates, and the appointment of a field secretary. Sam P. Harben, for twenty years secretary of the association, was elected unanimously to the new office.

CHARLES PRAISES UNSELFISH ATTITUDE OF NEW YORK CLUB DELEGATES.

Harry H. Charles, president of the Advertising Club of New York, in a letter to the club's delegates to the Atlantic City convention, praised them for their unselfish attitude of universal helpfulness throughout the sessions. Mr. Charles' letter follows: "You have upheld the best traditions of our club. Collectively and individually, you sought nothing for yourselves, nor even for your club, except the consciousness of having done what was best from the broadest point of view. "You have been understood too as exactly what you are, and I am sure every active delegate from any other city departed with the firm conviction that the Advertising Club of New York exists for the good it can do."

WAYS TO PUT PEP INTO THE CLASSIFIED FORCE

RAPID EXPANSION OF WANT ADS INTO VITAL BUSINESS BUILDING DIVISION REQUIRES CAPABLE SALESMEN WHO STUDY NEWSPAPER, SAYS BARRINGER.

The sleeper exists and thrives in every classified advertising department and is found among the one- and two-counter workers who receive voluntary Want-Ad business either.

He puts little or no extra time, thought or effort into his work. His only thought is of the copy for today—no effort as to development for the future. He is the copy chaser supreme.

He laughs at promotion ideas—and declares that the salesman is the only producer. He steadfastly refuses to make use of ideas handed him by his newspaper to pass on to his advertisers.

He is thoroughly sold on the idea that he is a salesman. He makes a very good appearance, but his territory contact fails to ring the old cash register.

The sleeper is a salesman put to work. The most drastic remedy would be to have the account men enlist the classified advertising organization suffering from the dread disease, and get rid of the rubbish.

H. G. Barringer of the Indianapolis News, one of the leading classified managers of the country, "This plan would necessarily mean the training of many new salesmen—an expensive method, to say the least. The solution to this problem probably consists in selling the newspaper section of the classified advertising to the classified salesmen—what his possessors may be sold to his own real and real money saved for his newspaper.

He is a sleeper to work. The solution which probably comes nearest to solving the problem is to sell the newspaper to the salesmen individually; making him see the advantages which he has of any other sales representative of the particular newspaper for which he is working, and the progress that will be his through the taking of an honest-to-goodness interest in his task.

The Sleeper, however, may be, can comprehend progress except in terms applied directly to himself—never can be men in general, and the sleeper in particular, see the advisability of putting forth additional effort to master the fundamentals of his profession except as interpreted by his sales manager.

In recent years it has come to be a universally recognized fact in the sales world that in order to succeed fully sell any product, the salesman must know all about that product—and his work.

And in the selling of classified advertising in particular, the sales service element enters vitally into every single sale, knowledge of the newspaper and its contents, and complete information regarding the newspapers in which want ads are to appear are absolutely essential parts of the equipment of the successful classified salesman.

EDUCATING THE SALESMAN.

One of the first and most important steps in the process of selling the sleeper to work is an intensive campaign of education designed to teach him, in a simple and plain language, the workings of every single depart

KATZ UNEARTHS EIGHTEENTH CENTURY ADS—THOUGH ODD, THEY HOLD HEADER.

Eighteenth century advertisements were no worse than many of the present vintage, according to Joseph Katz of the Katz Advertising Company, Baltimore. From various sources Mr. Katz produces advertisements of the era which, though perhaps curious, are in good style and bound to attract attention. The following are specimens unearthed by Mr. Katz: "I know of several curious women who would work as many as thirty-two hours a week. They are good housekeepers."

"It was a complete young man, that will wear a livery, to wait on a very valuable gentleman, but he must know how to play on a violin or flute."

"One that has waited on a lady divers years and understands all affairs in housekeeping and the needle, directly her husband returns. She seems a discreet, staid body."

Mr. Katz thinks the author of the following ad was a born advertising man: "If the party who took a fancy to my overcoat was interested in the incubator of the weather, all right; but if it was of no commercial consequence, I am ready to negotiate for its return."

The following ad, uncalled, was sufficiently unusual to create a commotion when it appeared a number of years ago in the London Times: "Should this meet the eye of the lady who got into the 12:30 train at New Cross Station on Friday, May 19, with two boys, one of whom was evidently in spots and understands all illness, she may be pleased to learn that she is a young lady who is in the carriage are very ill with the measles, and the health of the fourth far from what her relations could desire."

TEXAS PUBLISHERS TO MEET IN GALVESTON.

The annual convention of the Texas Press Association will be held in Galveston, June 7th, 8th and 9th. President S. D. Cleestnut, Secretary E. Sam Jackson, and the sub-committee on program and program committees in charge have prepared a substantial program of entertainment, which Galveston folks have made arrangements to give the publishers and their families a good entertainment.

All members of the Texas Daily Press Association are members of the Texas Press Association.
SHIELTAL TALKS ON PUTTING OVER CIRCULATION

TELLS HOW WASHINGTON TIMES-HERALD PUT ITSELF BEFORE BIG CROWD AT SMALL COST; GAVE AWAY BASEBALL TICKETS TO OPENING GAME AT CAPITAL CITY.

Newspaper publicity is probably harder to put over than any other form of advertising for the simple reason that the newspaper is so busy grinding other people's axes that they very often neglect their own.

"It is always a way to do this, but the way is not always clear. There is no stock mode of procedure because conditions vary in each locality," writes W. C. Shelton, circulation director of the Washington Times and Herald. "But examples are cropping up now and again as witness a very progressive bit of publicity staged by the Washington Times and Herald before an audience of 24,800 paid-admissions to the opening American League baseball game this season."

"It didn't cost the two newspapers $500 between them. 'Skilllet' Finn, Esq., a sporting-page feature writer who is the counterpart in Washington of 'Bugs' Baer in New York, and who is known in the Capital City equally as widely as President Harding himself, was pressed into service."

USED "SKILLET" FINN.

Beginning on the theory that "Skilllet" Finn, Esq., was the best or next-best known man in Washington, an acrostic content—a letter arrangement competition planned in the circulation department—was conducted under "Skilllet's" chaperonage, lasting six weeks, over which period he gave away a little over 150 baseball tickets for the opening game, or four tickets a day to successful writers of acrostics. The basis for each acrostic was the number of votes cast on the Washington American League baseball team. There were three winners announced every day, and the first of the three winners received two baseball tickets to the opening game, and the second and third winners, one ticket each.

BABBSON'S UNIQUE PLAN FOR AD RATES.

Would increases or cuts in schedules during periods of business ups and downs affect the sale size of papers and aid economic readjustment?

Roger Babson, internationally known statistician, is an advocate of increasing or reducing advertising rates as business is expanded or depressed. In this manner, newspapers would be of a uniform size at all paper prices and during a business decline, even worse economic conditions would be averted through a continued use of advertisements. Discussing "Advertising as a barometer of business," Mr. Babson recently said:

"When business is recklessly expanding, it should be permitted to be increased materially; so that when business is depressed , advertising rates may be correspondingly reduced. One of the best barometers of business is the size of our daily papers. I do not want to reduce the size of our papers over a period of years. I see them continue to increase in size. I, however, do object to a big paper one year, and then an under-sized paper the next year. Business conditions will be commendable if growth is increased only when the amount of advertising becomes steady and gradually increases, and advertising is not merely the result of fluctuations in business; but are the result of steady expansion."

A concern stops advertising because its business has gone off, but the fact of its stopping advertising makes business still worse than it otherwise would be. To speak statistically, advertising begins to fall off because it is declining and not because it is growing; but business declines to the depth much worse than it otherwise would if the advertising were increased.

"In periods of prosperity, when there is plenty of money, a great many advertisers prefer education, and institutional advertising. When an editor then applies these same advertisers cutting'appropriations and cancelling space.

"All small advertisers who are selling direct to the consumer or by those who are tracing returns to their copy, continue to advertise largely because their bread and butter depends upon it. In many cases retailers are often caught with high cost goods on their shelves and must advertise ever more in order to liquidate and escape bankruptcy. This class of advertising tends to hold its own straight through a business depression. So long as a newspaper has a huge circulation, it is practically a wide publicity copy, while most of the newspaper space is merchandising space and can be sold at a premium."

A new invention plays an important part in the development of the newspaper advertising field, says Robert F. Salade, in the American Printer. Radio, for example, although only in its infancy has already brought a new amount of new business for the papers. A recent issue of a great daily paper has shown that an advertising man can play advertising made up of many smaller sized ads or dealers handling...
USE FRONT PAGE ADS, BRITON ADVISES.

HEAD OF PROMINENT LONDON AGENCY DECLARES RETAIL ADVERTISING IS NEWS AND SHOULD GET PREFERENCE ACCORDINGLY — HOLDS IT BENEFITS PAPERS' MAKE-UP.

Speaking from the British viewpoint, but believing it applicable to American newspapers, Mr. Sampson-Clarke, head of the largest London agency handling retail accounts, who is here with the Thirty Club of London, said that the present newspaper makeup could be greatly improved to the benefit of reader and advertiser.

Mr. Sampson-Clarke stated emphatically that retail advertising was news and pointed out that during the war Lord Northcliffe gave explicit instructions to give retail advertisements preference on the front pages of the London Mail when curtailment of advertising space was necessary.

Mr. Sampson-Clarke's methods of handling retail accounts is of interest to American ad men. He has twenty-seven competing accounts, all dry goods stores, or "drapers," which is the English way of designating women's specialty shops. His clients complete confidence enables him to specialize. Each account is handled by contact men, who do most of the writing themselves. So efficient has his organization become that he handles more than two million dollars' worth of business for London retail stores yearly. One store alone spends nearly half a million with him. Contrary to American practice, his compensation comes from the newspapers.

Americans will note with interest his thought that women cannot write or handle copy as well as men. In his large organization he has only three women copywriters and those he uses, he said, "to catch howlers," which he termed errors in descriptions.

AWARD OF WOLFE MEDAL AT OHIO STATE.

MIDDLETOWN OHIO MAN WINNER THIS YEAR WITH THESIS ON SUBJECT "THE PART OF THE NEWSPAPER IN THE COMMUNITY"— WILL TAKE UP ACTIVE WORK.

Karl Done Pauly, of Middletown, Ohio, was awarded the journalism honor medal which was provided for by a gift to Ohio State University four years ago, by Robert F. Wolfe, publisher of the Columbus Dispatch and the Ohio State Journal. The purpose of the gift was to insure a more intensive study of the practical problems of newspaper work, and the award each year is made on the basis of scholarship and the writing of a thesis in the last year. Mr. Pauly's winning thesis was on "The Part of the Newspaper in the Community," a careful study of the paper's various lines of usefulness.

Mr. Pauly has served successively as reporter, sports editor, news editor and feature writer of the Lantern, university daily. He has also served as sports correspondent of the Columbus Dispatch, using the pen name "Wahoo," and as correspondent of the International News Service. He is a brother of Frank B. Pauly, editor-manager of the Middletown Journal and president of the Associated Press Editors of Ohio. Mr. Pauly will take up the position of Sunday editor of the Middletown Journal.

MANY PUBLISHERS NAMED TO IMPORTANT STATE JOBS.

Governor Friend A. Richardson of California, himself a prominent newspaper proprietor and editor for many years, has named many publishers in his appointments. One of the latest is J. O. The association has had four secretaries beginning with J. L. Boeshans, originally of the Ohio State Journal, Columbus, Ohio, who served as secretary from the time of its organization in 1898 until 1907, a term of nine years. He was succeeded by Jos. R. Taylor, of the Grand Rapids Press, who served for some six years or more beginning with 1906. Mr. Taylor was succeeded by J. M. Matthews of Oklahoma City, who served for a year or two and was succeeded by Clarence Eyster of the Peoria Star, who now holds that office.

It has been said of the four secretaries that all of the members of the association, numbering at least 1,000, have been none who stood higher or who were more efficient in circulation work.

Some of the first who joined the association and who have remained members to the present time are:

K. S. Weir, then and now circulation manager of the Syracuse Herald; Thomas Downey, who continues to represent the Boston Globe, although he has passed the allotted time of three score years and ten; George H. Reynolds of New Bedford, now in the printing and publishing business, who no doubt again serve as Sergeant-at-Arms; R. L. McLain, of the Philadelphia Bulletin; E. P. Advertising is to business what irrigation and fertilizers are to the crops. And advertising is a perennial crop. Well planted, it bears fruit year after year. It is the one asset that nothing can take from you, except your own foolishness.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OF NOTABLE PROGRESS.

In the busiest period ever experienced by the newspapers of the United States, the International Circulation Managers Association met Monday in the picturesque Muskoka lake region to celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary.

With President Harding who has extended his good wishes and hopes for the continued progress of this powerful organization and many other leaders in the newspaper world, The Fourth Estate extends greeting and congratulates the largest organization of its kind in the newspaper business.

In those twenty-five years since a group of pioneer circulation men met in Detroit Free Press their first president, down to the splendid year of achievement under President J. J. Lynch of the Cleveland Press, many noted newspapers have been represented in the personnel of officers and directors and an entire newspaper world has been practically revolutionized by mechanical, administrative, advertising, and editorial developments.

As it goes through the bound volumes of The Fourth Estate, whose origin antedates the formation of the circulation managers association by over four years, there is understood the speed with which a new era of newspaper making with the circulation managers always in the forefront.

Under the heading of "Newspaper Circulation" the organization has run a narrative of the advances, step by step, made by the newspaper industry in the art of circulation up to the time when it is not possible within our space to state all the mile stones nor is it possible within our reach now to detail all the developments of the linotype, the telephone, the new publishing machines, the evolution of news and feature services, the dawn of a new mobile, the advance of the airplane, and the laws and the fatalities and the plagues which have beset the world and tested the minds and the hearts of the circulation managers. It is not possible to say that they have gone on and no more but by the account that they have not dimmed their enthusiasm.

So, good wishes for the benefits of the future which flow from Muskoka's meeting and a salute for the progress of another twenty-five years.

The BRITONS ACHIEVE THEIR MARK.

Leaving the hospitable shores of America John Cheshire echoed the sentiments and the movement which pleased for a few moments to rest. In many respects the winding up of the visitors' successful trip to America has reminded one of the whirl wind campaign of an office seeker. But these newspapers British ones have done more for bettering the relations between the two countries than any other man's task than these distinguished papers. The friendship of the two countries was placed in delightful hands and we are sure of the necessity for their hasty return.

EDITOR FINNEY EXPOUNDS THE CODE.

Every now and then some newspaper man sets off the torch of journalism with such a flare that those in the profession sit back in admiration. This time it is "Jim" Finney, editor of the Columbia Tenn., Herald. Mr. Finney declined appointment by the State Board of Education of Tennessee because "being an editor I am responsible for honest, frank and unbiased opinions. If I couldn't carry out this conscientious regard for his duty to his reading public accept any responsibility for anything in my writings, might in the nature of things affect his judgment or control of expression."

Jim's attitude that is one can not keep a straight face when he reads "truth in advertising" pages. A lot of editors may differ with Jim, but the man does not. A speaker at the Ad Clubs convention stated that there were two kinds of automobile advertising—first, those paid for by the manufacturer, second, by the advertising agencies. So far as we know, he has not carried around a staff of press agents to extol his own cars. So far as we know, he has not been a great advertiser. In fact, he appears to have a theory that Ford is entirely a victim of first page publicity. His work has been news because it is unique, distinctive and successful considering the vast industrial fabric which he has to figure how much advertising space these same orators would buy, if their flights of eloquence were confined to advertising pages.

Cornelius Cole, a patriarch now past 100 years of age and hale and hearty, recently in an interview said the following: "Modern newspapers make it impossible for us to grow a little more especially currently."

Cornelius Cole is famed for having sat on the platform of a meeting at Gettysburg when President Lincoln made his historic speech. He was a senator for many years and lives on his suburban home site at Sherman, near Los Angeles. It would appear that some enterprising promotion man hasn't advertised "the paper that Cornelius Cole reads; read it and stay young."

MORE EQUIPMENT FOR TRENTON TIMES.

INCLUDING NEW SUPER SPRINT PRESS AND SEVERAL MACHINES—EXTENSIVE ALTERATIONS IN THE BUILDING BEING MADE AT SAME TIME—NEW SANDSTONE FRONT.

The Trenton N. J., Times has just completed the installation of a Hoe Superspeed press and several machines. Several new linotype machines have recently been added to the equipment. The alterations will bring the building and equipment up to modern standards. The presses are capable of producing any size of newspaper up to 64 pages.

In addition to the installation of the Hoe press, the general renovation and improvement being made to the Trenton Times' building and equipment, the Trenton Times is also making extensive alterations and additions to the city's newspaper industry.

WOMEN URGE CLEANER PRESS

Los Angeles women have started a movement for cleaner newspapers. Led by the Women's City Club of Los Angeles, organizations representing more than 300,000 persons have joined the campaign. Southern California newspapers have been called upon to refrain from featuring crime and scandal and to avoid spreading rumors and morbid and sensational events across their front pages.

"JUST AS GOOD" CAUSES LOSS OF MANY CUSTOMERS.

Why do people stop trading at certain stores? An investigation was conducted not long ago among about 200 housewives which brought out the following reasons why they transferred their trade from various retail stores:

1. Indifference of salespeople                         47
2. Effort to substitute                             47
3. Tricky methods                                   18
4. Slow deliveries                                  17
5. Over insistence of salepeople                    16
6. Insolence of salespeople                         16
7. Necessary delays in servicing                     11
8. Tacitless business policies                      11
9. Bad arrangement of store                         9
10. Unfairness concerning goods                      8
11. Refusal to exchange goods                        4
12. Poor arrangement of store                       4
13. Refusal to exchange goods                        4
14. Poor arrangement of store                       4
15. Refusal to exchange goods                        4
16. Poor arrangement of store                       4
17. Refusal to exchange goods                        4
18. Poor arrangement of store                       4
19. Refusal to exchange goods                        4
20. Poor arrangement of store                       4

The figures show that the indifferent salesperson is the biggest stumbling block in the way of holding steady trade. What's the answer? Some stores provide some means of teaching them the rudiments of selling and the essential points about the goods they have over the counter.

PAPER ADVOCATES LIFTING JAPANESE CURTAIN OF CENSORSHIP.

The Osaka Mainichi, one of Japan's largest newspapers, is advocating abolition of press censorship in that country. Newspapers in Japan operate under the fear of censorship and many are closing their doors on new talent. The police have been given sweeping powers to prevent publication of anything.

Editorially the paper said recently: "The laws governing the newspapers of this country were enacted in a titular spirit of Honor; no amendment worth noting has been made since. Not only are they too strict, but worse than that, they entirely destroy the understanding of what modern journalism is and should be. A batch of low salaried officials entrusted with this colossal duty of judging whether certain news and certain facts may be permitted to appear in the paper or not. We are fully convinced of the fact that there should be some body of censors at central or national level who could advice modern journalism would fare all the better. All kinds of suspicion, fear and misapprehension result from suppression."

SYNDICATE NOTES.

The Bell Syndicate is now sending out a series of articles written by David Lloyd George on the subject "Politics as a Profession."

During the past week Jim Barnes and Gene Sarazen both well known American golf experts, have been covering the British Open Golf Championship Tournament at Toon, Scotland for the Bell Syndicate. The articles were released to a select group of newspapers.

Neysa McMein is writing a series of articles now for the Bell Syndicate on portrait painting. The first will appear in newspapers in about a week.

H. M. Snevily of the Bell Syndicate promotion department is making an extended tour which will carry him to the west coast. He expects to be away from his office for three months.

Peter B. Kyne is writing a special series of articles which will be syndicated through the Bell Syndicate. The articles are released to newspapers for Saturday and Sunday publication. The series revolve around the activities of Kyne's famous character "Cappy Ricks."

Ed Clode of the Bell Syndicate business department is now making a trip through the middle west.

Vincent Richards, American indoor tennis champion, is at Wimbledon, England, to compete for the English championship. He will also write a series of articles for the Universal service.

Sam E. Whitmire, market editor of the Universal service has returned from his vacation.

Arthur M. Howe, editor of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, received an honorary degree from St. Lawrence university this week.

GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL IS NEW OWNER OF RIO DE JANEIRO "JORNAL."

Felix Pacheco, Brazilian foreign minister, is the new owner of the Rio de Janeiro "Jornal do Commercio," which is the second oldest newspaper in South America. It is the oldest newspaper in the republic of Brazil. It was established in 1827 by a French adventurer.

In size the Jornal is one of the largest newspapers in the world, measuring 27 inches and from edge to edge 20 inches. The Jornal do Commercio is noted for its unique make-up and its ultra conservatism. The first page and part of the second page are devoted to the regular arrangement of groups, each group containing news from any one city. After the foreign news comes local news events, news from the interior of Brazil, official notes, theatres, sports, market quotations, shipping news and then advertising pages.

SIGMA DELTA CHI TO MEET.

The ninth annual convention of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity, will be held in Minneapolis, November 22 and 23, according to a decision reached by the executive officers at a meeting recently in Chicago.

The meeting also considered a proposal made by Theta Sigma Phi for the establishment of a "central council" of representatives of existing journalistic organizations looking to the establishment of a general code of ethics for newspapers.

A survey of chapter rolls of Sigma Delta Chi and Theta Sigma Phi was presented, showing that active chapters of both are located in twenty-one colleges and alumni chapters in four cities. The meeting went on record as favoring co-operation between the chapters of the two organizations wherever possible.

AVERAGE STOCK is the average amount invested in stock for a given period. Average stock is found by adding the inventory at the beginning of the period to the inventory at the close of the period, and dividing by 2. Example: A store's inventory at the beginning of the month was $48,242, and at the end of the month was $48,278 at selling price. ($48242 + $48278) equals $96,520. Divided by 2 is $48,260 (average stock for the month).

An office boy who keeps his eyes and ears open can acquire a valuable amount of information, even though the supply is limited, from a carelessness of the classified department as a whole. Few other people get this panorama of the department because they are absorbed in their immediate surroundings. But still the boss does not get it all, for he is boss, and he hears only what employees deem advisable that he should hear.
On the other hand, the office boy hears any bitterness, any complaining that employees may have against the management, often when the manager is unaware of the fact, and most always over small petty differences that if brought to light would not amount to "a hill of beans."

"Baldy" is short, is a pleasant, smiling little man with a cheerful voice, who has probably read more about events in sport than any other living man—and who knows what they really mean to the newspaper readers.
"He has handled enough copy coming red-hot from reporters on the scene of prize fights, horse races, football, basketball, baseball, and the like, to wrap it all up in a nice cover of paper."

WILL QUIT SPORTS WIRE AFTER 25 YEARS.

McCarthy PAYS FIRST VISIT TO HOME TOWN AFTER ABSENCE OF 50 YEARS.

The battle of Boyle's Thirty Acres, when Carpenter fell before Dempsey, was close. His man at writer was hammering out the tale of the defeat of old Jack Johnson by Willard one very hot day in Havana.
This his story has been woven into the fabric of the sporting news of the world. Always his sports stories have been the things that mean the most to others.
"Delaware B. Baldwin never actively witnessed the roaring run of a Harvard back through the outposts of Yale, but he had felt it happen time and again as he took the story from the wires as it was toned to another operator at the scene by a reporter."
"He lived twenty-five years in the thick of the sporting turmoil, though never actually of it. He was first to run the story when a New York paper called the Turners' flash that set the newspaper press to stirring with the sporting extras."

PLANS FOR PEKING JOURNALISM SCHOOL.

PART OF HALF MILLION DOLLAR FUND ALREADY RAISED — SCHOOL TO BE MODELED AFTER COLUMBIA AND TO INCLUDE ANNUAL TRAVELING FELLOWSHIPS.

A school of journalism will be established by the University of Peking, if plans for raising a half million dollars for this purpose are successfully carried out. A part of the fund has already been raised. The school is to be modelled in general after the journalism school of Columbia University. It is estimated that the sum of $500,000 will be sufficient to erect the necessary buildings and provide an endowment.

Details of the project were worked out by Dr. J. Leighton Stuart, president of the University of Peking, while on a trip to America last year. While in America Dr. Stuart conferred with a number of leading newspaper editors and heads of different schools of journalism. The endowment estimate includes a provision for traveling scholarships similar to Pulitzer traveling scholarships granted annually to three graduates of the Columbia School who have made exceptional records.

WILL AWARD FELLOWSHIPS.

The Peking School of Journalism is to award two-year fellowships, each carrying a stipend of $1,500 a year, to enable graduates who evince appropriate promise to take advanced studies in universities in the United States and gain experience in the daily newspaper work, with a view to returning to China better equipped for work on native papers.

The new school, according to the policy outlined, will take up the year course leading to a baccalaureate degree.

Dr. Stuart pointed out that the city offered exceptional opportunities for student editors and writers to gain experience along with their scholastic training. Peking now has about seventy-five daily newspapers, or about double the number published in any other Chinese city. In all, about 800 daily papers are now published throughout China. Virtually all of these have been established since the beginning of the anti-monarchical movement which culminated in the revolution of 1911. In 1895, before this movement began to operate, there were only thirty-one native daily papers in China.

KATZ PLEADS FOR SINCERITY IN ADVERTISING COPY.

Advertising, Mr. Katz states, today is largely a matter of formula, and the manner in which the Cincinnati, Ohio, edition of the next advertising, he declared, is that it talks like a book. Asserting that advertising advertising without any journalistic educational facilities.

Dr. Stuart hopes that sufficient funds will be obtained, together with the amounts already in hand for this specific purpose, to open the school in the Fall of 1924.

KATZ PLEADS FOR SINCERITY IN ADVERTISING COPY.

Advertising, Mr. Katz states, today is largely a matter of formula, and the manner in which the Cincinnati, Ohio, edition of the next advertising, he declared, is that it talks like a book. Asserting that advertising, he declared, is that it talks like a book. Asserting that advertising was not merely an art, but was a profession, Mr. Katz continued: "I want to make a plea for more sincerity in the writing of advertising copy. I want to ask you, for the benefit of our craft, to do less speechmaking in your copy and more thinking. I want to make a plea for the lifting of the artificial, and I want to see the day when the loud-mouthed ad writer takes his place with the other writers in the school of elocution that is now mercifully a thing of the past."

You Covet the Advertising, says Oregon Publisher.

Points for the advertising salesman, the fruit of a year of experience in the field, were recently given by Ernest R. Gilstrap, vice-president of the Morning Register Company of Eugene, Oregon, and advertising manager of the morning Register Company, to Oregon publishers.

"The advertising man in reality is working for the advertisers," Mr. Gilstrap told the publishers. "From my experience, I know that it is highly efficient for an advertising man to know something about merchandise. He must be able to advise the advertiser as to the selling points from its point of view. The more he knows of the nature of the business, the easier it is to tell the story. An advertising man must be more than a copy-chaser; he must be able to advise the copy-writer to get the best results. You must also take an interest in the advertiser's business. In planning space it should be remembered that you are not the only one interested in getting a copy; the manufacturer is interested in the space, and the advertiser in the space. You must give the space to the advertiser in such a way as to make it worth his while to advertise and to get the selling points from it. The more of this knowledge he acquires, the easier it is to tell the story. An advertising man must be more than a copy-chaser; he must be able to advise the copy-writer to get the best results."

BRITON CONDEMNS THE BILLBOARD EVIL IN U.S.

LONDON NEWSPAPER MAN FAILS TO APPRECIATE AMERICAN ADVERTISERS' MODE OF LANDSCAPE ART—THINKS BASEBALL IS SILLY—IS AGHAST AT VILE EATABLES.

American billboards fail to arouse an English newspaperman to enthusiasm. Admittedly, he appreciated little of our national mode of landscape art. Urie B. Wiamsey, of the Hulton publications of London, made no reservations in discussing the constant losses of scenic beauty by the growing aggressions of ill-looked after billboards.

"You know I was most interested in your baseball game," he barked, "it seemed to silly when you all rose at the close of the sixth, or was it the seventh inning?" reported the reporter.

"Inning—and stand there. I found out later you did it to stretch your legs. You thought it queer. And we thought it queer that such a seemingly absurd thing should attract such vast throngs.

"Once a player hit the ball into our crowd and we returned it to him. Later we discovered that it would have been quite ethical for us to have kept it.

"It was at the game that we had some of those grocery etables you Americans enjoy so much. Those long red arad sandwiches, what do you call them? Frankfurters? Yes. Oh, horrible!"

"You know," he said, "your landscapes are most untidy. In England our countryside is held by—stone fences and all that you know; here billboards and billboards and your telegraph poles—they look as if the constructors had been so busy they hadn't time to finish them. Our English postmen, on the contrary, are neatly planked and polished. They are never horn-rimmed spectacles, or so few pipes. Why don't you smoke pipes?

"Here is a great deal more makeup than ours. You certainly are dance mail, aren't you?"

He turned and went back to his column.

"I think your sweet potatoes are simply incredible. Amazons, I think."

"Where do you grow your cattle?"

"He asked. "Do you grow billboards in your fields instead of cattle?"

NEWSPAPER AS RETAILER'S BEST AD MEDIUM.

"The newspaper is the big retail store's one best medium of communication with the public," Charles W. Mears, counselor in marketing of Cleveland, told the Associated Retailers of the Northwest, "Looking toward the future," he said, "the prospect is that newspaper advertising rates will never again be lower than they are today, but in spite of this the rates will be higher. For this there are several reasons. In the first place, there is competition for the daily newspaper as an advertising medium. In the second place, the number of newspapers published is not likely to increase, not only because to establish a new paper costs a lot of money, but also because the great news service franchises in big cities. Sustained price, are strictly held, thereby making new competition difficult.

UPHOLSTERY LIBERTY OF PRESS.

President Chesnutt paid a high tribute to the country editor in his annual address and noted the progress of the Texas Press Association during the past year. "Let us ever remember," he said, "and let it be instilled into our children, that the liberty of the press is that palladium of all civil, political and religious rights of American homes. It is the grand sentinel of the state and the grand detector of public impostors. Good government is impossible when it sinks there sinks with it in the country editor, the citizen and the security of the nation."

The appointment of the field secretary, the association decided to establish headquarters in one of the principal cities of Texas and from there to conduct all business beneficial to and necessary for the interests of the newspapers of the state. J. L. Dunn of the Amarillo News, announced that Amarillo, which had been named for next year's convention by an unanimous vote, had set aside $1,000 for entertainment.

SCORE HIGH AGENCY RATES.

Considerable discussion centered on the service of the American Press Association in the advertising field, some declaring that it is attempting to build up a monopoly against the nearly 300 independent advertising agencies.

H. Mayers, former lieutenant governor and present head of the Journalism department of the University of Texas, denounced the practice of the big advertising agencies charging a 30 percent commission for supplying foreign advertising to the newspapers.

Professor Mayers declared that the tendency among publishers was rather to reduce the usual commission of 15 percent paid to the advertising agency down to 2 1/2 percent rather than to raise it to 30 percent.

C. E. Harris, publisher of the Bay County Banner declared that he has a flat rate, the same for foreign advertising as for locals. A. W. Sledge of the Ballinger Bulletin declared

A feature of the convention was a visit to the Texas Star flour mill, where there were discussions with the millers, wives, learned "everything about the milling industry."

President of the Dallas State Press insisted that although he had started the convention and was keeping up the stride, he had not been given a showing at the convention except in his sea togs. "The first time I was here," he continued. "I neglected to draw the folds of my mosquito bar about me and was given marked attention."

Sirens of the sea beckoned to many editors, who unable to resist the call of the waves, threatened to transform the convention into a water carnival.

The wisdom of consolidation among newspapers in the interest of bigger and sounder and abler journalism has never been better demonstrated than in the merging of The New York Sun and The New York Globe.

SILVER JUBILEE CONVENTION REACHES HIGH MARK OF SERVICE AND THOUGHT — MANY NOTABLE ADDRESSES BY LEADING CIRCULATION MANAGERS.

Generally recognized as the most successful in point of attendance and in work done of any convention held during its twenty-five years, the International Association of Circulation Managers adjourned its annual meeting in Muskoka Lakes to meet again in 1924 in Louisville, Ky. M. W. Florer, circulation manager of the Dallas, Tex., News and the Dallas, Tex., Journal was chosen president of the association. Other officers elected were: Robert S. Weir, Syracuse, N. Y., Journal, first vice-president; E. R. Hatton, Detroit, Mich., Free Press, second vice-president; Clarence Eyster, Peoria, Ill., Evening Star, secretary-treasurer. George McTaggart of the Toronto, Ont., Mail and Empire; Royal W. Weiler, Allentown, Pa., Call and Harold Hough of the Fort Worth, Texas, Star-Telegram were chosen new directors.

Throughout the conferences, a strong feeling of dis-satisfaction against the A. B. C. investigation and the A. B. C. management generally was noticeable. The A. B. C. was not represented at the convention and after a discussion on the general phases of the bureau, the president appointed a committee of three with the object of obtaining greater representation by publishers.

Reserved for a distinct surprise to the newspaper fraternity and official Washington generally, was the announcement made in President Harding's behalf at the White House, immediately prior to his departure on his Alaska trip, that the President had relinquished control of the Marion, Ohio, Star, the newspaper property which he obtained nearly forty years ago, and with which his subsequent achievements, has been so intimately linked.

PORTO RICANS PLEDGE VOTES TO RE-ELECT HARDING.

President Harding was pledged two votes for renomination by the Republicans of Porto Rico in special convention this week. They also adopted a platform with statehood as the goal and advocating the immediate liberalizing of the territorial industrial agreement to include the extension here of the United States Constitution and the election of the governor.

Statehood was advocated by Horace M. Towner, the new governor, in his first message to the legislature.

MILWAUKEE PAPER APPOINTS AD MAN PUBLISHER.

Rhey T. Snodgrass has been appointed publisher of the Milwaukee Wisconsin News and Sunday Telegram. He was formerly president and recently Mr. Snodgrass has been with New York advertising agency. More recently Mr. Snodgrass has been with the advertising staff of Cosmopolitan, New York.

AGENCY HEAD IS APPOINTED TRANSIT CO. DIRECTOR.

William H. Johns, president of the George Batten Company, New York, has been made a director of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation, a new organization formed to take over the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company which has been in receivership for the last three and a half years.

ACTRESS WINS LIBEL SUIT.

An Edinburgh, Scotland, court has awarded Miss Hetty King, a music hall artist £500 in a libel suit against a Glasgow newspaper. The paper had printed an alleged interview in which Miss King was made to say that the United States had lost its sense of humor over prohibition.

HEADS FRATERNITY ALUMNI.

Perry S. Williams was elected temporary president of an organization composed of alumni of the Twin Cities and Sigma Delta Chi press clubs and publishers at a meeting held at the Dykeman hotel, Minneapolis. The alumni chapter will assist in arrangements for the convention of forty universities of the country to be held in Minneapolis in September. Others elected include Robert Withy, St. Paul, first vice-president; Thomas Stewart, second vice-president; Ralph O. Higgen, secretary and E. J. D. Larson, treasurer.

During the term of the retiring president, J. J. Lynch, Cleveland, Ohio, Press; one-hundred and eight new members were added to the organization. The only woman circulation manager present was Miss Olive King of the Phoenix, Ariz., Republican who received special honors from the delegates because she traveled furthest to the convention. New York had the largest representation, there being fourteen from the Empire State, with Ohio second, the total attendance being somewhat over one-hundred circulation managers.

Louisville, El Paso and Colorado Springs put up a big fight for the 1924 meeting. During the debate Atlantic City put in a bid but withdrew in favor of Louisville.

S. N. P. A. CONVENTION WILL COVER WIDE FIELD

SOUTHERN PUBLISHERS WILL HOLD 21st ANNUAL MEETING AT WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS—VITAL PROBLEMS TO BE DISCUSSED—STEWART TO PRESIDE.

Advertising, circulation and labor problems will dominate the twenty-first annual convention of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 9-11. Mechanical, accounting and traffic problems as well as postal legislation will also hold prominent places on the program.

Sessions will start each morning at 9 o'clock and will end in the afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. There will be only one session each day so as to permit the delegates and visitors to enjoy the entertainment features at the noted mountain resort.

Monday's session will be called to order by President Charles I. Stewart of the Lexington, Ky., Herald. Following the officers' reports, which will also embrace an outline of the association's activities during the year, to be presented by Walter C.

SIOUX CITY PAPERS NEAR NORMAL CONDITIONS.

In a special telegram just as The Fourth Estate went to press, E. C. Tripp, of the Sioux City, Iowa, Tribune, stated that the next week newspapers are practically back to normal although the newspaper printers' strike continues.

The newspapers have full forces of open shop printers who have replaced the strikers, who walked out two weeks ago. The regular advertisers, however, in used space requirements in the eight edition daily, comprising six afternoon and two morning papers, are 25 per cent lower than normal.

Strikers are still picketing the newspaper plants and the publishers have stated that after this writer none of the strikers will be taken back. One striker was arrested to jail for three days for slugging an open shop operator. The union strippers and press men stated that their places when the strikers went out. The publishers have agreed to continue their fight for an open shop agreement.

MUNSEY ADVERTISING STAFF HEARS FITZGERALD TALK ON ROTOGRAVURE.

The Association of American Correspondents in London at its annual meeting on June 23, elected the following officers for the coming year:

BIG NEW EDITORIAL BOARD FOR AD CLUB ORGAN.

Douglas W. Couttey will assume the editorship of the Advertising Club News, issued by the Advertising Club of New York. Other members of the new editorial board will be as follows:

Johnston of the Chattanooga News, secretary-treasurer, the meeting will turn to a discussion of advertising.

The report of the committee on agency relations will be given the right of way on the first day. The committee on Southern advertising promotion will also report.

To discuss labor problems:

On Tuesday the convention will devote itself to discussions on labor, circulation, mechanical and traffic problems. The labor discussion will also include a report on the printers school maintained at Macon, Ga., by the S. N. P. A.

It is President Stewart's intention to recommend that the new officers be elected on Tuesday, and that they be formally installed as the last part of the program.

Wednesday's session will be given over to the editorial news department. This session will also discuss postal and other legislation.

The program committee has decided to make the sessions exclusive and has put no one on the program who is not a member of the association or who is not directly identified with its work. The special entertainment: (Continued on Thirteenth Page)

GUARDIAN FOR PUBLISHER.

Petition has been filed in the circuit court in Fort Smith, Ark., asking the appointment of Mrs. C. S. Jackson as guardian for C. S. Jackson, publisher of the Observer, now a minor. P. L. Jackson, son, joined with Mrs. Jackson in the petition, which alleges that Mr. Jackson has been in ill health for some time and is incapable of attending to his business affairs.

This view seemed to be the general opinion of the convention, despite the fact that H. C. Lee of the Philadelphia, Pa., Enquirer insisted that the radio had helped to increase his circulation.

Fred J. Cook of the Scranton, Pa., Republican discussed the newspaper and his position in the child labor law. In Virginia there is now a law making it practically impossible to use boys, and similar laws were stated, although being discussed in other states.

Mr. Florer told how he had organized the ex-newboys in Dallas, Texas, with the idea of convincing the public that the newspaper is not so bad as he is painted.

Very thoughtful and constructive papers dealing with serious problems confronting newspaper publishers were delivered by R. W. Wier of the Syracuse, N. Y., Journal; T. B. NOTE CIVIC BODY JOINS WAR ON BILLBOARDS

FIFTH AVENUE ASSOCIATION DEALS POWERFUL BLOW TO RAVAGE OF OUTDOOR SIGNS DESTROYING THE BEAUTIES OF THE METROPOLIS.

Billboard advertising, in its ever-increasing multiplicity of numbers in New York City, has become a subject for serious discussion. Some see it as an objectionable nuisance, violating the natural laws of beauty; others as an epoch in the history of a profession which has grown too rapidly to find universal favor.

There is some real cause for the protests that are heard from this first body, for advertisers, in their eagerness to command certain strategic points on the city's horizon to display their wares, have neglected to let any feeling of civic pride enter into their efforts.

"The beauty of various parts of the City of New York is greatly lessened and their value minimized," declares William J. Pedrick, general manager of the Fifth Avenue Association. "Our beautiful parks, streets and public buildings, of which the number of large and illuminated signs it carries, diverts attention from the New York Public Library and other great institutions across from it. The library building, as we know, is an architectural example of its kind and was erected at an expense of the city."

"It does seem too bad that in specific cases of this kind some provision cannot be made whereby public approval will be the judge of such matters."

It will be recalled that the Fifth Avenue Association conducted a successful campaign against projecting and illuminated signs a few years ago, having legislation passed that barred their use on many prominent streets.

Justice Davis, of the supreme court in Massachusetts, has great expense for the benefit and pleasure of all, are injured by the signs and prized, placed newly and almost as a domain of the properties themselves. One striking example at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second street, where the building at the northeast corner of a number of large and illuminated signs it carries, diverts attention from the New York Public Library, College, diagonally across from it. The library building, as we know, is an architectural example of its kind and was erected at an expense of the city."

"It does seem too bad that in specific cases of this kind some provision cannot be made whereby public approval will be the judge of such matters."

What Co-operation Has Done

Little more than half a century ago, Gustavus F. Swift borrowed $20 from his father and started in the packing business.

Hard work on his part and on the part of the associates whom he presently gathered about him caused the business to grow.

When first incorporated, Swift & Company had six shareholders. The nation was growing and needed meat, and the young company grew also. As more money was needed the business was enlarged by enlisting the co-operation of more shareholders.

The first little plant at Barnstable, Mass., has given way to 23 modern packing plants strategically located. More than 400 branch houses and 600 car routes distribute the meat carried in more than 6,000 refrigerators.

Today Swift & Company's service in meat to retailers here and abroad represents the effort of nearly 100,000 people co-operating with their savings or daily toil.

More than 45,000 men and women have co-operated with us by investing their money in shares of Swift & Company.

Nearly 50,000 men and women who work in these offices, plants and branch houses—16,000 of whom are also shareholders—are giving us their co-operation in building the business. They take a just pride in the promptness and precision of its service and in the uniformity and high quality of its products. Swift's Premium Hams and Bacon, 'Silverleaf' Brand Pure Lard, Premium Frankfurts and other Swift products are symbols of their hearty co-operation and of their belief in the Company.

McCLEAN NAMED CONSOLIDATED PRESS HEAD.

HAS NEW OFFICE OF GENERAL MANAGER—EPES TAKES BUSINESS DEPARTMENT—SMALL TO BE CHIEF OF SPECIAL STAFF WRITERS—LAWRENCE WITH HARDING.

At the semi-annual meeting of the board of directors of The Consolidated Press Association in Washington this week, the office of general manager was created and Robert B. McLean, now in charge of business management of the Consolidated Press, was elevated to that office.

The entire conduct of the service will be co-ordinated under Mr. McLean, the heads of the business, editorial, traffic and auditing departments reporting direct to him. The functional organization within these departments will continue to operate as hereforeto, but the rapid expansion of the Consolidated Press made the creation of the office an imperative as well as an important forward step.

Mr. McLean will be succeeded as business manager by Horace Epes, hereforeto assistant business manager.

Robert T. Small is to head the group of special staff writers of the Consolidated Press and will hereafter make his headquarters in New York City. This marks an evolution of plans submitted by Mr. Small and which the directors have had under consideration for some time. Mr. Small is being relieved of his duties as director of the editorial department so that he may devote himself entirely to special staff writing with a roving commission.

WILLIAMS IS TRANSFERRED.

Jay Jerome Williams was transferred from the business department and made director of the editorial department, with headquarters in Washington.

William E Valentine, who has been superintendent in the western and southern divisions of the Consolidated Press, was made superintendent of the eastern division with headquarters in New York City.

David Lawrence, who has been assistant executive of The Consolidated Press, will continue as heretofore to devote himself to his present work. Mr. Lawrence is accompanying the president on his western tour this week. Leaving the presidential party just before he goes to Alaska, Mr. Lawrence will return to the east and early in July will sail for Europe where he will devote two months or more to travel in England and on the Continent, sending back daily cable dispatches on conditions as he finds them.

Robert B. McLean brings to the general management a broad-gauged newspaper training of more than twenty years and has in every branch of newspaper work—reporting, business department and publishing. Mr. McLean's newspaper experience embraces work throughout the North in Harrisburg, Pa., Pittsburgh and New York City. As general manager he will conduct the Consolidated Press with its member newspapers through the offices of Robert T. Small as head of the special staff service.

For many years Bob Small was the war reporter of the Associated Press. Indeed, Melville E. Stone, formerly general manager of the A. P., termed him the "most graphic news writer in the United States."

TO WRITE SPECIAL ARTICLES.

Mr. Small was for several years the chief of the Associated Press Bureau in Washington and also was managing editor of the Washington Post. He came with the Consolidated Press, developed the editorial department and only his desire to be in the daily writing got ahead led to the change that makes him chief of the special staff service. After he will be available to cover the interpretative and colorful aids of big news events throughout the nation.

Horace Epes, the new business manager, is fitted for his position by a background of more than twenty years newspaper experience with newspapers, in the Associated Press, and in the field for the Consolidated Press.

Jay Jerome Williams, who becomes director of the editorial department, spent his entire newspaper life in the news and up to three years ago was a war correspondent for the Associated Press. Since then he has traveled from coast to coast and is at home with the problems and wants of editors in all parts of the country.

SOUTHERN DAILY APPOINTS GENERAL MANAGER.

R. B. Mahaffey, well-known throughout the South as an experienced newspaper executive, has been appointed general manager of the Wilmington, N. C., Evening and Sunday Dispatch, one of the oldest afternoon papers in the state, which was recently purchased by Major Joseph W. Little and J. L. Horn Jr.

Prior to joining the staff of the Wilmington Dispatch three months ago, when he took the duties of circulation manager, later being appointed advertising manager as well, Mr. Mahaffey was managing general manager on the Charleston, S. C., American, going from there to the Houston Post where recently he was general manager of the Waycross, Ga., Journal-Herald, Jack Williams.

Associated with Mr. Mahaffey on the Evening News are James Cruikshank, editor; Major E. W. Smith, business manager, and J. C. Bowers, advertising manager.

Major Joseph W. Little will devote his entire time to the management of the Wilmington Printing Company, a large commercial office. Mr. Little, the other owner, is also publisher and owner of the Rocky Mount, N. C. Telegram.

PUBLISHERS HOLD MEETING.

The Second District Editorial Association of Minnesota closed its summer meeting at Worthington, Minn., Sunday. The program of the convention included a drive about the city, receptions for the women of the party by the Community Club, a baseball game, a trip to the garlic park for the men, and a banquet tendered by the city and the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs.

Mayor E. J. Jones welcomed the members. President W. D. Hineon of Mankato, responded, and short speeches were made by J. C. Couglin of Waseca, president of the state association, and P. O. Resfelf, president of the Nobles County Publishers Association, sports at the tomatoes.

Seventy publishers, their wives and families were present. The summer meeting is devoted to pleasures, no business being transacted.

He came with the Consolidated Press, developed the editorial department and only his desire to be in the daily writing got ahead led to the change that makes him chief of the special staff service. After he will be available to cover the interpretative and colorful aids of big news events throughout the nation.

Horace Epes, the new business manager, is fitted for his position by a background of more than twenty years newspaper experience with newspapers, in the Associated Press, and in the field for the Consolidated Press.

Jay Jerome Williams, who becomes director of the editorial department, spent his entire newspaper life in the news and up to three years ago was a war correspondent for the Associated Press. Since then he has traveled from coast to coast and is at home with the problems and wants of editors in all parts of the country.

SOUTHERN DAILY APPOINTS GENERAL MANAGER.

R. B. Mahaffey, well-known throughout the South as an experienced newspaper executive, has been appointed general manager of the Wilmington, N. C., Evening and Sunday Dispatch, one of the oldest afternoon papers in the state, which was recently purchased by Major Joseph W. Little and J. L. Horne Jr.

Prior to joining the staff of the Wilmington Dispatch three months ago, when he took the duties of circulation manager, later being appointed advertising manager as well, Mr. Mahaffey was managing general manager on the Charleston, S. C., American, going from there to the Houston Post where recently he was general manager of the Waycross, Ga., Journal-Herald, Jack Williams.

Associated with Mr. Mahaffey on the Evening News are James Cruikshank, editor; Major E. W. Smith, business manager, and J. C. Bowers, advertising manager.

Major Joseph W. Little will devote his entire time to the management of the Wilmington Printing Company, a large commercial office. Mr. Little, the other owner, is also publisher and owner of the Rocky Mount, N. C. Telegram.
DRUGGISTS URGED TO ADVERTISE TRUTHFULLY.

SAN ANTONIO PHARMACIST TELLS TEXAS ASSOCIATION CUT PRICES ON STANDARD GOODS ARE MISLEADING... SAYS ABUSE OF PUBLIC CONFIDENCE MUST END.

A "A Truth in Advertising" campaign to include a common interest among pharmacists was urged before the convention of the Texas Pharmacists Association, at Galveston, by William Oches of San Antonio, president of the San Antonio Drug Company. The idea was that carried out at San Antonio with success and was embodied in the "San Antonio Plan," which Mr. Oches explained.

Aside from the benefit to the drug trade, the retailer and the wholesaler and the general public, the idea was to foster the spirit of community interest. In commenting upon this plan, Mr. Oches emphasized that the drug trade and selling articles of merchandise at cut prices bear the same relation to the regular mechanism of boodhooes of the earth as to other nations of the earth.

"Cut prices on standardized goods are misleading," Mr. Oches said, "in that they carry the impression that every article in the store is also carried in stock for sale at a reduction. In every line of business where articles are sold for less than the advertised price content is deceiving, and the consumer, whether he is the manufacturer, the retailer, for prices and not the goods are sold. Such a system puts the manufacturer and retailers on the same plane with those who practice it and those who do not, in a bad light in the public eye.

"This is a time to get some action among the merchants and educate the public to the real situation. Public confidence is being abused and an end must come of the dealers to advertise and bring the true situation before the public. In this matter of 'Truth in Advertising' business must be ended."

The cooperative plan originated in San Antonio within the organization of the San Antonio Drug Company, Mr. Oches said. Cooperative advertising campaigns were put on by the drug stores of the city and the goal was to assist the staff to assist the retailers in planning sales and newspaper advertising campaigns. Above all, the idea has been to help the druggists to become better merchants. In connection with this, which brought closer connection between the manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer, a real service was created to meet the demands of an educated public.

BOSTON TRANSCRIPT TESTS LAW ON PUBLICATION OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

The constitutionality of a Massachusetts statute relating to the publication of findings of the minimum wage commission, is to be tested under an appeal taken by the Boston Transcript in the decision of a Boston municipal court imposing a fine of $100 because the Transcript on May 14 declined to publish a statement issued as an advertisement by the Transcript.

The advertisement announced that a Boston firm of tailors failed to comply with a ruling of the commission fixing the minimum wages of men employed in the clothing industry.

ENGINEER OF GIGANTIC SPORTS ARENA VISITS AMERICA.

E. O. Williams, one of the four engineers who designed and built the world's greatest sports arena for Wembley Amusements, of which Fred E. Bussy is managing director, arrived in New York on the Mauretania last week.

Mr. Williams is a bachelor of science of London University and took first class honors in engineering, being first prize man for structural engineering at the city and guilds of London examination and King's prize man in applied mechanics. He is an Associate Fellow of the Royal Aeronautical Society and is an Associate of the Institute of Naval Architects.

The British delegation of advertising men made frequent reference to the mammoth amusement park which will be completed before the annual meeting of the Ad Clubs in London in 1924. Mr. Bussey, who managed some 25 exhibitions in the London Exhibition, painted the picture of advertising in the light of its being indispensable. As the chief speaker, he chose as his subject, "What Is Advertising Going, and What Will It Do When It Gets There?"

Richmond News-Leader in Larger Building with New Equipment.

Little remains to be done on the new Richmond, Va. News-Leader building, on North Fourth street, before the structure will be ready for occupancy. The third and fourth floors are complete and waiting for the installation of machinery, including linotype machines and stereotyping equipment. The press room will be located in the basement. The work on the second floor, which will house the news and editorial departments, will be finished by the end of the week.

The business office will be located on the first, or main floor. It is expected the building will be completed and ready for occupancy by July 1. It is understood the News-Leader will install four linotype machines in addition to those it will move from its present location on Eighth street, near Main.

UNFOLDING THE FUTURE.

C. K. Woodbridge, former president of the Advertising Club of New York and now director, spoke at the annual meeting of the Bridgeport Advertising Club, at the Stratfield Hotel, recently. He told of the annual convention at Atlantic City and painted the picture of advertising in the light of its being indispensable. As the chief speaker, he chose as his subject, "Where Is Advertising Going, and What Will It Do When It Gets There?"

WEST TO SPEND $1,500,000 IN NATIONAL ADVERTISING TO ATTRACT VISITORS.

With vacation time coming into its own, Pacific coast and Rocky Mountain cities are prepared to spend between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 in advertising their communities to the nation. The national advertising campaigns which are now in full swing are surpassing all previous successes in community advertising.

A notable example of advertising to attract home seekers is being conducted in San Diego, Cal., where the San Diego-California Club recently raised $1,525,000 which is being used in its fourth annual campaign. Californians of San Francisco have raised $500,000 which is being used for its second year's drive in selling the city through advertisements. Pasadena has started its national advertising campaign with a fund of $50,000, while virtually every other community around Los Angeles is capitalizing its advantages through national advertising. Los Angeles, through the All-Year Club, is raising $350,000 for this purpose.

Seattle is promoting a vigorous campaign, principally through newspapers, to attract summer travel to the northwest. Tacoma and Portland are projecting similar campaigns, however, just as the convention of the national advertising which has been noted.

Seattle and the other cities of Colorado are inviting the vacationist through national advertisements. Arizona also is conducting vigorous drives. The Sunshine Climate Club of Tucson and the Salt River Valley-Arizona Club of Phoenix are outstanding examples of progressive organizations that are campaigning to attract visitors.

THIS DOUBLE-QUADRUPLE-OCTUPLE Scott “Multi-Unit” Press prints a great many of the leading newspapers in this country and abroad.

NEW YORK STATE PAPERS CHANGE OWNERSHIP.

Syracuse. With the added resources of equipment and organization of the empire state group it is expected that both the Advertiser and Telegram will be developed intensively.

Foreign advertising will be sold only in combination morning and evening. Sunday copy will be sold separately, or a daily advertiser will have optional privileges of running Sunday ads under the imprint.

J. P. McKinney and son will represent the paper in the foreign field as they have the Star-Gazette in the past.

ESTABLISHED IN 1863.
The Advertiser was established as a morning paper in 1863 while the Civil War was in its heights. In 1899 it passed into the hands of Milo Shanks, who was president and general manager of the paper until May 1921, when Ralph R. Govin, owner of several of the leading newspapers of Havana, Cuba, came to Elmira and purchased the Advertiser. He spent a large amount of money in developing it and later acquired the Sunday Telegram from Harry S. Brooks, one of the pioneers in the Sunday field. The properties were managed by Herman Sutter, as president of the Telegram Printing Company, and by Ralph R. Govin, jr., son of the owner.

Mr. Govin, Sr., recently acquired a number of big outside interests and decided to retire from the newspaper field in Elmira and as the two papers could be published more economically from the Star-Gazette plant, their purchase naturally resulted.

Fixe months after the sales of the Advertiser and Telegram, in October, 1921, Frank E. Tripp, purchased the interest in the Star-Gazette held by James F. Woodford. Mr. Woodford had embarked in the business of newspaper publishing in the year 1848 and had been associated with newspaper publishing for a century before that as a newsboy on the Elmira Advertiser. In 1888, in partnership with his brother-in-law, Seymour Copeland, Mr. Woodford started the Evening Star. When the Star and the Gazette were consolidated in 1907 as the Star-Gazette Mr. Woodford retained his proportionate interests.

Mr. Tripp has been associated with the Gazette, the Evening Star and the Star-Gazette for more than twenty years. He has served in nearly every capacity, beginning as a newsboy, as chief of a newspaper, as a newpapers and a humorist. In 1916 he became the advertising director of the Star-Gazette and continued in that capacity until he became part owner and general manager.

STAFF ARRANGEMENTS.
Messrs. Copeland and Tripp will look after the management of the Elmira properties while Messrs. Duquette and Gannett will devote most of their time to the Rochester papers.

FRANK E. GANNETT.
FRANK E. GANNETT.
Times-Union and the other papers of the group.

Although the papers will be published from the same plant, they will be written and edited by entirely different staffs and will maintain their separate names and identities.

Mathew D. Richardson of the Star-Gazette staff becomes editor of the Elmira Press, with William C. Gill, formerly of the Telegram, as associate. Roy D. Waid, of the Star-Gazette staff, becomes city editor of the Advertiser. George S. Cardall will continue as editor of the Star-Gazette and John T. Calkins as city editor. Charles Barber, Sherman V. Jones and Cornelius J. Milkin have been added to the Star-Gazette staff.

DECLARES SALES ON CREDIT RESULT IN HIGHER PRICES.
Selling goods on approval and selling goods on credit are indefensible practices ordinarily, and inevitably result in a decrease in business. A. J. Dodge, manager of the domestic distribution department of the chamber of commerce of the United States declared before the annual meeting of the National Retail Hardware Association this statement. The merchant who cannot collect payment when the goods are handed to the purchaser," he said, "is lacking in strength if he wishes really to conduct a business. As devices for meeting competition, they are worthless because if all competitors adopt them the result is negative in any advantage which may be secured as both the purchaser is taught an injurious habit—injurious both to the merchant and to his customer, since both of these practices lead inevitably to higher and higher prices to cover the inescapable losses.

HEARST EXECUTIVE LAUNCHES PROMOTION DRIVES IN TWO CITIES.

Charles R. Macloon, manager of the circulation promotion department of the New York American, has just returned from Baltimore where he launched a home delivery campaign for the Baltimore American and Baltimore News on the "thirteen for a quarter" plan. Mr. Hearst, it will be recalled, recently purchased these newspapers from Mr. Munsey. To conform with the retail prices of Hearst newspapers in other cities the prices of the Baltimore American were raised from two to five cents, daily and Sunday respectively, to three and ten cents. Baltimoreans didn't take kindly to the raise so the prices were readjusted to the old figure for home delivery only—"thirteen for a quarter," including the daily and Sunday American and the News.

DAILIES CHANGE TO WEEKLY.

The Pendleton, Ore., Tribune, established in 1875 and since that time the leading Republican paper of Umatilla county, has changed from a daily to weekly. Harry L. Kuck, for the last three years owner of the Tribune, has leased the plant to W. E. Lovell, president of the Franklin Press commercial printers, and Roy R. McNeely, for the last six years former of the Tribune mechanical force. They have combined the Franklin Press with the Tribune plant and are publishing a weekly Republican paper.

The Los Angeles Times, a daily newspaper, has been changed by its owner, L. M. Thompson, into a weekly.

NEW HALTS ALLEGED MEXICAN SCHEME TO DEFRAUD U. S. NEWSPAPERS.

A scheme for obtaining copies of American newspapers in Mexico has led to the issuance of a supplemental fraud order by Postmaster General New against Rafael Gonzalez and Company, Orlizaba, Mexico.

According to Postmaster General New, letters were sent to publishers of newspapers throughout the United States entering subscriptions to five copies daily and seventy-five Sunday, with a promise of payment by check for $100 to be drawn upon the Royal Bank of Canada upon receipt of the first consignment of papers. The papers received under this scheme were sold for wrapping paper.

The scheme was said to be a continuation of a similar one operated last year by Rafael Gonazles. Use of the mails was denied through a fraud order issued by the postoffice department in January.

PUBLISHER WINS BERGDOLL TEST CASE.

ARMY OFFICER LOSES FIRST OF NUMBER OF SUITS HE BROUGHT AGAINST PAPERS THROUGHOUT U. S. WHICH PRINTED A. P. DISPATCH OF CONGRESSIONAL INQUIRY.

The Dispatch Printing Company of St. Paul, publisher of the Pioneer Press and Dispatch, won the first case to be tried of suits brought by Colonel Cresson against the Dispatch Printing Company. The company lost a number of newspapers throughout the United States which had published an Associated Press dispatch containing a resume of a congressional committee's report on the escape of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, draft evader now said to be in Germany.

Colonel Cresson was charged by a majority report of the congressional committee with the "conspiracy leading to Grover Cleveland Bergdoll make the draft evader's escape and the acquisition of those who brought it about."

Following the publication of Associated Press dispatches containing the report, Colonel Cresson brought suit against a number of newspapers, including the Dispatch Printing Company and the Minneapolis Journal. In the Dispatch case, which was the first to be tried, he asked $100,000 damages.

A decision handed down at St. Paul Federal Judge Wilbur F. Booth ordered judgment for the Dispatch. In his opinion Judge Booth held that the newspaper account fairly and accurately reflects the report of the congressional committee, and is therefore protected by the qualified privilege.

JOURNAL SUIT POSTPONED.

Trial of the case in which the Journal is defendant has been postponed pending action in the Dispatch Printing Company case.

The issues of law and fact in the Journal case are the same as in the Dispatch case, and it is admitted that an affirmation of Judge Booth's judgment by the circuit court of appeals in the Dispatch case will determine adversely to Colonel Cresson, his action against the Journal.

When Grover Cleveland Bergdoll escaped from the military barracks at Governors Island, N. Y., Colonel Hunt, U. S. A., commander of the barracks was recommended for prosecution, and Colonel Cresson was detailed to conduct the prosecution. Later congress investigated and the committee returned a minority report charging Samuel Tilden Ansell, former acting judge advocate general of the army, Colonel Hunt and Colonel Cresson with "conspiracy leading to Bergdoll's escape and."

WASHINGTON STAR FINANCIAL DESK CHANGES WHILE FLEMING TAKES REST.

Charles P. Shaefier, until recently financial editor of the Washington Star, has joined the staff of the Washington Star, where he will serve as acting financial editor in the place of "Pop." Fleming, who, while still the financial editor of the Star, has been ordered by the Star management to take a needed rest. Mr. Shaefier is succeeded on the Herald by Robert F. Shane.

"Pop" Fleming, who has been connected with the Star for many years, is one of the most widely known and best beloved of the Washington scribes. Previous to his association with the Star he was in the staff of the Washington Times. Many prominent men are proud to be numbered among "Pop's" friends, including such leaders in their uniliated professions as Frank D. Var- derip, banker, and Charles A. Con- slyke, owner of the White Sox, whom "Pop" knew in the old days when he was a financial editor in Chicago.

SUES NEW YORK TRIBUNE FOR $50,000 BINDER DEPOSIT.

Suit to recover $50,000 alleged to have been posted to bind an agreement to buy the New York Tribune Building, at No. 154 Nassau street, by the Akul Building Company, has been brought in the supreme court against the New York Tribune.

When the time came to transfer title, alleges the complaint, the plaintiff discovered Clarke Brothers, bankers, had an option for a ten-year renewal of a ground floor lease. No answer has been filed by the owner of the building.

Leadership

Every development of the slug composing machine from the first idea of the circulating matrix to the present quick-change, multiple-magazine text and display machine has been a Linotype achievement. The Linotype Company maintains organized departments that do nothing else except work ahead to keep the Linotype user in the front of the printing business.

Performance

Linotypes are in active operation today after more than a quarter-century's steady use. Many are in use in remote places. Linotype resources have been invested without stint in factories and equipment to take care of the needs of the printing business for years to come.

Service

The more than 45,500 Linotypes throughout the world are supplied through Linotype sales and supply organizations that serve four-fifths of the world's printers and publishers.

I Want a Sales Manager

I prefer a man who has had experience with a publishing house or who has done things in the newspaper world. It is necessary that he have a fundamental love for good literature and be born with a sense of humor.

He must know how to organize, how to plan, how to map out big undertakings—and then how to put them across, smoothly and noiselessly.

Such a man will be given a wonderful opportunity in a fascinating business—that of syndicating nearly fifty of the most widely known features sold to newspapers. I want a man to take up and develop the sales department of the business which my associates and I have brought to its present standing. He must be a real executive and a successful handler of salesmen.

The George Matthew Adams Service now does business with something like 600 daily newspapers, syndicating such widely known stars as Walt Mason, "Eddie" Guest, Lee Pape, and the work of such artists as Ed Wheelan, "Edwina," Hungerford, Morris.

This Sales Manager will be given every opportunity to make good in a big way. He will be given co-operation and be let alone to develop his ideas. His record will be carefully considered. His age should be around thirty and he ought to be a college man, though that is not essential.

The man I want is employed somewhere—making good—but in his secret soul he wants a happier job, a bigger chance. Are you the man? If you think you are, let's talk it over. Appointments made by letter only. Address:

CIRCULATORS WISE TO A. B. C. METHODS.

Among many vital problems involving premiums, newsboys, carrier routes, subscriptions, canvassers, insurance, among them the value of features, serials, etc., as circulation builders, none more seriously engaged the thoughtful group of circulation builders assembled this week at Muskoa lakes than the growing uneasiness concerning the principles and methods of the Audit Bureau of Circulation.

It is no thought of the expression that the man who man that by which we think and judge, of the problems arising out of the methods of circulation builders assembled this week at Muskoa lakes than the growing uneasiness concerning the principles and methods of the Audit Bureau of Circulation.

FREE PRESS AGAIN Upheld.

In a number of important issues the New England papers have been in the forefront in fighting for freedom of the press. The New England press has not been afraid to take a stand for its principles and to support its convictions. It is heartening to see the New England press taking a stand for freedom of the press.

LOW AMERICAN AD RATES ASTOUNDS BRITON.

Of many thoughtful observations made by members of the visiting British newspaper and advertising executives, none strikes a more telling blow than that of the American newspaper and advertising rates. The rates of American newspapers are so low that they are unable to compete with those of British newspapers.

A TRIBUTE TO GOOD SALESMANSHIP.

The British publishers and advertising men who came, saw and conquered with much more ease than our American counterparts, have set an example for us to follow. The British publishers and advertising men have set a standard for us to follow.

PURELY PERSONAL.

Henry Lowenthal, head of the business news department of the New York Times, was the recipient of many congratulatory messages on the occasion of his seventieth birthday.

S. J. Small, sr., manager of the Chicago bureau of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, has retired from the service, accompanied by Mrs. Small, on a vacation in a tour to the Pacific coast. While en route, they will visit a son in Sandpoint, Idaho. Shortly before their departure from Chicago, another son, S. J. Small, jr., editor of Miss Mary Flora Fogarty of Michigan City, Ind.

AMERICAN DAILY TOO BIG AND ADS TOO CHEAP

BRITISH PUBLISHER EMPHASIZES THE FOURTH ESTATE'S CONTENTION THAT OUR NEWSPAPERS DO NOT CHARGE ENOUGH FOR ADVERTISING SPACE.

Despite his familiarity with metropolitan newspapers in America, Lieut. Col. E. de Winter, and one of his associates in the publication of the London Daily Telegraph, is amazed at the continued growth and size of leading American newspapers. Before returning to England as a member of the British delegation of advertising and publishing executives, who attended the Ad Club convention, Col. Lawson said:

"You are creating a white paper famine. It isn't a question of sacrificing profits. Your advertising rates are much too low, according to our standards."

"You should get the same price for a quarter page that you now get for a full page; the advertiser would get the same result and the white paper supply would be conserved. Of course, this couldn't be done unless all the newspapers agreed to it. But the white paper situation is growing serious. Newspapers are helping to make it so for themselves as well as the rest of us."

"You do a great many things better than we do, but I hope when we get your advertising men to London we can show them some vital facts that will help in solving the problem."

Col. Lawson is no stranger to New York. He was the New York representative of the Daily Telegraph in 1914, but he was probably the first Englishman to "join up" from this city. He joined as a subaltern in 1914, saw active service in France, Gallipoli, Egypt and the Near East.

He served on Allenby's staff during the Palestine expedition terminating with the capture of Jerusalem. Three times mentioned in dispatches, in 1914, saw active service in France, Gallipoli, Egypt and the Near East.

He gained the Military Cross and the Distinguished Service Order. New York Times, was the recipient of many congratulatory messages on the occasion of his seventieth birthday.

NEW YORK WORLD EDITOR PROUD FATHER OF NUMBER SIX.

John H. Gavin, all around editor of the World's forces, is the father of a fourth daughter, Eileen, Col. Lawson's next-door neighbor, writer of many newspaper men in the East. Next summer he will complete his twenty-fifth year under the Pulitzer dome.

EDITORS TO MAKE WEEK'S TOUR OF BLACK HILLS.

South Dakota editors will visit the Black Hills on the joint trip of the South Dakota Press Association the week of August 19, according to J. F. Halladay of Iroquois, secretary-treasurer of the association.

The itinerary calls for a start at Rapid City Monday August 20 with a circle of points of interest of the guests of the Black Hills Press Association which will furnish automobiles and an ending up in Hot Springs, August 25.

NEWSPAPERS SEND CHAMPIONS TO SEASHORE.

SCRIPPS-HOWARD AND ASSOCIATED NEWSPAPERS PROMOTE NATIONWIDE MARBLE SHOOTERS' TOURNAMENT IN WHICH 500,000 BOYS AND GIRLS COMPETE.

The national marble tournament being promoted by the Scripps-Howard newspapers and associated newspapers has proven one of the biggest organized journalism stunts ever undertaken. It has caused 500,000 boys and girls, the country over, to play marbles systematically for the championship of the United States.

The forty champions will go to Atlantic City for the entire week of July 4 and play for the national title. They will be entertained by the Scripps-Howard Newspapers in Washington, D.C., on July 5 before the tournament and by the Sesqui-Centennial Association at the Philadelphia Sesqui-Centennial Park, Saturday, June 30, after the tourney.

Each marble champion will be accompanied by one adult companion, in most instances parents being chosen. The newspapers co-operating in this enterprise are paying the expenses of the champion and his companion. Some of them come all the way from the Pacific Coast.

All eight major newspapers are co-operating in the enterprise. Two cities—Newark, N. J. and Allen-town, Pa.—are providing their tournaments through the Recreation Departments. The tournament has been under the supervision of William R. Colver, general editorial manager.

Though the tournament was open both to girls and boys, and hundreds entered, not one landed a city title. The boys stemmed the invasion and kept their hold on the game, for this year at least.

The program for Marble Champion's Week follows:

Tuesday, June 26, eliminations will begin in five rings. With eight playing in each ring, it is expected the games will be over by 6 o'clock. The eliminations will be completed this day. Wednesday, June 27, the second and third rounds will be held. This will end with the selection of the champions.

... to his death, made the remark that he had seen a giant caterpillar with a small tree growing from the top of his head, and that he had seen a large crab climb a coconut tree, then down a coconut tree and return to the ground and crack it; but that he had never heard of anything as surprising as a newspaper plant like that of the Shun Pao. The Shun Pao building is a re-inforced concrete structure, designed and constructed under the direction of an American architect. It is the first building on the newspaper section of Shantung Road, a section that has come to be called the Fleet Street of Shanghai because most of the newspaper enterprises of the Orient are located within two blocks there.

ENTERTAINMENTS FOR STAFF.

"The fourth floor has a distinctive feature among the new buildings in the United States, in that here are located the studios for the business of the firm, as well as for others of its staff who, as often is the case, have their families in the country from which they have come to Shanghai to find employment."

The fifth floor, or roof garden of the building is its most unusual feature. Half of the floor is given over to a roof garden, having a pergola covering, with vines and potted flowers. The other half is given over to what are described by the proprietors as recreation rooms. Here are a kitchen, a card room, a billiard room, a small dining room with an Old English style fireplace, a small kitchen, and a guest suite. This suite is provided for the entertainment of any distinguished guest the paper may have.

EX-GLOBE STAFF ORGANIZES AND ELECTS FLYNN.

WILL HOLD ANNUAL DINNER TO PERPETUATE TRADITIONS OF DAILY — VETERANS REMINISCE — WRIGHT EULOGIZED AND ROGERS ARRAIGNED.

More than ninety former employees of the New York Globe and Commercial Advertiser, which was merged recently with the Sun, met in the New York Press Club Saturday night and organized a new organization whose object is to perpetuate the traditions of what was the oldest newspaper in the United States. John T. Flynn, former managing editor of the Globe and president of the New York Press Club, was elected president of the organization which will be called the "Globe Association." The permanent name will be selected at a later date.

Other officers chosen were: Vice-president, R. H. McCaw, formerly city editor; treasurer, Ernest Wiedmaier, formerly cashier of the Globe; secretary, Samuel Scall, former publisher of the Globe; rewrite staff; sergeant-at-arms, Frank Merchant, president of the Globe's composing room, and chapel.

Mr. Flynn officiated as toastmaster at the meeting, which was held at Miller's Restaurant on Nassau street around the corner from Park Row. In a short talk, Mr. Flynn outlined the object of the association which is to assure the perpetuation of the Globe, A. L. Gordon, formerly head of the copy desk, eulogized the accomplishments of all present when he said:

"There has never been a group of men and women who worked with such perfect harmony and understanding as the Globe. You may talk all you please about the Sun of Dana, the Tribune of Greeley, or the Public of the elder Bowles. But for one, we take our Globe. Mr. Wright, the editor of the Globe, Mr. Wright, the Globe of Breitgarten, the Globe of Flynn, the Globe of McBe—" and another paper like it.

Lewis J. Wright, who was on the financial page of the Globe for 39 years, 5 months and 19 days, spoke of the pleasant working lifetime he had spent on the paper. Now, he said, he was sunning himself on the front porch of the Staten Island home part of the time and is looking for a job the rest of the time. He was the oldest employee in point of service.

Among the other speakers were Sanford Jarred, Robert F. Duffins, E. R. Caldwell, Eugene Shade Bisbee, Russell Crouse, Miss Marian Spitzer, Fredric C. Holloway, Joseph R. Flesier, Byron J. Lewis and H. I. Phillips.

A feature of the evening, the Globe and Commercial Advertiser, a tabloid newspaper edited by Sanford Jarred, which in the last 10 years has been published, was shown.

Doctor J. W. Wright is one that might well be emulated by those who seek to follow in his footsteps.

The first page has an arrangement of Jason Rogers, former publisher of the Globe, who recently criticized members of the Globe staff for accepting offers from other papers.

DO INDUSTRIAL KINGS OWN ALMOST ALL GERMAN NEWSPAPERS?

Charging that ninety per cent of the German press is controlled by the big industrial interests, George Bernhard, editor of the Vossische Zeitung and one of the foremost publicists in Germany, demands editorially that government support be given only to such newspapers as prove themselves to be independent of secret sinister alliances.

Mr. Bernhard's article follows the proposal of the German Press League for the passage of a law defining "secret press." He says that the recently renewed measures for granting government subsidies to the press mostly serves to spare the industrial millionaire the responsibility of financing properties financially. Bernhard asks:

"Do the German people know that the secret press of today are Hüsgen and Stinner, who, through the secret support of the government, control Germany's public opinion, not only through daily papers but also through committee papers and women's periodicals as well?"

"Here lies the danger for the independence of the German press and the journalistic profession. Here there is no publication who bears the responsibility rests directly, for the influences which these newspapers bring to bear, are conveyed in such a manner and in such a way as the public would not be able to track the papers devoted to the secret furtherance of special interests."

FINE BIT OF ENTERPRISE SHOWN BY RICHMOND PAPER WHEN POWER GOES OUT.

As a result of a breakdown on the high voltage circuit of the Virginia Power Company, which supplies, among other industries, the three newspapers of Richmond, Va., current for their presses, machines and presses, the entire edition of the three papers the Times-Dispatch, morning, and Evening Dispatch and News-Leader, evening paper, was produced without the crucial hour Saturday afternoon, June 9.

The breakdown came at 1:55 o'clock, just as the afternoon papers were about to run off their "home" editions, and the morning paper was preparing for the first of its Saturday evening "buildings."

The News-Leader rushed the matrices of eight pages of its twenty-four page edition to Petersburg, a neighboring city, about twenty-two miles distant, in automobile trucks, four of its best mechanics going along, and utilized the presses of the Petersburg morning-Afternoon paper, with Sunday morning edition. Before the finished product could reach Richmond, temporary repairs were made by the power company. Service was restored before the truck arrived, which was a little after 3:00 o'clock, and the first newspaper printed in another city for distribution in Richmond.

The resumption of power enabled the presses to go ahead with the edition of the News-Leader. The make-up edition printed in Petersburg was useless and could not be used as a leading edition.

The presses of the Evening Dispatch also were idle between the hours of 1:55 and 7:00 o'clock, after which hour the edition was run off. A grounded arc, caused by a severe windstorm, is blamed for the trouble.

MEDILL JOURNALISTS GO INTO NEWSPAPER JOBS.

Fourteen graduates of the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern University, were awarded the degree of bachelor of science in journalism last Monday. For most of the graduates position have been obtained through the efforts of the school.

Last year, the school's first graduating year since its establishment in 1920, nine students were graduated. In the last school year twenty jobs in newspaper and magazine offices were filled by Medill men and women, although altogether the school renewed several requests from editors.

WASHINGTON STATE PAPERS DECIDE TO "GO AFTER" FOREIGN BUSINESS.

Foreign advertising, and the stand of the "thirty per cent" commission agencies, was thoroughly discussed by the Washington State Press Association executive council in Seattle last week. Members attending were: Geo. C. Cork, Seattle; H. J. Campbell, Vancouver; vice-president; N. Russell Hill, Davison; secretary-treasurer; Dr. H. W. Albert, Bellingham, president; and the following members of the committee: Clarence Ellington, Chelatchie; T. C. Nugent, A. S. Hillyer, Sunnyside Sun; Fred L. Wood, Newport Miner; E. B. Erickson, Aschbrum Globe-Republican; S. H. Lewis, Lynden Tribune; Fred W. Kennedy, field secretary; M. F. Brown, Seattle Journal of Commerce; J. C. Kaynor, Ellensburg Record.

The council voted to reaffirm the resolution adopted January 1922, recommending members of the Washington State Press Association not to enter into business relations with advertising organizations which commission their commissions in excess of fifteen per cent with two per cent cash discount, to invite John H. Perry, president American Press Association, and representative of some leading advertising agencies with whom the committee will confer to discuss the problem with the council; to continue the mail campaign for foreign advertising being sent out by the release of the council; and investigate the possibility of employing any representative of the committee to demand a better organization for Washington newspapers.

"AD" SOLICITOR INDICTED FOR FRAUDULENTLY GETTING SUBSCRIPTIONS.

James McGrane, sixty years old, was held in $5,000 bail in a New York court, on an indictment charging him with grand larceny in obtaining subscriptions to the “yearbook” of the New York State Patrolmen’s Association. Many advertising men had complained that McGrane had obtained subscriptions by representing that the “yearbook” was published for the benefit of the widows and orphans of deceased police officers.

The officers of the organizations of local policemen told the prospective publishers that there was no organization of the state association and that no one had been authorized to use the name of the local organizations in soliciting advertising.

It was stated that there were more than a dozen advertising schemes of the kind in operation and that Detective Attorney Banton had ordered a campaign against all such advertising schemes.

PETTY AD GRAFTS FLOOD THE COUNTRY.

VARIOUS SCHEMES TO LURE THE MERCHANTS’ MONEY BRING NO RESULTS AND ARE THE HIGHEST PRICED FORM OF ADVERTISING—NEWSPAPER AN EFFECTIVE MEDIUM.

Petty advertising grafts designed to get the business men’s money spring up everywhere with apparently a great deal of success in the cities and towns of the land. Pamphlets with magazine names jammed full of advertising and containing little or no material of a kind helpful to the up-building of a city are means of getting the money, while calendars, bulletin boards, score cards, directories, where direct word of the deals is placed, containing recipes already known to every housewife, come in for their share of the business men’s advertising appropriations.

The average person, when in need of something over the counter, thinks that the proper thing to do is to get out something with an ad on it and expects the goods to be of better quality than those that are not advertised. Persons, who find business a little dull in their own line immediately launch themselves into the advertising job. Job presses, micrographs and typewriters are pressed into service in an effort to put across various advertising grafts.

Solitors appeal to the merchant to patronize these various schemes on the theory that they are cheap, but they are not reality, the most expensive form of advertising, says the Marion Star. With uncertain circulation and an uncontrolled distribution, the various pamphlets, in which merchants are asked to advertise, reach a relatively small portion of the city and county population as compared to the number of subscribers in the newspaper.

Their publishers have little or nothing invested in them and no loss if publication is suspended. In comparison, consider the newspaper. It goes into thousands of homes every day, not because it is distributed free, but because a large proportion of the subscribers pay for it. The newspaper pays out thousands of dollars monthly for telegraph service, cartoons, news pictures, news features and at all times employs a staff of trained people whose life work is to gather the news and put it before the public in the most serviceable form. The newspaper is one of the city’s industries and has a large weekly payroll.

The newspaper has many thousands of hard-working employees. The newspaper at all times stands as the defender of the city in which it is located, and as the channel of communication between the town and its people.

The newspaper man does not want your advertisement. He is trying to put something over, attempting to make you think you are getting a bargain. He is selling you a commodity on the same basis as you sell your goods to the buyer—saying that he gets more for his money. And the buyer is decided and decided that he would follow the cases of those who have followed the newspaper advertising.

RUNNING A PUBLIC DINNER A LA HUBBARD.

"PHILISTINES" ADVICE FOR LIGHT, SHORT SPEECHES AND REGARD FOR STARTING ON TIME AND ENDING EARLY STILL HOLDS GOOD TO MAKE AFFAIRS SUCCESS.

The season of public dinners is over for a spell. No offense, therefore, can be taken at a few observations on the art of holding fine public dinners.

The late Elbert Hubbard once wrote a preachment on this subject which was published in the Philadelphia Public Ledger. From his large experience as an after-dinner speaker, he pointed out some of the frightful results of incompetent dinner committees and long-winded and inexperienced toastmasters.

To be a success—when the dinners will enjoy the evening and go home happy—certain essentials are required, says the Brooklyn Eagle, in managing a large public dinner. This does not refer to the hilarious affair where the guests expect only a "good time show" or without any intellectual trimmings.

The first essential is a committee of experienced men. Study every detail of the service, menu and speakers with the same care that one gives to a theatrical performance. The dinner should start on time and end at an early hour, so that the diners can go home at a seasonable hour. The speakers should be selected with care and in most cases the subjects selected with some reference to the purpose of the dinner. Above all, speeches should be brief and not too heavy, unless the speaker is a grand old man, to his audience. Long-winded speeches spoil many an otherwise happy occasion.

"Can any city official, smarting under criticism, specific as in editorialexpression or implied by publication of news of conditions that reflect discredit upon his administration, retailexposing a series of city officials to representa-tives before him, to be heckled, harassed, humiliated, subjected to any kind of treatment, and have no choice to put to them?"

"Can a city official, resentment, criticism for a newspaper to divulge the names of the editors or newspaper writers it has written or caused to be written, the articles to which the official objects? This carries with it the subsidiary question: Can a newspaper or editor be compelled to divulge information, or the names of informers given him by his confidence?"

"The News does not intend to see its representatives forced into any such predicament."

There is the question of revealing the sources of confidential information.

Surely the objection to this needs no elaborate elucidation.

"There are underworld characters who chat freely under the impression that in full confidence they shall not be betrayed. They shall not be betrayed."

The New York Morning News publishes its business cards through all copies of the Buffalo Evening News. There are police officials who regularly use the equal confidence. They need never fear they will be exposed to the revenge of superiors by betrayal. There are women who write letters telling where their husbands and sons are deabsconded and plucked. They may rest easy, their names will not be divulged.

"The newspaper which failed to keep faith would be forever branded."

"The newspaper man who broke faith with his informants would become a pariah, an outcast among his fellows, a man of no value to any newspaper employer."

The editor of the Homesteader, although not an old man, has been pioneering on the northwestern prairie since 1906, when he became the editor and publisher of a newspaper in North Dakota. The rush of homesteaders into northeast Wyoming attracted him to that country. From the very start it became a fight between the small settlers and the early day rangers who for years had held the open range. McDonough became convinced that a newspaper published especially in the interests of the new settlers would assist in the development of a supposedly arid area. He bought the newspaper plant consisting of all power machinery and moved into the then virgin prairies.

At first the editor burned a lot of midnight oil reading periodicals of every description for suggestions for articles. Then people got into the habit of stopping at the little office and giving the Homesteader items of interest. The most interesting feature of the paper, however, was a column called "Gab by Mac," written by the editor.

that maintains its own Radio Broadcasting station, and thus keeps in intimate touch with the thousands of radio enthusiasts it serves in its daily radio department and Saturday radio section—The Chicago Daily News.

Its early appreciation of the importance of radio is typical of the spirit and policy that, for more than forty-seven years of its constant journalistic service to its community, have kept it in the van of all wholesome movements of popular interest.

It is this spirit that has made The Daily News "Chicago's favorite and most progressive newspaper." It is the spirit that ever gives to the people of its community the latest, most complete and most dependable service in every feature of newspaper endeavor, and that inspired The London Chronicle to say that "The Chicago Daily News is by far the best evening newspaper in the world."

It is, therefore, but consistently logical that, being the most popular and most trusted newspaper in its field, The Chicago Daily News should carry a greater volume of advertising than any other Chicago daily newspaper. The reports of the Advertising Record company show that in the first four months of 1923, The Daily News printed a total of 6,861,660 agate lines of advertising, as against 5,828,598 lines by the next highest daily score, that of The Chicago Daily Tribune.

MINNEAPOLIS NEWS IS SOLD TO TRIBUNE

PERRY, WHO BOUGHT THE PAPER IN JANUARY FROM THE ASBAUGH ESTATE, TURNS IT OVER TO F. E. MURPHY—NEWS EDITORS AND STAFF IN NEW POSITIONS.

The Minneapolis, Minn., Daily News appeared on the street for the last time Wednesday afternoon. On Thursday morning it was consolidated with the Minneapolis Tribune, the staff of the Tribune being supplemented by a few additions from the News force. Consolidation of the two Minneapolis papers is one of a number of important daily newspaper consolidations of recent months. The tendency of the times, referred to by Frank Munsey when he consolidated the New York Globe and the New York Sun, was the acquisition of the one-hundred and eleven year old St. Louis Republic by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, the age-old consolidation of the New York Sun and the New York Tribune, the Japanese and the Chinese Consolidation of the Detroit Free Press by the Detroit News, and the New York Journal by the Detroit News, and by a number of other mergers of lesser importance. This is the third paper which the Minneapolis Tribune has absorbed since it was founded in 1867. The Perry-Lloyd Jones newspapers took over the Minneapolis News in February of this year, a month after it had been purchased by John H. Perry from L. V. Ashbaugh. ... he had a few other jobs about the place. Rome G. Brown, who for many years was one of the editors, was appointed the managing editor of the Tribune, and the other editorial staff was announced.

NEW YORK TIMES ESTIMATED AT $11,300,000

BASED ON APPRAISAL OF ESTATE OF LATE CHARLES R. MILLER, FOR TRANSFER TAX PURPOSES, NEW YORK TIMES POLITICAL DAILY'S STOCK REACHES HIGH MARK OF NEWSPAPER VALUE.

On the basis of an appraisal of the estate of the late Charles Ransom Miller, former editor-in-chief of the New York Times, that company's stock would be valued at $11,300,000. The appraisal was made by Edward W. Buckley, judge of the New York State Tax Commission who was this week appointed to the office of assessing agent for New York City by Mayor John F. Hylan.

In the light of the quoted sales price of $2,200,000, paid by Frank Munsey for the New York Globe and $3,000,000 paid by the News for the Tribune, the tax appraiser's estimate touches a new high mark of newspaper valuations in America.

HOLD 1,022 SHARES COMMON.

The chief asset of the estate of the late editor was the holding of the stock of the Times Publishing Company. Included in the gross was a block of 1,022 shares of the common stock appraised at $26.86 per share. There are outstanding a total of 10,000 shares of common stock of the company. Mr. Miller was owner of 4,000 shares of the preferred stock of the Times which was valued at par value of $100 per share. The total outstanding issue of the preferred stock of the Times company is 40,000 shares.

Affixes bids by Ben C. Franklin, secretary of the Times company, disclosed that the price of stock of the Times sold in the year prior to Miller's death. The valuation fixed by his transfer tax report is far above the price paid for New York Times common stock less than two years ago by Stock Transfer Co. president and business manager of the Times, purchased 20 shares of the preferred stock and five shares of the common on June 24, 1921, at a price listing the preferred stock at $100 and the common at $187.50. Another transaction, disclosed in affidavits, shows that New York Times purchased the common stock at a price placed at $205 per share. Within the last fifteen months he also acquired common stock at a figure of $200 per share.

VALUE AT $1,381,225.

In determining the value of the stock of the Times company it became necessary for the appraiser to appraise the present valuation of the plant and equipment. This valuation was set at $11,300,000.

The authorized capital stock of the company is $5,000,000, $1,000,000 for the Times stock. The par value of the common stock is $100, the same as the transfer tax par. The four-fifths of the total investment in the preferred class. Mr. Franklin valued the entire 40,000 shares of common or preferred stock of the company since July 18, 1921, between the sale of the preferred stock above the par value.

The total valuation of the Miller estate was placed by Buckley at $1,381,225, with a net taxable value of $1,173,365.73. Mr. Miller died on July 18, 1922.

S. N. P. A. PROGRAM COMPLETED FOR CONVENTION.

SESSIONS AT WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS WILL DISCUSS ADVERTISING, CIRCULATION, LABOR, LEGISLATION AND MANY OTHER PROBLEMS IN THE NEWSPAPER FIELD.

Final arrangements have been completed for the twenty-first annual convention of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and costs and standards which discussions on advertising circulation and labor problems will be President Steaneck, political and traffic issues and postal legislation.

Sessions will begin every morning at 9 o'clock and will end at 1 o'clock. The delegations and guests will be free in the afternoons to enjoy the many outdoor attractions at the famous resort.

After calling the convention to order Monday morning, July 9, President Charles J. Stewart of the Lexington, Ky., Herald will deliver his annual address. It will be followed by Secretary Walter C. Johnson of the Chattanooga News who will give his report. Immediate after President Stewart will appoint committees.

Representative of the committee on advertising agency relations will follow. The meeting will then be open to discussion. Discussions will also follow the report of the committee on Southern advertising development.

Short talks will then be made on accounting, traffic and circulation, after which the first day's session will be adjourned.

The second day will recommend that the new officers be elected at the Tuesday session and be installed as such immediately after the Tuesday session is called to order. The rest of the Tuesday will consist of the report of the finance committee and discussions on labor, new publishing and mechanical problems.

The Wednesday session will give over to the news and editorial departments. Legislation and Washington bureau of the New York Herald, the tax appraiser's estimate touch a new high mark of newspaper valuations in America.

Mr. Jacobs is fined ten dollars in Pittsburgh for treating a lion cruelly. "That's what makes it news," Mr. Jacobs, by profession, trains lions, and he hit this lion in the face with a heavy whip and frightened it by shooting blank cartridges in its face. He has treated ten lions cruelly. That's this is the first time any man has been accused of cruelty to a lion. Selling is Easy
Because Business is Good in Philadelphia

National advertising is most effective where retail outlets exist in great numbers. That's what makes Philadelphia so important to the manufacturer who must stimulate retail selling.

In Philadelphia there are

- 9148 Women's Wear Stores
- 2687 Shoe Stores
- 4627 Grocery Stores
- 790 Confectionery Stores
- 644 Autos and Accessories
- 739 Musical Goods Stores
- 9208 Men's Wear Stores
- 2496 Cigar and Tobacco Stores
- 1098 Drug Stores
- 710 Hardware and Paint Stores
- 506 Electrical Devices Stores

According to the last report of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, Philadelphia leads the country with an increase of 34.50 per cent in sales of Department and Dry Goods stores, over May of last year.

Nearly every Philadelphia store that advertises uses The Bulletin.

PRESS DISPATCHES CONSUMED MOST OF 750,000 WORDS FLASHED FROM GIANT LINER DURING TRIAL TRIP—DETAILS OF ENTERTAINMENT AND PERSONNEL ABOARD.

One of the records of the monster steamer Leviathan on its trial trip, in addition to breaking all previous speed limits was that of the heaviest total of radio news ever filed by the press.

Under the personal supervision of David Sarnoff, general manager of the Radio Corporation of America, and Harold Porter, general superintendent, the radio operators received and transmitted a total of 750,000 words, or at the rate of 15,000 a day, the greatest part of which was in the form of press dispatches. Commenting on the record, Mr. Sarnoff said:

"On this trip there were more messages sent and received daily on the Leviathan than are handled every twenty-four hours between the United States and any one European country, and the great speed of the ship allowed the work to be done in a very short time. The passengers who were informed that their messages would be

SCIENCE IN ITS FINAL ANALYSIS.

Editor the Fourth Estate Sir:

In a recent advertisement in The Fourth Estate headed Constructive Journalism” Frank Munsey said: “The wisdom of consolidation among newspapers in the interest of bigger and better output and bigger and better journalism has never been better demonstrated than in the New York Sun and the New York Globe.”

There you have it. He knows, he does not guess. To know is one thing and to know that you know is still another, and equally as important a factor in the science of greater journalism.

To-day the newspaper business is a science—greater than ever before. Since science symbols exactness and accuracy, therefore Frank Munsey’s statement “I say this as one who knows” supplants “I guess”—replaces doubt with certainty—locates a cause back of every effect.

This is Frank Munsey’s science: and his science is the last word. It is truth in its highest form.

Frank Munsey furnishes the answer. Frank Munsey also furnishes the key to the answer and, having both, we know the answer is right.

delayed in order for the correspondents to get their messages to land. They felt, as I did, that the newspaper men should be given precedence because they were talking the American public, which naturally was interested in the performance of the ship.

The press associations and all the leading metropolitan papers kept the wireless men busy throughout the Leviathan’s voyage. The four radio operators, John R. Irwin, Elmo N. Pickrell, Anthony Tambourino, and Raymond J. Green, broke all records for handling the press matter and enabling the men to make editions, and send off “flashes” and bulletins.

No pressing were the demands that Mr. Sarnoff, after a lapse of nearly eleven years from the keys, himself personally sat at the key and dispatched newspaper copy. On one occasion several hours were consumed in receiving a message for A. D. Lasker, chairman of the Shipping Board. When the newspapermen complained, he ordered the receiving

AMERICAN PAPER AND PULP ASSOCIATION PAPER AND WORK NOW ON MONTHLY NEWSPRINT REVIEW WHICH GOVERNMENT ABANDONS AFTER ISSUANCE FOR 5 YEARS.

With the issuance of reports regarding the paper industry and trade for the month of May the Federal Trade Commission discontinues the publication of the bi-monthly review of paper dispatches which in recent years have come to be generally regarded as reliable data on newspaper consumption.

This extensive statistical burden will be taken over by the American Pulp and Paper Association under the personal direction of Dr. Hugh Baker, the executive secretary of the Association and a noted forestier, whose work in this important field has attracted wide attention.

The publication of the newsprint reports was undertaken by the Federal Trade Commission in 1917 and has been under the direction of vice-chairman Murdock. While it was known that the Commission was considering the discontinuance of this service, it was thought that its importance to the industry made it desirable to discontinue collecting coal data. Thereafter a number of industries complained that the statistics of their government’s time was being devoted to the newspaper industry and that these sections of the government’s work was being held up.

The newsprint industry was the first to derive the benefits of governmental collection of statistics under a program which intended to aid the industry.

ONLY 30 PER CENT OF FORESTS LEFT POINTS OUT NOTED FORESTER, WITH LEAN YEARS AHEAD UNLESS GOVERNMENT SETS OUT TO RE-FOREST WASTE LANDS.

The depletion of the nation's forests vitally threatens the health and the prosperity of all the people of America. Timber lands are being cut down four times as fast as they are grown. The facts presented in a series of articles, written for The Fourth Estate by Dr. Hugh P. Baker, will be of special interest to newspaper publishers in view of the movement to definitely create a national reforestation policy.

By DR. HUGH P. BAKER,
Executive Secretary, American Paper and Pulp Association.

The story of the part which the forests of this country have played in the building on this continent of a great nation will be written some time later when our virgin forests get further away from us and when we come to look at them as we are now looking at the disappearing game resources of the country.

It would be very helpful if this story of the debt, which we owe the forests of this country, could be made known to a master who would paint the picture so effectively that we would put ourselves promptly to the task of protecting forests which are still left to us.

Such a story told so that all could understand would hasten the acceptance by the states and the Nation of the task of again making productive the millions of acres in the country which are now idle, waiting patiently for man to understand would hasten the acceptance by the states and the Nation of the task of again making productive the millions of acres in the country which are now idle, waiting patiently for man to understand.

CRAWFORD LAUDS VIGOR OF OUR ADVERTISING.

NOTED BRITISH AGENT SAYS AMERICANS PRESENT GOODS BETTER BUT DOUBTS IF WE EQUAL HIS COUNTRYMEN IN THEORY AND PSYCHOLOGY OF ADVERTISING.

At the end of the many delightful exchanges during the past two weeks on international courtesies between British and American publishers and advertising executives was the farewell luncheon in honor of William S. Crawford, vice-president of the Thirty Club of London, by the New York Advertising Club last Monday noon. Mr. Crawford sailed on the Berengaria Tuesday morning.

MISS KATHLEEN MACLACHLAN OF CRAWFORD ORGANIZATION STARTS CAMPAIGN FOR GROUP MODELLED ON AMERICAN LINES—HAS ENTHUSIASTIC SUPPORT.

When William S. Crawford sailed for England Tuesday on the Berengaria with Mrs. Crawford, he was accompanied by Miss Kathleen MacLachlan, who acts as his personal secretary and was the only business woman member of the British delegation to the advertising convention at Atlantic City.

Miss MacLachlan, who occupies the position of contact with clients-manager in Mr. Crawford’s organization, is an admirable specimen of the modern type of business woman—an excellent organizer, a tremendous worker, combining a very happily essential feminine charm with the business energy usually attributed to men only.

HONORED AT CHICAGO.

On her last visit to America Miss MacLachlan was made honorary member of the Women’s Advertising Club of Chicago. When the delegates to the convention of the Associated Clubs of the World meet in London in 1924, they will be greeted not only by the masculine advertising specialists of Great Britain but by the members of the League of Advertising Women of London, organized by Miss MacLachlan. The work has already been started.

“Today, there is no woman’s advertising club in Great Britain,” said Miss MacLachlan before sailing. “When you come next year to England for the great convention, there will be in existence the Women’s Advertising Club of London.

“Three years ago, when I had the great honor conferred upon me of being made a co-founder of the Women’s Advertising Club of Chicago—an honor I prize very highly—I dreamed of a real, live women’s advertising club in London, but the time has come to put this dream into materialization.”

Now through the Ad Club convention coming to London, the time is indeed ripe and I have the assurance of my chief, Mr. W. S. Crawford—an ardent believer in women’s ability—that he will do everything in his power to support this movement; while Mr. Vernon, the organizer of this great British delegation, has also pledged himself to help forward this Women’s Advertising Club of London.

EDITOR HAS HIS DOUBTS IF ALL THE WORLD IS AS PERFECT AS HIS PAPER.

“The editor does not want any one to send him any more copies of his paper in which they find mistakes,” complains a Missouri exchange. “If they find a perfect copy, however, he will pay you a big price for it. If the fool critic who hunts for mistakes in newspapers would find them all, he would be kept busy.

“We will be pleased to buy copies of any paper which can be proven entirely free from errors, either typographically or in statement of fact. We would be pleased to find a merchant who never made a mistake in putting up an order; a lawyer who never lost a case through his errors; a woman who never forgot to put in salt while she was cooking, or to put tea in the pot. Bring in some of your mistakeless paragons who find it so easy to criticize the newspapers and we’ll give ‘em the chance of their lives to find out whether they are really human.”

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE TO EXTEND MARKET NEWS SERVICE TO 7,000 MILES LEASED TELEGRAPH LINES—WILL USE RADIO—REACHES 2,000 PAPERS.

Extension of the market news service of the United States department of agriculture to some 7,000 miles will involve the establishment of one of the largest commercial leased telegraph lines and wire telegraph systems in the world.

The main extension is from Kansas City to the Pacific coast, with new offices at Denver, Salt Lake City and Portland. A branch office is to be established in the southeast, at Atlanta, in addition to the field agents already operating in that section. Offices at several other southern points are under consideration.

Additional branch offices for reporting markets on fruits and vegetables will be opened early in July at the cities already named, together with additional branches for the livestock and meat services. The leased wire service will run into San Francisco, and the entire west coast will be effectively covered by radio and wire telegraph from that city.

Appropriations voted by the last Congress for these extensions provided for an increase of about $300,000 to carry on the work, making the total appropriation for the service approximately $700,000.

The leased wire system, during the war covered about 18,000 miles. This was later reduced to 7,200 miles. Under present extensions of the service the leased wire system will cover approximately 7,000 miles.

All traffic is scheduled and controlled by the Washington office and is transmitted simultaneously to all the big market centers. Hundreds of telegrams are received daily from railroads giving origin, destination and number of carloads of perishable produce in transit, which information is classified and transmitted by the Washington office to branch offices. Similar reports on livestock and other commodities are kept moving. At the close of the crop market summary of all commodities are dispatched for release to more than 2,000 newspapers throughout the country.

CHILD LABOR LAW SHOULD BENEFIT NEWSBOYS.

BUSSES ARE FACTOR IN NEWSPAPER DISTRIBUTION.

Although the circulation department of a newspaper is usually considered a part of the business or financial end of the institution, I have always emphatically disclaimed this off-hand relegation of my honorable profession.

The distribution of newspapers and the general content of a modern newspaper, even its title, is largely determined by the size or the smallness of the circulation. To meet the situation, newspapers generously allow their newsboys a free pass to the theater, a chance to attend a sports event or the like.

The newsboy, as a good newsboy, is always anxious to have his subscriptions and the agents service with an error, to enter the same newspaper that is daily purchased by the public subscriber. This is the case with newspapers that are sold by the public and not by the agent. The same newspaper that is daily purchased by the public subscriber.

It is difficult to compute what the proportional and direct influence any single department of a newspaper’s makeup has on its circulation; except, perhaps, at times of unusual popular excitement.

Radio broadcasting might be rightfully placed in the category of “intangible assets,” as far as direct financial results are concerned. We should be content to let it remain so. There is a sciatica of doubt in my mind, however, of its being a genuine asset though.

It seems to me that radio broadcasting is a natural adjunct of the mission of newspapers. It helps to keep alive an interest in the diffusion of general information among the masses.

The press to-day is in the hands of the common school— the public school, if you will—of all classes of people. It is a university for the spreading of knowledge in “tabloid” form; its pupils grow with the education of the civilization.

Radio broadcasting is the faithful handmaiden of the press. It is a “coercive force” in the world of ideas.

"I do not know of any other press in the world that could have given us more satisfactory service than our SIMPLEX... It is the Star's proud boast that we have the fastest press of its size in New York... Hoe quality and Hoe service form a combination which it will be mighty hard to beat."

April 3, 1923.

R. Hoe & Co.,
504 Grand Street, New York.

Gentlemen:

I feel that I would be unappreciative if I did not take this occasion to let you know how grateful I am at the speed and skill demonstrated by the crew of outside operators from your factory who have just installed on our Simplex Quad. another eight-page unit, giving us a press capacity of forty pages.

When, some months ago, I took up with your Mr. Peterson the proposition of increasing our press-room facilities, I had before me several other offers to trade in our Simplex for a larger press of different make.

In deciding to stick to the Hoe, however, I am sure that I made no mistake, for I do not know of any other press in the world that could have given us more satisfactory service than our Simplex.

As a matter of fact, it is The Star's proud boast that we have the fastest press of its size in New York. While you guarantee a speed of only 30,000 an hour, yet this wonderful machine of ours has frequently done, and done well, between 35,000 and 38,000 an hour. It has even exceeded this speed on a few occasions.

And we are getting out a paper which will compare favorably in point of press-work with any printed anywhere in the country. A fact which makes this the more remarkable is that we use dry mate exclusively.

One thing which I particularly admire about our Simplex is its sturdy dependability. So staunchly is it constructed that even when running well above its maximum rated speed it performs as smoothly and efficiently as it does when operated at a much lower rate of speed.

Hoe quality and Hoe service form a combination which it will be mighty hard to beat. That has been our experience, and if any publisher of a paper in The Star's class who is contemplating a new press equipment would like to see what the Simplex can do and is doing day after day, send his man to our plant at about 1:30 any weekday afternoon and we will be glad to show him a printing machine that will open his eyes as to the possibilities of a Quad., both as to speed and quality of press-work.

Very cordially yours,

[Signature]

General Manager.

Hoe Simplex Presses are designed to meet the demand for a well-made speedy, efficient and yet low-priced Rotary Press for Newspapers of moderate circulation. They are built in 16, 24, 32, 40 and 48-page capacities and while designed for a running speed of 30,000 papers per hour up to 16 pages for a 32-page press they will under favorable conditions do considerably better than this as shown by Mr. Smith's letter above.

There is nothing experimental about these machines—There are eighteen of them now running and we have orders on our books for even more.

FLY-BY-NIGHTERS HI-JACK THE PUBLIC.

TULSA WORLD IN BROADSIDE PAGE ADVERTISEMENTS CALLS TURN ON WILD CAT ADVERTISING SCHEMES AND DIRECTS MERCHANTS TO BONA-FIDE MEDIUM.

Tulsa business institutions have been fleeced—literally hi-jacked—out of thousands and thousands of dollars. The public is protected from these schemes; political rivals, and stock exchanges are to a certain extent by the state blue-sky laws; but these Fly-by-Night advertisers merely turn more schemes, and when laws to curb them, says the Tulsa World.

The interest of better business and better merchandising, the Tulsa World declares, is that it is just as much its duty to warn Tulsa business institutions against these so-called “advertising” schemes as it is for the banks to warn their depositors against unsound investments.

These Fly-by-Night “advertising” schemes, that have been “put over” on Tulsa business concerns, are too numerous to mention. We mention a few dozens and dozens of them that have been “pulled.”

These Fly-by-Nighters prey on the smaller merchants who are less informed, and the value of confining their appropriations to legitimate advertising media. The rates charged for these schemes are always unreasonable. The circulation, as a rule, is confined among the advertisers themselves.

“Usually the Fly-by-Nighter” gets his presentation of a checking copy, although we know of some instances where they have received their "blood money" merely presenting a proof of the advertisement. He signs up his sleuth and flies night on to the next town to put it over again.

BARTON CONSOLIDATES TWO WYOMING NEWSPAPERS.

The Sheridan Wyoming Post and Sheridan Enterprise, political rivals, have been consolidated into one newspaper, the Sheridan Post-Enterprise, which has been purchased by Charles W. Barton, editor and publisher of the Casper Wyoming Daily Tribune.

Mr. Barton was formerly assistant publisher of the New York Telegraph and before that assistant general sales and advertising manager of the American Chicle Company, New York. The Post-Enterprise will be conducted as a strictly independent paper, free from any politics, says Mr. Barton, adding that he intends to boost for peace, prosperity and harmony in Sheridan and that it is his desire to promote the best possible feeling between the various cities of Wyoming.

The newspapers which flooded their columns with reports and information about advertising media, other than the newspaper, are in a measure to blame for the promotion of direct mail, poster boards, street cars and the magazine at the Ad Clubs conventions.

WRITERS' DEATHS

STRANGELY SIMILAR.

POPULAR WASHINGTON NEWSPAPER MEN ACCOMPANYING HARDING KILLED IN SAME WAY AS BEN ALLEN WHILE MAKING TOUR WITH EX-PRESIDENT WILSON.

Once more the Presidential "swing around the circle" has served to bring toll of death in the ranks of the accompanying newspapermen. With the deaths of Sumner Curtis, representative of the Republican National Committee on the Harding trip and former newspaper correspondent, and Thomas F. Davis, a newspaper historian and nationally-known in the newspaper world, the number of deaths in the accompanying press corps has mounted to two.

The accident occurred at 9:30 this morning when the car, with President Harding and the other serious injuries, occurred on Bear Creek canyon, near Denver, when the steering gear of the machine broke, and the car and occupants plunged over the steep cliff into the stream below. Thomas French, a Denver statistician who was driving the car, was also killed.

The automobile carrying the four unfortunate men was one of ten machines which had carried correspondents with the Presidential party and Denver newspapermen to luncheon tendered in their honor by the Denver Press Club at the top of Lookout Mountain.

After the luncheon the party motored over Genesee Mountain and was proceeding down Bear Canyon when it was seen to swerve toward the edge of the road, crash through a stone pillar and wall, cable guardrail, and tumble down the jagged incline to Bear Creek below. What caused the car to leave the roadway probably never will be known, but it is believed a broken steering knuckle was responsible.

PRESIDENT IS OVERCOME.

President Harding was paying a visit to the army general hospital and did not learn of the accident until he returned to his hotel. He was almost immediately taken to the hospital where he had been examined by Mr. Curtis for years. He had been in the hospital since midnight.

Inevitably, the sad occurrence near Denver recalled previous tragedies of a similar nature with such journeys, confirming the growing conviction that the duties of newspapermen in "trailing the President" come within the category of extra hazardous occupation.

It was in the course of President Wilson's last Western trip, in September, 1919, following his return from Europe, and on which the sudden breakdown in his health took place, that Gen. F. E. Allen, Washington correspondent of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, was killed on the Columbia highway, near Portland, Ore., when... (Continued on Twentieth Page)

CIRCULATION MAN DECLARES
ADVERTISING LITERATURE
SHOULD BE INFORMAL,
BRIEF AND WITHOUT FRILLS—
IT SHOULD BE COURTEOUS,
SINCERE AND TRUTHFUL.

By Royal W. Weilers,
Circulating Manager, Allentown Morning Call.

A good letter or a good piece of advertising literature to me is nothing but silent conversation, representing conversation at a distance. There are entirely too many letters written that are painfully formal with a lot of frills that are irrelevant and time-consuming for both writer and reader.

I am a strong believer in letters written in conversational style, and the biggest way to make such letters is YOU, referring to the reader; for it is he that wants to know what you would like to do for him. This "I and We" carries too much of an egotistical impress.

I may be making a revolutionary reference, but I have often wondered why all the self dehors of street and city address of the individual or firm, addressed, and the salutation, the start out with "Replying to yours," "Your favor of the 10th inst., "Yeats of so and so received and contents noted," and then closing with "Trust that this meets with your approval," or "Thanking you for your kind and courteous patronage"—why, blame it, often this is rude and not at all with "Replying to yours," "Your favor of the 10th inst., "Yeats of so and so received and contents noted," and then closing with "Trust that this meets with your approval," or "Thanking you for your kind and courteous patronage"—why, blame it, often this is rude and not at all.

The clever letter or clever piece of advertising literature may be attractive in its way and sound nicely when read aloud, but it is often more merely a piece of art and fails to center attention on what we want to emphasize mostly.

GROWTH OF LAST 25 YEARS.

MANY MERCHANT EXECUTIVES
WHOSE ADVERTISEMENTS
FILL FULL PAGES, STARTED ON ROAD TO SUCCESS
THROUGH MODEST WANT ADS IN DAILY PAPERS.

"The most wonderful feature of writing in classified want ads," says Frank F. Barham, publisher of the Los Angeles Herald.

"The development of the classified or 'want ad' has been a matter of the last quarter century, generally speaking. In any paper of any year from 1895 to 1900, it will be found that the classified columns consisted of 'personal' messages, help or situations wanted, rooms and houses wanted or for rent, with little else. The modern newspaper has many pages of classified ads. The multiplicity of wants shown makes a startling contrast.

"The rise of the classified ad started because it was a cheap medium" continued Mr. Barham.

"It grew and developed because it has been the general custom to write and advertise as to secure or dispose of anything, no matter what it might be. To-day it is the most wonderful of the many marvelous developments connected with the newspaper.

"Many great merchants and manufacturers who fear the classified columns fill full pages in the newspaper, started business and grew to greatness by using the want ad."

"In other words, practically every thing which is bought and sold or enters into the home or business life of the people now finds a place in the classified columns of the daily newspaper—a veritable department store or arcade of the most pretentious sort."

MILL SUPERINTENDENTS ELECT.

Homer E. Stafford, superintendent of the Kamargo Mills, was re-elected chairman of the Northern New York division of the American Pulp and Paper Mill Superintendents Association at the annual meeting in Watertown, N. Y.

William Bridges of the Niagara Wall Paper Company of Niagara Falls, N. Y., was re-elected vice-president.

ADVERTISING THE
CHIEF AID TO PROGRESS.

LEADING BRITISH COPY WRITER
SETS STANDARD OF ARTISTIC AND LITERARY STYLE—PAGE SHOULD BE VIRILE AS ADAM AND Seductive as Eve.

"Without plunging into the depths of metaphysics, it is a simple matter for even the casual observer to note the mass psychological changes that differ in material points. But in a general understanding about most material matters, the peoples of the United States and Great Britain are nearer akin than they are to any other nation," says H. Dennis Bradley, of Pope and Bradley, London, England. Mr. Bradley is known as the "writer of some of the finest and most literate advertising copy produced in Great Britain."

"The Britisher is peculiarly insular. He is not readily inclined to accept any Americanism that comes his way."

"Nevertheless, the aristocratic Britisher has of late overcome his strange and telling dislike for anything American, and, in advertising, little more than a decade back, he considered it an abomination to patronize a firm that advertised.

"ADVERTISING IS NEW ART."

"That prejudice is being broken down gradually and advertising is assuming the dignity of a profession and an art." The intensive and rapid development of commerce and industry that our peoples must look for success, not to the false glamour and devastating effects of warfare; and commerce, national and international, should rule the new world as the supreme force and the only means by which the population can be adequately provided for.

"In commerce we have, as yet, barely passed the threshold of promise, and the new art of advertising must inevitably be the chief aid to progress."

"To-day no material thing can be accepted without the help of advertising. The entrancing gown of a woman is merely the advertising of her figure and the越 the less public it gives to her charms."

"The popular preacher seeks his mention in the press and calls it an 'uplifting force.' The chorus lady views her portrait in the magazines and loves to see her 'puff.'

"But men of business justly call it by its proper name and we know that it is a fragrant word that no other name would smell as sweet."

"Since we have unreservedly accepted this new god, it would not be amiss to consider how far we are advanced in the service of the church. I believe that the copy of tomorrow will be written by men of genius—representatives of the church and the help of great painters, there will be born a new great public figure in advertising."

"This is no fanciful vision; it is a simple, logical forecast. Let us for this point the artistic progress—just by extension, and, and with the help of great painters, there will be born a new great public figure in advertising."

"The standard we should aspire to is that the advertisement should be the most witty and subtle page in the paper in which it appears. It should be as virile as Adam and as seductive as Eve."

"At the Royal Academy banquet the Prince of Wales before a very distinguished company, made a splendid plea for a better display of art on the hoardings. He expressed the desire for a higher standard of art to be exhibited in the painting of posters. Such a plea coming from him to the painters, the Britisher could not be a unique tribute to the importance of advertising."

"The next big literary gathering is held in London I hope that he will preside and urge our literary men to see that the highest standard of their art is displayed in the letterpress of our advertisements."

"Advertising is the new world force lustily breeding progress. It is the clarion note of business principle. It is the bugle call to prospectus. But great force as it is, advertising must seek all aid from literature and in order that it may assume that dignity which is its rightful heritage."

PUBLISHER GETS HIGHEST VOTE FOR JEWISH CONGRESS.

Jacob Ginsburg, editor and publisher of the Jewish World, the only Jewish daily printed in Philadelphia, received the highest vote in the recent election held Sunday in Philadelphia for the American Jewish Congress. Out of fifty candidates comprising doctors, rabbis, lawyers and men of all walks of life the publisher of the Jewish World was given the largest vote.

Mr. Ginsburg recently bought the Jewish Woman's Home Journal, the only Jewish journal for women in America.

ed by the Federal Trade Commission's reasons for discontinuing it?" Dr. Blake was asked.

"No, on the contrary, we believe that the American Pulp and Paper Association is the logical vehicle for assembling this information and we expect, as evidence suggests, a closer cooperation from users of newsprint than appeared to have existed in the past.

COURT SUSTAINS BAN ON OIL PROMOTER'S FALSE ADS.

Orders to cease and desist from making false or misleading statements in advertising, issued by the federal trade commission against H. L. Cox of Fort Worth and Houston, Tex., or through his wife, in selling stocks or securities in interests connected with his oil stock promotions, have been sustained at a special hearing before the United States court of appeals for the fifth circuit.

The commission found that Cox and his wife were making false representations in selling stock in various oil companies, and issued an order last June. Later, the commission discovered that Cox was degrading the order, and had identified himself with "Doc" Cook, of polar and Fort Worth fame, in connection with the Petroleum Producers' Association, which Cox had organized.

Another thing was, a dividend paying company, and had more than a hundred producing oil wells in operation. The market price of the stock was much more than that at which they were offered for sale, and the facts were found false by the commission.

NEW HOME FOR IOWA DAILY.

Frank D. Throop, publisher of the Davenport, la., Democrat, expects to move the plant into its new home November 1. Work has been started on the erection of the $300,000 building which will be the most modern plant in the state. The new equipment in the plant will be an additional number of linotypes, a high speed cotype Goss press and stereotyping machinery.

LONDON DAILY RAISED FOR "MYSTERY SHIP" PICTURE.

The police raided the offices of the London Daily Herald, the socialist and labor organ, recently and held the members of the staff for an hour while the paper was being obtained. The original and all copies of the picture of the submarine X-1, which the Herald published a few days before, were seized.

Police officers questioned the staff as to how the picture of the new submarine was obtained. The chief, J. H. Chatham June 16, was obtained, and confiscated all copies of the paper containing the picture.

The Admiralty had excluded reports of the launching of the submarine. The police are now being searched for evidence of the submarine. The Admiralty had excluded reports of the launching of the "mystery ship," as the submarine has been called, and workers are being looked upon as possible suspects.

C. HAROLD VERNON.

an energetic campaign is now being laid out by C. Harold Vernon, president of the Thirty Club, to carry the Thirty Club to England next year by the bulk of Vernon returns to boom big attendance.

President of Thirty Club of London, whose firm is associated with Martin V. Kelley Co., will reach New York in October to launch drive for record attendance.

So sanguine are the British advertising men that the London convention will outstrip all annual gatherings in the Ad Club's history, that of C. Vernon & Sons, Ltd., of London and is associated in America with the Martin V. Kelley Co., of New York and Toledo. In addition to his London headquarters, Mr. Vernon's firm has offices in Paris and Japan which are associated agencies to provide a world wide service.

During his stay in America Mr. Vernon made several addresses where he pleaded the great need of American ad men to work toward the making of America into world ambassadors of trade. In a speech before the Association of American Advertisers, Mr. Vernon suggested that the New York convention next year would be the greatest event in British advertising history, and that as far as American manufacturers were concerned he urged the employment of British advertising agencies whose co-operation should be sought in dealing with the British market.

This theory was sympathetically received by a large audience and it is reported that in the coming convention next year the opportunity will be provided for an exhibition of a vast enlargement of business between the two great countries.

Hartford times sued for breach of contract by ad promoter.

A suit in equity alleging breach of contract and asking judgment for an accounting for money due, besides damages of $20,000, has been filed in the United States district court at New Haven, Ct., by Thomas D. Taylor, as an advertising promoter of Philadelphia, against the Hartford Times.

Mr. Taylor specializes in reviving classified advertising columns by a plan of his own, in various parts of the country, and according to the allegations, the Times made a contract with him providing that he was to receive 10 per cent of the revenue from increased business in the classified ad columns operated under his plan for a period of ten years.

Mr. Taylor declares he has never been paid any money from the company and has never received an accounting.

As a result of this alleged breach of contract, Mr. Taylor wants an examination of the books of the Times to determine the exact status of the company. He has classified columns from the time the contract went into effect.

EDITORS PLAN MEMORIAL TO FATHER OF VIRGINIA JOURNALISM.

William Parks, who established the first permanent printing press in Virginia, will be honored by the Virginia Press Association. Parks, who has often been called "the Father of Virginia Journalism," was born in Shropshire, England, about 1695. He published the Maryland Gazette in Annapolis, in 1727, and served as public printer of Maryland from 1726 to 1737. The first publication of a newspaper in Virginia was "Typography," an ode on printing, by J. Markland, with the imprint of 1730, inscribed to the patron of printing in Virginia, Hon. William Gooch, lieutenant-governor.

The funeral service was held at the residence where he had passed away. The body was removed to the New York Burying Ground, where it will remain until the next week when the burial will take place. The services were conducted by Dr. George W. Tuller, who administered the rites at the funeral.

HUNDREDS VISIT MODERN PLANT OF WHITE PLAINS DAILY REPORTER—MERGER WITH TWO OTHER PAPERS LEAVES IT ALONE IN FIELD—TULLER IS PUBLISHER.

A large part of the population of White Plains, N. Y., visited the new plant of the White Plains Daily Reporter when the new home was opened to the public Monday night. The building, the great mechanical features and the inner workings of the office were open for inspection by the public. Every step in the making of a newspaper was explained to the hundreds of visitors. The Reporter appeared as a daily newspaper on October 22, 1917. It was founded in 1888 by Charles Patterman and P. B. Tyler as the Westchester County Reporter. It became a daily in 1907 and continued under Henry Sutherland until 1915 when it left the daily field. With the coming of W. Lee Tuller as publisher in 1919, the first step was taken toward the merging of the other two papers in White Plains which when the Daily Reporter was added to the chain part of the Reporter. On January 2, 1921, the Daily Record became part of the consolidated paper.

NEWS SENSE AS A HEREDITARY SPIRIT.

LARGE PERCENTAGE OF YOUNG MEN AND WOMEN WHO ARE TAKING JOURNALISM COURSE AT OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY ARE NEAR RELATIVES OF EDITORS.

The newspaper spirit is prone to run in families. It was so from the beginning of journalism in this country, for there were the Greenes, the Drapers, the Franklins, the Bradfords, and many other families of newspaper men and women, and it is interesting to note that in the department of journalism, Ohio State university, to-day, there are students who are the grandchildren of old-time newspaper editors.

Richard R. Waltz, also a junior, is from Delta, where his father owns and publishes the Delta Atlas. Waltz's grandfather, John Waltz, was an earlier publisher of that paper.

Helen E. Duff, a sophomore in the college, is the daughter of William C. Duff, editor of the Ashland Times-Gazette.

A. H. Kelly's journalistic tendencies can be traced to his uncle, who was the market editor of the Cincinnati Post.

Norman W. Lilley, sophomore, who entered the office of the Galion Plain Dealer and general manager of the Cleveland News, is also a brother of other prominent journalists.

William H. Mylander, a third-year man in journalism, is the brother of C. J. Mylander, editor of the Press of Houston, Texas.

Mary M. Nilles, a junior in journalism, is the daughter of the late E. E. Nilles, editor of the Ohio State Journal. Mylander is also editor of the Lantern for next year.

Albert V. Dux, a junior, entered the department of journalism from the University of Tennessee, where he writes for and publishes the Wooster Daily Record.

Joseph H. Huls, a junior, is the son of A. E. Huls, the editor and owner of the Dayton News. His father, newspaper editor, owns the Lewisburg Leader.

Karl B. Paul, one of this year's graduates from the department of journalism, was a student in the work with his brother, who is the editor and manager of the Middle- town News. His cousin, Harold A. Paul, is the editor of the Miami Union.

Leeds R. Tobin, a junior and a Columbus Dispatch reporter, has one brother, Emile Tobin, who is the corresponding editor of the Lancaster Gazette, and another, Don L. Tobin, who is the manager of the Consolidated Telephone Company of Ohio.

John A. Pollard, a junior, is the brother of James E. Pollard, who is in charge of the University News Bureau.

Harold K. Schellenberger, a junior, is the only student in the department who is making his way and carrying on at the same time work for a newspaper. His brother, Stanley, is still in high school, is doing active repartorial work for the Jackson Standard Journal.

EDITOR'S TASK NOT SO EASY AS MANY READERS MAY IMAGINE.

The sort of newspaper that would be published if everybody edited it would be something wonderful, but nothing that anybody would subscribe to. The newspaper business is a vocation, and those who make up the newspapers must have the mass of the people in mind every moment. No newspaper can live by catering to a chosen few.

There is not in any community enough business to support a large newspaper designed especially for the cognoscenti, although only careful readers, the high-brows, observes the Reading Eagle.

The high-brows are a vague class, but are commonly supposed to be the type of citizens who take no interest in any subject except one concerning things that would be discussed in a faculty or a fine arts convention or in the higher clergy. No daily newspaper made to fit a clientele of intellectuals or near-intellectuals could gain the support, for the high-brows would be willing to pay.

A new author made himself unpopular some time ago by saying that as far as he had observed most of them had been criticisms on his work... sometimes come from the class of readers who never buy books, but are keen for ideas and are better off from their books than from any other source.

It might be said of some of those who are severest in their condemnation of the daily press that they do not have to pay its bills nor do they contribute greatly to its support.

MONTANA NEWSPAPER MEN TO MEET IN AUGUST.

S. E. Peterson of Great Falls, Mont., secretary of the Montana Press Association is arranging to make arrangements for the annual convention of the association in Butte on August 9, 10 and 11. A large attendance is expected from the business and editorial departments as well as representatives from the weeklies in the state.

The start's newspaper men have a chance to see not only the sights of the state's metropolis but also of other cities, Anacosta and Butte.

"The last meeting held in that vicinity was in Anaconda in 1912 and each recurring year the newspaper men have been looking forward to a visit to Butte," said "Doc" Peterson.

They weren't looking to see the mines, which most of them know only by hearsay. They all bring their wives and some of them their families and they will not overlook the opportunity to give the shopping districts the once over and to see the bright life of Montana's great white way.

The convention is to be held in Butte in response to the invitation of the Butte chamber of commerce. Mr. Peterson has been confering with Secretary P. L. Will of the chamber, discussing accommodations and other arrangements for the convention.

NOTED SPORT WRITERS GATHER AT SHELBY
NEARLY 100 NEWSPAPER MEN ALREADY AT DEMPSEY-GIBBONS TRAINING CAMPS—PROMOTERS PREPARING TO HANDLE 500 SCRIBES—MANY CELEBRITIES THERE.

Nearly 100 sport writers from all over the country are now telling the world about Shelby and the Dempsey-Gibbons fight which will be held at Shelby, Mont., next Wednesday, July 4. Dean Snyder informs The Fourth Estate in a special telegram. Practically all by-line writers from every big newspaper and news service are on the ground. They divide their time between Great Falls, the Dempsey camp, and Shelby, where Gibbons is training.

The press section in the huge wooden octagon will handle 280 scribes but reservations now already make an overflow necessary. By the time the fight starts at three o'clock July 4, this number of sport celebrities will be doubled.

INCREASE OF 15 PER CENT OVER 1922 IN USE OF NEWSPRINT FOR MAY, 1923.

The weighed average price of contract deliveries from domestic mills to publishers during May, 1923, f.o.b. b. mill, in carload lots (in standard news in rolls was $3,726 per 100 pounds. This weighed average is based upon May deliveries of about 8,000 tons on contracts involving a total tonnage of approximately 602,000 tons of undelivered paper manufactured in the United States, stated the Federal Commission's last report. The weighed average contract prices based on deliveries from Canadian mills of about 63,000 tons off standard roll news in carload lots f.o.b. b. mill, in May, 1922, was $3,777 per 100 pounds. This weighed average is based upon the May deliveries of contracts involving about 186,000 tons of undelivered Canadian paper.

The weighed average market price for May, of standard roll news in carload lots f.o.b. b. mill was $3,795 per 100 pounds. The domestic consumption of standard news by metropolitan dailies, using between one-half and three-fourths of the quantity of newsprint consumed for May, 1923, when compared with May, 1922, shows an increase of 15 per cent and an increase of 36 per cent when compared with May, 1921. The metropolitan dailies held 60 per cent of the tonnage on hand at the end of the month.

A few years ago the condensation of a complete composing room into the magazines and keys of a single Linotype would have been thought impossible.

Today, however, the operator of a Text-and-Display Linotype gets any face he wants within an almost unlimited range, from small text to full 36 point display, merely by touching a key.

The space of many typecases may be saved by the use of Text-and-Display Linotypes, as well as thousands of footsteps and hours of composition and distribution time. Nearly two hundred newspapers after trying display composition on the Linotype have learned that hand setting of display is as unnecessary and archaic as hand setting of straight matter.

WILL THE PUBLISHERS NOW CO-OPERATE?

While the Federal Trade Commission, in announcing the discontinuance of its investigation, has made necessary the sacrifice of much economic and statistical work, it is understood that the indifference of many newspaper publishers was discouraging in the extreme. To give these monthly reports proper authority and influence, a number of these publishers have obtained subscriptions. They are eager to have the data of the last few months published. The enthusiasm of these publishers for statistical and financial information is encouraging. It is to be hoped that the Federal Trade Commission will continue this publication of its statistical bulletin for the benefit of the newspaper publishers and the public.

A distinguished contemporary, lamenting the sale of the New York Globe, which was purchased by Frank A. Munsey, says: "The New York Globe, under the patronage of the New York Evening Post, became a "hyphenated newspaper," it is, at least, a leader in its field and few would have claimed for the Globe that distinction under the Rogers regime.

Suppose all the Globe readers do not read the large and daily newspaper, and the Globe—does our mournful friend, who comes to a belated bier, not to bid it farewell, but to praise it, forget that Mr. Munsey has a very free notion of what a newspaper is? Does he not realize that the New York Evening Telegram, and the Globe readers must be reminded that the New York Evening Telegram, and the Globe readers never have been realized.

The national forestry policy commission of the United States Chamber of Commerce will shortly mail a special edition to its 1400 constituent chambers to derive views as to a fixed national policy on reforestation. Out of this movement will develop, it is hoped, an international and a federal act, looking to replanting the nation's idle lands. This movement is being done by individuals and organizations. In every section of the country, the need for national system of rehabilitating timber lands is recognized.

The former appropriation of $2,000,000, which was annually set aside to purchase lands has not been restored. It was reduced to $400,000 when the war broke out. Appeals have been made to the General Assembly of New York for the restoration of this amount. No such appropriation was made in any other state during the war. The result is that the state has lost not only the money but also the timber that might have been salvaged and used for the needs of the state.

The loss of this mighty natural resource presents a grave situation to the publishers of New York City. The work of replanting idle timber lands seems desirable enough to engender enthusiasm and the united support of the newspaper world.

MAINTAINING THE PRES- TIGE OF THE NEWSPAPER.

For some reason schools of journalism valedictorians touch the same key or regret, to the effect that the quondam prowess of the newspaper has disappeared. The newspapers are now more serious in their approach to the public, and less inclined to print in full in a serious way in its columns, all the mumblings against a newspaper and its edition by demagogues and disappointed politicians.

Frank T. Carroll, wide-awake advertising managers of the Indianapolis News, in another column of The Fourth Estate, to-day comments upon the pernicious and destructive tendency of paying little heed to the newspaper as the prime advertising medium. He says: "This movement is only a part of a general public attention to other media which, in fact, feed on the newspapers as they are accorded in the newspapers.

Neither Mr. Swope nor Mr. Carroll seems to understand the things they complain about, but both would conserve the old time press, the newspaper, and defend their own agressions in news and in advertising departments.

As elucidating Mr. Swope's contention, The Fourth Estate is moved to conjecture how long a good past would last in the esteem and affection of his flock were he to get day after day and read from his pulpit without comment a letter denouncing himself as a falsifier, a paid agitator, and an enemy of his readers. It must not be surprised if their readers are dazed; for it is not the publisher who is enthusiastic that only the truth is permitted in its columns.

The same logic would appear to be maintained as to advertising. When newspapers, after all, are the purchasers of the world's products, see direct mail schemes, bill board advertising, and even 'sky writing' referred to continuously in newspapers as ideal and effective advertising, many advertisers must be surprised if their readers are dazed; for it is not the publisher who is enthusiastic who is the sells all our objects to every one of.

There is a wealth of serious though somewhat depressing, news. Who, Carroll's observations that the newspapers themselves are much to blame for allowing a generation into the world, and even the "sky writing" referred to continually in newspapers as ideal and effective advertising, many advertisers must be surprised if their readers are dazed; for it is not the publisher who is enthusiastic who is the sells all our objects to every one of.

The Fourth Estate will follow Mr. Carroll's regime as president of the N.A.N.E. with interest, for there seems reason to hope that newspapers may have to work a sharp reformation in the careless practice of recent years of throwing away valuable productive space on every Tom, Dick and Harry who wants to break in print at the expense of the newspaper or its readers.

IF YOU WOKE AND FOUND NO TRAINS RUNNING.

The curtailment of mail service by the post office department because of a shortage of cash, is an incident in the interesting conjecture as to the government's attitude in a similar situation. The action of the government operated the railroads. They are still minded by national and international emotions and worries of finance, and it is the ambitious people who demand mail service, have been asked to remain satisfied with the postal service, as it is at present.

HOUSTON STARTS WORK FOR 1925 CONVENTION

PLANS TO SEND 100 DELEGATES TO LONDON AND HOPES TO REALIZE A GATHERING THREE OR FOUR TIMES AS LARGE AS THE BRITISH MEETING.

Texas is taking nothing for granted for 1925. Led by Marcellus Foster of the Houston Ad Club, an enthusiastic campaign has been begun by Houston advertisers to make the 1925 Ad Clubs convention to Texas.

The Houston delegates to the Atlantic City conventions will go to London to secure the next meeting for Houston and surrendered gracefully and most diplomatically was done. It is believed that the new meetings will be held in Houston.

Houston was made famous at the great gathering. London and Houston have been linked together, and friendships have been made.

One of the last benefits says the Houston Chronicle.

Houston will send at least 100 delegates to the next annual meeting in London, and see that there is no question of the Houston Ad Club's future.

WASHINGTON AD CLUB GIVES LOVING CUP TO RUBEL.

A loving cup was presented to Lawrence E. Rubel, retiring president of the Washington Advertising Club, by the members of the organization as a testimonial of appreciation of his services during the last year.

At an annual luncheon of the club last week a presentation was made by William H. Wagner, the new president.

The presentation, George H. Snowden, vice-president, reported on the recent entertainment of British advertising men by the club. A resolution offered by Mr. Snowden, thanking Washington newspapers for their cooperation during the visit of the Englishmen, was adopted by the club.

ALVIN NAST PROMOTION.

PACIFIC COAST MEN FORM DUELLESS PRESS CLUB.

Newspaper men recently organized a club in Watsonville, Cal., which has no constitution or by-laws and collects no dues. Its membership, which already consists of practically every editor and staff writer in the counties of Santa Cruz, San Benito, Monterey and Santa Clara, meets monthly at one of the town for a get-together dinner and talks on the “Dutch treat” plan.

It is called the “Fill-the-Hole” club, the name being an adaptation of a phrase familiar to all news rooms referring to the process of filling the empty columns with news and other matters of interest to the members.

Rudolph A. Wilson, news editor of the Watsonville Register, is president. J. C. Kellett Head, and James H. Townes, of Gilroy and Salinas, respectively, vice-presidents, and Rollin H. Townes of Monterey, secretary-treasurer.

The body was taken to Cleveland for burial.
FAMOUS HARDING CODE A GUIDE TO REPORTERS.

SO CONDUCT THE MARION STAR, ENJOINED THE PRESIDENT, THAT IT MAY GO IN TO ANY HOME WITHOUT DESTROYING INNOCENCE OF ANY CHILD.

In the White House statement announcing the passing of the Marion Star from President Harding's control, reference was made to a continuation of the Harding ideals which were built up through nearly forty years of his regime. The President's instructions to the editorial staff of the Marion Star set forth the basis on which he desires to have the paper conducted, as follows:

Remember there are two sides to every question. Get both.

Be truthful.

Get the facts. Mistakes are inevitable, but strive for accuracy. I would rather have accurately written facts, no matter how right or wrong than a half dozen wrong.

Be decent. Be fair. Be generous. Be honest. There is no substitute for good in everybody. Bring out the good in everybody, and never needlessly hurt the feelings of anyone.

PROMINENT NEWSPAPER REPRESENTATIVES OPEN COAST OFFICE.

The seven trustees chosen were: R. E. Morgan, A. J. Izzard, R. E. Bigelow, C. A. Griffith, J. Wright, C. E. Fisher and R. P. Milne.

RECORD TOLL OF NEWS SENT ON LEVIATHAN.

(Continued from Fourth Page) stoppage. In the first three months the radio schedules had been reversed and the Leviathan dominate the shore radio traffic at the expense of the dispatch of the tremendous amount of news which reached shore from the ship.

On the day on which the record stopped, 194 students were mailed all of the scribes "beat it" to the wireless to send off the flash. The New World made that day.

The four press association representatives pulled in right behind, but the World man would not yield. Later it was agreed that a consolidated message, not to exceed twenty words, on unusual or sensational happenings, should go to all press associations, the World published.

A goodly number of newspapermen were included in the 456 guests who made up the compliment of the press passengers on the Leviathan's trial trip. It was through their activities that the press received such nation-wide publicity. Even the criticisms were said to have added appreciable to the free advertising accomplished through the daily Supplements and special reports.

On Friday night the newspapermen, under the leadership of the New York Times, held a dinner at the Commodore Hotel for the press passengers. After the opening address by Chairman Lasker, the host of the outing, and W. R. Vanderbilt, chairman of the board of the vessel, Edward Price Bell of the Chicago Daily News presided.

LASKER BELIEVES IN LEVIATHAN.

The affair was held in the Ritz hotel. In the adjoining Social Hall, large and spacious, adjourned to the social hall where Mr. Bell announced the entire ship's program for the evening. Mr. Lasker followed with an address that Americans should support the vessel. Mr. Lasker's keynote on the meeting was that a state of affairs which men view as marauding a marine is a national necessity, he stated. He believed that the government of the United States, as a whole, should provide a marauding a marine is a national necessity, he stated. He believed that the government of the United States, as a whole, should provide a marauding national defense, and that a large tonnage of vessels should be chartered by the United States.

One of the most interesting events of the evening was when the New York Times announced a "show" of the ship's facilities. The Times announced that the ship was chartered by the United States.

ADVERTISES SHRINE.

The Canada Steamship Lines used its recent newspaper advertisement to describe Ste. Anne de Beaupre, which the copy described as "one of the most picturesque shrines in the world." The advertisement ran to the top of the page, and was printed in conjunction with a description of the trip.

KEEPS THIRTY-YEAR PROMISE TO EDITOR-FATHER TO VISIT BIRTHPLACE ABROAD.

Thirty years ago Charles E. Gehring, then entering upon his career in New York, promised his father, Conrad Gehring, some day to return with him to Zurich, Switzerland, the place of his birth which the elder Gehring left in 1868 to come to America.

On Wednesday, when the S. S. Parf-efile, sailed from New York, the promise was fulfilled. The Gehrings, father and son, are on the way home.

Charles E. Gehring is one of the best known figures in the advertising field. He is publisher of the National Hotel Review, Hotel Operation and the Gehring Hotel Directory. His father is a veteran country newspaper editor of Kuttstown, Pa. M. Gehring, who has just as much to his credit, is a native of Martin, Q. Good, for thirty years employed by the New York Times. It was Mr. Good who helped Charles E. Gehring in his first job in New York.

POINCARE TO SEEK AID FOR NEWS AGENCIES.

DISSATISFIED WITH FRENCH SERVICE FROM ABROAD, PREMIER WILL ASK LARGER SUBSIDIES—SAULIUS—MATIN EDITOR HITS AT GERMAN PROPAGANDA.

The insufficiency and unreliability of French news reports from abroad, especially from across the Atlantic, has led Premier Poincare to decide to ask Parliament for larger subsidies for the French news agencies, which have been less supported by the government.

While American newspapers and agencies cover the complete manner, the French press makes a better effort with regard to North and South America, and depends very largely upon its agencies even for news from Germany.

The fault of this system, in the opinion of Edouard L. James, chief of the New York Times bureau in Paris, lies in the fact that the French agencies take their news in large part from other countries bureaus on the European side of the Atlantic. Much of the news, James believes, coming to Paris through French agencies is supplied to them from London by British agencies.

SERVED BY GERMAN AGENCY.

An almost humorous aspect of the situation is that recently much of the news from Paris has been supplied indirectly by the semi-official German Wolff news agency.

Although some of the Paris newspapers are immensely wealthy they do not deem it a good investment to pay transatlantic cable tolls. It is frequently supplied by the editors that this is because of the rate of exchange.

However, American papers have been obliged in the past two years to pay their tolls to and from France and America on a gold basis, so that American news would cost the Paris papers the same amount per word as French news costs the New York papers.

MATIN EDITOR PROTESTS.

This situation, in which German propaganda has been able from time to time to play jokes on the Paris editors was aired in the Senate Tuesday when the chief of the department de Jouvenel is editor-in-chief of the Matin. As he expressed it: "At the present time German propaganda reacts on the press of all countries. Our Havre Agency has been obliged to suppress its services completely, notably in South America. During this time Germany has also interfered with the fact that its exchange is inferior to ours, has spread news that of course is everywhere."

"A German agency, hidden under the British name of United Telegraph, has almost completely taken over what German wishes them to know." It is admitted that the French press should do its own news was that the government should deal directly with the agencies. This attitude by the directing figure of one of France's richest newspapers illustrates the interfering difference between French journalism and that of the United States, where news agencies are scrupulously independent of government support, which means government influence.

AMERICAN CORRESPONDENTS IN LONDON ELECT OFFICERS.

HAYNES TO ISSUE BOOK ON DRY ACTIVITY.

SYNDICATE OFFERS SERIAL RIGHTS TO NEWSPAPERS BUT RECEIVES NO READY RESPONSE—PRESS HOLDS IT SHOULD GET OFFICIAL INFORMATION FREE.

Considerable mystery enfolds the contemplated issue of a book dealing with the experiences of Prohibition Commissioner Haynes. Major Haynes admitted that he was writing the book dealing with the problems of prohibition enforcement, but said that it was not yet completed, and that, consequently, he had nothing to say on the subject for publication in the press.

On the further report that the offer was made for the sale of the book to the volunter in a select number of newspapers, the "dry chief" asserted that he "knew nothing" about that phase of the matter, adding that progress had not been made to the point of admitting of complete plans being made.

According to the printed version, this proposal would give a wide range of personal and official experience in his book, going back to the earlier fights in which he participated, long before the name of Volstead became nationally known. The story further alleges that offers have been made to a limited number of newspapers to furnish the contents in advance of book publication, to be published by the papers in serial form, for a flat rate of $1,500. This offer was said to have been made by a syndicate.

Responses to these offers are said not to have been flattering. Some of the papers, it is understood, are disposed of knowing more as to the nature of the "revelations" which will make the book a best seller. By over $5,000, they are said to have raised the interesting question as to why office papers were not allowed to be sold. If future sales are to be given away, this would be in charge to the general press, instead of at the price of publication.

High treasuty officials, under whom Major Haynes holds subordinate position, have withheld comment on the reported literary venture of the Prohibition Commissioner, on the ground that the matter has not come before them in an official manner.

GLASGOW, FAMED AS GREAT EST SHIP CENTRE, HAS FINEST CAR LINE IN WORLD.

"Some of the most wonderful scenery in the world to be found off the coast of Scotland in and on the way to the lone island of St. Kilda, and maintained by waters so rough that no ship can pass through," says Mr. Frederick Shoemar, managing director of Fairy Dyes, Ltd., who was a deputy of the A.C.O.W. committee.

The inhabitants of this spot are so few, and its situation so remote, that generation of inter-marriage have led to the degeneration. They are strange folk.

Mr. Shoemar makes the excursion to this system, that Chicago some time ago sent over to Glasgow for the manager of the Glasgow line and paid his expenses to America that they might confer with him and have him explain the workings of the Scotch system.

"Glasgow is one of the hardest places in the world to set up a successful business. Anyone who can succeed there can succeed anywhere," says Mr. Shoemar. "But he ought to know for it was here that he established his business on a firm foot and in great difficulties for all English business. There was one chance of selling articles whenever the importation of German dyestuffs being stopped.

Mr. Shoemar is the president of the Glasgow chamber of commerce, the City Business Club of Glasgow and a member of the Thirty Club of London.

"As a member of the British Advertising club," Mr. Shoemar began to express what this trip to America has meant for him. "I say Mr. Shoemar, my only regret is that the whole United Kingdom has not had the same experience."

Newspaper mergers are sound economy. A publisher who fights against the currents of to-day will lose all—he can be saved by applying the plain lessons of big business to-day.

Are there too many newspapers in your city?
Is your paper losing in the fight?
Can you win by merging with another and both make more money?

We have been able to put newspapers on the right track and we can help you with-your word of it getting into anybody's ears. We work quietly, quickly and surely. The day is past for the old time sentimental love of printing a newspaper. The lessons of the last few weeks in the numerous big mergers tell you why mergers are essential to save what you have and gain by combination.

You may just suggest a city and hold your confidences, if you choose. Upon your advice, we will have two newspaper executives, who know the game, in your city and at work. You will be communicated with only by your request.

168,000,000 READ AD CARDS ON ONE BRITISH RAILROAD IN YEAR.

Thomas McDougall, governing director of Thomas McDougall, Ltd., one of the popular members of the Thirty Club, holds the sole contract for carriage advertising spaces on the three great sections of the London and North Eastern Railway.

"The London and North Eastern Railway which we represent," said Mr. McDougall, who attended the A.A.C.W. convention, "serves the great ports and principal distributing districts of England. Of course the produce of primary importance in the commercial and domestic life of the country is coal. The great coal fields of Lancashire, Fife and the Lothian, Northumberland and Durham, West Yorkshire and South Yorkshire, Lancashire, Nottingham, and Northumberland are all within the company's territory, many of the principal coalfields being exclusively served by the London and North Eastern Railway.

"The great iron and steel industries of Great Britain, which are situated mostly in Lincolnshire, South Yorkshire, the Midlands, North Wales and the eastern and western part of Scotland, are also within the company's territory. More than half of the pig iron made in the United Kingdom is transported over the London and North Eastern Railroad."

"Then, too, this great line runs through much agricultural territory, and the company has special facilities for conveying a great amount of the agricultural produce used in Irish towns and in London. In order to foster interest in poultry farming, it runs and operates at Bentley and Suffolk a demonstration farm which is managed by experts and which is the scene of national competitions.

"I understand that your government has done a great deal of educational work through the county districts by means of demonstration farms. Our roads have run many demonstration trains, which have been potent in stimulating interest in the development of agricultural districts. The four London termini of my company—King's Cross, Liverpool Street, Fenchurch Street, and Marylebone—serve the largest residential population in the world. Each of them is connected with the underground electric railways of London."

DEBATE ON LITERATURE IN JOURNALISM.

The New York Times: Recently we made a special offer in the four largest New York morning newspapers, involving the clipping of the advertisements and bringing it into our stores. The New York Times showed up best on a basis of gross returns as well as returns per returns on the Times were 117 per cent ahead of its nearest competitor and more than three times as much as those from one of the newspapers.

If properly regulated, and put on a fair earning basis, the newspapers would be able to reach localities heretofore difficult of access, excepting through rural mail service, which is limited to one delivery a day and at extremely high rates.

Aerospace plane has not yet reached the stage where it can be of great commercial value, but the day is probably not far off when we will be shooting our circulation through the air and we will be reading of John Jones having been killed while plowing by being struck by a bundle of Indianapolis News thrown from the Hoosier Limited Air Flyer.

AGENCY HEAD SAILS FOR TOUR OF EUROPE.

Mr. and Mrs. Barron Collier sailed on the Olympic to-day for England. They will tour Europe and in some time in the castle which Mr. Collier recently purchased at Baden-Baden, Mr. Collier is head of Barron G. Collier, advertising agency, New York.

Paul C. Hunter has resigned as president of Educational Advertising Company, New York. George D. Bryson has been elected president and treasurer and William B. Schrauff, secretary. Mrs. Eleanor Hunter is vice-president of the company.

Louis Victor Eyringe, founding and well known advertising writer, has joined the staffs of the Tribune but retired September 1, 1921, to resume his legal practice. At that time Frederick E. Murphy, who had been more or less disconnected from the Tribune because of personal business, returned to the staff asassociate publisher, a position he held previously for a period of two years.

Following Mr. Murphy's becoming the Tribune head, Mr. Barbour had been advertising manager succeeding Gerald P. McAuliffe, who retired to his home in Lake Wales, Florida. Mr. Barbour returned to the Tribune from the New York Globe where he was advertising manager for four years.

In a special telegram to The Fourth Estate, R. B. Pixley of the Tribune said:

"No changes will be made in the editorial or business staffs of the Tribune. The Tribune will be delivered to all subscribers and the carriers of the News and the carriers of the News will be added to the Tribune carriers staff."

Kenneth Duncan, managing editor, and Jack E. Dadsell, city editor, are to join the staffs of other newspapers. Leo Moore, city editor, is left without places. Others on the staff for whom no arrangements are made are M. H. Hedges, Lloyd Evans, Richard Gilbian, R. Hoskins, James R. McCamy, Milton Lundy, M. Fredericks, Ronald McIntyre and Earle R. Boulter.

Thomas Moodie, city hall reporter, will go to California. Val Sherman, political writer, to Denver and 11 Wagner, police reporter, will join the Tribune staff.

CRAWFORD LAUDS VIGOR OF OUR ADVERTISING.

of the club applauded vigorously the keynote of the occasion, which was the influence of the advertising men of the two nations in uniting the bonds of world wise peace.

At the close of the affair Mr. Crawford presented to the New York Advertising Club a beautiful silk Union Jack, which, he stated, was in fulfillment of a duty imposed upon him by John Cheshire, leader of the Thirty Club.

Mr. Crawford opened his remarks with an earnest personal tribute to the work done by Sir Charles Higham, whom he characterized as the third best speaker in all the British Isles.

"You seek peace and you always talk war," he continued. "We seek peace and we don't how to get it. There is no rot in the American fibre and we feel the coining of our great advertising executives, the pouring of the rich, red blood of American enterprise to stimulate and refresh us back to you again with many interests to work out in common. We will take it to Houston, Texas, in 1925 a much larger delegation than which came to you this year."

What has most impressed me is the proficiency and the wonderfully efficient way you present goods to be sold. Maybe the theory and psychology of advertising is better understood abroad than our methods here. What progress we will make when you sight Britain's shores in 1924."

Mr. Crawford warmly commended the energy, courage and foresight of William H. Rankin and the unifying efforts of Mr. Wilson and Mr. Rankin as factors in bringing the advertising men of the two nations into closer touch. He understood what it is to be the Prince of Wales and he could not refrain from expressing sorrow for the Prince, in referring to the numerous receptions in honor of the British and the mutual tributes paid there.

The acceptance of the Union Jack was made by Harry Tipper, the first president of the Advertising Club of New York, who said that the club would honor and treasure the Bag as a symbol of the strong broad stream into which the two countries through the advertising men were now entering.

and other subjects of interest to the publishers of weeklies and dailies alike.

Entertainment features will include a dinner on Thursday evening, tendered by the Newport News Rotary Club; a luncheon Friday at 1 o'clock at the shipyards of the Newport News Dry Dock and Shipbuilding Company; a reception Friday from 9 to 11 o'clock, tendered by the ladies of the convention and the management of the Hotel Warwick.

Reports of committees and election special questions of interest to day night, and Saturday morning the party will go to Buckroe Beach to spend the day in seashore pleasures. Luncheon will be served in the Buckroe Beach Hotel at 1 o'clock Saturday.

There will be an exhibition of the latest model Mo. 14 linotype by the Megenthaler Linotype Company.

Editors who will attend the convention will make their reservations direct with the hotels, so that the local entertainment committee will know how many to prepare for. Because of the crowded condition of the hotels at the season at this season, it is necessary for reservations to be made early.

Mr. Crawford, president of the association, estimates that between 80 and 100 members will attend the convention next October and that his association's membership has been growing year by year.

One of the important features of the convention will be the discussion of two important bills, introduced at the 1924 session of the general assembly of Virginia, covering special questions of interest to the makers of the daily and weekly newspapers of the state.

PAYING AD LETTER HAS SIMPLICITY OF SPEECH.

(Continued from Twelfth Page) literature employ only the simplest words, preferable those of one syllable, having a point and hitting the mark. The public pay for words of double meaning or ambiguous expressions. Do not use phrases, sentences or expressions susceptible of double meaning. The last impression left on the minds of readers and columnists and critics and editors is the one made by the way words are used. The opinions were expressed in various phrases, but the consensus of their views was unanimous. They said:

"Your reporter is rotten!"

"ALL REPORTERS LOOK ALIKE?"

"Trouble is," Mr. Pollock explained, "that when one of you boys tries to see a play with a reporter in it he expects to see himself—and inevitably he is disappointed. I don't walk like that, or look like that. You say, and because you don't see yourself in the mirror, you write more or, more briefly, rotten."

It seemed to us that there might be something wrong with the reporter."

"What's more," said Mr. Pollock, "you might suppose that yours is the only profession which feels self-conscious and abnegated on this point, but no, we're the same as the vocation of the lawyer and the doctor."

"Why not compose a masterful letter with the power to produce results that endure unless your thoughts are forcibly fortified by sincerity and truthfulness."

COURTESY ATTRACTION.

"The letter writer is often the kind of person that makes the advertisement writer willing to make his job easier in every way. He must be a close student of men's nature, to be able to read men, their moods, their temperaments, their personal points, their likes and dislikes, to be able, at least in a measure, to read the character of a hand-written or written expression, are essentials to successful correspondence, be it either letter or writing."

"Avoid everything that might create offense, coarse or provoking. The writer should have a pleasing disposition and a heart that beats responsively. A crank never makes men like a letter writer. Neither does the man who takes life too seriously."

salesletter writers boast that they can express the gist of any story in a headline of five words, and then get away with it. It is possible to even eloquent in type, to arouse people to sufficient interest to read your message. Eloquence in type—gestures, inflections, gradation in point of view and emphasis and emphasis of words and stories employed.

"Even the money spent on letters and advertising literature, however, is wasted because the point of view and emphasis in type and emphasis of words and phrases employed.

"Unless letters and advertising literature are the truth, they do more harm than good."

The difference in letter writing and in writing advertising literature is the difference in men.

Just as some men are strong and big and interesting, and some are better, and so is some advertising literature. And just as some men stand for service and work and up, so are some letters, and so is some advertising literature. Just as some men stand for service and work and others do not, so are some letters, and so is some advertising literature. Letters and advertising literature pay those men who are truthful, sincere, interesting and effective.

So my suggestion is this—cultivate a kindly disposition and courteous demeanor. Now, in every sense of the word, and in every correspondence you write, and in every word you write, and in every letter you write, and in every advertising literature you write, and in every advertising literature you write, and in every advertising letter you write, the element that produces results.

THE NEWSPRINT USERS FACE TREE FAMINE.

So we have been blessed with the greatest and most valuable forest that any nation has had for its development and growth. It would be out of place to quote statistics as to the forests which originally covered whole states in a solid belt of timber. It should interest us vitally to know, however, that 7% per cent of the original stand of virgin timber has been cut, and this tremendous use has taken place almost entirely within the last hundred years. In the future, too, in which we are now taking place, we are using annually more than four times the timber produced by growth in this country.

DEMANDS WFRKABLE POLICY.

Mr. Kroeger, a New York newspaper man, has joined the copy staff of the Gardner-Buck Company, St. Louis.

JOINS GARDNER-BUCK CO.

The contact of our fathers with the forestsmade them sturdypioneers, independent in both thought and action. In fact these forests developed a people ready to fight for independence from the old continent, a people of such physical and mental worth that it was easy as we entered the forest, to build an American home from their sons and grandsons the like of which has never been seen. As we worked westward as a nation we found tremendous forests of virgin timber in the South, and sawmills have been busy there for years. Today we can see clearly that within a decade or two, if the present rate of cutting is maintained, a stand of virgin Southern pine forest will be a rarity. Then came the movement to the Pacific Coast, and the marvelous forests which represent a reservoir of wood for the industries and for construction purposes for this country, if not for the entire world.

Edgecombe, of the Nebraska Signal, Geneva. Members of the Executive Committee are: Joseph G. Alger, writer, and Major Frank Case, engineer. Among the others who attended the funeral were Herbert S. Houson, director of the World, and Henry J. Wright, editorial adviser of the World Herald, formerly editor of the Globe.

He wrote on many subjects, and brought a new insight and breadth of view which made his work frequent of more general value. He was recognized as one of the leading editorial writers in New York for his wide reading and his clear style.

Mr. Dawson was born on October 7, 1894, in Norfolk, Va., and received his business education in the Norfolk office of the Norfolk and Western Railway Company.

When Mr. Strauss came to New York in 1903 as publisher of the Globe he brought Mr. Dawson with him. Mr. Dawson was associate editor of the Globe for sixteen years. Then he left to become associate editor of the New York Tribune, where he remained until 1922.

Herbert Hoover secretary of commerce, then appointed him a member of the United States trade commission, which went to Germany and England to study business conditions. When the committee had made its report Hoover offered to Mr. Dawson, but as the paper was about to be sold he went to the New York Times.

Mr. Dawson was married in October, 1916, to Miss Nellie Stratton, daughter of John B. Perkins, one of the publishers of the Sioux City Journal. They had no children.
