Essentials of Successful Advertising

"Reader interest" is one thing
"Reader confidence" is another thing

The first may bring extensive circulation, but the second is essential to make that circulation effective from the advertiser's standpoint.

Its 401,698 yearly daily-average circulation—about 1,200,000 daily readers—94 per cent concentrated in Chicago and its suburbs, proves that The Chicago Daily News has "reader interest."

Its year-in and year-out leadership in advertising among Chicago daily newspapers proves that it has circulation effectiveness from the standpoint of advertisers—reader confidence translated into buying action.

In a word all the essentials of successful advertising that can exist in one medium, are found in MINNEAPOLIS NEWS AND READING NEWS-TIMES AND TELEGRAM ARE ADDED—NEW PURCHASES MAKE A TOTAL OF SEVEN IN FAST-GROWING STRING.

Important ownership changes in newspapers of two cities are about to take place through the purchase of the Minneapolis News and the Reading News-Times and Reading Telegram by John H. Perry and Richard Lloyd Jones. The new owners will take over the Minneapolis News February 1, and will assume control of the two Reading dailies a month later. These purchases increase the number of newspapers in the Perry-Jones string to seven.

Three newspapers were purchased from the Reading Printing Company, of which William E. Hall of New York is president. The News-Times and the Telegraph have been operated under lease since March, 1921, by Jack Epstein, editor and proprietor of the Reading Herald. Perry and Jones purchased the Minneapolis News from L. V. Ashbaugh, publisher and one of its founders in 1903, who wished to retire because of failing health.

The Reading, Pa., Tribune, a new seven-day morning newspaper, projected about a year ago, is scheduled to begin publication Sunday, January 21 or Sunday, January 28, according to John J. Garvin, president and general manager. The management states that it expects the first issue and manager in Philadelphia. In addition to Mr. Garvin, other officers associated in the enterprise are Herbert D. Brauff, formerly managing editor of the Reading Herald, as editor and general manager, and Charles A. Murphy of Philadelphia as director.

Mr. Garvin will serve as general manager of the organization, while Mr. Brauff will serve as managing editor.

Sydney I. Snow, for many years with the Associated Press in New York and Philadelphia, will become news editor, while the Sunday section has been placed under the direction of Fred H. Uthoff, of the Associated Press and Philadelphia Public Ledger.

STEENEYERSON'S ENDEAVOR TO BECLoud RATE ISSUE IS PROMPTLY OFFSET BY RE-RESPONSE OF CONG. KELLY— RATES TOO HIGH TO HOLD BUSINESS FOR UNCLE SAM.

A bitter attack on the proposal to force the war-time increases in postage on second-class matter was made in the house by Congressman Steenerson of Minnesota, chairman of the house post office and post roads committee, the course of debate on December 30.

Mr. Steenerson began by characterizing the movement as resulting from an "organized propaganda of the most sinister character," following up that the proposed reduction in postage on second-class mail would probably result in annual savings of more than $100,000,000 per year. A correction by Congressman Hardy of Colorado, that the reduction in second-class rate was the result of war-produced conditions, that the increase was part of the expense of the war, and that the letters complained of to the committee were nothing more than the letters of the United States Post Office Department, was accepted by Mr. Steenerson.

"The main argument proposed by the second-class people," continued Mr. Steenerson, "is true so far as the present condition is concerned. But the second-class rate was post-war, but the most of the rate was paid because of the war and the war itself.

"Now, the truth is that when the war-time rates were increased last year and the period of postage on second-class mail matter taken together, the Government of the United States had been carried by the Congress.

A loss of about $50,000,000 was experienced last year on all second-class class mail matter taken together, hence, mentioning the loss of business for the United States Post Office Department.

CLEVELAND FINANCIAL DAILY CHANGES NAME.

The name of the Cleveland Commercial, on January 1, ten months after its founding, was changed to the Cleveland Times and Commercial.

Originally established as a strictly business paper, the Commercial expanded its field and became a live daily newspaper, covering world events thoroughly, as well as offering attractive features to its readers. It has continued its policy of covering financial and business events fully.

In announcing the change in name, the publishers stated: "The change in name should not be taken to indicate a change in policy. The paper was founded to furnish its patrons with a complete daily record of current events in a 'clean, alert, reliable' manner. It will continue to serve its customers in all respects to its carefully chosen motto."

The Times and Commercial issues three editions daily, a "building" for street sales at 9:30 p.m., a state edition and a final. Arrangements are being made to add to the mechanical equipment, the paper's growth having made the present facilities inadequate. Powers and Stone represent the paper in the national advertising field.

Selling Mechanical Equipment in Philadelphia

The rush of the day's work may cut your salesman's interview at a plant to a few minutes, but—

Officials, purchasing agents, and the workers in Philadelphia's 16,000 industrial plants would pay more attention to the selling talks about your equipment if you reached them when they were unhurried—when the plant had closed for the night.

Nearly all executives and workers in Philadelphia take time to read The Bulletin every evening.

Tell these prospective users about your product, whether it be cranes or steam shovels, conveyor systems or lathes, shafting or valves, or other machines or devices, when they are free, at home, seeking information of value to them—

You will get an introduction that may lead to big installations—for many of Philadelphia's 16,000 plants are among the largest of their kind in the country.

Dominate Philadelphia
Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

The Bulletin

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is larger than that of any other daily or Sunday newspaper published in Pennsylvania, and is one of the largest in America.

Net paid daily average circulation for the year 1922—493,240 copies a day.

Eighteen years ago Irvin S. Cobb was managing editor of the News-Democrat, down in Paducah, Ky., and he revolved around the town getting news slants that never were before, or since; seven days ago he returned as managing editor of the News-Democrat, and the town revolved around him. In 1904 Cobb managed for $22 a week, but the other night he did the job for nothing, which is not unusual for any member of the craft the opulence that now is his.

Leadership of

In 1922 The New York Times published 24,142,222 agate lines of advertising, 2,489,609 lines more than in 1921 and an excess of 6,898,132 lines over the volume printed by the second New York newspaper.

The New York Times has for years led all other New York newspapers in volume of advertising. The Times believes that the function of a newspaper advertising department is to sell advertising space. What it offers to advertisers in quality and volume of circulation, buying power, confidence and responsiveness of readers and established results is of great value to an advertiser.

First on the List

Rarely does a newspaper advertising campaign covering the New York metropolitan district fail to include The New York Times as the first newspaper on the list. In national campaigns, where only one New York newspaper is used, The Times, with few exceptions is chosen.

Announcements of merchandise frequently appear only in The Times, at least in the eastern United States. Advertisements of companies specializing in the construction of large buildings, announcements of gas engines, machinery, hardware and other lines, heretofore advertised almost exclusively in trade periodicals, now appear with increasing frequency in The New York Times.

The development of new lines of business and the encouragement of heretofore undeveloped sources of advertising is considered well worth while by The Times. In this, as in many other enterprises on which The Times expends time and money, it is rendering a service to other newspapers.

Produces Unusual Results

The confidence which readers feel in the dependability of the news columns of The New York Times is reflected in the advertising columns and in the great purchasing power of its readers, producing results to advertisers which frequently are remarkable. Many profitable businesses have been built up, efficient selling organizations formed and merchandise of every description sold in large volume through The Times.

The New York Times is distributed in 8,000 cities, towns and villages throughout the United States. On week days the sale of The Times exceeds 350,000 and on Sundays it is purchased by more than 550,000 persons.

STRASSBURGER RETIRES AS HEAD OF MERGED PAPERS, APPOINTING J. W. MAGERS EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF HIS NEWSPAPER PROPERTIES—G. S. JONES REMAINS.

The Norristown, Pa., Times, which as noted in The Fourth Estate last week, was purchased by Ralph Beaver Strassburger, publisher and owner of the Norristown Herald, appeared for the last time on December 30. On New Year's Day the physical merger of the Herald and Times was accomplished.

At the same time Mr. Strassburger retired as president of the publishing company and has been succeeded by J. W. Magers, who becomes executive director of the newspaper property. Mr. Strassburger will devote his time to his other business interests.

Mr. Magers is one of the best known and most efficient newspaper executives in the country. He began his newspaper career in 1899 on the Baltimore World, one of the offshoots of the old Scripps League. In 1896 he joined Charles H. Grasty and in that association was connected with the Baltimore News from 1896 to 1905. From the latter year until 1909 he was engaged in the general and special agency business in New York, during which period, for approximately two years he was with S. W. Ayer & Son. At that time he sold the U.S. Government its first national advertising campaign, covering a drive for naval recruits.

From 1909 to 1910 Mr. Magers was with the Brocton Times and became business manager of the Baltimore Sun in 1910, continuing as such until 1913 when he bought the Sun job printing business from the A. S. Abell Company. Part of the time, during which he ran the printing business he served in an advisory capacity to the Baltimore Sun until the end of the Grasty regime.

Selling the Sun job printing plant on January 1, 1917, Mr. Magers went to Philadelphia as business manager of the Press, under the ownership of (Continued on Fifteenth Page)

ADVERTISING CLUBS TO MEET IN WASHINGTON NEXT TUESDAY-WEDNESDAY.

Large delegations of advertising men have already made known their intention of attending the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs, to be held in Washington on January 9 and 10.

P. X. Wholley, vice-president of the Associated Advertising Clubs for the District of Columbia, has received advance word of their prospective presence from clubs in Wheeling, Rainiport, Parkersburg and other West Virginia towns; Bristol, Tenn.; Norfolk, Richmond, Alexandria and other Virginia points; and from Baltimore and Maryland clubs.

Those in attendance will hold sessions simultaneously with the meeting of the National Advertising Commission, to convene at the Hotel Washington on the two dates named. Officers and delegates from the twenty-two national divisions of advertising will be present.

Members of the Washington Advertising Club will attend in a body.

Chairman McClure of the national advertising commission has asked Mr. Wholley to invite the members of the Washington club to a luncheon during the convention. Prominent American executives are on the program of the proceedings, and several national government executives will be present.

AD CLUB HAS CHILDREN’S ENTERTAINMENT.

Fun in Club Land was at its height at the Advertising Club of New York last Saturday afternoon at its headquarters in Twenty-fifth street. John H. Eggers, chairman of the committee of fifteen, established a standard of holiday sport for the children of the club members.

Members of the League of Advertising Women, and the Junior Advertising Club assisted in entertaining the youngsters. The children were presented with gifts and favors and refreshments were served.

NEW DAILY IN CAROLINA ADDED TO BEASLEY STRING.

The Wilson, N. C. Mirror, a new morning paper, has made its appearance under the direction of R. F. Beasley, former North Carolina commissioner of public welfare, as editor; A. L. Wilkinson, formerly editor of the Raleigh Times, as advertising manager. This is the third North Carolina paper added to the Beasley string, the others being the Goldsboro News and the Moore County Journal.

WALTER INSTALLS HIS FORMER EDITOR AS CHIEF OF LONDON TIMES.

Geoffrey Dawson, who for several years was editor of the London Times before it was acquired by the late Viscount Northcliffe, has again become editor, from Henry Wickham Steed. Mr. Dawson first became editor of the Times in 1912 and continues to this day. Before that he was editor of the Johannesburg Star.

Mr. Dawson formerly held that post for several years. After the Northcliffe accession, Mr. Dawson was continued for a time as editor, but clashes between him and the new owner over matters of policy were more than constant, and in 1917 Mr. Dawson resigned.

When, following the death of Lord Northcliffe, control of the Times was repurchased by John Walter last October, backed by the money of Major John Jacob Astor, rumors that Wickham Steed would be succeeded by Geoffrey Dawson immediately became current rather than true.

Mr. Dawson has long been known favorably in London journalism. He first acquired note as an editorial writer for the Chicago Tribune, but changed his name to Dawson on succeeding to a landed estate in Yorkshire.

PRESIDENT HOWARD TO RETIRE AFTER EIGHT YEARS AS HEAD OF PRESS CLUB.

Edward Percy Howard, who has been president of the New York Press Club since 1914, will retire after the election this year. Pressure of business has caused Mr. Howard to withdraw as a candidate for the presidency. The organization has met with much success during the last eight years. John T. Flynn, managing editor of the New York Globe, has been nominated for the position.

There is only one ticket in the field, the two nominees being:

Elia Leidy, first vice-president; S. Jay Kaufman, second vice-president; Channing A. Leidy, treasurer; Walter C. Emery, secretary; Charles A. Lewis, recording secretary; Caleb H. Redfern, corresponding secretary.

The entertainment committee under the chairmanship of George F. Dobson has arranged for a program to be presented by well-known theatrical performers at the club Monday.

FARM BLOC WILL SUPPORT LOWER POSTAL RATE.

ACTION OF AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION IN ENDORSING PUBLISHERS’ FIGHT INDICATES ATTITUDE—FARMERS GAIN STRENGTH IN NEXT CONGRESS.

Interest of the American Farm Bureau Federation in having the newspapers relieved from excessive burdens imposed by the present high postal rates on second-class matter, was manifested in a resolution passed by the Chicago branch of the organization on December 14 last.

The resolution as follows:

“Resolved. That we appreciate the educational value of the dissemination of information by the press of the country and pledge our support toward the movement to relieve publishers of the handicap of excessive postage on second-class matter.”

The adoption of the resolution practically assures the publishers that they will have the backing of the “Farm Bloc” in congress, which will be even more potent in the next session than now, owing to the fact that the “bloq” will practically hold the balance of power when the new congress convenes.

OTHER PARTNERS BUY F. C. GRANDIN INTEREST.

Frank C. Grandin, who has been president of the Grandin-Dorrance-Sullivan agency, New York, Chicago and South Bend, Ind., has sold his interest to the other members of the firm, and has retired from the business. The firm name will remain the same for the time being. Sturges Dorrance is now president and treasurer of the agency, and George Sullivan is advertising director of the Postum Cereal Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

SCANDINAVIAN CORRESPONDENT

Thoroughly trained newspaper man, with eleven years’ experience on American dailies and periodicals, finds it necessary to take up his residence in Stockholm, in his native Sweden, and is desirous of connecting up with some American news organization which stands in need of competent reportorial representation in Scandinavia.

He is well educated, well read and widely traveled throughout North America and northern and western Europe. Speaks perfect English and Swedish (which in effect means also Dano-Norwegian), fair French and German, and some Russian.

Is thoroughly conversant with contemporary events in Scandinavia and Finland, and has deep knowledge of the peoples, their histories, customs, ideals and aspirations. However, his Americanism precludes “colored” reporting.

“DAY BY DAY” MENTAL HEALER HERE; WRITING SERIES FOR NEW YORK WORLD.

Emile Coue of Nancy, France, exponent of auto-suggestion, who has a contract with the New York World for a series of articles, arrived in New York Thursday aboard the Majestic. There was a large gathering of newspaper men and photographers at the pier waiting to interview him. A small delegation that went aboard the ship at Quarantine was granted a short interview.

A new series of articles by Coue commenced in the New York World Friday morning. The series is written in connection with his visit in America.

TARRYTOWN NEWS BUYS NEW PRESS.

The Tarrytown, N. Y., Daily News, Wallace Odell, publisher, has purchased a Hoe press, capable of printing 20,000 four, six or eight pages an hour or 10,000 ten, twelve and sixteen pages an hour, to take care of its rapidly growing business. For some time the Daily News has been cramped for want of larger press facilities. It will be the middle of February or the first of March before the press is installed and running. It will permit of expansion and it is the intention of Mr. Odell to add new features and make the Daily News “day by day a better paper every day.” The George B. David Company represents the paper.

Mr. Odell is a former president of the New York Press Association, one of the oldest associations of its kind in the United States.

FUEL CHIEF SUES ALBANY DAILIES FOR LIBEL.

HILLS ASKS $90,000, RESULT OF CRITICISMS PUBLISHED BY KNICKERBOCKER PRESS AND THE EVENING NEWS—SUIT NOT TAKEN SERIOUSLY BY DEFENDANTS.

Guy D. Hills, fuel administrator for Albany county, has begun an action to recover $90,000 damages from the Albany Knickerbocker Press and Albany Evening News, for an alleged libel.

The complaint alleges seven causes of action for publications of stories in both papers relating to the control of the coal distribution in Albany during the past few weeks, when there was an alarming shortage of coal for consumers.

The first cause of action for an alleged libel, published in the News November 10, charged the fuel administrator with aiding the larger coal dealers to establish a monopoly as against the small retailers. The second, published in the News November 28, stated that the United Traction Company had an excess supply of coal that was being distributed to its employees. The third, published in the News December 1, stated that the coal situation would be presented to the grand jury.

The fourth, published in the Knickerbocker Press December 2, refers to statements of coal dealers investigating the fuel administrator. The fifth, published in the News November 17, is alleged to accuse the administrator of failing to conserve the supply of coal for Albany homes. The sixth, published in the Knickerbocker Press, December 21, contained statements of salesgirls in the stores and pupils in the schools that they were wearing heavy clothing because “Hills failed to get coal.”

The seventh cause of action was based on a two-page advertisement in the Knickerbocker Press December 24, displaying the headlines clipped from previous stories appearing in both publications.

The complaint does not allege any special damage or indicate in what manner any financial loss has been sustained by Mr. Hills, who retained his position. The officers of the Press company do not take the institution of the action seriously and the defense to the action will be that it was performing a public service and that the criticism of a public official was fair and justified by the facts of the situation.

The grand jury made a thorough investigation of alleged violations of the laws by coal dealers and found no indictments.

WORLD PRINTS FINANCIAL SUPPLEMENT FOR 1922.

The New York World last Sunday published a six-page supplement, in which S. S. Fontaine discussed the financial situation in general and B. L. Read that affecting the bond markets. John J. Leary, Jr., discussed the labor outlook.

Two pages were devoted to tables giving price ranges of the stocks and bonds listed on the New York Stock Exchange. In addition there was a chronology of the outstanding events of the year and a list of the outstanding persons who died during the twelvemonth.

NEW YORK TIMES URGES ACTION ON POSTAGE.

BUSINESS MANAGER WILEY'S LETTER TO COMMITTEE SHOWS IN FIGURES THE INJUSTICE OF PRESENT RATES—COST $22,000,000 MORE THAN IN 1918.

Following the recent shelving of the Kelly Bill in the House committee on post offices and post roads, which means tremendously expensive delay in the readjustment of publishers' postage costs, the New York Times has given evidence to the committee of a determination to press for further consideration of the bill with the least possible delay. Speaking not only for itself, but also for the members of the American Publishers Conference, the Times figures in figures how the Government is handicapping the publishing industry by delaying reduction of second-class postage rates.

In the year just closed American publications paid $22,000,000 more for postage than they did in 1918, in spite of the fact that the Postal Department has diverted an immense proportion of the increase in circulation to express shipments in bulk. Of the increase the New York Times alone pays $466,028.

Louis Wiley, business manager, has stated the Times' attitude to Congressmen Archie D. Saunders, member of the house committee, as follows:

Referring to the recent shelving of the Kelly Bill (H.R. 11965) now before your committee: The publishers of America pay this year $22,000,000 more for postage than in 1918, on magazines and newspapers transported by the Postal Department. This burden of expense, imposed as a war measure, is laid on publishing interests alone. While paying this excessive tax for the distribution of their product they are also subject to all other taxes levied on American industries, while there has been no indication of decrease in the high costs of labor, newspaper print and other essentials.

As an instance of the enormous increase expected in the future, if no change is made in the Postal Act, we refer you to the postal rate statement of the New York Times of November 1, 1918, in the year ended June 30, 1918, to December, 1918, for which purpose the rate was $0.01 per pound on all zones. But from July 1, 1919, to December, 1918, the rate was $0.014 per pound on news and reading matter, as follows:

Whereas the Federal Government collected postage fees on publishers less than five million dollars in 1918, it is estimated that this year the Postal Department will pay to the Government for carrying these publishers not less than thirty-three millions.

The exorbitant postal charges have been increased (Continued on Twenty-seventh Page).

INDIANAPOLIS NEWS RADIUS BOOK A NOTABLE PIECE OF PROMOTION WORK.

Something different in publication promotion literature has been worked out by the advertising department of the Indianapolis News in the form of a Radius Book, which is being issued to the agencies and advertisers this month.

The first half of the elegantly case-bound eight-page volume contains an illuminating study of the Indianapolis radius as a selling market. There is a notable absence of the usual flabby statements. The facts and figures shown about the market are given in a most readable yet convincing manner.

The book itself is evidence of the truth of the statement made in the chapter devoted to the merchandising work of the News. The publishers of the merchandising department a veritably a gold mine of information about the Indianapolis radius.

Another high spot in the book is the statement by Mr. Carroll, advertising manager, in which he says 'The advertising department of the Indianapolis News is proud to acknowledge that the paper is very frankly conducted from upstairs.' After enumerating the statistics of the News, Mr. Carroll says in conclusion: "The advertiser who makes no boast that these standards are part of the daily routine of the paper. An advertising campaign, it is claimed, would be conducted otherwise on the Indianapolis News. The commercial success of the News should be an inspiration to the smaller publication which does not go to the dark, fearful of maintaining definite standards, with a mistaken idea that the need of financing with what little capital it can afford cannot afford to indulge in advertising or editorial ethics."

Although the edition of the Indianapolis News Radius Book is limited, copies are available to agencies and advertisers who may not have received their copies by this time, according to Mr. Carroll.

CHAMPAIGN HERALD OUT.

After several unavoidable delays, the Champaign, Ill., Evening Herald made its initial bow on January 1. The paper was scheduled to make its appearance on November 1, but because of failure to receive mechanical equipment in time, the date of publication was postponed.

Payne, Burns & Smith represent the paper in the East, and G. Logan Payne Company in the West.

Charles H. Anderson, formerly associated with the Chicago American, is directing the publication, which is being financed by the Champaign Evening Herald Company supported by stockholders among the citizens of the twin cities of Champaign and Urbana, and outside capital. The plant is located at 15 North Taylor street.

After a careful and studied survey of the exhibitors' needs, from an exploitation accessory to a meritorious box office attraction, Henry M. Warner, of Warner Brothers, motion picture producers, New York, is firm in the conviction that the present method of trade paper advertising does not aid the exhibitor in laying the foundation for a successful campaign—REAL FACTS ESSENTIAL.

"SELL IT BY ADVERTISING"

Printing plates which are cast in Hand Boxes are notoriously bad printers, and are wasters of newsprint—not all of them, but most of them.

The always variable human equation is nowhere more accurately reproduced than in plates made by hand.

A machine is without human temperament; it is never impatient, and never weary. It is never overloaded or worn out. It is never slow, and it never takes the pains to ascertain just what exhibitors need to derive the maximum box office results with their attractions.

Printing plates which are cast in Hand Boxes are notoriously bad printers, and are wasters of newsprint—not all of them, but most of them.

"Truth in advertising has been advertised for many years by a great many people in the industry," said Mr. Warner, "but few of them seem to know what the word 'truth' means. In almost every issue of the trade journals there are scores of advertisements that with very few exceptions spoil the same line of glowing phraseology. The multitude of exhibitors this means nothing. It merely proves that those who sanction such advertisements have not taken the pains to ascertain just what exhibitors need to
THE BIG SCHEME OF SIMPLE OPERATION

THE LINOTYPE MOLD
A Type Foundry That Equips the Printer for Every Job

The LINOTYPE will produce everything that a printer needs just when he needs it; type-matter from 5 to 36 point, already composed and justified; border decorations in infinite variety; space and base material cast to his order.

Linotype Typography matrices and matrix slides give the printer every typographical resource he will ever need. And the water-cooled mold disk permits him to cast up unlimited quantities of material without danger of overheating.

Other exclusive Linotype features are the quick changeability of liners, without removing the mold cap, and the three-point support for the mold which prevents warping.

The Japanese made strenuous efforts to increase the duty on pulp from 0.2 sen to 1 sen, or to 0.5 sen, but failed. As an alternative they turned to the manufacturers of the Kyodo Pulp Kaisa to avoid competition at home and to meet competition from abroad. The means adopted curtailed the estimated annual production capacity of 120,000 tons to 100,000 tons by the closing of the Yalu Mill. The Oji Paper Mills, Fuji Mills, Karafuto Industrial Co., and the Yalu River Mills are represented in the country—united in the organization, which is capitalized at 3,000,000 yen—or $1,500,000.

SOLON DENIES HE WANTS NEWS CENSORSHIP FOR STATE.

Representative Thomas G. Wall of the South Dakota legislature denied that he would introduce a bill in the coming session of the South Dakota legislature for a legislative censorship of news going out of the state house.

He asserted his belief that the daily newspapers would advise the public of the lack of legislation publishing the news from the state house, so that the people of the state might know those they have entrusted with their business are complying with that trust.

World Almanac, Containing Important Information and Statistics, Out.

The 1923 edition of the World Almanac and Book of Facts, published by the New York World, contains information of more than 36,000 facts and figures, by just off the press. The almanac is invaluable to the newspaper editor and business executive, and is a useful addition to any office, school and home. It contains all the most important events and happenings of the past year, tells of Europe's debt to the United States, gives the election figures in full, describes the bonus and the new tariff bill, and gives complete sporting records.

A new feature of great value has been added giving the government, population, finance, commerce, education, social activities of America and the whole world, country by country. A partial list of the more important features follows: The Geneva and the Hague Conference; the financial conditions of Europe; the Arms Conference, with tables of the new navies as cut down; Progress of the League of Nations; President Harding's Veto of the bonus bill; Labor problems; strikes and wages; balance sheet and expenditures of the United States Shipping Board; establishment of the Irish Free State; relief of the Russian famine; wonderful progress of aviation; list of government and state officials; agriculture; mines and mining; crops; live stock; imports and exports; banking; science, religion, art and literature, and thirty pages containing a diary of the news of the world day by day.

Boston Herald - Traveler Staffs Given Banquet.

The staffs in the editorial departments of the Boston Herald and Traveler were guests at a banquet given by their employers, the Boston Publishing Company last Saturday night at the Adams House. About 100 were present at the affair, intended as a means of promoting good fellowship between the members of the dual staffs and effecting a closer relationship in their work.

Walter Cobb of Quincy, who has been reporting his district for the Herald for nearly forty years was one of the most prominent of the guests, while another noted figure at the banquet was Frank W. Browne, military editor of the Herald for about two score years. Edmund Noble, known to all Boston newspaper men for two generations, and the oldest member of the Herald in point of city staff service, was conspicuous among those present.

Harold F. Wheeler, managing editor of the Traveler, presided and the speakers included Robert Lincoln O'Brien, editor of the Herald; T. J. Moynihan, circulation manager for the two papers; George B. Ryan, city editor of the Herald; Howard Gould, city editor of the Traveler; Edward E. Whiting, writer of "Whiting's Column," a Herald front page feature; Joe Toye, Traveler city staff man; Edmund B. Sargent of the Herald city staff, and Nixon Waterman, editor of the Traveler's "Whirling Hub," an interesting column which appears daily on the editorial page.

Circulation Manager Moynihan reported that the Herald had increased its readers during the last year by 8,000.

A NEW JOURNALISTIC LINK WITH THE OLD WORLD.

With Luigi Barzini’s new Corriere d’America little more than a week old, extended comment as to its possibilities in the future might properly be considered premature, but the fact that it has been set up in this new Italian daily in its first few issues merits hearty recognition. It is a logical outgrowth—of that of Signor Barzini and the Corriere della Sera, which has an even wider age range, placed in the hands of Italians in America and one that is an instrument of intelligence that may come to be as highly prized in the land of their adoption as the parent journal is in the home land. The first few issues are a temptation to take up ... the Corriere d’America, see how many words you would have to write to prove that you understand the spirit of America.

JUSTICE AND INJUSTICE OF THE CARICATURE.

In an issue of a few days ago the New York Tribune published a letter from one of its readers who deplored the implied ridicule that the caricature heaps upon his subjects. No defense or explanation of the caricaturist’s side of the case was made by the New York Journal. “Taking Caricatures Seriously,” which may be interpreted as a sort of public relations writer.

As a matter of fact, caricature does not occupy the important place in American newspapers that it did in the time of Davenport and Carter. Caricature has proved itself a positive factor in accomplishing the purposes of its creator, distasteful as it may have been to the subject, or his friends. Today, however, the spirit of the hostile caricaturing that once exerted so profound an effect upon public affairs, and the art of grotesque delineation is usually employed in a softer, friendlier manner.

Many reasons may be advanced for the change, but the best answer would seem to be that more and better ways of correcting public evils or harassing political opponents these days than there were a decade or two ago. We have become reconciled to a more constrained type of humor, or a kind of satire which respects anyone’s delicate sensibilities.

The spirit behind such defects that may not be changed?” asks the Tribune’s correspondent. “A homely distinction that is, that it does not seem to me that it is neither humorous or friendly to call to a man’s least attractive features. The schoolboy at the blackboard is deplorable. As a teacher, adding and a tail, and all the consequences, is not a bad idea to keep a caricature reserve that could be called upon to do a quick, effective job in an emergency.

NO NEED FOR JOURNALISTS BEING “BROKE.”

Jealous as he is of his reputation for mental efficiency, the average newspaperman is usually very flaccid when it comes to a question of financial management. “Do you expect of a newspaper man having any money?” is a familiar quotation to be met with of anyone who has been very long in journalism, and the remarkable and shameful part of it is that 99 times out of 100 you are more than anyone else. A surprising number of them seem to regard being broke as one of the comcomitants of a newspaper career, so much so that one newspaper, at least, has established itself almost as one of the traditions of the profession.

It is singular that an individual who was brought up in a background of contemporary journalistic spirit should so languidly accept the theory that he can’t get ahead of the game! It is a reflection upon intelligence that persons much further down the scale of advancement and present, and with reason.

A newspaper man can get and keep money as consistently as anyone else if he makes up his mind to do it. Just as in the case of the showing made in the last two years by the employees of the Cincinnatii Union and Tribune, you not only maintained your own savings club, as a result, they were on hand in that time more than $145,000 that would otherwise have belonged to some one else by now.

As told in the news pages of this issue, this savings fund is out at interest in the form of first mortgage loans, an absolutely airtight investment, so that each employer of the Times-Star adds appreciably to his wealth every year exclusive of further gain. For example for their fellow newspaper workers in the two years their plan for providing insurance for earning money, the city’s social director, the financial director, will be not only maintained, but augmented, by the newspaper, and by the public, as much as possible.

Two of the biggest newspapers in the country, the New York Times and Post, have recently aided their staffs in organizing building and loan associations. It is an undertaking on the part of them to provide a preparation of the qualities of leadership to induce his associates to buy their own savings clubs. It’s not the hundred cents in the dollar that you get that means so much, as it is the one hundred and six cents in the dollar that you keep.

Sholom Asche, editor of the New York Jewish Forward, returned this week from a sojourn abroad.

Alfred C. Newell, former newspaperman, and newly elected president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, acted as toastmaster at the farewell dinner of the four city boards that went out with the old mayor.

Miss Marjorie Postal, who was recently engaged in teaching expression to a class of seventy-five girls in the advertising department of the Chicago Tribune, is in Miami, Fla., to assume her duties as hostess at the Hotel Urmye.

BROOKLYN PUBLISHER TO BECOME A BENEDICT.

Herbert Foster Gunnison, publisher and vice-president of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, and Mrs. George S. Baldwin of Highmount, N. Y., and Brooklyn, are to be married the first of February.

Mr. Gunnison and Mrs. Baldwin met last July on the famous centennial tour. Mr. Gunnison has been associated with the Daily Eagle since 1894, and is an officer and director of various large corporations.

Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin have served as treasurer and secretary of the American Newspaper Publishers Association and vice-president of the New York City Publishers Association.

For several years, Mr. Gunnison was the Eagle Almanac and is the author of two books, "Two Americans in a Motor Car" and "Flatbush of Today." Mr. Gunnison was born in Halfax, N. S., June 24, 1858. His first wife, who was Miss Alice May of Brooklyn, passed away in 1903.

PUBLISHER FOSTER GUNNISON.

STAFF CHANGES.

Gerald P. Crean has succeeded Alfred Malmegren on the reporting staff of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle. Mr. Malmegren will devote his entire time to his sign painting business.

Henry B. Humphrey, Jr., of Boston, joining the reporting staff of the Kansas City Star. Since graduating from Harvard he has taken a special course at the University of Germany. Mr. Humphrey is the youngest son of B. H. Humphrey, president of the Boston advertising agency bearing his name.

John Sheridan, formerly a reporter for the Johnstown Democrat, has been named advertising manager on the Johnstown, Pa., Ledger.

Willibor Saylor of the school of journalism, Syracuse University, served on the staff of the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune during the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. Ann McGuire of the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune has left for New York, where she will spend several months.

Ellis C. Hollums, recently with the Miami Daily News, is replaceing a man who has resigned from the new department of the Jacksonville Journal.

PUBLISHER RECOMMENDED FOR POSTMASTER.

Frank E. Howe, publisher of the Montpelier, Vt., Republican, has been recommended by the Vermont delegation in congress as successor to A. S. Hartz, secretary of war's assistant postmaster general, who has served two terms.

Mr. Howe learned the printers' trade in the office of the Brattleboro Reformer. In 1893 he went to Montpelier, where he was employed three years on the Argus as reporter. He edited the Montpelier Evening Republican, being in charge of the paper from the day of its existence and was three years assistant editor of the Barre, Vt., Daily Republican.

In 1892 he purchased the two week newspapers then published in Montpelier and the following year began issuing the Evening Banner. He twice served as a member of the Vermont state legislature, the second session as speaker of the house, and served one term as lieutenant governor.

EDITOR HALF A CENTURY.

Wells L. Hill has just completed sixty years as editor of the Middletown, Mass., Transcript. He succeeded the late Colonel George H. Hoyt, who founded the paper and was its sole owner. Mr. Hill, who was in Boston and had previously sent Washington letters to the Transcript's office acting editor. From a third owner, he soon became sole owner of the paper and publisher of the newspaper and job shop.

Mr. Hill about thirty years ago was a reporter for the New York Post and was a representative of the World's Congress of the Deaf. He has four children, two of whom have been in the business manager of the Transcript; Raymond Deigh, and Miss Nettie E. Hill of New Haven, Conn.

TUFFORD'S HAVE A SON.

While Will V. Tufford of Clinton, and Miss Marjorie Postal, who was recently engaged in teaching expression to a class of seventy-five girls in the advertising department of the Chicago Tribune, is in Miami, Fla., to assume her duties as hostess at the Hotel Urmye, M. Tufford has been named Fred Tufford, district manager of the Inland Daily Press Association.

Miss Marguerite E. Sweeney, for nearly two years connected with the National Children's Alliance, has been appointed to the staff of the New York Herald. She will come to New York from Dallas, Texas, where she was a member of the staff of the Dallas Morning News. She served also as secretary to Frank W. Wozenick, while a student in Dallas.

Miss Marguerite E. Sweeney, for nearly two years connected with the National Children's Alliance, has been appointed to the staff of the New York Herald. She will come to New York from Dallas, Texas, where she was a member of the staff of the Dallas Morning News. She served also as secretary to Frank W. Wozenick, while a student in Dallas.

NEW V-C SERVICE STARTS.
Organisation of the V-C Advertising Service Corporation, a new newspaper and magazine advertising agency, with headquarters at 230 West Forty-second street, New York, has been completed by Baron G. Collier, president of the Street Railway Advertising Company, and Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., president of the C-V
Features Service.

The company is incorporated for $200,000 capital and is directed by Collier, Mrs. L. B. Hamilton, vice-president of the United Hotels, L. Buckingham, treasurer, and Mr. Collier and Mr. Vanderbilt.

Robert Harris, formerly of the New York Herald and the Associated Press in New York and at one time publicity director of the Chinese Govern-mint in the United States, is secretary of the concern and Edward Wheaton, formerly an accountant of this entire group of companies, is assistant bookkeeper.

Mr. Harris is present handling the advertising for the United Hotels Company and the American, Charles Mc-Donald Perfume, American, Florida Polish, Tarpon in Florida, Takamine in Chicago, and the New York and Columbia Graphophone Company of New York, assistant treasurer.

Since the present management of the New York Press is not opposed to the idea that circulation means everything to a newspaper and that it is essential to have the newspapers in the hands of its circulation department, it is expected that the company will be able to handle the advertising for the United Hotels Company and the American.

Mr. Lynch gave the boys of the Press a Christmas party in Keil's, the company's new New York theater.

A special vaudeville entertainment was held in the evening, which has a seating capacity of 2,000, was filled from the main to the dress circle. Several vaudeville acts are scheduled for other Weekly Theaters in the city before the end of the season.

The Lynch is president of the In-national Circulation Managers' Association. He knows what's good for circulation and the classifier.

CHICAGO POST SEeks $50,000
DAMAGES FROM THEATRICAL PRODUCERS.

Suit for $50,000 damages was brought Tuesday by the Chicago Evening Post against Sam S. and Byron T. Shubert, Chicago theatrical producers, and the Jackson Theatre Theatre and the Elgin. The suit is based on a letter in which the Post accused the Shubert of infringing on its copyright.

Several theatrical acts are performed in the Post's Evening Post papers, and it is claimed that the Shubert's act is identical with one of the Post's acts.

The Shubert brothers failed to press suits against the new-paper, however, and they were
appellate courts.

FIRST PAGE NEWS SUMMARIES HAVE PULLING POWER.

TORONTO GLOBE AUGMENTS COLUMN AND IT REGISTERS A HIT IN FAR-OFF CHINA—AIDS BUSY PEOPLE TO FIND AND DIGEST NEWS IN QUICK TIME.

By H. Armand de Masi.
Special Correspondent of The Fourth Estate.

Every morning, in the first column of the first page, the Toronto Globe prints a column summary of the news of the day, under the box heading "News of The Day." This includes under various sub-headings, news of "Toronto and District," the "Dominion," "British and foreign," "Financial," "Agricultural," "Sports," etc., and is followed by weather reports, "British Mails Closing" and "Steamship Arrivals."

The Toronto Globe is one of the few newspapers on the American continent still publishing this pith of the day's news, most papers of the United States having abandoned this feature some years ago.

Recently the Globe enlarged this summary, which during the war had been curtailed somewhat because of paper shortage and because of the wealth of war news received daily. An echo of the action of the Globe's editorial director in adding to the summary has just been heard from far off Tielutung, West China, where the Chinese newspaper Mission maintains a general hospital and dispensary.

A letter received a few days ago by the Globe from W. B. Birk, stationer in Tielutung, reads as follows:

"For a long time my relatives in Toronto have been receiving the summary of the news in the Globe to us in their regular letters. It has been an easy way to keep in touch with the homeland.

"This last week we were surprised to see how the 'Summary' had been enlarged and as is natural, we greatly appreciate the gesture. It seems that several people here who have lived in Toronto at some time, and we thought you ought to know that we have no objection to the enlargement."

And I understand from the management of the Globe that scores of letters from sources closer to Toronto than Tielutung, West China, have been received from readers, praising this newspaper for its enlargement of its "News of the Day" summary.

Recently the Globe made a distinct separation of its telegraph and city news sections, so that the latter now comprises a part of its own, with its own front page. This gives city news equal display with telegraph news, and the Globe, I understand, has added several thousand to the Globe's circulation.

The "News of the Day" summary is indexed so that the reader, with very little trouble, can readily find the particular item of news in which he is interested. Agricultural news, for example, is invariably segregated on the Globe's "farm page," which is a daily feature.

"The Distressed District" news is indexed in the city news section; Dominion news on pages 1, 2, 3 and 5, etc.; British and Foreign news on pages 1, 2, 3 and 5, etc.; financial on pages 6-9; sports on page 12, etc.

In this way, without involving too detailed a system of bookkeeping and checking up on the part of the editors, the news of the day is thoroughly tabulated and indexed for the convenience of the Globe's readers.

NEWSPAPER PIONEERS IN SOUTH DAKOTA SELL OUT.

The sale of the plant of the Oscoma Argus-Leader by Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Fulford to Erwin and Otto Blum marks the retirement from active newspaper work of pioneer newspaper people of the Missouri river section of South Dakota. Upon opening the Great Sioux reservation between the Missouri river and the Black Hills in 1890, the Fulfords moved to an interior point west of Chamberlain, where they established one of the first papers to be published in the ceded lands.

NEWSBOYS START CAMPAIGN TO RAISE PROTECTIVE FUND.

Minneapolis newsboys started a campaign to raise funds for Minneapolis Newsboys' Protective Association through the sale of tickets to "Heroes of the Street." The newsboys were given a private showing of the film "Heroes of the Street." Gifts were distributed by a Santa Claus and children from the Salvation army assisted in the program by reading songs. A committee of citizens and the theater management assisted the newsboys.

1923 WILL WITNESS STEADY IMPROVEMENT, NEW YORK PUBLISHER BELIEVES.

Unless there is some crude political, blundering, the coming year from an industrial standpoint will witness steady improvement, says Russell R. Whitman, president of the New York Commercial. "If matters can be left to work themselves out without interference, all will be well," says Mr. Whitman. "The rapid turnover of new equipment, which will keep the plants running to capacity. This will, in turn, make heavy demands upon the steel companies and upon all the allied furnishers of material that the railroads require.

"The greater part of the money required for new buildings will be dispensed in wages which will add to the buying power of the industrial community and react upon all industry.

"Of equal importance will be the prosperity of the farmers. Pending legislation is expected to provide financial guidance, which will permit the more orderly marketing of the crops and the more even distribution of the profits to the growers. This again will increase the buying power of the farmers and react upon all industry.

"If, however, the radical element in Congress shall succeed in undermining the confidence of the people through its attacks upon business and upon taxation, the industrial program will have to be revised accordingly, leading to a depression which will make a decided difference to the farmers.

"Sanity in Washington is our greatest need—that, and less government in business and the removal of the hand of the organized labor leaders from the throat of industry and the public."

MIAMI DAILY'S EDITORS GET

SUBPOENAS FOR "INSIDE"

WIRETAPPING STORY.

Grand jury subpoenas were last week issued against four members of the Miami Daily Metropolis staff in an effort, on the part of the Dade County grand jury, to learn the source of information of a story appearing in the Metropolis telling of plans of confidence men and wiretappers to fleece winter residents of Florida and tourists as they had done in Chicago. A few hours after the noon edition of the Metropolis appeared on the streets, summons were sent out by the grand jury for S. Bolo de Lorenzo, editor of the Metropolis, Arthur G. Keene, managing editor, and Charles F. Cushway, advertising manager.

After interrogating these men, the grand jury issued another summons for Paul Roberts, the reporter who wrote the story. Although the four men were questioned at some length, no information was divulged which would acquaint the grand jury with the Metropolis informant.

The story questioned related of widespread preparations for a repetition of wiretapping and confidence games to swindle which had been hindered little during other winter seasons.

NEW YORK DAILIES
100 YEARS AGO WERE HUMBLE.

NOT A HINT OF PRESENT-DAY MAJESTY COULD BE FOUND ANYWHERE IN THE LIST—TWAS THEN THAT BENNETT THE FIRST ENTERED REALM HE LATER DOMINATED.

New York "journals" of 100 years ago (they were called "journals" then—the word newspaper had not become known here) were horrible specimens according to Sam E. Whitmore of the Universal Service. "I have," he says, "looked back into their musty, yellow pages, the contents of which are advertisements, dab of poorly arranged ship news gathered from the 'reading rooms' of the principal ports, such as Boston, New Bedford, New London and Charleston; a narrow column or so of news, 20 to 40 lines of editorial—in three days out of six jumping on a brother editor with boyish, trivial or vulgar abuse."

"The W. R. Hearst, Frank A. Munsey and Adolph S. Ochs of January 24, 1923 in New York, were those plodding souls, M. M. Noah, William L. Coleman, respectively, with their National Advocate, Commercial Advertiser and Evening Post. The Advocate is gone forever. The Globe of today is the old Commercial Advertiser and the post is still with us."

"Mr. Noah was the most original and the most popular editor here a century ago. Then there was a much-talked-of editor, John Lang of the American, a gentleman of some schooling, and Amos Butler of the Mercantile Advertiser, who was even behind his own times; Mr. King could be found every day in his office on the American; Henry Wheaton issuing the Advocate and Theodore Dwight of the Daily Advertiser. These are all of the great editors here 100 years ago."

"It was just before Christmas 100 years ago that the young school teacher and accountant, James Gordon Bennett, rode into New York on one of the rattling stage coaches over the Boston Post Road, down Third avenue and the Bowery. He came here from Boston bent on opening a business college, but when he reached the Advocate and has to take the results.

BUSINESS FORECASTING NOT YET MADE A SCIENCE.

"There is no science of business forecasting that can help business or trade in any material degree," says an editorial in the New York Journal of Commerce, after reviewing the rather pathetic showing some of the prophets made in 1922. "Symptoms can be indicated and existing conditions foreseen, but that is about all. It is a mistake to suppose that more than this can be done with the present methods at our disposal, that of the Advocate. It had, at $10 a year, 1,350 daily subscribers, 130 of whom were advertisers at the rate of $50 a year.

STAFF HAS SAVED ITSELF $145,000

IN TWO YEARS.

EMPLOYEES OF THE CINCINNATI TIMES - STAR ORGANIZED BUILDING AND LOAN SOCIETY THEMSELVES — HAVE BIG SUM THAT OTHERWISE WOULD HAVE BEEN SPENT.

The Times-Star Savings and Loan Company, a mutual building association organized to encourage thrift and assist in the building of homes by employees of the Cincinnati Times-Star, has just completed its second year. With only the weekly deposits of members of the association now has total assets of $142,926.95 of which $140,600 is loaned on first mortgage real estate accounts. The association is operated the same as any other building association, not organized for profit other than annual dividends to borrowing and depositing members. The dividend rate both years has been five and a half per cent. It charges 6.24 per cent on loans. The difference is used in operating expenses or credited to the reserve and undivided profit funds.

There are no officers' or directors' salaries. Each department of the newspaper plant is represented by at least one director on the association board of directors.

The officers are: E. B. Krieger, president, editorial department; George Fries, vice-president, circulation department; E. J. Williams, treasurer, composing room; C. O. Lipman, secretary, circulation department.

Those and the following compose the board of directors: J. R. Tomlin and E. A. Sigafosse, advertising department; Philip Diel, accounting department; C. H. Rembold and C. H. Motz, business department; Conrad Limberg, composing room; Edward Eichler, mailing department; Moses I. Strauss, editorial department; Walter Culver and Henry Woehler, plant and confidential advisor; Samuel S. Decatur, money for the association, is a former Times-Star employee.

The experiment here has been most interesting. It was initiated not by the "higher ups" in the newspaper organization, but among the men receiving weekly was discovered some handy and safe investment for regular savings. It did not meet the social as well as the financial need of the man who wants to save. The fact that there was a building association was the starting point. The editorial staff supplied the necessary extra stimulus to translate the vague desire to save into actual savings, which in two years has been piled up to $140,600, with whose only knowledge of savings formerly was hearsay. Several already have seen enough to make the first payments on homes of their own.

BIG LINEAGE INCREASE MADE

BY N.Y. SUN IN 1922.

The concentrated attention being directed toward the New York market and the part that newspaper advertising is being made to play in the utmost development of metropolitan sales possibilities is strikingly reflected in the advertising lineage of figures in the New York Sun for the year 1922.

During the twelve months the Sun carried 9,620,814 agate lines, an increase of 1,420,092 lines over 1921. The Sun's gains in advertising and circulation are the last milestone passed in a year of record-breaking for the business and success of the Sun.

CANADIAN PAPER WILL ADD STORY TO BUILDING.

A seventh floor will be added by La Patrie, Montreal, to its building at the corner of St. Catherine street and City Hall square, to house the entire editorial staff of the paper.

Construction will be completed before the year closes. The editorial section occupies the sixth floor and this will be turned over to the photo-engraving department.

Every capacity and having had the most practical training. He probably is personally known to as many editors... He has a most thorough experience in the press association business, having served in every capacity... Mr. Bickel began his newspaper work with the United Press as a "cub" in San Francisco, back in 1907. Later he was with the Portland, Ore., bureau and from that place went to the San Francisco office as a salesman. He became business manager in 1917 and two years later was made general news manager. Six months ago Mr. Bickel was made vice-president and general manager. Upon his retirement Mr. Hawkins said: "I leave the United Press under the most fortunate circumstances, as I believe in Mr. Bickel. I am being succeeded by the best equipped and most capable production man in this or any other country. On the other hand, new opportunities not only open a great field for progress, but makes it possible for me to return to my former close association with Mr. Howard.

Mr. Bickel has had a most successful career in the newspaper industry. He has been active in various capacities and has had the opportunity to work with many leading newspapers...

CONVICT EARNED THOUSANDS FROM CELL BY ADVERTISING WORK, RELEASED.

Louis Victor Eytinge, who was released last Saturday on parole from Arizona State Penitentiary at Phoenix, where he spent fifteen and a half years, has had several good offers to engage in advertising, in which he is much disinterested, but the handicap of being a convict and doing his work in a cell.

Eytinge displayed two telegrams, but did not reveal the names of the sending newspapers, at once, one at a salary of $6,000 with a New York concern. He will accept neither at present, as he plans to use his experience and knowledge gained during his years in prison in an effort to help the thousands of unfortunate prevailing in penitentiaries and to do what he can to aid the lives of thousands of unfortunate spending their lives in hopeless im.

For some time until his pardon Eytinge was in charge of the entertainment program providing motion pictures and other entertainment at the prison. He spent thousands of dollars earned in advertising profits for the benefit of the men in the institution.

Eytinge said that when he arrived at the prison he weighed 119 pounds and the prison doctors gave him two months to live. He told of his arrest and conviction as his health improved, beginning with the change in his business in a small way. His success was due in a great measure to his persuasive letters which came to be known all over the country and elicited the patronage of advertising clubs.

The letters made him so famous after he had retired from the circus game. They were read before congressmen and the army and other the handsomest periodicals produced in the country. His activities took him in various directions. He has distinguished himself as a scenario writer, although the moving picture has been wholly developed since his incarceration.

The Sun Leads All New York Evening Newspapers in Advertising Gains

During 1922 The Sun published 9,620,816 agate lines of advertising (32,069 columns)—an increase of 1,420,092 lines (4,734 columns) over the preceding year.

The Sun's gain was greater than the combined gain of the three other evening newspapers that increased in advertising.

The Sun's gain was 516,412 lines greater than that of the next evening newspaper.

For ten consecutive months The Sun's gain has been larger than the gain of the next evening newspaper.

This record reflects the confidence of advertisers in The Sun—a confidence drawn from a consistently large and increasing volume of sales directly traceable to advertising in this newspaper.
1922 repeats the long-time advertising leadership of The Chicago Daily News

1922 maintained The Daily News' traditional leadership among the daily newspapers of Chicago in both Display and Classified Advertising. Here are the figures for Display Advertising, as compiled by the Advertising Record Company, an independent audit service, subscribed to by all Chicago newspapers.

THIRD DISTRICT PRESIDENT.

More than one hundred advertising experts from all parts of the country were in attendance at the simultaneous conventions the National Advertising Commission of the Third District of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, held at the Hotel Washington Tuesday and Wednesday, and Jeessee until March 1 of the News-Times, morn-week by the Perry-Lloyd-Jones syndicate.

Last week it appeared that Mr. McCormick was to issue a morning and an evening Herald and that the Perry-Lloyd-Jones syndicate would also issue a morning and an evening Herald. The new arrangement means there will be no conflicts in the morning and evening fields between the News-Times and Herald-Telegram.

$114,881,040 in Building Operations
Philadelphia's
Record breaking total for 1922.

SHATTER BUILDING RECORDS
Operations Here in 1922 Valued at $114,881,040.

The building boom in Philadelphia during 1922 shattered all records of the last decade for construction. Figures of the Bureau of Building Inspection show that since last January the total number of permits issued was 14,476, covering 22,588 operations, at an estimated value of $114,881,040. Against this record increase the building during 1921 had a total value of only $42,540,780, for which 12,673 permits were issued, covering 14,651 operations.

The structures built this year included more than 8,800 two-story dwellings, the largest number of residences erected since the war.
(\textit{The Philadelphia Bulletin, December 30, 1922}).

With this vast addition to its buildings—and every indication that the big programme will continue in 1923—Philadelphia, the third largest market in the United States, offers greater opportunities than ever before to manufacturers of all kinds of goods.

DEPARTMENT FOR AGED NEWSPAPER WORKERS.

PITIFUL CASE OF FORMER PUBLISHER FORCED TO SELL PENCILS FOR LIVINGHOOD PROMPTS DEMASI TO URGE PROFESS PION TO ESTABLISH A HOME.

Newspaper men who have often pondered the question may find incentive to action in the following letter to THE FOURTH ESTATE urging that journalists take some steps to assure members of the profession freedom from poverty in their declining years. The plight of Richard Stearns is in truth no credit to the profession, none of the other professions have found a way to indemnify their members against misfortune and failure. In this respect the journalist stands little by comparison with the physician, the lawyer, or the college professor. It is entirely logical for him to consider whether it is possible for his own profession to show the way for the others.

It is hardly necessary to comment further on the letter. The condition he describes has at some time or other stirred every newspaper man to hope that somehow it might be remedied. It may be imminent; Robert J. Ralston, presi dent of the publisher's union, is pessimistic. The Fourth Estate will be glad to conduct a symposium on the subject, which Major DeMasi presents as follows:

Editor, THE FOURTH ESTATE:

Today's Buffalo Evening News contains a stickful of type that is of importance to all students of editorial and other non-unionized departments of the newspaper profession. It should be read and pondered by every working newspaper man, regardless of his present official position or private situation in life.

The stickful of type to which I refer is a direct reflection on the intellectual end of our business—its dependence on the mass of newspaper workmen in the towns over which they report. The reports of the reporters, copy-readers, editors and all the kind the country over.

Here is the article to which I have referred:

CINCINNATI, Jan. 6.—Once publisher and owner of daily newspapers in Toledo, Ohio and several Illinois towns, but now unable to obtain employment because of the handicap of his age—85 years—Richard Stearns yesterday applied for a charity permit to sell pencils on the streets of Cincinnati.

Stearns informed the city officials that he left his home town when 19 years old to accept a position as teacher in a school in Virginia. He proved himself a capable pupil of the profession and turned out a good reporter. Stearns also had taught. Stearns stated that he had known both men intimately.

The fate of this aged former publisher, now compelled by poverty to sell pencils on the streets of Cincin nati, has presented a vivid picture of that which may be in store for us, perhaps, in the heyday of life and "making good," as the term goes, but who knows not what misfortunes are in store for the future?

Had Richard Stearns been a union printer in his day, he would not today find himself in the position of a pub

GRIDIRON DINNER DATE CHANGED TO FEB. 10.

TO INSURE ATTENDANCE OF MEN OF NATIONAL FAME NEWSPAPER MEN'S ANNUAL GATHERING SET AHEAD—Baltimore Sun Bureau Man Floor Manager.

Advance of the date of the annual gathering of newspaper men's conferences from April 7 to February 10 has been announced by the club's executive committee.

Expectation that congress will not be called into session immediately after March 4, with the result that many notables in official life would be absent, was the reason for the change.

Announcement of club committees for the year was also made in a special meeting held on Monday, January 14, at the Washington Bureau of the Chicago Tribune. The new Gridiron president, was made as follows:

PUBLICATIONS WIN RIGHT TO NEWS AGENTS.

Supreme Court Rules the Clayton Act Does Not Prohibit Making Exclusive Contracts—Holds Contracts of Curtis Company Were Real.

Publishers are not prohibited by the Clayton Act from entering into contracts with news dealers as agents in distributing news, a suit in equity brought by the Curtis Publishing Company to carry or handle at wholesale, periodicals of competitors. The commission announced that a majority of these contracts had the effect of substan tially lessening competition and tended to create monopoly.

It directed the company not to enter into any contracts with wholesale dealers, but that it should not act as agents for, sell, or supply others at wholesale prices any periodicals of competitors without the written consent of the Curtis Publishing Company to contract with wholesalers to discontinue the sale or distribution of competing publications.

The Curtis Company, alleging that the proceeding grew out of an attempt by other publishers and newspaper companies to obtain, without expense to them, the services and benefits of the distributing organization, asked the circuit court of appeals at Phila delphia to protect it against the order of the commission.

That court held that the contracts of the Curtis Company were legal because the wholesalers were acting merely as their agents. The Clayton Act did not apply to such forms of contract, but only to sales and contracts for sale.

When Wall Street finally held that the Curtis Publishing Company had engaged in unfair methods of competition, the post office at New York, N.Y., and other companies that had been quoted an "objectionable" clause in some company's contracts, as follows:

"That the district agent hereby covenants and agrees, to re tain hereafter from, wholesaling to boys or dealers (and from attempt ting to sell) any periodicals other than those published by the Curtis Publishing Company, or to contract with agents or for or supply at wholesale rates any periodicals other than those published by the Curtis Publishing Company, or to contract with (Continued on Seventeenth Page)
USE AND SALE OF ELROD MACHINES ENJOINED BY UNITED STATES COURT

The users, as well as sellers, of the Elrod machine are infringers under the final decree and injunction recently issued by the United States Court at Wilmington, Delaware, in the case of Lanston Monotype Machine Company against Pittsburgh Type Founders Company. The defendant both sold machines and used them in its business for the making of slugs and rules. The Court found that claims of the Monotype Company patents for both the machine itself and for the process which is practiced in the use of the machine in making slugs and rules were valid and infringed. The injunction was issued pursuant to the Mandate of the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, in the following language:

"NOW, THEREFORE, KNOW YE, that you the said Pittsburgh Type Founders Company, your officers, agents, servants, workmen, and every person acting by and on behalf of said defendant, and each and every of you, are hereby strictly enjoined and restrained, permanently and forever, under the pains and penalties that may fall upon you in case of disobedience, from the further manufacture, use or sale, directly or indirectly, in any way, of any device, devices, apparatus or mechanism containing, embodying or employing the inventions set forth in either or both of the said claims numbered 1 and 2 of Letters Patent No. 1,222,415, and from the further use or practicing of the process, either directly or indirectly, in any way, of said claims 4 and 6 of Letters Patent No. 1,237,058, or either of them."

The claims of the patents referred to are as follows:

"1. An apparatus for casting type metal elements for printing forms, embodying means for confining molten metal, in contact with a surface of a previously congealed portion of the element being cast whereby the two portions are caused to unite by fusion, means for intermittently advancing the element with relation to the confining means as succeeding increments congeal, and means for forcibly injecting molten metal within the confining means to form succeeding increments of the element."

"2. An apparatus for casting type metal elements for printing forms embodying means for confining a body of molten metal in contact with a surface of a previously congealed portion of the element being cast, whereby the two portions are caused to unite by fusion, means for intermittently advancing the element as succeeding increments congeal, means for intermittently injecting molten metal within the confining means, and means for directing the incoming metal along the face of the previously congealed portion of the element."

PATENT No. 1,237,058:

"4. The method of forming a distinctive finished strip of material for use in a form of printing type which consists in intermittently forcing increments of molten metal into a mold cavity the exit to which is closed by the congealed metal forming the strip, intermittently feeding the metal forwardly through the exit of the mold cavity and in causing the molten metal to congeal in the mold cavity during the intervals between feed movements."

"6. The method of forming a distinctive finished continuous strip of metal for use in a form of printing type, which consists in intermittently forcing molten type metal into a mold cavity the exit to which is closed by the congealed metal of a previous increment, causing the succeeding increments to unite by fusion, intermittently feeding the metal forwardly through the exit of the mold cavity and in causing the molten metal to congeal in the mold cavity during the intervals between feed movements."

To avoid further liability, owners and users of Elrod machines will have to stop using the Elrod; but the Monotype Company is in position and ready to supply its machines, so that the trade may readily obtain machines (or material) manufactured and sold under proper and legal authority from the Lanston Monotype Machine Company, owner of the patents.

BENSON COUNSELS SPACE BUYERS TO COURTESY.

PUBLISHERS' REPRESENTATIVE ENTITLED TO THOROUGH HEARING, PRESIDENT OF FOUR A's WRITES AGENCY CHIEFS — SUGGESTS SOME BUYERS NEED REFORMING.

President John Benson of the Four A's has sent a letter to each of the 133 agencies which are members of that body in which he counsels the space buyers to be courteous to the publishers' representatives. He writes:

"They repeatedly complain of being ignored by space buyers in agencies and of having their departments not get the respect they deserve, which gives the publisher a quick and satisfactory reply.

"This creates a bad impression for the agency business, one which we cannot afford to let stand. Our members do not stop to think that perhaps, that the space-buying departments form the point of contact between our association and the publishing world. They can, therefore, easily make or break any policies we adopt as an association, without intending to do so, by not living up to their spirit."

"It may be that some of our members are not sufficiently studious of their high responsibilities and these should have the earnest counsel of our agency principals."

CAMPBELL BECOMES MANAGER OF WASHINGTON PRESS SERVICE.

J. Bart Campbell has resigned as head of the Capitol staff of the Washington Bureau of the International News Service to become news manager for the Washington Press Service.

Campbell was connected with the I.N.S. for about six years. In addition to covering the Senate, he had general charge of the news dispatches from the "Hill." Before coming to Washington he had a lengthy and varied career on New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and other metropolitan dailies, having served as reporter for the Philadelphia Inquirer, the Chicago Tribune, the New York American and other newspapers at different times. He was manager of the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph until it was sold by the Wanamaker interests and merged with the Philadelphia Evening Ledger. He covered several sessions of the Pennsylvania Legislature at Harrisburg before his activities were transferred to Congress. He was formerly a member of the Harrisburg Legislative Correspondents' Association. He is a member of the National Press Club and of the Pen and Pencil Club of Philadelphia.

PRESS CLUB LEGION POST ELECTS CLARK HEAD.

At the annual election of the National Press Club Post of the American Legion this week, E. B. Clark was chosen as commander for the ensuing year.

Other officers elected, most of whom are active or former Washington correspondents, were: Captain J. J. Craig, U. S. Marine Corps, senior vice commander; Brigadier General Amos K. Fries, junior vice-commander; Paul J. McManus, adjutant; Earle Godwin, junior officer; Frank Connolly and John Connolly, color bearers; and Colonel J. M. Heller, sergeant-at-arms.

Managing Editor Cobb had good staff while serving on Paducah paper.

Problems of various cities were brought before Mr. Cobb, and he was found well equipped to deal with them. He was the first manager of the Paducah News-Democrat and when he left the paper July 22, 1904 to go to the New York Sun. George H. Goodman is now owner and publisher of the News-Democrat.

EDITORIAL STAFF FOR DAILY AT KANSAS UNIVERSITY.

The newly elected staff for the University Daily Kansas, published at Kansas University are: Glen Schultz, Lawrence, editor-in-chief; Dean Berg, Wichita, news editor; Perry Johnson, Covey, sports editor; Richard Harris, Pitts, Okla., alumni editor; Catherine Stubs, Fort Worth, Texas, exchange editor; DeVaugn Francis, Eldorado, sports editor; Miss Helen Jaka, Leavenworth, Plain Tales editor.

COMMITTEE PLANS 1923 AD CLUB CONVENTION.

EXECUTIVES OF THE A.A.C.W. IN ATLANTIC CITY LISTEN TO REPORTS ON PROGRESS OF TENTATIVE PROGRAM — CONSIDER PROPOSITION TO ORGANIZE SMALL CITIES.

The executive committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs, meeting in Atlantic City Thursday heard reports personally presented by chairman of six committees. George W. Hopkins reported that the speakers bureau had offered more than one thousand speakers to clubs since organization last fall. Paul T. Cherington told of plans of the education committee and described four new courses the committee is offering to clubs. F. E. Pease, prepared a proposed report for the committee on associated advertising and explained briefly policies of management of the bureau.

C. K. Woodbridge reported on results of several hundred questionnaires on the Atlantic City convention program. H. D. Robbins recommended an investigation of the vigilance committee. John H. Logeman explained plans of the exhibit committee. The committee adopted a resolution calling upon law enforcement officials in all parts of the country and all branches of government to inform themselves of fraudulent advertising campaigns, and proposed that the greatest vigor within their power to curb them. A resolution was unanimously adopted urging the establishment of membership in the association and of the national advertising commission to lend their full support toward increasing the effectiveness of the campaign of all denominations in their local communities that the force of the church might be strengthened against evil and stamping out of fraud and selfishness.

May organize small town.

The committee unanimously adopted the recommendation of Dave W. Webb of Atlanta that a committee be appointed to make a complete report on advisability of putting a man in each city to organize advertising campaigns in that town, following the Neosho golden rule plan. The committee will be headed by Arch. R. Griffin, Minneapolis.

Officers and members of the convention committee of the Atlantic City Advertising Club met with the executive committee at the afternoon session.

The committee announced, it was their tentative plan to hold sessions in the steel pier except inspirational sessions Sunday afternoon which are to be in the million dollar pier, subject to the recommendation of the executive committee. The executive committee put the matter in the hands of the national program committee.

A motion empowering President Holland approved Washington committee to report on the advisability of placing a representative office in the city of Washington to collect from various government departments information of value to members of the association advertising commission was adopted.

Those attending the meeting were: vice-presidents, Black, Charles. Whedley, Webb, Better, Crawford, Bayless, Graham, and others, and secretary-treasurer Mr. McClelland. The committee present were Mackintosh, Neal, Hunt, William P. Green, Earle Pearson, John B. Robinson, past president, and Frank McClure.
Features Make Circulation
Positive Proof in Three Newspapers I Bought

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

KOENIGSBERG, boss of the syndicates, asks me for an article to be published in CIRCULATION dealing with what I KNOW of my own knowledge about the value of the star features sold by King Features Syndicate, the exclusive news features sent by wire by Universal Service and Cosmopolitan News Service, and the leased wire report of International News Service.

I know a good deal and I can prove it to the satisfaction of any intelligent publisher.

The announcement made when I turned over the Evening Wisconsin to Mr. Hearst tells the story, for of course the growth of that newspaper was based on the features that the paper uses. It wasn't done by me. I would have been the same as any other fairly good editor without those features. And it wasn't done as the Japanese say "By the virtue of the Emperor," which in this case would mean William Randolph Hearst.

When I bought the Evening Wisconsin, the price was one cent, it is now two cents.

The employes' payroll has increased 100 per cent.

Advertising and circulation receipts have more than trebled.

I have never taken from the Wisconsin News or the Washington Times which I bought and turned over to Mr. Hearst, a dollar in profits or in salary, but have enjoyed demonstrating the fact, interesting to newspaper men, that it is not difficult to double or treble the circulation of a newspaper, treble its income, add hundreds of thousands annually to its payroll, make it profitable and put its competitors in a thoughtful mood.

It was done because the features that our newspapers printed systematically and regularly, not fitfully and feebly, created the demand that means success.

To this announcement it may be added that since I bought the Washington Times, and the Milwaukee (Wisconsin) News and turned them over to Mr. Hearst, I have bought another paper and turned that over to Mr. Hearst. The "other paper" is the Detroit Times.

When I bought this newspaper it had less than 20,000 circulation and there were three evening papers in Detroit—the Times, Journal, and News.

The Times went to 65,000 circulation from less than 20,000 in a few weeks. That wasn't very hard with the features we had to use. We put in the right man, Linder whom we took from the Detroit Journal—very lucky we were to get him—Bitner whom we got from the Pittsburgh Press, again wonderfully good luck, and Mulcahy, from the New York Evening Journal—a wonder. The pressure was too great, and the Detroit Journal sold out to the News. The News absorbed the Journal in an interesting way. They got the name, and we got the Journal's circulation. They paid $1,500,000 to make that happen.

The Detroit Times now has more than 160,000 circulation, and it has that circulation because at the very beginning we used systematically, regularly, and in the right way, the features that are necessary to get circulation and to KEEP circulation after you get it.

Wanted—To Buy Business of Special Representative

This is an unusual proposition, and it requires unusual action.

Plainly and frankly we wish to purchase the going business of a special representative—not of necessity the biggest and best in the field, but by no means a broken down, decaying business.

The buyer is a newspaper man, grounded from the bottom up, well seasoned, in the newspaper business, yet reasonably young in years.

This man has put in his time as reporter, editor, advertising man, and circulation man, from the reasonably small city to the largest in America.

This man is the promoter, who by editorial and circulation creation, turned the tide in the largest city of this country, and brought from near the bottom to the top of the ladder, one of the leading journals of the United States. And this was done when time was the main element to be contended with.

This man, as a hired executive, organized from nothing and brought to a successful culmination, in a period of less than three years, what is today one of the biggest, largest and most successful of all American institutions allied with the newspaper business.

And the operations of this gentleman have not been necessarily confined to America.

The main purpose of seeking to buy the business of a real special representative corporation is to get back into more active touch with the building of business for newspapers.

This man believes through such a move he will be able to accomplish the purpose in mind.

Naturally any and all communications will be strictly confidential. References beyond question will be furnished if desired in case of opening of negotiations.

OIL has kept up its good work and made
BRADFORD, Penn. prosperous throughout the past year while many cities have been still going through the deflation period. Note this report on the oil conditions in this locality:

This community had one great advantage over most American cities during the past year, in that its principal product—oil—found a ready market during all the period of depression. While the price of crude is only half the high price of 1920, therefore largely reducing the total income, the cost of producing oil also has been correspondingly reduced. Oil territory now is still at a lower level than during the boom days, and the producers are going ahead with development work, so that Bradford has largely escaped the depression felt in other places, particularly known as "war brides." With the increased production of oil, brought about by improved methods of manufacture, this oilfield will run into the next century, and that the continued prosperity of Bradford is assured.

PLAN NEW NEWSPAPER FOR DANVILLE, VA.

Danville, Va., is to have a new paper. The Danville Publishing Company, which proposes to publish a new newspaper in the city, has announced the sale of $83,000 stock. As soon as $100,000 is raised a meeting will be called for the purpose of putting the organization on a businesslike basis.

The names of the temporary executive committee include A. B. Carrington, general city council; W. E. Gardner, liveryman; D. E. Graham, Jr., president of the Young Men's Business Club; J. A. Herman, drygoods merchant; H. O. Kerns, banker; H. M. Martin, associated with the local textile mills, and J. E. Parkinson, tobaccocon.

The paper, it is announced, will seek to build up Danville and the community, and will not be published primarily for profit nor for political preferment. It will be owned by the public, managed by the chosen representatives, and operated solely in the interest of the city.

NORTHEAST NEBRASKA EDITORS MEET JANUARY 26-27.

"What Good Has the Press Association Done for the Publishers, Anyway?" will be answered at the annual meeting of the Northeast Nebraska Editorial Association at Norfolk, Friday and Saturday, January 26-27, promises Mrs. Marie Weekes of the Norfolk Press, president of the Association. "What about future legislation," will be a leading topic.

Honorable Edgar Howard, editor of the Columbus Telegram and congressman-elect, will be one of the speakers and Professor J. A. Wright of the department of journalism of the South Dakota State University, will tell what the schools are doing.

WISCONSIN PAPER MOVES INTO NEW BUILDING.

The Monroe, Wis., Evening Times has moved into its new building at Jackson and Payne streets, constructed at a cost of $40,000, and one of the finest business structures in the city.

Work of excavating started on June 15, the site being 60x100 feet and the building being 40x100 feet. The structure is three stories high.

The ground floor, otherwise the basement extending five and one half feet below the ground provides quarters for the job printing department, carrier room, locker storage, heating plant, fuel and laundry.

The main floor contains the business office, editorial room, publishers' office, composing room, first aid and rest room facilities, cafeteria, secretarial office and shop employees. The building is of classic type of architecture, the exterior of buff brick, with terra cotta trim, providing an unusual contrast, deep reveals at the piere balcony giving the building an imposing appearance.

Entrance to the business office is by means of a short flight of stairs from the street level. At the head of three steps is a conspicuous customers' room, fronted by the business office. In the latter are found the advertising department, circulation department, cashier, bookkeeper, and clerical staff. To the left is the publishers' private office and to the right of the customers' room the editorial department.

Copy from the editorial department to the composing room just to the right of the latter is made by means of a gravity chute. Entrance is by means of a passage connecting also the business office with the mechanical department. All departments are connected with an inter-communicating telephone system.

All departments are well supplied with outfits, equipment being especially true of the editorial, composing and press rooms. The lighting fixtures are globes of the newest type with statuary bronze mountings. The lobby, business office, publisher's office and editorial rooms are finished in mural decorations, which give the interior a most attractive appearance.

In mechanical equipment, the Times is so equipped that if a new press is installed and is so placed that it can be seen in operation from the large windows facing Payne street. Three linotypes, all electrically equipped, being operating, as well as two others, driven by electric power, provide for the newspaper printing department.

The new building is provided with walk-up stairways, being especially true of the editorial, composing and press rooms. The lighting fixtures are globes of the newest type with statuary bronze mountings. The lobby, business office, publisher's office and editorial rooms are finished in mural decorations, which give the interior a most attractive appearance.

ACTION IN THREE MISLEADING AD CASES.

SIMULATION OF COMPETITOR'S ADVERTISING BANNED BY TRADE COMMISSION—TWO OTHER FIRMS ARE CITED TO ANSWER CHARGES OF MISSTATEMENT.

In a decided case involving the simulation of advertisements and products of a competitor to the extent that inexperienced consumers were deceived, the Federal Trade Commission has ordered the Warrewell Company of Philadelphia to discontinue such practices, which in the opinion of the commission amounted to unfair methods of competition.

The company is a publisher and distributor of books, and according to evidence brought out in hearings before the commission, and the deceived the public in the use of certain advertisements similar in form, illustration, and to that of the Little Leather Library Corporation. This simulation of products was accomplished in large part by obtaining, through various means, such as to the source of supply and methods of the Little Leather Library Corporation in the exploitation of its Leather Library. Samuel Silverman, Jacob Silverman, and Henry Greenblatt are partners in the Warrewell Corporation, and are prohibited by a specific order of the commission from continuing the foregoing unfair methods of competition. The advertising of goods as "silicone" without clearly designating the substance, fiber or material of which such fabric is composed is declared to be unfair methods of competition by the Federal Trade Commission to be an unfair method of competition. This ruling was brought out in the case of the Washington firm of A. H. H. and Leonard Behn, doing business under the name of Behrend Beauford, commission found that the respondents represented certain comforts offered for sale as being "silicone covered comforters," thereby leading the general public into the belief that such comforts were made of silk, which in fact was not the case.

In its order to cease and desist against this concern, the commission specifically directs the respondents to refrain from the use of the word "silicone" without distinctly bringing to the attention of the purchaser that the fabric so advertised contains no silk.

Advertisements by the Aaban Radio Company, Chicago, that a product manufactured by the company containing radium is the basis of a citation issued by the Federal Trade Commission.

Based upon a preliminary inquiry undertaken, the commission concludes that this firm's product contains no radioactivity and that in no way has it been represented that its product contains radium is the basis of a citation issued by the Federal Trade Commission. Based upon a preliminary inquiry undertaken, the commission concludes that this firm's product contains no radioactivity and that in no way has it been represented that its product contains radium is the basis of a citation issued by the Federal Trade Commission.

Abbott E. Kay and R. T. Nelson, co-partners trading as the Aaban Radio Company, Chicago, are charged with this violation of the act. The complaint is based upon the assumption that a product manufactured by the company containing radium is the basis of a citation issued by the Federal Trade Commission. A Help to the Advertising Department

The Linotype Typography Layout Kit

The Layout Kit contains 72 loose sheets of typographic material—borders, spots, initials and type matter of many faces and sizes—intended to be cut and pasted up into layouts that show just how the finished ad will look in type.

To the advertiser the Layout Kit is both a convenience and a revelation as to the results that can be secured very economically with Linotype decorative material.

To the newspaper it is practical economy because it furnishes the advertiser a means of laying out his ads in a way that will be exact and readily understood.

There are several ways in which the Newspaper Advertising Department can make use of this idea.

It can use the Kit itself to lay out special ads and design special typographic treatments for its customers.

It can purchase a number of Kits for distribution to its customers.

It can get up its own Layout Kit, showing just the material available in its own plant, and distribute that to its customers.

The Layout Kit is designed solely as a convenience for Linotype users and is sold at the nominal price of $1.00.

INDIANAPOLIS NEWS STAFF AT CHRISTMAS DINNER—114,625 LINE TOTAL GIVES NEW MANAGING EDITOR OF WAUSAU RECORD-HERALD.

Tip O'Neill, formerly editor-in-chief of the Lansing, Mich., Capital News, and later with the State Journal, has become managing editor of the Record-Herald. Mr. O'Neill came from that paper several years ago and joined the Booth Publishing Company syndicate. Two years ago he aided in starting the Lansing Capital News, had charge of its editorial page and later became editor of the entire paper. Some time after Charles N. Halsted of the Lansing State Journal purchased control of the News, Mr. O'Neill left, later joining the Journal business department.

Mr. O'Neill is moving his family, to the Badger state in February. When many other magazine writers failed in attempts to interview C. M. Hayes of Jackson, the world's largest wheel maker, and who started life as a telegraph operator at $35 a week, O'Neill won for the Success last June.

EMPLOYEES JOIN BUILDING AND LOAN.

More than four hundred and sixty employees of the Chicago Tribune have joined the Medill Building and Loan Association. They have purchased 11,623 shares of stock. Twenty-three members have secured approval of loans on homes, the total amounting to $112,376. Of this amount $2,800 has already been paid out. Only $25,000 of the $50,000 limit has been advanced by the Tribune through the purchase of Class D stock, which pays a semiannual dividend of 4 per cent and one-half per cent. Weeklies of members amount to $2,800 and this amount is to be considered considerably by interest payments.

This new number will contain many refinements and improvements. It will list every occurrence and development of importance and interest to publishers, editors, advertising managers, circulation managers, advertising agencies and advertisers.

It will answer vexing questions like these—and tell when—

What were the best means of advertising promotion developed during the year?
What means were most effective in increasing circulation?
What was the tendency in labor relationships?
How much does merchandising co-operation amount to?
What is the present trend in measuring news values?
Is there an ad club in Wausau, Wis., and who is its president?
What did the important newspaper conventions discuss?
How many newspapers installed radio stations?
What new equipment was most in demand?
How many newspapers built new homes—and what kind did they build?
Did news print production capacity increase or decrease?
How many newspapers changed ownership, or consolidated?
How about agency relations?
What has the election of President Harding meant to the newspaper business?
What were some of the “good stunts” staged by newspapers?
Did advertising or subscription rates tend to go higher or lower?
Is there a new advertising agency in my territory I have overlooked?

THE FOURTH ESTATE, 232 West 59th St., N.Y.
CLEARING HOUSE OF EXECUTIVES’ IDEAS.

NEW YORK TIMES’ BUSINESS DEPARTMENT HEADS MEET IN CONFERENCE ONCE A WEEK — PLANS FOR COMING WEEK MADE — COMMITTEES REPORT.

Every Thursday morning at 11 o’clock, the various heads of the business departments of the New York Times meet in conference on the second floor to report on the previous week’s progress and to discuss ways and means for improvement of methods and for obtaining new business. Each person present represents the interests of the members of the department for which he is spokesman.

The conference was one of the means originated by Louis Wiley, business manager, to develop that esprit d’corps of the business departments in general which is now an asset of the New York Times. Hugh A. O’Donnell, assistant business manager, is chairman. The purpose of the conference is the coordination of the various departments toward the development of a closer, stronger and more effective organization and the bettering of the policy and methods of the business.

The conference serves as a clearing house in the adjustment of difficulties affecting more than one department and in the solution of problems which continually arise for settlement. The meetings are many-sided, open-minded, deliberate and fair.

When matters are presented requiring special investigation, committees are appointed with instructions to report at the next meeting. In addition, there are a number of standing committees, charged with such matters as advertising rates, censorship, employee training, reduction of errors, objectionable advertisements, time and attendance, agents’ promotion work and suggestions.

The average assignment sheet presents from thirty-five to forty matters requiring committee attention or investigation.

There is a standing invitation to all employees of the Times to suggest new plans which will increase efficiency or introduce better methods, either in the department with which they are connected or any other department. These suggestions are read at the business meetings and if they appear to have merit are referred to an individual or a committee for consideration and report. If the concensus of opinion is favorable they are passed on to the person to whom the suggestion is directed.

The result of these conferences is manifold. They bring departments into closer co-operation and permit general discussion of problems and subjects, the solution and understanding of which are of decided value to the Times.

FEWER DAILIES IN 1922, NEW AyER ANNUAL SHOWS.

American, Canadian and Newfoundland publishers are now bringing out a total of 22,358 publications, of which 17,627 are newspapers, daily, semi-weekly and weekly, according to the tables in the Ayer Newspaper Annual for 1923, now offered for distribution. Daily newspapers decreased in number during the year from 2,517 in 1922 to 2,492 in 1923, a drop of twenty-five, which is largely explained by the unfavorable reception publishers in “overnewspapered” cities have given the consolidation idea.

PUBLICITY MAN AN AUTHOR.

Robert O. Case, publicity manager of the state chamber of commerce, Portland, Or., and formerly on the staff of the Portland Oregonian, joined the ranks of fiction writers when he sold a story, "Little Songee's Big Trouble," to the Western Story Magazine recently.

"It was the surprise of my life when I received a check for $100 from the editor," said Mr. Case. The editor advised Mr. Case that the story would appear in the January 20 issue of the magazine.

The story, which is about 5,000 words long, has the scene laid in northern British Columbia, a district Mr. Case covered on hunting trips while visiting Vancouver, B. C.

COLLEGES SEND FORTY-SEVEN TO JOURNALISM.

Transferring from thirty-five other universities, colleges, and normal schools, forty-seven students went to the University of Wisconsin, Madison, this fall to enter as regular students in the course of journalism. There are religious, agricultural, or class publications which do not appear to be weekly.

NEW HOME OF ST. PAUL DAILY NEWS.

The St. Paul Daily News, one of the Clover Leaf Publications, founded 1900, is now thoroughly settled in its new half-million dollar building.

The editorial staff of the News danced into the attic, ate lemon pies and met vaudeville stars at the house-warming on January 4 in the new home of the News.

One of the features of the evening was the circulation on the street, and from the press of a "Little Pink" newspaper, written by members of the staff in celebration of their establishment in the new Daily News Building.

During the evening music for dancing was furnished by a Westinghouse RC, two-stager radio set and Magnavox, installed especially for the occasion.

The News moved all its office equipment in eight and one-half hours, beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday and completing the work at 9:30 p.m. The mechanical equipment, including eleven linotypes, two monotypes, two Ludlows, job printing plant, consisting of four presses and equipment, was all moved and installed in the new building between 7 a.m. Saturday and 8 a.m. Monday. No time was lost, and the News made every issue of the paper when it was due.

N. W. Reay is publisher of the News, W. H. Neal, business manager, and Howard Kahn, editor. The paper is represented by Hammond & Walcott in Chicago, Oscar G. Davies in Kansas City, and A. J. Norris Hill in San Francisco.

NEW YORK EDITORS WILL DISCUSS OFFICIAL NEWS.

HOW STATE PUBLICITY MAY BE PROPERLY RECORDED IN THE PRESS DEMANDS MUCH THOUGHT—SUMMARY OF LAWS SUGGESTED AS ONE REMEDY.

Members of the New York State Press Associations, the Associated Dailies, and the New York State Publishers Association have evoked deep interest in the preparation of the Watertown Daily Standard to facilitate the dissemination of official news. The topic will come for discussion at the meeting of the state a state editors' convention to be held at Albany January 23.

"It is accepted that publicity concerns itself especially with the official news, the Standard said in its editorial, "and that the lowest form of public service is to publish in full the laws of the state and the concurrent resolutions. For years now the state press has been making a crusade to publish in full the laws of the state and to the public was conducted in a bipartisan manner at a reasonable cost. But state by state these bills were let down until the costs became excessive. The result was that the pendulum swung from extremes to extremes and the whole system was wiped out."

"Accepting the merit of publicity it appears proper at this time for consideration of a substitute system which will require the province. Instead of columns of small type, often published months after the laws are presented to the press, it might provide for the publication of intelligent summaries of all laws in the form of news as it was printed."

OHIO LEGISLATIVE WRITERS ELECT NEW OFFICERS.

John T. Bourke of Cleveland was elected president of the Ohio Legislative Correspondents' Association at its recent 10th annual meeting to the convening of the eighty-fifth general assembly.

Other officers elected were: Vice-president, Howard Galbraith, Columbus; secretary, E. F. C. Darrow, Columbus; treasurer, William Steigler of the Cincinnati Times-Star, Columbus; and A. B. Kee, Columbus Ohio State Journal. The executive committee will be made up of these and William Steigler of the Cincinnati Times-Star, Columbus; Howard Lanham, Cincinnati Enquirer, and C. H. Davenport, Associated Press.

lic mendicant. The union printer, the International Typographical Union's Printers' Home at Colorado Springs, Colo.— a wonder of humanity, — is the final home of his life, where he will end his working career if his health and vigor permit. It is a quiet refuge, where he can pass his remaining days in comfort and security without worrying about the morrow.

But Richard Stearns evidently was not a union printer. He was "once publisher and owner of the greatest and most influential newspapers." This avails him nothing today, in his need. Even a place in the House of Commons could be furtive. It is not a bite to eat, unless a kindly fellow mortal—in nine cases out of ten—will give him something to eat, if he can find something to eat.

Reflect on the fate of Richard Stearns. The newspapermen of the day, including the make-up men, news editors, city editors, society editors and all the others of our clan, can only feel sorry for him, and realize that a case was made a popular hero, elected to parliament and eventually given a place in history as the champion and protector of the right of free speech.

How many of you are assured of comfort in your declining years by your present place of business? How many of you, by the terms of your contracts, will be able to spend your golden years in the quiet retreat of the Printers' Home? But the experience of this independent man, who wrote his own obituary, is instructive. He lived a full life, and Stearns appealed to the governor to prevent its signature on the ground that it would be an infringement of the rights of a British citizen. He demanded a jury trial.

Stearns was an influential newspaperman, although many of them have no sort of sympathy with the "old school" of journalism, rallied to his defense. They called his condemnation unfair, dangerous and a bad precedent. No newspaper had defended the government.

Meanwhile the imprisoned editor, from his desk in the sergeant's room where he was held pending decision on his appeal, was receiving a weekly vial of wrath against his alleged persecutors, since no effort was made to suppress his newspaper.

losts other than those published by the publisher (the respondent named in the complaint)." The court, whose opinion was rendered by Justice McReynolds, declared that "the evidence clearly shows that respondent's agency contracts were made without unlawful motive and in the ordinary course of an expanding business."

"It does not necessarily follow," Justice McReynolds continued, "because many agents have been general distributors, that their appointment and limitation amounted to unfair trade practice." Effective competition requires that traders have large freedom of action and conduct, which may increase or render insuperable the difficulties which rivals must face. The mere selection of competent, successful and exclusive representatives in the orderly course of development can cause no complaint, and when, standing alone, certainly affords no ground for complaint under the statute."

On the question of the jurisdiction of the circuit courts in acting on commissions' findings of fact, the supreme court divided, Chief Justice Taft and Justice Brandeis dissenting.

The case settled by the decision of the Supreme Court has been the subject of a hearing before the Bureau of Trade Commission, which has been in session in 1917, following an application for an injunction by competitor companies in that year.

A remarkable achievement, as a result of which the old printer never need worry about where he will land if luck turns against him. He is the recipient of an object of charity, because the Printers' Home, through the infinite patience and far-sightedness of the Printers' Home Association, has paid during his working career, make that home as much his home as the home in which you and I live. Perhaps more so, because he is a part owner, and may be said to own for himself and his family.

AN EARLY 1923 INCREASE IN MOTOR ADVERTISING.

Automotive advertising during the show week this year broke all records in New York City, according to the estimates made as The Fourth Estate went to press. A good lead advertisement appeared in a New York newspaper in New York City showed a remarkable increase over last year's line. Effective competitive advertising of car dealers has been of great importance to the history of the automobile industry. One notable feature of this automotive advertising program is the excellent copy and a sprinkling of de-lightful layout. There are some manufacturers, however, who apparently cling to the belief that solid black type bulked together is the best way to get their message across. Some of the automobile copy that appeared in copies of the paper was effective, and the publishers would have driven many a small-town merchant to blushing if it appeared over them.

One manufacturer of high-class motor cars, for instance, so greatly mistakes the modern reader for all appropriate layout that he uses a black background and white lettering. It serves, of course, to distinguish the advertisement from those that surround it. The reader gets a sense of security without attention; but it is the best opinion of typographic and layout authorities that, while such radical backgrounds do attract attention, it is not always the kind that is most favorable to the product being advertised.

The remarkable skill, ingenuity and hard work that is applied to the designing and production of automobiles bespeaks for their advertising messages the same care in their execution and arrangement. It is hardly in keeping with the fine impression made by these machines that some of the most important manufacturers remain dependent upon mere typographical grotesqueness to interest the public in their selling messages.

CIRCULATION INVESTMENTS NOW SAFEGUARDED.

The decision by the supreme court this week upholding the right of publishers to require their distributing agents to handle their papers exclusively is the last word on this vexatious question. The highest tribunal in the land quickly disapproved the compromise of the newspapers with the commission against the Curtis Publishing Company of Philadelphia, and reversed it with an earlier decision by the third court of appeals.

The gist of the situation is well expressed in the following excerpt from the supreme court ruling: "The effective competitive advertising of car dealers has been of great importance to the history of the automobile industry. One notable feature of this automotive advertising program is the excellent copy and a sprinkling of delightful layout. There are some manufacturers, however, who apparently cling to the belief that solid black type bulked together is the best way to get their message across. EDITOR PROVOKES FUN AT HOOTCH INQUIRY.

A city editor and one of his reporters on the stand in the Government's prosecution of a liquor case, brought about by the newspaper's expose of the wetness at a hotel building, nearly turned staid old Boston upside down this week.

It all started when Albert J. Gordon, news writer for the Boston Herald, dropped in at the New England Road Builders' Association banquet at the Hotel Somerset, Commonwealth avenue and saw the road builders and their guests imbibing something from nursing bottles. One of the bottles and its contents was taken to the Herald office by Gordon and he was directed to write the story.

It was "hootch," the Herald alleged in its front page story about the road building "infants." Of course every evening paper in town had its story.

NEWS NOTES OF CIRCULATORS

The Worcester Telegram presents a novel scheme for giving its suburban towns a weekly newspaper all its own. Each Thursday the Telegram presents the news of Whinsettsville, giving a full page to display advertising and news from the town. This is handled in co-operation with the Chamber of Commerce. Four columns of the eight are devoted to advertising of the merchants of Whinsettsville.

The Manitoba Free Press has inaugurated the Boys' Own Free Press, a weekly newspaper published every Thursday and devoted to news of special interest to the boys of Manitoba. Working in cooperation with the Manitoba Boys' Work Board and its many secretaries throughout the province, the Free Press plans to make the Boys' Own Free Press a factor in advancing the Canadian educational efficiency training program. A special portion of the stories will be contributed by the boys of Manitoba written from the boys' point of view, and with a special appeal to his fellow workers.

E. E. Surnier, Seattle newspaper man, is now in charge of the circulation department of the Montesano, Washington, Times-Call. A new manager will be appointed.

An interesting program has been arranged for the mid-winter meeting of the Colorado Press Association to be held January 19 and 20 at the Hotel Albany, Denver. The meetings will be of interest to newspaper editors who are members of the association for having the best front page. The $25 will be divided into three awards—a first prize of $25, a second prize of $15 and a third prize of $10, each payable in gold coins.

CIRCULATION MANAGERS IN NEW POSITIONS.

W. T. Buckley, for two years circulation manager of the Greenville, S. C., News, is leaving that paper to assume charge of the circulation of the Augusta, Ga., Chronicle. He will be succeeded by A. F. Ballentine, for eight years circulation manager of the Greenville Piedmont.

Mr. Ballentine has been prominently identified with the Circulation Managers Association of the Carolinas, having been a director of that organization, vice-president the second and president the third. He will give his entire time to the development of the Greenville News circulation.

ILL, SETS TYPE FOR PAPER AT BEDSIDE.

Fred Gardner, editor of the Fall River, R. I., News, who is confined to his bed this winter suffering from rheumatism, sets type for his newspaper by having the cases arranged at his bedside.

FARMERS READ NEWSPAPER ADVERTISEMENTS.

Out of 310 Kansas farmers who answered a questionnaire telling what they read most in publicity for stores and mills, 270 voted for newspaper advertising.

To newspapermen, any movement of nation-wide significance is interesting since it provides news of a character almost universal in its appeal. National Thrift Week, which starts on January 15th and extends through to January 23rd, is worthy of notice for it offers a drive of national importance, but also may well lay claim to being one of the most necessary of all the so-called "Weeks" we have throughout the year.

"What did you do with the bottle when you returned to the Herald office?" he was asked. "I gave everyone a smell," came the reply. Drury testified of seeing Gordon around the office that noon and of assigning him to cover the banquet that evening. "Did you find anything on your desk the next day?" "No sir, I had a bottle like that around noontime. I won't say it was on my desk. Gordon brought it to me. Drury added, "Did you open it?" "I did." He gave the same reply to questions whether he pulled the cork, smelled the contents and tasted them. "Did you ever taste liquor in your life?"

"All my life!"

"What was in the bottle?" "Good Scotch whiskey," answered Mr. Drury emphatically. [Continued from Twenty-first Page]

NEwSPAPER STORIES LEAD TO DISCOVERY OF SPNET LOST SISTER.

Newspaper publicity given to the discovery of a New York restaurateur of a long-lost sister in Chicago, led to the discovery of a second sister in Manchester, England, and the hope that a third sister would be found in South Africa. The family was scattered when the New York man left his home in Lithuania twenty-six years ago, and he believed that most of his sisters were dead.

The other sister came to New York to visit her brother, an account of the reunion published in the New York World was later published in the Manchester Evening Chronicle. The mother sent a letter to Black of 1912 Pacific street, Brooklyn, who lives in Manchester, read the story, and realized that the New York man was the brother of Mrs. Anna Forman of Manchester, who believed her sister dead for many years. Mrs. Black called her son, Mr. Black's daughter, who read the story in the Chronicle. Black called on the restaurateur and announced the discovery of a second sister.

OUTLOOK BRIGHT FOR 1923 SAYS BROOKLYN PUBLISHER.

The outlook for the New York World is very bright for 1923, says Herbert F. Gunson, vice-president and treasurer of the New York World Company, in his address on engineering in South America.

Mr. Gunson said that the outlook for newspaper advertising in South America was very bright, and that the New York World would be able to do a great deal of business in that country.

PICTURE DAILY WILL AGAIN BE SUED FOR DAMAGES.

The Picture Daily will again be sued for damages, this time for the $200,000 libel suit instituted by Arthur Perkoff and Ethel Graves Perkoff (Pat and Gray in the City) against the News Syndicate Company, publisher of the New York Daily News. The action resulted from a cartoon that appeared in the Picture Daily last season, in which the cartoonist, Ed Randall, penned an adverse comment underneath a caricature of the cartoonist, according to which he needed a favourable percentage rating on merit.

Page and Gray have instructed their attorneys to bring a new suit for damages against the daily, claiming specific damages and demanding the claim of libel per se.

The plaintiffs will claim specific damages in that they have lost the opportunity to receive damages against the daily, claiming specific damages and demanding the claim of libel per se.

The Picture Daily will again be sued for damages, this time for the $200,000 libel suit instituted by Arthur Perkoff and Ethel Graves Perkoff (Pat and Gray in the City) against the News Syndicate Company, publisher of the New York Daily News. The action resulted from a cartoon that appeared in the Picture Daily last season, in which the cartoonist, Ed Randall, penned an adverse comment underneath a caricature of the cartoonist, according to which he needed a favourable percentage rating on merit.

Page and Gray have instructed their attorneys to bring a new suit for damages against the daily, claiming specific damages and demanding the claim of libel per se.

The plaintiffs will claim specific damages in that they have lost the opportunity to receive damages against the daily, claiming specific damages and demanding the claim of libel per se.

OUTLOOK BRIGHT FOR 1923 SAYS BROOKLYN PUBLISHER.

The outlook for the New York World is very bright for 1923, says Herbert F. Gunson, vice-president and treasurer of the New York World Company, in his address on engineering in South America.

Mr. Gunson said that the outlook for newspaper advertising in South America was very bright, and that the New York World would be able to do a great deal of business in that country.

Dispatched First Press
Telegram for British Association.

Sir Edmund Robbins, for thirty-seven years a member of the British Association of England, who died recently at Bognor, claimed the distinction of being the first to publish the First Press telegram in behalf of the association, on the morning of February 17.
He was succeeded by a man who was long associated with the British government in obtaining possession of the Theory of Evolution.

There is nothing, and the establishment of such a fund as I propose, would be the first logical and tangible movement ever taken in the world of journalism. It would be the means, through the interest created in the common well-being of all newspaper men, for the healthy discussion and interchange of deep ideas and suggestions not only for the splitting of the craft and the placing of it on a firmer basis, but also for the general improvement of the editorial sphere of every newspaper in the country.

This is not in any sense a labor union that I am proposing, such as the News Writers Union that exists in Boston and perhaps in one or two other places, but a professional association along the lines of similar organizations among other professional men. It should find universal favor among newspaper men, and should have the unanimous approval, cooperation and sup-sort of newspapers and their publishers from coast to coast. It is high that the “fourth estate” came into its own.

A fund of this character can be started immediately, through a systematic organization embracing the entire United States and Canada. It would be given a special impetus by any one or any group of immensely wealthy newspaper publishers and owners. Heart is one. Scrip is another. Pullter is a third.

Kansas is a rich, responsive field—it is best covered by The

THE JEWISH MORNING JOURNAL
An American newspaper read by the most intelligent and prosperous class of Jews in New York City.

City; Bernard J. Mullaney, manager, Industrial Relation and Publicity Department, Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company, Chicago; Edward S. LaBart, director of publicity, Thomas E. Wilson and Company, Chicago, and E. Allen Frost, general counsel, for the Associated Advertising Clubs of Chicago. Talks on problems of the Third District were given by a number of the delegates to the Third District convention.

One of the features of the simul- taneous convention was the advertising exhibit which was on display at a general convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at its national convention in New York last summer. The exhibit was brought to Washington. The department of commerce also made a showing of the work it is doing in advertising and merchandising.

A letter from Secretary of Commerce Hoover to Mr. Stevenson spoke of a meeting of the American Board of Trade and presented his attendance on the last day, was received by Mr. Wholley. It read:

"I had wished to express personally my endorsement of the department of commerce in the work of the advertising.

"The definite rise in standards of advertising and the development of advertising as a service to the consumer have been outstanding accomplishments.

"I am asking Dr. Klein to convey to you the desire of the department to co-operate in the many fields to which your organization can and does render real public service."

On Wednesday both organizations meet President Harding in greeting at the White House. The President received the delegates most cordially, calling many of them by their first names as new friends. As a publisher, President Harding had known them personally, and he told the visitors that the renewed contact had served to bring him back to his "old atmosphere." As a special courtesy, the President arranged to have the delegates shown through the private portions of the White House.

permanent organization of the Third District of the Associated Advertising Clubs was effected with the drafting and adoption of a constitution and by-laws, and the election of officers and appointment of committees, at the close of Wednesday's meeting. Officers elected were: F. X. Wholley, Washington, president; P. E. Hove, Jr., Richmond, treasurer, and Norman M. Parrott, Baltimore, secretary. Committees appointed, with their chairmen, were: Convention, Joseph Schick; program, Howard C. Cone; publicity, Kemper Cowing; women's committee, Mrs. J. K. Bowman.

The Third District will hold a convention at Atlantic City in June, at the time the national commission is in session there.

Maurice E. Votav, formerly instructor in journalism at the University of Arkansas, is enroute to Shanghai, China, where he will organize, in St. John's Episcopal University, the first school of journalism in that country.

In connection with the course a weekly newspaper has already been established at the university, it is known as the Daily and is published by native students.
DOMINANT SUPREMACY

The uninterrupted, proven preference of advertisers, both local and national, for the Cincinnati TIMES-STAR was evidenced again in the year 1922 by 10,459,407 lines of display advertising. This is 1,921,031 lines more than the lineage published by the second paper, including both daily and Sunday editors,—or six days against seven.

1921 was the Banner Year in the history of the TIMES-STAR, with 182,497 lines more than 1922. Yet this amount, by which the year just closed falls short of its 1921 record, is less than one tenth of the amount by which it still leads its nearest competitor.

The display advertising published by the TIMES-STAR in 1922 is 1,880,823 lines more than the largest amount ever published by any other paper in the city,—8,578,584 lines having been published by the second paper in 1920.

That the dominant leadership of the TIMES-STAR is not temporary, accidental, or fluctuating, but that it is continuous, progressive, and permanent, is proved by the display advertising space records for the past fifteen years:

From which it appears that during this period The Daily News' excess of gain over that of its nearest competitor was 100,722.

To the experienced advertiser there is added interest and encouragement in the fact that during the last six months of the year The Daily News turned an earlier loss in lineage to gains, month by month, which by the end of the year placed the lineage of the whole year 470,424 lines in excess of the year 1921, thereby reflecting a corresponding improvement in business conditions generally up to the very end of the year. Classified Advertising

More people placed their "want-ads" in The Daily News in 1922 than in any other daily newspaper in Chicago, as is evidenced by the total number of individual advertisements printed by each of the recognized daily want-ad mediums. Here are the figures:

From which it appears that in 1922 The Daily News led its nearest competitor, The Daily Tribune, by a significant margin, with 38,858 ads.

The figures quoted are compiled by The Advertising Record Co., an independent audit service maintained by all the Chicago newspapers.

The Daily News' year-in and year-out advertising leadership among the daily newspapers of Chicago bears convincing testimony to its pre-eminent power of service in every line of business in which general publicity is essential to success, whether it be a matter of personal merchandising or investment.

THE DAILY NEWS—FIRST IN CHICAGO
PRESS RESPONSIBILITY AS LORD BURNHAM SEES IT.

BRITAIN'S MOST FAMOUS PUBLISHER DISCUSSES WORLD NEWS VALUES ON VISIT—HAS NO "MISSION," HE SAYS, AND INTENDS "JUST TO LOOK AROUND."

World understanding of international relations must in large part be achieved by further refinements in newsgathering, in the opinion of Viscount Burnham, proprietor of the London Daily Telegraph and president of the Newspaper Proprietors Association of London, who is now making his first visit to New York in thirty years. Although he carries the mantle of fame as Britain's foremost publisher and has taken upon his shoulders a literal world responsibility in his varied interests as a public figure, Lord Burnham radiates a vigor that is obviously far from being taxed.

As a man of cosmopolitan sympathies and understanding he is one not easily put to the point for a new international consciousness to be achieved through the press.

Lord Burnham has a sort of compact keenness—to coin a word —that should be good inducement for use on men of his type. He is by no means the hyper-august person he is usually depicted. His career indicates him to be, but he is immeasurably keen and vital.

Five feet seven, or a little more, he stands not high, but firmly. A cool complexion, dark hair and sparkling eye are marks of his sixty-six years. The cutting power of the coming generation of forty-five. The fact that he retains all the color he had as a boy or that he has become grey only after he has "arrived" speaks volumes of description. In short, he seems to have been born to draft by law, but never, however, that uses the reason always and the heart but seldom.

Coming to the United States almost immediately after playing an important part at the fourth session of the International Labor Organization at Geneva, Lord Burnham brings his "world insight" at its keenest. He is to observe and absorb, he said, pressing delight that his affairs are so arranged that he would have to do so.

"No, I haven't any mission," he smiled. "I expect just to visit and look around.

The huge press or ten days Lord Burnham is to spend in America has become a crowded, busy interval in a journey of many months, but he is bound to fulfill another of those engagements which so frequently call him to far corners of the earth. Some years ago, it seems, he promised the Imperial Association at Jamaica that he would address them, and now he is on a journey of more than a month to keep his word.

"Stupendous" was the word he applied to the growth of American journalism since his last visit to the United States thirty years ago. Although he was the leading figure and the inspiration of the Imperial Press Congress in Canada in 1920, at which he formed many lasting friendships with scores of publishers from the United States, he did not step across the border.

Intelligent and conscientious presentation of the news of nations, a subject which is swiftly rising to a plane of first importance in the minds of far-seeing journalists and statesmen, has long been a chief interest with Lord Burnham.

The telegraphic news as a whole are concerned, I admit the impecchment," he declared during a discussion of this subject with a group of American editors last Thursday.

It has been cold weather and storms along the Atlantic Coast the last few days, and men and animals have struggled against the weather, but Lord Burnham radiates a vigor that is obviously far from being taxed.

Business will be good in 1923, say industrial leaders in Philadelphia.

Business conditions which will surpass any enjoyed in Philadelphia since the war are forecast for 1923 by leaders in many different branches of industry.

Conditions sounder fundamentally than at any time in recent years—prospects that the year just starting will break all building records—and other encouraging signs are in evidence in Philadelphia, the third largest city in the United States.

Producers of goods of every kind—foodstuffs, clothing, furniture, automobiles and other things—can reach the buyers in this great market by advertising in The Bulletin—for The Bulletin enters nearly every home in and around Philadelphia.

Ohio newspapermen, publishers of both dailies and weeklies, will spend the first day of their annual midwinter conferences, January 29-31, on the campus of Ohio State University at Columbus. They will view an exhibit of community papers to be judged for farm news, make-up and editorial content by Professor Bristow Adams of the New York State College of Agriculture as an innovation of Ohio Farmers Week.

Meetings of the editors are scheduled for afternoon and evening of January 29 at Ohio State University. Annual sessions of the Associated Ohio Dailies are scheduled all day Tuesday and Wednesday at the Hotel Deshler. As scheduled, the Monday programs are being arranged by the department of journalism and the agricultural extension department of Ohio State University with the cooperation of officers of the Buckeye Press Association, which will preside over Monday’s dinner meeting in Ohio Union.

Meetings of the editors are scheduled for afternoon and evening, including: Professor Bristow Adams; New York State College of Agriculture; Professor Russell Lord, editor and assistant, agricultural publications, Ohio State University; H. A. Pauley of the Miami Union, Troy, Ohio; Professor L. C. Gettel, Extension Professor of Journalism, Ohio State University; Lucas Beecher, the Toledo Blade; E. W. W. Walls, the Sandusky Register; A. C. Chenoweth, the Madison Press; Ralph W. Peters, the Defiance Crescent; R. K. Barnesville Enterprise; R. W. Gifford, the Westerville Public Opinion.

Publicity reports of both officers and committees, followed by election of new officers, will take up the opening session of the thirty-eighth annual meeting of the Associated Ohio Dailies at 10 a.m. January 30, with F. W. Bush, editor of the Athens Messenger, presiding.

Karl A. Bickel, president of the United Press Association, will address the afternoon meeting on “Combining the World for News.” Other speakers will be: R. C. Snyder of the New York Reflector-Herald; Leonard, editor of the Associated Ohio Dailies; Carlisle N. Greig of the Cleveland Plain Dealer; Professor Kline, professor of journalism at the University of Colorado; Guy E. Newark of Columbus.

Melville E. Stone, former general manager of the Associated Press and president of the Associated Ohio Dailies; Carlisle N. Greig of the Cleveland Plain Dealer; Professor Kline, professor of journalism at the University of Colorado; Guy E. Newark of Columbus.

PUBLICITY REPRESENTATIVES GIVE INITIAL LUNCHEON.
The New York Theatrical Press Representatives held their first luncheon on January 12, when Augustus Thomas, executive chairman of the Theatrical Producing Managers’ Association, was the guest of honor.

Wells Hawks, president of the press representatives’ organization, presided, introducing Mr. Thomas. During the luncheon a custom of the London Beefsteak Club was introduced and Mr. Thomas cut the beefsteak pudding. Mr. Wells remarked it was the first time it had been made a ceremony in this country.

Mr. Thomas’ address was reminiscent of the days when he was a press agent, principally for the mind reader, George Washington, Bishop, recalling some interesting stunts. He gave his views of the ethics which must govern the work of publicity men, condemned a tendency to cynicism as destructive of ideals and received a warm response when he announced the whole association of press representatives would shortly be called on to stand back of the movement for a national theater. He promised an important announcement on the subject soon.

TEN YEAR OLD PUBLISHES NEWSPAPER IN DAKOTA.
Grafton, N. D., has a third newspaper, known as the Herald, edited by Donald Thomas, ten years old. BILL WOULD CUT RATES FOR SESSION LAWS PRINTING.
Senator Caleb H. Baumes of Newburgh, N. Y., has introduced a bill, which reduces the present rate charged for publication of session laws, summons and legal orders and notices by bond. The bill, if passed, will reduce the rate of printing by bond. The bill, if passed, will reduce the rate of printing.
THE YEAR 1922 finds THE WORLD in practical domination of the greatest area of retail sales in America, so far as the growth of its advertising indicates its usefulness to the merchants of Greater New York.

Carrying a total lineage of 17,244,090 THE WORLD closed the year with a gain of 2,723,496 lines, an increase of approximately 19% over advertising carried during 1921. This increase is more than 233,000 lines in excess of the gain registered during the year by THE WORLD's nearest competitor.

In the matter of individual transactions alone, an infallible test of a newspaper's contact with its public, THE WORLD set an enviable record, as the following table giving the number of separate advertisements run during the year will attest:

And during the year, THE WORLD increased its own lead over 1921 by printing 249,140 more advertisements, a sizable advertising business in itself. It is an achievement of no little importance to have served as the trusted intermediary in 1,712,181 separate transactions, each based upon belief in the ability of THE WORLD's columns to produce results.

In the matter of gains in advertising lineage, the leadership of THE WORLD is even more apparent, as the following year-end comparison indicates:

This gain in lineage came as the climax of a period during which, for eight consecutive months, THE WORLD outdistanced the fourteen newspapers of New York in advertising increases.

That it is indicative of a concerted move on the part of far-sighted advertisers to take full advantage of the highly concentrated service offered by THE WORLD and THE EVENING WORLD is further borne out by a gain of 53,410 lines registered by the latter paper in the month of December alone.

By every standard of comparison common to advertising practice, these two newspapers offer the advertiser a value, per dollar expended, unapproachable for effectiveness in the most conspicuously active market in the country.
YOUNGSTOWN IS RICH IN THIS ONE MAN.

ROBINSON, VINDICATOR’S ADVERTISING MANAGER, TIPI FIES THE COURAGE AND FAITH THAT CHARACTERIZE HIS NEWSPAPER — LOST TONGUE, BUT STILL TALKS.

For many years the claim of the Youngstown, Ohio, Vindicator to be the “best little paper in the country” has received at least partial corroboration from the local and national advertisers who have from year to year added to its growth and progress. The Vindicator’s approach to the advertising prospect has long been distinguished by a sort of convincing directness that is still fairly common among newspapers, but until the recent visit to New York of the Vindicator’s advertising manager, R. E. Robinson, no full knowledge of the spirit that has brought this remarkable result was available.

As he winds up thirteen years with the Vindicator, Mr. Robinson is recovering from an ordeal of personal tribulation that has established him among the richest men in the world. It is not the sort of wealth that most people distinguish Mr. Robinson and reveals the spirit of the Vindicator forward; of that wealth he has just a bit more than a modicum, but he is not used to it. Human courage and simple faith the man is opulent beyond ordinary human appreciation.

Mr. Robinson was forced from his life of activity into a hospital by a serious operation for cancer of the tongue. His friends and physicians had told him that either his tongue or his life were at stake, and life was so sweet to him that he did not hesitate to gamble with the surgeon’s knife, even though it was a foregone conclusion that, as a man who earned his living talking, he would be deprived of his most essential physical instrument.

Robinson was in the hospital a long time. His friends and his doctors wisely hoped that there might be some way for him to hold onto his life and his tongue, nurses first feared, then marvelled. The husky patient stubbornly refused that fate. His health had been weakened by the operation and he had been unable to work. Robinson was determined not to allow the operation to weaken his ability to advertise, and he did not let his condition interfere with his work.

This policy is reflected in the exceptionally constructive campaign the Vindicator is running in The Fourth Estate. Mr. Robinson is the “idea man” for that, and he has a Youngstown advertising agency consisting of ideas. They show exactly why Robinson’s faith in Youngstown is justified.

“Add to that the fact that I’m working for the best little paper in the world and you’ll know how I feel about the Vindicator,” said Mr. Rob. “William F. Mayor, president of the Vindicator company, is the man to whom I attribute this.”

“I’m going to keep on, and expect to be here fifty years from now,” he whispered this erstwhile “hopeless case.”

“Practicing a little Coue, eh?” it was suggested to him. And the answer was characteristic of a man of this sort — and typical of the spirit that has made journalism a magnetic profession — “Coue? Hell, no! I’m practicing Robinson!”

LONDON MAIL TO ISSUE A DAILY ABOARD NINE CUNARD LINERS.

A daily edition of the London Mail will be published aboard nine Cunard liners in March. Each edition will contain 64 pages and will be distributed to the passengers aboard the liners. The publication will be known as the London Mail’s Atlantic Edition.

The present Cunard Bulletin, which was established in 1904, contains 32 pages, and is printed on shore with the exception of the last four pages, which are printed on board ship. The London Mail’s Atlantic Edition will be printed in the United Kingdom and will be distributed to the passengers aboard the liners.

Newspaper in Astoria, Oregon, began publication Thursday, after the devastation of that city by fire last month — an improvement that makes it possible to rebuild the city with many improvements that were hitherto impossible.

The newspapers are among the heaviest sufferers in the fire. Losing no time, the Astoria made arrangements to set up its linotype in an adjoining store, whereas the operators proceeded to get out the first edition. The newspapers were available to the passengers aboard the ships, and the newspapers were available to the passengers aboard the ships, and the newspapers were available to the passengers aboard the ships.

Suggestions for the new Astoria appear in the newspaper columns, furnishing an abundance of material for the newspapers to keep Astorians interested in remaining there. One of the Morning Astorians’ readers even went so far as to suggest erecting a memorial of the devastation, and it is possible that the city will be placed in one of the city parks as a memorial of the occasion.

ANOTHER PICTURE RADIO TRIED IN WASHINGTON.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF PRESIDENT HARDING AND SECRETARY DENBY BROADCASTED—BY USE OF POWERFUL STATION PICTURES COULD BE SENT ACROSS THE ATLANTIC.

Plans for the utilization by the Government for an invention for the radio transmission of photographs, half tones and other pictures are being considered by high officials of the navy.

Secrecy regarding a demonstration on December 12 of the invention of C. Francis Jenkins, a Washington scientist, has just been removed by the Secretary of the Navy, H. H. Denby, who has made available to the press and to members of Congress an opportunity to utilize the invention for their own purposes. The demonstration, which was conducted by a member of the Anacostian Society, was witnessed by representatives of the government, including the Secretary of the Navy and the Postmaster General. The pictures broadcast were of President Harding and Secretary Denby.

The demonstration was conducted by a member of the Anacostian Society, who had previously demonstrated the invention to the Secretary of the Navy and the Postmaster General. The pictures broadcast were of President Harding and Secretary Denby. The demonstration was witnessed by representatives of the government, including the Secretary of the Navy and the Postmaster General.

Four pictures in all were broadcast. Two were photographs, one of President Harding and the other of Secretary of the Navy. The remaining two were halftones, which were broadcast from the Anacostian Society's laboratory and then printed in the developing room.

A most interesting feature was a demonstration by one of Mr. Jenkins' assistants of his ability to identify the picture being sent by sound. It had been developed earlier in experiments that the picture impulses gave off a series of "groans" that each picture had its characteristic sound, which could be recognized after a few repetitions.

The sending apparatus, consisting of a stereopticon-like machine, projects the picture across a photo-electric cell in steady, definite impulses. With each sweep the projected image is moved slightly to the side, only a thin slice of the image being across the cell at one time. The varying intensity of light caused by the successive "pulse" shadows caused correspondingly varying impulses to be broadcast.

At the receiving end an ordinary radio receiver, on the diaphragm of which a microphone had been mounted, was used. Projected on the mirror was a screen carrying a series of light sensations, and the mirror as it oscillated with the diaphragm caused the light beam to fluctuate across a filtering element and thence through rotating prismatic rings onto the sensitive photographic plate. In this manner, the light impulses are laid down side by side as they are received from the original picture.

NORTHERN EDITORS PLAN FINE MEETING.

Every angle of newspaper work will be discussed by editors qualified to lay down the rules of the press at the annual meeting of the Northern Minnesota Editorial Association, at Red Lake Falls on January 26 and 27, according to Secretary A. G. Rutledge.

"We expect the largest attendance we ever had, and will form plans for our program this year, including the summer outing," says Mr. Rutledge.

IOWA AD CLUB ELECTS.

Robert Armstrong has been elected president of the Greater Cedar Rapids Advertising Club, succeeding F. H. French, who has served for two years and vice-president elect.

John D. York and Harold J. Rowe were elected treasurer and secretary respectively, both men having held office for the last year. Six men who were elected to serve with the officers as directors were W. L. Frankel, E. C. Hoover, W. F. Main, John Siebke, Harry Corot and Herbert Slusman.

PARKING LAW TRAPS THREE.

Among motorists "tagged" in a round-up last week to enforce new and drastic parking regulations at Bridgeport, Ct., were two prominent former newspapermen of that city, "Ty" Hettinger, former sporting editor of the Bridgeport Telegram, and Charles J. Haynes, former managing editor of the same publication. Mr. Hettinger, who was driving a "Viget-ray" car, was caught in the police parking net.

The Del-Mar-Via Press Association and the Maryland Press Association are planning to hold a joint session in January. There will be a business meeting in the morning, and after luncheon, and then a dinner in the evening.
24 Million Lines of Advertising

DURING the year 1922 The Kansas City Star—morning, evening and Sunday—carried a total of more than 24 million agate lines of paid advertising—a gain of nearly two million lines as compared with 1921.

Analysis of the figures indicates that increases occurred in each of three divisions—Local, Foreign and Classified.

BURNHAM TALKS ON IMPROVING WORLD NEWS.

news from this country is handled abroad. When it was suggested that the British press was not so neglectful of American affairs as the Continental journals, Lord Burnham denied it and took refuge in his belief that British newspapers should give American dispatches much greater consideration than they have in the past.

Lord Burnham's Daily Telegraph, however, has for some time been distinguished by its presentation of news from this side. Nearly twenty years ago he established the New York World, the American Telegraph Company, which was owned by Lord Burnham and his partners. It was a failure, but it established the American Telegraph Company as a significant force in international news.

"I have been greatly impressed by the amount of foreign news the big American dailies give," Lord Burnham commented. "The exhaustive telegraphic news is in many of the papers is quite remarkable."

On the way over on the Olympic, newsteam, the extensive advertisement held with William Marconi in England Sunday night by officials of the American Telegraph Company in New York reached the passengers. It had a deep significance for Lord Burnham.

"All these things are bringing the world closer together. Under the arrangement there was a singular thing to hear of this new wireless achievement on the way to England when I was returning to this country. The British press was represented, editorial, advertising, circulation, the counting rooms, the composing rooms, the stereotyping departments, pressrooms, mail and delivery."

Building League Extends Use of Newspapers.

OHIO ASSOCIATION'S REPORT COPY USED IN 1922 WAS DIRECTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR LARGE DIVIDENDS—WILL CONFINE THEMSELVES TO NEWSPAPERS ENTIRELY.

The biggest dividends received by Ohio building and loan associations last year resulted from newspaper advertising, according to the advertising committee of the Ohio Building and Loan Association. The last month of the year, in which the greatest amount of newspaper space was used, one Columbus newspaper received 27,000 lines of building and loan copy.

A year ago only about eight percent of the building and loan associations in Ohio were using paid newspaper advertising, while today more than 70 percent are buying newspaper space, according to E. M. Baugher of New York, chairman of the advertising committee of the Ohio Building and Loan Association, and editor of the Ohio Building and Loan News.

Out with the yard-sticks, the lead pencils and other advertising novelties, so that the money herefore expended in these novelties may go into legitimate newspaper advertising, in the slogan of the advertising committee of the building and loan associations. Every building and loan association in the state is to be urged to get into their local papers with sufficient space to tell the story of thrift and savings. "We expect to have every building and loan association in Ohio using paid newspaper advertising within the next year," declared Mr. Baugher. It has proven its worth and we have found that it is the best and cheapest medium of advertising now available to financial institutions.

PNEUMATIC TUBE SYSTEM ON EAST SIDE IN OPERATION.

The east side line of the pneumatic tube system at the New York post office was put in operation Monday, completing the system throughout the entire city of New York, from the Battery to 125th street, including the tube line between New York and Brooklyn. The pneumatic tube system in operation at the New York post office from 1898 until service was suspended by former Postmaster General Burleson on June 30, 1918, resumed operation on the west side line, beginning October 2, 1922.

It is the fact that New York is already enjoying the benefit of the tube system that has made Philadelphians so bitter in their denunciation of the obstacle the post office places in the way of their restoration in that city.

COUE GUEST OF WASHINGTON SCRIBES.

TELLS THEM HOW TO IMPROVE "EVERY DAY IN EVERY WAY"—WHILE THEY WITHOLD VERDICT AS TO MERITS OF PLAN BUT AGREE COUE IS "REGULAR FELLOW."

Coueism underwent its acid test in this country when its dapper originator from France appeared before the Washington newspaper correspondents at the National Press Club in Washington immediately following his arrival at the national capital.

The "hard boiled" scribes immediately surrounded the little doctor from Nancy, whose name has become as world renowned as those of kings. Subsequent experiments and experiences were admitted by all concerned to have been mutually interesting and entertaining.

M. Coue's first patient was E. W. Creecy, a retired business man, who was introduced by Avery Marks, Jr., of the Washington Times, a former president of the club. Mr. Creecy presented his right hand with the explanation that his fingers had become rigid through an accident some years ago. Dr. Coue carefully and sympathetically bent the paralysed, and instructed Mr. Creecy as to the thoughts he should think and the words he should utter, while attempting to exercise his fingers every day.

There is no doubt you will be cured if you do that," he added encouragingly and confidently. Later discussions covered a wide range of ailments and general drawbacks to which the flesh is heir. Mr. Mark's, whose forehead is gradually extending backward, brought up the question of baldness, and was promptly assured by Dr. Coue that the "day by day" recipe had worked substantial benefits with many likewise afflicted. The ravages of old age generally, he declared, could also be stayed off in course through the thoughtful and persistent use of his method.

An account of his own cure of an acme of hubris developed a lively interchange of ideas. The cure was effected, Dr. Coue explained, as he was bending a man to pick up a bottle of wine. Theodore Tiller, noted for profound anti-Volsted sentiments, said that the act in itself so related to cure the most stubborn cases of irresponsibility that any magical sentence accompanying surprise was occasioned when the doctor calmly took the pistol in his pocket, produced the "makings" and proceeded to roll a cigarette.

"Smoking does not bother me," he said smilingly. "I've been smoking fifty years—but it might hurt you."

The little super-optimist disclaimed the honor of midfield man, also, of the idea of making an "obsession" of his duties for life and health. He said he was glad to have a little of certain mild mysticism in religious tests whose teachings in some respects closely paralleled his views. In answer to one of the questioners, he expressed the conviction that some of the speculations by some of his followers of Jewish and Christian were partly due to autosuggestion.

In general, the abstinence from excessive claims for his system, his modest demeanor, and his frank and rational manners, convinced many of the correspondents, who have commonly wrestled in the perpetuation of the professional charlatan. With characteristic caution, they withheld verdict as to the merits of the system, but unanimously conceded its founder was a "regular fellow."

AD MEN TOLD TO REACH OUT FOR TRADE IN SOUTH.

Washington business men, working through its advertising forces, were advised to reach out for the trade of the South, in an address by Dr. Clarence J. Owen, director of the Southern Commercial Congress, delivered at luncheon of the Washington Advertising Club Wednesday.

"Until now Washington has lost an opportunity to become a really great commercial and financial center," said Dr. Owen, "because she has not brought to her doors the trade of her great hinterland, which is the South.

"You can tear down your cities and they will be rebuilt; but tear down your back country and grass and weeds will spring up in the streets and birds will build their nests in the marts of trade."

FRANCIS X. WHOLEY, president of the Third District of the Associated Advertising Clubs, presided.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON POST OFFICE WANTS $575,000.

MODEST $75,000 IS ASKED IN RIDER TO SENATE BILL, BUT A COVER-UP BID FOR HALF MILLION IS IN MEASURE, ALSO—STEEENERSON MAY STAY.

An amendment providing for the continuation of the joint postal commission and appropriation of $75,000 for its maintenance was attached to the senate post office bill last Saturday. The amendment was offered by Senator McKellar of Tennessee.

Publishers looking for adequate investment basis for their repeated pleas for a reduction in the present burdensome rates on newspapers and othersmatter sanguine as to any definite results to follow Saturday's action. The amendment specifically provides that the amount carried shall not be exceeded in expenses incurred during the last fiscal year.

Figures submitted by the joint postal commission itself last December were called for an appropriation of $963,000 as a minimum amount necessary to conduct the investigations into the costs of various classes of mail matter. As the only test weighing conducted by the commission was that of Baltimore several months ago, without definite results, all of the publishers believe that the $75,000 will be wasted.

There is, however, a provision in the post office bill that calls for an appropriation of approximately $500,000 for additional clerical hire and fifty extra inspectors, to be regarded in some quarters as having been put in by the forces of the joint postal commission, with the intention to use it in conducting the weighing inquiry, and, as such, constituting a basis for an open request for $575,000 in all for the joint commission. A provision was made to pay for services of the Post Office Department without traveling expenses of the Post Office Department.

Other phases of the situation are of the utmost interest to the publishers, a study of which reveals a lively interest of certain members of the commission. Congressman Steenerson of Minnesota, a vigorous and efficient chairman of the commission, and chairman of the house post office committee, will leave Congress at the end of the session, in all likelihood, as head of the commission for another term.

Other phases of the situation are of the utmost interest to the publishers, a study of which reveals a lively interest of certain members of the commission. Congressman Steenerson of Minnesota, a vigorous and efficient chairman of the commission, and chairman of the house post office committee, will leave Congress at the end of the session, in all likelihood, as head of the commission for another term.

In the case of the joint commission, the attitude of the Republican's obviously determines the future of the commission, with the idea that Steenerson's successor will be a sympathetic successor to the publisher's request for a lower postal rate.

There has been some talk of retaining Steenerson's services as a postal expert, following the end of his congressional term. This, and other possible readjustments are not to the comfort of the publishers, especially as the commission seems to have been well prepared for the joint postal commission as probably designed for the retention of the services of present members on the Commission. The rates for lower rates, which have shown a surprising ability to attach every conceivable expense to the publishers, regardless of the fact that what now seems and other elective government officials have enormously large deficits by the official report of the post office department.

Forward Graphic Art Service

Beginning Sunday, February 4, 1923, the Jewish Daily Forward will publish a Graphic Art Section as a supplement to its regular Sunday Edition.

The Forward, as the leading Jewish daily in the country, is the first Jewish newspaper to show this aggressiveness in introducing a special Graphic Art feature. The graphic section will appear in all editions simultaneously, and from present indications, the Forward will command on those days a circulation of 225,000, which is the largest Sunday circulation in its history.

To advertisers of national scope, who are interested in the vast Jewish market of more than 3,600,000 population, The Forward Graphic Art Section presents an unusual opportunity by which to reach the greatest portion of the Yiddish reading public throughout the United States, at a low lineage cost, unparalleled in the domain of graphic space rates.

In addition, the Forward offers to the national advertiser, a merchandising service in any one or in all of eleven principal cities where the Forward dominates, even to the exclusion of the local media.

SOUTHERN PAPER TO HAVE MODEL NEW BUILDING.

STEEL STRUCTURE ALREADY ERECTED FOR HOME OF CLARKSBURG EXPOSITOR—NEW PRESS AND MODERN EQUIPMENT WILL BE IMPORTANT FEATURES.

Within a few months the Clarksburg, W. Va., Expositor will move into its new home which is now under construction at Hewes street, between Third and Fourth streets. There will be light on all sides of the new six-story building, which will be fireproof in every detail and the basement and main floor have been so planned that the building will be capable of housing a newspaper plant to function at high efficiency.

The building will be in the Adam style of architecture, and the front will be of Indiana limestone, with four large windows, a main entrance, and just beyond a protected vestibule with revolving doors.

The editorial, composing, stereotyping, and press rooms of the new plant will be closely co-ordinated units. The mechanical equipment of the three newspaper departments will be new, and that in case of emergency a duplicate set of machinery can be thrown into operation to produce the newspapers.

In the composing room there will be provision for eleven type composition machines. Three of these will be devoted exclusively to setting advertising copy, and setting departments new modern office furniture will be installed. The remainder will be doubly equipped. There will be a thirty-six-page composing room plus an extra composing room.

The basement will have a storage room with a capacity of three cars of news print. This news print will be so handled that it will come directly into the proper position eight feet above the presses and can be swung into place with minimum effort.

W. Guy Tetricker is publisher of the Expositor, representing A. E. Clayden in the East and John W. Hunter in the West.

SYRACUSE HOST TO NEW YORK EDITORS.

QUARTERLY CONVENTION OF WEEKLY PUBLISHERS IN CENTRAL PART OF STATE BRINGS TOGETHER GOOD GATHERING—M. V. ATWOOD, PRESIDES.

The Syracuse University department of journalism was host to the Central New York Press Association at its quarterly convention held at the College of Agriculture building of the university on Saturday. The association is an organization composed of country weekly editors and publishers. Thirty-five members were present at the meeting.

M. V. Atwood, editor of the Crotom Journal-Courier and president of the association, was in charge of the session. He spoke of the extraordinary significance of the meeting, being the 250th anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin, printer and the father of American journalism.

The first scheduled talk of the meeting was given by Professor George C. Wilson, head of the department of journalism of Syracuse University, and told of the importance of the work of the journalism students. The department of journalism is under the College of Business Administration.

"There is now a paper for almost everybody," he said. He concluded that the problems of the schools newspapers are the problems for modern education to solve.

The response to the address of welcome was given by J. C. Peck, of the Cazenovia Republican, an alumnus of Syracuse University. Charles L. Raper, dean of the College of Business Administration of Syracuse University, welcomed the association and told of the importance of the work of the journalism students. The department of journalism is under the College of Business Administration.

J. O. Simmons, professor of journalism at Syracuse, gave an interesting talk on "The Press." He spoke of the importance of the present-day newspapers because people read more newspapers and less books. He spoke of the recent changes along newspaper lines—that of the greater variety of news, national and international, being used by the metropolitan dailies, and of the great perfection in news gathering with the organization of syndicates and news gathering service.

"Make news that will right the wrongs of society, and make a specific problem of improvements in your community because the newspaper is a public utility," concluded Professor Simmons.

The regular business session of the convention then followed, resolutions were read and accepted pledging the cooperation of the association for the good of journalism. The Journal-Courier building in Philadelphia in 1926. The association again voted to accept the invitation of the Syracuse University department of journalism and hold their April meeting at the university.

The remainder of the meeting was given to a series of short talks by members of the association, and discussions on the subjects.

"GRAND OLD MAN" IS HONORED BY BOSTON POST.

EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION, WITH HEADS OF DEPARTMENTS, ATTENDS DINNER TO F. E. GOODRICH, WHOSE FIRST CONNECTION WITH PAPER DATES BACK TO 1867.

Frederick E. Goodrich, dean of Boston newspaper men and the "grand old man" of the Boston Post, celebrated his eightieth birthday and his eighty-first year as a Post man with 150 members of the Boston Post Editorial Association and heads of other departments of the paper at a testimonial banquet given on Tuesday afternoon in the Oak room of the Parker House.

The banquet, scheduled as the annual one of the association, was turned into a testimonial for Mr. Goodrich.

Forensic alliances at the expense of this and that member of the association—and some outside of it—and some outside of it—flew thick and fast, coming right on the heels of the publication of a special edition of "The Junior Post," tabloid little brother of the Post, which spared not who it "socked" nor praised.

Fellow guests with Mr. Goodrich were Arthur A. Fowlie, veteran editor of the Boston Globe, Sylvester Baxter and John Ritchie, Jr., Herbert L. Baldwin, president of the association, had general charge of the banquet, while Wilder D. Quint, editorial writer with Mr. Goodrich, officiated as toastmaster.

BIRMINGHAM TO BE HOST TO NEXT FOURTH DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The Birmingham Advertising Club has voted to invite this year's convention of the Fourth District A.A.C.W. to meet in that city. Products that are to form the menu for the Alaska press banquet for members of the Washington State Press Association in annual newspaper institute at the University of Washington, Seattle, are waiting to be set out by the editors and publishers.

The president press associations in adjoining states have been invited to the banquet, and Alaska newspapers have been asked to send representatives. Scott C. Bone, Governor of Alaska, a former newspaper man, and Governor Louis F. Hart of Washington State, have been invited as guests of honor. The menus include only Alaska products, ranging from reindeer meat to strawberry jam.

Menus will be printed on paper pulp board from the Alaska Paper and Pulp Company at Sleet River.

The institute opened Thursday and will culminate with tonight’s banquet. Separate group meetings were held for the various groups representing daily and weekly newspapers and trade publications.

Thursday, editors of trade journals held their meetings, with a business and executive session in the afternoon. Advertising occupied the attention of representatives of daily newspapers, and Thursday evening the annual smoker was held.

Yesterday’s program included round table discussions by editors of daily newspapers; a review of publications throughout the state by Dr. M. L. Drinkwater, director of the Iowa State University of Journalism, University of Washington, and the executive session of the State Press Association in the evening.

Railroad rates of a fare and a half for the round trip have been granted newspaper men from Washington, Oregon, Idaho and British Columbia attending the newspaper institute.

BARHAM, M.D., HIT STRIDE QUICKLY AS PUBLISHER.

SUDDEN DEATH OF BROTHER PUT HIM IN CHARGE OF LOS ANGELES HERALD ON SHORT NOTICE — AND HE HAS PROCEEDED TO HANG UP RECORDS ALL AROUND.

Now that newspaper statistics for the year 1922 are available there comes the story of a notable journalistic success and of a practicing physician who became a newspaper publisher.

It may be said in the beginning that a far western daily lays claim to the world’s record for advertising gains in 1922 over the year 1921. And the president and publisher of this newspaper is a former physician who prescribed and cared for his patients morning paper was something like 4,000 and the employees numbered perhaps 100.

For it is an alert and vigorous news policy, a strongly constructive editorial policy, a slogan "first with the news," and the Monotype machine that the publisher the editor and the readers alike Dr. Barham soon found his journalistic efforts crowned with extraordinary success.

For a period of less than twelve years, the Evening Herald has grown to such an extent that by the end of the year 1922 it was estimated that the largest circulation of any afternoon newspaper west of Missouri.

All of which makes it understandable that the Monotype machine has因此 been given rise in the (printing) art to that is known as the "distribution" system.

The Monotype Company originated non-distribution of type, spaces and quads; and, in order to make complete non-distribution possible in the equipment, it spent thousands of dollars and worked for several years to perfect its continuous strip feed, rule and slug mold. The value of these patents to the Monotype Company may be estimated from the fact that in the past five years more than five million dollars’ worth of Monotype Type-0 and Type-1 casters and non-distribution equipment has been sold in the United States and Canada.

When the facts are understood, no one will question the wisdom or the justice of the action of the Monotype Company in protecting itself in the use of these most valuable patents.

The granting of this injunction naturally makes any user of the Elrod machine liable; but the Monotype Company does not intend that the Elrod owner shall suffer through this action.

"THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR CIRCULATION" another record—first again!

Again, in the light of cold figures, the San Francisco Examiner towers head and shoulders above any other San Francisco newspaper. Witness the record total of over sixteen and a half million lines of advertising in 1922. And remember that this outstanding leadership applies to every form of advertising lineage—display, classified, local, foreign.

Leadership is always its own explanation. There can be but one reason for this tremendous expression of advertising preference. The San Francisco Examiner is FIRST in advertising because it is FIRST in circulation and FIRST in reader-influence.

Men of business who weigh their advertising dollars as they do merchandise, find that it pays to single out the San Francisco Examiner and double their returns. For the San Francisco Examiner, through its commanding circulation, has "first call" on the rich Northern and Central California market.

Coupled with this is a Merchandising Service Bureau that makes every advertising campaign yield full selling force. For details write direct, or get in touch with our representatives.

"THERE IS NO SUBTERFUGE FOR LINEAGE"
ERVIN WARDMAN'S SUCCESS

Contemporaries have paid the highest possible tribute to the late Ervin Wardman, vice-president of the New York Sun and Herald, who came to an untimely end February 20, 1923. The death of the great New York dailies failed to pay its respects to a man typical of the American journalist. Mr. Wardman had a way of carrying the day that distinguished him as a newspaperman. The New York state senate of 1902, which tried to kill him as the author of a new story, was afforded a convincing demonstration of this quality in action.

There is little need for going further than the New York dailies have gone in adjectival description of the man and his career. Newspaper men of the future will enshrine him as the journalist who was more than any other the occasion of a supreme court ruling that declared newspaper news sources privileged. These words are spoken from the lips of Mr. Wardman's career in the news column of the New York Sun. The editor now does not fail to appreciate the degree of success attained by a man so heartily admired in the field in which he served.

THE AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY

Civic and traffic experts who have recently suggested limitation of the use of automobiles to relieve metropolitan congestion and reduce the danger of an automobile war are wrong, according to the automobile merchants. The Automobile Merchants Association of New York, in an open letter to the automobile industry, states that if the U.S. government, Mr. Eastman, president of the association, includes the "attitude of many of the newspapers" as one of the factors likely to bring about results detrimental to the public interest, it is his opinion that the"public attitude is reflected in the newspaper and has an influence on the legislatures." Mr. Eastman outlines a procedure calculated to arrive at a fair hearing for the automobile in the press and in the form of public opinion. While it may appear to the outsider observe that the automobile association is unduly alarmed over the handicaps likely to result from present talk of traffic restrictions, the organization is in complete harmony with the public opinion that it is gearing up to prevent an unfavorable opinion that it believes is slowly developing, mounting—a course far more likely to succeed than any other attempt to remold a public opinion of this kind.

Newspaper publishers and editors in this city are as generally interested in the automobile trade's side of this problem. A community does not have to be a metropolitan to experience the problems, its restrictive laws, and its accidents. The situation as the New York automobile men see it is possibly somewhat exaggerated, or at any rate, not as acute as the situation in all communities—not because the automobile trade is entangled with any special political power, but because the laws or ordinances governing automobiles were conceived or established when the motor car was regarded as a luxury and not as a necessity.

"No one contemplating buying a car likes the feeling that possession of one would have been the equivalent of being a potential criminal," Mr. Eastman says. "Pedestrians are being led to believe that the automobile is an enemy, that the motor car is a trespasser on the streets." He goes on to point out that the safety and artistic improvement of motor cars is being "killed" by the automobile trade.

"The automobile trade will have little cause to complain of the newspapers or of public opinion."

The Sentinel, which before that time was a weekly, became a daily in 1852. From then until 1861 it was changed back to a weekly. For a few months after the change a small daily was issued by Wood & Larwill. Mr. Kessinger was circulation director of the paper and frequently wrote local news items, set the type, printed and circulated the paper.

E. T. Smith, recently with the advertising department of the Plain Dealer, will join the Literary Digest on February 1.

C. H. Powell, for the last three years chief accountant and cost accountant for the El Paso Times, has joined the advertising staff of the movie magazine, the Hollywood Citizen as assistant business manager and advertising editor.

P. W. Ingham, managing editor of the Detroit News, says the paper is publishing a series of articles explaining how the Sentinel is made and giving the names of the various departments. In the January 2 issue, the last of the series, described briefly the business offices of the Sentinel.

and also told of the many changes which several of the employees have been connected with the paper.

Although A. C. Kessinger, president of the Sentinel Company is in his eighty-first year, he is very active in the making of the paper and there are very few work days during the year that he is not in his office.

Mr. Kessinger has served with the Sentinel for the greatest period of years. He and the late F. B. Beers were associated together over half a century. Mr. Kessinger started his apprenticeship on March 16, 1856, and has been connected with the paper nearly sixty-seven years. He has been one of the proprietors since May 1864.

Mr. Kessinger was a graduate of Harvard University and has held various positions in the Sentinel Company's paper business.
NEWS REPORTS ON SCIENCE MEETING PRAISED.

EDITOR OF SCIENTIFIC PAPER CONGRATULATES NEW YORK TIMES AND NEWSPAPERS GENERALLY FOR EXCELLENT HANDLING OF TECHNICAL NEWS STORIES.

News reports on scientific subjects are being handled in a creditable manner according to J. McKeen Cattell, editor of Science, who took occasion a few days ago to compliment the New York Times and newspapers generally on a story pertaining to a meeting which took place in Boston.

The editor wrote: "As editor of Science, the official journal of the American Association for the advancement of Science, I am co-operating with the permanent and the preparation of the number containing an account of the Boston meeting, which I have thus had occasion to examine with care the reports in the "New York Times." For some twenty-five years I have been a member of the executive council of the association.

This year, the annual meeting was held in Boston by Dr. Slosson and Dr. Watson Davis, and most of the reports of the sessions were reproduced in this paper. The reports of the meetings have been the best ever published, fully equalling those of the meetings of the British Association in the English daily papers.

In this great service and for civilization, the New York Times has led, and I trust that you will permit me to express my appreciation for the work of your representative in Boston and for the skillful editing in your office, culminating in your admirable editorial article.

PUBLISHER TELLS BEST WAY TO MAKE MONEY WITH A NEWSPAPER.

"Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord" is a good quotation for a newspaper man to keep in mind, said William Allen White, publisher of the Emporia, Kan., Gazette, who was speaking before the department of journalism at the College of Emporia.

"Be scrupulously fair, considerate, kind and courteous to your enemies," continued Mr. White. "The more you hate a man the more courtesy should you show him. Avoid personalities. Discuss principles and not men."

Mr. White declared that the best way to make money with a newspaper is to practice the law of Jesus Christ.

AFFILIATED CONVENTION AT ROCHESTER SEPTEMBER 21.

The twentieth convention of the Advertising Affiliation, which includes the cities of Cleveland, Rochester, Toledo and Hamilton, Ohio, will be held in Rochester, N. Y., Friday and Saturday September 21 and 22 with the Rochester Advertising Club as host.

The date was determined upon at a recent meeting at Buffalo. There was an extended discussion of a theme for the convention. Sentiment seemed to favor building the convention around discussion of methods of "selling more at less cost." It was voted to admit clubs in small cities as associate members at a nominal fee.

MINNESOTA WANT MORE MONEY FOR ADVERTISING.

LEGISLATURE REQUESTED TO ENLARGE APPROPRIATION TO $50,000 TO EXPLOIT LAKES TO TOURISTS — BIGGEST YEAR PREDICTED — BUSINESS SHOWS GAIN.

To extend the advertising of Minnesota's lakes and care for the rapidly increasing number of tourists the legislature has been asked to appropriate $50,000 a year.

During the last two years, the state has expended $20,000 annually to carry on this work in behalf of the tourist industry, which now brings into the state more than $25,000,000 yearly, proponents of the measure point out.

With the spreading of knowledge about the attraction of the Minnesota lakes, demands upon the Ten Thousand Lakes Association, through the Minnesota Land and Lake Association, have been doubled and even trebled, they assert.

"The coming year will be the biggest in the history of the tourist industry in Minnesota," said R. R. Montgomery, president of the association, and member of the state board, at a recent meeting. "We must be prepared for the big increase in the number of visitors which we may expect. More literature, more postage, more help will be needed, as the visitors increase."

"During 1921 we used 15,000 map folders of Minnesota. So great was the number of requests for the Minnesota recreation maps last year that we found it necessary to print 35,000 copies of the map. Activities of the association practically have trebled in many respects."

"We need money to extend the advertising in Minnesota lakes into other sections which we may expect to have reached in the past, particularly into certain parts of the South and the Southwest. The people down in these states are interested in Minnesota in large numbers when they learn of the attractions we have to offer."

"We are just beginning to reap the reward we may expect from the tourist industry. Money spent now in advertising our lakes will come back many fold. We received $25,000,000 from tourists last year, according to the most conservative figures."

That represents a lot of money, but it's only a fraction of what we may expect in time. At Cass Lake, for example, stores and other business places did a business during the summer of 1921 of $100,000, and last year a business of $164,000. These figures were gathered by forest service men and represent actual business transacted.

COUNTRY-WIDE OBSERVANCE OF THRIFT WEEK.

Thrifty Week was marked in many cities of the United States with celebrations honoring Benjamin Franklin. The event had unusual significance to the members of the newspaper profession, inasmuch as it marked the 200th anniversary of the famous statesman's entrance into the printing business.

The New York City Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, conducted exercises at the Franklin Statue in Park Row which were broadcast by radio. The newspaper, advertising and printing professions were well represented and forward wreaths were placed at the foot of the statue.

Among the representatives of the newspaper business that wreaths for the occasion were presented by the National Editorial Association, Quill in ink-well; Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, "Truth" Emblem; American Association of Advertising Agencies, initials featured; Sphinx Club, Name featured; New York Typographical Union No. 6, "Big Six." Dr. Robert S. Ogden, United States senator-elect and a daily contributor to the Hearst newspapers, represented the city of New York at the exercises.

GOVERNOR SEES MEMBERS OF THE PRESS INFORMALLY.

It is the former Governor, who is again occupying the executive suite of offices of the State Capitol at Albany, that newspaper men have discovered. During the last two years the interviews held twice daily with Governor Miller had been formal affairs. On the dot of eleven and four o'clock the door leading to his private office would open and the military secretary would announce:

"Gentlemen of the press, the Governor."

Realizing the punctuality of the former Governor, the newspaper men were in the "big room" on time the day after the Smith inauguration. An impatient wait of a half-hour occurred. Then a messenger was despatched to the governor. The door leading to the private office opened. The governor, with the derby hat tilted at an Al Smithesque angle stood in the doorway.

"Come in," he said, with a wave of his hand, and the messengers went into the private offices, where few had been during the last two years. The governor was in a good humor.

"See here," he scolded, "I want to tell you fellows when eleven o'clock comes just break in, and if anybody is here they've got to go."

"Governor," spoke up a reporter,

"during the last two years a stenographer has been present at these conferences and it has worked out most satisfactorily to us all and prevented the danger of being misquoted."

"Well," said the governor, "for two years that I was here, and in all my public experience, I never was misquoted by a newspaper man nor was my confidence betrayed. We'll work it as we did before."

"The Times wasn't much news that conference, but every reporter went away smoking big black cigars. These cigars were written on the wall, and the tissue paper was printed "Governor Alfred E. Smith."

The governor was very proud of these cigars.

HUMBER RIVER PAPER MILLS PROJECT IS WELCOMED BY HARMsworth GROUP.

THE 40 Pages Weekly NEWSPAPER WORLD

January 20, 1923

25

Editor, The Fourth Estate.

In an article in your issue of December 9, dealing with the new paper mill project on the Humber River, Newfoundland, the statement was made that this project failed by reason of the organized opposition of the news paper manufacturers of Canada, in conjunction with the British mills and further the opposition of the Harmsworth interests.

And further the article states: "The Harmsworth opposition was induced to withdraw."

I would like to point out that the statement regarding the opposition of the "Harmsworth interests" is incorrect. Neither Lord Rothschild (the president) nor any of those associated with this company had any way whatsoever to this new enterprise on the Humber River, but on the contrary, the directors of the company have said that they welcomed the establishment of another paper making enterprise in Newfoundland.

As the statement in your issue of December 9 might create an entirely wrong impression as to the attitude of this company to the new project on the Humber River, I shall be glad if you will kindly publish this correction.

NORTHERN NEW YORK EDITORS IN SESSION AT WATERTOWN
—DON SEITZ A SPEAKER.

The Northern New York Press Association opened its tenth annual meeting last night with a dinner at the Woodruff House, Watertown. Don C. Seitz, publisher of the New York World, is the principal speaker on the program, which will close this afternoon.

The visiting editors were entertained last evening with addresses and discussion. The Northern New York Press Association exhibited a four reel showing how the machines are made. The greater part of this feature is recognized by advertisers as a reference for their business correspondence. Mr. Bartlett said that his salesmen could not get along without these letter heads.

A. J. POWERS LEARNED THERE WAS MONEY IN IT FROM BUDDY DURING SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR — $5,000 CAPITAL FOUNDATION OF GREAT INSTITUTION.

The man who made twenty-four tour photo-engraving service for newspapers famous and built up the largest business of its kind in the world began his business career while attending high school. Lee M. Pasquin of the New York Globe revealed in his Making The Grade column a few days ago. In an intimate study of A. J. Powers, head of the famous photo-engraving house, Pasquin re-told the heroics of the business which has now grown to large proportions. Pasquin in telling of the partnership formation wrote:

A few weeks prior to their discharge from federal service Powers turned to his friend and asked: "What do you do in New York, Jimmy?"

"I'm a photo-engraver," replied his buddy. "If it is a good business?" pursued Powers. "Is there a chance to make good money in it?"

"Sure, if it's handled right," came the answer. "Well, suppose you and I go into it together when we get back," came Powers' suggestion. "Let's attend to the technical part of it for a while until I learn how to run the business. I'll attend to getting orders and the rest of it." In this way Powers made his entrance into the photo-engraving field, to become now, head of what is recognized universally as the most up-to-date and largest organization of its kind in existence.

When the second New Jersey returned home Powers sold his coal business to a friend. He then went to work, incidentally, as conditions had changed in his absence — and together with Chankalliner entered the photo-engraving business in New York City, with a combined capital in the neighborhood of $5,000. With Powers and his friend came Powers' two younger brothers, F. T. and J. N. Powers. It is interesting to note here a remarkable feature of Powers' life and that of his two brothers. Some years previous to the start of the photo-engraving business Powers' father had died.

A few days after the funeral a J. J. Powers, the oldest of the trio proposed to his two brothers that they refuse to accept any help at all from their mother and make their way absolutely "on their own."

"Let's split everything we make three ways," came Powers' suggestion. "If I make a dollar each of you get a third of it and if one of you make a dollar I share it equally with the other two," came the fair proposition as I am making money now and you two haven't started."

This arrangement was cemented among the three brothers and today, despite the lapse of years and the vastly increased earning power of the three interested men, the agreement still holds good — everything one of the three Powers' brothers earns is still split three ways.

The photo-engraving business prospered and a few years later a second company was formed to co-operate with the first. In the meantime Powers, having obtained a legal education was a great benefit in business life. He took a law course at New York University, attending to his photo-engraving business at the same time.

And now comes Powers' latest, and, according to him, his most promising. A few weeks prior to the close of the war he noticed a brief cable despatch to the effect that three German planespotters had been killed in action. He immediately wired his friend in New Jersey and asked him if there was anything interesting in the war. He got a reply that there was a great need for photo-engravings in exact color reproduction, of allied earthworks and the personnel on the battlefields.

This new system, called Xactone, allowed a great percent color reproduction photographically and permits of far greater speed in photographing and enlarging than has been possible heretofore.

MANCHESTER HERALD ADDING EQUIPMENT AFTER FIRE.

Concrete evidence that service has a way of attracting repeat orders is offered in the fact that the Manchester, Ct., Herald has replaced her hototype Powers with a new Powers equipment in the interest of speed, that is improving the service for the newspaper. Manchester, Ct., reported the agreement to be approximately $6,500.

About the middle of November the Powers company was called upon to handle a big job — a fire, and lighting work in the emergency was rendered by the makers of the equipment and the Powers company did a great job. The job was started north from the New York office and before the next day was turned over to the Powers company in Manchester at 10:30 the morning following. The linotypes were completely erected and turning out composition that evening.

So appreciative of the service rendered was Elwood S. Ela, publisher and manager of the Manchester, Ct., Herald that he immediately ordered another equipment.

Edward F. Wheaton was held in $20,000 bonds when arraigned in Tombs Court, New York, charged with theft from investors in the Commerce Advertising Company. The charges were false, the true value of the assets being of about $1,000,000. He was held to await the action of the grand jury. Wheaton was previously convicted of larceny.

According to the complaints Wheaton represented that his company had contended to place advertising in chamber of commerce bulletins in various sections of the country.

Leadership in the Automobile Field

The New York Times published 97,853 agate lines of automobile advertising during the seven days of the New York Automobile Show, a gain over the volume published during last year's show of 16,426 lines and much more than appeared in any other New York newspaper.

The growing number of "absurd laws," together with the continual efforts of the Federal Government through their passage, was declared to be one of the most serious problems facing America today. By Theodore Roosevelt, President of the New York Automobile Show, and of New York, in an address before the Washington City Club Tuesday. Not one of the laws vitally affecting human welfare is the same in all the states, Mr. Price declared. He cited the absurdities and injustices arising from these differences as relating to marriage and divorce, legal holidays, banking, crime, extradition and automobiles.

CANADIAN PUBLISHERS GIVE STAFF EXTRA WEEK'S PAY.

The Ottawa Evening Journal recently celebrated its thirty-eighth birthday, every member of the staff, down to the office boy, received an engraved Christmas greeting from the editor, a custom established by Mr. Price, secretary-treasurer, announcing an extra's week and to its first issue appeared on December 10, 1885.

Glancing over the front page of the first issue, one is impressed by the vast changes that have wrought in newspaper style and display. In those days advertisements made the front page. Although small, the Journal nevertheless carried a wide variety of foreign and local news. J. B. Defries, publisher, when young, was the Journal's first editor.

ADVERTISING FRAUD ALLEGED.

Edward F. Wheaton was held in $20,000 bonds when arraigned in Tombs Court, New York, charged with theft from investors in the Commerce Advertising Company. He is charged with the defrauding of the investor of about $1,000,000 during the past six months. He was held to await the action of the grand jury. Wheaton was previously convicted of larceny.

According to the complaints Wheaton represented that his company had contended to place advertising in chamber of commerce bulletins in various sections of the country.

NEWSPAPERS COMMENT ON DEATH OF EDITOR.

Following are a few excerpts from New York newspapers on the death of Ervin Wardman:

The New York Herald, in an editorial, said in part:

"Ervin Wardman was an all-round master of his profession, but it was as a student of and writer on economics that he was at his best. He loved figures, he reveled in mathematics, and delving into consular reports, into Government reports, into budget and statement of expenditure, he brought to touch with him found in him a man of singular strength of character.

"For many years an editor, he laterly had given much of his attention to the publishing end of the business. In the contacts which this brought him he displayed qualities at once demanded both respect and admiration.

"While broad-minded and always courteous in his treatment of others, he had strong convictions of his own and stood up for them. His editorials were marked by the personality in that of the papers which he served. But those brought into touch with him found in him a man of singular strength of character.

"On the New York Tribune said of Mr. Wardman:

"Like many another anonymous worker in journalism, his name was not often conspicuously before the public, but his work was his own, and the people understood. "But Ervin Wardman's range was not confined to the field of economics. It extended to all the furthermost parts of the world, touching all phases and conditions of life. He wrote on all the problems, and wrote on them with sure right. With him it was not an economist who had singularly sound judgment in dealing with the complex problems of practical journalism."

The The New York Tribune said of Mr. Wardman:

Other Obituary Notes.

NESTOR MONTOYA, for fifteen years president of the New Mexico State Press Association, and representative in congress from that state, died Sunday in Washington, while preparing to go to the house office building. His death, caused by apoplexy, came as a shock to his friends, for he had supposedly been in the best of health. Mr. Montoya had published La Banderita, an American Spanish-language newspaper. He was serving his first term in congress, and was retired from the page forty-three of his wife, She was sixty-two.

WILLIS EVANS, for years associated in newspaper work with the Pendell publications in Peoria, Ill., and until recently secretary of the Peoria Association of Commerce died yesterday at his home in Peoria. Mr. Evans had been in ill health for about six months.

JOSPEH RALBE, 71 years old, well-known contributor to the American Hebrew, a weekly publication, died Tuesday in New York. He had been a correspondent for the American Hebrew, a weekly publication, for many years.

Every paper scored gain in advertising volume in 1922 — new accounts in great number ready for 1923, Boston Post executive declares.

“A short time ago it was said that "good times are just around the corner." They have arrived in Boston and the business outlook in the Hub and throughout New England is very encouraging," says A. H. Marchant, publicity director of the Boston Post. "Not because I say so, but because all the facts and figures point that way.

STORES HAVE BANNER YEAR.
"In all Boston all records for new building construction were broken in 1922 and the boom will continue to a greater degree in 1923. The big department and women’s specialty stores just closed their banner year and Boston shows a larger per cent of increase in this class of business than the other large population centers of the country. This is a very accurate indication of the upward swing in trade. Savings deposits in Massachusetts banks also show a marked increase, which is a sure barometer of returning prosperity.

Katisha’s Shoulder Blade

One of the beautiful consolations of statistics—the bible of business—is that they may be “split” in so many ways that anybody and everybody may receive “a little something” therefrom.

It was upon the perfection of her shoulder blade, you remember, that Katisha based her claim to being the most beautiful woman in Japan.

Katisha’s shoulder blade—a newspaper’s leadership in prune advertising—a golden day of supremacy for him who is the “dub” of his class the remaining 364—these are some of the comforts of “split statistics.”

But they who survive the tests of brutal totality, proving year in and year out leadership by all the standards that apply to their line—they indeed are entitled to the rewards of premiership that they receive. Of such is the kingdom of the successful.

For many years—and to-day—all authoritative yearly statistics of daily newspaper advertising prove

ADVERTISING HAS NOT GAINED IN PROPORTION, NEW YORK STATE PUBLISHERS LEARN—FRANK E. GANNETT IS CHOSEN NEW PRESIDENT AT ALBANY MEETING.

Editors and publishers who attended the annual meeting of the New York State Publishers Association at the Ten Eyck Hotel, Albany, this week received a warning from Lincoln B. Palmer, general manager of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, that increases in the amount of reading matter in newspapers, as shown by the 1922 totals and thus far continued into 1923, were not justified by the advertising carried.

The new president announced the appointment of the following committees: Legislative, C. D. Osborne, Auburn Citizen, chairman; Wallace Odell, Tarrytown News and Gardiner Kinporting and Recorder, Membership, E. D. Corson, Lockport Union-Sun and Journal, chairman; John W. Baker, Ithaca Journal-News and Thomas J. Blain, Port Chester Item, and a new committee to co-operate to deal with the problems of the publisher in relation to other matters. Mr. Palmer said Mr. John F. Rolfe, Corning Leader is chairman, and T. D. Woods, Dunkirk Observer and A. C. Deuel, Niagara Falls Gazette, associate members.

Dr. James A. Hamilton, secretary of the state, gave a talk on the ethics of the newspaper profession. He prefaced his remarks by saying that at one time he was employed on a newspaper and learned that it required hard work, loyalty and the inviolability of confidence.

"A newspaper should carefully and jealously guard its readers because they are his best friends," said Dr. Hamilton.

"If it is subjected through false and misleading advertisements cause you to desert you, your business reputation is gone; and, as surely as night follows day, your readership and deceitful advertisers will lose interest in your publication and withdraw their support.

"There is no more potent agency today for prosperity than the press. The press can do much in promoting domestic tranquility by supporting law and order and by inspiring the youth with a proper appreciation of American citizenship. With our literate population much larger, there has grown with it a greater degree or interest in public affairs.

"Reading, whether from newspapers, magazines or books has become an essential feature of American life. Knowledge is power more surely to-day than ever before in the history of our country. As the electorate increases in intelligence, better government results. With universal suffrage, a more progressive spirit is in the air, and human rights, as well as voter's rights, are given public consideration."

The press should be an open forum for the discussion of topics of economic and political import, and as the suppression of public opinion has led to the downfall of nations, the press must afford the means of legitimate expression."

STATE SECRETARY CHosen.

Wallace Odell announced that the executive committee of the New York Press Association at a meeting Tuesday afternoon had selected J. W. OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS OF AMERICAN NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS ASSOCIATION AND ASSOCIATED PRESS ALREADY PREPARING FOR ANNUAL SESSIONS IN NEW YORK.

Plans for the annual conventions of the American Newspaper Publishers Association and the Associated Press were discussed this week at meetings in New York of the officers and directors.

The Associated Press board met at its headquarters at 51 Chambers street, and the A.N.P.A. meeting was held at the offices of the Boston Globe, the New York Times, and the New York World-Telegram.

Journey to New York.

STUART PERRY PRESIDES.

In the absence of Frank B. Noyes of the Washington Star, president of the Associated Press, Stuart H. Perry, publisher of the Adrian, Mich., Telegraph and president, presided at the A.P.'s quarterly session.

Other officers and directors at the meeting were: Clark Howell, Atlanta Constitution; George Hopkins Clark, Hartford Courant; Colonel Alexander Rook, Pittsburgh Dispatch; W. L. McLean, Philadelphia Bulletin; Herschel V. Jones, Minneapolis Journal; F. T. Lenon, Topka State Journal; W. H. Cowles, Spokane Spokesman-Review; Daniel D. Moorman, Orleans Times-Picayune; E. Lansig Ray, St. Louis Globe, and the following from the New York World; Melville E. Stone, counselor; Frederick Royaltt, treasurer; Jackson S. Elliott, general superintendent and Kent Cooper, assistant general manager.

The next director's meeting will be held in April, preceding the annual convention.

BALTIMORE TIMES IS PLACED IN RECEIVER'S HANDS.

Receivers were appointed for the new Baltimore Times, a tabloid paper, in the circuit court at Baltimore this week. The appointment followed the failure of the Baltimore News Times, which was purchased by an "interested" stockholder.

It is understood that with the announcement of the purchase of the Baltimore News Times, the bankruptcies were bought up by the United States court.

Judge Henry Duffy signed papers in this instance, following the Baltimore News Times, the principal stock holder of the Times.

Philadelphia,
third largest city in America, is breaking building records

22,588 building operations with a total cost of $114,881,040 were begun during 1922 in Philadelphia, according to the annual report of the Bureau of Building Inspection.

Of this sum, $49,273,320 was for 9,651 dwellings, and $5,000,000 for apartments—almost fifty per cent of the total spent for real family homes in “the city of homes.”

In addition, the city of Philadelphia is spending millions of dollars for sewer construction, highway betterments, subway and elevated transit and other improvements.

With this great addition to its buildings, and with every indication pointing to continuation of the construction programme, Philadelphia offers greater opportunities than ever before to manufacturers of all kinds of goods.

These figures include local, national and classified advertising.

It is doubtful if any paper in America in a city of 100,000 has such a record.

The FORT WAYNE JOURNAL GAZETTE is an Exclusive Morning Paper in a field all its own and sells its space, placing at the forefront of its arguments the fact that it is a Morning Newspaper with a distinctively loyal following whose readers buy nationally-advertised goods displayed in its columns.

There is a reason for this unparalleled record!

PUBLISHERS BACK BILL TO PUT LEGAL ADVERTISING ON BUSINESS BASIS.

United support is being lent by the New York State Publishers Association, the New York Associated Dailies and the New York Press Association to the bill to the bill introduced in Albany by Senator Caleb H. Baumes of Newburgh relative to rates for publication of session laws, summonses, etc. The bill provides for a minimum rate of six cents per line for the first insertion and four cents a line for following insertions, or eighty-four and fifty-six cents per folio respectively.

From this minimum, the rate is graduated so that all newspapers of more than 5,000 circulation are paid a rate proportionate to their excess of circulation over that amount.

Frederick H. Keefe, general manager of the Newburgh News and secretary of the joint legal rate committee of the publishers' association of New York and newly elected president of the New York Associated Dailies, calls attention to the fact that Senator Baume's bill is no sense aimed at a reduction of the rate, as was erroneously stated in an earlier article.

WISCONSIN DAILY NOW TAKES FULL A.P. SERVICE.

The Wausau Daily Record-Herald, of which J. L. Sturtevant is editor and publisher, this week added the full leased wire service of the Associated Press. The merger gives the readers in the city, the adjoining counties and the entire central portion of Wisconsin.

ONTARIO DAILIES MERGED BY WILLIAM J. TAYLOR.

The Chatham, Ont., Daily News and the Chatham Planet have been consolidated by W. J. Taylor, who also owns the Woodstock, Ont., Daily Sentinel Review. The editor in the city one paper, known as the Daily News, incorporated with the Chatham Planet.

A. E. Woodward was previously owner of the News, and Sidney Stephenson of the Planet.

Mr. Taylor is well known in Canadian journalism and in addition to operating the newspapers mentioned also publishes the Rod and Gun, a national sporting man's magazine. He is a past president of the Canadian Press Association.

SOUTHERN PAPER SOLD.

The Moulton, Ala., Advertiser has been sold to Fred Field. The paper has been handed down from generation to generation in the White family, and is relinquished by Robert White, son of the late Jourd White.

RADIO CANNOT RIVAL THE NEWSPAPER.

PATRONS OF WIRELESS MUST ADJUST THEMSELVES TO ITS TIME, CHESTER LORD ASSERTS—COUNTRY NEEDS GOOD EDITORS AS NEVER BEFORE.

The radio will not supplant the national daily or tabloid newspapers, said Chester S. Lord, formerly for many years managing editor of the New York Journal, in an answer to a question at the close of an address at the Y.M.C.A. Brooklyn, Monday, on journalism as a profession. Mr. Lord said that the radio requires its patrons to adapt themselves to its time, instead of adapting itself to their time, as the newspaper does.

Mr. Lord, who was managing editor of the Sun under the late Charles A. Dana, eulogized Dana as one of the greatest editors that this country ever had. Speaking of journalism as a career today, however, he said that there was more opportunity for a young man in the small towns than in the greater cities, especially New York.

"There are between 7,000 and 7,500 newspaper men now actively engaged in the work in New York City," Mr. Lord said. "Unfortunately, not all of them are to be editor-in-chief, and they must to a large extent write under direction. But in a village the correspondent is the editor. The editor generally owns the sheet, and may write the articles and editorials himself. The editor in the village is one of its most influential citizens.

"Never have I seen such opportunities for newspaper editors as at present. Moreover, the honest editor is needed now as never before."

The country needs good editors, Mr. Lord said, because of the influence of the newspapers in the present problems, political, social, intellectual, artistic, and moral.

"To summarize briefly," he said, "the newspaper of today is a better product than the newspaper of a few years ago. The newspaper man is settling down to a strong and substantial basis."

The confidence which readers feel in the dependability of the news columns of The New York Times is reflected in the advertising columns and in the great purchasing power of its readers, producing results to advertisers which frequently are remarkable. Many profitable businesses have been built up, efficient selling organizations formed, merchandise of every description sold in large volumes through The Times.

Announcements of merchandise frequently appear in The Times to the exclusion of all other newspapers, at least in the eastern United States. Advertisements of companies specializing in the construction of large buildings, announcements of gas engines, machinery, hardware and other lines, heretofore advertised almost exclusively in trade periodicals, now appear in The New York Times with increasing frequency.

FOREIGN WRITERS HOSTS TO LORD BURNHAM.
TELLS THEM THEY ARE THE LICENSED INTERPRETERS WHO TRANSLATE AMERICAN CONDUCT AND CHARACTER FOR COMMON UNDERSTANDING OF REST OF THE WORLD.

"Nothing could be more agreeable to me than to be entertained in America by my colleagues of the newspaper press engaged as correspondents in this mighty land of an omnipotent press engaged as correspondents in this mighty land of an omnipotent power that recognizes," Lord Burnham, proprietor of the London News, said.

"I recollect that when Lord Riddell, proprietor of the London News of the World, was asked whether he was a 'blood peer,' and he answered that if that meant the same as a 'blood peer,' then he was a blood peer. Then further on in the interview he was asked what he got for his paper, and his reply was that he had a dollar a month and he said he preferred not to say anything.

"We, as journalists, are the only ones who can bring the world into live in peace and harmony with what is new in the newspapers, the nationalism upon the world, and in my case as an Englishman the nearest to ourselves in the things that count most in the currency of moral values. You are here to make the best of things as they are and to make them better than they are if you can.

"Half the animosities of the world arise from our always showing the worse side of our characters to one another. Life is not only the battle but the practice of life are more potent than the brutalities in the long run, and the courtesy of the press is increasing, both at home and abroad.

"Able editors no longer pride them themselves on being horse-whipped again, and most correspondents are not out for trouble but for conciliation. It is curious that while we travel at such speed and in such comfort we should still be in so unheeded a state of international ignorance one of another, even in the central parts of civilization.

"In a book which will have a permanent place in English literature, in England and throughout the United States, The Life and Letters of Walter Hines Page, who loved my country no less than he loved his country, there is a striking lesson as a parable. In the first year of the Great War, writing of this very war, he said that love for England and the United States was in his heart just as "George Washington." It serves me many a good turn with my English friends. I use it as a measure of their ignorance of us. There is the other side to the charge sheet, but I admit the soft impeachment, and it is just that ignorance which you have the high and responsible duty of dissipating and blotting out, now and always, each for his own."

SCHOOLS SUPPORTED BY THE PRINTING AND PUBLISHING INDUSTRY ONLY SOLUTION OF LABOR SHORTAGE, ROSS KELLOGG DECLARES—TELLS OF STUDENTS' WORK.

Schools of printing supported by the printing and publishing industry on the state or section of the country which they serve, he said, are the only solution of the present labor shortage according to Ross W. Kellogg, director of the Empire State School of Printing at Ithaca, who addressed the Northern New York Press Association at its morning session last Saturday at the Hotel Woodruff. Mr. Kellogg's address seemed to touch a responsive chord and he was kept busy for nearly half an hour answering questions regarding the organization of the school, the training furnished and the availability of graduates.

The Empire State School of Printing was started in May by the New York State Publishers Association, the organization of upstate daily newspapers. The publishers of the state contributed $20,000 to the school fund last year. Of this $12,000 was spent on equipment and the remainder was used for operating expenses. Students at the school pay thirty dollars monthly and the balance of the cost of instruction is made up from the fund contributed by the publishers.

Mr. Kellogg explained that the school gives six months' intensive training in hand composition, stone work, plates press work, and the operation and mechanism. Asked how well qualified a boy is for a position after six months he replied: "All we claim is that he is as good as two years apprenticeship training in a newspaper composing room or commercial printing plant. It is my personal opinion that graduates are as good as many men who are drawing the wages of journeymen printers."

The demand for instruction is so great that the New York State Printers Association at a recent meeting in Syracuse authorized the committee on education to expand the school and immediately to double the school's capacity. When this will be done the Empire State School of Printing will place 100 young men a year in the industry.

As evidence of what is being accomplished at the school, Mr. Kellogg showed many samples of work done by students. Pictures of the school in operation also proved of great interest to the members of the Northern New York Press Association. The editing department assured Mr. Kellogg of their wholehearted co-operation in the effort which is being made at Ithaca to develop and maintain a more responsible and more responsible type of workman that is now obtained through the apprenticeship system.

EDITOR THREATENED BY KLAN.

Ed LeRoy, editor of the Marinette, Wis., Eagle-Star and former assemblyman, has received a letter, purporting to come from the Ku Klux Klan, in which it was threatened with a "coat of tar and feathers if he persists in publishing editorial in opposition to the klan."

Mr. LeRoy said that, although he treats the matter lightly, he does believe a local order of the klan has been organized in Marinette.

FRIENDLY TALKS TO JUNIOR ADVERTISING MEMBERS ON FRANKLIN.

Edwin S. Friendly, business manager of the New York Herald and the Sun, addressed the junior members of the Advertising Club at luncheon Tuesday, January 16 at the Advertising Club, 47 East 25th street.

Being an admirer of Benjamin Franklin, called by many the first advertising man of America, he pointed out that the high lights of Franklin's career for advertising men to study were the craft of his salesmanship and his effectiveness in persuasion. He spoke on how Franklin never wrote to achieve an artistic triumph, never practiced "fine" writing but wrote to achieve a definite object, to persuade others and in the simplest language. He further pointed out that in 1785 Benjamin Franklin invented the Franklin stove and by a widely distributed pamphlet described its fuel economies and other advantages. In 1753 he had already sold the American public the lightning rod through advertising methods.

Mr. Friendly quoted several of Benjamin Franklin's well-known slogans calling particular attention to the following three, which he thought applicable to advertising and advertising salesmen:

"Plough deep while sluggards sleep." "Little strokes fell great oaks." "Remember that Time is Money."

He said that many businesses have become successful because their founders applied the slogan, "Plough deep while sluggards sleep" and also that one of the most salient points of an advertising campaign was, "Little strokes fell great oaks." He suggested that the slogan "Remember that Time is Money" could well be kept in mind when an advertising salesman was discussing his problem with a space buyer or advertiser.

He told them that there was an opportunity for the top for everyone and cited a few cases where men like James Simpson, the new head of Marshall Field & Co., the late Frank S. Turnbull, president Rogers Peet Co., and F. Edson White, the new president of Armour & Co., started at the bottom and by learning all parts

Baker suggests schools teach news reading.

FORMER SECRETARY OF WAR OFFERS IDEA MORE THAN ONCE RECOMMENDED BY THE FOURTH ESTATE—ONE FEATURE OF HIS SPEECH CAUSES CRITICISM.

The assertion by Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, in an address on the Northshore in Cleveland that news is bound to be colored, brought forth a sharp retort from the Cleveland Times and Commercial in its editorial columns. The newspaper reminded the statesman that the days of personal journalism have gone and that the daily of newspapers for unbiased news.

Mr. Baker, however, redeemed himself when he brought out the fact that the printed word depends on the newspapers and magazines for information on current affairs. The former war secretary applied the slogan that there is an establishment in the public schools courses on "How to Read Newspapers." This is a suggestion that has been offered by The Fourth Estate on several occasions.

The paper said that the children should be educated to read what they see in the public print with a keen ability to discriminate between fact and opinion.

Replying to the aspersions which crept into Mr. Baker's talk, the Times and Commercial said:

"As a rule, the old-time personal journalism is sucked down. The desire of mingling facts and opinion in news columns is properly out of date. Important events and news stories are to give news facts.

The editorial columns are for comment on the opinion of the writers. Though there are, unfortunately, some publications, including some of the papers, that still persist in coloring their news and publishing biased reports to agree with their policies, there are others that recognize their responsibility to their readers and are honest enough to publish news without any attempt whatsoever to color or distort the facts to gain circulation or to advance the policies for which they stand."

PUBLICITY MAN DWELLS ON VALUE OF ADVERTISING.

C. W. Towne, publicity director for the Montefiori Power Company, and P. L. Wills, secretary-mananger of the Butte Chamber of Commerce, were the principal speakers at the annual dinner and business meeting of the Idaho Advertising Club recently, at which advertising, industrial surveys and public exhibits were discussed by the speakers.

Mr. Towne cited many instances of the slogan "helping towns by town," and the nation-wide publicity which this has brought to these towns and cities.

Mr. Wills dwelled upon the valuable results obtained by California through advertising. He classed the importance of personal visits of that state as almost hypnotic.
By These Facts You Can Pick Your Indianapolis Newspaper

When you buy space you buy circulation

News is the largest daily circulation in Indiana, and among the largest three-cent evening circulations in America. The per cent coverage is very high, reaching as it does practically every worth while family in Indianapolis. More than 95% of The News' circulation is home delivered. It is universally acknowledged that The News commands a reader interest second to no other paper.

You want to know proved power of results

Year after year The Indianapolis News has carried practically the same volume of advertising—local, foreign, and classified—as both other Indianapolis papers combined (6 against 13 issues a week), after rejecting millions of lines of available copy. This could not be unless The News delivered results. Your proof of results is in the successful experience of the many advertisers who have used The News exclusively or as the preferred medium for so many years. The dominance of The News in volume of advertising carried proves the value of its columns in results.

You buy, too, the prestige of the medium

For fifty-three years The News has been a great newspaper. Always it has ranked editorially with the greatest American newspapers. It commands a reader loyalty and a reader confidence born of its half century of keeping faith with its readers. The editorial and advertising columns of The News are clean. The News rejects annually from 500,000 to more than a million lines of advertising which are available, and which usually run in other Indianapolis papers.

You want to know Local advertisers know all local advertisers' opinions about a newspaper. Their endorsement is a clear guide to the value of a medium. Indianapolis department stores use more space in The News (6 issues a week) than in both other Indianapolis papers (13 issues a week). In practically every other classification The News leads both other papers combined. It leads in Classified.

The merchandising department of The News has accurate data on every successful selling and advertising campaign in the Indianapolis Radius in the last five years. This information is available to interested advertisers and agencies. The specific data The News has collected on this great Indianapolis Market will help you plan your campaign for the greatest results at the lowest cost. Make use of the service of the merchandising department.

ASSOCIATION GOES ON RECORD TO PRESENT BILL TO THE LEGISLATURE PROVIDING FOR PUBLICATION OF ALL PUBLIC NOTICES IN LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.

O. S. Freeman of the Watertown News was re-elected president of the Connecticut Editorial Association at the annual meeting held in Bridgeport last Saturday. In his annual address President Freeman advocated an "open your mail" campaign. He said that editors are the greatest slackers in the world in this particular matter. The association went on record to protest against the leakage of all notices in the local papers. George C. Woodruff of the Litchfield Enquirer was chairman of the nominating committee with Everett G. Hill of Hartford and A. S. Barnes of the Bristol Press. They brought in the following slate which was unanimously accepted:

President, O. S. Freeman, breaking the record in length of term of office in the association.

Secretary and treasurer, Everett G. Hill of Hartford.

Windham, A. W. Eddy, Danielson Transmitter.

Carl Prescott of Tarrytown, president of the New York Press Association and vice-president of the N.E.A., told about the work in New York State.

"We are going to the legislature," he said, "and try to get the law changed on the legal and political advertisements. They should be display "ads" not only for the benefit of the newspapers, but this is an age of head-line readers and most of the notices in small type are overlooked.

He advised the country editors to go to Hartford and get some such bill through their legislature.

Another class of people who do not advertise as they should, according to Prescott, are the church papers. They should have large "ads" in every paper, he thinks, because that is the best way of finding out what they are doing, and they should not be given entirely free space although some of them expect it.

Prescott is in charge of the program for the national convention of the editors in Buffalo next July and is planning an extensive program with many interesting side trips.

"RUN"—Releases safety permitting operation of press.

"SAFE"—Stops press quickly and locks all other stations.

"INCREASE"—Press increases to desired printing speed.

"DECREASE"—Press slows down as required.

"INCH"—Press moves forward slowly, stopping as soon as button is released.

The New York Times thinks so as evidenced by their order for four 80 H.P. equipments for their new Super Speed Presses, and so does the New York Daily News, Chicago Tribune, Kansas City Star, Seattle Times, who have just placed repeat orders, and many other of the leading newspapers who are satisfied users of the Cline System.

SENATE TO PROBE
PULPWOOD TIMBER DESTRUCTION.

HARRISON MEASURE CALLING FOR INVESTIGATION BY SENATE COMMITTEE IS PASSED—MISSISSIPPI SENATOR
TELLS OF GREAT WASTE
IN FOREST LANDS.

Impressed with the necessity for a definite policy of timber conservation in the United States, the senate has passed a resolution introduced by Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, directing the appointment of a committee of five senators to investigate the timber problem, with a view to developing a real conservation plan by the Government.

Discussing the situation, Senator Harrison placed in the gravest possible light the problem brought on by the annual cutting down of 5,000,000 acres of forest land in the United States, and 6,000,000 acres within the same period of time.

Of the estimated 500,000,000 acres of forest lands in the United States, 70 per cent of it has already been logged, Senator Harrison said. Moreover, 24 per cent of it today contains only 20 per cent of the growth, while 29 per cent has been stripped clean, and 17 1/2 per cent, or an aggregate of 81,000,000 acres "has been stripped of its merchantable timber; burned over, and is lying practically idle, being known as unproductive land."

Absence of a proper policy, Senator Harrison declared, has resulted in the loss of billions of dollars to users of timber, news print paper and all wood materials.

"There is no better time than today for congress to begin a thorough investigation and study of the many questions involved in this great problem," said Senator Harrison as advocating his resolution, "and to recommend a comprehensive and broad and national economic policy of reforestation and reforestation so that the national Government can co-operate with the states and those states which forests are located can enact uniform laws as far as the condition of timber will warrant, toward conserving the timber we have and making greater problem possible in the future."

The committee provided by the resolution will be appointed by the vice-president. It is expected that the committee will begin its investigations and studies immediately following the end of the present session of congress, with a view to presenting its plans for the formulation of a national policy when congress meets next December, in the event there occurs no special session in the interim, which is regarded as extremely improbable.

EXTRA FOR FIGHT FANS AS THEY LEAVE ARENA.

ROCHESTER JOURNAL ON SALE AT DOORS WITH COMPLETE DETAILS FOUR MINUTES AFTER BOUT ENDED—RESULT WAS IMMEDIATE JUMP IN PAPER'S CIRCULATION.

By H. Armand de Masi
Special Correspondent of The Fourth Estate.

Sport fans of Rochester and vicinity had the surprise of their lives January 15, when witnessing the Herman-Brown fight, they found newspapers with thousands of copies of an extra edition of the Rochester Journal, containing a full account of the match, awaiting them. They are still talking about it in Rochester.

The fight was over at 11:20 p.m. Four minutes later the Rochester Journal's extra was on sale outside the doors of Convention Hall, and throughout the downtown section of Rochester.

Never before in the history of Rochester journalism did any newspaper in that city get out an extra of that kind and with such lightning-like rapidity. And none of the other newspapers of Rochester—two evening and two morning—even competed with the Journal's extra. It stood alone.

As a result, the circulation of Rochester's "baby" newspaper jumped from 20,008 on the Saturday preceding, to 24,012 on that Monday.

That many of those who bought the Journal's extra Monday night were likely to become permanent readers of that newspaper is indicated by the fact that on the day after the fight—Tuesday—23,537 copies were sold.

It is interesting, in passing, to review briefly the little history of those first forty-eight months of the Rochester Journal's existence. It is a veritable romance of modern journalism.

The Rochester Journal, established on Monday, September 11, last, is an outgrowth—or perhaps more properly speaking an extension—of the Rochester Sunday American, established by Mr. Hearst on June 25, 1922, a little more than six months ago.

The entire building, plant and quarters of the Rochester American were prepared in the record time of twenty-three days. The previous record was in the neighborhood of sixty days.

On Sunday, June 25, the Rochester American appeared—a typical first newspaper, although, naturally, lacking the finish that it now possesses. At first the paper was sold in connection with, and as part of the New York American, because of the fact that this newspaper did not have the facilities for printing the colored comic and American magazine sections, as well as the editorial, city life and certain other sections, which were supplied by the New York American.

Now everything but the colored comic and American magazine sections of the Rochester American is printed in Rochester, the color work being done by the Boston Sunday Advertiser, also a Hearst newspaper.

The first publisher of the Rochester American was Shirley Oplius, who was succeeded as a traveling representative of the Hearst syndicates to organize the paper. Later he was succeeded by E. C. Rogers, present manager, and formerly of the Washington Times.

Harry Gray, formerly night editor of the New York American, and previous to that for sixteen years connected with the Chicago and San Francisco Hearst newspapers, was sent to Rochester as managing editor, and he still on the job, producing a paper that "every day, in every way," rivals its New York and other bigger brothers—and in some instances excels them, in my opinion.

FOUR-YEAR JOURNALISM COURSE ADOPTED.

The college of commerce and journalism at Ohio State University, Columbus, will be reorganized into a four-year course, instead of two years as at present, the board of trustees decided at their meeting over the week-end. Approval was given to the new plan, as suggested by the administrative council, comprising the deans of the various colleges.

Action was taken, it is said, in order to centralize the courses under one head. At present, students who wish to take up commerce and journalism must complete two years of work in the arts college, and then be transferred. Under the proposed plan, they will take essentially the same work, but under the supervision of the commerce and journalism dean.

CANADIAN PAPER CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY BY GIVING EMPLOYEES BONUS.

The Ottawa, Ont., Evening Citizen, recently marked its twenty-fifth anniversary as the property of the Southam Brothers, from a congratulatory letter signed by W. M. & H. S. Southam was delivered to every member of the staff. The letter announced the depositing to the credit of all members of the staff a bonus of one week's pay, and contained appreciation of the loyal and efficient service heretofore rendered to the paper by the staff in all departments.

A feature of the Citizen payroll is the depositing of the staff's salary in banks, a method in fostering thrift has been amply proven in the last six months by thousands of bank accounts some of the boys are sporting these days.

COLLIN ARMSTRONG HEADS WESTCHESTER CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Collin Armstrong, chairman of the newspaper committee of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, and until recently with William T. McMillan, Inc., New York, has been elected director for three years of the Westchester County Chamber of Commerce, of which organization he is president.

DRY VIOLATION EXPOSURE IS FOLLOWED BY FINE.

The Boston Herald's publication of a story about the serving of whiskey in baby bottles at the recent dinner of the New England Road Builders' Association, the Ireta Sum, at Boston, resulted this week in a fine of $500 for the treasurer of the association, Joseph A. Tomsello, who was charged with transporting thirty-five quarts of hoity "more or less," according to the complaint, to the banquet hall.

Charles Drury, day city editor of the Herald and a reporter testified at the hearing recently held by Commissioner O'Neil of the Road Builders' case, the "dry" answers of City Commissioner were received as admissions convulsing the court room with laughter.

ADVERTISING CLUB SELECTS MARCH 13-17 FOR SALES WEEK.

A community sales week, sponsored by the Advertising Club of Great Falls, Mont., the week of March 13 to 17, in conjunction with the annual automobile show, has been decided upon by members of the club. A. H. Jester, president, was chosen as head of the general committee which will plan the affair. Other members of the committee appointed were R. W. Mathias, C. A. McKinney and Fred Ferris.

Five other members were chosen as chairmen of sub-committees, each having the power to select their own assistants. F. U. Arthur was appointed chairman of the advertising committee; W. C. Beauregard, entertainment committee; L. W. Wendt of the advertising committee; W. W. Huntsburger of the finance committee, and C. T. Gregg as chairman of the general committee.

Chairmen of all the committees were instructed to devise plans for the show to be reported upon at the next meeting of the club, at which time a definite program will be arranged.

AUTO AD MANAGERS MEET.

The advertising managers of automobile companies, who are members of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, will meet January 29 and 30 at Chicago.
AN EXTRAORDINARY RECORD

During the eight months ending January 1, 1923, this syndicate accomplished one of the most remarkable achievements in the newspaper syndicate field. Although in business less than a year, today we can offer fifty features by some of the best writers and artists available, and are doing business with almost every newspaper using live, up-to-the-minute material.

NEW YORK CITY
BURNHAM FAVORS ANGLO AMERICAN PRESS JUNTA.

IN ADDRESS BEFORE A. P. DIRECTORS HE SUMMONS EDITORIAL MINDS TO COUNCIL ON QUESTIONS OF COMMON INTEREST AND MUTUAL BENEFIT.

As a man of wide understanding and cosmopolitan faith, Lord Burnham put into his address a potency of logic and an urbanity of diction that were compelling. He obviously felt that he could have no more appropriate audience than the members of the executive committee of the Press Association when he paid tribute as the greatest news agency in the world.

Lord Burnham, who sailed Wednesday for Jamaica to address the Imperial Press Conference, will spend two or three days in the United States on his way home. His five days in New York on his outgoing journey were crowded with engagements, and upon four occasions he delivered addresses. All of these were widely different and admirably suited to his varying audiences, but each expressed a readiness for Anglo-American co-operation that is one of Lord Burnham's consuming interests.

The distinguished visitor was honored at a dinner Friday of last week by the Association of Foreign Press correspondents, an account of which appears elsewhere in this issue. On Saturday he was the guest of the English Speaking Union. The executive officers of the International Press Congress of the World entertained him Monday at the Hardware Club, at which the speakers, in addition to the British publisher, were Frank P. Glass of the St. Louis Star and Melville E. Stone, counsel for the Associated Press. Mr. Martin's dinner was held at the University Club.

Tuesday he was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Pilgrims Society at the Bankers Club, at which Charles A. DeWitt, president, presided.

At Mr. Martin's luncheon, the guests included the directors of the Associated Press from various cities who came on for the quarterly meeting of the organization this week and a number of New York editors.

"Since I arrived in New York I have received much hospitality," Lord Burnham said.

"The other night as I sat in my father's chair at the office of the Daily Telegraph in Fleet Street they brought me an editorial proof on which I read that 'above all we must be careful not to incur American hospitality.' I found that 'hostility' was the word intended. Not wicked devil but the printer's devil led him astray. American hospitality requires...

Is your composing room a composing room or an "assembling" room? Are your compositors half compositors and half errand-boys? How much walking around, how much going to get something, how much fetching and carrying is there in your "assembling" room?

Think of the absurdity of a full grown man walking 25 feet to get a line of a certain 18-point type and walking 25 feet to bring it back, and of somebody else taking the same journey the next day to put that line of type back in its case.

Multiply this by several times and you have composition as it exists in many plants today. It is not composition at all—it is "assembling."

Straight-line production is as profitable in a newspaper or job plant as in any industrial plant, and the only way to get straight-line production of combination text and display matter is on a Text-and-Display Linotype.

An operator may sit in his chair and bring down several sizes of different kinds of type just as they are marked on the copy, from small text to full 36 point—in an uninterrupted, continuous, straight-line stream—all in one galley, ready for the make-up man—no walking at all. Every minute is productive time, and there is no distribution tomorrow.

Whether you have a country office or a big city plant there is a Text-and-Display Linotype to meet your needs—Models 21, 22 or 24.

YEAR IN LABOR AS PRESSMEN’S HEAD INTERPRETS IT.

NEGOTIATIONS MARKED BY DESIRE OF BOTH SIDES TO BE HELPFUL — FIVE-YEAR CONTRACT WITH A.N.P.A. IS INDICATION THAT RELATIONS WILL CONTINUE CORDIAL.

By George L. Berry.
President, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants’ Union of North America.

The genuine achievement of the year 1922 as between the newspaper publishers of America and the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants’ Union of North America, was the genuine spirit of helpfulness displayed in meeting the problems that are constantly arising in the production of newspapers, and a statement is ventured that never before have we come so near making the spirit of helpfulness exclusive as was the case in 1922.

VALUE IN DIFFICULTY.

With but one incidentally the relationship between the publishers and the pressmen has been exemplary. The responsibility of the one incident can hardly be placed upon the shoulders of the publishers—but even this incident has had its value, I feel quite sure, to both sides.

In the main the experience of this office has been that the publishers, both in the United States and Canada, have manifested a desire to adjust existing differences upon the basis of fact, and I do not believe it is saying too much to hold that the pressmen’s attitude has been of the same nature. We are desirous that this condition continue uninterrupted.

NEW ARBITRATION CONTRACT.

The friendliness and purpose to contribute our efforts in overcoming the adversities of the business by a mutually endeavoring to solve them in a practical way, is best testified to in the fact that the publishers, printing Pressmen and Assistants’ Union of North America and the American Newspaper Publishers Association have agreed and have formally signed a new international arbitration contract to cover a period of five years.

The moral effect of this agreement cannot be under-estimated. It is a notice to all who may be interested that the publishers of newspapers and the men engaged in the printing department thereof, propose to in a civilized and practical manner meet the issues of the day and keep in operation the newspaper presses of America, upon which both sides depend, to a very large degree, for their compensation and prosperity.

CORDIAL IF NOT PERFECT.

It is too much to expect that our relationship shall be perfect. The truculence of the publishers acts as a check upon the pressmen—and vice versa. The accomplishment of this end all have agreed to pursue such a course.

HOME OF DEVILS LAKE JOURNAL.

PUBLISHER PURCHASES BLOCK NAMED FOR NEWSPAPER—PREPARES FOR GROWTH.

M. H. Graham, publisher of the Devils Lake, N. D., Journal, has purchased the Journal Building at Kelley avenue and Third street, in which the Journal has been housed since the building was erected in 1911.

The building is of brick and of modern structure, 25 by 80 feet, and is located on a corner lot 25 by 125 feet, thus permitting a 45-foot addition in the rear, which the Journal will use for expansion of business.

Already Mr. Graham has contemplated many changes in the interior of the building and carpenters have been at work the last few days on some of these changes, made necessary by the contemplated purchase of new, modern machinery for job and newspaper work. The price paid for the building is about $20,000.

In purchasing the building, Mr. Graham says that he foresees a great future for the city and is making preparations for that future that he desires to acquire a business property which is closely allied to the name of his newspaper.

PRESTON GOES TO BUFFALO EXPRESS—FERGER SUCCEEDS HIM ON CINCINNATI PAPER.

George W. Preston, for four and one-half years advertising director of the Cincinnati Enquirer, will Monday assume the duties of advertising director of the Buffalo Express. His place on the Enquirer has been taken by Roger H. Ferger, who has been in charge of rotagraph and classified advertising for the Enquirer. Mr. Ferger was at one time with Ferger & Silva Company, Cincinnati advertising agency.

VIGILANCE HEAD MISSING.

A general search of hospitals and hotels is being made for William P. Green, director of the work of the National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, unaccounted for since Monday midnight.

Mr. Green was ill, complaining of pains in his head, but he went to business Monday, and appeared to be much better, his so-called friends said.

CANADIAN PAPERS ENLARGED.

The St. John, N. B., Daily Telegraph and Evening Times, which are under the same ownership, have been enlarged to eight columns a page. The Telegraph remaining at two cents and the Times at one cent. The Times is the only one-cent newspaper in the maritime provinces.

GRAND FORKS PAPER TO BE PUT ON BLOCK.

The building of the Grand Forks, N. D., American newspaper will be sold at a sheriff’s sale on February 20 to satisfy a judgment of $25,598. Interests of a number of creditors are in the hands of Ole Knutson and T. O. Haroklson, trustees.
The First Three Weeks of 1923 witnessed the keen attention of the entire newspaper world focused on INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE because of its remarkable succession of vital news beats.

A RECORD NEVER EQUALED

In the history of news gathering institutions, there never was such a conspicuous achievement in any similar period of time. The excellence of a news report is judged not by its sporadic scoops, but by its consistent, day in and day out performance. ANY news agency can score a scoop some time. What amazes newspaper publishers everywhere is that EVERY DAY for the last three weeks I.N.S. has scored heavily on all the important news. It is by this consistent performance that I.N.S. today leads the field.

From the Ruhr to Mer Rouge

International News Service scooped all opposition services on ALL the important developments in the two stories that command first pages everywhere—the French invasion of the Ruhr and the investigation of Ku Klux in Louisiana.

From the moment France declared Germany in default until her occupation of the Ruhr was complete, Weyer in Essen and Mason in Paris beat all other correspondents with the first true news of the invasion:

Hutchinson, covering the Ku Klux trial at Bastrop received the congratulations of scores of I.N.S. clients for his astonishing exclusive stories. I.N.S. conspicuous news beats included these important stories.

FIRST with announcement of French Invasion of the Ruhr.
AHEAD with flash from Paris that Reparations Commission voted Germany in default.
SCOOPED all opposition on text of Roland Boyden’s statement before Reparations Commission.
EXCLUSIVE story that Bernhardt is bankrupt despite all the money she earned in her career.
TEN minutes ahead with announcement President Harding recalled troops from the Rhine.
ONLY news service to give General Allen, commander of American forces in Germany, news of recall.
AHEAD with discovery of Communist plot in Paris, and arrest of several ring leaders.
COMPLETE beat on death of former King Constantine of Greece.
FIRST with Premier Poincaré’s speech before Chamber defending French invasion of Ruhr.
BEAT opposition services with British Cabinet’s announcement to keep British troops on the Rhine.
COPYRIGHTED exclusive interview with Thyssen, German magnate, who declared French invasion meant ruin of both France and Germany.
SCOOPED other news agencies on appointment of Crissinger to head of Federal Reserve Board.
EXCLUSIVE interview with Evans, Imperial Wizard of Ku Klux Klan, on Mer Rouge expose.

“AHEAD with news of execution of Irish Irregulars.
EXCLUSIVE story of sensational attempt to rob the Honolulu treasury of seven millions.
AN HOUR ahead with flash that insurgent forces had driven allied forces out of Memel.
FIRST with refusal of German industrial magnates to obey French.
FIRST with news of their arrest, and general strike that followed.
EXCLUSIVE interview with William Jennings Bryan on “three years of prohibition.”
FIRST with news of death of Wally Reid.
SCOOP on identification of “hooded band” at Mer Rouge.
AHEAD with story of strike riot at Harrison, Ark.
AHEAD with acquittal of five miners for “Herrin massacre.”
BEAT by forty-five minutes on story of murder of girl dancer at San Diego.
IMPORTANT exclusive story from White House that “not a dollar owing to the United States by foreign nations would be cancelled.”
FIRST with announcement that Italy and Belgium had asked Great Britain to intervene in Ruhr situation.
TWO HOURS ahead with startling story that refugees from Asia Minor were dying at rate of thousand a day in Athens.

“Get it First—but FIRST Get it RIGHT”

This slogan, ringing incessantly in the ears of every I.N.S. reporter, expressed the spirit that brought the news first and right to American newspapers from every corner of the world. It is responsible for all the gigantic news beats and thrilling exclusive stories which within the last three weeks have established a record never equaled by a news gathering institution.

Lord Burnham's Summons to Journalism.

If the world ever starts to look for a single physical entity to act as a sort of plenipotentiary in contriving to bring about a millennium of international good feeling, it can do no better than ring the bell of Lord Burnham, lately preceptor of the London Daily Telegraph, whose departure from New York left the Wilson administration a bit uneasy to hold foreign business. The circumscription of events may prove to be a contest or premiums, but the publisher will fall short of a full report on this promising development. Newsprint is still destined to carry its ordinary world-wide calls on British film producers to enter the field and contest this American commercial prestige.

An INDEX OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST BUSINESS.

For the twenty-ninth consecutive year, the Annual Review Number of The Fourth Estate has been prepared and is issued as a part of this number. It stands out more than ever this year as a work of intimate and intellectual value to students of both journalism and advertising developments and events for the twelve months. It is carefully listed and arranged under some eighty divisional headings to simplify the reader's use of the review.

Facts and ideas—the tools and the inspiration of journalism everywhere—overflow the columns of the Annual Review Section. Even the most effective editor may have the half its value if the publisher does not tell the story of the improvements that have gone into it and tell it in a place where the greatest interest in that improvement.

The Annual Review will be particularly prolific of ideas for him to use in his daily tasks. No better evidence of the increasing efficiency of our schools of journalism could be found even as a part of the other twelve months as the world is making itself heard.
PURPLE PERSONAL.

A. J. Schinner, sports editor of the Milwaukee Wisconsin News and Sun-

WASHINGTON POST.

"A Breakfast Dish Served Daily" is the latest "peppy" innovation in the Washington Post, where it appears first column, first page, each morning.

The scope of the column is as wide as extended as the happenings of the day, and they are set forth in the popular language of the reading portions of the Post. Brown has always been known for his style and his humor, both of which are still evident in his new column.

The column has been a great success, and has rapidly grown in popularity.

The legislative committee, headed by Fred Lyon of Milford, was instructed to draw up and present a bill authorizing an appropriation for publication of public notices in local papers.

The editors and their wives attended a six o'clock dinner at the Stratford Hotel.

George Waldo, editor of the Post and Telegram, welcomed the visitors to Bridgeport and expressed his appreciation of the cooperation of the newspaper service with which an editor cannot publicize at least, claim allegiance, nor business Bridgeport and Sommer, nevertheless very glad to have you come to see us. But to newspaper Bridgeport, he added, you are bounded on the south by Long Island Sound, on the west by the Harbor, on the north by the New York and on the east by the Milford Citizen.

"No matter what you do, nor how you cut up," he told them, "the papers will all say that you are the best ever.

Mr. Hill of Hartford, the newly elected secretary of the association, responded to Waldo's welcome. He declared that the "Fifty Famous Features" were not as many city daily papers represented in the association as there should be.

"But all the papers are not daily newspapers and the papers of the state are represented," he declared. He said that above all the thing that the association stands for fraternity among newspaper men and help them on all matters of papers, dailies, weeklies, monthlies.

Lynn W. Wilson, editor of the Bridgeport Times, spoke upon the keen competition in the newspaper game of today, took an oral swing at the Bridgeport Waterbury Herald, and then went on to discuss the matters over with the Herald and weekly newspapers. He wished he had had his support just one time when he was running for congress.

Mr. Wilson was followed by Miss Shirley Putnam, of the Greenwich Press, who gave some illuminating explanations of how she is able to really operate an independent weekly, the Greenwich Press. Wallace Odell, president of the National Editorial Association, and editor of the Tariff-town News, spoke.

George Woodruff of the Litchfield Enquirer followed. He related in minute detail the enjoyments of the Montana trip taken by many newspaper people through the mountains.

He cited the vast resources of Montana that he has seen there. The state that has never had a flag other than the good old Stars and Stripes, he said, is worth a trip. He wished he had had his support just one time when he was running for congress.

The Bridgeport newspaper men and women present were invited to join the association and a recess was declared while their names were taken.

Besides those in attendance in the afternoon there were several others present who were interested in the proceedings. Mrs. Everett G. Hill of Hartford, Mrs. Fred Lyon of Milford, R. H. Mathewson of the Conn. Alumni and Bill Steinkel of Newark, N. J.

FAIRCHILD FEATURES WILL BE DISTRIBUTED THROUGH METROPOLITAN SERVICE.

The Metropolitan Newspaper Service and the Fairchild News Service have reached an agreement by which all the Fairchild features will in the future be distributed by Metropolitan Service.

This arrangement means the retirement from the feature field of the Fairchilds as far as distribution is concerned, and marks another milestone in the progress of the Elser syndicate. All the daily news services, daily, weekly and special reviews and articles on business and fashion, and other Fairchild writers, will be prepared as usual for the Fairchild publications, and the syndication of the features to newspapers will be carried out through the Metropolitan Service.

This is the second syndicate to be taken over by the Metropolitan within the last six months. Last year the New Era Features Service was absorbed. All contacts of the Fairchild service, and artists and writers with the New Era became the property of the Metropolitan service.

While the new agreement is by no means complete as the former one, the one now in force having only the distribution rights, it is nevertheless a tribute to the enterprise of the Metropolitan Service, and Maximilian Elser, its manager, that they have been chosen by Fairchilds. E. F. Tate, sales manager of the Fairchild Service, has been assigned other duties in the organization.

PUBLISHER'S CATTLE WIN PRIZES AT WESTERN STOCK SHOW.

John C. Shaffer, editor and owner of the Shaffer group of newspapers, was one of the principal winners at the National Western Stock show in Denver in January as well as at the American Royal, Kansas City, and many of the fairs held in the Midwest and West during the past year.
Mr. Shaffer besides being the owner of the Rocky Mountain News, Denver Evening Post, Indianapolis Star, Kansas City Daily Star and Muscine Star, is the owner of the Ken-Caryl Ranch, one of the largest and finest country estates in the West, located about twenty miles north of Denver near Littleton, Colorado.

The record made by Mr. Shaffer's herd of Hereford cattle at the Ken-Caryl ranch is even more remarkable when it is considered that cattle from this ranch have been competing in the show ring only two seasons.
The five animals shown by Mr. Shaffer's herd were of the best, and the Colorado ranch is even more remarkable when it is considered that cattle from this ranch have been competing in the show ring only two seasons.

LIBRARY ASSOCIATION BACKS FIGHT FOR COPYRIGHT RECOGNITION ABROAD.

"Make American books safe beyond the three-mile limit," was the slogan adopted by the American Library Association at their mid-winter conference held in Chicago.
In his report of the copyright meeting, now before Congress, Mr. Raney declared that "copyright is protected against piracy by a public policy of the United States, and therefore the law's protection in the United States is just as strong as the protection given in all other countries. The American copyright law is invalid beyond the three-mile limit. The purpose of the present bill is to get for our authors and to extend our own to outsiders." The bill for the association, to be completed by the time of its fifteenth anniversary in 1928, is proposed because the association has outgrown its headquarters in the Chicago public library.

GIRL RED KILLS NEWSPAPER MAN IN PARIS AND SHOOTS SELF.

Marius Plateau, one of the officers of the royalist newspaper, L'Action Francaise, in Paris, was killed by a woman in her apartment on Wednesday, January 23, 1923. The woman, whose name is not given, a plain-looking Catholic, who entered the offices of the publication Monday and fired five reports, then turned the weapon on herself, and was taken to the hospital with a wound in her breast.

M. Plateau, besides being one of the reporters on the paper, also was a member of the King's Camelots, a band of young royalists prepared to ride to the rescue of any member of the royalist fraternity.

Mr. Plateau was thirty-six years old.

In Paris, it is said, for some time been planning a deadly raid upon the newspaper offices, but the action was not especially directed at Plateau more than at any other member of the staff. She called Saturday night at the home of Leon Daudet, editor of L'Action Francaise, pretending she had important revelations to make regarding the Anarchist party. She was asked to address the Anarchists, but refused.

NEWSPAPERS TO HAVE PLACE IN FARM WEEK.

Wisconsin newspapers will have an important part in the farmers' and homemakers' gathering at Madison during the week of January 29. The gathering will be a continuation of the annual get-together of rural Wisconsin. Prominent newspaper men from Wisconsin and other states will address the conference. Special emphasis will be placed on practical methods of covering the news in rural activities.

Frank Lovejoy of New York, an authority on farm advertising, has been secured as a speaker for the conference. He has made a reputation on farm advertising, and has been a speaker at many of the conferences.

IMPRESSIVE GIVING BOOK PUT OUT BY WISCONSIN PAPER.

A man declaring he is taking subscriptions to a magazine and giving a book put out by the Madison, Wisconsin State Journal as a premium, is working in the west, a Dr. Madir, 40 cents from a Madison woman for a subscription to a magazine which she later found obligated her for $5.20. She called the State Journal.

The State Journal does not give out premiums and has published a statement making it plain that it has no connection with any book scheme.

BURNHAM FAVORS ANGLO-AMERICAN CONSORTIUM.

How many the papers of the world may be I don't know, but I do know that in Great Britain thenumber of newspapers and periodicals sold in one year is about seven thousand millions. We are responsible among us for many of the influences which form the opinion and determine the conduct of the rest of the world.

Two friends of mine went not long ago into a revivalist meeting and a well-meaning member of the congregation came up to them and asked 'Are you saved?' 'No,' they answered. 'We are journalists.'

Whether we like it or not we are responsible for a large part of the life of the world. If by any coincidence you could assemble in one room the directors and editors of the world's newspapers, and they were to agree—which I grant you is almost inconceivable—to proclaim peace, the politicians would declare war to declare for war, war there assuredly would be.

Some five years ago in London I had the great pleasure of taking the chair at a dinner to Mr. Melville Bruce, the grand old one among the men of the world. He has stood always for veracity and accuracy in the collection of news, and what counts in journalism is the handling of the news. Mr. Bruce about Donald, one of our able editors who may be known to you, said 'Give me the news columns to manipulate, and I will give you all the editorials that you want.' Therefore, to my mind, the thing of most importance is not always to follow is to keep the hand of the politician and the financier off our news columns. Let news speak for itself. Great is Truth, and in the long run it will get home.

PUBLIC JUDGES NEWS.

We all believe in publishing the news and letting the public judge. It has its dangers and its opinion. I believe everything in this life is a balance of evils, and I believe emerald is a diamond, and truth the suggestion of falsehood. You may recollect a story of Delane, the famous editor, for forty years, of the London Times.

'He heard, at one of the fashionable houses at which he was always a welcome guest, some piece of news which was believed to be a profound secret.' said a fellow-guest. 'What are you going to do with it?' said Delane, 'Tell it.' 'Tell it?' said the other, 'Of course,' replied Delane. 'What else should I do with it?' One contrasts that with the memorable rebuke of Washington at the Philadelphia convention to a delegate who had лечения paper. 'Please get it out there,' he said, 'I must entreat gentlemen to be more careful lest our movements get into the newspapers and disturb the public repose by premature speculations.'

'It is a curious thing that in America the greatest example that the world has ever known of making a constitution should have been completed and consummated in a silence that was not violated by any careless months, whilst in Europe when newspaper correspondents have been kicked out of universities or palaces, wherever conferences have been held, no secret has been kept of what was any body's interest to reveal.'

The indiscretions of the newspaper press are nothing to the indiscretions of diplomacy, and the latter are always calculated indiscretions, generally intended to do as much harm as possible. It is to be feared also that the newspaper people understand more or less the value of publicity, whereas the statesmen is often enough dealing with a half-known medium.

We are proud to think that the President of the United States was a professional journalist and editor. That was a political factor that could be deployed in a newspaper office better, perhaps, than in any other center of human interest.

GREATER FACTOR FOR PROGRESS.

'My late friend and teacher, Lord Bryce, whose name, I believe, receives an equal meed of reverence and affection from our British and United Press representatives in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and mutual benefit.' We have had, greatly to our advantage, two Imperial Press Conferences, the first presided over by my father in 1909 in London, and the second under my chairmanship at Ottawa in 1920, but such conferences are but partial and incomplete if they do not include American and American publications. Every year, with what a Canadian financier termed 'a voracity that will not be satisfied,' the United States is devouring more news and more newspapers than any other country.

FOR GOOD OF WORLD.

'As in other things, your issues from the offices of our newspapers are far greater in the aggregate than ours, and your publishers are infinitely greater in number. In coming together, either on the side of the lycanthropic or the other, we might be of considerable usefulness and value on the sharing out principle, not only to ourselves but I believe, by our harmonious cooperation, for the good of the world at large.'

CONFERENCE FAVORED.

'More than a year ago I ventured to suggest a British-American Press Conference, and I am glad to know that the proposal was well received. Last summer an invitation reached me in London from the American publishers to organize a representation to New York next April. Unfortunately this was found to be impossible, but in the season of the year and the exigencies of the time, but time and season may, under proper arrangement, make it possible. The spirit is right and is ripe for a friendly and fraternal conference of the newspaper men of the whole of the English speaking world, and I hope that it may not be far removed from us.'

mer meeting place July 6 and 7, in advance of the meeting of the National Editorial Association, which meets July 9. He advised the Associated Dailies to have its summer meeting at Buffalo during this time so that its members could attend the meetings of the other associations and join the two of the N.E.B. near the St. Lawrence River. President Keefe and Secretary Hall will later arrange a date for the meeting at about this time.

There was considerable discussion of the question of the employment of an executive secretary and the proposition of combining the various state associations into one organization but no action was taken.

In the question box discussions the publication of radio programs was a new subject, which showed a difference of opinion. The publishers in the vicinity of broadcasting stations said they were compelled to publish the programs because of the insistent demand for them, although it did not result in any increase of advertising. Others have not adopted the practice and said they do not intend to unless there is a larger demand for it. The questionnaires of the members on subjects relating to advertising, circulation, costs, accounting and features was read by the secretary and followed by discussion.

Edmund H. Walker, New York newspaper accountant, spoke on legislative subjects of interest to the publishers. He referred to the recent court decision to the effect that stock dividends are not taxable and advised the publishers doing business as corporations to follow the example of the big corporations and distribute any surplus they may have to the stockholders as stock dividends. He said it is probable that there will be a new legislation by Congress imposing a tax of the surplus of corporations and that it will be better to anticipate any such legislation by changing it to capital.

Mr. Walker stated that he was also a publisher, being the owner of The Fort Worth, Texas, Record, and prospectus of the Smith Publishing Co., Fort Worth, N. J. In Fort Worth he said, he had lowered his local advertising rates with excellent results in increased advertising but had changed the usual 13 and 13½ em columns to 12 ems, which gives a fourteen per cent increase. He advised against the lowering of subscription rates and said the man who would be influenced by a one or two cent decrease in a newspaper would be no use to advertisers.

E. A. Morey of the Automobile Association of New York outlined the plan of the new association of automobile dealers of aiding in the enactment of laws to remove the prejudice against autotaxis by the acts of careless drivers and of co-operating with the publishers in fighting advertising of interest to the automobile industry.

President Keefe, chairman of the legislative committee of the past year, made his report of the bills introduced by Senator Baum and Assemblyman C. C. Smith, changing the existing rates as to state publications by making them adjustable to the circulation of the publisher. He said his committee is now drafting a supplemental bill to include display advertising of twenty-five words to the column inch for primary election notices, tax notices and audits of financial reports to be published in daily and weekly newspapers at rates determined by the circulation.

This, he said, would give the people of the rural districts information that the present laws do not give and will increase the income of the publisher. The bills will soon be introduced and will have the backing of the newspaper associations.

OHIO AGENCY CHANGES NAME.

The firm name of J. G. Trites & Co. Columbus, Ohio, has been changed to W. V. Brown & Co. The management and personnel of the agency remains the same. W. V. Brown, formerly manager of the Trites company, took over the agency in July when Mr. Trites joined the Toledo News-Bee, where he is now advertising manager.

"EVERY DAY IN EVERY WAY"

Applied to business through the Advertising Columns of Newspapers, is working wonders

Gloomy discussion of "business conditions" some time back almost supplanted weather talk in conversational circles. Great as was the harm done, it is quickly being repaired.

A new era is dawning. Confidence and assuredness are developing to an amazing degree.

Strange as it may seem, the public's ability and willingness to absorb has exceeded the producers' sale and supply energy.

It takes tremendous buyer demand to overcome the inertia of seller timidity, but a bold, confident seller activity quickly sweeps away buyer hesitancy.

The manufacturer and the seller found it a bit difficult to get up speed again, but it is gaining every day, and we are further along Prosperity Road than many people realize. The advertising columns of newspapers not only reflect this condition, but have contributed greatly to it.

We firmly believe that those who have bravely and intelligently kept before the prospective buying public with telling advertising in the newspapers covering their markets are OUTDISTANCING COMPETITION.

We are the National Advertising Representatives of twenty progressive newspapers in that many fine cities of the United States.

We are equipped to lay before any interested advertiser or advertising agency a vast amount of up-to-the-minute information regarding the market opportunities and publicity advantages of those cities, whenever and wherever you say.

NEWSPAPERS INCREASED IN IMPORTANCE IN 1922.

REACHED NEW HEIGHTS OF CIVIC AND COMMERCIAL RECOGNITION BY MEETING SEVEREST OF TESTS—NEW APPRECIATION OF THEIR RESPONSIBILITY.

The part played by newspapers in social and economic life never underwent keener scrutiny than during 1922. With a commercial situation that was entirely without parallel, the business men of the country turned to newspaper advertising as a marketing tool indispensable under the circumstances. As a sign, however, that the public is still closely watchful of its newspapers in both their news and editorial trends, the many criticisms and suggestions that were frequently made by persons both in and out of the newspaper business will provide newspaper editors and publishers with food for deep thought.

While the cold figures alone are enough to prove the achievements of the newspaper in a commercial way during 1922, so exact a summary of the newspaper's progress as a social factor is not available. The summary of opinions expressed on the newspaper both pro and con is given below, however, shows unmistakably that the American public holds its newspapers close to its heart and foremost in its mind. There will seem to be in the many ideas which are contained in the following references to articles which appeared in The Fourth Estate during 1922 ample assurance that public opinion will suffer no interference with the free, independent and clear thinking press.

The more detailed developments of the newspaper field during the year will be dealt with under divisional headings in this issue. Among those, however, that deserve particular mention are the development of radio and the newspaper's affinity for it, and the progress which was made in developing advertising service. Summed up the accomplishments of newspapers in 1922 were:

(1) The increased realization of their responsibility as molders of public opinion and definite progress toward the difficult discharge of that responsibility.

(2) Concrete demonstration of their commercial importance in developing markets for advertisers of all sizes and descriptions.

1922 BIGGEST YEAR IN NEWS PRINT PRODUCTION.

TOTAL OF 2,540,000 TONS FOR NORTH AMERICAN MILLS, INCREASE OF 140,000 OVER 1920—SHIPPMENTS KEPT UP WITH PRODUCTION GAINS—RECORD CONSUMPTION.

By R. S. Kellogg,
Secretary News Print Service Bureau.

The production of news print paper in North America hung up a new record in 1922, the total for the United States and Canada surpassing by some $40,000 the previous high mark of nearly 2,400,000 tons in 1920.

In this total the United States produced 1,448,000 tons or 223,000 tons more than in 1921, when the output had been depressed by prolonged strikes and also more than any previous year excepting 1918 when the total was 1,515,000 tons. In 1920 the product of the regular news print mills in the United States was supplemented by perhaps 80,000 tons from the so-called marginal mills, which the industry is too heavily dependent on news print supply in 1922.

The rapid development of new processes in Canada is strikingly shown by the fact that the output of the year was 1,082,000 tons more than 200,000 tons more than the 1920

THE FOURTH ESTATE

IMPORTANT TASKS ACCOMPLISHED BY S.N.P.A.

RE-ORGANIZATION WAS YEAR'S BIG ACHIEVEMENT—AGENCY RELATIONS INVESTIGATION AND START TOWARD FUND FOR JOURNALISM SCHOOL OTHER FEATURES.

By Charles I. Stewart.

President, the S.N.P.A.

The Southern Newspaper Publishers Association activities for the year 1922 were more in the formation of plans and in controversy rather than in definite achievements. A new plan of organization was put into effect at the July convention. This convention also amended the constitution and by-laws, making it possible for the association to make rules and regulations respecting the practices of its members and to establish matters in all newspapers, and to fix penalties for their enforcement.

This action grew out of a discussion of the relations between newspapers and publishers, and the practices of newspapers to the handling of national advertising coming from advertisers. The convention also recognized the situation pertaining to the relations between the newspaper and the agency, and the state that those regulations should prevail as to the recognition of agencies and the handling of national advertising.

A special committee has carried on the work, and has submitted a report, which has been published in the trade papers and which will be considered at the next annual convention.

The association has undertaken to raise an endowment for a school of journalism at the University of Georgia, according to the plans formulated by General Robert E. Lee when he was a student at West Point.

Substantial progress has been made toward raising this fund. The association has also acted as the initiating body in representing the publishing interests while the tariff bill was under consideration, and is entitled to a large share of the credit for the final defeat in the newsprint and wood pulp schedule of the new tariff law.

Representatives of the S.N.P.A. joined with other publishers' organizations in opposition to the effort to have the government department reverse its ruling respecting the cost of circuit as an invested capital.

The association has been endeavoring to serve its membership in the various phases of the practical problems that confront the newspaper publisher. A new plan of organization is endeavoring to give special consideration to newspaper accounting and traffic matters. It is seeking to build up in every capacity, organization, at least an understanding on the part of its members in each state as to the newspaper business.

It is endeavoring to have in each state an organization for touching both state and federal legislative matters. It is endeavoring to make the newspaper organization take a definite part in clearing information on mechanical problems and circulation methods and practices.

It is endeavoring to bring the association into closer touch with Southern manufacturers as users of newspaper space. It is also giving careful consideration to the standards of the editorial departments and is making investigation as to the compensations of the editors and other departments and as compared with compensation in other departments. Just what the definite sentiment along the different lines is to be depends upon the work now in an incomplete state.

FIRM FOUNDATION FOR I.E.A. BUILT IN THREE YEARS.

LAST TWELVE MONTHS SAW PRELIMINARY PLANNING NEARLY CARRIED OUT — MORE THAN 1,000 ADDED TO MEMBERSHIP ROLL BY CAMPAIGN.

By Hassal T. Sullivan,
President International Editorial Association.

The International Editorial Association, Inc., with offices at 140 South Dearborn street, Chicago, entered its fourth year with the promise of an increased membership and a program of work which the I.E.A. was organized to do. The year 1922 marked the close of this period of preparation and establishment.

One tangible indication of progress during the last twelve months was the membership campaign that has placed more than 1,000 new names on the roster of the association. Better, however, than the additional members is the spirit around the by-laws and the convention and the subsequent campaign among the active membership. Previously, as is the case with many other associations, especially of writers, the work had been left almost entirely to the executive officers and the board of managers.

If the membership drive had not obtained an additional cent of revenue it was worth the effort because it made active work of going up the list of members who previously had done nothing. The result was that the association ceased to be a mechanical doll whose head only moves, and became an aggressive living entity presiding over all the executive officers and the board of managers.

If the board of directors had not obtained an additional cent of revenue it was worth the effort because it made the work of the board of directors possible.

The board of directors also is working on the program for a longer and more substantial campaign than those previous.

The International Editorial Association regards 1922 as a satisfactory year, as it made possible development in 1923 that promises to be more rapid and substantial than growth in 1920 and 1921.

1922 BIGGEST YEAR IN NEWS PRINT PRODUCTION.

News print year broke records in Canada.

Tremendous demand by U.S. resulted in production exceeding consumption by only one per cent—gain in export value. Despite lower prices.

By George M. McKee. President Canadian Pulp and Paper Association.

At the opening of the year 1922 the situation in the pulp and paper industry was not very cheerful although there were several factors of promise and encouragement for the coming year. The industry, like many other industries, had been passing through the reaction from the industrial boom of 1919-1920. Development and improvement had been made and mills had been modernized and recovered. There have been readjustment and economies in operation; high-priced materials have been worked off and inventories written down.

There have been the desire and the necessity to get down to a solid basis which should serve as a foundation for the gradual improvement which is so freely predicted by careful observers. This year will show the pulp and paper industry in good shape to take full advantage of the return to better conditions. This year marks a turning point in the pulp and paper industry, and normal conditions will make for a steady and balanced development in the future.

Canada produces a great deal more pulp and paper than her population can use, hence the prosperity of this industry depends greatly upon conditions in other countries. At present we are in United States, which is our best customer for these products. In that country conditions are similar to those in Canada and the return to normal conditions and the improvement in this country will react upon the situation in this country.

Our exports to the United States have been considerably increased over the exports of the previous year, although the big reduction in prices has cut down exports. There have been double those of the previous year and our news print exports were greater by about 40 per cent. Financial and general conditions in the Scandinavian countries have also had their effect upon the pulp and paper industry in Canada, as these countries are our competitors in the United States markets, chiefly for sulphite pulp.

The Canadian mills have had to face severe competition from the mills of Scandinavia, which, like ours, were badly hit by the slump of 1920-1921, but have modernized their mills in size and capacity. The large improved chlorine pulp which they are now producing is being sold to European countries which are importing from the United States and Canada. This is a serious situation for the Canadian pulp and paper industry. The Canadian mills must improve their products and modernize their plants if they are to compete with the Scandinavian mills.

The news print industry has done best from a production point of view. For various reasons there was in the early part of 1922 a tremendous increase in the consumption of news print aper in the United States and the demand exceeded supply. As Canada supplies about one-third of this news print, our mills have been operating nearly to capacity during the greater part of the year.

Improvement has been shown in all lines of the pulp and paper industry in 1922. Production has been greater than in the previous year from 30 to 35 per cent. Our output last year and our production of news print increased by over 50 per cent. Our exports of bleached and writing paper gradually increased during the year and we are not showing a steady increase.

As news print industry has done best from a production point of view. For various reasons there was in the early part of 1922 a tremendous increase in the consumption of news print aper in the United States and the demand exceeded supply. As Canada supplies about one-third of this news print, our mills have been operating nearly to capacity during the greater part of the year.

Canadian pulp and paper men in 1923 will be in better shape to meet the competition of the world. The demand for pulp and paper products is increasing in many countries and the Canadian mills are better equipped to meet this demand.

1922 and prices tended to stiffen slightly at that time. Pulp prices increased, and newsprint prices were raised $5 a ton for the first quarter of 1923. This trend, with the increasing demand for all grades of paper and the improved outlook for business generally, gives an optimistic outlook for 1923, and shows justification for the continued increase in prices. The capacity of Canadian manufacturers had in the fundamental soundness of their industry.

Table A, herewith, details of our exports of pulp and paper will serve to prove that prices have been held in that direction during the year, and to compare with the year 1921. Quantities given in that year, and the increasing demand for pulp and paper in general, the year for the year was 350,000 tons.

There are also various additions to our capacity to manufacture fine papers under construction or in progress, which we hope will make the year 1923 one of continued progress for Canada and show this industry has expanded in a firm hold in the country, and in a high place among the factors tending to its prosperity.

GREAT STRIDES IN FORESTRY SAVING DURING YEAR.

By DR. HUGH P. BAKER, Secretary, American Paper and Pulp Association.

The development in the paper industry of a right appreciation of the need for a definite solution of the raw material problem, which in turn has been part of the development of a better understood governmental bureaus in Washington and the paper industry in the country at large, is the biggest achievement of the American Paper and Pulp Association during the year.

This raw material has a particular relation to the newspaper profession, for among the industries, governmental bureaus and the office of the Press, the paper Publishers Association has been an active participant, together with the National Board of Commerce, and other organizations interested in the nation's forests, in the campaign to achieve that which will protect existing forests, and cause new ones to be planted. The Association will take the place of those which are cut to provide the paper on which newspapers, books and magazines are printed.

Only a few days ago it was announced that a great paper company in Canada had been so far convinced of the practical value of technical forestry that it had turned over to its technical foresters for absolute control, some 900 square miles of pulp wood timber land.

The American Paper and Pulp Association is interested in technical forestry, and in the reclamation of forested land industries, and the makers of writing and wrapping, as well as the plantations, have gained much practical experience through their close-ups into actual newspaper operation.

SCHOOLS OF JOURNALISM

Nothing has taken so firm a root in American college life as the school of journalism. A survey of university activities during 1922 discloses the activities of more than a score of colleges represented in the matter tabulated below, and while this does not indicate the extent of the work in the subject, it affords an illuminating insight into the importance which schools of journalism have achieved in our national life.

The highest glance at schools of journalism and their activities demonstrates that they are constantly minimizing theory and maximizing practice. No editor, no publisher, no advertiser is too big for a place on the lecture program of a leading school of journalism.

Further development of the school of journalism at the University of Missouri under the direction of Professor William C. Smiley, president of the Press Congress of Missouri, was another of the great accomplishments of the year.

Practically every school of journalism is now working on its own newspapers for its students, either regularly or periodically.

It is said it would not be possible to turn over their newspapers to students, who have gained much practical experience through the close-ups into actual newspaper operations.

Radio

BECAUSE IMPORTANT FACTOR IN EDITING, CIRCULATION AND ADVERTISING.

Radio entered the newspaper business in 1922 on a firm basis. Its usefulness as a means of transmitting news was demonstrated during a storm in Wisconsin. Its advertising value was also emphasized and handsome returns for the newspapers which carried the service prompted others to specialize. Broadcasting stations were erected by more than half a hundred newspapers.

The interest that was created in the new form of amusement by the newspapers recorded returns in circulation building for many publishers. The value of the radio as a permanent circulation builder, however, remains in doubt, although radio pages have commanded attention equal to the interest that is manifested in the sports, automobile and theatrical pages. The peaks of newspapers' interest in radio is readily discernible after a pr夏天al of the accompanying chronological table.

LABOR

MANTON AWARD DISPUTE WAS YEAR'S BIG DIFFICULTY—GAINS FOR OPEN SHOP.

Although negotiations on the new contract between the American Newspaper Publishers Association and the International Typographical Union remained uncompleted and ended in comparative quiet in labor developments, with some notable exceptions, the situation seems to be in line to be renewed without great difficulty. Establishment of an open shop division of the contract seems to have been ended. The Manton meeting was probably the outstanding development from a national point of view. Relations between the New York City publishers and Web Pressmen's Union No. 25 were not so difficult that they were old even in the New York papers. The New York Daily News print journalists are nearing an agreement outside the scope of the Manton award, while in the evening newspapers issuing election extras.

Radio played an increasingly important part in smoothing the difficulties from strikes, and many local disagreements were amicable adjusted by that means. The output of newspapers in the New York area was at its usual rate throughout the year, and the principles of the decision of the principle of arbitration.

CIRCULATION

RADIO WIDELY WELCOMED, BUT READER INSURANCE FAILS OF ENDORSEMENT.

One of the healthiest signs developed during 1922 was the increased importance accorded the circulation manager and his work. The several organizations of circulation managers practically without exception increased their membership during the year, and at least 50 per cent of them expanded so as to take in more territory.

The leading features in circulation stimulation during the year were the revived use of the slogan "What Do You See Today?" and the "Millionaire For a Day" stunt.

A prompt 50 per cent increase in permanent circulation, not merely the kind that comes but to go.

CIRCULATORS PUT COMPETITION ON HIGHER PLANE.

BETTER METHODS AND HIGHER STANDARDS ACHIEVED BY INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION — PLANS TO ADD 400 NEW MEMBERS TO ORGANIZATION IN 1923.

By J. J. Lynch.

During 1922 the International Circulation Managers Association reached the peak of its development with a membership of about 600 circulators from every state in the Union and from Canada and Mexico. These members cooperate in their efforts in America, from the metropolitan newspapers of New York and Chicago to the smallest.

This great continent-wide membership makes the I.C.M.A. the largest, most representative organization in newspaperdom.

With such a large, active group of members we have been able to achieve the object of our organization and to enlighten its members and further the best interests of the departments of newspapers.

With our bi-monthly bulletin and especially the annual convention, we have for many years kept our members informed of the latest developments in the business of circulating newspapers.

By keeping our bi-monthly bulletin and especially the annual convention, we have for many years kept our members informed of the latest developments in the business of circulating newspapers.

Among the many successful projects of the I.C.M.A. is the plan of recognizing the efforts of the newspaper men who have brought their newspaper circulation up to a 1,000 by the end of 1923.

NEWSPAPER MEN

NEW PAPERS

IN PUBLIC

Although the recently published survey of the Ayer Newspaper An nual shows that the number of daily newspapers in the United States in 1922 were eleven less than in 1921, the following list of new papers whose births were chronicled in The Fourth Estate during the year in dicates that there are still plenty of journalists eager to get into publish ing "on their own." It is noticeable that the accompanying list contains the names of many cities of import ance and that the new enterprises were fairly well distributed through out the country.

The trend toward consolidation which has been particularly noticeable within the last five years continued in 1922, and the growth of chain owned or co-operated papers, particularly in the large cities, was an important factor.

MERGERS

A merger of the American Publishing Company, now owned by the Field-Hollinger Syndicate, and the Times Publishing Company was completed in February 1922.

SUSPENSIONS

Of the twenty-two newspapers suspended, four were suspended for the first time in 1922.

LITIGATION

Important libel suits were not numerous in 1922, one feature of the year in the courts being the victories scored by newspapers in legal skirmishes with Ku Klux Klan. Court actions of various natures are included in the tabulation below.

LEGISLATION

Little adverse legislation, either national or local, was encountered by newspapers during the year. The proposal for a "three-year" bill, which was generally regarded as menacing the freedom of the press and which was before Congress, was not passed.

EDITORS IN COURT

WIRE SERVICES
Expansion is the word that de scribes the year 1922 among the press associations. There was not one which did not increase its facilities and equipment during the year. The Cosmopolitan News Service was a newcomer. The established services made their first use of radio in April.
One notable accomplishment of the Associated Press during the year was the completion of its double trunk wires from coast to coast and further progress toward double trunking from Lakes to Gulf. Under the administra tion of President Frank B. Noyes and associates, who so long have served it, the Associated Press expanded its newsgathering facilities in all corners of the earth and also increased its membership.

By M. KoENIGSBERG.
President of International News Service.
The year 1922 is epochal in the his tory of International News Service.
It marked the establishment of this newspaper institution as the greatest leased wire service for evening news papers.
At the close of the day's work on the last day of 1922, International was sending out the world's news to American newspapers selling ten and a half million copies every day. That epitomizes the achievements of this organization better than any state ment of its conspicuous news beats or than the expansion of its field.
Men and women everywhere want every shred of the news today. Thirty million Americans read newspapers carrying International News Service despatches because day in and day out International has furnished the news quicker, better, more accurately, and more completely than any other news agency.
Maintaining throughout the year its record for speed and accuracy, Inter national never let down its standards of dependability and reliability.
International beat the field of world correspondents at Genoa, scored con spicuously with news of the Turkish advance and burning of Smyrna, scooped everybody on the war in China, was first with the news of Ire land, and the dramatic overthrow of the old Italian government.

INDUSTRIES ALIGN TO CONSERVE FORESTS.

NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS AND PAPER MILLS WORKED IN HARMONY DURING 1922 TO OBTAIN LEGISLATION, AND MANY INDEPENDENT STEPS FURTHERED THE AIM.

By Warren B. Bullock, Secretary, National Forestry Program Committee.

The year 1922 was a great year for forever-devoted to forestry in not in fact, the greatest yet known by this country. In eventual striking blow of the year was the message of President Harding to congress on December 8, when he said:

"We must encourage the greatest possible cooperation between the federal government, the various owners of forest lands, to the end that protection from fire shall be made more effective and replanting encouraged."

This sentiment is growing nationally, as evidenced by the fact that 1922 opened with the devoting of more than a thousand dollars to the problems by the agricultural committee of the house of representatives, on the Snell bill, sponsored by the national forestry committee, which included the American Newspaper Publishers Association, the American Paper Manufacturers Association, the Associated Newspapers of the Wood Industry, and several other local organizations of wide influence.

The hearings by congress on the forestry question were the most extensive event of the national forestry program. The hearings of the special representatives and newspapers having special representatives were issued by The Fourth Estate April 22 and December 23, 1922.

PRESIDENT HARDING

Active participation in the move- ment which succeeded in procuring for the press the privilege of using naval radio stations and his favorable attitude toward publishers' efforts to procure relief from war-time postal rates were outstanding features in Harding's relationships with the newspapers. In many other ways he gave evidence that the newspapers and newspapermen are still a chief interest with him.

ADVERTISING

No man of perception could have paid much attention to the advertising pages of any newspaper during 1922, without realizing that behind the advertiser's message lay a business mechanism never equaled before. A marketing situation which required that every newspaper advertising was automatic; business men realized more than ever the economy and elasticity of selective and developing favorable markets through the newspapers. It was made that the close of the year indicate that this was reflected by an increase advertising volume over radio received of fifty million dollars; that is from the hundred and fifty million dollars in 1921 to ten seven hundred million dollars in 1922.

ADVERTISING ASSOCIATIONS

Increased efficiency in advertising through increased service for their members was the keynote of the policy of the American Association of Advertising Agencies during 1922.

The American Association of Advertising Agencies presented increased service to the daily newspaper and advertising fraternity by reason of its increased staff through its campaign to advertise advertising.

The Associated Advertising Clubs of the World closed the year in a much stronger position than ever before. A reorganization plan had been in mind for sometime, but the convention at Milwaukee decided for this basis that made itself felt in every corner of the United States where there is an advertising club.

PUBLISHERS RATES SOUND VERDICT OF FOUR A'S.

It is a big thing to remove or even to reduce waste in advertising operations even though the waste affects publishers. Publishers have not been in favor of advertising operations even though the waste affects them. Publishers have not been in favor of advertising operations even though the waste affects them.

Any business operating with such proportion of standardization is all things with which it deals are capable of being standardized.

In our dealings with publishers we have made great progress in reducing the number of false motions. This means getting more of the advertiser's dollars and it is something the publisher's till and consequently more returns on each dollar the advertiser puts out. We are making it possible for advertisers to improve their advertising appropriations grow larger.

We have reached the point with publishers where we are able to discuss early in the new year the findings of a comprehensive study of classification in rates. It may then appear that further simplification in that direction is not possible.

This applies to the handling or classification of rates and not to the question of whether the publication shall be continued.

Over the whole field we observe that publishers' rates are extremely complicated.

It is unquestionably a fact that in no other field of business operations are the technical quantities greater in number or sounder in principle than they are in advertising rates in this country today.

The publishers of the entire country have been so complicated and we are frank to say that we attribute much indeed of the magnificent development of advertising appropriations for 1923 to the solid values the publisher gets from his advertisers.

In other words, the present great volume of advertising of advertisements, if possible if publishers' rates did not provide such a safe and profitable investment to the advertiser.

GREAT STRIDES IN FORESTRY SAVING DURING YEAR.

message was specific in its declaration for a permanent forest policy for the nation. The step needed by the paper industry and the newspaper publishers, and legislation is pending in Congress to make such a policy.

The accomplishment of the year in forestry is not to be credited entirely to the paper industry. It has been the work of the newspaper editors and publishers of the country to sell the forestry idea to the nation and to force the forestry situation into the public eye. The newspaper, however, has because of its having in its associations and in all organizations practical, though technical, foresters, been able to lead in the formulation of a workable forest policy. It has helped to put organized industry back of the campaign of which this newspaper have been the public, to the ultimate advantage of the paper or the publishing industry, of the whole country who will benefit by the improving of the forests of the whole country, for industrial and recreational uses, and also serving as reservoirs for water, power and portable uses.

If in 1923 can see the successful conclusion of this campaign, the paper and publishing industries, really subdivisions of a great super-industry, will have done a great constructive work for the whole nation.

INDUSTRIES ALIGN TO CONSERVE FORESTS.

Control of its forestry department, 900 miles of the Adirondack region, north of Lake Superior, has been shown by extensive investigation, to have become more productive of a forest crop under the handling of its timber through scientific management than it would have been the case under ordinary logging methods. The Spanish River Company, Canadian property, has placed eight to ten townships, or over 300 square miles of its lands under control of its forestry department.

The Mead Pulp and Paper Company, Dayton, Ohio, controlled largely by the same interests which are back of the Spanish River Company, has conducted extensive experiments in the artificial reforestation of the Ohio valley region and other hard woods, readily adaptable for pulp making.

Many Enlisted in Work.
The Chateaugay Pulp and Paper Company of Chateaugay, N. Y., ordering 150,000 Norway spruce trees, gave the state of New York's conservation department the largest single order for trees for artificial reforestation placed during 1922. There are in the paper industry eighty men whose forestry work and training is such as to enable them to membership in the woodlands section of the American Paper and Pulp Association. Many, undoubtedly, are in this work, but not organization members.

Forest clubs have been organized in New York City and in Maine, for the getting together monthly of technical foresters, actively practicing their profession. Those in Maine are largely engaged in work for paper companies.

At least three Maine paper companies, are practising actual reforestation using chiefly spruce for pulp wood, but some pine. They are the Orono Pulp and Paper Company of Orono, Me., the Eastern Manufacturing Company of Bucksport, Me., and the Pejepscot Paper Company of Brunswick, Me.

In New York three important paper companies at least are practising technical forestry in the cutting and thinning of cutover lands. These include the Chateaugay Pulp and Paper Company, Chateaugay, N. Y., Finch, Pruyn & Co., Glen Falls, N. Y., and the William T. Cary & Company, Troy, N. Y. In addition, the forest lands of the Racquette River Paper Company of Potsdam, N. Y., looked ahead so many years ago that George W. Sisson, Jr., president of the company, formerly president of the American Paper and Pulp Association, sent his son to Cornell University to take a technical forestry course. This son is now head of the forestry department of the father's company.

A Problem for the East.

Reforestation is most notably a development of the eastern states, where before the lake state forests were touched, and the need has consequently been greatest. A number of states much earlier than in the west.

More and more attention is being paid to the problem by the states. Iowa announces the planting of several thousand small trees. In Northern Wisconsin a technical forester, Dr. Hugh P. Baker, executive secretary of the Oconto Pulp and Paper Association, with two associates, one a technical forester, has in the last year persued a work which has characterized 1,500 acres of land of which 1,100 acres will be artificially reforested, and the balance, 500 acres of land along four miles of frontage on three lakes, will be devoted to the establishment of the first forest camp for boys in the United States. Camp Mislike, as it will be known, will not be a new forest school, but a boys' private camp with a forestry training for its background. The purchase for next spring's planting of 12,000 pine and spruce trees marks the beginning of the first reforestation to be done on an extensive scale in the middle west. Over one million trees will be planted in the northern forested lands.

The lumber industry, which has not yet felt the pressure of the depletion of the forests so seriously as has the paper industry, is, nevertheless, paying more and more attention to forestry.

Several regional associations of the lumber industry now have technical foresters in their executive offices. O. T. Swan, formerly of the United States forest service, is with the Wisconsin-Michigan Hardwood Workers, as secretary, and J. C. Nella, also of the federal forest service, has been with a lumbermen's association in North Carolina. Several other similar organizations have retained technical foresters.

The most important recent development, however, is the decision of the California redwood lumbermen to place their great western forests under forestry management, under a highly trained forester, to insure a continuous production of redwood lumber without the depletion of the forests. This development, involving as it does the national sentiment for the preservation of western tree giants, is a most significant forward step.

Cellulose operators have adopted a policy of handling their timberland operations in accordance with the advice of foresters on federal service, particularly in the delicate problem of forest disposition.

A development of the year was the addition of a technical forester to the executive force of the American Forestry Association, to give technical assistance to the members, and others calling upon the association for service.

The American Tree Association is a new national organization, with a somewhat broader scope, though with general similarity, which will take over by agreement with the American Forestry Association the public educational work formerly done by the latter organization.

Most of the important developments of the year have undoubtedly been omitted in this review, but the achievements of 1922 will justify the belief that 1922 set a new record of forestry accomplishment.

The year just closing was marked by extensive reforestation legislation in many of the states, particularly steps toward lifting the tax burden on growing trees which discouraged many who would otherwise develop cut over lands. The year to come is full of promise, with definite legislation both in states and in congress to establish national forestry policy co-ordinating the work of the nation, the states, and private timberland owners.

1922 BIGGEST YEAR IN NEWS PRINT PRODUCTION.

the 1920 record. In 1922, the newspapers fared much better than the magazines in the advertising field, since the volume of advertising in the two periods was approximately equal. In 1920, the newspapers carried $600,000,000 of advertising, while in 1921, they carried $620,000,000, of which the newspapers took $500,000,000.

The large volume of advertising, both periodical and newspaper, planned for and to be expected during 1923 is a matter of common knowledge. It looks as though the time were not far distant when the total yearly expenditure for advertising by means of the printed page in North America would be one billion dollars.

Paper manufacturing in North America is also a billion-dollar industry, with the production of news and print making up a very respectable proportion of the total investment and capital improvements.

The new machines to be put into production during the first six or eight months of 1923 will have a capacity of 600,000 tons per year, carrying the total capacity of the industry beyond 9,000 tons daily, of which some 5,000 tons are being produced daily. In States with a much larger capacity, more than 4,000 tons in Canada. Still further extensions are under consideration, so that the newspapers publisher wherever he may be in North America can look forward to 1923 should be able to get all the paper he needs without going overseas for any portion of his supply.

Abstract of report made at the annual meeting of the News Print Service Bureau in Montreal, January 26, 1923.

"Git Thar Fustest with the Mostest"

In those words General Nat Forrest, the Confederate cavalry genius of the American Civil War, is said by military authorities to have stated the whole science of war.

The same words forcibly cover the science of newspaper making. The newspaper that succeeds—wins the reader's interest and confidence—is that which "Gits thar fustest with the mostest" news.

For a specific instance consider the market and financial pages of The Chicago Daily News.

The Daily News has taken advantage of its opportunity to give its readers the COMPLETE story of the Financial Day, in its "Final Edition," TWELVE HOURS EARLIER than this same news is supplied by any morning newspaper.

Inevitably readers know and appreciate this service and inevitably they prefer to read the news while it is new—as well as complete and reliable.

An increasing army of readers is making The Daily News financial and market section its directory and guide in matters of investment.

Your advertisement in this section will reach the potential investor when his investment interest is at its peak.

You will "git thar fustest with the mostest."

PRESS ASSOCIATIONS FIGHT POISONED FOREIGN NEWS.

OFFICIAL REVEALS "INSIDE" STORY OF WORLD NEWSGATHERING — EVEN GOVERNMENTS OBSCURE AND SUPPRESS — NEW YORK THE NEW WORLD CENTER.

Press services have discovered that their problem is not "combing the world for news" but "combing the news for truth," Karl A. Bickel, president of the United Press Associations, informed the gathering of Ohio editors and publishers which took place this week at Ohio State University. Today there is more news in the world than "all the press associations in America can carry," Mr. Bickel said, summarizing for whom the task of world news selection.

World news relationships have undergone a tremendous upheaval within the last nine years, Mr. Bickel pointed out. New York, he said, is rapidly becoming the central clearing house for the news of the world, for "where the credit of the world rests rests its news interests." Evidence of the primacy of New York as a news center was furnished by Mr. Bickel's description of the reliance placed upon New York cables in Canada, Australia, Europe, South America, Japan, and China, to which country the United Press has just opened a daily cable service.

What the uproar in Europe has done to complicated distribution of truthful news is vividly brought out in Mr. Bickel's words. Even... of truth and news and those of distant countries, and many other factors which interfere with one country's appraisal of another.

"I was told that my subject was to be 'Combing The World for News,' but the world is full of news," said Mr. Bickel. "France throws strewn its face Ruhr into a military receivership and a match is scored that may throw the still smoldering wreckage of Europe into the flame of another war. A common boar's head... is grafted into the socket of a Jersey City boy and the lad sees his first glimmer of the sunlight in years.

"The world was never more interesting. Trotsky is marching a million men, possibly the best armed and... for his Moslem thousands, is awaiting word to launch a new drive to regain southeastern Europe for the Crescent.

"The announcement of the presence of the Holy Soul rests in the unconscious mind while hundreds of determined citizens battle with the police to force their way into his lecture room. Three hundred thousand starving women parade in Versailles asking... that may be won and retained by arms. There is news abroad.

"It is four years since Versailles and yet there is no peace. European budgets are mounting higher; European armies are growing larger; taxes are piling up; national bankruptcies... and more inevitable. Great Britain alone of the European powers is making real headway against the rising tide of national disaster that seems to be confronting her sister nations. The reason is plain:"

"I am paying fifteen shillings out of every pound of profit that I make on the Daily Telegraph," Lord Burnham said to me recently in London. Roughly, that represents... of every dollar in profit made by Burnham's great paper.

"The population of the world is something over two billions of people. The preservation of democracy today rests in the hands of less than ten per cent of that number. There is plenty of work for us to do, and I think about in that.

There is no dearth of news these days. There is more news, in fact, than all the press associations in America can carry. (Continued on Tenth Page)

DO FILM PUNDITS RUN THE PRESS? (LAUGHTER). MINISTER'S CHARGES AGAINST WASHINGTON DAILIES AS RESULT OF INATTENTION TO MOVE FOR FEDERAL CONTROL OF MOVIES ARE QUICKLY REPUDIATED.

Does the moving picture industry use its influence for the suppression of news in the American press? This question, raised by Dr. Charles Seidman, chief of the press section of the Federal Trade Commission, was answered by Mayor Marcus A. Smith of Chicago, who said that the film industry is not responsible for the suppression of news in the American press.

EXPERT EXPLAINS TO RHODE ISLAND BANKERS WHY BIG ADVERTISERS ARE BETTER CREDIT RISKS THAN CONCERNS WHICH "DON'T BELIEVE IN IT."

Speaking at the annual dinner of the Rhode Island Bankers Association at Providence Thursday, William A. Thomson, director of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, made plea for more definite recognition by bankers of the asset of good will based on advertising.

He said bankers had recently awakened to the importance of advertising and were urged them to consider the advertising done by their clients in determining their eligibility for banking accommodations, on the assumption that a successful advertiser was a better banking risk.

"How many of you believe sufficiently in advertising as an exact and proven commercial instrument to give an advertiser who wants a loan preference over a non-advertiser, other conditions being identical?"

"In other words, is there today in the consciousness of the banker any tangible asset in the good will and the potentiality of advertising done by one of his clients?"

"We advertising men are not bankers, but we sincerely believe that the right kind of advertising does represent a very tangible asset for the firm employing it.

"Let me illustrate: Suppose any of your great New England industries that have built up sales and lasting reputation in the public mind, and are in a position to lose all their plants overnight. Suppose every dollar they owned was swept away by some catastrophic calamity. Yet there would rise Phoenix-like from the ruins of any one of these businesses, a thing called consumer good will behind which hundreds of men with money to invest would be glad to stand, knowing perfectly well that you might kill the physical assets, but that you could not kill the name built up on good will.

"Suppose you want to go into the cigarette business, or the candy business, or the cereal business. Materials to make these articles, and make them just as well as anyone today, can be built up.

"But suppose the makers of the great popular cigarette decided to put a new brand on the market tomorrow, in competition with an unknown firm which had decided to put out another brand just as good in quality and just the same in price to lose all their plants overnight. Suppose every dollar they owned was swept away by some catastrophic calamity. Yet there would rise Phoenix-like from the ruins of any one of these businesses, a thing called consumer good will behind which hundreds of men with money to invest would be glad to stand, knowing perfectly well that you might kill the physical assets, but that you could not kill the name built up on good will.

The Only Authorized Service of News and Pictures of the Tomb of Tut-ankh-Amen

King of Egypt 3,000 Years Ago

From The London Times, January 10, 1828

THE TOMB OF THE KING

CONTRACT GIVEN TO "THE TIMES"

EXCLUSIVE SERVICE OF NEWS

LORD CARNARVON'S PLANS

We are able to announce that Lord Carnarvon, with the cordial consent of Mr. Howard Carter, has entered into an exclusive agreement with The Times for the distribution throughout the Press of the world of all news and photographs of his discoveries in the tomb of Tut-ankh-Amen. Both Lord Carnarvon, since his return to London, and Mr. Howard Carter, at Luxor, have agreed that it is an impossible task to supply the Press individually with news and illustrations of their discoveries. It has therefore been agreed for the future to employ a single agency for this purpose.

The Times has now accepted the offer of The Times to place their organization at his disposal for the purpose of supplying a service of news and illustrations of the discoveries to every newspaper, magazine, or other periodical publication in the world which wishes to have it. He has therefore placed in our hands the whole of the serial publication rights of his expedition, and these rights include all news of discoveries, special articles, interviews, and photographs relating to the several chambers of the tomb of King Tut-ankh-Amen, opened and yet to be opened. Neither Lord Carnarvon nor any member of his party will supply news, articles, or photographs to any other individual, newspaper, or agency. No other service will be authorized.

The Times will supply the Press of the world with the material obtained under this agreement by means similar to those used in the arrangements which it made last year with the Mount Everest Expedition. Arrangements have already been made in Egypt and in London by which the whole of the material secured by Lord Carnarvon and Howard Carter will be dispatched to The Times Office in London from Luxor. The Times will make its arrangements for this service direct with the newsmen in every country, but will absent throughout the world. All news matter and photographs published under this arrangement will bear following acknowledgment: "The Times's world's copyright by arrangement with the Earl of Carnarvon. Both The Times and Lord Carnarvon will take every precaution to prevent any infringement of this copyright.

Lord Carnarvon will leave London at the end of next week for Luxor. During his absence Mr. Howard Carter has been engaged in removing and preserving the objects found in the first chamber. Soon after Lord Carnarvon's arrival at Luxor the most important task of all will be undertaken. The mystery of the north wall of the outer chamber, guarded by gigantic statues of King Tut-ankh-Amen, will be solved. Nobody can yet say what will be discovered behind that wall, but Lord Carnarvon has made public his conjecture in the special article which he contributed to The Times on December 11. He then said: "The chamber behind this wall may be the burial place of the king or some other member of the family, with his coffins and sarcophagi, the body of King Tut-ankh-Amen. Should this be the case, the discovery will be of the greatest importance."

The discovery of the tomb a few weeks ago aroused world-wide interest. People from all parts of the Europe and America are already flocking to the scene. Only the antechamber has been opened, but it was found to contain treasures unrivalled in the annals of Archaeology. The inner chambers, containing presumably the mummies of Tut-ankh-Amen and his queen, and probably also many further examples of the art and handicraft of one of the oldest civilizations, are now about to be opened.

It is proposed by the Earl of Carnarvon, under whose concession for exploration the tomb was discovered, to permit henceforward only authorized news, articles, and pictures relating to the discovery.

These will appear at frequent intervals in the daily and Sunday editions of The New York Times.

The pictures will appear chiefly in the Sunday rotogravure sections, where full justice can be done them. The articles will be prepared by competent writers and Egyptologists. Many pictures are on the way to New York and hundreds more will be taken. The service will probably run through several months.

Notice to Editors and Publishers

THE NEW YORK TIMES, by arrangement with The London Times, has undertaken to distribute to the newspapers and periodicals of the United States and Canada the service of news, articles, and pictures relating to the tomb of Tut-ankh-Amen, prepared under the sanction of the Earl of Carnarvon.

Newspapers and periodicals desiring all or any branch of this service are requested to apply at once to THE NEW YORK TIMES, Egyptian Service Department.

PRIVILEGE OF PROTECTION OF NEWS SOURCES ARGUED IN WASHINGTON COURT.

The question of immunity of newspaper men against forced disclosure of sources of information was brought up in the District of Columbia supreme court this week.

Mr. Whitney is the author of a series of thirteen stories published in the Boston Transcript last summer on the “red” menace in America. Part of the material published was given to him in confidence at the time of the Bridgemen, Michigan, raid on August 21 last, when W. Z. Foster, one of the leading spirits of the extreme radical movement in the United States, and twenty or more others present at the radical court meeting were arrested.

Frank P. Walsh, defending those apprehended as a result of the raid, wanted to know where Whitney got the documents. Whitney, who was being tried at St. Joseph, Mich., Lawyers Walsh presented the names of persons from whom the depositions. Others besides Whitney were William J. Burns, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, the Department of Justice, and William E. Brigham, Washington correspondent of the Boston Transcript.

Walsh came on to Washington to take the depositions authorized by the Michigan court, and the supreme court of the District of Columbia issued subpoenas for the persons named to appear. Whitney appeared before Walsh at the latter’s office and explained that the information desired had been given him in his capacity as a newspaper man and in confidence, and released its source on that ground, until his informant voluntarily lifted the seal of confidence.

The district court, ruling in the presence of the defendants, indi- cated that Whitney had no right to refuse to answer because of the seal of confidence.

Thus the situation last stood, with Whitney facing possible jail sentence for the contempt of court if he persists in his position.

Information to me that the seal of confidence is lifted, then I am perfectly willing to answer questions from you, Mr. Whit- ney, and Mr. Thompson, the District Attorney's assistant. At any rate, Whitney is “resting easy” in the attitude he has taken.

NATIONAL PRESS CLUB SEEKS NEW QUARTERS.

SEVERAL LOCATIONS BEING INVESTIGATED BY MEMBERS—STEPHEN F. EARLY OF A.P. IN BOARD OF GOVERNORS CHAIRMANSHIP—THEODORE TILLER IS GIVEN WATCH.

A special committee to investigate the matter of quarters for the National Press Club at Washington has been appointed by its new president, Carter Field, head of the Washington bureau of the New York Tribune. The lease of the club's present quarters expires in March, and it is to be decided whether it will be renewed or removal to another place effected.

One of the proposals made to the club is to top the floors of a new building in prospect, the lower floors of which would be occupied by newspaper bureaus in existing buildings will also be inspected.

At the first meeting of the new administration of the club held recently, Mr. Early was elected chairman of the board of governors, and Lewis Wood, of the New York Times, vice chairman. Alfred H. Kirchofer, of the Buffalo News, was appointed chairman of the house committee, and H. W. Bishop, of the National Republican, vice chairman. The chairman of other committees, suggested by President Field and approved by the board, were: Eligibility, Henry L. Swinehart of the Havas Agency; membership, Ulrie Bell, of the Louisville Courier-Journal; fellowship, Mark L. Goodwin, of the Dallas News; library, John H. Payne, of the Washington Post; publicity, Lewis Wood, general manager of the New York Herald.

A new committee, termed "The Glad Hand," was authorized, which will meet new members and make them feel at home through introductions to older members. Paul F. Haupert, of the Associated Press, will head the committee. The chairman of the important entertainment committee was left vacant, but a strong effort will be made to have Walker S. Buel, of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, who made the entertainments last year a success, resume the post.

Following the meeting, a large number of friends of Theodore Tiller, of the Atlanta Journal, presented him with a gold watch in recognition of his nine years of service as an officer and member of the board. Mr. Tiller declined to run for re-election this year. R. L. Marcey continues as assistant secretary and business manager.

Both Text and Display on One Machine

Straight text matter and display up to and including full 36 point can be set on one machine—either on Linotype Models 21, 22 or 24.

Any newspaper can now enjoy the convenience and economy of having every line machine set—on Linotype slugs. It isn’t necessary to figure on keeping the machine busy on display. In most small or medium-sized papers a Display Linotype will clean up all the display composition in a very short time and will then be available for body matter, just like any other Linotype.

Ask the nearest agency to show you what you can save by eliminating all hand-composition waste.

PUBLISHERS URGED TO LEARN PAPER MAKING.

S. E. THOMASON SEES BETTER UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN MANUFACTURERS AND THE CONSUMERS IF A LITTLE STUDY IS MADE—CANADIAN ASSOCIATION ELECTS.

The time is coming when news print manufacturers and newspaper publishers will work hand in hand to solve their mutual problems, S. E. Thomason told the American Newspaper Publishers Association and general manager of the Chicago Tribune, told members of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association at a luncheon in conjunction with the annual meeting of the association in Montreal last week. As a newspaper publisher and paper manufacturer, Mr. Thomason carried the message to his brother members of the paper making industry that was heartily received.

Mr. Thomason said: "If all the newspaper publishers could have experience in the various difficulties experienced by the manufacturers of news print paper they would approach the mutual problems of manufacturers and consumers of news print paper.

HEADS UNIVERSAL SERVICE LONDON BUREAU.

John T. Burke, formerly managing editor of the Richmond, Va., Evening Dispatch and editorial director of the Dispatch and London Times-Dispatch, has been appointed head of the London Bureau of the Universal Service. Mr. Burke, before his connection with the Times-Dispatch about three years ago, was for more than twenty years identified with the New York Herald in almost every capacity.

John T. Burke.

Mr. Burke was born in Ireland, coming to this country with his parents when three years old. He started his newspaper career on the Staten Island newspapers in 1896. For five years Mr. Burke was editor of the Paris edition and London correspondent of the Herald.

NEW ADVERTISING CLUBS FORMED ON NEOSSO PLAN.

CAMPAIGN FOR ORGANIZATION OF SMALL CITY CLUBS IN WEST MEETING WITH GREAT SUCCESS—GURNEY R. LOWE, ORIGINATOR OF PLAN, IS DIRECTING CAMPAIGN.

With the co-operation of the industrial departments of several railroads, as well as that of advertising clubs and district vice-presidents of the Advertising Clubs of the World, the association has launched an intensive campaign for the organization of small city clubs under the direction of Gurney R. Lowe of Neosho, "daddy" of the Neosho Golden Rule Sales Day.

Many new advertising clubs will be organized on the Neosho plan, and present advertising clubs seeking to broaden this plan will be afforded opportunity to take it up. A definite service, to be issued from the head office of the Associated Clubs in New York, will be regularly supplied to such clubs as they work to insure the greatest possible success.

For many months, Mr. Lowe has been organizing clubs with the sanction of the association but di rectly under its auspices. He worked under the direction of the community advertising department and with the co-operation of leading railroads, which gave him the opportunity to appeal directly to the assurance of their hearty support of the present campaign. The roads have found that advertising clubs, following the Neosho plan bring more business to a town, that helps the railroads.

The fee for the organization of a Neosho Plan club will continue to be what Mr. Lowe has charged heretofore, $5 a member, with a minimum of fifty members, and $1.50 of this fee will be applied to the first year's affiliation of the club with the A.A.C.W.

Under this plan, local merchants co-operate in staging a special sales day, once a month, each merchant offering a "special" to bring new business to town. These "specials" are carefully checked by a committee of the club, to insure that each price is just and fair, and that what is advertised is one which people of the surrounding radius will desire. These business men co-operate in the advertising of the special day. The plan also calls for the establishment of a special auction for the benefit of farmers of the surrounding country, the farmers bringing to this auction articles they no longer need, as well as live stock.

Neosho clubs have already been established in many small cities, and both the merchants of such cities and manufacturers and advertising agents who have investigated the operation, declare it the best method yet devised for the stimulation of trade and the establishment of better merchandising. For in addition to fostering the special sales days, these clubs maintain active educational and truth-in-advertising work designed permanently to improve advertising and merchandising standards in the community.

U.P. TAKES STAND TO DEMAND TRUE FOREIGN NEWS.

"There may have been a time—perhaps Mr. Stone can remember it—when the press associations of the world had to comb the world for news. But that day has passed.

"Since 1914 the world has been surfeited with news. It has become a tremendous problem to refine out of the mass that is piled up each twenty-four hours the imperatively important and the genuinely significant material. The real problem before the press associations of America today is not to comb the world for news, but to comb the news for truth.

"It is our function to give you the facts of all this; to give them truth and honestly in their proper places and proportions. It is not our duty to judge the issue, but it is our supreme duty to give you the news and if we give you the real news—the news with the truth—we must give you more than the mere statistical recital of the event that signalized this disaster."

"We must give you the facts, some of them hidden, that constituted the background and the conditions and the atmosphere which brought this sorry drama of confusion and ignorance to the surface of the stream of current events.

"It is easier to gauge the truth in domestic events than in those that occur in foreign countries. You can more easily visualize the conditions and sense the situations that dominate a domestic event. But in far away countries, where even governments do not hesitate to obscure the facts and poison the news sources, the difficulties of the modern American press associations to comb out the truth and the news are immeasurably increased.

"And, combined with this obstacle, often deliberately conceived, to prevent the true picture of an event from reaching your consciousness is the even more inescapable one of the lack of understanding between peoples.

"Every nation has its own standards of news and of truth in news. There is vastly more difference between what is the American ideal of news and the ideal of some European countries than 5,000 miles of water.

On the other hand, no two nations are more closely identified in habits of thought than the British and the Americans. Yet, this very surface similarity is exceedingly deceptive.

'The great difficulty with America,' said Stanley Baldwin, chancellor of the exchequer of Great Britain, upon his return to London with the British debt mission, 'is that the majority of Americans are from the country. They are rural minded and they do not understand an international situation.'"

"The rural mindedness and bucolic habits of Americans to Mr. Baldwin was a very serious obstacle to the settlement of the debt problem and thus to our national prosperity."

"A few weeks ago," I was speaking with Mr. Lloyd George about America, "the curse of England," he said, "is the fact that we have become a city people. The hope of America is that the great bulk of your people are still farmers who think in terms of the soil. It is only through the fact that America is still controlled by a farm people that prevents it from becoming threatened with the menace of socialism."

FOURTH ANNUAL CONFERENCE AT CORNELL UNIVERSITY PLANNED TO ATTRACTION THE EDITORS OF THREE STATES—SNAPPY VARIED PROGRAM AND PAPER CONTEST.

Plans were completed this week for the fourth annual newspaper conference which has become a regular feature of Farmers’ Week at the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University. The dates for this year’s conference are Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 12 and 13. Besides a program with addresses by publishers for New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio, a competitive exhibit of newspapers with separate classes for both dailies and weeklies is featured. The program follows:

What the city editor should tell the cub reporter. M. E. Corwin, Torrington, Conn. Corning Leader, Corning, N. Y. Reviving a newspaper. H. M. Suter, Jerauld Turner and Advertiser, Elimira, N. Y.

The newspaper campaign. V. W. Bradley and M. D. Dennis, Union Dispatch, Edenton, N. Y.

Announcement of awards, with basis of judging, in newspaper contests. Round table discussions. For weekdays. For dailies.

advertising while they themselves are the smallest users of this media in the country. Britsworth Adams showed some surprising results of a newspaper survey conducted in two of the largest newspapers of the country, and compared this result with that found in the smaller papers. News was classified in thirteen divisions: as follows: business and finance, sports, foreign, national, church, churches and schools, government and politics, labor and strikes, crime, disaster and death, courts, liquor, society, agricultural, and miscellaneous.

It was found that business and finance led the group, about twenty-five percent of the total news in the papers examined. Greetings from President Harding, and from Governor A. V. Donahue of Ohio were read at the evening session which followed the annual business meeting. Bickel, president of the United Press, spoke on ‘‘Combining the World for News’’ and ‘‘The spirit of competition in the real problem is to combine the news for truth. His remarkable address is printed elsewhere in this issue of FIFTH ESTATE.’’

S. B. Silver, director editor of the Scripps-Howard newspapers talked of ‘‘Newspapers as Folks.’’ He discussed the advertising of newspapers with Shakespeare’s ‘‘Seven Stages of Life.’’

Smith Bennett, Ohio attorney, talked on libel laws, showing the dangers of libel and coloring his remarks with illustrations. The concluding session of the conference was held Wednesday evening in the auditorium. ‘‘Soft advertising’’ as studied by Harry R. Young, of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, and ‘‘Reminiscences’’ by Malcolm Jennings. Election of officers for the ensuing year resulted in the following being chosen:

SNYDER ELECTED PRESIDENT.

President, R. C. Snyder, Norwalk Reflector-Herald; vice-president, E. E. Cook, Columbus Citizen; second vice-president, George Taylor, Times, Piqua; secretary, Fred Wallace, Coshocton Tribune; treasurer, Alfred Howsell, Bowling Green.

A feature of the conference was a display of daily and weekly newspapers of Ohio. These papers were judged by Professor Britsworth Adams and awarded for ‘‘best of the best’’ in the various classes. The following was chosen:

Class 1. Best local news, home and community news, weekly and semi-weekly, judged from quantity, quality and manner of presentation; first prize, Millersburg Republican; second, Mount Gilead Tri-County Opinion, (Westerville). Mention, People’s Defender, (West Union); People’s Advocate, (Marion); Shelby County News, (Sparta); Circleville Times, (Circleville); Richland County News, (Richland County); Coshocton Tribune, (Coshocton County); Lancaster Leader, (Lancaster County); Coshocton County Democrat, Hancock County Herald, Putnam County Vi- dent.

Class 2. Best front page make-up, to be judged by typographic balance, arrangement of material. First prize, People’s Defender, (West Union); second, Archbold Buckeye; third, Medina County Gazette; mention, Hillsborough Gazette, Exemp- ment, Madison Press, Ada Herald, Brookeville Eagle, Brookeville Enterprise, New Paris Mirror.

Class 4. Dailies in towns of less than 25,000 population, business and community news. First, Findlay Morning Republican; second, San- dusky Register; third, Coshocton Tribune.

Class 5. Dailies in cities larger than 25,000. To be judged on front page or department. First, Toledo Daily Blade; second, Columbus Dispatch; third, Sandusky Register (special).

MINNESOTANS TO MEET IN ST. PAUL FEBRUARY 16-18.

FREE PUBLICITY IN NEWSPAPERS AND PUBLICATION PROBLEMS WILL BE DISCUSSED BY EDITORS AT FIFTY - SEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

Organized resistance to campaigns for free publicity will be one of the main topics before the fifty-seventh annual meeting of the Minnesota Editorial Association, according to preliminary plans for the convention to be held at St. Paul February 16, 17, and 18. Many editors, it was said, complain that they are being swamped by demands for free space from many national and local organizations, often from enterprises fully able to pay for advertising.

The opening session February 16, at 10 a.m., Mayor Arthur E. Nel- son of St. Paul will extend an official welcome to the editors. J. P. Wright, publisher the Wadena Pioneer-Journal will give his annual address, and Secretary E. E. Cook, Columbus Citizen will make his report.

At the second session, February 17, there will be a round table discussion of trade topics, by leaders of various newspapers, as follows:

ROUND TABLE TOPICS.

Members of the association and their ladies will be guests of the St. Paul association at the annual dinner that night at the Saint Paul Hotel.

At the closing session February 18, officers will be elected and resolutions adopted. Herman Roe, of the Northfield News, will speak on “Organization or Competition,” and there will be presented a new “Advisory from the Country Merchants’ Standpoint,” and “Circulation Building.”

ARThUR GРИFFITH’S PAPER TO BE CONTINUED UNDER NEW NAME.

Young Ireland, the Dublin publication which was edited by Arthur Griffith during the last years of the war and which was continued after his death by his old associate, Sean Milroy, as a strong supporter of the Irish government, published its last issue a few days ago.

The discontinuance was in accordance with the wishes of Mr. Griffith’s widow, who, when her husband’s small estate was closed, desired that the political weekly which was so vividly associated with the last days of the Irish leader’s life also cease. A group of men who were most closely associated with the late president of the dail during his life struggle, however, desired to keep alive his teachings and to help in the construction of the Irish nation, will continue to publish the journal under the name of the United Irishman, which was the name given by Mr. Griffith to his first paper, published in 1899.

GERMANY ADOPTS RADIO TO TAKE CABLES’ PLACE.

GREAT STATIONS AT NAUEN AND ELIVESE USED FOR TRANS - ATLANTIC PRESS MESSAGES - 5,195,000 WORDS SENT TO UNITED STATES ALONE IN SINGLE YEAR.

While the activities of England, France, and Holland in the field of radio have been concentrated since the war on the establishment of communications with their dominions and colonies, Germany, deprived of all overseas possessions, has been building up within the national borders a system of high-power radio stations that is second to none in the world, according to Assistant United States Trade Commissioner W. T. Daugherty at Berlin.

The only telegraphcable system built up at great cost during the fifteen years preceding the war, made Germany dependent on neighboring countries for all its international communication except the portion that could be handled by radio. The logical result has been the increased use of high-power radio stations for overseas communications, especially to the United States.

CONTROLS BIG STATIONS.

At the present time the central office of the Gesellschaft für Drahtlose Telegraphie, located in the Ora Dienststelle, controls the two great transmitting stations of Naunel and Elisev and the two receiving stations at Geltow and Hagen. Both the transmitting stations work on schedule, Naunel with New York, Moscow, Madrid, Rome, and Bucharest, and Elisev with Rome and Madrid.

Both of these stations have trans-Atlantic press schedules as well.

Extended facilities are now in progress at Naunel, designed to increase its power and the flexibility of its installation. Several new stations are being constructed for the American, the Asian and African, and the two European circuits, and a special arrangement is planned for the new Buenos Aires circuit which is to be opened for public and commercial correspondence in the next few months. The coordinating station, at Monte Grande, near Buenos Aires, is to be maintained and operated by a combination of French, English, German, and American radio companies.

The German post office station at Königswinterhausen, near Berlin, transmits to London, Budapest, Sofia, and Sarajevo, and its receiving station at Zehlendorf makes up the return circuit. Norddeich, a coastal station used for hydrographic reports, shipping news, and weather reports, completes this group which is known as the main stations (Hauptfunkstellen). Although communication is maintained with all foreign stations mentioned, the main stations group operates principally within Germany.

INTERIOR SYSTEM.

The feeder stations of this system, or “leading stations” (Leitfunkstellen), operate an interior service as subsidies for the main stations. The stations located at Dortmund, Bremerhaven, Frankfurt, and the Main, Hamburg, Hanover, Koenigsberg in Prussia, and Munich are each equipped with two sending and two receiving installations. Dortmund operates a special service to Rotterdam as well.

GETTING CLOSE TO HOME WITH THE DAY'S NEWS.

MATTERS THAT ARE FOREMOST IN MINDS OF THE HOME READER ARE THE THINGS THAT SHOULD BE FEATURED, SAYS MARC A. ROSE, MANAGING EDITOR, BUFFALO NEWS.

By H. Armand De Masi, Special Correspondent, The Fourth Estate.

It is perhaps a difficult matter to find two newspaper editors who have exactly the same ideas and the same ideals as to what the proper methods and the proper ingredients to be used are in the preparation of a modern daily newspaper.

It was my pleasure this afternoon to chat with Marc A. Rose, constructive journalist and managing editor of Edward H. Butler's Buffalo Evening News, who gave me his views on newspaper making—views that I consider sufficiently good and important to pass on to fellow editors.

"We have, of course, tried to produce, and believe we have been fairly successful in producing," said Mr. Rose, "a constructive newspaper. And when I say 'we' it is the plural 'we,' not the editorial. The inspiration behind the Buffalo Evening News is Mr. Butler and the policies are his. My job simply is to put them into practical application."

"Of more than 110,000 readers that the Buffalo Evening News today is proud to count in its circulation—we believe that fully 90,000, yes 100,000, buy our paper, not for the sensational news that it may contain—news of crimes, scandals, accidents, and the like—but for the fundamental, constructive reports of things and events, things essential to the life of the community.

SOLID INFORMATION.

"By this we mean reports of deaths, marriages, real estate transfers, financial, market and commercial and business reports—particularly the latter. This is the news of news, including also weather reports, building permits, the fire record of the day, church and school news, ship news, news of conventions, meetings, society events, and so on, all of which are essential to the reader's livelihood and to the reader's livelihood, hie two real interests in life. Consequently we firmly believe it is for that kind of service that readers principally buy a newspaper.

"We do not mean to imply that stories of murders, robberies, divorces and the like are not likewise essential to a newspaper's complete success. They are the bait that catch transient buyers—several thousands a day. But we do maintain that in the final analysis the sober news that most 'live' and 'snappy' newspapers describe as 'routine' is the solid bread and meat of readers' diet. We all eat, we all breathe, but no one lives on it. To supply solid information (which need not be dull), and plenty of it, is our first duty.

"We believe that it is a newspaper's duty to cater rather to the intelligent than to the ignorant citizen. Yet, we aren't highbrow or a 'class' paper. We picture ourselves rather to the intelligent American, father of a boy in high school and a girl in the grades, owner of his own home and a small car, minor executive in one of our big factories, say the Pierce Arrow plant or Bethlehem Steel. He goes to the movies once a week and to church on Sunday. If we can get this man.

"The Buffalo Evening News today is devoting more space than any other Buffalo newspaper to cable news, and we believe that our financial pages, which we prefer to call 'business pages,' are unrivaled in our territory. The world war had two important results affecting American journalism: it created a new and intelligent interest in international politics and events, and it taught the American public what investments are, through Liberty Bonds. Consequently the American newspaper's work in these two departments has been greatly augmented, and wise is the editor who realizes this fact and acts accordingly.

"We can get along without sports, without theatres, without amusements, if we must—although no doubt it would be a hardship—but we cannot get along without sugar, coal, wool, cows, pigs, grain, buildings, businesses, homes and the like. These we must have—consequently it is concerning these essential things that a modern daily newspaper, if it would be successful and a powerful influence for good in its community, should tell.

"The story of a big fire—we have had two of them here within the last few days and beat the town on them—is interesting, but it is less important, less vital, in my opinion, than the story of a new building going up. The former concerns destruction; the latter, construction.

"Here is a curiosity. You would guess ship news—especially ocean news—was of little importance in a city so far away from the sea as Buffalo. You would be surprised at the number of inquiries we receive here constantly as to whether or not a certain ship has docked, and, if not, when it may be expected to dock. In the main, these inquiries come not from J. Hamilton Merriweather, but in the aristocratic section of Buffalo, but from Stanislas J. Jezbyckz, whose wife, or mother, or sister or daughter, is coming over from the 'old country' in the steerage. Ship news is vitally important news, even inland.

GERMAN PAPERS SUSPENDED.

Publication of articles deemed prejudicial to public order brought suspensions from one to ten days for seven of the influential German newspapers in the Rhineland. Several German newspapers printed in unoccupied territory have been forbidden to circulate in the occupied territory for periods ranging from one to three months.

Collection of tariff duties on logs of fir, spruce, cedar or western hemlock suitable for manufacturing pulp or paper from the crown lands of New Brunswick, and imported into this country, will be made by agents in the border, under regulations just issued by the treasury department.

Every timber or permit conferring authority to cut spruce, cedar or western hemlock suitable for manufacturing pulp or paper on the ungranted lands of the Crown shall contain and be accompanied by the condition that all such timber cut under authority of such permit or permit shall be manufactured in Canada; that is, to say, into merchantable pulp and paper, or into sawn lumber, woodenware, utensils or other articles of commerce or merchandise.

In its new orders, Treasury Decision No. 39,413, the treasury department expressed the opinion that the Canadian provision constituted a restriction upon the exportation upon the classes of timber named, cut from the ungranted Crown lands in the Province of New Brunswick. The duties will be imposed on similar timber cut from the private lands of the Province.

PARIS JOURNALISTS CLEAR REPORTER—REBUKE TIGER.

The Paris Syndicate of Journalists last Saturday absolved Francois Crucy, special correspondent of the Petit Parisien on the train from Chicago to New York, from any suggestion of professional misconduct in reporting an interview with the Tiger. At the same time the syndicate administered a severe rebuke to M. Crusy for his interpretation of the interview. The Tiger modified this attitude in an interview with Walter Lippmann of the World staff when he said, "I fear the Ruhr." But on the voyage home, he denied Crusy's interpretation.

NEWSPAPER SOLD.

Mrs. Charles Pearce, editor of the Vinneton, Neb., Pioneer, has purchased the Verdigre Citizen from H. E. Hartson. Mrs. Pearce will publish both papers for the present. Mr. Hartson went to Verdigre shortly after the armistice was signed after he was discharged from the navy. He has not announced his plans for the future.

CORRESPONDENTS CHANGE DATE FOR DINNER.

The annual dinner of the Legislative Correspondents at Albany has been changed from March 29 to sometime in April by the dinner committee. The dinner in honor of Joseph J. Early, former member of the association, now managing editor of the Brooklyn Stand-ard Union, will take place at the Ten Eyck Hotel, February 8.

NEWS PRINT CONSUMPTION.

News print and standard news stocks on hand decreased during December and on the last day news print stocks equaled four days average production. During the month 3,196 hours were lost by idle machines which was a decrease of 2,696 hours as compared with the same month a year ago. Because of lack of orders machines were idle this year but 403 hours while in 1921 they were down for 1,597 hours.

The tonnage reports of 71 identical mills for November and December in 1920, 1921 and 1922 were:

- November 1922: 19,066, 125,689, 125,800, 18,955
- December 1922: 19,066, 125,689, 125,800, 18,955

CANADIAN PRESS EXPLAINED TO ROTARIANS.

EASTERN SUPERINTENDENT MacDONALD GIVES TALK ON DETAILS OF NEWS GATHERING — NON-PROFIT MAKING SYSTEM CARRIED OUT, ALL MEMBERS SHARING EQUALLY.

"The basic instruction to writers for the Canadian Press is: 'The whole truth and nothing but the truth,' to which the general manager has parenthetically added 'or God help you!'" George MacDonald, eastern superintendent of the Canadian Press, told members of the Rotary Club at a luncheon in the Windsor Hotel in Montreal a few days ago.

"So," he added, "whenever you see 'Canadian Press' at the head of a dispatch, you know that you are reading something as near the truth as conscientious human agency can make it."

Mr. MacDonald's subject was "News and the Gathering of News for the Canadian Press." He explained how the Canadian Press was non-profit making system carried out, all members sharing equally.

"Each newspaper in the organization is under obligation to provide the news of its district for the common benefit of other shareholders throughout the country. Special men are employed to collect the news and put it into dispatch form, as it comes into divided zones that handle the news output."

"News from other parts of the world is obtained through the organization's links with the Associated Press of the United States, Reuter's, and other famous newspapering agencies."

"It is by such free exchange of news, made possible by the Canadian Press, that much is done in the Dominion towards keeping a homogeneous and perfectly welded people."

"You will be interested to know, that under cover of a pledge of secrecy, our papers frequently have important statements to be made by our Governments, the President of the United States, and prominent orators, a week in advance of utterance."

YALE DAILY 45 YEARS OLD.

The Yale Daily News, first of college daily newspapers, celebrated its fortieth anniversary this week. Its founders were Herbert W. Bowen of Woodstock, Ct., and Frank MacDonald, now dead.

SUCCESSFUL DAILY IS WORK OF STUDENTS.

OKLAHOMA DAILY PUBLISHED BY OKLAHOMA JOURNALISM "CUBS" BUYS NEW $8,000 PRESS — PAPER HAS MUCH MATERIAL — TO BE ENLARGED FROM 5 TO 7 COLUMNS.

Students in the school of journalism at the University of Oklahoma at Norman are operating a daily newspaper that is a success not only editorially but financially, having saved sufficient funds to make the first payment on an $8,000 Duplex printing press.

It is generally conceded that students can handle the editorial end of a newspaper, but it is not always conceded that they can "make a go of it" in a financial way.

The Oklahoma Daily not only pays salaries of all staff members, but during the last few years has purchased a quantity of office and mechanical equipment, including desks, tables, chairs, typewriters, cuts, advertising services, type, casting box and recently the press.

When the press is installed sometime in February the daily will be enlarged from a five-column paper to a seven-column regular-sized newspaper. Since the paper's establishment in 1916 it has been a five-column paper and could not be made larger because the press is too small.

Members of practically all the classes in journalism take a hand in publishing the paper. The principal members of the staff are chosen by election or appointment, but the paper draws reports from a class of sixty "cubs" enrolled in the elementary class of newspaper writing.

More feature stories than the paper can print are furnished by the class in feature writing, and the editorial writing class write editorials. Some of the members of the newspaper writing class help with copyreading, proofreading and headwriting. Advertising students help in the advertising department, although there are too many enrolled to give all of them practical work of this kind.

The business staff is under supervision of the publication board, composed of effective representative students and two faculty members, who regulate disposal of the funds of the paper, and take a hand in other matters of control.

COUE AT CLEVELAND AD CLUB

Emile Coue related his theories on auto-suggestion to members of the Cleveland Advertising Club last Friday. His address was "Advertising." He said that the writing of advertising is very largely the making of suggestions, to induce people to buy goods or service."

NEW YORK DAILIES CO-OPERATE ON ADVERTISING.

SURVEY OF NEW YORK AND ITS ENVIRONS AS MARKET FOR NATIONAL ADVERTISING PREPARED WITH ZONING MAPS—EXECUTIVES HEAR REPORT AT DINNER IN AD CLUB.

More than 200 advertising salesmen of New York and suburban newspapers and business executives met at dinner at the Advertising Club of New York last Saturday to hear a report on a survey of the vast consumption power of the New York market for everything salable, made during the last year by the New York University bureau of business research.

The meeting probably marked the beginning of a movement to revolutionize methods of selling advertising space in New York. Plans were laid to solicit the national advertisers, not on a strictly competitive basis, but on a strictly co-operative basis, and to present, co-operatively, detailed facts about New York.

Leo E. McGivens of the Daily News, representing the New York Association of Advertising Managers, under whose immediate direction the survey was undertaken, told of progress made and plans for future accomplishment. He told how every block of New York City had been completely divided and mapped and converted into sections in which purchasing power were clearly indicated by a key color scheme, this to enable a sales campaign for retailing by placing his commodity only in sections where its appeal to the particular public would be greatest.

He explained how advertising solicitors would use this information not only to secure advertisements for their newspapers, but to enable the advertisers to get maximum results from their expenditure as well.

Among those present at the dinner were C. D. Martin, business manager of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle; Edwin S. Friendly, business manager New York Herald and Sun; R. E. Maxfield, treasurer New York Tribune, and Benjamin T. Butterworth, advertising manager New York Times and president of the association.

OKLAHOMA EDITOR PREFERENCES NEWSPAPER WORK TO PRACTICING LAW.

Neither the more remunerative profession of law nor the satisfaction of the wanderlust in "railroading" could divert the Oklahoma editor from his chafed livelihood, the newspaper profession. Hence, after practicing law in one state, traveling through several states as a "broadway," publishing newspapers in seven states, and owning or working on ten papers in Oklahoma, Mr. Howard Owenses, editor and owner of the Isabel, Okla., McCurtain Democrat, decided that newspaper work was his salvation.

One of his first experiences was to be fired from his job as reporter for the Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman, Oklahoma City, Okla. This was in 1919, where he remained for a year after he resigned from the Daily Oklahoman. He then joined the Daily Oklahoman again, and finally became editor and publisher of the McCurtain Democrat.

Wisconsin's half-million dollar campaign to standardize and advertise Badger dairy products was formally announced yesterday by a mass meeting of Wisconsin dairy writers, which included thousands of farmers, bankers and butchers. The Wisconsin Dairy Products Association, which was proposed as the name for the non-stock, non-profit corporation that will be formed, financed the campaign. A loan of $25,000 from the Wisconsin Bankers' Association. The organization, he said, will have an executive committee to manage affairs, but the officers will receive no salaries or expenses.

Tentative plans are for a board of fifteen elected directors, an executive committee of seven members, four representing the dairymen and three the bankers' association.

MICHIGAN EDITORS GATHER AT EAST LANSING.

Advertising, editorial and circulation problems received a thorough airing at the three day session of the Michigan Press Association, which opened yesterday. The meeting will be brought to a close after this morning's session when the report of committees and officers will be heard.

FARM PROBLEMS BROUGHT TO READERS.

NEWSPAPERS OF IOWA ACT AS INTERMEDIARY BETWEEN TOWN AND COUNTRY, PUBLISH THOUSANDS OF INCHES OF FREE PUBLICITY ON AGRICULTURE.

"There is no better friend to the farmer today than the press," says H. J. Metcalf of the Iowa State College. "But a year ago it was different. Then there was but one daily newspaper in Iowa printing a full page of advertisements each week. Now there are several." The number of them have a daily farm news service, and all of this is printed with a desire to aid the Iowa farmers and agriculture in general in the state.

In increasing over the farm pages of the daily press of the state recently, it was found that twenty-three of them were printed approximately 75,000 inches of farm news each week, which is about a year's supply. The majority of it being originated by the office of the State College, and by the demonstration agents in the various counties of the state.

The value in dollars and cents represented by this service on the part of the daily newspapers is difficult to calculate. Taking into consideration the thousand or more farms in Iowa that are all devoted to the same one farm, this vast amount of farm news, which would have cost them about $70,000, figuring the inch rate at 8 cents, which is about an average rate for the entire number of daily newspapers represented.

"In other words, if the daily and weekly newspapers of Iowa had been selling the farmers of Iowa the same amount of advertising that they would have had charged more than $10,000 for it.

TYPOGRAPHY COURSE OPENS AT COLUMBIA FEB. 7.

The origin, history and development of printing, and its attendant psychology, will be the theme of a course in typography to be given at Columbia University, through university extension, during the spring term. James D. Gabler, of the New York Times, will teach the course.

The class will be divided in two sections, it is announced, one meeting at 9 a.m. Wednesdays, the other at 7:40 p.m. The course begins February 7.

FREE INSURANCE PLAN IS LOSING FAVOR AGAIN.
LONDON DAILIES FIND SELVES TARGETS FOR GENERAL ILL WILL WHEN SOME CLAIMS OF POLICY HOLDERS ARE DISPUTED—THEY'RE RIGHT, BUT EFFECT IS BAD.

American newspapers' interest in the position of British newspapers which issue insurance policies continues, and has been stimulated by reports of cases which have come before the courts in which people have unsuccessfully preferred claims under these policies.

The feeling in the matter on the part of the unsuccessful claimants has been strengthened by the republication, by Messrs. Hulton, of the Evening Standard, of articles which have appeared in the Evening Standard in condemnation of the issuing of these policies, and some very hard cases are quoted.

The insurance companies were probably justified in point of law in refusing to pay, on the ground that the accidents were not within the scope of the policies, but the claimants naturally are very aggrieved, with good reason, at being put upon the newspapers which they had bought, believing themselves thereby to be more fully insured than now appears to be the case.

The question is also being pressed whether the newspapers can escape payment by passing on the claim to the insurance companies, and it is urged that the papers which issue these policies have made themselves directly liable.

RADIO TELEPHONY FOR THE PUBLIC.

Public wireless telephony was inaugurated in Germany on September 1, 1925, the post office department and the express service (Stadtnetz G. M. B. H.), uniting to establish the service. Subscriptions, open to the public, are based on the extent of the service rendered, and the only additional cost is the installation charge.

The apparatus used may be employed for either telegraphic or telephonic reception, and a list of the places to which the service is now extended includes:

2. Hamburg.
4. Darmstadt.
5. Elbing.
6. Friedricshafen.
7. Constance.
8. Stettin.
10. Mannheim.

Ship-to-shore stations are 16 in number and were excepted from the system taken over by the post office department in 1919.

The distribution of the wireless news broadcast from the interior and domestic stations to 75 receiving stations which have no transmission facilities, similarly equipped stations receive weather reports in nine of the principal cities.

GERMANY ADOPTS RADIO TO TAKE CABLES' PLACE.

CUTTING DOWN OVERHEAD OF "CO-OPTION." In the news that the New York daily newspapers are going to sell the New York market from one central office instead of each paper continuing to sell its own version of territory's sales possibilities there may be seen a definite attempt to cut down overhead. The move is involved in "merchandising co-operation." When the new arrangement gets to work, considerable overhead will be saved altogether differently than has been the practice.

The editors of New York newspapers have plainly realized that there is a tremendous duplication of expense and effort in the multifarious surveys of the metropolitan area that are being made for advertisers. It is a condition by no means peculiar to the metropolis, but it has evidently been less pronounced in New York than elsewhere. It is a condition by no means peculiar to the metropolis, but it has evidently been less pronounced in New York than elsewhere.

The name of these papers are foremost in the minds of those whose interest has been aroused and they are looked upon as the best in their classifying a certain type of "business expert" who bas their judgment on only one set of facts out of the many which are available.

"They obtained a common school education and sold newspapers," read a newspaper sketch of the career of one of the Van family. "Mr. Mantis J. Van was an expert on apples, and Mr. Oris P. Van was an expert on oranges. Their sons, Mr. L. Van and Mr. O. Van, are leading businessmen recently. They have turned the presidency of the Van name into a capital of five dollars."

"We have seen not only the yellow clipping that tells the story of a lifelong ago, lived, and we have seen not only the yellow clipping that tells the story of a lifelong ago, lived, and we have seen not only the yellow clipping that tells the story of a lifelong ago, lived, and we have seen not only the yellow clipping that tells the story of a lifelong ago, lived, and we have seen not only the yellow clipping that tells the story of a lifelong ago, lived, and we have seen not only the yellow clipping that tells the story of a lifelong ago, lived, and we have seen not only the yellow clipping that tells the story of a lifelong ago, lived, and we have seen not only the yellow clipping that tells the story of a lifelong ago, lived, and we have seen not only the yellow clipping that tells the story of a lifelong ago, lived, and we have seen not only the yellow clipping that tells the story of a lifelong ago, lived.

It is a moment of their own, kind hearts are discovered, and gentle sympathies are excited. It is a moment of their own, kind hearts are discovered, and gentle sympathies are excited.

"And we hope that so long as we sit in an editorial chair we never will cease to feel a little heart in our heart, a swelling of the throat, and to find a tear in our eye for those who have lost their lives."

NOTE AND COMMENT.

Senator Capper's "uniform decree" bill, which was designed to alter the operation of the bicycle boughie element that at present characterizes the matrimonial contract, is coming on for a full shot. The boughie, according to public sentiment, is a very attractive institution that might be extended to include the bicycle and the car and the motor truck.

That the Pauls Valley Enterprise, which has just issued number one of volume thirty-seven, has been in existence longer under the same name than any other newspaper in Oklahoma, is the distinction claimed by W. M. Erwin, publisher. In a recent issue of The Oklahoman, Mr. Erwin printed an article by T. C. Fields of El Dorado, Ark., in which he gave a brief history of the Enterprise, begun September 24, 1889, and has worked for the auditor for the last four years.

NEW YORK TIMES STAFF HONORS RALPH GRAVES.

SUNDAY EDITOR RESIGNS TO HEAD DOUBLEDAY - PAGE SYNDICATE DEPARTMENT - TRIBUTES FROM MR. OCHS, MR. OGDEN, MR. VAN ANDA, AND OTHER TIMES CHIEFS.

Members of the staffs of the various departments of the New York Times gave a luncheon as Godparents of Ralph H. Graves, Sunday editor, recently, at the Broadway Clardigne. Mr. Graves will take charge of the syndicate department of Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, L. I., and Dr. Ochs, president of the Times, presided. Advertisements were made by Rollo Ogden, editor, Louis Wiley, business manager, and Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor of the Times.

Mr. Van Anda, introducing Mr. Graves, quibbled over the occasion of any possible funeral thump by speaking facetiously of the country-like surroundings of Doubleday, Page & Company’s plant, and his remarks and Mr. Graves’s long connection with the Times were serious only in that they were earnest.

"Mr. Graves is one of the oldest and most valued members of our organization. To him is due for much the development of the rotogravure sections. He was assistant to the managing editor. As city editor he exercised a watchful and beneficial care over one of the critical departments of the paper. Bandaging like these are usually quite painful, almost funereal, but in this case we see a translation to a higher and better life without any interval of suspended animation. He is going to join the organization of Doubleday, Page & Co. The name of the commercial name may present to your eyes a picture of some such establishment, as you are familiar with in New York, but I assure you it is something quite different. The laborers toils on no bare walls, no crowded, noisy streets, but on the contrary, upon green fields, beautiful landscapes. Roses and geraniums peep in at the windows and if the morning violets are not properly set out on the desks, business is suspended until the matter is attended to."

"We all love and admire Mr. Ralph Graves, to whom we wish all health and prosperity."

Replying, Mr. Graves said: "I am grateful to all of you. I appreciate the nice things Mr. Van Anda has said, as he is the main catalyst here. I am sure my departure has been made so easy and comfortable. Whatever the Sunday editor or any newspaper can do largely because of the cooperation of Mr. Ogden, Mr. Wiley, and Dr. Finley, and because Mr. Ochs is always a staunch friend."

"But the best part of the twenty-three years I have been on the Times staff I have helped put into the paper innumerable articles at variance with the owners’ opinions. We are not tied up with any strings of policy or pull in the Times."

CREATOR OF JIGGS AND DINTY QUICK TO ANSWER PATHETIC APPEAL.

George McManus, creator of "Bringing Up Father," and Mrs. McManus answered the appeal of Helen V. Collins, a nineteen-year-old cripple of Amsterdam, N. Y., to be shown a good time in New York. The appeal was made in letter to the editor of the New York American and Mr. McManus was the first respondant, although numerous New York people offered to entertain the young woman.

Miss Collins has been an invalid for eighteen years. Her case is helpless. Her parents are unable to withstand the expense of a New York trip. It was the young woman’s appeal that will make possible her seeing New York from one end to the other. Theater and sightseeing parties already have been given the young woman, who arrived in New York on Wednesday. Many readers of the American offered to pay all of her expenses in New York for a week.

COMMERCE NEWS SYNDICATE ESTABLISHED BY CHICAGO JOURNAL OF COMMERCE.

The Chicago Journal of Commerce has established a business news and feature syndicate. It is known as the Chicago Journal of Commerce Syndicate, and will combine itself with the highly specialized news of commerce, with particular attention to exclusive stories breaking in Chicago territory.

Glen Griswold, editor of the Journal, said it is the sole purpose of the syndicate to serve its clientele with the truth in business news, drawing upon the expert writers of the Journal of Commerce for its material. Not only will the metropolitan daily financial sections requirements be given attention, but special services will be set up for the weekly and monthly trade publications. The organization will not enter the general news field.

GOVERNOR SILZER PRESENTS TRENTON TIMES CUP TO 1922 WINNER.

The Trenton, N. J., Evening Times has set up a trophy to be awarded yearly to that citizen of Trenton who shall have rendered to the city the most conspicuous service during the year past.

The plan was adopted last year when a board of award comprising active and prominent citizens of Trenton was selected to elect the winner of the Civic Cup, and a $500 trophy especially designed by the city was decided upon as the token to be awarded. The winner of the 1922 civic cup, Andrew J. Berrien, was chosen at the meeting of the board of award, held on the first of the new year, and the formal award was made Sunday, January 28, by Governor George S. Silzer, with appropriate ceremonies.

The $500 trophy is a handsome silver bowl bearing the city seal and the words: "Propter Amplissimum in Urbem Merita,"—Because of the Most Excellent City. The plan of the Times in offering the cup is to stimulate the ideal citizenship that tends to build cities and make for better communities, and from all indications it has already taken a long stride in the direction of this goal.

FORMER NEWSBOY PAYS $1,000,000 FOR STORE WHERE HE SOLD PAPERS.

Barney Taylor, who thirty years ago sold newspapers in front of a store in Newark, N. J., has purchased the entire business for $1,000,000. The newsboy-millionaire was just eleven when he kept his stand beside the store. He saved his money and bought a clothing store of his own. A few years later he purchased a four-story building. His latest purchase is a five-story structure and is the result of his establishment of its kind in New Jersey.

TEXAS NEWSBOYS ORGANIZE NEW CLUB.

A Newsboys' Club was formed last week at Galveston, Texas, when seventy-five youngsters attended the initial meeting. Short talks explaining the nature of the club were made by C. P. Kennedy, adult leader of the club, and E. M. Reeder, boys' secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association. The plan of the club as outlined at the meeting is to work on the points system, giving so many points for personal neatness, bank accounts, good turns and numerous other things. A total of 1,050 points can be secured, but it was stated that a free trip of two weeks in a summer camp would be given to all boys who made 850 points. Other plans of the club are to have talks of the city from time to time, and other educational features.

The plan of the Times in offering the cup is to stimulate the ideal citizenship that tends to build cities and make for better communities, and from all indications it has already taken a long stride in the direction of this goal.

Here's a resolution which, acted on, means dollars and cents to the publisher and better work and working conditions in the stereotype foundry.

"Resolved that I will without delay place a standing order for my dry mat requirements with The Flexideal Company, Inc."

Why depend upon hazy promises regarding lower price and perfected product to take effect in the indefinite future? Now is the time!

Flexideal and Maxitype Dry Mats are now available at a worth while saving price at the Bush Terminal, Brooklyn, N. Y., assures you a constant supply and regular shipments.

As for Quality, there's none so good to be had elsewhere at any price.

Detroit News was third. Through a composing room error in the advertisement of the Los Angeles Times in the Fourth Estate of January 20, the Detroit Times was given credit for the 1922 national advertising lineage of the Detroit News. The Los Angeles Times led all the newspapers in the world with 26,795,244 lines, the Detroit News standing third with 25,701,235 lines.

JOINS PHILADELPHIA AGENCY.

The St. Paul News will conduct a dog derby at Lake Como Saturday, February 10. The prize committee conferred this week on the trophies to be awarded for the winners of the races. It is probable this year that a fine prize will be offered for the best looking dog and sled and such a prize is expected to bring out keen rivalry among the youthful drivers.

In the past, prizes also will be offered for the team or individual making the fastest time in any of the three races and special awards will be given for the fastest bulldog, as well as other awards. The number of entries in last year's event was more than tripled, and the daily News races equals the number of experienced drivers.

Detroit News Has Telephone Reply System for "Blind" Want Ads.
Immediate service on "blind" want ads which give a box number instead of an address has been established by the Detroit News for the convenience of advertisers. The service is supplied by means of telephonic communication with advertisers and readers. Under the new system the reader who finds an ad in which he is interested but which gives no address other than a Detroit News box may telephone the newspaper and the department, and the department in turn telephones his wants to the advertiser. In this way complete control over the advertiser and the prospect is established in a few minutes, while forty-eight hours is the time required in most cases under the old mail system.

The Detroit News, boasting the largest switch-board devoted exclusively to want service of any newspaper in the world, has found the system effective since it was put into use several weeks ago.

Governor Hardwick added that as such a project was not necessary in the state he could do he would return the subscriptions already received to those who sent them in. He also stated that he had heard rumors to the effect that others were shortly to attempt the publishing of a similar paper to the one he had in mind. On the other hand, he said that he had largely influenced him in abandoning his own plans.

JOURNALISM STUDENTS HEAR VALUE OF POETRY.
Harriet Monroe, editor of Poetry, spoke on "Modern Verse" before the Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill. In telling the young journalists the value of poetry, she said: "Tiffany Blake used to advise a class in editorial writing to read poetry every day. He thought that the poet, writing prose stories for today in the simplest, most direct English can control his discipline by training his ear with the music of poetry and his mind with its swift, imaginative images. If he can go further and make verse himself, that also will be good training for his prose style, whether the verses are poetry or not."

EDITOR OF SLOVAK PAPER SUES.
Two suits asking damages totalling $50,000 and directed against Steve Prikopa, editor of the Rovnost Ludu, a Slovak newspaper, were filed in Chicago last week in behalf of Mrs. Julua Vrudny and her son, John Vrudny. The declarations charged Prikopa printed an article last February 15, which was characterized as "malevolent, scandalous, false and defamatory libel" and which threw a reflection on the character of Mrs. Vrudny.

Special Representation
VERRES & CONKLIN New York, Phila., Chicago, San Francisco
The newspaper advertisement is printed in an atmosphere of interest and action among things that have happened within a period of hours or as much as days and weeks. It carries with it the impulse to 'do it now' and that is why newspaper advertising is invariably translated into quick and direct results in the way of sales.

"Manufacturers who use newspaper advertising find it a simple matter to interest retailers in selling their goods. They can easily use the newspaper advertising because it is the kind which he himself uses when he advertises or hopes to use when he can afford to advertise.

"When a manufacturer enters his city with a campaign of advertising in the newspapers which the dealer knows and runs, the dealer is invariably willing to stock up on the articles which the manufacturer wishes him to sell. He knows the advantages which the newspaper advertising will bring to him.

"Furthermore, the manufacturer who advertises in the newspapers is not only able to tell what his product is, but he can also tell how. If he has an outstanding feature or a quality, he can advertise it in the newspaper and let the consumer know it.

"Newspaper advertising enables manufacturers to cultivate profitable markets and, by the same token, it does not oblige them to pay for advertising in markets where no sales potentiality exists. The high cost of goods, which is a major problem, is promptly removed when manufacturers who are endeavoring to modernize their methods to a realization that they could not be in a smaller market, or very rarely so, for any product, but is rather a collection of markets which differ in their opportunities for successful sale in the same degree as the buying habits of the communities differ.

"These buying habits are governed by climatic, social and industrial conditions. The climatic differences alone indicate the point I am trying to make.

"Florida may be farming itself, while Nebraska is fighting a blizzard. It may be raining torrents in the northwest while the Southwest is dry enough to please even Mr. Volstead."

"Doesn't it follow that articles of merchandise which depend upon climatic conditions for their sale cannot possibly enjoy an equally good market in all these sections, but to be successful probably must be pushed into those markets where conditions are favorable to their sale?"

"The modern manufacturer who is a newspaper advertiser has considered this and the numerous other factors that enter into the determination of a profitable market—the distance of the population from the place of getting them and selling goods there, the density of the population, the location as to make the water, the character of the water supply, the number of homes wired for electricity, the distribution of automobiles—the list of things is almost endless."

"A government commission recently investigated the high cost of selling merchandise and recommends as a chief suggestion that manufacturers and distributors, to meet this vexatious problem, must ascertain more clearly the consumer capacity of markets. It is not enough that a newspaper advertiser is doing today. He is combing the map to find places where it is worth-while for him to push his product because of the conditions he has mentioned, and after he has found these places he has gone into the newspapers published in these places, knowing that everybody in any community which he may select sees a newspaper at least once a week.

"He is doing to a group of markets just what you gentlemen who advertise in newspapers are doing to your individual markets—telling all the people who can possibly reach them of the purpose of reaching the smaller number who can buy, who he is, what he is, and what his newspaper advertiser, knows exactly what it costs him to get business through advertising."

"As a result today among national advertisers and I believe that common sense in advertising and in national merchandising will soon make him a unanimous factor."

"We advertising people want to interest yourself, the banker, in the fact that advertising can and will be the advertising that your banks do or whether it be the advertising of the firm seeking banking service and accommodation."

"Gentlemen of the banking industry, we need your help and we need your best thought because advertising can only continue and grow as a definite policy toward advertising in determining the eligibility of a firm seeking banking service and accommodation.

ADVERTISER TELLS HOW HE BUILT BUSINESS BY NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

"The value of newspaper advertising was discussed by Victor Girard, community builder, before the Los Angeles Athletic Club. He subject was "How I Built Up My Business by Newspaper Advertising." He described the way he built the two communities, Walnut Park and West Adams Place, in his speech attributed the success of his organization to the fact that he has been an ardent believer in the influence of newspapers."

"There is no medium whereby a man can reach patronage on such a large scale as in newspapers," said Mr. Girard. "Newspapers reach practically every reader that is able to read, and the science of advertising has been so thoroughly studied and simplified as to enable one to carry every message to everyone."

"Any man can afford to overlook such an asset as to be found in the big daily newspapers we have today. A business with advertising columns forms the backbone of modern business."

A Startling Comparison!

In Greater Kansas City there are:
- 90,900 Water Rent Payers
- 101,102 Natural Gas Users
- 102,000 Telephone Subscribers
- 116,520 Electric Light Users
- 140,131 STAR SUBSCRIBERS*

*By City Carriers, 126,027
Newsboys and Stands, 14,104

If you had a message for the people of Kansas City, it would be worth a whole lot to deliver it to all the families and business houses who use electric lights, wouldn't it? Or to all persons who have telephones in their homes, shops or offices? Or to all the gas users? Or to all those who have the convenience of city water?

And yet, if you were to reach all of any one of these classes, or all of them put together, you would have fallen short of getting your message before everybody in Kansas City.

There are districts in Kansas City to which electric lights have not yet penetrated. There are homes without telephones. There are thousands of housewives who for one reason or another do not use gas. Water mains have not yet reached all the newly pioneered residence sections of Kansas City.

But there is no district in all of Greater Kansas City which is not served by The Star's carriers. The home in which The Star is not read twice a day would be as hard to find as the proverbial needle in a haystack.

Look at this chart. A graphic presentation of the thoroughness of The Star's circulation. More Star readers by 23,000 than there are electric light users; more by 38,000 than there are telephone subscribers; more by 39,000 than there are natural gas users; and more by 49,000 than there are water rent payers.

Sit in the Family Investment Council

The great majority of financially competent citizens of Chicago and its suburbs look to The Daily News not only for news features but for advertising information and guidance. The interest and confidence that they give to their favorite home newspaper they extend to advertisers in its columns.

The majority readers of The Daily News are potential investors, and they read the financial and market pages with keen appreciation because they know that not only do they receive therein the COMPLETE story of the financial day TWELVE HOURS EARLIER than they obtain the same story in any morning paper—but that they can depend upon what they read.

Your advertisement in these pages will reach the prospective investor in that home reading hour when family buying councils are held, and will share in the interest and confidence with which he reads The Daily News—news and advertisements.

HOW HEARST PUT CHICAGO SUNDAY OVER A MILLION.

For the second time in the newspaper history of America a Sunday newspaper has crossed the million mark in circulation. The Chicago Herald and Examiner announced last Sunday, February 4, that with its issue of that date it had made that score.

The announcement was made in the following telegram to William Randolph Hearst, who was given a conspicuous place on the front page of Monday’s New York American.

NEW YORK PRESSMEN NOT SATISFIED EVEN NOW WITH JUDGE’S INTERPRETATION.

Definition of Judge Learned Hand’s decision regarding New York pressmen’s hours of work was given to the joint standing committee of the Newspaper Publishers Association and the New York Web Printing Pressmen’s Union No. 25, last Saturday, by Judge Hand, who acts as a fifth member of the standing committee. The publishers have accepted the ruling while the union is understood to look upon the decision as “meaning more trouble.”

Judge Hand’s statement, as arbitrator, follows:

“The fixing of the starting time of any regular shift shall be given in advance each Saturday for the ensuing week, and the finishing time of each shift, the fact that overtime will be demanded when ascertainable and when not ascertainable of such overtime as far as practicable.”

Lester O. Jones, representing the publishers announced the publishers’ acceptance of the decision while President Simons told the committee “This decision means only more trouble.”

FIRST OF CRESSON SERIES OF 700 SUITS LOST.

NEWSPAPERS NOT LIABLE AS CHARGED, SAYS APPELLATE COURT IN CASE OF FORT WORTH STAR-TELEGRAM—NO INJUSTICE DONE TO PLAINTIFF BY STORIES.

The fourth court of civil appeals sitting at San Antonio handed down for the first time in the case of Colonel C. C. Cresson vs. the Worth-Carter Publishing Company, publishers of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, that is of interest to newspapers throughout the United States. Colonel Cresson was one of the three officers mentioned in the report of the house committee which investigated the escape of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, the draft dodger. This report mentioned that three officers, General Ansell, Colonel Hunt and Colonel Cresson, with complicity in Bergdoll’s escape, were A.P. included in suits.

Colonel Cresson filed suit against the Associated Press, the New York World, the Chicago Star-Telegram, and numerous other papers in Texas and other parts of the country, seeking damages. He is not alleged in his suits that the majority of the editors did not accuse him of conspiracy in the plot to free Bergdoll, but merely the manner in which he had prosecuted Colonel Hunt, who was tried by court-martial for failure to do his duty and failure to prevent Bergdoll’s escape.

The suit of Colonel Cresson against the Star-Telegram is the first and only on these 700 odd suits that has been brought to trial. It was tried before Judge Robert W. B. Terrell at San Antonio, the home of Colonel Cresson. The case was submitted on special issues and the jury returned a verdict holding that Republic was not a fair, true and impartial report, but that Colonel Cresson was entitled neither to damages nor exemplary damages. Colonel Cresson’s attorney took the case on appeal and the appellate court in an opinion handed down by Chief Justice Ely affirms the decision of the trial court.

FORMER HEARST MANAGER BUYS NORTH CAROLINA DAILY.

The Fayetteville, N. C. Observer, on February 1, became the property of Alfred B. de Mesquita, of New York, who purchased the paper from Colonel J. D. Carter, publisher and owner since May 13, 1921.

Mr. de Mesquita has been in newspaper work for 2 years, and recently was promotion manager of the New York American. Prior to that he was the managing editor of the Syracuse Herald; assistant business manager advertising manager of the Rochester American and advertising manager of the Gem Sun.

Mr. de Mesquita announced there will be changes in the staff of the Observer and that the policy of the paper will remain the same.
Philadelphia

with 400,000 separate dwellings, will buy your electric and gas devices for the home

165,000 of the houses and apartments in Philadelphia use electric current. Practically every one of the more than 400,000 individual dwellings in the city is equipped to use gas.

Nearly 10,000 new dwellings were erected in Philadelphia in 1922—and an extensive building program is now under way.

The market for electric and gas appliances in Philadelphia is growing. Philadelphia's workers—both men and women—are earning salaries and wages which enable them to buy articles to increase their home comfort and to reduce the household work.

You can reach practically every family in the third largest market in America—tell them why they should use your products—by advertising in The Bulletin.

The Bulletin every evening goes into nearly every household in Philadelphia, Camden and their suburbs.

Senator-elect Royal S. Copeland of New York, widely known as a newspaper man through his daily health talks, distributed by the Newspaper Feature Service and appearing in more than 150 daily newspapers, will be the first newspaper man to enter the senate, with the avowed purpose of keeping up his newspaper work during his membership. On Monday evening, Dr. Copeland will be the guest of honor at a testimonial at the Astor, which will be attended by many prominent editors, publishers and writers, as well as many of the luminaries of the business world.

RACING NEWS LITTLE HELP TO GAMBLERS FORMER BOOK-MAKER TESTIFIES.

Newspaper publication of racing entries, results and odds is of little help to gamblers who place money on horse races, according to testimony introduced in a Detroit court by a former bookmaker, who has been charged with violating the anti-gambling ordinance prohibiting publication of betting odds on horse races.

"There are two classes of racing service which the handbook operators in Detroit can buy," the former bookmaker, Robert Bloch, said on the witness stand. "The one known as first class gives entries, results, track odds and the odds at the start of the race. Winning tickets are paid off on information to be found on the form sheet. "Handbook operators do not pay off on newspaper figures. These are not always accurate. Sometimes newspapers do not have direct information on the order in which the horses finish.

IOWA PAPERS GO TO COURT OVER RIGHT OF ONE TO CLIP OTHER'S NEWS.

Whether a newspaper editor may wield a pair of shears and a paste pot and clip prominently items from another newspaper, print them without giving credit and go merrily on his way without making compensation, will be the question on which action that has been instituted in Cherokee, Ia., by the Wright County Monitor against the Eagle Grove Times. The Monitor asks $1,000 damages.

The Monitor alleges that the Times is guilty of "plagiarism," in that it performs surgical operations on the columns of the Monitor, removing therefrom court notes and other health matters, and engraving this material on the columns of the Times without giving credit. The petition alleges that this has been perpetrated over the protests of the owner of the Monitor.

DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND.

Like most newspaper trained people, Dr. Copeland has some fairly definite preconceived notions as to how it will seem to be a member of the senate.

"I expect that during the dull moments—for I understand there are such once in a while in the senate—I shall be able to do considerable writing at my desk," Dr. Copeland said, in response to a question as to whether he would continue his newspaper work. "If things get too turbulent, however, I expect I shall have to make use of the cloak room."

Fortunately Dr. Copeland is of the type that can concentrate. He had had this faculty sharpened by his several years of service as health commissioner for the city of New York, his administration of which has made him almost a national figure. At any rate, what the commission left undone his newspaper work rounded out, so that Dr. Copeland will enter the senate as one of its best known members.

HERRICK STARTS A NEW VENDetta ON PRESS.

OKLAHOMA CONGRESSMAN IS WRATHY BECAUSE STORY OF "BEAUTY CONTEST" BROKE OUT AGAIN—DIRE THINGS ARE THREATENED TWO HEARTED PAPERS.

Congressman Manuel Herrick, of Ottawa, the self-styled "serial daredevil" of Congress, introduced a remarkable resolution in the house last Wednesday, as the result of an article appearing in The Washington Times. He also announced that he intended to bring suit against the paper.

The article to which objection was taken by the Oklahoma solon dealt with his alleged unfortunatle romance with a Follies beauty, which came about through a contest conducted by the Hearst interests, and which he described as "beauty contest" on his own behalf with a view to "showing up" the evil in the world as conducted by newspapers and motion picture producers. In his second affair, it was a bookie of a particular description who contacted a hated rival, and had his bookie knock off a new love interest, a pretty young Washington girl, and had engaged a detective to watch the rival.

Rising to his defense of personal privilege, Mr. Herrick presented his resolution. Upon objection by Floor Leader Frank Coombs, who took the position that the resolution was not privileged, and was out of order, the resolution was read for the information of the House. The resolution, with text, follows:

"Wheres, on February 6th, 1923, Washington Times and the Washington Herald, published a libelous slanderous and infamous false article to the effect that I, Manuel Herrick, a member of Congress, had used his influence for breach of promise of a fiancée which became his second wife, and that to avoid the publicity which surrounded him, some "spark plug lover" that a hated rival had broken up his romance, and that the article was written to give an innocent girl and other false and slanderous matters and whereas NO RESOLUTION has therefore been passed, resolved, that any and all representatives of the Washington Times and Washington Herald be and are hereby expressly relieved from the remainder of the 67th Congress.

Mr. Herrick served notice that he would speak on his resolution later.

LASKER MAY BE P.M. GENERAL.

Changes in the complexion of things political at Washington during the week have brought forward Albert D. Lasker, chairman of the shipping-board and head of the Lord & Thomas Agency, as the most likely successor to Postmaster General McKee. The Hoosier State Senator Harry E. New of Indiana, former newspaper man, who was favored last week, is reported to have cooled off, according to his Republican associates from the Hoosier State.

Wanted—To Buy Business of Special Representative

This is an unusual proposition, and it requires unusual action.

Plainly and frankly we wish to purchase the going business of a special representative—not of necessity the biggest and best in the field, but by no means a broken down, decaying business.

The buyer is a newspaper man, grounded from the bottom up, well seasoned, in the newspaper business, yet reasonably young in years.

This man has put in his time as reporter, editor, advertising man, and circulation man, from the reasonably small city to the largest in America.

This man is the promoter, who by editorial and circulation creation, turned the tide in the largest city of this country, and brought from near the bottom to the top of the ladder, one of the leading journals of the United States. And this was done when time was the main element to be contended with.

This man, as a hired executive, organized from nothing and brought to a successful culmination, in a period of less than three years, what is today one of the biggest, largest and most successful of all American institutions allied with the newspaper business.

And the operations of this gentleman have not been necessarily confined to America.

The main purpose of seeking to buy the business of a real special representative corporation is to get back into more active touch with the building of business for newspapers.

This man believes through such a move he will be able to accomplish the purpose in mind.

Naturally any and all communications will be strictly confidential. References beyond question will be furnished if desired in case of opening of negotiations.

MERCHANTS PRINT “NEWSPAPERS” IN MANY CITIES.

ALL ADVERTISING, THEY ARE AIMED TO ACHIEVE 100 PER CENT COVERAGE, BUT HAVE NOT RESULTED IN NOTICEABLE DECREASE IN NEWSPAPER SPACE.

“Advertising newspapers” are what the shopping news editions printed in several cities by the merchants may rightly be termed. In order to secure 100 per cent coverage in a given territory the papers are reported successful. Newspaper space has not decreased any noticeable degree because of competition from stockholders in printing more newspapers, as it has not been the policy of the merchants to subscribe to the plan with the intent of effecting reduction in advertising rates or because newspaper advertising has been increased.

The shopping newspaper is credited with being born in Cleveland, where it has been a feature for over twenty years. The idea has been taken up by merchants in the East, Middle West and on the Pacific Coast. Few of the papers that have been started have been suspended, although one has quit because it was found that the daily and Sunday newspapers covered the territory where complete coverage was desired. The editorials in shopping newspapers are from twelve to sixteen pages. All save the front page, in most of them, are given over to advertising. Usually an editorial about the stores or a sales event are contained on the page that is not for sale. An advertising rate is fixed and preferred space is given to advertisers.

In beginning many of the shopping newspapers, stock was issued at so much per column inch, with no holder investing being allowed to have stock equal to more than eight columns.

The distribution is in the hands of the paper’s own carrier organization which is under the control of the circulation manager, district managers, interested in the发行人 and the city boys. The circulation manager is assisted by other members of the organization for one day’s service. Usually the paper is printed on the same day and the carriers are given until noon to cover the territory assigned them.

In Cleveland the shopping newspaper has a circulation over 160,000 and in Los Angeles, the merchant’s advertising newspaper started off with 150,000 circulation. The Los Angeles paper owns its own plant which is utilized for other work on days when the presses are not used for the newspaper.

The Lumberton, N. C, Robesonian has issued a 64-page county development edition. The paper was printed in the Lumberton Press, which owns its own plant which is utilized for other work on days when the presses are not used for the newspaper.

Elimination of poorly addressed second class matter from the mails is the object of plans announced by the postal office department in its better mailing campaign.

Publishers and the postal service will profit mutually from the plans taken to reduce undeliverable second class mail, which includes newspapers, magazines and other types of publications.

Postmasters all over the country are called upon to watch the mails closely to see that publishers whose names cannot be admitted to the list of addressees fill the recommendations of the department wherever possible. Publishers, themselves, are strongly advised to issue a review of their mailing practices, which will insure fewer errors of newspapers and magazines to subscribers.

Should the recommendations which the post office department makes in its campaign result in unusually small publications should be enclosed in envelopes. Publications mailed in single wrappers should be folded so that the mail can be carried at the proper rate.

Separation of copies to rural and to city subscribers will facilitate distribution.

Individual copies unfolded and unwrapped, should have something on the wrapper, such as a manner that the address appears in the center corner near the bottom of the page when a copy is grasped by the bound edge.

Notice of entry of publication as second class should appear on wrappers and envelopes.

Capital stock of about $250,000 should be increased, and the mail carrier is to be paid 25 cents a day for each copy remaining.

Let SUCCESSFUL Publishers' Methods MAKE Your Paper Pay

I am completing an eight months' tour of the United States and Canada, studying newspaper conditions as I find them, and analyzing a great many representative American dailies.

My observations are to be included in a volume I am preparing, under the title of "A CRITICAL SURVEY OF AMERICAN NEWSPAPERS."

This survey will cover both the merits and demerits of more than 100 of the leading metropolitan and semi-metropolitan dailies of the country.

Many editors and publishers, realizing the importance of this work, have co-operated with me in my task of obtaining the necessary data at first hand.

Many other editors and publishers will be interested to know I am going to make available to them, AT ONCE, the results of my observations.

Papers in These Cities Will Back You to Win

I am prepared, NOW, to give you the benefit of my research covering EVERY NEWSPAPER in each of the following cities:

- New York
- Providence
- Syracuse
- Rochester
- St. Louis
- Denver
- Toledo
- Minneapolis
- Baltimore
- Chicago
- Worcester
- St. Paul
- Pittsburgh
- Boston
- Scranton
- Omaha
- Cincinnati
- Washington
- Philadelphia
- Dayton
- Buffalo
- Cleveland
- Brooklyn
- Newark
- Montreal
- Detroit
- Milwaukee
- Indianapolis
- Buffalo
- Toronto
- Kansas City

The knowledge I have acquired in my survey is INVALUABLE to EVERY editor and publisher who is not entirely satisfied with his paper.

I Will Harness Their Ideas to Your Presses and Your Office

Look over your newspaper.
Are YOU satisfied with it?
Are your READERS satisfied with it?
If not, WHY not?
Are you giving your readers what THEY want?
Is there something wrong with your paper's DRESS?
Is there something the matter with your organization?
Does your newspaper need pepping up?
Does it need SOMETHING—ANYTHING—that you cannot just exactly figure out?
I am here to figure it out for you—to tell you what IS the matter—WHAT your paper needs.
Bring your troubles to me.

Write, or, better, TELEGRAPH—immediately.

SEATTLE BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU EXPANDING.
TO WAGE FIGHT FOR TRUTH IN ALL SELLING FIELDS—HAS HANDLED 876 CASES SINCE ITS INCEPTION TWO YEARS AGO—DIRECTORS NOMINATED.

Seveneteen Seattle men, representing practically all fields of business, have been nominated as directors of the better business bureau. The nominating committee consisted of R. Morgan of Frederick & Nelson; C. C. Carpenter of MacDougall-Southwick, and W. L. Rice of the Rhodes Company. The election is in line with the bureau's new policy of extending its scope to include all lines of business and wage a campaign for truth in all fields of selling as well as in advertising.

The 876 cases that the Seattle better business bureau has handled since its inception, there have been thirty-eight prosecutions, of which but two have been lost. The goal of the bureau is to attain 100 per cent of "truth in advertising.

Cases at the bureau's office are divided into two classes—financial and merchandising, in instances of fake stock promotion and employment schemes a fraudulent catch have been inveigled by the bureau, and in practically every case conviction has been obtained when the case was brought into court.

Every piece of advertising published in Seattle is checked by the bureau. Where textiles are under examination, as, for instance, to ascertain whether they are "all wool" the home economics department of the University of Washington is called in as a referee. One Seattle dealer advertised some infants' skirts as "all silk and wool" but upon investigation the bureau, aided by the university found that the goods were 60 per cent wool and 40 per cent silk. The dealer was after the fact found guilty of violating the city's anti-advertising law, and was fined.

Since its formation the bureau has handled 876 cases, amounting to a million and a half dollars, and been in receipt of the largest financial contribution to business in Seattle and is in receipt of the largest financial contribution to business in the city.

The credit of the successful administration of the Bureau is due to Miss Mary Britton, secretary who is also executive secretary of the Seattle Advertising Club. Miss Britton was educated at the University of Washington and has a knowledge of business administration of the University of Washington, and for that reason has been engaged in financial and mercantile advertising.

The prime mover behind the bureau, George S. Kahan, the organization was started in 1919 and is a leader in the field of newspaper advertising.

The Seattle bureau, which is located in Skidmore's building, was started January 1, 1921. The first directors included E. R. Morgan and G. S. Kahan.

In the fall of 1921 an alliance was formed with the vigilance committee of the Advertising Clubs of the World.

Either Mr. Colwell or Edward F. Korbel, vice-president of the company, will visit the Paris office for a month or more early in the summer.

ENWRIGHT TILTS WITH BOSTON'S MAYOR.

TELEGRAM TURNS ON MAYOR CURLEY FOR FAILING TO MAKE GOOD ON ELECTION PROMISES — OTHER PAPERS "OUT" WITH ADMINISTRATION FOLLOW UP STORY.

A sensational dispute between Fredrick W. Enwright, editor and publisher of The Fourth Estate, a Boston's mayor, James M. Curley, whose newspaper support in the last mayoralty election was Mr. Enwright's paper attracted wide attention this week.

Following a complete reversal of the paper's policy in supporting the demands of Boston's "Hizzoner," Mr. Enwright published lengthy letters and editorials which declared that the mayor's campaign promises, especially those relating to the relief of the fuel shortage, had been unkept in full. The publisher also swung hard at the state's policy of finance commission and berated Mayor Curley for failing to supply the relief of fuel shortage. A few weeks in the winter when winter blast in the Hub were freezing because of the coal shortage.

The mayor's "blast" came upon his return to Boston Sunday night last, when he issued a lengthy statement in the newspapers. He said Mayor Curley, of course lacked of the mayor's statement, and Mr. Enwright had got his head behind and is not expected to help.

With the implied intentions of each to keep up the battle, there is little doubt that Mayor Curley and Mr. Enwright will get hotter and hotter as time goes on.

Mayor Curley said that he had a plan of the telegram behind him and is not expected to help.

The situation previous to the fight might be likened to that in New York, where Mayor Hylan is on the attack to supply the relief of the fuel shortage. All publishers, but for the fact that the mayor has not been sought as strenuously by the press as by the constable press.

The First of Cresson Series of 700 Suits Lost.

Inasmuch as this decision holds that the official report names Colonel Cresson as party to the conspiracy, the basis of all his suits is therefore destroyed.

Mr. Enwright also holds that the headlines of the article naming these three officers as parties to the conspiracy were justified and further holds that the trial judge, with propriety, could have instructed a verdict for the defendant when the case was called for trial.

Inasmuch as this decision holds that the official report names Colonel Cresson as party to the conspiracy, the basis of all his suits is therefore destroyed.

Justice Ely also holds that the newspaper article was a fair, true and impartial account of the case and that there is no escape from the fact that the report meant and intended to identify these three as partiesto the conspiracy.

The Star-Telegram was represented, both in the trial of the case and in the appeal, by its general attorneys, Samuel and Brown of Fort Worth, and A. W. Seeligson of Ball and Seeligson, San Antonio, while Colonel Cresson was represented by Marshall Hicks and J. D. Dodson of San Antonio.

DON SEITZ TALKS CONFIDENTIALLY TO STUDENTS.

ST. LAWRENCE UNIVERSITY HEARS ONE REASON WHY HE DISTURBS THE A.P. AS IMPARTIAL NEWS AGENT — HEARST PAPERS RECEIVE A TRIBUTE.

Don C. Seitz, M.A. '06, of St. Lawrence University, Canton, N.Y., publisher of the New York Evening World, addressed the students at the university.

"What Makes Newspapers Great," in Fins and Halves, which morning. His talk gave the large body of undergraduates present an insight into the workings of one of the big newspaper men of the country. The speech was of absorbing interest.

Don Seitz handled the adroitly the subject of the fairness of journalism. After a cordial opportunity, the modern world has reached its highest development in power and importance of our modern newspapers, he gathered a great number of the Hill News university papers.

"The lightness and ease with which Mr. Seitz handled his subject, and the rapid volley of questions fired at him by his listeners at the conclusion of the lecture gave full expression of his striking personality. "Mr. Seitz, who belong in the category of 'born newspapermen,'" it continues, "has a dexterous manner of answering the rapid volley of questions fired at him by his listeners at the conclusion of the lecture."

"While newspapers are becoming great," said Mr. Seitz, "there as no country in the world where a metropolitan daily has lost its whole area of distribution, and the consequent power, by the growth of good newspapers in the minor towns and cities."

"These men," continued Mr. Seitz, "battled strenuously for their political ideals and kept the whole country in the grip of their political journalism. We are in a day of new ideas, and the newspapers, as usual, take the lead."

"We are in a day of new ideas, and the newspapers, as usual, take the lead."

"While admitting some of its defects, Mr. Seitz nevertheless regrets that the modern newspaper has not been improved to the point that it is a better medium of public education."

Mr. Seitz's talk, the students were invited to ask questions pertaining to journalism, and they responded freely as above indicated.

REMARKABLE TRIBUTE PAID TO ERNEST BROSS BY ONE OF SHAFFER GROUP CHIEFS.

Sincere tribute to the memory of Ernest Bross, late managing editor of the Indianapolis Star, was made this week by Charles H. Shaffer, general manager of the Chicago Evening Post, and of the Shaffer group of newspapers, of which the Star is a member.

"I think it is only right that I should express my deep sympathy in the passing of a man who worked with him in his profession or were his associates in those activities to which he devoted much of his time and effort. Thousands of readers will miss the contributions of the Star, the products of an informed and cultured mind, written in a style which combined literary grace with forcefulness of expression and animated by ideals worth the highest aspirations of American life.

GERMAN DAILIES STRUGGLE FOR EXISTENCE.

TERRIFIC NEWS PRINT PRICES HAVE KILLED OFF MANY—EFFORTS AT GOVERNMENT PRICE REGULATION HAVE BEEN FUTILE—RAISING OF RATES SUICIDAL.

The desperate struggle for life of the German daily newspapers because of the high price of news print paper is of itself remarkable phases of the complex European economic situation, according to F. T. Harris, assistant to the vice-president of the International Paper Company, who reviews the situation in the Paper Mill.

The German press, in its search for relief from prices which jump and frequently double every month, as the gold value of the mark continues to tumble, has repeatedly appealed to the government for aid, Mr. Harris says. The response has been different from anything his firm has encountered in the United States. During the last year, for instance, the price secured on July 21, 1922, of two tons of pulp wood from Mr. El Reisch, prominent among the producers of which was a tax of fifteen cents on every ton to set the value of the exports of all commodities from Germany, and a tax of one-half cent on the value of certain kinds of timber sold. This resulted in a decreased pulp consumption of all publishers on the basis of their consumption of news print.

In early September the federal minister of economy said that the fixing of a maximum price for news print was unfair, and that the higher price was just the result of the increase in the cost of labor. The maximum price, however, continues to be enforced from time to time since the passage of the law has been fair and entirely consistent with the policy of the government. This has been far from bringing the relief to the publishers which they had anticipated.

Many other expedients have been experimented with, at various times, but the pulp mills themselves remain the chief factor in cost. The maximum prices which have been imposed have not been fixed by the minister from time to time since the passage of the law has been fair and entirely consistent with the policy of the government. This has been far from bringing the relief to the publishers which they had anticipated.

The newspapers have tried to raise their subscription and newsprint rates to keep pace with the constantly rising cost of producing their papers, but have found that advertisers and subscribers cannot pay these rates. The average of subscription rates in November, 1922, was 600 marks, which was 200 times the average of subscription rates in 1892, while the average of newsprint paper prices in November, 1922, was only 1.2 times the average of 1902.

This is a vivid example of the plight of the papers. Many of the great middle-class, the chief support of the newspapers, can no longer afford them, and consequently the papers are suffering from a lack of circulation.

The publication of German classics and other high-class works, however, is being conducted on a gigantic scale, as the working class, enabled now to occupy high posts in business and the government, are striving quickly to qualify for such positions. German newspapers, however, are gradually forced to suspend publication.
FORMER REPORTER GUIDING KRUPP INTERESTS.

JAMES DUNNING'S RISE IN FINANCIAL WORLD READS LIKE FICTION AS ALGER WROTE IT—BEGAN AS REPORTER ON "WAY DOWN EAST" DAILY.

Here's a story about a newspaper man that has Horatio Alger beaten! He is James Edmund Dunning, who once was a newspaper reporter "way down east" and now is a giant in international business circles. At first he was United States consul at Milan, Italy, and later he was transferred to Havre, France. His success at making a living through his diplomatic work enabled him to make his home at present.

Dunning has written several books and articles on commerce and historical subjects and once in a while proves that the busiest men have leisure interests by issuing a rare fiction story or two.

BOSTON WRITERS APPEALED TO WORK FOR PLAYS THAT CARRY A LESSON.

Channing Pollock, noted journalist-author, dramatic critic and playwright, sounded an appeal for the Boston literary world, which the ex-reporter was the second American to be appointed to the commission. He is honorary secretary of the American Chamber of Commerce in Europe, and has gained his first insight into business matters of world importance.

WASHINGTON NEWSPAPER MAN AUTHOR OF VOLUME ON CIVIL WAR HEROES.

"Lincoln and Lee," fresh from the press, is the latest historical contribution to the events of long ago by Colonel Smith D. Fry, veteran newspaper man. The work is intended for individuals who desire to continue their education under whatever conditions are possible for them.

The contents and purpose of the work may be best described by the condensed statement of the author, who writes for The Fourth Estate correspondent:

"In childhood, youth and young manhood, an event which fact that Harriet Beecher Stowe's 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' was marvelous in its effect on the North and South, and precipitating the Civil War, or as my friend used to say, 'between the war and the States.'"

"My purpose in this work is to impress the people of the South with the fact that as the greatest man of the North, and impress the people of the South with the idea of a really marvelous grandeur of the character of the masterful man of the South."

When the war broke out for him to abandon his private business and get into the row with both feet. During most of war he served as purchasing agent for the American Expeditionary force, attaining the rank of colonel.

In 1919 he received the D.S.O. for his government services. In other ways, however, has his ability been recognized. He represented the United States in 1907 at the sessions of the permanent commission of the international congress of chambers of commerce at Brussels and at the congress of navigation held in Philadelphia in 1912.

The ex-reporter was the second American to be appointed to the commission. He is honorary secretary of the American Chamber of Commerce in Europe, and has gained his first insight into business matters of world importance.

BOSTON WRITERS APPEALED TO WORK FOR PLAYS THAT CARRY A LESSON.

Channing Pollock, noted journalist-author, dramatic critic and playwright, sounded an appeal for the Boston literary world, which the ex-reporter was the second American to be appointed to the commission. He is honorary secretary of the American Chamber of Commerce in Europe, and has gained his first insight into business matters of world importance.

WASHINGTON NEWSPAPER MAN AUTHOR OF VOLUME ON CIVIL WAR HEROES.

"Lincoln and Lee," fresh from the press, is the latest historical contribution to the events of long ago by Colonel Smith D. Fry, veteran newspaper man. The work is intended for individuals who desire to continue their education under whatever conditions are possible for them.

The contents and purpose of the work may be best described by the condensed statement of the author, who writes for The Fourth Estate correspondent:

"In childhood, youth and young manhood, an event which fact that Harriet Beecher Stowe's 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' was marvelous in its effect on the North and South, and precipitating the Civil War, or as my friend used to say, 'between the war and the States.'"

"My purpose in this work is to impress the people of the South with the fact that as the greatest man of the North, and impress the people of the South with the idea of a really marvelous grandeur of the character of the masterful man of the South."

When the war broke out for him to abandon his private business and get into the row with both feet. During most of war he served as purchasing agent for the American Expeditionary force, attaining the rank of colonel.

In 1919 he received the D.S.O. for his government services. In other ways, however, has his ability been recognized. He represented the United States in 1907 at the sessions of the permanent commission of the international congress of chambers of commerce at Brussels and at the congress of navigation held in Philadelphia in 1912.

The ex-reporter was the second American to be appointed to the commission. He is honorary secretary of the American Chamber of Commerce in Europe, and has gained his first insight into business matters of world importance.
PUBLICITY MATTER FOR AND AGAINST PROHIBITION.

DRYS BELIEVE UNCLE SAM'S REALMS ARE BECOMING DRIER AND DRIER EVERY DAY—WETS BUSY MAKING PUBLIC SEE FOLLIES IN NATION'S LAWS.

The wide field of publicity formerly preempted by government and special organizations on the burning issue of prohibition has of late been most sharply challenged by elements of organized opposition to the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act.

Major Roy A. Haynes, federal prohibition commissioner, and a former newspaper publisher, continues to issue reams of publicity matter from the headquarters of prohibition in Washington. Sherman A. Cumes, head of the publicity department, and also a former Ohio newspaper editor and publisher, is the one who keeps the matter into shape. Mainly, it is of an optimistic cast, carrying the cheerful news to the advocates of prohibition that Uncle Sam’s realms are becoming drier and drier every day.

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, keeps a sharp eye on doings in Congress, and overlooks no bets when an opportunity is offered to strike a telling blow at the “liberals” in the national legislative body.

Mr. Wheeler frequently becomes the personal target of the more pronounced congressional “wets,” because of his habit of haunting the galleries. More than once the paperfingered the Republican Representatives Philip Hill of Maryland, George J. Jones of New York, and other “liberal” congressional leaders, is aimed directly at the Wets. Shortly after, a phlegmatic language lending piety to the act. A few minutes later, Wheeler will be beguiling copies of his “comeback” to the scribes in the press galleries.

On the other side, the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, an organization being made up of 50,000 members in all parts of the country, with headquarters at Wash-ington, is busy setting up a public the follies and futilities of the current prohibition system and its supporters. It has found and ex-emplifies handsome fee of financial assistance fromCAPT. W. STAYTON, Annapolis graduate, former naval officer, in the head of several steamship lines in Baltimore, whose sincere convictions that prohibition is a blight on American liberty and genuine Americanism early led him into the fight against Volsteadism. The publicity matter of the association is sent far and wide by C. Hinckley, a former newspaper printer.

One of the latest emanations from the association consists of a special outfit entitled “Enquiry of Prohibition.” In its columns appears the adverse record. Naturally it fails to have the impact of the official output of Major Haynes and Mr. Cumes, but as may be expected, it has such headlines as “Bootleggers Organize,” “Liquor Smugglers Run a New Race,” “Prohibition: Enforcement Personnel Has Unavory Record,” “Enter, the Child Bothe,” “Future Reaps Great Harvest,” etc., etc. The material consists of editorials from all points, to which in its foreword, Mr. Hinckley pays tribute as follows: “The second great national institution represents only an infinitesimal part of the vast record of evils resulting from prohibition. It should be borne in mind that all of it appeared in routine form as news in the columns of the press, which acts forth impartially, day by day, the outstanding happenings for good or evil, thus giving the fairest possible picture of things as they are.”

PUSHING NEWS PRINT MILL CONSTRUCTION.

With only one handicap, it is possible to contend with construction work on the news print mill of the Algonquin Paper Company at Ogdensburg, New York, is being pushed forward with rapidity. It is expected that early in the spring the first of the four press of the paper machine, 194 inches wide, will be installed. The mill, when ready for operation will have a capacity of 80 tons a day.

The large part of the Algonquin mill will be formed from the plant equipped two years ago by the Ogdensburg Paper Mills, Inc., for a ground wood mill.

ROADS TO SPEED NEWS PRINT.

The A.N.P.A. committee on traffic has succeeded in inducing the leading officials of the Boston and Maine and the New York, New Haven and Hartford roads in modifying their embargo so as to exempt news print. The committee was assured that every effort would be made to get news print shipments with utmost dispatch.

YALE MONTHLY PURCHASES from Connecticut Paper.

The Connecticut Times, Democratic organ operated by former United States Senator and Major Party, has suspended and the printing plant in New Haven has been sold to the publishers of the Elihu, a new Yale college monthly.

PROFITS DOMINATE PRESS SAYS EDITOR.

PUBLISHER OF NEW YORK NATION DESCRIBES IDEAL DAILY NEWSPAPER AS ONE SEEKING FOR TRUTH AND STANDING AGAINST ERROR—ONE SIDE ONLY PRESENTED.

The newspaper business today has become a commercialized enterprise rather than a profession; the press fails to present both sides of a question; press propaganda is the worst heritage of the world war.

These were among the criticisms made by Oswald Garrison Villard, editor and owner of the Nation, New York, speaking on “Recent Tendencies in American Journalism” before the City Club of Rochester. “The hope of a great newspaper,” said Mr. Villard, “lies in absolute fidelity and a soul unsoiled by the lure of gain.”

Mr. Villard further said, in part: “The first great, salient, outstanding fact about the newspaper business is that it has become within my lifetime really a business, rather than a profession; the newspapers, if ever, founded now in order to mold public opinion, or because some soul burns with the message to deliver to as much of the world as it can induce to stop, look, and listen. The modern newspaper has become a tremendously capitalistic enterprise involving millions of dollars.”

The press has retrogressed tremendously in the matter of presenting both sides of a case. In many towns, only one political viewpoint is represented, thus making hash of the old Americanism. Even the democratic and republican viewpoint point be presented, but that any dissenting opinions in the community should also have their mouthpiece. Fortunately, the press, instead of becoming more tolerant and more willing to open its columns to all sorts of opinion, has become less tolerant.

Almost the worst heritage of the war is the heritage of press propaganda. Even the press itself is becoming frightened, not only at the ease with which the sources of public information are corrupted, but with which the newspapers themselves are being fooled by paid propaganda.

Mr. Villard declared that American newspaper readers are getting nothing but censored reports from Constantinople, from Athens, from Italy.

LUKE OF GAIN BLAMED.

“What is the answer?” resumed the speaker. “It is in the co-operative and non-profit-making newspaper that the greatest hope lies. Is there not a growing feeling that the private press is hindered in the development of natural resources which are the gift of nature and which cannot be replaced? I only know that it is the profit-making motive which is responsible for most of the sins of the times.”

“I believe that it is still possible to publish a newspaper which would seek the truth ardently and earnestly, which would stand foursquare against the world. Such a newspaper would determined to sound the depths of economic law, to hold a brief for no set of men; it would be a journalistic standard to which men of all faiths and all walks of life might repair with tolerance, approach, and sympathy. This is no unattainable idealistic vision; it has been demonstrated even by the Manchester Guardian in England, but the vision must be there. There must be such in a daily a noble purpose; there must be absolute fidelity, there must be opinions, convictions and a soul unsoiled by the lure of gain.”

30,000 PAPER WORKERS LOCKED OUT IN SWEDEN.

A lockout in the paper and steel mills in Sweden began on Monday, affecting about 30,000 workers in the former industry and many additional hands resulting to information received by Olaf H. Lamm, Swedish consul general, that the present trouble is one of the two largest export industries of Sweden.

In the paper industry the exports have been largely of pulp used principally in the manufacture of news print. The United States alone last year imported 400,000 tons of pulp, and England imported a similar quantity.

Paper mills in England apparently expect the present trouble to continue for a long time, for it is reported that they are buying up all the available pulp in Sweden for immediate transportation to their plants.

The labor trouble began the first of the year. The workers in the pulp mills went on a strike at that time, and since then not many of the plants have been in operation. The wage question alone was involved, the mills seeking a reduction in wages and the workers demanding more money. Sweden has a law for compulsory arbitration, but so far the workers and mill owners have barely agreed on arbitration. The result was that the mill owners decided to declare a lockout effective last Monday.

FRANKLIN BECAME PUBLISHER 200 YEARS AGO.

ANNIVERSARY OF HIS FIRST NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE FALLS TOMORROW — BEGAN AS EXECUTIVE OF THE NEW ENGLAND COURANT WHEN SEVENTEEN YEARS OLD.

Just two hundred years ago Benjamin Franklin, then only seventeen, first became a newspaper publisher. The February 10, 1923, issue of the New England Courant, published by the Franklin Institute, was the first publication to carry the name of Benjamin Franklin. Sponsored by the Advertising Club of the World, this epoch-making date in the life of “Poor Richard” was well recommended for educational purposes and appropriate bouquets, where feasible.

Franklin’s birthday, January 17, has just been celebrated by greater honors paid to Franklin’s memory than ever before. Appreciation of Franklin has grown progressively during the past two hundred years and is evidenced in the current movements. This movement was launched back in 1923 in New York City as part of national thrift week, but the patriotic phase is now receiving mention.

The Franklin Memorial movement is spreading internationally and is being promoted by corresponding groups concerned in some way with Franklin. These groups have been most loyal to “Ben’s” memory for over a century, as Franklin himself was not a self printer. Advertising clubs and electrical leagues in many cities last month also began an annual tribute of love and admiration.

On February 6 in New York and many other cities, the Alliance Francaise lauded Franklin on the 145th anniversary of the signing of the treaty with France which Dr. Franklin negotiated. Ambassador Jouvenel and wife spent the evening at the New York city dinner.

A notable example of the printing industry’s devotion to Franklin is “America’s Patron Saint of Printers” is found in the early issue of the American Printer, a leading trade publication. It is called the Franklin Centennial Number and contains in part seventy-four inserts, mostly in color, which have been contributed by leading printing concerns of the United States. Canada and Great Britain. It is excellent Franklin publicity as well as a superb exhibition of printing processes since the day those inserts are already being displayed in museums, libraries and elsewhere from coast to coast.

At the American Museum of Natural History, New York City, the American Printer inserts are now on view, along with the seventy-four other great events which Franklin in his Park Row on Ben’s 271st birthday anniversary. The new insert is a copy of the Philadelphia number which is already the most popular issue in the world.

Franklin’s immortal pilgrimage from Boston to New York, and then across New Jersey to Philadelphia, will be commemorated next week. Franklin’s “Poor Richard” arrived finally on a “Sunday October morning” in 1723 in the Quaker City. Philadelphia is expected to join hands next October with New England, New York City, New Jersey and New England in celebrating this bicentenary. The Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia, last month set the ball rolling with an memorable event which was planned to commemorate the anniversary of Franklin’s birthday. There is a statue of Franklin in the State of New York last December launched a movement to have the Franklin Memorial in Washington which will company favorably with the Washington Monument and the Lincoln memorial.

The post office department last month likewise honored Franklin nationally with posters and otherwise, not only as an honored citizen but as an honored citizen of the United States.

MINNEAPOLITAN WILL SERVE EIGHTEENTH TERM AS EDITORS’ SECRETARY.

For the eighteenth consecutive time, A. G. Ruleyed of Minneapolis was elected secretary-treasurer of the Northern Newspaper Association, at its recent meeting at Red Lake Falls, Minn.

E. H. Brummel of Benoit was elected president, and Martin Wistien of the Warroad Pioneer was named vice-president. Under the new provisions of the constitution and by-laws, the executive committee consists of three members, elected as follows: J. P. Groth, Roseau Times, for one year; E. E. Ellist and C. A. Clarke, for two years; Carl Carlson, Melrose Beacon, for three years.

Wadena was selected for the annual meeting next January. The summer outing will be held at Brainerd.

The resolutions adopted emphasized the importance of the association, its present form, and opposed consolidation of or abolition of it, in connection with the plan for a state park system, and the work of the National Lakes association, approved the plan of the state fair board for a Northwestern dairy exposition, and urged the Legislature to pass a flexible rural credit law.

WARDMAN ESTATE ESTIMATED AT HALF MILLION.

Ervin Wardman, late vice-president of the Sun-Herald Corporation, New York, left an estate estimated at $500,000, according to the will which was admitted to probate in White Plains, N. Y., last week. The principal bequest was to establish a fund of $10,000 in the name of his widow, Mrs. Violet Boyer Wardman, in semi-annual payments.

Mrs. Wardman is to receive $10,000 in cash, at once; all household furniture, silverware, jewelry and the residue of the estate. A trust fund of $10,000 is created for Mr. Wardman’s mother, Mrs. Virginia Wardman of Abington, Va., in the income to be paid her. At her death the $10,000 will be divided, $5,000 to the widow, and $5,000 to the estate of the widow of Pelham Manor and Elsworth Greenley of New York. The latter received cash bequests of $1,000 each.

The Columbia Trust Company of Manhattan is named as executor of the will.

PUBLISHER TO START PAPER AT LONG BEACH.

The organization of a new publication enterprise by E. A. Vamleventer, formerly publisher of the Oakland, Cal., Post, in which a number of citizens are participating, was announced last week. At Half Million.

The new publication will make its appearance in March. It will be devoted exclusively to Long Beach news and will be issued in the subscription price of the Los Angeles Express.

When Mr. Vamleventer operated the Oakland Post, the paper was circulated as a Frances newspaper, on the same basis as the proposed new Long Beach publication.

ADVERTISING TO SHARPEN PUBLIC INTELLIGENCE.

Premier Bonar Law's recent declaration that "expert use of white paper and printers' ink" would be the most effective means of educating the public and making the government more efficient, and many of the large cities of the country, has shown how far Madi has found wide interest in the plan. And it will become of the idea rests with newspaper men themselves. There is no reason why it should not be carried through. In this age, when many of the large cities of the country, it is to be expected, the leadership placed in the hands of a committee and the advertising man who works downstairs under the editor to look into the matter with an open mind, and not the capture, of happiness.

ANOTHER ILL CONCEIVED ATTACK ON THE PRESS.

Bankers, labor leaders, manufacturers, educators, politicians, and all others, who have prescribed a formula to guide the advertising man, entitled "Publicity—Positive and Negative," which proceeds to indict journalism for its every action and every failure, is illustrative enough to take in all those in the many branches of the profession— as comprehensive a body, for instance, as is represented in the membership of the Advertising Club of New York. The desire of the advertising man to control every game of newspaper baiting is reflected in a recent editorial in The New York Times, entitled "Publicity—Positive and Negative," which proceeds to indict journalism for its every action and every failure, and which, with a passion for facts, was written in the morning papers, it says, "such headlines as these: $100,000,000 lost in broker failures for the year, $100,000,000 in worthless stocks, $10,000,000 in Texas Oil Frauds, etc., etc., have been the order of the day in the newspapers. The newspapers feel they are doing a good work in showing the public the real values behind the securities and the real risks behind the bad spots in the investment business. But are they? Isn't such propaganda likely to disillusion rather than to convince and make the readers bring the facts to the public, rather than to negative and constructive?

Editors and publishers who travel abroad— and there are more and more of the in with every steam— may be interested in a limited amount of ready cash, that in small bills so that "making change" will not be so expensive for the touristor commercial traveler.

CIRCULATION MEN OF MID-WEST TO MEET.

SEMI-ANNUAL GATHERING AT HUTCHINSON, KAN., MARCH 6 AND 7 TO BE MARKED WITH LIVELY PROGRAM — CITY PLANS ELABORATE RECEPTION.

Circulation managers of five states will gather at Hutchinson, March 6 and 7 for the semi-annual gathering of the Mid-West Circulation Managers, Association. A lively program is assured by the arrangements committee and the city is planning to make the event one that will be remembered by the circulation men.

While the Mid-West organization is one of the youngest it has a membership that compares well with similar associations in the country. For enthusiasm and co-operation it is among the foremost. It was formed three years ago and has held meetings twice a year since that time. The city last gathered at Hutchinson, Colorado Springs and was well attended.

The states represented are: Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Nebraska.

The officers of the association are: President, Sidney E. White, Wichita, Kan., Eagle; vice-president, W. Boeshans, St. Joseph, Mo., Gazette; secretary-treasurer, Will A. Butler, Colorado Springs, Colo., Telegraph; Director, C. B. McCauley, Wichita, Kan., Beacon; Roy Bailey, Salina, Kan., Journal; Waller, Fremont, Neb., Tribune; M. W. Halmacher, Oklahoma City, Okla., Oklahoman-Times; H. S. Blake, Topeka, Kan., Capper Publications; John Levand, Denver, Col., Post; Ralph Seaman, St. Louis, Mo., Globe-Democrat.

The South Dakota Press Association will hold its winter meeting at Sioux Falls, Iowa on February 15 and 16. J. F. Halladay, editor of the Iroquois Chief, is secretary of the organization.

Furnished full page matrices, black alone, black and red, and black and three colors; or, as the first page of a printed comic section.

PUBLISHING FIRM CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY.

TWENTY YEARS AGO COMPANY OPERATING FOUR PAPERS IN OKLAHOMA CITY CAME INTO EXISTENCE — HISTORY WITH NEWSPAPERS' HOMES REHEARSED.

The twentieth anniversary of the organization of the Oklahoma Publishing Company was celebrated this week. The Daily Oklahoman, however, published by this company, is more than twenty years old.

Every vestige of the romantic beginnings of newspapers in 1889 in Oklahoma City was contained in the Daily Oklahoman and the Oklahoma City Times last Wednesday.

The article was accompanied by illustrations of the various homes of the Daily Oklahoman during its twenty years, and by cuts of Roy Stafford, E. K. Gaylord and R. M. Dickson, who organized the Oklahoma Publishing Company. Mr. Gaylord is now president of the Oklahoman and Times.

The Oklahoma Publishing Company now has four publications; the Daily Oklahoman, the Oklahoma City Times, the Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman, and Retail Selling, a trade publication.

The Daily Oklahoman has had a long and complicated history. It is the linchpin of the Gaylord establishment, established in May, 1889, by Frank McMaster, with whom was associated R. M. Dickson.

The Gazette was consolidated in 1892 with the Press, which was bought by Gaylord. The Gazette was bought by John L. Rock. The paper became the Daily Oklahoman on January 14, 1894. In the same year the Star was consolidated with the Oklahoman, and two years later, the Oklahoman Champion also was merged with the Oklahoman.

Many newspapers sold ownership, in policy and in form took place during the remaining years of the Oklahoman's history, but the Oklahoman remained the Oklahoman in name and continued to expand.

The name of the Oklahoman was given it by Sam Small, the evangelist-newspaperman, who was connected with the paper in 1894.

The history of the Oklahoma City Times, although it became a member of the Oklahoma Publishing Company in 1898, dates back to early Oklahoma history. Dr. A. C. Scott, director of extension lectures in the University of Oklahoma, brought the first edition of the Times into Oklahoma City with the run on April 22, having printed the paper in Kansas. After a varied career with a score of owners, the Times was taken over by the Oklahoma Publishing company on January 1, 1916.

DETROIT WOMEN ORGANIZE ADVERTISING CLUB.

Forty charter members of the newly organized Detroit Advertising Club of Detroit met a few days ago and adopted a charter. Plans are being made by the club can be developed into an organization similar to women's advertising clubs in New York and Chicago. These clubs in Chicago were discussed. There are more than 500 women in Detroit connected with advertising activities. Efforts are now being made to get all of these women into the club.

MILWAUKEE PRESS CLUB'S YEAR BOOK. Volume 20, Number 28, of Once-A-Year, published by the Milwaukee Press Club, is issued to members and patrons of the organization, resembles both in size and appearance the Saturday Evening Post. The club is nearing its fortieth year.

Once-A-Year contains 116 pages of some mighty interesting copy and advertisements, both national and local. The cover design, entitled "The Desk Man," drawn by Artist Abe Warner, shows a busy editor at work, telephone, paste pot, shears, with the ever present pipe at his elbow.

There is a history of the club which appeared in 1888 in a little volume, "The Milwaukee Press Club," written by the late Henry E. ... editor; photographs of Charles H. Kelsey, president of the club, and Leonard E. Meyer, secretary for thirteen years.

There are interesting yarns by Amram Scheinfield, George C. Nuesse, Charles W. Lamb, Downie Downer on "Being a City Editor," Charles Dean, William H. Hooker, Harriet N. Pettibone, Albert S. Harvey, Leonard E. Meyer, Walter Distelhorst, a prize "Volunteer" and a whole list of important typewriter artists, on "Why Women are Not Cartonned in Newspapers—Why Men are.

THANK NEWSPAPER.

The Rev. Stuart M. Campbell, pastor of the Maple Grove, Pa., Presbyterian Church, entered the business office of the Macon Daily Chronicle-Herald recently. Mr. Campbell could get a four-inch double column advertisement on the editorial page.

Mr. Campbell read his copy. The business manager read it with interest and surprise. The matter which the minister wanted to insert as a paid advertisement was a grateful acknowledgement of himself and his church for services the paper had rendered in the year.

Why, we'll run that for you with pleasure," remarked the business manager, "but we can't take pay for that kind of an ad. The shoe's on the other foot."

The noticewas a "Greeting to the Daily Chronicle-Herald force," and expressed appreciation of the services of "the reporters, pressmen and printers in the year 1922." with a wish for a Happy Christmas and a Prosperous New Year, and was signed by the minister.

KANSAS PUBLISHER'S AD BRINGS MANY DINNER INVITATIONS.

William Allen White, publisher of the Emporia Gazette, offered an invitation to a chicken dinner by advertising in his paper. Here is his advertisement:

"Mrs. W. A. White has gone to New York, called there by the illness of her sister, as we are informed.

"Mr. W. A. White is in Emporia.

"How about Sunday dinner?"

"This is not only an opportunity, but a duty, as we have said before on many cases of public need."

"Don't all speak at once, but phone after six o'clock."

In a short time Mr. White received twenty invitations for dinner and the phone was still busy. He ate chicken with Wilts Kerr, librarian at the Kansas State Normal College, the first to answer the notice.

NEW VOLUME ON LINOTYPE A VALUABLE HANDBOOK FOR USE OF TRADE.

The Mergenthaler Linotype Company's new book, "The Big Scheme of Simple Operation," which it calls "a personally consulted trip through the linotype," takes up step by step and in non-technical language the operation of the machine. The book is intended for students in linotype and printing schools and schools of journalism. It will also be of much practical value to persons in any way connected with printing.

All of the illustrations used in the book are based on the model 8 linotype. The universal ejector, the universal knife block, and the linotype inclined galleys are illustrated and explained. All phases of the distributing process are pictured and described.

The concluding pages are given over to linotype decorative material, and attention is directed to the ease and speed with which linotype magazines can be changed, and from the front of the machine. The book, like many others, illustrates the idea that the model 8 can be purchased with only one magazine and the other magazines added later in the composing room by the operator as the necessity of discarding any parts, in less than an hour's time.

The only journal outside of the United States published in the interest of newspaper men.

DEATH OF WELL-KNEW OHIO NEWSPAPER MAN.

Olive O. Harrington, foreign advertising manager of the Dayton, Ohio, Daily News, and twenty-six years associated with the newspapers of former Governor James M. Cox, in the capacity of composing room foreman, advertising manager and business manager, died last Sunday following an operation for appendicitis.

During the term of James M. Cox as governor of Ohio, Mr. Harrington served in the capacity of foreman of the former newspaper's, the Dayton News and the Springfield News.

MEDICINE ADVERTISER DIES AT AGE OF EIGHTY-ONE.

Hubert Harrington Warner, at one time one of the country's largest patent medicine advertisers, died in Minneapolis recently at the age of eighty-one. It is said that at one time Warner's advertising appropriation ran up to $750,000 annually. Warner's Safe Cure was one of the drugs and extensively sold by the firm. He was also a manufacturer of the homeopathic medicine, the '80.' His enterprises made him a millionaire several times over.

OTHER OBITUARY NOTES.

JAMES S. CHAMBERS, for twenty-one years with the Philadelphia Public Ledger, died suddenly last Thursday night while on his way home from his work. "Uncle Jim" as he was familiarly known in newspaper and political circles was one of the best known newspaper men in the state. He had a host of friends prominent in the affairs of the Ledger and state that valued his counsel. He had been in ill health and had submitted to a serious operation which did not deter his activities in his newspaper work, he kept at his work until the end. He was 70 years of age and leaves a widow and one son, Jay Chambers, an artist of Lynbrook, L.I.

HOW HEARST PUT CHICAGO SUNDAY OVER A MILLION.

February 4, 1923, crossed the million mark in circulation, thus passing the most significant milepost in its growth and achievement.

The day more than one million copies of a Sunday issue of this newspaper were distributed in response to definite dealers' orders. Your Chicago Sunday Examiner now stands alone—without a peer in its field and side by side with its brother, your New York American—on the only newspapers in America with over a million circulation.

It must be particularly gratifying to you to know that your Chicago Sunday newspaper achieved this million circulation entirely through the spontaneous response of its public to your success in the production of the best Sunday newspaper.

The result is a real tribute of thinking Americans to the high quality of your newspapers, their sterling worth in the service of the Jewish cause.

THE JEWISH MORNING JOURNAL
An American newspaper read by the more important classes of Jews in New York City.

Sunday newspaper in America to attain that mark.

Mr. Hearst has shown genius for selecting specialized lieutenants. Victor H. Polachek, a few years before, had told him he could put the New York Sunday American over a million—and build so strongly that it would stay there. He did it. The American went over a million and not only held it, but went far beyond it, and is still growing.

Mr. Murphy, the new business manager, has been associated with the Tribune for the last five months. He was one of the earlier organizers and has been engaged in that character of promotional work for the last five months, and, according to Mr. Murphy, the Tribune should have its field to itself.

The staff, as compiled in the news rooms, would be composed of Mr. Murphy, Mr. Brauf, Sidney I., Snow, formerly of the New York, Boston and Philadelphia bureaus of the Associated Press, as news editor; John J. Schanzer, from the Norristown Times, as sports editor; Fred H. Uthoff, from the Philadelphia bureau of the Associated Press, as sports writer; Frank J. Kuiper, former sportswriter for the Public Ledger, as sports editor; John W. Kilgour, from Newark, as sports writer; Fred H. Uthoff, from the Philadelphia bureau of the Associated Press, as sports editor; Robert L. Gribbin, of Reading, as county editor; and Gordon Williams, from the Johnstown Leader, as sports editor.

The Tribune will start with a circulation of approximately 25,000. More than 11,000 orders for the first issue are now being held by the circulation department of Mr. Murphy, as the result of the interest of Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst for the new project, and accommodations for women students, and also Mrs. Hearst's suggestion that the new building be so placed as to give an unobstructed vista from some street or avenue leading to the campus.

PITTSBURG DEAL REMOVES TWO BIG NEWSPAPERS.

FIVE RIVAL PUBLICATIONS BUY AND ELIMINATE THE DISPATCH AND THE LEADER IN $2,000,000 DEAL. PRESS AND SUN TO GET TWO VACANT A. P. MEMBERSHIPS.

Purchase and discontinuance of both the Pittsburg Dispatch, morning and Sunday, and the Pittsburg Leader, evening and Sunday, were effected this week by the five other newspapers in that city. The consideration covering the purchase of the two papers is known to be in excess of $2,000,000. For many years the Pittsburg field has been regarded as overcrowded, both by advertisers and the publishers themselves. Five weeks ago negotiations began among the newspapers to narrow the field by the purchase and elimination of the other two.

The remaining companies own the five remaining papers, as follows: Newspaper Printing Company, George S. Oliver, president; the Dispatch and Chronicle, Mail, and Manual, A. E. Keeler, president; the Post and Sun, by a company headed by A. E. Braun.

The sale of the Dispatch included its goodwill, equipment, and circulation, the real estate being owned by other interests. The sale of the Leader included the real estate, which has already been sold, and the buyers assumed bonds issued by the Leader seventeen years ago, of which the purchase price is about $175,000 out of an original $400,000.

The physical properties of the two deceased newspapers have been placed in the hands of Elmer R. Stoll, secretary of the Associated Press. The sale of the Leader was met by turning over their subscription lists to each of the purchasers simultaneously. Legal advertising under contract with the Dispatch and the Leader will be carried out by the purchasing newspapers. Debts and obligations such as contracts for features, etc., will be cared for by the retiring publishers. Colonel Charles A. Rock of the Dispatch and Alexander P. Moore of the Leader, Colonel Rock, an appointed commissioner of public safety of Pittsburg, which includes the direction of police, fire and health departments, will devote his whole time to public service. Mr. Moore said in a farewell statement that the Leader "since June of last year I have labored and striven to continue in unimpaired effort that previously inspired me. His famous wife, Lillian Rus-sell Moore, died in June. She had been closely associated with her husband in the conduct of the Leader. The two papers, the Dispatch, which was purchased by the Press and Sun, and the Leader, which was purchased by Colonel Rock, both have a long standing reputation in Pittsburg. The retirement of the Dispatch, a paper for over 100 years, makes a vacancy in the A. P. board of directors, which will be filled by a Pittsburg man soon to be nominated.

The newspaper line-up in Pittsburg now will be three daily papers, two mornings and three evenings, as against five papers, three mornings and two evenings. The Press, Sun, and Daily Post were purchased by the Press and Sun, and the Leader was purchased by Colonel Rock.

ASSOCIATION ENTERTAINS AS GUESTS MANY PUBLISHERS OUTSIDE RANKS—TAXATION, PUBLICITY, AGENCY MATTERS, BAKING POWDER COPY AND POSTAGE ARE HEADLINERS.

More hot shot for the free publicity seekers is in prospect as a result of the annual convention of the Inland Daily Press Association at the Hotel Morrison, Chicago, Tuesday and Wednesday, according to both publishers, who began as a result of action taken at the last quarterly meeting.

The report of Attorney Arnold Guessmer of the Inland's income tax committee is one of the most interesting. According to Secretary Wil V. Tafford, the committee, after an intensive study of the taxation matters, will be a revelation to those who attend. A general discussion has been led by the Inland publishers of daily newspapers throughout the territory covered by the association.

The election of officers will take place at the Wednesday session. (Continued on Sixth Page)

TWO CONCORD, N. H., DAILIES BOUGHT AND CONSOLIDATED BY FRANK LANGLEY.

The Concord, N. H., Patriot and the Concord, N. H., Monitor, owned and operated entirely independent of one another, were purchased this week by former mayor Frank Langley, owner of the Barre, Vt., Times Times. The Concord Monitor became as one newspaper after March 1.

The Concord Monitor, an afternoon paper, was founded in 1854 and has been published ever since in New England and is one of the oldest newspapers in New England. The Associated Press charter members, which were established by the New England Publishing Company, was owned for several years by William Chandler and United States Senator George H. Moses, and was quoted nationally for Senator Moses' expressions of views in the paper.

He sold his interest some time ago to Mr. Chandler. It had a national reputation for many years after it was owned by the late United States Senator Chandler, father of the present William Chandler.

The Concord Patriot has an international reputation. It is the original organ of the Christian Science church, as Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy's own expressions were published in that medium.

Ten years ago the Patriot was sold to Edward G. Gardner, at the time secretary to the governor, and he has published it since. The Patriot is a four-page daily, with a morning edition.

The original manuscripts of the Christian Science Church were housed in a large vault in the Patriot office and were damaged by fire. They failed until it was burned with the Patriot building a year ago. The papers were housed in a beautiful new structure with a new plant.

It is understood that the combined publication will be conducted by Major James M. Langley of Barre, son of the purchaser, and John G. Win-ant of Concord.

QUICKREFUTATION FOR CHARGE OF FAKED CABLES.

A.P. AND THE NEW YORK TIMES ANSWER PROFESSOR WHO IS SAID TO HAVE USED PATTISON'S INTERVIEW AS BASIS FOR SLANDER ON ALL JOURNALISM.

Specific replies from Frederick Roy Martin, general manager of the Associated Press, and Carr V. Van Anda, managing editor of the New York Times, were made this week to the charge of Frank Usher, professor of law at the University of Washington, that an American newspaper is practically all written on this side of the Pacific. "Cablenews usually comes through in skeletonized form and is rewritten on this side by an American with the American viewpoint."

Dr. Usher, who occupies the chair of history at Washington university and is a widely quoted author on historical subjects, made his surprising declaration without qualification. According to the Globe-Democrat, the only explanation for his statement is that he may have taken without investigation an idea expressed in a published interview with the publisher of the A. N. P. A., and of the Baltimore Sun, in which Mr. Patterson was quoted as saying: "Cablenews usually comes through in skeletonized form and is rewritten on this side by an American reader viewpoint."

Dr. Usher's reply to Mr. Usher's statement comments that it is "surprising to find a man of Mr. Patterson's experience regarding the countenance to this motion. It belongs with the newspaper of fiction rather than of fact." His answer and that of Mr. Martin are printed in full below.

It may occasion surprise, too, that an educator and writer of Dr. Usher's status also have a part in (Continued on Fourteenth Page)

Increase sales by applying the right pressure in Philadelphia

More and more manufacturers are finding that Philadelphia—"the third largest market in America"—offers the chance for greatly increased sales at very small cost.

Whether you make products that have a popular appeal, or turn out luxuries or specialties, it will pay you to concentrate upon Philadelphia and the rich trading area which surrounds the city proper.

A vigorous selling drive, backed by adequate advertising in Philadelphia's foremost newspaper—The Bulletin—will place your goods in the hands of Philadelphia consumers.

You can insure a rapid turn-over for your goods, with its increase of retailers' good-will,—for every day The Bulletin goes into nearly every home, office and workshop in and around Philadelphia and Camden.

D. MOORE BUYS FORT WORTH RECORD.

PROPERTY TRANSFERRED THIS WEEK—EDMUND WALKER OF NEW YORK SELLS OUT AFTER TWO-MONTHS OWNERSHIP—PUBLISHING CORPORATION IS REORGANIZED.

Edmund Walker of New York, who two months ago announced his purchase of the Fort Worth Record, has sold the Daily paper for $1,000,000 to D. D. Moore, until four months ago publisher of the New Orleans Times-Picayune. The new owner is now in charge of the paper, the first time the paper has been sold in its 30 years' existence.

A new publishing corporation has been organized and papers filed at Austin. Officers have not been elected, pending the arrival of the charters. The consideration for which the deal was made was not made public.

NEW YORK EXECUTIVE TAKES GENERAL MANAGEMENT OF PATERNSON DAILY.

Harry H. Knickerbocker, for some time managing editor of the New York Globe, took charge as general manager of the Paterson, N. J., Times, which entered the field in November last. Mr. Knickerbocker has been connected with the business management of many papers in New York State for the past twenty years, and is well known in the majority of dailies both in New York City and New York State. He has been president of the New York Publishers' Association, and for some time prior to his connection with the New York Globe, represented that paper at the publishers' meetings in New York City. The Times, which is published by the Paterson Publishing Company, is owned by 250 stockholders, persons prominent in business, political and public welfare of Paterson. Its officers and directors are: Elisha W. B. Lee and Hewitt, president; Louis P. Brown, general manager of the Paterson board of finance, first vice-president; P. S. Van Kirk of Van Nostrand, second vice-president; Mayor Frank J. Van Nostrand, treasurer; Dr. Andrew F. McBride, ex-major; William H. Kearns, secretary; H. C. Martin, silk manufacturer; Joseph H. Martin, silk manufacturer; Daniel Dowling and Charles H. Roemer, city attorney.

John Condon, for many years with the New York World and the Financial American, has become business manager of the Times.

BATTEN AGENCY MOVING TO LARGER QUARTERS.

The George Batten Company, William H. Johns, president, has leased offices in the new building at 381 Fourth Avenue, New York, for the last three years, with the Daily Financial American. New York, and has becomes business manager of the Times.

REORGANIZATION OF HEARST'S INTERNATIONAL WESTERN OFFICE.
Under the direction of Richard H. Waldo, publisher of Hearst's International, the western advertising department at Chicago has been reorganized and an advertising council formed. Mr. Waldo will divide his time equally between the New York and Chicago offices. The following, who recently have joined Hearst's International staff, are members of this council:
John A. McDermott has been appointed office manager. He was previously with the United States Army as a major of infantry. E. C. Conover, who will be in charge of the northwestern territory, will be in charge of the Michigan territory. He was formerly a member of the executive board of the William H. Rankin Company, and recently eastern advertising manager of the New York Evening Post. Willard E. Stevens, in charge of the advertising company of the New York Evening Post.
John F. Ahrens, Jr., who will cover the Northwestern territory, recently Western manager of the American Boy, and has been with System. H. V. Davis, who will cover the territories of southern Indiana, southern Ohio, and Kentucky, recently with the Mitchell-Faust Advertising Company of Chicago. Before that he was with Kla-Van-Peterson-Dunlap, Milwaukee, and Johnson Read & Co., and Henri, Hurst & McDonald, Chicago.
The new arrangement means that Mr. Waldo has chosen to give his personal direction to the western representation of his company as well as to the eastern. The decision was reached after a sustained effort to procure the Chicago office as executive that would fill the bill. The work will now be carried on by a large staff, under Mr. Waldo's intimate personal supervision.

NEW DUPLEX TEAM PROVIDES FLEXIBILITY IN PLANT OF KINGSTON FREEMAN.
A solution to the small city publishers' press room troubles has been reached by the Kingston, N. Y., Daily Freeman, with the assistance of the Duplex Printing Press Company. Recently a sixteen-page press was synchronized with the newspaper's press of like capacity and a thirty-two-page press was installed on February 9. The press now has a capacity of 25,000 thirty-two-page pages an hour and either of the two units may be utilized in getting out a sixteen page number.
The new press has been installed in the Freeman's new building, which will soon be occupied by all departments of the paper. The installation was made by experts from the Duplex factories and the trial proved highly satisfactory.
Jay E. Klock, who is well-known to the newspaper field, is president of the company publishing the Freeman.

NEW JERSEY PROHIBITION CHIEF A NEWSPAPER MAN OF ACHIEVEMENT.
Frederick A. Hazeltine, former newspaper man, but more recently connected with the federal prohibition unit, has been appointed divisional chief of the newly created prohibition enforcement area comprising Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey. He was formerly divisional chief of the district comprising Washington, Oregon, Montana and Alaska.

According to the prohibition unit, Mr. Hazeltine has been "chucking saloons in the Northwest for thirty-three years," his newspaper, the South Bend, Wash., Journal, being the first newspaper to refuse liquor advertisements. Later, by his cooperation with prohibition, he was elected president of the Washington State Prohibition Association, and president of its annual banquet. He is also the founder of the school of journalism at the State University of Washington.

MRS. HAZELTINE HAS BEEN RUNNING THE NEWSPAPER AT SOUTH BEND SINCE THE DECLARATION OF WAR AGAINST GERMANY, when Hazeltine turned the paper over to her and went to France in the Y.M.C.A. service. She says she has since "loaned" him to prohibition work. Incidentally, he won her after a three years fight to make legal Protestant marriages in Peru, where she was a missionary.

I.T.U. INCREASES IN 14 CITIES VARY FROM $2 TO $17.

AGREEMENTS COVER PERIODS OF FROM SIX MONTHS TO THREE YEARS—SCALE FOR INDIANAPOLIS IS HIGHEST OF THOSE INCLUDED IN SUMMARY.

Wages increases ranging from $2 to $17.50 a week were recorded in the list of 14 cities that have recently signed contracts with the International Typographical Union. The period of the contracts varies from six months to three years; the high wage scale is that of Indianapolis.

The list of cities and the highlights of the agreements recently recorded are:

- Lancaster, O.—Handmen operators, $35; forty-four-hour week. The contract is for a year, expiring December 31; an increase of $5 is noted.
- Perth Amboy, N. J.—Two-hour reduction per week has been accorded to newspaper workers brought about through negotiations for a new wage scale.
- Oneida, N. Y.—A contract for three years, expiring December 31, 1924, gives handmen and operators $30 for forty-four-hour week, an increase of $2.
- Mansfield, O.—Handmen and operators on the day side are given $40, night men $42, for forty-eight-hour week, according to a seventeen-months agreement which expires April 30, 1924. A $3 increase is noted.
- Lynn, Mass.—For a forty-one-hour week handmen and operators are to receive $41.50 days and $45.65 nights under the contract that runs until January 1, 1924. Day men are increased $3.50 and the night workers $3.85.

NEWLY APPOINTED SECRETARY OF NEW YORK PRESS ASSOCIATION.

Jay W. Shaw, just appointed field secretary of the New York Press Association, has had very broad experience in the newspaper business. Buckingham buys interest in Austin paper.

A. Roy Buckingham, for the last two years managing editor of the Parsons, Kan., Daily Sun, owned by Clyde S. Reed, and of the Kansas Utilities Commission, has resigned to take charge of an interest in the Austin, Minn., Press, which he has recently purchased. The Press was recently bought from J. J. Bennett of Northfield, Minn. Mr. Buckingham is well-known among Kansas newspapermen, having been connected with the Salina Daily Journal, the Concordia Blade and the Wichita Beacon.

JAY W. SHAW.

Jay W. Shaw, who went to the Elmira, N. Y., Advertiser and later with the Binghamton, N. Y., Republican, left the Binghamton newspaper and using that city as his headquarters. Mr. Shaw began specializing in circulation work. He built up an extensive organization to carry on this work and operated in many states. At the same time he was developing an organization, he was building an excellent reputation for himself. During these years, he bought and reorganized and sold two newspaper properties.

In the early part of 1918, Mr. Shaw went to Bloomington, Pa., to organize the Daily Sentinel. It was with that paper that some capitalists in Geneva, N. Y., interested him in taking over the management of a newspaper, the Daily News. This he did, building what was thought to be the best small city daily in the state in a few months. He remained with the Geneva property until the merger of the Times and News. His efforts in the establishment of the Times and News were strenuous and Mr. Shaw found it necessary to take over work directly from newspaper work. In 1920 he again took up newspaper work, adding advertising features to his circulation activities and has been at it since.

COMPOSING ROOM

NO STOPS—NO DELAYS—Continuous Composition of Text-and-Display on One Machine, by One Operator.

Setting everything on a Text-and-Display Linotype is as superior to the old method of mixing machine text matter and hand-set display matter as the Twentieth Century Limited is superior to local "accommodation" service.

The operator can go straight through a piece of copy, setting heads, sub-heads and text, without pause, without hesitation. There are three Linotypes on which he can do this: Models 21, 22 and 24.

It is the stops, changes and switching that slow up train service or composing-room service. With a Text-and-Display Linotype, every piece of copy has a clear track.

In fact, mixing hand-set display matter in with Linotype text slugs is like putting freight cars in with Pullmans. If you want to establish a mile-a-minute schedule in your composing room, make your composition ALL SLUG.

Text-and-Display Linotypes set matter ranging from small text to full 36 point display, and the operator does not have to leave his chair. One of these Text-and-Display models is especially suitable for your office—be it country office or big city composing room or job shop.

Hand composition and distribution belong to the days of the stage coach.
LONDON'S DAILIES BACK INVITATION TO AD CLUBS.

ROTHEMERE AND HULTON PUT UP $25,000 APiece TO START OFF ENTERTAINMENT FUND FOR AMERICANS — HIGHAM SAYS OTHERS WILL MAKE TOTAL $250,000.

The fact that Lord Rothermere, proprietor of the London Daily Mail, had subscribed $25,000 and that Sir Edward Hulton, proprietor of the Daily Sketch had also subscribed $25,000, and that other publishers of Great Britain had expressed their willingness to raise at least $250,000 for the entertainment of American delegates and their families, if the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World could be brought to London in 1924, was divulged at a luncheon given by the New York Advertising Club to welcome back from England F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson, and which had for its guest of honor Sir Charles Higham.

As chairman of the New York "On-To-London" committee Mr. Wilson-Lawrenson went to London to investigate the facilities offered by London for the 1924 convention. In his speech he declared that the British press was so enthusiastic about the project that during his stay in London the Daily Mail put aside one column on the frontpage every day for an interview with himself, so that he might put the American case thoroughly before the British public.

Mr. Lawrenson said that not only were all of London's leading business men heartily in favor of the project, but that he was authorized an interview with Bonar Law.

Mr. Lawrenson said: "I am satisfied that every association of importance in England is behind the plan to bring the convention there. Mr. Bonar Law has authorized me to quote him directly, Mr. Lawrenson, you may announce for me, Sir, that I am personally in favor of this project and I will do everything I can to make it a success, and you may announce to the advertising men and business men of Britain and America that the British government is behind it.'"

Sir Charles Higham, who is in the United States as chairman of the "On-To-London" committee of the Thirty Club, the big advertising club of London, said he would not anticipate Mr. Lawrenson's official report by stating what preparations were being made for the international convention if it came over, but he said:

"The fact that two newspaper proprietors have already subscribed $50,000 means much more than you know, because when you can get Lord Rothermere and Sir Edward Hulton to subscribe five thousand pounds apiece, it means that they are realizing the force of advertising, not only from the point of view of their own business, but as a world force, and are backing it up. And they are not the only ones. There are six more men in England who have just as much money as those men, though not quite as many papers, but equally powerful ones, whom I know will subscribe.

"We will not bore you with what we are going to do for you in London, but it is only fair to say this much: We do know that to come from New York to London and stay there a week, first class both ways and first class accommodations in London, means a maximum cost to any advertising man, no matter how little he has got or how much, of not more than $750. I don't think that's a lot of money to spend on a trip across the sea. If we can bring it below that we will."

It was also announced at the luncheon that Sir Charles Higham will return to the United States in June to be present at the advertising convention at Atlantic City and that he would head a delegation of prominent British business and advertising men, at least one hundred strong, who will formally present Great Britain's invitation to London.

ELECTRIC MEN PLANNING BIG CAMPAIGN FOR PUBLICITY ON PACIFIC COAST.

A campaign of advertising to increase the use of electric power in homes and to improve and standardize electrical appliances will be conducted in thirty of the largest newspapers of the Pacific Coast, according to D. Twelve of these newspapers are in the Pacific Northwest, and the combined circulation of the thirty papers is in excess of 1,500,000, Mr. Harris says.

SCHEMERS LOSING GROUND BY EXPOSES.

FINANCIAL STORIES IN THE NEW YORK JOURNAL HAVE GOOD INFLUENCE IN HARD HITTING DRIVE IN FRAUD STOCK WAR—OTHER PAPERS FOLLOWING SUIT.

"An expose a day keeps the swindler away," is the belief of Merrylee S. Rukeyser, the financial editor of the New York Journal. The better business bureau is writing a constructive message about one spurious scheme for the Journal's financial and business page daily. The Journal reaches nearly a million readers of the class which can be helped by this information.

The bureau has arranged for a series of six feature stories now being distributed by the Newspaper Enterprise Syndicate which serves 600 leading daily newspapers. These relate of schemes found by Edward A. Schwab, investigator for the national vigilance committee and the better business bureau movement, who went carefully into the spurious oil promotions being floated in Texas.

An interview by John J. Pulley, president of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, appeared in the New York World Magazine of January 14, on the subject, "If I Wanted To Be An Income at Sixty." This article, which has reached with sound thought over a million readers, is arranged for the World by the bureau.

The definite work of the bureau and the national vigilance committee has occasioned the publication of many constructive stories by New York city newspapers, newspapers throughout the country, and by magazines of national circulation. Millions of readers have been reached with the movement's facts concerning current schemes and these have put investors on guard against spurious oil promotions. The bureau has noticed an awakened interest in the subject of spurious promotions by all classes of publications—many have featured the subject in recent months.

In the preparation of various forms of advertisements, and in giving advice to many channels of advertising, the bureau has been pledged the skilled co-operation of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. A committee of the club has educational copy in preparation.

The program to be put into effect will be extended throughout the country by the vigilance committee, better business bureau, chambers of commerce and advertising clubs in other cities and states, and the newspaper advertising effect twenty-three national advertising organizations, which are members of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, will be called into action by the executive committee of that association.

Aiding the announced intention of the association to enforce the Martin law, the bureau has already placed in the hands of his department a number of cases on which preliminary facts have been developed by the bureau.

During a meeting at Staten Island on January 9, bank officials of the Island decided to put into effect the bureau system for making facts available to those who invest. As soon as the plan is functioning well in Staten Island, it will be extended to other sections of Greater New York.
URGES MERCHANTS STOP FRAUD IN ADVERTISING.

FALSE ADVERTISERS SORES ON BODY OF BUSINESS, HEAD OF ST. LOUIS BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU TELLS ROTARY CLUB MEMBERS—HURTS HONEST BUSINESS.

The schemes and intrigues of false advertisers and their disastrous effect upon business in general was discussed by E. J. Brennan, manager of the Better Business Bureau of St. Louis, at a meeting of the Rotary Club of St. Louis.

Mr. Brennan gave several instances, though not mentioning the concerns by name, or advertising chicanery being practiced in St. Louis and urged that the organization redouble its efforts in the fight against deceit and fraud in business.

"What does it profit a merchant to make a sale by means of false representations and even fraud, if he suffers a loss of the goods with and confidence of that customer and sends out one who will knock instead of boost him?" the business bureau head asked. "Nevertheless, some merchants do business on that basis. Such are few, very much in the minority, but they stand out as festering sores on the body of business. Such cause many a person to view all business, however legitimate, with suspicion. Such cause a great hardship, the institution builder, much trouble."

"I have in mind a piano house in this city that makes use of all sorts of deception in attempting to make sales. One complaint made to us was to the effect that a phonograph was sold on a representation it was a free trial. Though it was advertised 'free trial,' a clever salesman succeeded in getting a payment which he represented would be returned if the trial was not satisfactory. He also got the purchaser to sign a paper without reading it, on a representation that it was merely a memorandum of the transaction and did not bind him in any way. Poor deluded customer later found that it was a chattel mortgage."

"The public, in its seeming mad chase for bargains often overreaches itself. So many a person into transactions they otherwise would not have made."

"There is one concern in this city that sells contracts from door to door. This contract provides for weekly payments of $1 until $35 is paid in all. At that time the contract holder can get $35 in furniture. So far it looks innocent. The salesman states that each week there is a drawing and the lucky number gets her contract paid up. They fall for it right and left. The fraud is in the real value of the merchandise that can be had for the $35. If a retail store priced its merchandise the way this concern does it wouldn't stay in business long and when it failed, a lunacy commission would be appointed to examine into the sanity of the proprietor in making and trying to sell merchandise at more than twice the price it could be bought elsewhere."

"Legitimate business and merchants who practice common honesty in their business dealings have an obligation beyond their own stores. It is not enough that they conduct their own institutions with due regard to fair dealing, they should do what they can to inform the public of those schemes and schemers who not only practice deception on an uninformed public, but at the same time cause the whole field of business to rest under a cloud."

FORMER ROCHESTER SCRIBE WINS HARVARD PRIZE PLAY COMPETITION.

Philip Barry, formerly of the Rochester Post-Express, won the Harvard prize play competition with "You and I," a three act comedy, which Richard G. Heidenin is producing at the Belmont Theater, New York, with H. B. Warner, Frieda Inescort, Geoffrey Keene, Freeman Wadsworth and Gottschalk, Reginald Mason, Frieda Inescort, Geoffrey Keene, Freeman Wadsworth and Gottschalk. Although Mr. Barry is a graduate of Yale, he took the course in playwriting at the Harvard Literary Magazine and the Banner-Pot-Pourri, also a Yale periodical. He went to Rochester, his home town, and joined the staff of the Rochester Post-Express. He returned to New York and became a special writer of advertisements before resuming his work under Professor Baker at Harvard.

FAVORS CRIME CENSORSHIP FOR THE PRESS.

Newspaper publicity in cases of suicide, murder and lesser crimes was attacked as an important cause of crime through the power of suggestion. This was brought out on Monday by Dr. James W. Walsh, professor physiological psychology at Cathedral College, at a meeting of the Society of Medical Jurisprudence held at the New York Academy of Medicine. Dr. Walsh selected for first honors. During his collegiate course at Yale, Mr. Barry was one of the few graduates of the Newsday. He was graduated, he went to Rochester, his home town, and joined the staff of the Rochester Post-Express. From there he returned to New York and became a special writer of advertisements before resuming his work under Professor Baker at Harvard.

AGENCY CHANGES NAME.

The corporate title of Grandin-Dorrance-Sullivan, Inc., has been changed to Dorrance, Sullivan & Co. The staff, personnel and the various advertising accounts handled, and the branches at Chicago and South Bend, remain the same. The change was made because of the withdrawal recently of Frank C. Grandin, who was president and treasurer.

FOREMOST WORLD WONDER.

The newspaper is one of the foremost wonders of the modern world. The family that does not take, and carefully read, at least one newspaper, is not living in the twentieth century, contends the New Concord, Ohio, Enterprise.

The Unusual Reference Value of The Fourth Estate List has established it as a standard trade work and a handbook that is indispensable to the advertising fraternity. It enables advertisers seeking to develop markets anywhere in the world to make a choice of a capable, accredited advertising agency, with intimate knowledge of local marketing conditions, to handle their campaigns.

Merchandising of Newspaper Space and Business Promotion by Agencies can not be better directed than through the advertising pages of the Agency List, which assures the attention of the prospective client at a time when he is looking for a service through which to place his business.

OPEN DIPLOMACY OPENED WIDER ON GRIDIRON.

ANNUAL SPRING DINNER ONE OF MOST SPARKLING THE GRIDIRONITES HAVE STAGED — EVEN COUE'S WONDERFUL TREATMENT CAN'T KEEP COLONEL HARVEY QUIET.

American diplomatic methods, especially those pursued in representation in international conferences, were given a good-natured "panning" at the annual spring dinner of the Gridiron Club at the New Willard Hotel at Washington last Saturday night.

In agreement with previous announcement, the dinner was held earlier than usual, in view of the approaching adjournment of congress and the consequent flight of its membership to their respective homes.

Guests included President Harding, Vice-president Coolidge, Speaker Gillette, and a large number of senators and congressmen, all of whom have done more, it is said, in open and in public life.

Dr. Cope, Ambassador Harvey, the new "radical" senator from Oregon, Mr. Bryan and others of temporary or permanent fame came in for light-some treatment in the skits presented by the club for the entertainment of its guests.

The celebrated Cope method failed completely when applied to Mr. Harvey, who was not a little amused by the constituent suggestion that "I cannot open my mouth" with an unbroken flow of compliment of persons and persons in general.

The hit of the evening was made in the recrudescence of Arabian Night's lore in the guise of "Bagdad-on-the-Potomac." Whoozit, Hear C. WASHINGTON PUBLISHER IS HONORED AT HARRISBURG MEETING — POSTAL RATES, LAW ENFORCEMENT, AND GROWING IMPORTANCE OF NEWSPAPERS DISCUSSED.

Editors of 200 Pennsylvania daily and weekly newspapers of the state adjourned their two-day convention Wednesday at Harrisburg after electing officers. Next year's meeting will be held at Washington, Pa., and the following year the members will again meet at Harrisburg.

Referring to second class postal rates as an item which has been retained at its war-time figure, J. C. Brimblecome of Newton, Mass., president of the National Editorial Association, declared that the proposed reduction would still produce 175 per cent more revenue than before the war. Quoting Benjamin Franklin, Mr. Brimbliche spoke of the editor as the "guardian of his country's reputation," and declared that he could not emphasize strongly enough the necessity for the country's newspapers endorsement of the law and order enforcement.

Development of the newspaper industry and its increasing importance in the life of the country was commented upon by Charles B. Spatz of the Berks County Democrat of Boyertown, president of the Pennsylvania Weekly Newspaper Association who presided at the joint meeting of his organization with the Pennsylvania Associated Dailies at the opening session.

Mr. Spatz spoke of the better methods employed in publishing newspapers and the need of greater care on the part of publishers that the legislation does not place upon the statute books acts that are harmful to the industry. He cited the printing of assessment lists as a safeguard to the taxpayer and thought that publishers were too modest where their own interests were concerned. Giving column space to the promotion of other business and not one inch to the publishers interest, was a consistent policy, said Mr. Spatz, who is a former member of the legislature.

A resolution voicing the protest of the meeting against any increase in the transportation charge for newspapers was passed without a dissenting voice. J. P. Considine of the Philadelphia North American sponsored the resolution.

Discussion of taxation measures which may come before the present legislature and the relation to the publishers was led by Benjamin H. Ludlow of Ardmore, Montgomery county, who came from a house committee meeting to address the editors. Other matters taken up in open forum were the promotion contests and premium campaigns which were prevalent in epidemic form during the past year; speaking on a paper on which was submitted by A. B. Schropp, of the Lebanon News; church advertising and the amount of free space used by the churches; exploitation of newspapers by faddists, politicians, and others seeking publicity; editorial conferences, the editorials themselves, and many other things relative to the conduct of the newspapers.

Major Ernest A. Smith of the Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader, spoke on co-operation among publishers of any given community to prevent common abuses. Major Smith declared that the uncalculable benefit was to be bound to result from such co-operation. A unanimous vote of thanks was voted the Governor and Mrs. Pinchot for the informal reception tendered the members of the convention at the Executive Mansion Tuesday afternoon.

Officers are elected.

The Association of Weekly Newspapers elected the following officers: President, Charles B. Spatz, Berks County Democrat of Boyertown, re-elected; first vice-president, Charles M. Meredith, Quakertown Free Press; secretary-treasurer, Howard Reynolds, Quarryville Sun, re-elected. Executive committee: Charles M. Coles, Lyons Standard; Perry Thompson, Tyrone Times, and J. R. Kurtz, Bellefonte Centre Democrat; John B. Krepper, Carmel Times and Walter L. Sanborn, Lansdale Reporter.

RAILROADS ASK MERCY OF EDITORS AT CORNELL CONFERENCE.

Let the railroads alone and they will work out their own salvation and bring better conditions to the people of the country as a whole, Robert S. Binkerd, vice-president of the Commission on Public Relations for Eastern Railroads, told newspaper publishers and editors gathered at Ithaca, N. Y. this week, for the fourth annual newspaper conference at the State Agricultural College at Cornell. The newspapers were urged to establish a policy of letting the roads alone.

The two-day conference opened Monday and continued through Tuesday, marking the opening of Farmer's Week. There were a number of newspapers and editors from New York state dailies and weeklies in attendance. Considerable attention was given to consideration of various means of handling farm and rural news.

A more thorough examination of press matter issued by the college was urged by Dean A. R. Mann, who held that the messages sent out to the newspapers carried more weight than appeared on the surface. He asked the editors to make a more thorough examination of the matter before consigning it to the waste basket.

The inside of how news matter is handled in France as compared with American methods was related by Professor O. G. Queriac. Among the other speakers on the two-day program were: F. B. Shillington, of Rochester; R. L. Vorhees of Syracuse, Professor Bristow Adams, Mrs. A. M. Huntington of the Sea Cliff News, R. W. Kellogg of the Empire State School of Printing, H. M. Suter of the Elmira Advertiser and Telegram, and V. W. Bradbury of the Endicott Union News-Dispatch.

ADVERTISING THE WISCONSIN FARMER.

EDITORS HAVE OPPORTUNITY TO BECOME ADVERTISING MANAGERS OF THE STATE'S BILLION DOLLAR INDUSTRY JOURNALISM PROFESSOR IN FORMS PRESS MEMBERS.

The opportunity that is at the finger tips of the editors of Wisconsin is becoming the advertising managers of the state's largest industry—farming. The Wisconsin Press Association recently, Mr. Sumner said: "The weekly and daily editors of Wisconsin have the opportunity of becoming the advertising managers of Wisconsin's largest industry—farming.

"The advertising account of a corporation capitalized at from two and a half to three billion dollars is not often found. This is the capitalization of Wisconsin's biggest industry."

Continuing he said, "The Farmer being a producer looks to his editor for advertising and selling assistance. The farsighted editor can and will become the advertising man for his community.

"The home paper is the first medium which the average farmer should consider for advertising. The farmer with pure bred livestock or pedigreed seed grains will find his best market in his home neighborhood. There is no medium as effective for selling his product as the home paper.

"The development of classified advertising in the weekly paper has been largely neglected. The farmer who has a product which should be sold near at hand, can be profitably interested in the classified column of his home paper.

"The display advertising columns of the home paper are also an effective medium for selling a quality product in the home community. The livestock card which was once run every week for a year, is not the most effective sort of advertising. Business men have long since discovered that it pays to change the copy. A new advertisement of the farmers of your community, can you offer to neglect the change in copy idea?"

PLEA FOR FOOD PUBLICITY URGED BY W. S. WYLIE.

An appeal for wider publicity of pure food by means of advertising was made at a luncheon of the Advertising Club of Baltimore by William S. Wylie, assistant professor of agricultural journalism and farm advertising, University of Wisconsin at Madison, before members of the Wisconsin Press Association.

JOURNALS ISSUED AS PART OF PLAN TO BILK PUBLIC.

SWINDLERS ESTABLISH OWN PUBLICATIONS AFTER REALLY LEGITIMATE NEWSPAPERS REJECT THEIR ADVERTISEMENTS—EVEN OFFER STOCK FREE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Big dividends! That is the bait that lures millions to sink an aggregate of half a million dollars annually in humbug stock schemes. In making sensational figures, that is 500,000 times $1,000, says Edward A. Schwab, chief investigator of the national vigilance committee, who was for eleven years with the post office inspection service.

"In my years of investigation," says Mr. Schwab, "I have watched a vast army of gullible people—mostly the poor, the wage-earner, the widow—sacrifice their savings in spite of repeated warnings."

"Oil and mining stocks have taken the most. Oil is easy because tales of fortunes made by oil speculators are told by friends or neighbors."

"Texas is proving the birthplace of financial humbug. Out of the millions paid over to legitimate banks in high finance, one born of the fact that it is increasingly difficult for promoters to secure advertising space in reputable newspapers, is publication by promoters themselves of "independent oil journals."

"Infrequently an honest oil promoter frankly invites the public to gamble with him. More often the promotion is a fraud."

THE SUCKER LIST.

"By printing and circulating his own spurious publication a promoter builds up a sucker list. Then, by resorting to the United States mails, he drives home the stock sale appeal of one promotion after another."

"These papers pose as fraud-fighting organs of public welfare, but in reality other oil company promotions, they try to deceive investors into believing their own promotions are honest and legitimate."

"Sometimes they offer to give share owners a certain acre of stock and acreage to subscribing to the paper. Another of this kind sold shares for as little as a quarter of a cent each!"

"Another offered subscribers an assignment of five acres of land for each five dollars sent him in subscriptions. Investigation showed leases on the land for drilling could be bought in the open market for ten cents an acre."

EXPOSER OF PRINCIPLES OF KLAN STARTS PAPER.

The Brickbat is the name of a new paper that is being published in Meigs, Ga., by Roy Davis as editor and D. R. Walton, formerly of the Meigs Herald, as publisher.

"The Brickbat is a weekly, and with the first issue the editor stated that he will print 'what he thinks will stand for true Americanism. He is well-known for his speeches and writings, in which he has explained the ideas of the Ku Klux Klan, having spoken in Thomasville, Ga., several times explaining the ideas of the klan."

QUICKREFUTATION FOR CHARGE OF FAKED CABLES.

(Continued from Second Page) propagating such an absurdity. His career has been such that it would seem impossible for him to have remained so in ignorance of the processes of world news distribution. Here is the entry about Dr. Usher, ample indication that such a man should have known better:

THE WAR, 1918; The Pilgrims and Their First Home, 1918; The Steeplechase of Great War, 1919. Home: 537 Cates Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

This is what the educator with all those entries after his name actually said:

"Most people get their ideas of foreign affairs from the newspapers, and the newspapers get their ideas from the newspapers. I want to point out the necessity of going beyond the newspapers. It is imprudent to transmit detailed information about events as they happen, for the reason that such information is accurate. "No facts are yet known about the French occupation of the Ruhr beyond the fact that they are there. What do you know of the French occupation of the empty yard of the St. Regis from the Rhine? You don't know anything at all, because the information is not given out. Fifty years hence accurate accounts may be written of the cable news you read is not written on the side, except in rare instances. The cost of a cable and a letter would be prohibitive. That news is sent in skeleton dispatches of lines and letters to the Times, and expanded by the rewrite men into two columns of stuff.

U.S. PRESS PESS. Frederick Roy Martin, general manager of the Associated Press, in reply to an inquiry from the editor of the Times, adds, "I am an inquiry from the editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, sent the following statement:

"I am glad to comply with your request. There is some misapprehension of character of our cable service, and more particularly as regards the statement that cable news is not in fact news. It is true that we have the result of skeletonized dispatches of a few lines which are expanded here into columns of matter.

Let me assure you at the outset that integrity is the basis of every line of the service. The statement that dispatches come in skeletonized form of few lines and are then expanded to columns is a popular delusion of those who have not kept abreast of the modern development in intercommunication, cable, telegraphic and wireless.

So far as this organization is concerned there is practically no other kind of skeletonized or coded messages. The dispatches as received are in plain text, without any coding. Coding represents a loss of information at both ends, in coding and decoding, and will not do for news dispatches requiring promptness. Also there is no skeletonizing which would obscure the plain meaning of the

EVEN PUNCTUATION INCLUDED.

The only omission is a few small words like, "the," and "an." Other than that meaning is perfectly plain, and which in no way abbreviates the plain content of each sentence and line, and of the dispatch as a whole. Even the punctuation is indicated by the word "stop" in everything essential. There is no capitalization, as the cable brings the words into unvarying form. One of the chief purposes of the code is to supply this mechanical omission of capitals, and a few small words, and thus change the raw material into a finished product which will give a smooth running of the cable text in essentials.

Take for example, the cable received on the first day of this month, February 1, 1913, a 350 word dispatch consisting of 1,199 words of cable and radio received in our office, and not omitting the cable and radio received from China and Japan. A person without any knowledge of the San Francisco earthquake could, as an editor, know what 1,199 words mean without six or seven columns of ordinary newspaper.

And this was, in fact, what we supplied to the newspapers that day. In addition to those 10,199 words being skeletonized, even the run of sentences and paragraphs to make readable output. Also not "dash matter" of a biographical or explanatory nature is given to the public, but this always given under a dash to clearly indicate it is not cable.

In other words, our cable which you read from day to day is the cable we receive over the trans-Atlantic cable and radio lines, conforming closely to the original dispatches, here and there in form and style as I have said, to make the sense clear.

Your inquiry refer also to the ramifications of our news-gathering organizations throughout the world. The Associated Press is true and I can think it can reasonably be said that these ramifications bring to the American reading public each day a larger volume of factual news than the world news service that goes to any other newspaper.

This being so, it is obvious that the Associated Press does its work intelligently and reports news, not by the rewritemen, but by the rewrite men, and all without a dash. A special effort is made to distribute the news dispatches requiring promptness. Also there is no skeletonizing which would obscure the plain meaning. Even punctuation is included."

NEW YORK WORLD SPENDING THOUSANDS TO ENLARGE PAPER LANT.

The World Publishing Company of New York, which purchased the St. George Paper Company plant in Norwalk, Ct., about two years ago, is making extensive changes in the plant, making it one of the most up-to-date paper-making factories in this section of the country. A $50,000 addition has been made to the mill and its daily output has been increased from twenty-seven tons a day to sixty tons. The new pulping machine will be capable of producing up to a hundred thousand pounds of paper a day. A special yard to hold three thousand tons of coal is being constructed. Another hoist to be built at once will lift coal from the yard to the turntable-distributing station and thence along a four-hundred-foot belt to the boiler room of the plant. These changes are being made at a cost of approximately $25,000.

ALASKA HAS BIGGEST SUPPLY OF RAW MATERIAL FOR MAKING WOOD PULP.

"Big developments are expected soon in the pulp-making industry of Southeastern Alaska," declared John W. Troy, publisher of the Juneau Daily Empire, who was a guest recently in Seattle, on his way home after spending several months in the "states."

"Alaska has the biggest supply of the raw material for making wood pulp in the world," Troy declared. "Paper manufacturers are taking an active interest in the field, and before long this will be one of the leading industries in the Alaska pan-handle."

NEW YORK AD CLUB TO MOVE INTO NEW QUARTERS.

BUYS HANDSOME RESIDENCE

ON PARK AVENUE WHICH WILL BE ALTERED—INVESTMENT WILL APPROXIMATE FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS.

The Advertising Club of New York has purchased the property at 23 Park Avenue, on the northeast corner of Thirty-fifth street and Park avenue, and after alterations have been completed, which will probably be within six or seven months, the club will move into its new quarters.

For the last ten months a committee appointed by the club has been looking for larger quarters, and has been hard at work giving careful thought to scores of new buildings. The Clubhouse is within six minutes from the Grand Central Station, accessible to surface and subway car service, and a short distance from the offices of the largest number of its members.

The entire investment will approximate five hundred thousand dollars. The alteration figures have not been completed, but the Club officers have done an ample and efficient job which will be of the greatest possible value to the Club.

Mr. Lindsay asked Secretary Hoover to tell the meeting of the Indian Republican Editors Association at South Bend, Ind., on May 14, 1923, that the property is assessed by the city for taxation at $265,000. It has been appraised by a committee of which Mr. Lindsay is a member.

The property will be altered, and it is expected that the Clubhouse will be ready for use in the fall of this year.

The Club officers are: Frank Presbrey, president; C.K. Woodbridge, vice-president; George Ethridge, treasurer; John N. Boyle, secretary.

The Club directors and the building committee have ratified all the proceedings and have given full authority to the Club officers to do whatever is necessary for the Club in its dealings with the realty corporation.

The Advertising Club of New York has purchased the property at 23 Park Avenue, on the northeast corner of Thirty-fifth street and Park avenue, and after alterations have been completed, which will probably be within six or seven months, the club will move into its new quarters.

For the last ten months a committee appointed by the club has been looking for larger quarters, and has been hard at work giving careful thought to scores of new buildings. The Clubhouse is within six minutes from the Grand Central Station, accessible to surface and subway car service, and a short distance from the offices of the largest number of its members.

The entire investment will approximate five hundred thousand dollars. The alteration figures have not been completed, but the Club officers have done an ample and efficient job which will be of the greatest possible value to the Club.

Mr. Lindsay asked Secretary Hoover to tell the meeting of the Indian Republican Editors Association at South Bend, Ind., on May 14, 1923, that the property is assessed by the city for taxation at $265,000. It has been appraised by a committee of which Mr. Lindsay is a member.

The property will be altered, and it is expected that the Clubhouse will be ready for use in the fall of this year.

The Club officers are: Frank Presbrey, president; C.K. Woodbridge, vice-president; George Ethridge, treasurer; John N. Boyle, secretary.

The Club directors and the building committee have ratified all the proceedings and have given full authority to the Club officers to do whatever is necessary for the Club in its dealings with the realty corporation.

TWO OF PITTSBURG DAILIES CEASE PUBLICATION.

Chronicle-Telegram are the evening papers, the Post and Gazette-Times the morning papers, and the Gazette-Times, Post and Press the Sundays.

Negotiations were conducted directly between Colonel Rook and Mr. Moore and George S. Oliver, president of the Gazette-Times and Chronicle-Telegram, Colonel O. S. Hershman, president of the Press, and A. F. Braun, president of the Post and Sun. It is regarded as singular that Colonel Hershman celebrated his fiftieth anniversary in the newspaper business on February 11, while the Dispatch completed its seventy-seventh year February 8.

The demand for newspaper workers in practically all branches is sufficient in the Pittsburg territory to absorb all the staffs at liberty as a result of the deal, according to the publishers. Plans have been undertaken by the retiring owners of the Dispatch and the Leader and by the purchasing publishers to guarantee the staffs of the deceased newspapers two weeks' salary. John K. Emge, managing editor of the Leader, and Harry Laufman, city editor, have organized a publicity bureau which they are about to put into operation in Philadelphia.

The announcement of the retirement of the Leader and the Dispatch was made in the purchasing papers, which said:

"The permanently increased cost of the chief raw material necessary to newspaper production -- the print paper; of equipment for quick news gathering and of the extension of the news field to embrace the entire earth demand heavy financial outlays and call for large forces of specially trained reporters and editors and highly skilled men of the printing crafts. On political topics, Colonel Foster had been city editor of the Dispatch and was an able and well informed writer on political topics. Colonel Foster died in 1868."

"In a few years the Dispatch grew rapidly. It removed to a handsome new five-story building in Fifth avenue. Even through the dark days of panic of 1873 the paper flourished. Following the death of Daniel O'Neill, in 1877, Eugene M. O'Neill became associated with the management of the paper, and later, in 1880, upon the death of Alexander W. Rook, the Dispatch Publishing Company was formed, with the surviving members at its head. The corporation continued to publish the paper until its demise last Tuesday. In 1889 the Dispatch, having outgrown the Fifth avenue quarters, erected a building at Diamond and Smithfield street.

"In March, 1902, Eugene M. O'Neill retired from the management of the paper and Charles A. Rook succeeded him as president-editor. The Dispatch took possession of its present quarters, the Rook Building, in 1905. There are two buildings, a main structure, six stories high on Fifth avenue near Stevenson street, and a five-story annex for the mechanical departments extending from the rear of the main building to Colwell street."

"Charles Alexander Rook, Jr., was circulation manager of the Dispatch and assistant to his father; a nephew, A. Rook Carroll, was secretary and advertising manager, and another nephew, A. Howard Carroll, was news editor and assistant to Colonel Rook."

"Neal J. McBride was treasurer and business manager, having succeeded Charles R. Sulphen, who died last June. Mr. Sulphen had been with the Dispatch since 1904. He was a director of the Dispatch Company. The Dispatch had been represented by Wallace G. Brooke for about twenty-seven years until recently, when S. C. Beck with Agency took over the representation."

"Many of the Dispatch employees had been with the paper for more than a quarter of a century."

"A. E. Braun."

"A. Grant was general manager, W. E. Modde, advertising manager, and William Herron, circulation manager. Story, Brooks & Finley represented the Leader."

SPRINGFIELD GETS TEN EXTRAS ON BIG EXPLOSION.

Hot news rivalry between the Springfield, Mass., evening papers, the News and the Union was well illustrated on the day of the recent gas house explosion in that city, when each of the one cent dailies issued five extra editions telling of the tragedy. Both of the papers covered the big event exhaustively.
WHAT EDMUND BURKE FIRST REFERRED TO AS "THE FOURTH ESTATE" BECAME AN INTEGRAL FACTOR IN GOVERNMENT—NOW NEARLY A CENTURY OLD.

The press gallery of the English parliament has always been a growing entity, says the Christian Science Monitor. It started life very small indeed, in the days when Charles Dickens belonged to a gallery that was small enough for the speakers to have to fight for like all good things, ardently, persistently and determinedly.

Although it is now well established and getting toward a century old, it is still growing. In recent days nine legislators have been admitted, on one or two special occasions, to its ranks, and as there is every reason to believe that the same number of legislators will have to come to stay, her sister of the pen will double not time find a pernicious hole in the press gallery.

Official recognition is accorded to the press gallery as forming an integral part of the ceremony of the house of parliament. In fact, it is a part of the proceedings, besides an actual gallery in each house a series of rooms.

The gallery of the speakers, chair, extending across the width of the house and roughly down by both sides. The front row is divided into about thirty little compartments, all and all, called boxes, and behind them is a back row of seats, into which, on billy days, many press men squeezed as many press men squeezed as possibly do so. The fourteen ears of a hundred individuals, well packed, with standing room for about a dozen or more in determined corners.

PRESS GALLERY IN ACTION.

On important occasions, such as a budget speech or a pronouncement on policy by the prime minister, the press gallery offers a great example of keen activity. There are buildings, "a dozen writers", even editors themselves—all busy recording, each in his own particular way, the views of the audience. But even the most punctilious observer of the scene which so rapidly will be conveyed by telephone and telegraph and Fleet street men, to the printing presses and the outside world.

The commoners and the press gallery are the best of friends, as witness a hundred little amenities, personal, and collective, that characterize their relationships, and this is mutually advantageous. For while it is obvious that the gallery itself could not exist without the commoners, the reverse is recognized to be equally true.

There is every reason to believe a continuance of the methods now prevalent for keeping press gallery in intimate touch. One of these methods is the opportunity for conversation in the lobbies, members of both houses meeting in individual members and individual press men, and another method is the lawn party at the residence of the British consul, for which the members' dining rooms are always reserved for distinguished parliamentarians are honored guests.

The press gallery of the British parliament is prodigious and catholic, and, if its from its many pews, small Environmental Celebrations, on its flood of ink have also been its many pews, also been the source of critical appraisal and of generous tribute.

One day it may be the angle at which a politician wears his hat that is the topic, but the next it may be a lucid dissertation on the angle of the same man's viewpoint. The man in the gallery, however, in the adjusted scene, where the historic benches below, may see only a solidifid party line. He may see an empire in the making. He may be bored by a "maidens" speech from a humble back bench, or he may recognize in it the serious face of a great man. The story of the times is row. He may ignore the industry, persistence, and point of view of the people. He may agree, or he may aid, with a little shouting, to the building of a career for him.

DOWLING MEMORIAL BACKED BY MINNESOTA EDITORS.

In a determined effort to carry to completion the project adopted by the Minnesota Editorial Association to provide industrial training for the crippled children of Minnesota as a memorial to Michael Dowling, one of Minnesota's most remarkable editors, J. R. Landy, chairman of the committee, announced last week that the campaign will be carried into every county in Minnesota this year. Dowling, who went to work when he was 14 years old, was a cripple. He was able to do the same kind of work as the best of his able-bodied companions. He made a name for himself and when the freedom of the press had to be fought for like all good things, ardently, persistently and determinedly.

TWO MORE LANDMARKS OF JOURNALISM PASS ON.

Pittsburg Dispatch and Pittsburg Leader in one week's casualties! What has come upon journalism that two so prominent of its bulwarks are so conspicuous in so short a time? And in the practical-minded may be disposed to go to the counting room for the answer, and will probably find more of it there, sentiment seems to have played a large part in these two recent losses.

Pittsburg will be better off with these two papers out of the way, instead of so many that are apparent, but there is a halting thought in the demonstration that only a stroke of the pen was necessary to wipe out two big dailies. It will seem strange to speak only in the past tense of papers like the Dispatch and the Leader after being used to seeing them part of the living present.

Considerations: that were largely personal in character, seem to have expedited the solution of the over-newspapered problem. Colonel Rook, attempting to do the impossible—newspaper making, found the field of public service a narrow one from the viewpoint of freedom from business ties inviting.

Mr. Moore has briefly said that he had not had the old incentive to achieve since the death of his remarkable wife, Lillian Russell, last year. The fact that she had taken a great active interest in his work with the Leader caused him to see the void caused by her death more keenly than would have otherwise been the case. The loss of such a woman as the world knew Lillian Russell to be might well decide any man that a future devoted to a task seems likely to come in his life.

Looking to the future, the newspapers of Pittsburg should prosper under the new arrangement, which increases the advertiser's opportunity to cover the Pittsburg market economically, but with less duplication of effort and greater clearness in results, which is what the advertiser wants and has to have.

ARRANT THOUGHTLESSNESS BY AN EDUCATOR.

If there were in America a tribunal before which to try irresponsible editors, Professor Roland Greene Usher of Washington University, St. Louis, whose interpretations make the Republican Club of that city that the cable dispatches printed in American newspapers are not bona fide, but mostly written in newspaper offices under the direction of an enlightener of the public intelligence, who a study of his career would indicate that he is an albatross, would have no more of the responsibility of such a position than to inculcate the mind of the public upon the indelibly corrupt distrust of one of the country's functions. The press.

Twenty minutes of open-minded investigation and clear-headed reasoning would have been amply sufficient to dissipate even in Professor Usher's own mind the fallacy to which he was himself to be committed. Instead of bringing to bear the common work of innumerable inquirers, one might not be expected of a college professor about to discuss a subject so fundamental as the very existence of the idea for its picture, if it is not visible, of its history which might have upon the public sentiment the value, the interest, the importance, or less, to any. Minutes of investigation would have saved the mark.

Nothing like adequate reappraisal is possible for so great an offense against public literature as the presentation of such a subject as this.

Special contrivance in this case, Professor Usher might be subjected to the embarrassment of visiting the cable desks of the great newspapers and press associations, and the absence of the presence of chagrin in his demeanor would be of material assistance in determining whether his error was the result of ignorance or intent.

Egregious outwagings such as Professor Usher has the effect not only of presenting before the entire public the worst possible picture of the public in its press but also of destroying the confidence of many of his fellow townsmen in his educational institutions. What has been the reception of the unmitigated blackmailer of our much maligned newspapers as was little regrettable in the case of a representative of modern education?

The overwhelming weight of truth available in the evidence that Professor Usher's ridiculous charge would seem to be without foundation, and that the colleges are even more generously misrepresented than the newspapers.

If such utterances do not misrepresent our institutions, it is high time that some dirty collegiate linen was laundered.

LONDON DESERVES THE 1924 CONVENTION.

It is still a long wait until June, 1924, but now would seem to be a good time for the year convention to be held in London. As a matter of fact it is really difficult to see how London could get altogether the double honoring it so earnestly desires, unless something severely untoward intervenes.

Every hurried business man in America should welcome the opportunity for the close of the year convention to be held in London. And that is no mere generality, for if we are really to accomplish anything toward international understanding—and therefore better business relationships—no richer opportunity can be found. Lord Rothermere and Sir Edward Hetherington, by subscribing $25,000 to a fund of $250,000 for the entertainment of American visitors, have demonstrated that the English are willing to go half way or further in making common cause with the journals of this country.

Advertising clubs which take the broader view and have the ultimate welfare of American journalism in mind should not be only willing but anxious to gain the benefits that would be derived from this new intimacy with British journalism, and agree well to send fewer representatives to London than they would send to Adelaide or, for that matter, or any other city. The American presses, for example, the reason that every man who has his work is going to be better with business, and bring back a wealth of usable ideas to his associates.

CONNECTICUT'S REFORMERS AND THE NEWSBOY.

Perpetuation and extension of the market for their product has apparently become quite as much of a problem for reformers as for business men. The Connecticut legislature has been given the power in the Connecticut legislature to re-strict newspapers in earning their livelihood might be taken as indicative of a trend. Prepared by Miss Marjorie Cheney of South Manchester, endorsed by the Child Welfare Association, it provides that newspapers under fourteen be ruled off the streets before six in the morning and after eight at night.

Every newspaper in Connecticut is practically 100 per cent distributed before eight o'clock at night, and the proposal that the newspaper be hardly half way. For, in that the newspapers will hardly go far toward the root of the matter.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

One of the results of Mr. Edison's recent two-weeks' tour is that the press should pay more attention to news of scientific subjects seems to be the big lesson. Dr. Slipher has reminded us that regard by newspapers which have always been leaders in that sort of news, as by The New York Times, for instance, distinctly a new interest in the subject of science. The Times has given enlarged attention all this week to news of scientific matters, which its contemporaries have been content to jog along as before. With no disrespect for Mr. Edison, however, it may be said that the Times was delivering the goods quite thor-oughly before the West said anything, and does so present prominence as an interviewee.

The New York World on Sunday completed Major General John F. Sumner's story of the Twenty-seventh Division and as a feature published a special honor roll listing the names of all the men who served with the division overseas. Pictures of six of the soldiers who have been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, and cuts of the commanding officers and the divisional staff added to the interest of those who were connected with the Twenty-seventh, or who had relatives or close friends in its ranks.

Incidentally the World has been shown the sense of the newspapers, which may wish to produce something of unfailing appeal to the ex-service men, and to the present prominence as an interviewee.

Considerable has been said by the post office department of late, and rightly, about the excessive losses caused the increasing number of cases in general by the careless addressing of important mail. Voluntary announcements that have been made at Washington have undoubtedly done much toward a solution of the problem. There would seem to be much merit in the thought that the increasing free publicity ad-}

THE FOURTH ESTATE.
IOWA DAILY OCCUPIES NEW HOME; SUCCESSFUL 65-YEAR PERIOD.

The Waterloo, Iowa, Evening Courier is now situated in its new building which was completed last week ago Wednesday. The press room was the first department to be moved, and the paper is ready for publication Monday. Other departments followed suit in rapid succession. In a few days it is anticipated that all the flurries that attended with the moving-in procedure will have been overcome, and the newspaper workers will be accustomed to their new surroundings.

The move to the new building gave some of the older employees and executives an opportunity to pause and reflect on the accomplishments. After twenty years in one building business demands necessitated larger quarters. It is believed that adequate provision has been made to meet the space needs for the coming fifty years.

The Evening Courier is sixty-five years old and its growth has been to a considerable degree based upon the service that it has rendered the community that it serves. The newspaper is distributed from the business offices through contest and subscription services and the steady growth in circulation has been maintained through the merits of the paper.

W. W. Peterson is publisher of the Evening Courier and J. C. Hartman is editor. The paper is represented in the foreign field by Story, Brooks and Finley, New York.

EDISON TELLS WHAT HE'D DO IF HE EVER BECAME NEWSPAPER OWNER.

While the rest of the world has revolved, turned complete somersaults and pushed on and on, the newspapers have been standing still. This was the message delivered by Thomas A. Edison to the 15,000 people who attended his lecture on "The Healthful Life." The evening was a great success at the Empire Theater, and the lecture was written in a plain, practical and sympathetic fashion — he is a public benefactor.

NEW JERSEY DAILY STARTS HOSPITAL FUND DRIVE.

ACCUMULATED BALANCES FROM TRENTON TIMES' KIDDIES AND ICE FUND OF $4,000 PROPOSED AS NUCLEUS FOR $50,000 INITIAL OUTLAY FOR INSTRUCTION.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies in connection with the presentation of the Trenton Times' Civic Cup, which was awarded to Andrew J. Berrien as having performed the most distinguished service to Trenton, N. J., recently announced that the newspaper would start a fund for the establishment of an adequate children's hospital for the city, under the plan offered, whatever balances which may exist at the end of each year in the Kiddies' Fund or the Ice Fund, both of which are sponsored by the Times, will be converted into funds for the proposed hospital.

The present balance of these two funds approximate $4,000, to which the Trenton Times will add an annual contribution of $500, effective for 1922, and the balance, which will turn over to the nine members of the Times Civic Board of Award as trustees and custodians of the hospital fund. When the accumulations shall have reached a sum sufficient for the establishment of a hospital, the fund will be exhausted, and the hospital will be built. The proceeds from the fund will be used for the purpose of providing new hospital accommodations.

The plan met with hearty approval. Mayor Frederick W. Donnelly's Citizen's committee, headed by Mr. Berrien, and the Citizens' committee, is now being formulated, and the proceeds from the benefits will be placed with the board of trustees of the children's hospital.

An interesting feature in connection with the award of the Times' Civic Cup was the statement of Governor George S. Sisler, who made the presentation speech. The award took place on Sunday, January 27, at B. F. Keith's Capitol theatre, there two weeks previous the governor had taken the oath of office in making the presentation of the cup the Governor said to Mr. Berrien: "I was proud of the distinction that came to me when I took the oath of office as governor here last week, but I want to tell you that yours is even a greater distinction."

BUFFALO NEWSPAPER LISTS DEPARTMENT STORES THAT DO NOT USE ITS SPACE.

The Buffalo Commercial is running a box notice on its front page in which it lists certain local department stores that are not advertising in the columns of the Commercial, stating that these stores refuse to place any advertising in the "open shop" newspapers of Buffalo. The Commercial further states:

"Small shops declare they dare not use this newspaper while the department stores stay out.

'Unionism is making every effort to crush this paper and realizes it can do so only with the aid of the department stores.

"The Commercial may be forced to abandon the open shop fight. If so, the people can give a vote of thanks to the men in charge of the above department stores."

KEEPING 'EM INTERESTED IN WANT AD PAGES.

Solution to the problem of keeping the public interested in the classified pages has been found in the Toledo, O. Blade. Sets of theater tickets are offered the first fifteen readers each week of the Classified section. The correct wording of small ads which purposely have been misspelled. The Blade prints each day on the classified page a handy want ad blank on which readers may order classified ads. Many persons have a space for the name of the advertiser, address, number of times and to run and ample room for the text matter of the ad.

LILLIAN RUSSELL'S BOOKS SOLD AT AUCTION.

The literary property of the late Lillian Russell, who was the wife of Alexander P. Moore, former publisher of the Pittsburg, Pa., Leader, was sold at the American Art Galleries in New York last Saturday.

A Situation Wanted advertisement of the same size as this copy and headed "Metropolitan Newspaper Man Seeks Executive Connection" has been printed in The Fourth Estate for four weeks in this space.

The advertisement today is published by The Fourth Estate to state that the advertiser above referred to is now the publisher of a good-sized city daily—the place he sought.

The second insertion brought about the negotiations. The advertisement was run four times for further inquiries in case the negotiations failed. But they were successful.

The advertisement cost fifteen dollars an insertion. It brought a $10,000 job.

CLERGYMAN PAYS TRIBUTE TO CANADIAN PRESS.

No higher tribute to the press of Canada as a great force for good, could be paid, than that by the Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore of Toronto, before an Ottawa congregation.

He thanked God for the Canadian press. The press was frequently ahead of the church in discerning the needs of children and other missionaries. How necessary as they might be, they should be kept in the dark and not allowed to mingle with the growing population.

BUFFALO INSURANCE AGENTS ADVERTISE.

PRACTICAL WORK TASK OF CUB REPORTER.

STUDENTS AT JOURNALISM SCHOOL OF OKLAHOMA FIRST LEARN TO WRITE NEWS ARTICLES — ACTUAL PRACTICE ON NEWSPAPERS TEACHES THEM JOURNALISM.

Trembling with fear and enthusiasm at the thought of seeing his brain children in print, and so ignorant of newspapers that he thinks type writers set type, the green sophomore enrolls in the Journalism School. What happens to him then?

The events of the next three years, at the end of which the cub graduates and takes a job on a newspaper, are briefed outlined below. As this cereal has been the editing paper and in every detail in the life of the cub, the events picture only half of the work of the school. The other half is devoted to advertising and newspaper business management.

HAS RUN ON DAILY.
First, the cub finds an Oklahom editor who gives him a summer job writing.

At the end of the first year the cub finds an Oklahoma editor who gives him a summer job reporting.

Then in his third year he completes the courses he has not previously taken. The order in which the advanced courses are taught may vary as much as the cub himself.

The eventsof the next three years, at the end of which the cub graduates and takes a job on a newspaper, are briefly outlined below. ... the work of the school.

CONNETICUT BILL TO LIMIT NEWSBOYS DRAWS FIRE OF WATERBURY REPUBLICAN.

William J. Pape, publisher of the Waterbury, Ct., Republican and American, she will call attention of the Connecticut editoral committee for the discussion of a Connecticut bill recently introduced in the legislature, to prevent newboys and other delinquents from peddling newspapers before six in the morning and after eight at night. It is stated that the bill, if made operative, would effect every morning newspaper in the state and would throw thousands of young boys out of work. The cub's second summer may be spent as a reporter or "on the desk" of a small daily. He has his required twelve weeks, but the newspaper bug has bitten him.

COMPLETES HIS COURSE.

The following committees appointed by the Tacoma Advertising Club, are under the direction of the board of directors to carry out the wishes of the members and to assure work being done:

Largest Evening Circulation in Metropolitan Boston

Read in FIFTY percent of ALL HOMES of Metropolitan New York

Eighty Per Cent of The WORLD’S Circulation, Morning and Evening, is in Metropolitan New York. The World goes into every second home in the City, the suburban municipalities, and into all counties, except Middlesex, in which Boston is the county seat.

First in the City Field

The Circulation of the NEW YORK EVENING MAIL represents one of the five largest evening papers in the world. It is the leading paper in the metropolitan region, and the city is its largest single market. It holds a position of leadership as the result of the cooperation of its members and the efforts of its publishers.

AD CLUBS’ YEAR BOOK, EDITED BY NOBLE T. PRAIG, AGAIN APPEARS.

“Advertising Year Book for 1923,” 445 pages, containing a comprehensive digest of the most important papers and addresses presented before the various conventions of Associated Advertising Clubs in June of the last year, has just appeared. Noble T. Pratt, who compiled with great success the book of the Atlantic convention, is the editor. The Year Book is in no sense the result of a convention. Mr. Pratt, however, has selected the speeches and discussions on various phases of advertising by men of authority, and by careful and selective treatment, has presented them in compact form. The thoughts of the minds of these experts in no field of advertising, selling and publishing on the problems in advertising.

Altogether, 185 addresses have been included, and they are grouped, as far as practicable, in accordance with the groupings of the twenty or more departments of the National Advertising Commission. The following partial list of chapter headings will suggest the range of subjects covered:
- Advertising Applied to Retailing
- Advertising the Financial Institution
- Advertising as a Servant of Industry
- Advertising and its Outdoor Influence
- Advertising through Lithography, Advertising in Directory and Reference Media
- Advertising on the Screen
- Advertising Specialities as a Sales Factor
- Advertising Theatre Programs for Intensive Influence
- Advertising and Community Benefits
- Advertising as a Force for Religion Vigilance and Truth-in-Advertising

PRODUCTS CONTAINING USED PARTS MUST BE DESIGNATED IN ADVERTISING.

A marketable product partly or wholly composed of old or used parts must be plainly so designated to the trade and public, according to a recent ruling of the Federal Trade Commission. QUICK REFUTATION FOR CHARGE OF FAKED CABLES.

The fact that they went in there. Fifty years hence, accurate accounts may be written. The cable news you read is not written on this side, except in rare instances. The cost of cabling such lengthy accounts, and the necessity of being in receipt of a skeleton dispatch from eight to ten lines is an expanded method to the writers' men into two columns of type.

THE NEW YORK TIMES is concerned, this charge is without foundation, and will receive it to be equitably written without foundation so far as it may relate to any American newspaper with which we are familiar. From the position of our auditing department, we append the following cable, showing the number of words of foreign news received from correspondents of the New York Times by cable and wireless during the last year:

Jan. 30, 12,610
Jan. 31, 12,147
Feb. 1, 12,486
Feb. 2, 8,827
Feb. 3, 8,751
Feb. 4, 7,405
Feb. 5, 8,450
Feb. 6, 6,998
Feb. 7, 8,680

Total, 92,279.

9,000 DAILY AVERAGE.

This is an average of more than 9,000 words per day, containing a full eight-column page of special foreign news. There is no editorial under the catchwords "of," "the" and similar words which are readily understood. Given accurate cable transmission, a child could read one of our dispatches and would recognize it as the same dispatch published in the paper, except possibly, the latter might be shorter by reason of the compression that can be applied to all kinds of news in a crowded newspaper. We employ foreign correspondents abroad to watch the news as they find it and we employ nobody to expand it.

The statement of the lecturer that "no facts are yet known about the French occupation of the Ruhr beyond the fact that they went in there," is merely another example. York telegrams have been sent to correspondents in the Ruhr, one from the French side and one from the German side, and the two others have been on the border of the region. These motor cars and special trains to travel about, gathered the news and the telegram of the 4th the impression of all the concerns concerned and sent us thousands of words daily.

(Signed.) C. V. VANDA,

The New York Times, in its issue of August 22, 1922, replied to Patterson's charges in a statement under the caption, "Cables." The editorial follows:

A special edition of the Superior, Wis. Evening Telegram was issued recently to mark the newspaper's occupying its new home. A section of the paper was given over to the story, which was handsomely illustrated with photographs of the working departments of the newspaper.

The Telegram's new home provides all of the conveniences that are necessary today in newspaper making. The general layout of the offices and workshop is in keeping with the general plan to produce with maximum economy.

From the front office through the advertising, editorial and mechanical departments everything that is modern newspaper making has been installed. The Telegram's engraving department is one of the features of the new building.

The Telegram was founded in 1890, when Superior was experiencing a boom. In 1897 the paper was incorporated and then began a succession of expansions. Quarters were enlarged and as fast as the business grew more space was required until the space that the present building affords was adequate.

The facility for expansion has been allowed for in the new structure and the space needed, it is expected, will be provided for.

The officers of the Telegraph company are J. T. Murphy, president; S. A. Buchanan, vice-president, and Clough Gates, secretary and treasurer.

The Telegram is a member of the Associated Press, the American Newspaper Publishers Association, the Northern Daily Press Association, Wisconsin Daily Newspaper League, the North-west Daily Press Association and the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

HOW ADVERTISING MAKES SYMBOLS FOR QUALITY.

SUCCESS OF MANUFACTURERS IN WINNING GOOD WILL OF PUBLIC UNDER TRADE MARKS AND TRADE NAMES, SHOULD BE HAILED AS HIGH FORM OF COMPETITION.

Eversince merchandising began, in the twilight of barter and trade, goodwill has been recognized as a valuable asset. We... the American Sugar Refining Company told members of the American Specialty Manufacturers' Association at a recent meeting.

"Even inthe present day," he continued, "when diversity in industry is hastened into such a rapid pace by the stupendous development of communication and of finance, we still think of certain cities in terms of good will represented by their excellence in the manufacture of certain products.

"We thing of the development of their great divisions of labor, making possible the maintenance of such specialties... Leeda for its textiles, Delft for its pottery, Amsterdam for its diamond cutting, Belfast for its linen, Venice for its glass, Sevres for its porcelain, Lille for its machinery, Paris for its fashions, and so on through a long list of cities and towns representative of the world, and especially in our own country. All these developments are inordinately slow, however, and the service to mankind and then out of the perspective of the superiority of such service.

"This recognition is spoken of broadly as good will, a century ago, Lord Eldon defined good will as "the probability that the old customers will support the old business." Good will in the simple term of doing American business is 'Good reputation.'

"The item of good will has come to have a value in manufacturing properties. All the buildings of the Curtis Publishing Company might burn tonight, and the presses be destroyed, yet the Saturday Evening Post and the Ladies' Home Journal would still be among the great magazine properties of the world.

"The plants of Colgate & Co. might disappear through fire, flood, or war, yet customers' soap would continue, and probably the famous trade name of Colgate would be again in use. The same may be said with equal truth of Ivory, Pos- ton, and others.

"Trademarks and trade names are the stepping stones of the returning patronage of customers to the old place. National advertising educators and invites the vast number of buyers to return to the old place and so crowns and completes the economic cycle of merchandising.

"Let me now examine briefly but more intimately the subject of trade marks, trade names, and national advertising. All business is built on service, primarily as a necessity and secondarily as a convenience or luxury.

"Aside from all social and legal considerations it would be quite likely that any single industrial unit, not itself quasi-public, could expand as much as our entire advertising industry. At least, no industrial unit has done so, in such key industries as flour, sugar, meat, coal, and pharmaceuticals.

"Ford development possibly comes nearer to being an exception than any other instance in our mercantile history. As the market expanded the percentage of business of any one company usually declined. Various reasons contribute to this result, but we shall emphasize the fact that formerly dominant industrials lacked appreciation of the value of maintaining their national advertising as creators of good will.

"If you need no catalogue of names to recall that it has been only within the last fifteen or twenty years that industries of business have begun to increase and to buttress their good will by adopting trade marks and by national advertising. The National Biscuit Company and the Royal Baking Powder Company were among the earliest. Very few trade names occupied the national field, and Unicef and Royal Baking Powder were pioneers.

"In the eleven years from 1870 to 1881 there were only 8,190 applications to the Patent Office for trademark registration, while in the single year 1921 there were 15,852 applications. The point is also illustrated by the greater importance formerly given to patents. A patent was greatly desired because it was a monopoly. Now, the futility of patent monopoly, as of any other monopoly, as a basis of permanent economic success is generally recognized. In fact, as business men, know that a patent is generally a passport to trouble, as, indeed, are all attempts to monopolize merchandising. In the success, ancient and modern, rests on service, on good will, on the return of old customers to the old stand, openly, freely, and with satisfaction.

"Once the manufacturer crosses the Rubicon of national advertising he cannot shirk or repudiate his pledge. For in this brand he has provided a guarantee also with the means of retraction. Thus is provided an opportunity to work the destruction of any manufacturer who falls short of shirking on quality, truth, or value.

"That the public realization of this protection it has in such competitive development is conclusively shown by the firm rejection of the doubtful depth of bin and barrel and by its steadily increasing acceptance of our national product. Trademark and trade mark package products of our food manufacturers, and by the ever increasing number of name articles of our daily life, whether a Steinhaw, a Camel, a Pontiac, or a Piano, Van Gillette.

"The effort of the manufacturer to win the good will of the public under trade marks and trade names by national advertising should be hailed as the highest and finest form of competition.

VETERAN EDITOR, ASSOCIATE OF ELDER BENNETT ON THE Herald, Dies.

Thomas B. J. Conny, for many years managing editor of the New York Herald under James Gordon Bennett, died of pneumonia at his home in Atlantic City last Saturday.

Mr. Conny was born in Ireland in 1835, but was brought to this country in the New York City Board of Education. In addition to his journalistic activities he was the author of several volumes, both of art and fiction.

The death of Mr. Conny removes the last link, except one, between this generation of newspaper men and the executive forces who gave authority and distinction to the New York Herald under the elder James Gordon Bennett.

The only member of the elder Bennett's staff now surviving is William J. C. Meighan, who joined the Herald staff in 1867, five years before the elder Bennett's death, and who at different times held temporary executive position even before his permanent appointment as city editor in which position he served over a decade of years, during which time he then Bennett startled the world with his Arctic and African explorations.

It is interesting to know that Mr. Meighan was the first Northern newspaper man personally to investigate in their own camps the original Koo Klux Klan. His interviews on this subject were with Col. General N. B. Forrest, and F. A. Brownlow, then Governor of Tennessee, are among the paper classics of the post-Civil War days.

VETERAN TEXAS EDITOR, ONE OF FOUNDERS OF TEXAS PRESS, PASSES ON.

Colonel John G. Rankin, 82 years old, one of the oldest of the old-time editors of Texas, founder of the Brehm Banner, and one of the organizers of the Texas Press Association, died in his home in Brenham on February 8.

When a small boy Colonel Rankin worked on the Brenham Enquirer, of which his father was owner. He attended Baylor College at Independence for a year, resuming his newspaper work, which was again interrupted when he enlisted in the Confederate army.

After serving the full four years of the war, he returned to Brenham, where he and Daniel McCarthy started publication of the Southern Banner in 1866. The name was later changed to the Brenham Banner, and is now the Brehm Banner-Press, which has not missed an issue in fifty-seven years of existence. In 1871 Colonel Rankin purchased the interest of his partner and was sole owner of the Brehm Banner for more than forty years. In 1912 he sold it in the present management, and in 1917 he became editor of the Brenham Weekly Messenger, when the Texas telephone was changed from a German to an English publication. Failing eyesight caused him to retire from newspaper work in 1919, and for the past few years he served as justice of the peace of the Brehm precinct.

Colonel Rankin assisted in organizing the Texas Press Association in 1869, when the newspaper was chosen president in 1898, and through his influence the association met in Brenham in 1900. He was a prominent member of the Texas Editorial Association, in which a requisite for membership was active editorial service for at least thirty years.

DEATH TAKES WELL-KNOWN NEWSPAPERMAN.

William McCormick, publisher of the Reading, Pa., News-Times and the Herald-Telegram, died last Sunday of pneumonia after a brief illness.

Mr. McCormick was born in Harrisburg, Pa., April 24, 1866. He was graduated from Yale in 1887, and his newspaper career started as a reporter on the Boston Post, going from there to the Philadelphia Record and the Daily Evening Bulletin. He was a prominent member of the oldest Boy Scout groups in READING and a boy's bimonthly editor.

Mr. McCormick was unmarried.

BENJAMIN BEAL, for a number of years a telegraph operator in the old New York American bureau at Washington, D. C., Monday, at his home in Wilkesville, N. Y. He was well-known as one of the fastest hand-type setters in this country, Mr. Beal was about fifty years old and was well-known in newspaper and telegraph circles as one of the fastest operators in the newspaper business. He was a lifelong boy, and was well-received by the loss of his left arm.

J. W. LEEPER, who was a proof-reader on the New York Times for ten years, died on Sunday at his home in Philadelphia. He was well-known as one of the fastest hand-type setters in this country. Mr. Leeper was 62 years old and a native of Fairmont, W. Va.

FREDERICK C. SWETT, 53 years old, died recently. He began newspaper work as sports editor on the New York Sun. After he had coached football at Tulane University and at University of Pennsylvania, he became a correspondent for the Associated Press and was for ten years a telegraph editor of the Bangor, Me., Daily Commercial, going to the latter commerce as specialist in industrial statistics and SUNDAY investigation. He assisted in installing courses in the Harvard school of business administration and was in special service during the war.

MISS FRANCES ENN BURR, sister of Alfred E. Burr, founder of the Hartford, Ct., Times, died at her home in Hartford February 9 in her ninety-fifth year. She was one of the pioneer suffragists in Connecticut. Miss Burr was associated with Isabella Beecher Hooker, Susan B.

JOURNALISTS MAKE THE BEST MOVIE DIRECTORS?
Lee Meredith and his assistant, Miss Jeannette Porter, are cited as examples of the value of newspaper training for the movie business. Mr. Meredith came through a newspaper office from the position of cub reporter to that of managing editor. Miss Porter studied journalism in college and went on to a newspaper paper. They are now translating Gene Straton Porter's novel "Michael O'Halloran" to the screen.

Merchandising Service in Chicago

The logical place to go for effective merchandising service is to the newspaper whose advertising leadership in its community gives it greatest influence with dealers. In Chicago that newspaper is The Daily News.

Co-operation of the dealer is easily secured by The Chicago Daily News because it means to him a repetition of merchandising success that has so consistently increased his profits.

It is the routine of good business with him. He knows The Chicago Daily News is as distinctly a part of his business as his own show window—that his customers habitually shop through it.

The day after day, year after year, advertising leadership of The Daily News in Chicago has established it in minds of Chicago people as the great shopping medium—the market directory of Chicago, through which they buy and upon which they depend to keep up to date regarding desirable merchandise.

Accordingly, the first step in merchandising in Chicago is use of The Daily News' advertising columns.

The second is use of The Daily News' merchandising service.

FIRST RADIO NEWS DISPATCH TO ENGLAND SENT BY NEW YORK WORLD.

Radiophone communication between the United States and England was established several weeks ago but the first news dispatch to be forwarded for publication in a London daily was broadcasted from station WOR in Newark, N. J., Saturday by Roots, a reporter for the New York World. Whether the news was received is problematic, as neither the station nor the New York World has been advised of its reception.

The development of radio broadcasting and the newspaper business in the last year has been on a decidedly large scale. Newspapers have arranged and sent out programs, given over much space and some have developed large radio departments in their newspapers.

The first experimental use of the radiophone in news transmission was made in Michigan during a storm in 1922. When telegraph and telephone wires were down, news despatches were broadcasted and picked up by amateur operators, in some cases, and turned over to newspapers.

The London receiving station and the London newspaper were advised in advance of the proposed experiment of last Saturday. As England has no radio station powerful enough to call the United States an answer was to be expected in the dispatch sent by the in its own dispatch to the receipt of the news matter. This has not been received.

Glance in any direction in Philadelphia from the elevated railroads, or from the taller buildings—you gain an idea of the great market for radio goods in the third largest city in America.

At the receiving end of each of these radio outfits are enthusiasts watching every new development—and buying equipment to perfect their sets.

If you make radio equipment, you can persuade this great army of fans to insist upon getting your goods.

Retailers of radio goods select The Bulletin to carry their selling talks to the buying public—because in The Bulletin they can reach most fans and radio prospects in and around Philadelphia.

BURNHAM STOPS IN NEW YORK ON TRIP HOME.

BRITISH PUBLISHER IS AGAIN ENTERTAINED DURING HIS BRIEF STAY—WEST INDIAN TRIP INCLUDES SURVEY OF PEOPLE'S SENTIMENT ON U.S. ANNEXATION.

Viscount Burnham, owner of the London Daily Telegraph and Britain's leading newspaper owner, will sail for home today after a visit to the United States and the West Indies, during which he passed several days in New York and addressed the Imperial Press Congress at Jamaica. Viscount Burnham reached New York Thursday on the United Fruit liner Metapan, and will sail for England at noon today on the White Star liner Celtic.

Two interesting engagements were crowded into Viscount Burnham's brief stay in the United States. On Friday he was a luncheon guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills Reid, and on Thursday evening he was guest of Melville E. Stone, counsellor and former general manager of the Associated Press, at a small dinner at the Lotos Club.

on Thursday evening he was guest of Melville E. Stone, counsellor and former general manager of the Associated Press, at a small dinner at the Lotos Club.

Newspapers in Jamaica, Viscount Burnham said, receive extensive cabling reports, so that he had been enabled while away to speak as an authority on the subject.

As guest of honor and speaker at the luncheon, Mr. Imrie conveyed a message of appreciation to the more than 500 men of affairs which has been of especial interest in view of the fact that British and American news is being sent over the east for adequate trade facilities and abolition of freight rates discrimination.

FACSIMILE LETTER FROM J. J. PATRICK.

The following facsimile letter from J. J. Patrick, American consul in Great Victoria, was published in the columns of the Daily Telegraph:

EDITOR GRIFFIN TO BRING OUT NEW BOOK IN MAY.

Keen interest on the part of New England newspapermen who are "in the know" attends the publication scheduled for May 12 of a book of reminiscences by Daniel H. Griffin, the man who, for forty years conducted the destinies of the Springfield, Mass., Republican, as its managing editor. Its title is, "People and Politics: Observations by a Massachusetts Editor."

Mr. Griffin attended the national and state conventions of both the Democratic and Republican parties from 1880 to 1916. Not only his personal experiences and philosophy, but Mr. Griffin, but the standing and repute of his newspaper in the country at large, enhances the anticipated volume with an unusual fascination.

Mr. Griffin is exceptionally well qualified to write a book of reminiscences of politics and journalism. He went to the Springfield Republican, one of the most influential American newspapers, as a cub reporter in 1872, immediately after his graduation from Williams College. He received his training under Samuel Bowles, the elder, and within a few years became managing editor, a position he held until his retirement in 1919.

During the period of his connection with the Republican covering almost half a century, it has been one of the best edited of America's great newspapers, a splendid training in journalism from which many men have gone forth to become powerful influences on other newspapers.

WOULD BOND TEXAS PAPERS.

A bill requiring Texas newspapers owning less than $10,000 in physical property to furnish a $10,000 bond for protection of judgments secured by persons in actions for libel has been introduced in the Texas legislature by Representative Jacks of Dallas, and is signed by several other members of the lower house.

An amendment will be offered by the author of the bill when it is considered in committee, to prevent its touching country small town newspapers, the amendment to provide the regulation shall only apply to papers established in cities of 20,000 or more population.

NEWSPAPERS REPRESENTED IN LEGISLATURE.

Twenty-five Texas newspaper publishers and editors, members of the Texas senate and house of representatives, have organized the Webster-Franklin Club, and will hold weekly sessions during the legislature. The newspaper men will talk shop and discuss legislation affecting the publishing business.

F. M. Cowen of Houston is president; F. B. Russell of Groveton, secretary; H. E. Fanthon of Marble Falls, treasurer; Lee Roundtree of Bryan, chaplain, and Will C. Edwards of Denison, sergeant-at-arms.

IDAHO PAPER SOLD.

George R. Barker, owner of the Pend d'Oreille Review, at Sandpoint, Idaho, which he founded and has published for seventeen years, has disposed of the paper and plant to Fred Wilde of Stillwater, Minn. Mr. Wilde is well-known as a newspaper man in the Northwest, having worked in an editorial capacity upon some of the dailies in the larger city and published papers of his own in smaller places.

AGENCY NAMES DIRECTOR.

Porter-Eastman-Byrne Company, Chicago, has appointed Albert H. Hopkins director of plan and merchandising.

Get the Other Half of the Machine

Every Daily Paper in America "sets type" on line-casting machines. But type is only half the machine's capacity—only half the material necessary to "set the ad." In the display section Space and Base are more than half.

PROFANITY TAX EXPERIMENT BY MAINE NEWSPAPER'S COMPOSING ROOM.

A swearless composing room is the aim of the publishers and employes of the Skowhegan, Me., Independent-Reporter, one of the most successful weekly publications in the United States. To make the mechanical department of the Independent-Reporter, a tax has been put upon curs words. Roland F. Patton, business manager of the Independent-Reporter, tells of the use of the "swear box" as a way to make the paper. The convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association is often prohibited in printing establishments. This prohibition is doubled in the Independent-Reporter, because the would-be smoker, but ordinarily the edict is issued with special reference to fire risk. Few offices have any rules against swearing, presumably because no fire hazard or other property damage is likely to result therefrom.

The mechanical department of the Independent-Reporter, however, has cut swearing out or is on the way to. The editor, hoping to reform himself in this respect and to improve the quality of language usually indulged in by those around him, has established a box into which each man is required to drop a penny for every oath or other rough word. "Be Gee," "Goodness sake" and similar expressions are thus put on a par with the downright, honest-to-goodness curs words. The result is that the pennies jingle fast and furious and the "swear fund" accumulates in merry fashion.

The foreman is usually fair-minded but he did not provide a box big enough. Another week will call for a new depository. The plan as originally announced did not provide for the use of the fund thus collected. It is generally understood, however, that they will sit down at an office excursion in the summer, in which all, profane or otherwise, will be welcome to participate.

Seriously, the idea is a most excellent one. When a rough word breaks out, all in hearing immediately form themselves into a committee to see to it that the guilty party pays his fine. The influence is splendid and already substantial improvement in the language, in vogue in this department is manifest.

HEARST'S INTERNATIONAL APPOINTS R. P. DAVIDSON SUCCESSOR TO R. H. WALDO.

Robert P. Davidson, who has been the business manager of Motor, has succeeded R. H. Waldo as business manager of Hearst's International.

Mr. Waldo, before his association with Hearst's International two years ago, had been general manager of the American Association of Foreign Language Newspapers, New York, and secretary of the New York Tribune.

He was at one time advertising director of Good Housekeeping and developed the "Good Housekeeping Institute" for that publication.

Earle H. McHugh, Western manager of Motor at Chicago, has taken Mr. Davidson's place as business manager of that publication.

MISUSES NAME OF THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

The New York Tribune is looking for a man describing himself as a present or former employee of that newspaper who is soliciting funds for some project described as having to do with symbolizing the stars on the American flag. The man is said to accept contributions in cash instead of by check. The Tribune states that it has no connection with any such project or solicitation.

FOUR TEXAS OIL CONCERNS CHARGED WITH FRAUD AD COPY.

Misrepresentation in the advertisement and sale of oil stock is alleged in a complaint issued by the Federal Trade Commission against the four oil companies of Fort Worth, Texas. According to the citation, the respondents caused to be circulated statements to the effect that the four companies represented that they were in a position to supply oil on a speculative basis, whereas it is alleged that the companies had no such financial condition. The four companies are: J. W. Jones, Old Tipton Oil Pool, Albert S. Leach, Co-Operative Oil Interests, C. R. Farmer.

SHEEP AND GOATS AMONG THE PRESS IDENTIFIED BY PUBLISHER McCLURE.

Praise of what he called the "carefully edited section of the press" and lament for the superficial and inaccurate writings on modern politics, were contained in a speech made by S. S. THE LINOTYPE ASSEMBLY
The Quality of Hand Composition with the Economy of the Machine

The individual matrices which are to compose a line are assembled in a "stick" and held in plain view in front of the operator. Until he is ready to release it for casting, it remains perfectly flexible, subject to any revision of spacing or arrangement.

That is the reason why Linotype composition never looks stiff or mechanical. It has all the quality and character of the best hand composition, but costs much less.

ARCHAEOLOGY AND THE PRESS; OR, WHO IS EXPLOITING OLD KING TUT MOST

When does archaeology become grave robbing? asks the Duluth News-Tribune. That question seems to be causing some concern to the Egyptian government as a result of the methods employed by those who are engaged in the extremely interesting job of unearthing and opening the tomb of Pharaoh Tutankhamen.

Every American newspaper publisher has first-hand knowledge of the fact that these explorations have been commercialized in a most thorough manner. For weeks past, newspapers have been beset with offers to sell them "exclusive" stories about the explorations, and "exclusive" pictures. If the motion picture men were one-half as active—and there is every reason to believe they were—this commercialism extended to that field also. And then there are the magazine "rights" and the book "rights" and various other possible "rights." Undoubtedly those in charge of the exploration who have endeavored to "cash in" on the tremendous amount of publicity given the enterprise, and there is little doubt that they are interested in opening the grave from a purely scientific standpoint.

If archaeology is commercialized in this manner, and if it is to be made a source of profit, it is not very far removed from grave robbing, which is construed as a crime in most civilized countries. Explorations of this kind should be conducted in a manner that can leave no suspicion of commercialism. If a profit is to be realized, it should go to the government or to a scientific society which can and will give every assurance that the funds will be used for further explorations.

PUBLICITY VALUE STRESSED.

Advertising is not to be considered an expense, but an investment, Carlyle Thorpe, general manager of the California Walnut Growers' Association, declared in an address before a meeting in St. Paul. Mr. Thorpe, whose concern, he said, runs an advertising budget of $250,000 annually, maintained that the advertising of a commodity gives the prospective consumer a favorable impression of it. He advised close acquaintance and mutual confidence between employers and their customers and stressed the value of "catch lines" in advertisements, saying that the appeal to the eye plus appeal to the mind is of great value. "Women is the influence in buying for the home," he said, "and therefore the advertisement should appeal to her especially."

DAKOTA EDITOR CONDEMNS "CARD OF THANKS."

E. H. Warren, editor of the Spearfish, S. D., Mail, objects to the printed "card of thanks." He says: "For the relatives of the departed member of the family who happen to think those who assisted them, it is much more to the point to go personally to those friends and express their gratitude. To make a public demonstration in the newspaper is in extremely poor taste. "Persons who try to alleviate the sorrow of others do so with no expectations or desire to be publicly thanked for such services; nor are they entitled to such distinction for performing a Christian duty."

NEWSPAPER MAN ARRESTED FOR SMOKING.

A. N. McKay, general manager of the Salt Lake City Tribune, and several other prominent Salt Lake City citizens were arrested in a downtown restaurant Tuesday charged with violation of the state anti-cigarette law, which prohibits smoking in public places.

Mr. McKay bought a cigar at the restaurant counter, and is alleged to have lighted it before leaving the place. He was released on his personal recognizance.

ARTHUR BRISBANE ON THE FUTURE OF ADVERTISING.

"Advertising, a science in its infancy today, a profession that is just beginning, is of the very greatest importance to all of the people," says Arthur Brisbane, famous Hearst editor. "Young men will be interested to know that already in the advertising field there are great possibilities of profit. Many men are paid very large salaries—$15,000 to $25,000 a year, and even more. And they are worth it, for intelligent advertising makes the advertiser independent of his location; it enables him to reach all the people all of the time—something undreamed of in past commercial history."

MONTANA PAPER MOVES INTO NEW HOME.

BUTTE AFTERNOON DAILY NOW HAS COMMODOUS WELL-ARRANGED PLANT — DIDN'T MISS A SINGLE ISSUE FROM ITS OWN PRESS AND EQUIPMENT.

The Butte Daily Post has completed the task of moving its plant and offices from its old quarters on Granite street to its building at the southeast corner of Main and Galena streets, without missing a single issue from its own press and equipment.

Mechanical forces of the Post were enabled to set this record because of the fact that the paper is not published on Sunday.

Recently, after the Saturday edition had been printed, the press was dismantled at the old location and by Monday afternoon when it was again ready for work another deck had been added and by Wednesday the press was again completely assembled.

Considerable new composing room equipment was added by the Post to its plant and this was set up and ready Saturday, when all the newspaper work was ready for the day's work. In the stereotyping department too, the Post staff made a fine record in the quick change of base.

The Post's new building is a commodious structure built especially for the newspaper. Its offices are comfortable and well lighted and its mechanical departments are laid out in the most approved and economical manner.

ONE OF OLDEST PAPERS.

Despite the fact that the Butte Daily Post was but ten years old in January, it is really one of the oldest of present day dailies in Montana. It was founded as the Inter-Mountain in 1882, and was later named the Butte Daily Post. It became United States Senator in 1915. It has always been one of the leading papers, not only of Montana, but of the Northwest.

In 1915, J. H. Darst, formerly editor of the Standard, became manager and editor of the paper and changed its name to the Butte Daily Post. Although the paper has always been one of high merit from a mechanical as well as an editorial standpoint, it was published in one of the smallest buildings of any large daily newspaper in the country.

The change in location gives the paper adequate space and facilities for all departments. Along with new equipment, the entire personnel moved to the new location. The business office is on the second floor of the new building. The editorial and composing rooms are on the first floor. The stereotyping department is placed along side of the composing room, where press room, mailing department, paper storage and vaults for records and files are located in the basement.

AGENCY OPENS NEW OFFICE.

TABLOID SIZE ADOPTED FOR OKLAHOMA LEADER.

Change in the form of the Oklahoma City Oklahoma Leader, to tabloid size was made by the management recently, with the statement that the paper not only will be able to save money but that the size will be more convenient for farmer subscribers who read the paper while on the way from the mail box.

In addition the subscription price of the Leader has been reduced to four dollars a year, and a special offer of three dollars a year is made for the next sixty days. The price of the twice-a-week edition of the Leader was reduced to one dollar a year.

The Leader is now a twelve-page, five-column paper, columns being twelve and one-half ems wide. The paper contains practically no advertising but has the same news and features it formerly contained.

SAME人類 IS ADEPT AT WASHBURN COLLEGE PRESS.

Three journalism students at Washburn College, Topeka, completed the requirements for entrance into the Washburn Press Association, while seven others qualified to enter, and twenty-two others, who were edition to up their standard of journalism during the past semester. The new members are Miss Melba Gilbert, Miss Muriel Randall and Harry Loomis. Those previously qualifying were Ted Blevins, Harry S. Smith, Miss Helen Peppard, Miss Helen Harvey, Miss Isabella Hill and Ralph Schrader. Requirements for entrance are: three columns of Leader submitted and accepted by the college paper during a semester to continue membership one must have at least a column accepted.

LEGISLATORS INSPIRE REVOLT BY COLLEGE EDITORS ON CENSORSHIP.

The entrance of the Scorpion, a journal of political opinion and free thought, into the journalistic field at the University of Wisconsin at Madison has resulted in changing the law of the board of regents regarding student publications.

The journal, unauthorized by the university as a student publication and edited by David Sinclair, son of Upton Sinclair, the novelist, made its initial appearance on the campus recently. It resulted in a statement by S. H. Goodnight, dean of men, that if the editors wished to make it a student publication, they would have to submit to faculty censorship.

The editors, according to a statement by Mr. Sinclair, do not wish to submit to this censorship, claiming that articles would be kept out of the paper if they did, as it is expected the Scorpion will make several attacks on the policies of the university. They state that anestudents of the university are entitled to publish their paper and carry the name of the university on their masthead without censorship.

Several members of the legislature, it is reported, have agreed to submit to the editors to publish as a student journal without submitting to the rules of the university governing publications. Faculty attempts to suppress the paper or expel its editors from school would lead to measures by the legislature to bring the faculty before it for explanation or for changes in the laws, so that students might publish a student paper without faculty censorship or interference, it was said.

WOOD NEWSPAPER MACHINERY CORPORATION

501 Fifth Avenue, New York City has attracted much attention among association members. Harry Sehl, of the Sehl ... K. C. baking powder, were both present to explain their serious objections to the advertising practices of the Royal Baking Powder Company. The controversy arose because of the request by the Calumet company that publishers omit the advertising of the Royal powder when it contained reference to the ingredients contained in other powders. Mr. Sehl went into the matter in great detail.

"This is a petition to newspaper publishers who are willing to take a stand for the truth in advertising, who believe in fair play and are opposed to deceptive propaganda," he said.

"There is a protest against malicious copy and against the spreading of poisonous gas." For many years the best publishers throughout the country have rejected advertisements because the features of the phrase 'contains no alum', which has been made the flag of the Royal Baking Powder Company. The speaker quoted from advertisements in the Heinz Ketchup and baking powder 'Heinz tomato catsup does not contain any benzene of soda' in substantiation of the company's moral and legal right to make truthful claims for its product.

"The controversy arose because of the request by the Calumet company that publishers omit the advertising of the Royal powder when it contained reference to the ingredients contained in other powders. Mr. Sehl went into the matter in great detail.

"Now what is the responsibility of the newspaper? The newspaper which contains, with knowledge of the foregone preparations, an advertisement containing the phrase 'Royal Baking Powder Contains No Alum' is itself representative of the Royal company and found to be disposing itself to the systematic violation of the law by an intentional and unmitigated purpose of throttling competition. Such advertising is not desired or intended to sell baking powder.

"Seemingly truthful and innocuous, it is an essential part of a deliberate and misleading attack upon competitive products. It is a part of their general plan to make the consumer believe not only that the other baking powders are not as good, but that they are not as satisfactory as the Royal. It is an essential part of a deliberate and misleading attack upon competitive products. It is a part of their general plan to make the consumer believe not only that the other baking powders are not as good, but that they are not as satisfactory as the Royal.

"The Royal Baking Powder Company is now conducting a national campaign to use the names of baking powder—phosphate—cream of tartar—and sodium aluminum sulfate—to the last known name that has for years applied the name 'alum'.

"The Royal Baking Powder Company has found a way to market its products and complete the control of the supply of cream of tartar. In 1876, the Royal people made up their minds that to continue to sell a strong hold of the baking powder industry and to continue to get extravagant colored alum and phosphate baking powders which the world knows sold for materially less. It then and there initiated a general campaign of the most sensational kind against the other baking powders.

"It published advertising from one end of the country to the other, which alum was described as poisonous and a cause of deadly poisoning. It published advertisements which called it a corrosive mineral acid, and in fact, called it everything undesirable under the sun.

"After the passage of the national pure food law and as a result of the regulations by the United States Government, the Royal Baking Powder Company advertised that it was in the process of determining a formula and for all whether or not those other baking powders were really injurious to health.

"The question was submitted by the United States Department of Agriculture to a body of five of the leading scientific authorities in the country (this board of experts being a real supreme court of science).

"The more pointed attacks and the vicious statements gradually disappeared and the advertising was restricted to newspapers but in their place we see newspapers more and more indirect insinuations, more and more attempted to sell baking powder.

"The responsible publisher must necessarily regard public policy as well as to his own welfare. Reputable papers refuse hundreds of thousands of dollars for the purpose of throttling competition. Such advertising is not desired or intended to sell baking powder.

"The fact that a publisher is willing to accept the responsibility of selling the Royal Baking Powder Company's product, is not an indication of the truth or fairness of the advertisement. It is an indication of the willingness of the publisher to accept the responsibility of being an instrument or party to a deliberate and misleading attack upon competitive products. It is an indication of the willingness of the publisher to accept the responsibility of being an instrument or party to a deliberate and misleading attack upon competitive products. It is an indication of the willingness of the publisher to accept the responsibility of being an instrument or party to a deliberate and misleading attack upon competitive products.

"Realizing that it is purely negative and destructive, it lies wholly within the discretion of the publisher to refuse to become a party to propaganda of this kind.

"When a newspaper states on its editorial page that it has a definite political bias, then it is time to read two papers. A newspaper which makes a statement that it has a definite political bias is not a fair and impartial paper.

"The biggest and best metropolitan dailies, hundreds upon hundreds, refuse hundreds of thousands of dollars for the purpose of throttling competition. Such advertising is not desired or intended to sell baking powder.

"According to the order issued by the commission, the respondent must remove from using statements in advertising literature or otherwise to the effect that it is a manufacturer of baking powder, that it sells baking powder, or that it operates a factory. The respondent is also ordered to discontinue the use of the words 'Royal Baking Powder Company' in any advertisement.

"Irrational advertising has to make good on its claims; irrational ideas will have to do exactly the same thing," Mr. Carson said. "Advertising is an attempt to attract the attention of the public to a product.

"When I was asked to speak to an advertising staff about advertising, I was going to talk about women in advertising, not about the feminist touch found in any one of those things.

"Advertising, however, upon which any guess is just as good as yours. That is not what I am going to talk about in the future. There was a time when advertising was considered by announcing the name of the product and its price. We do not think about it any more, or call it advertising.

"A short time ago I had a lunch with a man who spent most of his life in the Orient. One of the things he asked me was, 'What are you doing now?' Advertising. I said. I expected him to say, 'Oh, isn't that interesting.' But she did not. She said 'Oh, calling people into buying things they do not need and do not want!' Of course I said the usual things defending us, but in the end he would not justify advertising to the person who was not commercially minded.

BROOKLYN PASTOR ASHAMED OF "WET" PRESS.

REV. N. W. TWIDDY WRITES NEW YORK TIMES EDITOR AND CLAIMS THAT "DRYS" ARE NOT GETTING A FAIR DEAL FROM METROPOLITAN NEWSPAPERS.

New York newspapers would be ashamed into culling news of the wet forces from their columns were they to heed the advice of Rev. Norman W. Twiddy of the Brooklyn Methodist Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, as reported in this week's edition of the New York Times a few days ago. The newspapers are accused by Rev. Mr. Twiddy of encouraging lawlessness by publishing the abundance of copy that is afforded by the "wets" news matter.

The Brooklyn pastor went so far as to say that the wet news was played up in great headlines, while the dry side of the question, if it got into print at all, was buried in an inconspicuous corner of the newspapers. The writer looked fifty years ahead and appeared to be considering the opinion of citizens who might look over the files of the so-called "dry" newspapers.

"New York journalism has never been so disgraced and dishonored as in its present stand on the Eighteenth Amendment," Dr. Twiddy said. "And how often is that catchphrase 'person liberty' lugged into the editorial columns? It is a sweet morsel until one begins to ask what we really mean by it. Then it becomes a bitter pill which had better be spewed out so far as its use to the public is concerned. For it, in just the jungle is personal liberty found—if by that term you mean the right of anarchy to carry on its activities without restraint.

"And, furthermore, the wet New York papers are on the losing end of the game. Civic decency and righteousness may lose a battle but not a cause. Wherever there are laws and men, there will not only be censured but punished for transgression which will then seem as unbelievable and as regrettable as the articles upon which the Emancipation Proclamation now seems.

For the moral force of the Eighteenth Amendment is being disregarded so far as the public papers are concerned. The copy that is generated from the vast number of "wets" newspapers must be looked over by every person who is interested in law and the well-being of the country. It is only by the sale of the papers that the "wets" are sustained, and thus in a way they are aiding the cause of lawlessness.

VISUALIZING NEW ASSET OF WORLD REPORTERS.

HERBERT HOUSTON, PUBLISHER OF OUR WORLD, SEES VAST IMPROVEMENT IN COPY OF FOREIGN CORRESPONDENTS WHO REALIZE BIG TASK ASSIGNED THEM.

Herbert S. Houston, publisher of Our World, in an address in New York on Monday, took a hopeful view of the future, saying that the newspapers are doing their share in making the world a better place.

The modern industrial world is based on the laws of economics and mechanics and not on the laws of man, Mr. Houston said. "There must come understanding. The spirit has become a living spirit, the candle of life, because it is the spirit that is universal and eternal. Here lies the hope of world peace-reality understanding among the people of all nations.

"The press is alive to its duty and since the war the news from other countries has increased tenfold. But the great problem is to have news gathered and presented so that it truly interprets the peoples of other countries-its aims, its understanding character-thus really helping toward understanding.

"This is where the need arises for a new type of world journalist, one who will not be merely an outsider, an observer of the surface of things, but an insider interpreter of realities."

"And it is to that journalist, I would say, that the correspondent of the Tribune and many more-men who realize their opportunities and their obligations and will meet them. But the world is moving so fast that the fact of tomorrow is often blotted out by the event of to-morrow."

"And it is just that followed the brilliant reports on the Lausanne conference could fail to be struck with endless combinations? But the most remarkable features were in the events themselves and witness to the once reliable correspondents reportable correspondents were sending their papers."

"With the flood of events, shifting and changing, there has arisen the need for the interpretive journalists who would follow the reporting journalist and bring the flood within the channel of ordered knowledge."

"The Times has seen the necessity for such an interpretative and co-ordinating agent by publication of the magazine Current History; and all the great newspapers of the land are meeting the need, with more or less success, in their Sunday editions. As a publisher, who has tried to serve in this great field I can assure you that a serious effort to make the printing press spread the light of understanding is no easy undertaking."

"But the real fact is that the press, behind the world, stands for and gives a voice to the things that are true and right and of good report. Here in this great polyglot city with its hundreds of races and nationalities, there are not ten that even the sternest Puritan would class as disreputable."

"HARDING RATED AS SPLENDID "TIPISTER.""

President Harding was characterized as "one of the world's best tipsters" by Robert Barry, a Washington newspaper correspondent, speaking in Chicago before the Medill School of journalism at Northwestern University. He said the president is "an extraordinary popular" with Washington correspondents.

"Oftentimes when the president cannot get up his diplomatic reasons, it is a story," Mr. Barry said, "he will hand us a tip that we can work into the first-class story. Fellow, we will say, 'let me give you a slant on that.' The president is never interviewed."

"Mr. Barry stated, 'the only time he is quoted is when he is quoted in written stories. A daily or other times it is said the president's attitude is understood to be, that phrase can be found in his own spoken words.'"

"NEWSPAPER SHOW AT PRAGUE."

The first international newspaper exhibition has been opened at Prague and more than 450 papers from all over the world are represented.

The organization of the exhibit has attempted to gather as many newspapers as possible classified according to nationality, scope and advertising.

Among the papers represented are many from the United States, Great Britain, India, France, South America, Canada, Japan, China, Persia and the European countries.

"RETAIL CLOTHIERS CONSIDER NEWSPAPER COPY."

At the annual convention of the Ohio Retail Clothiers' Association at Cincinnati February 20, one of the leading features of the program was a discussion of the proper application of newspaper advertising and direct mail salesmanship to retail selling, to be conducted by R. H. Ferger, advertising manager of the New York Sun, and Harry B. Kirtland.

INCREASED RELIANCE ON NEWS PRINT IMPORTS.

PRODUCTION IN U.S. DURING 1922 WAS 600,000 TONS LESS THAN ACTUAL CONSUMPTION, DESPITE 18 PER CENT INCREASE IN OUTPUT, FEDERAL REPORT SHOWS.

The Federal Trade Commission's statistical report on the paper and pulp industry, which shows in detail the production and shipments of various grades of paper and pulp for the calendar years 1921 and 1922, develops the fact that the consumption of news print paper in the United States for 1922 exceeded production by about 600,000 tons, the deficiency being made up by imports from Canada. Total consumption exceeded that for 1921 by 273,369 tons, according to the commission's figures.

Open market prices paid for news print paper by publishers in 1922 compared with 1921, according to the report, decreased 100 pounds f.o.b. from forty-seven per cent in January, 1921, to about seven per cent for October of the same year, with the exception that the price for December increased about six per cent. Contract prices for the same period decreased from about thirty-eight per cent to about ten per cent during 1921.

The report gives extensive information concerning import and export figures for various grades of paper and wood pulp as shown by the records of the department of commerce for the years 1918 to 1922, with the exception of the last three months of 1922. Other statistics dealt with in the report are percentages of increases of production for the different grades of paper; manufacturers' production and shipments; domestic jobberings, receipts, shipments and stocks on hand; and publishers' receipts, and consumption.

Among the commission's tabulations is a statement that in 1922 news print increased eighteen per cent during the year, and that 28,180 tons was the maximum quantity on hand at the mills during the year, and 18,610 tons the minimum.

NEW MILL FOR MANITOBA.

Preliminary steps toward the construction of a pulp and paper mill having a capacity of 120 tons of news print daily will be commenced early in the spring for the J. D. McArthur and Company, Ltd. The mill is to be located at Fort Alexander, seventy miles northwest of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada. Construction of a railroad twenty miles long is included in the plans. The total expenditure will be more than $3,000,000.

WASHINGTON'S PRINCIPLES LIKENED TO PULITZER'S.

Reference to the late Joseph Pulitzer and the New York World was made Monday by Colonel William W. Gullion, staff judge advocate of the 2nd Corps Area Headquarters of the army, in an address on Washington broadcasting by the Westinghouse radio station in Newark, N. J.

"It is interesting to note the words of the founder of a great journal forty years ago," Col. Gullion said, "Washington always taught for progress and reform, never tolerating injustice or corruption, always lighting demagogues of the press, but always opposing privileged classes and public plunderers. He never lacked sympathy with the poor, and always remained devoted to the public welfare. Absolutely independent and wearing the collar of no man, he never feared to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty."

In introducing Col. Gullion, Major General Bullard, commanding the 2nd Corps Area, with headquarters at Governor's Island, said: "His words are ours."

COLEGE AND NEWSPAPER ENGLISH.

"It's amazing," says Dr. Walter B. Pitkin of the Pulitzer school of journalism, "how little about the elementary principles of the language the average college instructor knows. Not one out of 100 of them can write good enough English to appear in a newspaper."

This statement may puzzle some critical folks who have anything but a high regard for "pulitzer English." In fairness it should be admitted that there is a great deal of poor English printed in the daily press, and also in the magazines, and that college professors usually think as little of newspaper style as newspapermen think of professorial style, comments the Appleton, Wis., Press.

It is a fact, however, that the style affected by the ordinary college professor is so artificial, so much drawn from books and written in a sort of scholastic scale, that ordinary citizens of profession has had a hard time figuring out what it means.

The newspapers, with all their hasty preparation and appearance of finished style, are written in a style that is drawn from life, which approximates natural human speech, and show the psychology of readers public better than the style of the college. If the kind of writing and printing is to convey ideas most effectively from one mind to another, another, newspaper writing is certainly superior.

Newspaper fall short of providing the kind of news that owning readers are entitled, Perry S. Williams, manager of the Mercury Agency of Tampico, informed the delegates at the meeting of the Advertising News, Daily Press Association. The papers are derelict in this respect just as the newspapers are derelict in their everyday life were similarly neglected, he declared.

"A newspaper has the same interest to the family as its home," he said, "it comes to us now as the result of transportation and transportation has turned the profession into a service which no community can hope to reach its goal, it is the established natural system where the millions of units making it up are owned by private interests. The possessor of a paper can go anywhere at any time and for any distance without a second thought.

"Modern construction of cars is such that he needn't need to soil his leather, his mechanical problems, supplies and service are to be found on every hand and good roads await him in all places where the business leaders have been alert enough to see to it that while the community can hope to reach its goal, it is the established natural system where the millions of units making it up are owned by private interests. The possessor of a paper can go anywhere at any time and for any distance without a second thought.

CHURCH GOING REPORTER TALKS TO MINISTERS.

That all newspaper scribes are not as dumb as they are alleged to be is evidenced by the fact that at a recent meeting of a group of local ministers one of the embryonic news hounds was called to deliver the address, says the Columbus, O., Dispatch. The scribe with a look on his face as though going into front line trenches, quaking in his shoes, appeared before the audience and started his talk.

The talk did two things: First, it made the newsman a little of the minister, and last but not least, another news hound who overheard the talk reported that there were satiety at least one of the staff rolls out early enough on Sunday morning to go to Sunday school and church.

PRESS CLUB NAMES OFFICE NOMINEES.

John F. Dore and Charles E. Claypool are the nominees for the Seattle Press Club for 1923, as the result of nominations in the club. Other nominations are: E. H. Thomas and W. J. Petrair for secretary; Carlton Fitzhugh, first vice-president; E. E. Carpenter, second vice-president, and James A. Wood, treasurer. The last three, present incumbents, were nominated without opposition.

The following were nominated for board of managers, six to be elected: Carl M. Brazier, C. B. Francis, E. Atwell, Gilbert Gordob, C. Girard, H. W. Ross, E. J. Friedlander, D. B. Duncombe and Kenneth Gilbert. Election will be held March 1.

LINOTYPE MAN TALKS TO ADVERTISING ALUMNI.

F. T. Deman, assistant publicity manager of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, gave an illustrated talk on good printing and the linotype before members of the Advertising Alumni of the New York Employing Printers Association, at the headquarters of that organization on Friday last.

The speakers stressed the importance of quality printing, the buyer and seller, and pointed out cer certain, if good printing matter, into the production of every good piece of printed matter. He discussed the typography resources available to printers desirous of giving distinction to their product, with emphasis on the fact that good printing need not be extravagant printing.

BRIDGEPORT PRESS MEN HEAR SECRETARY ORR.

J. C. Orr of Pressmen's Home, Tennessee, international secretary of printing pressmen, addressed members of the Bridgeport, C. U. branch at their club rooms Monday.

The speaker discussed mainly the new system of trade schools being inaugurated throughout the country, the time this is the trade and made a plea to reduce the number of tuberculars, the shorter work, and natural course in Tennessee.

Speaking of the shorter working weeks, the speaker produced statistics that verified his statement that the forty-four and forty-eight hour week has brought about a marked increase in production in all instances over the former sixty hour week.

JOURNALISTIC COMPENSATION COMES IN VARIETY.

A newspaper man, whether reporter or editor, encounters more varieties of human nature than a lawyer, a physician, a politician, and he has the advantage of knowing how to treat them under conditions in which it is impossible for him to accommodate himself, even if it does, unconsciously given itself away. That's what makes the newspaper man so entertaining to the snapshotters of the press. They have many unpleasant experiences, but they are the consolation in the unpunished humor of the theater. The pictures which they collect for their mental art galleries. As many men are heroes to their valets, so few of those who figure in the public eye are able to conceal their personal limitations and amusing weaknesses from the appraising estimate of the newspaper expert.

If the newspaper man's sense of humor were not highly developed, and his 'good points' not an extra thickness as a protection to his feelings, his sensibilities would be developed to a higher degree each day. As it is, the shafts and arrows of misconception are a joy and delight to him.

The unintentional comedy of outside sports is a personal stimulus and rejuvenator in a profession which largely lives on its nerves—not "in your shoes," and quite often, "though by your smiling you would seem to say so."—Baltimore Sun.

DAILY AIRPLANE DELIVERY OF FLORIDA PAPER.

The flying machine as part of the everyday equipment of a newspaper circulation department was introduced a few days ago by the Miami, Fla. Metropolis. A small airplane is used by the newspaper to deliver an edition to Palm Beach seventy miles away. The plane leaves each day at 3 o'clock and an hour later the Palm Beach edition of the Metropolis is delivered. The Miami paper at the same hour the Miami edition is distributed. The Metropolis, the first novelty with the Metropolis as the plane to be delivered to seventy miles away, is used to serve twenty-five years ago newspapers in all sections of the country chartered planes to deliver special advertising matter. Such was the stimulating proposition but it remained for the Florida newspaper department to give the delivery as part of its circulation distribution plan.

NEWSPAPER STORY GAVE "BUFFALO BILL" HIS TITLE.

That a newspaper story gave "Buffalo Bill" his title is the unusual statement of David Forrester, 80, of Hays, Kansas. Captain Cody won the name by finding buffalo meat for the men while he was on a railroad builders when the company scouts had failed to provide food. Through the Banker's No. 3 of the Hays Sentinel, in writing of the event in 1874, the name of Buffalo Bill, the mightiest of all buffalo hunters. The name stayed with him forever after.

FEW AD MEN HAVE BANK VIEWPOINT ON ADVERTISING.

HEAD OF AMERICAN BANKERS ASSOCIATION SAYS MUCH OF "MYSTERY" SUPPOSED TO VEIL BANK PUBLICITY EXISTS ONLY IN OPINIONS OF UNFAMILIAR MINDS.

The importance of bank advertising was discussed by J. H. Puelicher, head of the American Bankers Association, at a luncheon of the Advertising Club of New York recently.

"I saw a letter from a leading national advertiser one day in which he said he had been unable to find any definite ideas or expressions among bankers in regard to advertising," Mr. Puelicher remarked. "This was due to my own experience among bankers that suggested the text for my remarks here today. The fact is that a man's feeling is typical of other advertising men, it indicates a false situation. It indicates that two important economic units in our business life do not understand each other."

"I will take the banker, the syndicate of the misunderstanding and go so far as to state that advertising being by nature an art, falls to arouse an intelligent interest among bankers in advertising, it is foolish and unadvisable for a traveler advertising men themselves to grasp the essentials in the problem of bank advertising.

"Advertising is a most fascinating, but intangible. It deals with absolutely intangible factors. They are often definite as those involved in the advertising campaign for a food product, or other products."

"If an advertising man fails to see that this is so and why, and secondly, makes his banker client see equally clearly that it is so and then fails to be qualified to handle bank advertising.

"The fault lies with the advertising man. He does not understand the banker, because so many bankers in an extensive and consistent way reveal this bias."

"If an advertising man fails to see that this is so and why, and secondly, makes his banker client see equally clearly that it is so and then fails to be qualified to handle bank advertising.

"The products bankers have to sell are products which are among the most basic and least understood of all products. There is nothing indefinite about these. They are basic factors in business life. They are produced in various forms to suit particular needs and special circumstances.

"These needs and circumstances differ from time to time and place to place, so the banker's selling problem at one time of the year is different from that in another. The country banker's selling problem is different from the city banker's. The investment banker's selling problem is different from the commercial banker's."

"It is all banking. It is all selling. In each case the basic products are credit and service. But the markets and the conditions vary, and the problem of each banker to know his market and his demand and to advertise accordingly is a problem to let his community know what the kind of service, and the kind and the service they want.

"If an advertising man does not understand this, or is not qualified either to convince a banker that he should advertise, or to be of any assistance to him when he does advertise.

"My advice to advertising men is to get over the idea that there is anything mysterious or intangible about banking. Find out what it really is. Then advertise it in plain, practical terms like any other business."

SINCERITY IN SERVICE MAKES SALESMANSHIP SIMPLE, AN EXPERT SAYS.

"Advertising is selling, and selling is, after all, extremely simple. Selling is a process of showing the other fellow why, or why not, your carriage or your services will do for him," said Carl Hunt, manager of the Associated Advertising Service of the World. "Addressing an audience of Savannah business men at the Savannah Hotel, Mr. Hunt continues.

"I have hired many salesmen; I have been a salesman; in the advertising-selling service agency business, I have trained salesmen for other Preliminary to a man's failing to see the reason for the reduction. I like to illustrate that with the story of some parasols which were to be sold by a department store in Detroit. They were brought to sell at five dollars and were beautiful parasols, but they came back—always with broken handles. They were advertised three prices, all for $5 parasols for $1.98. A few were sold, but the average woman doubted whether a parasol could be worth $1.98, even when they were cheap, because they had brittle handles, they would be sold for $1.98, and suggested that a man who was careful with her things could use one of them for a long time.

"Before eleven o'clock the next morning, all the remaining parasols were gone, and the reason was returned, because the customers had bought them with their eyes opened. They did not take your customers into your confidence. They will appreciate it," declared the speaker.

"What will this article do for my customer? If my customer asks, because the customer buys from you not the article or service, this will answer the question.

"Now one word about selling to retail customers. What do you sell me? Don't sell me goods. I want goods. You sell me a product, on what basis? On your assurance that the goods and the opportunity which arises from the fact you goods which are all right and will give satisfaction, to make permanent friends of my cus-"
DEMAND FOR NEWSPAPER WORKERS GROWING.

With the information at hand that the number of newspapers in the United States fell off slightly last year, and recent manifestations that the tendency toward consolidation is likely to continue, the demand for capable newspaper workers in all branches exceeds the supply.

Several newspaper men who have recently made extensive trips including most of the important cities of the country have told The Fourth Estate that they had noticed a remarkably increased demand. In Pittsburgh last week the elimination of the Dispatch and the Leader after their purchase by the other five Pittsburgh dailies brought out the fact that the other papers would continue to make up the difference, and to meet the demand for men and women in all departments of the South.

It is pleasant to have such a message as this to pass along to the rank and file of paper workers in general, and the newspapers in particular. Bearish sentiment has perhaps disappeared, and even the partial amputation of our European market is not regarded by purposeful business men as such a handicap as it seemed.

We pass along the new confidence that these conditions bring thus: A newspaperman can feel himself entitled to a large share of it as anybody.

FREE PUBLICITY AND POOR TASTE GO TOGETHER.

For all of the complete and thorough obsequies which marked its ostentatious demise many moons ago, free publicity seems to be lingering, like a miasma, about the whole scene, telling when or where you will find it. Just after the sparks die out of a newspaper, its newspapers, its newspapers, its newspapers, its newspapers.

EXPERT ADVISES ADVERTISING AT HOME.

COAST AD BUREAU MANAGER TELLS VALUE OF NEWSPAPER SPACE — PUBLICITY IN DEFINITE LOCALITIES MORE PROFITABLE THAN "NATIONAL" MAGAZINES.

Prominent dyers show the necessity of advertising.

Plans for launching a newspaper advertising campaign during the latter part of February, to continue through 1923, in order to educate the public as to the necessity of having their dry cleaned monthly were outlined at a convention of the National Association of Dyers and Cleaners at Atlanta last week.

The advertising movement which was approved by the association, was explained by W. A. Biddle, advertising manager of the American Laundry Machinery Company, who said that his company had spent $8,500 for a series of advertisements. He urged the members to back up this campaign with a persistent newspaper campaign, and stated that his company had prepared cuts that would be distributed among members for this purpose.

"Advertising," he said, "carries on consistently and regularly, whether it be a national magazine or local newspaper; it is the most efficient means of reaching the public. The advertiser who believes in the power of the newspaper to reach his public has an advantage over those who believe in the power of the magazine."

"Most business men," he continued, "enter into an advertising campaign mindlessly, because it is the thing to do; they start it and then drop it because they have not secured a fifty or one hundred per cent increase in business. They do not realize that they must keep at it, and not let it slip."

"Most newspapers," he said, "are not used to advertising properly, and they do not have the knack of advertising properly."

He stated that the percentage to be spent on advertising varied according to the industry, but that the proportion of successful advertisers would range from three to five percent of their gross receipts.

NEWS NOTES OF CIRCULATORS.

Carriers of the Duluth News-Tribune in Hibbing, Minn., were entertained recently at a dinner given by P. H. McCarty, postmaster and former publisher of the Duluth News-Tribune and the Memba range. A business meeting was held following the dinner and the various carriers were given a certificate of appreciation for their work. The carriers were entertained at the hockey game at Eveleth yesterday.

It is the plan of the management of the News-Tribune to hold a three-day advertising sale during the summer months, for all the carriers and agents. This is a feature arranged for the entertainment of the boys during their stay in Duluth, and will be opened at the Free Press office. Milbe Bunnell is publisher of the paper.

Copy of the New Universities Dictionary being given by the Detroit Free Press to persons who present three coupons clipped from the Free Press at the annual Washington's Birthday celebration.

Mr. Emory said newspaper advertising in the past year has increased approximately fifty percent.

Most manufacturers who advertise sectionally or nationally for the purpose of reaching their customers, do so for the purpose of advertising their goods and not for the purpose of advertising their names. This is the reason why the public does not remember the names of newspapers.

"Advertising," he said, "carries on consistently and regularly, whether it be a national magazine or local newspaper; it is the most efficient means of reaching the public. The advertiser who believes in the power of the newspaper to reach his public has an advantage over those who believe in the power of the magazine."

"Most business men," he continued, "enter into an advertising campaign mindlessly, because it is the thing to do; they start it and then drop it because they have not secured a fifty or one hundred per cent increase in business. They do not realize that they must keep at it, and not let it slip."

Paris Janitors Publish Newspaper of Their Own.

A newspaper for janitors has made its appearance in Paris, the first issue being circulated a few weeks ago and left at the door of every apartment in buildings in Paris where janitors are employed. The paper reminds flat dwellers that politeness is due janitors at all times and lists various regulations which they must observe. Included among the suggestions for the janitors themselves are some concerning the handling of mail. They are told that must be taken into the courtyard and shout to tenants on the fifth floor that mail has arrived for them. Instead, it says, the mail should be taken to the respective flats three times a day in well regulated houses.

Janitors in Paris now have a newspaper of their own which they circulate at the door of every apartment in buildings where they work. The paper, called "La Timbale," is printed daily and contains news of interest to janitors, such as the latest fashion for janitorial hats, tips on how to keep the stairs clean, and even a column on how to deal with difficult tenants. The paper is printed on cheap paper and is distributed free of charge to all janitors in Paris.

SPORT WRITERS ADVICE TO BE HEEDED BY PENN FOOTBALL COACH.

Newspapermen are to be called into council by Lou Young, Pennsylvania's 1923 coach, according to his own statement. The newspapermen are to be called into council by Lou Young, Pennsylvania's 1923 coach, according to his own statement. The ... just what's what with a team, Young believes. To get new ideas he is going to call in the newspapermen to hear what they have to say.

"I believe," said Young, "that a newspaperman who watches the practice every afternoon, knows the players personally and gets the whole story of what goes on, is going to be able to say something new to me."

The Columbus Dispatch

He was pronounced out of danger yesterday at his villa at Palm Beach, where he insisted on being taken on his return to consciousness.

Mr. Strassburger and his family reside at "Normandy Farm," Gwynedd Valley, a few miles north of Norristown. At this country place, and in the horse shows and cattle and live stock exhibitions, Mr. Strassburger indulges an innate love of fine horses and good stock. The farms of his estate are probably the largest in Montgomery County. They house a herd of Jersey cattle imported by the Mr. Strassburger, and a number of Suffolk Punch horses, as well as other fine racing and horse show stock, including the famous timber horse "Wolverton II."

How to Test an Ad.

There are ten ways in which to test an advertisement, which, if applied, will save the advertiser money, according to L. N. Flint, head of the advertising department of the University of Kansas. The ten tests are:

1. Will it work?
2. Will it sell?
3. Will it be scented?
4. Will it attract all classes?
5. Will it be too strong?
6. Will it be too weak?
7. Will it be too much?
8. Will it be too little?
9. Will it be too expensive?
10. Will it be too cheap?

How to Test an Ad.

In 1922 the New York Times published 852,148 lines of rotogravure advertising, 147,007 lines more than in 1921 and an excess over the next New York newspaper of 299,789 lines. The Times has nearly 45 per cent of the gain of all the graphic sections.

OWNER OF PATERSON CALL PASSES AWAY SUDDENLY

Aged 77

Judge Robert Williams, of the New Jersey court of errors and appeals, president and principal owner of the Call Printing and Publishing Company, of Paterson, N. J., when he succumbed to an attack of pneumonia Monday while at Miami, Fla., with Mrs. Williams and a party of friends, where they had gone to pass a fortnight. Indicative of Judge Williams' personal nature was his decision the first part of this year to give to his employees in the Morning Call, an opportunity to share in the success of the business of which he was one of the founders.

His death is the second to occur among the original editors of the Call within the past year. Judge Williams and William A. Hopson were the two principal owners of the Call until the death of Mr. Hopson last March. Judge Williams planned the profit-sharing arrangement of his business with his employes, the controlling shires being continued, of course, with Judge Williams and his two sons, Assemblymen Henry A. Williams, and Robert Williams, Jr., both of whom were associated with their father in his law office.

In addition to his newspaper interests, Judge Williams was one of the directors of the First National Bank and the National Ribbon Company. He was born in Paterson March 16, 1860.

SPRINGFIELD PUBLISHER DIES

William A. Whitney, vice-president and director of the Phelps Publishing Company of Springfield, Mass., and a former treasurer of the firm, died this week at his home. Mr. Whitney was born in Springfield September 28, 1862. He entered the employ of the Phelps Publishing Company as a boy in the advertising department. He rapidly mastered the details of that department and in a few years was made the advertising manager in the home treasury of the Phelps Company and since 1914 has been the vice-president of the company.

Mr. Whitney was also advertising director of all publications of the Phelps Company. He was for several years a director of the Audit Bureau of Circulation, and also an officer of the Agricultural Publishers Association.

Wanted—To Buy Business of Special Representative

This is an unusual proposition, and it requires unusual action.

Plainly and frankly we wish to purchase the going business of a special representative—not of necessity the biggest and best in the field, but by no means a broken down, decaying business.

The buyer is a newspaper man, grounded from the bottom up, well seasoned, in the newspaper business, yet reasonably young in years.

This man has put in his time as reporter, editor, advertising man, and circulation man, from the reasonably small city to the largest in America.

This man is the promoter, who by editorial and circulation creation, turned the tide in the largest city of this country, and brought from near the bottom to the top of the ladder, one of the leading journals of the United States. And this was done when time was the main element to be contended with.

This man, as a hired executive, organized from nothing and brought to a successful culmination, in a period of less than three years, what is today one of the biggest, largest and most successful of all American institutions allied with the newspaper business.

And the operations of this gentleman have not been necessarily confined to America.

The main purpose of seeking to buy the business of a real special representative corporation is to get back into more active touch with the building of business for newspapers.

This man believes through such a move he will be able to accomplish the purpose in mind.

Naturally any and all communications will be strictly confidential. References beyond question will be furnished if desired in case of opening of negotiations.

FOLLOW THE DEPARTMENT STORES

Volume of business is the life-blood of the department store. It must appeal to the greatest possible audience. It must make this appeal continuously, and with certainty of results.

For many years Chicago's leading department stores have found the advertising columns of The Daily News the quickest, surest and most economical avenue of appeal to the great buying populace of Chicago and suburbs. The table below gives abundant proof of the leadership of The Daily News in this field.

Other advertisers should follow these stores. Their advertising is scientifically placed and must prove effective.

IMPORTANT PRECEDENT IN STORE RATE AGREEMENT.

NEW YORK TIMES AND ELEVEN BIG RETAILERS SETTLE CONTROVERSY OVER INCREASE — CIRCULATION GAINS MEAN HIGHER RATES, WITH REBATE FOR LOSSES.

Advertising of the eleven New York department stores which on February 18 withdrew their copy from the New York Times because of an announced increase in that newspaper's department store rate, returned to the New York Times on Friday, following the conclusion of an agreement that will doubtless serve as a powerful precedent for the guidance of publishers and merchants in other cities.

The new agreement is in every but both the business management of the merchants approached the solution to a vexatious problem, and essential a victory for the Times, the newspaper and the representatives of the merchants who decided the matter in New York recently and have made it clear that they were seeking a solution to the vexatious problem, and not at all in the spirit of coercion. The Times' announced increase from thirty-four to thirty-six cents per line daily and from thirty-five to thirty-seven cents per line Sunday, based on the use of 150,000 lines annually, was made because the increased circulation of the Times not only warranted it, but made it imperative.

Used for Monday for advertising, this increased rate included an additional charge of seven cents per line for insertion in the first New York edition, in which most of this advertising appears. Another advertisement in the Times, printed in a special section, was used for special page position in that section. Louis Wilke, business manager of the Times, said the increase was the result of a controversy between the New York Times and the eleven New York department stores as to the department store rate advertising has been handled in New York in the past. The Times' rate of rates has been put in effect with the average circulation of the New York Times for 1922 as a basis.

The greatly increased and constantly growing circulation of the Times makes us confident that the plan will bring a higher rate than that which caused the disturbance. But every advertiser can protect himself against this contingency, for the option of a contract at the new fixed rate announced the first of the year is extended to all department stores.

"Several contracts have been made on that basis, which may be preferred by advertisers," said Mr. Wilke. "In some instances, the Times' advertising rate, which was 25.875 lines over February, 1922, and a far better rate than any other New York newspaper."

Horace A. Saks of Saks & Co., who conducted the negotiations with the Times, was frankly pleased that the new contract had been settled on a basis so thoroughly equitable.

"We have agreed with the New York Times on a new contract for the coming year," Mr. Saks said.

PERRY AND JONES TAKE CHARGE IN READING.

NEWS-TIMES RESUMES OLD NAME OF "TIMES," POPULAR WITH READERS — COMES OUT IN ENTIRELY NEW DRESS — HERALD-TELEGRAM WILL USE SAME PLANT.

The Reading News-Times came out Thursday in a new uniform but under an old name. John H. Perry, president of the various newspapers, new owners, announcing that the paper would resume the name of Reading Times, Mr. Perry was reading to formally complete the transfer of the paper from the McCormick estate to the organization of which he is head.

In changing the name we are bowing to the wishes of many old and dear subscribers," Mr. Perry declared. "I have discussed this plan with Mr. Perry this week in Reading recently and I believe that Mr. McCormick would be glad to make the change. The name should never have been hyphenated in the first place."

The transfer of this newspaper to the Perry-Lloyd Jones interests is of peculiar interest to eastern Pennsylvania, because it brings Taylor E. Perry and his associates into the advertising company for newspapers. Mr. McPherson, who is general manager of the Reading Times, is a Pennsylvanian by birth and by long residence in the state. He lived in Easton for many years and later was the publisher of the Phillipsburg Daily Press, and continues to work across the river from Easton. He has been in public service work in the state and is known to many of the business men. His home is in Reading, and much of his time will be spent in Reading.

IMPROVEMENTS PROPOSED.

Frank Hamilton, general circulation manager, and Victor F. Barnett, general manager of the Reading Times, accompanied Mr. McPherson to Reading and discussed plans for the future of the newspaper. Some changes in personnel also will be made. Former Mayor E. R. Gerber becomes editor and G. W. Kunsman, business manager.

Mr. Kunsman was advertising manager of the York Dispatch and Daily for some years and recently has been head of the Kunsman Advertising Service. For a period he was advertising manager for the Daily Times, and was advertising manager for the Times, and is known to many of the businessmen. His home is in New York, but much of his time will be spent in Reading.

Two million circulation in prospect for London Mail this year.

The London Daily Mail is approaching two million daily circulation class, its statement of circulation for the year just passed demonstrates. At the end of January, 1922, the paper certified circulation of 1,910,568, which was a little over one half and a small margin on the peak in circulation gains was reached in August when the daily sales averaged 1,910,568.
Sell Spring Fashions to the 685,000 women of Philadelphia

Chestnut, Walnut, Broad and other women’s shopping streets in Philadelphia are lined with establishments which prosper because by advertising in The Bulletin they tell nearly every feminine shopper of their offerings of correct and fashionable attire.

Nearly every woman and girl in Philadelphia and vicinity will spend at least $10.00 on her Spring wardrobe.

Dresses, gowns, hats, hosiery, shoes and other things for women’s wear will entice the dollars from their hand bags.

If you manufacture goods which appeal to girls and women, you can reach the 685,000 feminine buyers in the third largest market in the United States through their favorite newspaper—The Bulletin.

Dominate Philadelphia
Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper “nearly everybody” reads—Philadelphia’s Newspaper

The Evening Bulletin.

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is larger than that of any other daily or Sunday newspaper published in Pennsylvania and is one of the largest in America.

1922 net paid average circulation: 493,240 copies a day.

HOW A NEW YORK SURVEY SERVES TWELVE DAILIES.

BUYING HABITS OF NINE MILLION CONSUMERS IN 50-MILE ZONE CHARTED BY N.Y.U. BUREAU — SCIENTIFIC TRADE ANALYSIS ON ITS BIGGEST SCALE.

Kinds and numbers of retail outlets in any given section in New York or within 50-mile radius will be available for newspaper advertisers.

Newspapers already have begun to draw dividends from their investment in this survey of New York trading territory. One newspaper, as soon as the business research bureau of New York University completes its research for twelve New York, Brooklyn, Long Island and New Jersey newspapers, will begin March 15 and will, when completed, give the papers routes lists of the retail outlets in the 50-mile trading area of New York.

New York's vast market, where it lies, how the consuming power of different sectionsof the city and outlying districtsis rated, where there will be sales, how the character and the fifteen million or so people who patronize it, where they are located, are among the many subjects covered in the survey.

Before definite steps were decided upon for various phases of the survey, a study was made of the way that best suited to their needs. This feature of a co-operative survey is distinctive in other cities where surveys have been made by newspapers, chambers of commerce and other business bodies, the reports have varied, no two ever having been noted to contain identical information, so Dr. Lewis H. Haney, director of the New York University research bureau, told The Fourth Estate this week.

STUDY OUTSIDE METHODS.

Before definite steps were decided upon for various phases of the survey, a study was made of the manner in which other cities gathered and transmitted news dispatches to afford the same facilities for obtaining the news that newspaper advertisers desiring to avail themselves of such services were introduced in the house of representatives recently by Mr. Haney's office.

The estimates given are conservative and, we believe, do not represent the maximum totals of stores actually existing.

Questionnaires and interviews formed the major part of the work that has been accomplished in collecting data in the New York City. In other cities where surveys have been made, the reports have varied, no two ever having been noted to contain identical information, so Dr. Lewis H. Haney, director of the New York University research bureau, told The Fourth Estate this week.

NOTES FROM NEW YORK.

In lines operated through chain stores those under the classification were set apart from those operated independently. Mr. Haney said this feature had not been followed in preparing the route lists.

Advertisers will be supplied with information on the most reliable sources available, the character of the market and the consuming power of various sections of the city.

The estimates given are conservative and, we believe, do not represent the maximum totals of stores actually existing.

The figures given for any classification do not represent the total outlets for any class of products. The number of outlets in New York City or in the 50-mile zone for any individual retail outlet.

The elevations of Harry S. New, United States Senator from Indiana, and former newspaper publisher, to the position of Senator New was connected with the Indianapolis Journal as a reporter, editor and part owner from 1878 to 1903.

No. 1514 THE FOURTH ESTATE, which is published every Saturday at 282 West 69th St., New York City, was established March 5, 1879. The Yearly Subscription Price is Four Dollars, and the price of Single Copies is Ten Cents.

JOHN H. PERRY IS SOLE OWNER OF A.P.A.

BUILDS SMITH AND BRISBANE HOLDINGS, AND PLANS TO EXPAND — GRIFFIN, FINLEY AND RILEY LIEUTENANTS — DELUGE OF GOOD WILL MESSAGES.

John H. Perry, president of the American Press Association and head of the Perry–Lloyd Jones syndicate, has changed the interests of Courtland Smith and Arthur Brisbane in the A.P.A., and now sole owner of the papers. Expansion of the association and improvement in all departments is the announced program of Mr. Perry.

Officers of the company under the new ownership are John H. Perry, president and chairman of the board; William Griffin, formerly with the Newell–Emmett Company, vice-president; Mr. Perry's son, Emmett, secretary; and George A. Riley, treasurer.

Mr. Griffin has been vice-president, retires from the firm. Mr. Griffin's resignation as vice-president was tendered to the Newell–Emmett Company, and Mr. Finley continues as business manager in addition to his duties as treasurer, will serve in an executive capacity with the Perry–Lloyd Jones newspapers.

Mr. Perry has received a deluge of congratulations since his friends learned of his purchase of the Smith and Brisbane newspapers. One was a cablegram from Sir Thomas Lipton, which also contained a word of personal congratulation to Mr. Griffin upon his appointment as vice-president.

NEW POSTMASTER GENERAL A FORMER NEWSPAPER PUBLISHER.

The elevation of Harry S. New, United States Senator from Indiana, and former newspaper publisher, to the position of Senator New was connected with the Indianapolis Journal as a reporter, editor and part owner from 1878 to 1903.
Are you still setting your Display Composition with Foot-work?

Did you ever stop to think how much of the work in the ad-alley is foot-work? Footwork that doesn't show in the composing stick.

There's the foot-work of finding the case in the first place, or perhaps waiting until someone else has finished at that particular case. And then there's the foot-work (after the paper is printed) of finding the case again, waiting again, and standing there distributing.

In the old days of hand composition of straight matter it was at least possible for a man to sit and set at the same case for hours at a time. Even that economy is unknown to hand composition of display matter. There are dozens of reasons why you should set display on the LINOTYPE.

It is possible for a compositor to sit at a Text-and-Display LINOTYPE and set almost every line, news, heads and ads, in your entire paper. Are you as fully informed as you should be on the capabilities of LINOTYPE Models 21, 22 and 24?

Resolve to end foot composition in your plant at once. Make your plant an all-slug, non-distribution plant and watch your profits rise.

FOR SMALL DAILIES IN INLAND PRESS REPORT.

C. R. Butler of the Mankato, Minn., Daily Free Press, chairman of the cost committee of the Inland Daily Press Association, has reported to the association that, as a result of reports received over a period of three years, the committee has found that the income of an average country daily should divide itself as follows:

Advertising  ...  70.5
Circulation income ... 28.6
Miscellaneous—paper etc.  ....  9

On the average this would be expanded as follows:

Advertising ... 14.8
Circulation ... 6.9
Miscellaneous ... 11.2
Administration ... 18.5

Included in the mechanical department expense is the item of paper. The Administration includes executives' salaries, rent, depreciation and other similar items.

BUY'S INTO DAKOTA PAPER.
D. L. Keith of Hot Springs, S. D., has purchased an interest in the Sleepy Eye, Minn., Herald-Dispatch and has assumed charge of the editing and business departments.

What is considered the first step by William Randolph Hearst toward the acquisition of a chain of theaters throughout the country was the acquisition of the first-run motion pictures. Extensive interior and exterior remodeling is planned.

Mr. Hearst now controls approximately 25 feet of frontage on Columbus Circle proper, and considerably more on the neighboring streets. Directly in the rear of the theater he owns a large parcel, extending from No. 31 to No. 347 West Fifty-eighth street. The Hearst property is situated between the offices of The Fourth Estate.

The acquisition of the Columbus Circle playhouse is in line with Mr. Hearst's belief that the progress of commercial and amusement activity in New York is northward and that Columbus Circle will succeed Times Square as the center of business and entertainment.

The Public Service Commission, in recognition of the importance of Columbus Circle proper, is now considering plans for the enlargement of the subway-arterial system. Plans are under consideration also for the establishment of an express station there to accommodate the heavy and constant traffic.

The Hearst International Film Corporation, controlling the Famous Players-Lasky and the Universal Company (the latter has the news reel), transferred to the Goldwyn distributing organization.

INCOME AND OUTGO FIGURES FOR SMALL DAILIES IN INLAND PRESS.
One of the 1600

Sixteen hundred newsboys, each in business for himself, deliver The News daily into 65,000 Indianapolis homes. More than 95% of The News city circulation is delivered at home—its proportionate street sale is probably less than that of any other metropolitan newspaper.

It is in the home that sales are made. It is into the home, into the heart of the family circle, that The News carries its selling messages. It is circulation that counts.

POLITICAL SCRIBES FORM NEW STUNT CLUB.

INNER CIRCLE ORGANIZED TO SUPERSEDE THE AMEN CORNER AND CITY HALL REPORTERS—PLAY WRITTEN AND ACTED BY MEMBERS TO BE DINNER FEATURE.

The Inner Circle, a new organization of political writers who propose to carry on was founded and is now known to the public as the Gridiron Club, at Washington, which holds two such stunt dinners a year. For many years the Amen Corner in New York City served the purpose of holding the mirror up to local politicians. It was founded about twenty-five years ago, when Senator Thomas C. Platt was the biggest political figure in the state, and its name was taken from the Amen Corner, which he originated as a meeting place for politicians in the old Fifth Avenue Hotel. Such meetings were generally held on Sundays, hence the name. The subsequent dinner of that name, given by the men who covered politics for the local newspapers, became a feature of city life. The first dinners were held in the old Fifth Avenue Hotel, but for a dozen years or more they have been held at the Waldorf-Astoria. Last year the Amen Corner did not hold a stunt dinner and, while the organization is still alive, its former character has changed somewhat.

To continue the idea of this kind of entertainment the Inner Circle was formed. It is composed essentially of the men covering politics on the city newspapers, but is open to former political writers as associate members. The new organization is also an outgrowth of the Association of City Hall Reporters which began giving stunt dinners about eight years ago. Its function is to satirize the city administration, and the dinner has been useful in that it was decided to enlarge its sphere of activity and take in national and state politics as subjects for lampooning.

The president of the Inner Circle is Edward Stuts, Stuts, for many years the political editor of the New York Tribune. Fred H. Adams, former city hall representative of the City News, is secretary, and Clarence R. Warden of the Brooklyn Standard-Union, is treasurer. Harry D. Kingsbury, political writer on the New York Tribune, and president of the Association of City Hall Reporters, will preside jointly with Mr. Luther, this year, as the two organizations are merging. Hereafter the dinner will be given exclusively by the Inner Circle.

The performance will be a five act musical comedy, the Superinten dents, an allegorical determination of some of the city's friends, to make him the Democratic Presi dential candidate. The whole, of course, will be one of the most important features of the evening. The performance will be broadcasted.

FOURTH DISTRICT — A.A.C.W. MEETING PLACE CHOSEN.

Birmingham was selected by the Fourth District of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World for the next annual convention by approximately twenty delegates who attended a one-day conference in Atlanta this week. An executive committee was named that will in turn appoint a district secretary and designate the future district headquarters. These will be selected later.

Delegates who attended the conference were from many sections of the Fourth District, which includes the Southeastern states, Porto Rico and Cuba. The executive committee is composed of W. L. Wilhoit of Chattanooga, chairman; R. E. Hill, Nashville, Tenn.; Thad Holt, Birmingham, Ala., and C. M. Bass, Columbus, Ohio. The committee will devise means for cooperation and financing the field secretaries.

NAVY YARD STATION STOPS SHIP PRESS TRAFFIC.

The famous wireless station NAH at the Brooklyn Navy Yard ceased all broadcasting of press dispatches to ships at sea on February 20. This station was one of the pioneers in wireless press work and had been broadcasting it daily for several years.

The decision to stop further service of this character from NAH was reached with a view of eliminating all unnecessary traffic around New York Harbor, particularly because all ships can be reached by the more powerful naval stations.
A Help to the Advertising Department

The Linotype Typography Layout Kit

The Layout Kit contains 72 loose sheets of typographic material—borders, spots, initials and type matter of many faces and sizes—intended to be cut and pasted up into layouts that show just how the finished ad will look in type.

To the advertiser, the Layout Kit is both a convenience and a revelation as to the results that can be secured very economically with Linotype decorative material.

To the newspaper it is practical economy because it furnishes the advertiser a means of laying out his ads in a way that will be exact and readily understood.

There are several ways in which the Newspaper Advertising Department can make use of this idea.

It can use the kit itself to lay out special ads and design special typographic treatments for its customers.

It can purchase a number of Kits for distribution to its customers.

It can get up its own Layout Kit, showing just the material available in its own plant, and distribute that to its customers.

The Layout Kit is designed solely as a convenience for Linotype users and is sold at the nominal price of $1.00.

PRESS LEAGUE OF TEXAS WILL BE INCORPORATED.

NEWSLEER EXECUTIVES TO SEEK PROTECTION AGAINST UNJUST SUITS—CAMPAIGN PLANNED TO INCREASE MEMBERSHIP—TWELVE NEW PAPERS ADDED.

Incorporation of the Texas Daily Press League will be sought in order to protect against unjust suits that may be filed against newspapers under the Texas common carrier law, it was decided at a meeting of the executive committee at Dallas Friday of last week. Martin K. of the Corsicana Sun is president of the league.

The executive committee representing fifty of the daily newspapers in Texas believed that, in addition to protecting those that do not have more than 50,000 population, also will take immediate steps to further protect the members from violations of labor agreements with printers and pressmen’s unions, according to Dr. Peacock’s resolution adopted.

The committee, which also represents the advertising bureau of the league, will continue to meet at one o’clock, and after lunch, the advertising bureau committee went into executive session to study the possibility of a campaign to be conducted in Eastern states. The policy of the league’s bureau will place the advertising facilities of the league before manufacturers and wholesalers.

Twelve new papers have been added to the membership in the league since the last annual convention. These are the Marshall Messenger, Greenville News, Sweetwater Reporter, Greenville Herald, Mexia Daily News, Martin Democrat, Cisco Leader, Athens Daily News, Tyler Daily Democrat, Texan, Austin and Gainesville Register.

The resolution was adopted against lending any active co-operation to any national co-operation to any newspaper that does not include in its appropriation the daily newspaper in its town in which co-operation is sought. This means specifically that these newspapers will not co-operate with manufacturers and advertising agents devoting their entire appropriation to advertising by means, bill boards and motion picture theater and seeks to have the publisher’s tie in with the campaign at his own expense.

K. K. Hooper, Fred Horton and Odis Power were named on the committee which will investigate the advertising by manufacturers and wholesalers and motion picture theaters and seeks to have the publishers tie in with the campaign at his own expense.

A campaign to bring every daily in the state into the organization is to be launched shortly.

WASHINGTON SCRIBES GUESTS OF VIRGINIANS.

Taking advantage of an invitation extended them by the citizens of Alexandria, Va., a number of Washing- ton newspaper correspondents were guests of the city on Washington’s Birthday.

The press arrangements on the occasion were in charge of Parker R. Anderson, editor and manager of the Alexandria Gazette, who was assisted by M. T. Dwyer, an old newspaper man of Alexandria, who arranged luncheon and other refreshments at the Rannell Hotel.

This is the first time that the citizens of Alexandria have celebrated the natal day of the Father of His- tory in his native city in the real old-fashioned way for ten years, and the correspondents present thoroughly enjoyed the genuine Virginia hospitality bestowed upon them.

WICHITA NEWSPAPER PLANT DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Fires which started in the boiler room and swept through the building destroyed the present home of the Western Newspaper Union last week. The loss, which is covered by insurance, is placed by Manager Harry Albright at $20,000. The cause of the fire was not determined.

GEORGIA EDITORS IN TWO-DAY SESSION ARE GUESTS OF SAVANNAH DAILIES.

More than a hundred editors from every section of the state were present at the two-day meeting of the Georgia Press Association in Savannah February 23 and 24. President William G. Suttle of Savannah presided.

In addition to the discussions and addresses along lines of varied but intense interest to practical newspaper people, especially weekly newspaper folk, there were several items of unusual interest provided after the regular program had been made up. The session was featured by the presentation of a gavel of historic interest to the state—a gavel made from cherry and walnut from trees on the old capitol grounds in Mill- edgeville.

The gavel was prepared and presented by Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Moore, of the Millville Union Recorder. Mr. Moore was present as a youth at the first organization meeting of the association back in the eighteen nineties and his father was an officer in the early days of the organization. Mrs. Emily Woodward, a vice-president of the association, accepted the gavel for the association.

Edwin Markham, poet and critic, remained over in Savannah for a day reading selections from his works. Here he delivered a delightful, breezy talk, recounting his experiences as an editor in California.

Resolutions of confidence were authorized by unanimous resolution to be sent to Editor and Mrs. McDowell of Decatur, sympathizing with them in the death of their daughter. The entire party of visitors were guests of the Savannah newspapers at an oyster roast at the Isle of Hope.

CHINESE SLOW TO DEVELOP SOUND JOURNALISM.

SOME LEADING PUBLICATIONS HAVE MADE PROGRESS, BUT PROPAGANDA STILL IS RAMPANT — CIRCULATION OF NEWSPAPERS AVERAGES FROM 1,000 TO 4,000.

Modern journalism in China may be excused for its slow development, Professor Don D. Patterson of the school of journalism at the University of Missouri, in a recent number of the university bulletin entitled "The Journalism of China.

The majority of the 800 or more publications in the country that appear with a certain regularity were established after the uprising. Professor Patterson points out. Some of these journals, such as vernacular, or colloquial, newspapers, had their beginnings earlier than this but took advantage of the protection afforded by the international concessions of Shanghai and elsewhere to keep at a safe distance from imperial authority and from government officials.

The Chinese throne was a jealous one, a throne which guarded its prerogatives zealously except in the case of its own immediate representatives, and it is extremely severe in its punishment for offenses against the imperial dignity. It did not appeal particularly to the Chinese who were abroad, and it has no conception of the commercial administration of such an undertaking. There are notable exceptions, of course, to this generalization, but the majority of the publications of China are organs of personal opinion, whether this opinion be political or otherwise. Every organization, anywhere in the world since the necessity for airing its views and feelings has been realized, has taken only a few dollars or hours to embark on such a venture, a newspaper or journal of some type is founded.

In the city of Shanghai the labor organizations have the control of newspapers and it is said that in Canton, Ching Chiang, there is a well known group of mandarins, having a publication to give attention to their wants and interests. Peking is a city of such political organs, financed and supported by individual and party interests, which spring up and often vanish over night, and it is difficult to separate the newspapers of China from the kaleidoscopic political changes that are going on in expression of their political parties and their activities. The usual question in the mind of the Chinese newspaperman is who is paying for the publication of his newspaper. This information will generally be forthcoming when a leading question is asked. It is a fact that a majority of the Chinese newspapers, in one instance, a daily newspaper in one of the treaty ports announced its independence that "our subsidy from — having been cut off, we shall hereafter have be independent organ.

The leading publications of China, both vernacular newspapers, and exceptions, and it is these outstanding journals that are to be considered in this article, as representative of the Chinese newspapering and will be taken in the development of the journalism of the country.

In this connection, it may be noted that the vernacular newspapers in the Calcutta are often published and issued by natives in the interest of parties, individuals and groups outside of China. These publications are supported by nationals of other countries for the purpose of giving expression to their views in the language of the Chinese people.

China's vast wealth of natural and undeveloped resources, its commercial and industrial potentialities, and the general view that it will one day constitute a financial bonanza have led to the constant effort to get the ear of the Chinese and to tell him something that will be to the advantage of the seller of the idea. The Chinese newspapers are combating this tendency but circumstance at the moment are against any immediate success in this direction.

These two journals, the Shu Pao, and the Sin Wan Pao, may as examples of the highest type of Chinese journalism as expressed in the opinion and disseminating of news, although two others having smaller circulations, the Shih Pao and the Shang Pao, must also be mentioned because of their political attitude.

The largest circulation in China is claimed by the Sin Wan Pao of Shanghai, whose circulation is valued at from 45,000 to 60,000 daily. These circulation figures are the subject of much discussion, and no organization in China to guarantee any particular circulation must be taken at its face value.

The other leading publications of China, with their circulation figures, which in this tabulation are taken from the Directory of Newspapers in China, published by Carl Crow, Inc., Shanghai, are:

Yi Shih Pao, Tientsin... 20,000
Shang Pao, Shanghai... 15,000
Yi Shih Pao, Peking... 10,000
China Times, Shanghai... 10,000
Tom Shin, Shanghai... 10,000
Ta Kung Pao, Tientsin... 8,000
Wah See Pao, Hongkong... 7,000

DEAL PENDING FOR SALE OF LANCASTER DAILY TO PAUL BLOCK.

It is expected that the Lancaster, Pa., New Era will be taken over by Paul Block of New York and M. F. Hanson of Duluth, publishers of the Duluth Herald, within the coming week. It is stated that Mr. Block and Mr. Hanson will be associated with Mr. Block and Mr. Hanson in publishing the paper. Advertising agencies about $600,000, have been in progress for some time and, it is understood, that the transaction will be concluded with the purchase by Mr. Block and Mr. Hanson in January, the transfer to be effective February 1.

It is stated, however, that details of the transfer have not yet been fixed and that these have held up the actual formal consummation of the deal.

The Lancaster Examiner-New Era is one of the prominent newspapers of Pennsylvania and one of the two papers serving that territory.

PUBLISHERS OF WESTERN ONTARIO TO BECOME BIGGER.

At the annual meeting in Toronto of the Western Ontario Daily Publishers' Association, it was proposed to change the name of the organization to embrace all the small city dailies of Ontario.

The following were elected:

President, H. B. Burgoyne, St. Catherines; vice-president, W. B. Preston, Brantford; editor: R. W. C. Whipple & Edmondson, Niagara Falls; secretary-treasurer, T. H. Kay, Kitchener; executive committee, C. W. Arab, London; J. A. Wollop, Oshawa; R. J. Macpherson, St. Lawrence.

SENATE FIXES ONE PAGE AS A VITAL PUBLISHING PROBLEM.

NON-PARTISAN PAPER SOLD BY SHERIFF AS SEIZED.

The buildings and grounds of the Grand Forks, N. D., American, defunct Non-Partisan League publication, was bought by trustees for the creditors at a sheriff's sale for $25,827.17.

HEARST PAPERS' GROWTH MAKES ADS IMPROVE.

The tremendous growth of the newspapers, especially the Hearst papers in New York and Chicago, is creating a new and serious problem for advertising circles, declared Henry G. Mohelman, classified advertising manager of the Baltimore Advertising Club of Washington.

Dr. J. C. Patterson also cited the Chicago Herald-Examiner, which he said, "now has a circulation of more than 300,000 on Sundays, having gained 350,000 in four or five months."

This immense gain, he said, is creating a pressure which must bring about a change in the form of advertising. There is more competition for space, he said, which is causing an increase in rates and a decrease in display space. This is tending forward to more care a arrangement of advertising and, naturally, to increase in the quality of the advertising matter, he explained.

TWO MORE DETROIT AGENCIES BECOME ONE.

Whipple & Grant, and J. Scott Black, have combined their interests under the name of Whipple & Black, at 420 Free Press Building, Detroit.

Carr Whipple, who was eight years advertising manager of Crowley, Milmore Co., in the offices before forming the Whipple & Grant agency in 1920, is in charge of the retail division of the new company.

J. Scott Black, well-known in advertising and merchandising circles, who also recently increased his activities, assumes the management of the new company.

SCIENTIFIC SCOOP CLAIMED BY ALBANY DAILY.

The Albany Knickerbocker Press lays claim to being the first newspaper in the world to give news of the isolation of the influenza germ.

Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Institute for medical research, announced the discovery of the disease at the General Electric company's radio broadcasting station, and the Knickerbocker Press heralded the announcement next morning.

DRY UNITS' PRESS BUREAU AIDS AT SERVICE ONLY.

DIRECTOR CUNEO BELIEVES IT MAY BE FORERUNNER OF SIMILAR ORGANIZATIONS—HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS FROM THOSE CONCERNED WILL BE WELCOMED.

Recent comment on propaganda material being issued from official and unofficial quarters in Washington for and against prohibition, appearing readers of The Fourth Estate have brought forth a statement in explanation that representatives of the press are not without news value to one or more correspondents. It is a constant endeavor to avoid what is considered propaganda, although I am free to confess that the 'propaganda' may be attached to practically all information, given out by the Government.

"To what extent this applies to the statement of the narcotic and prohibition laws, I will not presume to express an opinion. However, there are readily to be seen the present time there is much public interest in news and information on account of the universal popular aroused.

At the same time, there is no other departmental clearing house of news in Washington, and while there has been publicity, a number of representatives of the press in reference to so-called propaganda, I have the experience from this with whom I come in contact that the Bureau I have established is proving of real service. In fact, from the comments I have heard, I am of the opinion that the disclosures to date have been that every Government department will have a similar bureau.

Mr. Cuneo gave the assurance that helpful suggestions from those concerned will ever be welcome."

GREATER DEVELOPMENT OF SERVICE IDEA STILL TO COME, SAYS EXPERT.

In describing the development of service and promotion work by newspapers within the last seven or eight years in a contribution to one of the bulletins of the School of Journalism at the University of Missouri, David R. Williams, manager of the publicity department of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, declares that the work of newspaper promotion has just reached the walking and talking stage.

"The remarkable development of modern newspaper-making—the service and promotion department—will be taken into the present time there were no service and promotion departments in all of New York City. There were few newspapers in Philadelphia that had established such departments and we all remember the important work that had then already been well established and was growing strong on the Chicago Tribune."

"The St. Louis Globe-Democrat was the pioneer in the work of creating a complete service and promotion department, to the best of my knowledge and belief, west of the Mississippi River. If wrong, we want to be corrected."

"It is generally agreed that Colonel Holland, of the well-known Holland & Company, was the father of the whole service and promotion proposition. His little journal, the Co-operator, has blazed the trail for the hundreds of service and merchandising organs which have followed."

"Today, with the exception of one newspaper in New York daily and possibly one in the other eastern cities, there are very few others in smaller cities, as well as in the United States, that do not some sort of service and promotion work."

"This development is due to the increasing realization that the public will pay for service and promotion work."

"The trend is, however, toward the better presentation of a newspaper. It is with a sense of the responsibility that comes with such development that the editors of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat approach the work."

"The St. Louis Globe-Democrat has always been on the alert for a new idea, and the writer of this article, in connection with the Promotion Department, has always been on the lookout for a new idea."

COMMENCEMENT OF EMPIRE STATE PRINTING SCHOOL HELD AT ITHACA.

Certificates of graduation were awarded to twelve young men at the first semi-annual commencement exercises of the Empire State Printing School at Ithaca, N. Y., on Thursday. Eleven of the students of the school completed the six months' course, ten in the linotype department and one in the department of typography.

One of the graduates, who was a journeyman printer when he came to school, took the special course in linotype operation and mechanism. The graduates come from many parts of New York state.

All of the schools in Ithaca, N. Y., were invited to attend the exercises, which were conducted by the Empire State Printing School, with a luncheon at the Ithaca Hotel at noon and a commencement address by the President of the School of Printing.

The commencement exercises brought to Ithaca many members of the New York State Publishers Association. This was the first class of students to be admitted to the school. The first class on the new basis will be admitted to the school on March 5. At that time eight new students will be taken. It is expected that a similar number will be admitted each month until the school reaches its capacity of fifty students.

OLD GLORY SURVIVED FIRE IN SEATTLE TIMES HOME TEN YEARS AGO.

Ten years ago the Seattle Times plant was destroyed in a four-story brick building at the northwest corner of Second avenue and Union street, at a loss of $150,000 to its owners. A photograph taken of that day, February 13, 1913, shows the American flag which floated through the conflagration, refusing to give up to sparks which showered it and flames which licked at it.

This Old Glory, which had commemorated Lincoln's Birthday day before (ten years ago), had been overlooked by the night janitor and that accounted for its presence on the building during the fire. The flag, now a treasured souvenir of a great disaster, is still in good condition.

EIGHTY-FIFTH BIRTHDAY.

M. P. Rindlaub, former editor of the Platteville, Wis., Witness and one of the pioneer editors of the state, celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday last week. Mr. Rindlaub has not lost his interest in the printing business and takes great pleasure in attending the meetings of the state press association, of which he is one of the last members. He has been instrumental in the renovation of the first capital building of the state and he believes that the building stands in the original ground.

REFERENDUM VOTE BY BUSINESS ON TRADE BODIES.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF U.S. SUBMITS FINDINGS MADE BY SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO MEMBERS FOR VOTE—CONTROL BY GOVERNMENT OPPOSED.

Trade associations are the subject of a referendum submitted this week by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to its membership. Organizations representing practically all industries and branches of commerce are represented in the chamber.

The activities of trade associations have been carefully gone into by a special committee appointed by the chamber a year ago. The activities of trade associations have been carefully gone into by a special committee appointed by the chamber a year ago. The chamber has now presented a report containing recommendations. The report and its recommendations are the basis of this referendum vote submitted to members for vote.

The propositions, upon which the chamber's membership will vote, are:

1. "Because of numerous useful and important functions of obvious propriety trade associations should exist for each important branch of industry and commerce.
2. "A trade association should have the power to represent the views of its members to the government in any transaction affecting them.
3. "Trade associations should be free from federal and state control.
4. "Statistics of capacity, production, stocks and sales should be collected by a trade association for its industry or branch of commerce.
5. "Any interpretation of statistics or other contracts involving the facilitation of concerted action on the part of members should be made by a trade association.
6. "Statistics of capacity, production, stocks and sales should be collected by a trade association for its industry or branch of commerce.
7. "Trade associations should continue free from special forms of government control.
8. "Statistics of capacity, production, stocks and sales should be collected by a trade association for its industry or branch of commerce.
9. "Any interpretation of statistics or other contracts involving the facilitation of concerted action on the part of members should be made by a trade association.

HE'S A DEALER IN POPULAR SENTIMENT.

"With public sentiment, nothing can fail; without it, nothing can succeed."—Abraham Lincoln. And by these words of the great American, we may see the truth of the matter. If public sentiment is with us, we may succeed, but if it is against us, we may fail. The only way to succeed is to have public sentiment on our side.

KANSAS PUBLISHER DEPLORES EDITORS WHO HAVE NO OPINIONS.

"Why don't the editors edit?" asks Charley Scott of the Iola, Kan., Register. "Every Kansas newspaper has about it a man who calls himself the editor, but yet he doesn't edit. The editor is not the one who writes the paper, but the one who tells the paper what to say. The editor is the one who tells the paper what to say, and the editor is the one who tells the paper what to say. The traveling exhibit illustrating the various processes of the graphic arts which is circulated by the division of graphic arts, United States National Museum, Washington, will be on exhibition at Farnsworth Museum, Wellesley College, Mass., from March 1 to April 15. The first two weeks in April it will be at the New Bedford, Mass., public library, and the last two weeks at Hartford, Ct., Art School. These exhibits are open to the public.
MRS. HARDING ENTERTAINS
WASHINGTON WOMEN WRITERS AT TEA.

The first afternoon tea at the White House since Mrs. Harding's illness was given to the women of the press and special women writers in Washington by Mrs. Harding last Saturday.

The reception, which was delightfully informal in character, was held in the second floor living room over the blue rooms, where a bright open fire was burning and the tea table was laid.

Promptly at 4:30, Mrs. Harding, accompanied with one of the uniformed aids, came in and greeted the writers, shaking hands all around before seating herself for one of the little intimate talks with her friends.

Mrs. Henry F. Fletcher, who is a White House guest, helped with the entertainment, and Miss Laura Harlan, Mrs. Harding's secretary, presided at the tea table. Mrs. Harding looked remarkably well, all being impressed with the evidences of her progress toward complete recovery of health.

Those present included Miss Ruth E. Jones, Washington Times; Miss Courtney Edwards, Washington Herald; Miss Edna V. Pickett, Washington Evening Star; Mrs. Hobart Brooks, Cincinnati Enquirer; Miss Katharine Brooks, Washington Evening Star.

Also Mrs. Leila Watson Bathon, Baltimore American; Mrs. Lucy E. Stelle, Philadelphia Inquirer; Mrs. Vytle Fuss Wilson, Harper's papers; Mrs. Daisy Fitzgerald Ayres, correspondent writer for Southern papers; Mrs. George F. Richards, writer for a number of New England papers; "Anabel Lee," Hearst papers; Edna Coleman, special writer of Sunday, Scientific American, Miss Edith Brown, San Francisco Chronicle; and Pelagia Breeckel, publicity writer.

Also Miss Mayne Ober Peak, Boston Post, and Constance Drexel, McClure Syndicate.

Miss Margaret Wade, Chicago Tribune; Mrs. Elizabeth Coats, New York Post; Mrs. W. K. Keyes, syndicate writer, and correspondent for the Spokane Spokesman-Examiner; Mrs. Poindexter, wife of Senator Poindexter, and a correspondent for the Spokane Spokesman-Review.

NUMBER OF USES FOR PAPER CONSTANTLY INCREASING.

There are many new uses to which paper is put at present. Some of these are described in the current issue of the Bulletin of the Paper and Pulp Association in a report of a speech made by R. E. Simonet, president of the Linen Mills Paper Manufacturing Company of New Hope, Pa.

"Some of the ordinary uses for paper for news print, books, magazines, and technical papers are all useful in manufacture of stationery and office supplies," said Mr. Simonet. "We find some special uses for mass production of tar paper, crepe paper for window dressings, and g BMC granite and hydraulic work in the shoe business for box toes, counters, heel boards, etc., in candy factories for imprinting trade marks on the bottom of boxes and for novelty trades for flowers, new wall papers and all of fancy goods.

"The Kiwanis Club meeting in Minneapolis when an address was being made on the subject of paper, one of the men present was attired in a black suit of clothes made from paper and cotton. His necktie was also of paper, as well as the soles of his shoes. Paper garments have been made of which are now reusable and washable. Paper also has been utilized for car wheels, calendar rolls, water pipes, electrical insulation, cables, and bags of every description for endless numbers of purposes, including suitcases and trunks.

"In fact, paper is now made into waterproof bags, greaseproof paper, and even proof articles, among which are spoons, dishes, cups and saucers, table covers and napkins. A great part of the celluloid business is based on the manufacture of that product from paper. Starting with baby carriages made from so-called Japanese fibre, which is nothing more or less than paper, and ending with the creeper paper-lined casket, the development cannot be separated from the use of paper and paper products."

PAPER TRADE FINDS RAW MATERIALS SCARCE.

Increasing difficulty in securing adequate supplies of raw materials is the keynote of the present situation in the paper industry, according to the monthly report of the American Paper Association. A good volume of orders for most grades is indicated, but it is pointed out, "There is growing shortage of all basic raw materials, from pulp up to the whole waste paper and to chemical supplies.

The Swedish pulp and paper mill strikers, it is feared, may become a complete lock-out, not only in the paper industry, but also in the great lumber industry. There is growing agreement that a labor shortage will become a domestic labor market, an increase running up to fifteen per cent has been granted in some mills.

MILLS BUSY WITH ORDERS.

Not one hour's time was lost because of lack of orders during January in the newsprint mills which report to the Federal Trade Commission, according to the report for the month. In all there was less than one thousand hours of lost time, save for the mills that were down the entire month. Five machines were down for repairs for a loss of 220 hours and nine machines lost 726 hours for other causes.

FIRE DESTROYS PRINT PAPER IN BROOKLYN EAGLE GARAGE.

A fire in the garage and storehouse of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle destroyed one truck and 200 rolls of print paper Monday. James Reilly, an employee, assisted the firemen in rolling eighteen trucks to safety. The fire did not reach the second and third floors, where the circulation department and the machine shop are located. The loss is estimated at several thousand dollars.

MOVE FOR BETTER MAILING HAS STARTED.

NEW RULES SUGGESTED FOR SECOND CLASS MATTER TO HELP DELIVERY — POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT JOINS CAMPAIGN; PATRONS WILL BENEFIT.

A campaign for better mailing of second-class matter with the object of eliminating poorly addressed publications from the mails is being conducted by the post office department. Publishers, the public, and the postal service, postal officials say, will profit mutually by the steps taken to reduce undeliverable second-class mail, which includes newspapers, magazines and other types of publications.

Postmasters are called upon to see that publishers fulfill the recommendations of the department wherever possible. Publishers, themselves, are strongly advised about features of their mailing practices, which if adhered to, postoffice experts declare, will insure fewer losses of newspapers and magazines to subscribers.

The recommendations made are:

- Unusually small publications should be inclosed in envelopes.
- Publications mailed in single wrappers should be flat, not rolled.
- Publications should be folded to size not larger than nine by twelve inches if possible.
- Addresses should be in ten point type or larger or in a legible hand.
- Old newspapers should not be used as wrappers.
- Ink should be black or of strongly contrasting color and envelopes wrappers and label paper should be white or of very light tint.
- Separation of copies to rural and to city subscribers will facilitate distribution.
- Individual copies unfolded and unwrapped should have addresses in such a manner that the address appears in the upper corner near the bound edge when a copy is grasped by the bound edge.
- Notice of entry of publication as second class should appear on all wrappers and envelopes.
- Care should be taken about paste on labels. Too little permits the label to fall off and too much makes the publications stick and destroy the legibility of the address.

JOURNALISM CLUB FORMED BY COLLEGE WOMEN.

The honorary journalistic club known as the Matrix, of Baylor College for Women at Belton, Texas, recently elected fifteen students to membership. Before being initiated, the students must take a grade of B in two courses in journalism. Besides taking work in journalism, Miss Mildred Beavers, president of the organization, and Miss Grace Blair, secretary, are reporters on the United States, the college newspaper, and have won distinction in several journalism contests conducted at Baylor.

L. H. MINER SELLS TO PARTNERS IN SPRINGFIELD.

S. LEIGH CALL AND WILLIAM H. McCONNELL ACQUIRE VETERAN EDITOR'S INTEREST IN ILLINOIS PAPER AND WILL CONTINUE BUSINESS IN THEIR OWN NAMES.

Lewis H. Miner has disposed of his interest in the Springfield Illinois State Journal to his partners, S. Leigh Call and William H. McConnell, who will continue the business in their own names. Messrs. Call and McConnell had been with Mr. Miner for a number of years, first as his employees and later as partners. They are sole owners of the property.

Mr. Miner first acquired ownership in the State Journal over forty years ago. At that time it was a four-page paper, published six times a week. From this modest dimension he has seen it grow and develop into one of the largest newspapers in Illinois outside of Chicago, and one of the most influential in the Mississippi Valley.

The paper started as the Sangamo Journal on November 10, 1831, with Simeon and Jotham Francis as its editors and publishers. The population of Springfield at that time was about 600. It was a six-column folio and was full of news, but the very latest. The Washington and New York was from two to three weeks old, that from St. Louis was four days old, and the latest from England was two months old. Yet it was in truth "the latest news" and was as acceptable and as keenly relished by the readers of that day as reports served by newspapers of today in relation to the occurrences of the previous hours in all parts of the world.

The State Journal first appeared as a daily in 1848, more than seventy-two years ago, and has since been published continuously. The first daily issue contained twelve columns, twelve inches long, and printed the first telegraphic dispatch received directly by the press in Springfield. While at the time the establishment of the daily seemed an extremely hazardous undertaking, the paper met with immediate success and when but twelve days old was enlarged to a paper of sixteen columns and larger size.

The State Journal was a charter member of the Western Associated Press, organized at Detroit, and the Northwestern Associated Press, subsequently organized at Chicago. It is a charter member of the Associated Press. Charles H. Eddy Company represents the State Journal.

SCRIBES ATTEND RECEPTION FOR LEGION HEAD.

Washington correspondents were among the invited guests at the reception tendered Alvin Owsley, national commander of the American Legion, given by the National Press Club Post No. 20, American Legion, at the National Press Club last Thursday. Colonel Edward B. Clark, commander of the National Press Club Post, presided.

Among the guests were the thirty-five legionnaires in the lower house and senate; the District of Columbia members of the Legion, and members of congressional committees which handle legislation affecting disabled veterans of the World War.

REPRODUCING IN WOOD NOW A LOST ART.

Seattle Times rehearse some of the highlights of the engraving trade of the days gone by — not all of Milwaukee's fame was from beverage.

Wood engraving is fast becoming a lost art, according to an article which appeared in the Seattle Times. Seattle, Wash., artists whose skillful hand and accurate eye traced lines on apple wood and boxwood and commonly bought them from artists who could be used for reproduction in newspapers and magazines are disappearing.

Milwaukee, which was once the center of this branch of the arts in the United States, has but few of them left. Among those few are Carl Marr, president of the Madison Engraving Company; Marr & Richards, both members of this firm being engravers whose work was in demand throughout the country; and Billy Jursa. Milwaukee was also home of John Marr, father of Carl Marr, who was an artist of note in his time.

The real art of engraving has been supplanted by the half-tone process. Today the drawing or painting is made with pen and ink, brush or airbrush and reproduced by a mechanical process on metal, with the image or copy raised, from which it is printed to the paper. The gravure method is used, but this is a slow process and is subject to atmospheric conditions.

The “Biblia Pauperum” or “Bible of the Poor,” was probably the first work of any pretensions issued from wooden blocks and was printed in 1450. It contains thirty-eight wood cuts of New Testament scenes. The work on these was crude but realistic, little being left to the imagination as little black and white devils are as in one representing casting the evil out of a man. The evil devils, little black and white devils are seen issuing from the mouths of those unfortunate persons who were possessed of evil spirits.

The Bible was the first to be illustrated as much by hand as by press. It was accessible only to the rich. The original copy is in the British museum. However, King of Milwaukee possessed of one of 372 copies that were made and distributed to collectors throughout the world. But a few of these reached America.

The history of wood engraving is a long one, dating back to the fourteenth century. The oldest engraving of record was made for the representation of St. Christopher, made in 1445. Later, M. Deloborde, a French writer, found two remarkably clear prints on manuscript done in 1406.

Undoubtedly these are the first wood engravings ever made.

The art is supposed to have originated in Germany, one of the first to gain notice being a man by the name of Pistor. Another German artist, Duerer, employed numerous artists to cut his drawings and several of his works are still in existence. England produced but two engravers of Vertue and Rembrandt, 1700, “Blind Man’s Buff.” “Rent Day” and the “Village Politicians” were done by Rambach after the paintings had attracted a greater deal of attention in the book of Italy who took his inspirations from the works of Titian, ranked high as a plate engraver.

In America the art was commercialized and there are no names that stand out higher than those who practiced the art in Milwaukee. Several fine blocks made here were issued in the Aldene, a noted art magazine, in 1875. Wood engraving as an art has come and gone. Those in possession of representative prints from celebrated blocks will, sometime in the future, have cause to congratulate themselves on the possession of what Du Fresney says is “a sane example of the combination of art and mechanical skill.”

Graham appeals for news reciprocity between Canada and the United States was made by the Honorable George Graham at the dinner closed the annual meeting of the Audit Bureau of Circulation at Montreal. Comparing the space accorded by newspapers of one country to the news of the other, Mr. Graham stated that on a certain day Washington had an important Canadian paper carried forty-two columns of American news, a New York paper carried only six columns.

Continuing, he said: “We have in Canada a territory equal to that of the United States. You have one hundred million people; we have only nine. We need more people to populate this country and develop it and there is no better place under the sun for the United States to turn its wealth than to Canada.

“But the people of the United States know very little about us, and it is the fault of their press. The more we know about each other; the better we like each other. The Canadian press is doing its utmost to spread the news of the United States and it is time the people of the United States reciprocated.”

O. C. Harr, president of the association, and John Murray Gibson, the chairman, who is president of the Canadian Authors’ Association, presided at the meeting.

HOTEL PUBLICITY AND THE DAILY NEWSPAPER.

SATISFYING REPORTERS' URGE FOR INFORMATION PLAYS LARGE PART IN FUNCTION OF PUBLICITY MANAGER — AND THIS HOTEL ISSUES A DAILY PAPER OF ITS OWN.

The scope of the duties of the editor of a daily hotel newspaper was described to members of the Women's Press Club of New York by Mrs. Grace Craff Oakley, editor of the Hotel Pennsylvania Register, at a meeting of the organization at the Waldorf Astoria, last Saturday. The contacts that the hotel editor has with reporters for the metropolitan daily, and how the hotel paper itself gathers news were interestingly described by Mrs. Oakley.

Mrs. Oakley has earned the distinction of interviewing 1,000 persons from all corners of the globe each year since she became editor of the hotel daily. In interviews with foreign guests, the services of the hotel's interpreters are brought into use.

When the city newspapers wish cooperation of the hotel staff reporters they turn to the service of the city reporters reciprocate. Mrs. Oakley said, by各方 notes on banquets, conventions, etc., for which the hotel reporters would otherwise have to do. The office of the Register is open at all times to newspaper men and while covering events at the hotel, a room is available for the use of the outside reporters.

The flexibility of the editor's job was explained by Mrs. Oakley, when she said: "When a Mrs. Raizen dissolves into hysteria in one of the upstairs rooms, we do not rush to get the news and disseminate it. Indeed, I am sorrowful and I spend much time on the telephone getting the story in a clear and light manner only in that firm city editors of the New York newspapers the idea that Mrs. Raizen would be so person any how, that her tears are a mere drop in the bucket of the world's grief. In the same way, the editor should monitor only a small spot on the hotel panorama if they should trouble the paper at all."

"Now, this is not so difficult an idea to those who are forced to publish newspapers like the Times and the Globe, but there are some papers in New York who are very unresponsive to my gentle suggestions. Indeed, there is one large paper an employe of which either failed to display a sense of humor. The occasion was one in which a person appeared at the telephone ringing in my room, it takes only an instant to switch on the light and grab the telephone. I don't have to get out of bed to do either. I have right in hand for it is a reporter for the daily papers or the City News or Associated Press."

"Well, Oakley, she says, 'a Minor whom we have to understand is very important, I have the Chicago evening edition of Chicago, Ohio or your hotel eight o'clock tonight. Did you get it?' "I didn't. I can't say I am interested in the news as possible and say, 'What can I do for you?' "Chesapeake has wired us to ask for information as to what would like to run something on our paper. We understand he is most prominent. Can't you get me something about him?"

"Name, place, time and date we want to, but because the newspaper people always help us, and when they take speeches in the hotel they give us the data and in every way cooperate with us as best they can, and because newspaper men and women on the whole are the most delightful people of the world, we promptly get the details. Arising quickly I give my stockings a college roll, pin them down on a few seconds, put my fur coat on to cover their disappearances, quickly take the back service elevator down to the hospital. Very shortly I am in the room. It was not an illustrated day. I have a number of friends, the reporters, and once more retire to capture a few winks of news.

The Register has a circulation of 5,000 and in addition to its distribution to the rooms of each guest, copies are sent to the newspapers in the city where members of guests from that place.

Mrs. Oakley was formerly on the National Register and for the past few years was engaged in publicity work before she assumed the duties of editor and publicity manager for the Hotel Pennsylvania.

WASHINGTON STATE PAPER IN FIFTY-FIFTH YEAR.

The Walla Walla Union, which is celebrating its fifty-fourth anniversary, is one of the oldest newspapers in the United States. The Union was founded in November 1861. The Union, however, has continued under the original name and has remained Republican in politics from its inception.

H. M. Judson was the first editor, though the paper was under the control of a general committee composed of P. B. Johnson, E. C. Ross, and J. D. Cook. R. M. Smith and E. L. Heriff became the owners soon after the paper was started and retained their interests and editorship.

E. C. Ross succeeded Mr. Judson as editor, which position he held for six or seven years. In 1872 Captain Johnson became editor. A few years later Captain Johnson purchased out of the interest of his partners and became sole owner and proprietor.

Berton La Duke and L. C. McLean assumed the editorship in 1911, and John H. McDonald acquired part ownership and later became sole owner and proprietor. Mr. La Duke was managing editor of the paper from 1872 to 1920. In 1920, after the death of ill health, he gave up active newspaper work but still retains interest in the Union.

HOW ONE SURVEY SERVES DOZEN PAPERS.

manufacturer depends upon the kinds of stores through which the product can be distributed. For instance, candy specialty may secure distribution through both chain and independent grocery stores, drug, cigar, confectionery and department stores. On the other hand, a manufacturer of wheel flour may be limited to grocery and department stores.

Although the bureau estimate women's wear stores in New York City is 1,090, a certain manufacturer of women's wear has 1,968 outlets in New York City proper.

The bureau estimate of men's wear stores in New York City is 1,175; but a manufacturer of dress accessories for men has 4,500 outlets in New York City. The bureau estimate of cigar stores, chain and independent, in New York City is 3,113; but a certain tobacco jobber, distributing also in the stand in office building business, has a subsidiary distributed and railroad stations and in other places, has 28,000 outlets.

The nature, quality, usage and price of the product limit or increase the total number of its available outlets. A product such as bulk soda crackers may be distributed in every store in the country, but a delicacy such as canned lobster is a Northern product confined in its distribution to a limited number of food stores in the very best class districts.

The number of outlets obtainable for most products is very large. The manufacture of a certain commodity may make necessary a large number of outlets within a comparatively small area. This condition is afforded by rapid and efficient sales work and shipping. New York City has absorbed one-seventh of the population of the United States within its 326.9 square miles, and the needs and wants and purchasing power of the population in such a compact area necessarily make for an intregrated and even economical distribution. The population of New York is an additional big, compact regional market.

In this market zone there are nearly nine million consumers which is estimated to be a greater population than the combined city populations of Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia, Cleveland, St. Louis, Boston and Baltimore.

The unbiased report of the research bureau is handled under the personal direction of Dr. Haney and his staff (Continued on Twenty-ninth Page)

In order that Indianapolis Star district managers may have a broader understanding of the field in which they work and that they may become better informed regarding the inner workings of the various departments of a metropolitan newspaper, Walter A. Whyte, city circulation manager, has arranged for a series of bi-monthly dinners at which time representatives of the various departments of the Star will talk on the work of their particular department.

The members of the city district managers staff who attended the first of this series was well repaid by the splendid educational value given by Mr. Padgett, night editor of the Star, on the workings of the editorial department.

"The present difficulties threatening the world must be settled by an overwhelming public opinion. The newspapers which create and guide this majestic force, occupy one great editorial room with adjoining desks by reason of the present marvelous methods of communication. They must create public opinion, acting and reacting without regard to international boundaries. I believe that with modern methods of communication, the wireless and the radio, the future tranquility of the world reposes, and safely so, among the editors who guide public opinion. In the editorial room of the English-speaking world quibbling and hair splitting must be eradicated."

Southern Editor Hits "Space Grafters."

OF SO VITAL CONCERN TO NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS EVERYTHING POSSIBLE SHOULD BE DONE TO STAMP IT OUT—KILL IT AS ONE WOULD KILL RATTLESNAKE.

The modern press agent was taken to task by M. L. Fleetwood, president and general manager of the Cartersville, Ga., Tribune-News, in an address before the executive committee of the Georgia Press Association at Savannah last Saturday. Terming the press agent as a "space-grafters," Mr. Fleetwood chose as his subject "The Press Agent and How to Get Rid of Him." He proposed to regulate the press agent to the business office of the newspaper instead of the editorial department.

The press agent is not covered to Georgia alone, said Mr. Fleetwood, "they are in high places and low places," and "are interested in being able to realize how many dollars they are losing simply because they let the press agent get away with under their eyes the one and only thing that they care about, that is the paid advertising space in the newspapers."

It is recommended that editors not run the "space-grafting" matter as the foremost means for overcoming him for the good of the newspapers themselves.

TRADE SURVEY IN EFFECTIVE BUT SIMPLE FORM.

Finding where and how the consumer supplies his needs as it is done by Los Angeles Examiner—Twenty distinct trading zones within city.

As one of the first steps in organizing the merchandise service department, the Los Angeles Examiner divided the city into zones, or trading districts, each representing a certain class of trade. This zoning plan makes of Los Angeles twenty individual communities, thus simplifying and systematizing the activities of the merchandising plan and contributing to complete and thorough coverage of the city in all campaigns.

Field men are regularly assigned to cover each of these zones, or trading districts. In making a trade survey, each field man will call on a given number of the representative dealers in each of his trading districts. Great care is exercised in selecting these dealers. They are the leading merchants in their respective zones, dealers whose business methods and personal integrity warrant their being classified as representative of their particular section of the city.

As the reports secured from the dealers come in they are carefully examined and tabulated. In a survey on hair tonics, for example, the field men will call on 100 representative dealers in all sections of the city—an average of five in each of the twenty districts.

It may be found, for example, when the reports are all in, that the leading brand was carried in stock by 98% of the 100; the second brand by 75% and so on. Perhaps, according to dealer reports, the brand with the largest distribution was the best seller in 80 of the stores covered (although this does not necessarily follow); the second seller in 16 and the third seller in 6 and the fourth in 3 and so on.

Then comes the question of popular sizes, prices, and the individual seller's estimate of the probability of introducing a new brand. All of this information is tabulated. In no case is the dealer's name connected with the completed report.

Similar to the method of tabulating election returns, the source of the information is withheld. The final results show the ruling opinion of the majority. The individual questionnaires filled out by the dealers are kept in a vault and are not shown to anyone except with the dealer's express permission.

Thus it is possible to show the manufacturer what possibilities he has of establishing a new brand in this section; or to discover for him weak points in his distribution; or retarded sales in the case where distribution is good but selling slow. Thus it is possible to help the dealer by getting the manufacturer to back his new product with adequate advertising; or to get advertising behind the slow-sellers which are eating up the dealer's profits as they gather dust on his shelves.

PUBLICITY GRAFTERS FAIL TO TAKE GOOD HINT.

There were six or seven who appeared before the editorial association last week, says the Dassel, Minn. Dispatch all begging for publicity, "for this or that pet scheme." This just after all free publicity schemes had been severely dealt with by preceding speakers. It seems hard to penetrate the thick hides of a lot of these free publicity sharks.

ADVERTISED GOODS CREATE SATISFIED CUSTOMERS.

UNADVERTISED GOODS ARE A MENACE, THEY WASTE YOUR TIME; THEY CURTAIL YOUR PROFITS; THEY JEOPARDIZE YOUR REPUTATION, SAYS LOS ANGELES WRITER.

There are two ways for the retail dealer to sell merchandise, says the Southwestern Grocer, published by the Los Angeles Examiner. The first of these methods is by word of mouth, demonstration, intensive personal effort.

The second is by distribution of those nationally-known brands of recognized merit for which a demand is ready-created; those goods which have been tried and proven by the consumer; those things which have established the reputation of service, quality, reliability, uniformity; those things which sell themselves—you retailers call them repeaters.

The inference is obvious. You recognize them as repeaters—you have so designated them. For what reason? Simply because day in and day out, month after month, year after year, customers come to your store and say, "We want the old friend." You know the names, as familiarly as an old friend.

How many dealers realize the illimitable reward of selling such merchandise? First and foremost comes monetary profit. Go over in your mind the new lines of nationally known merchandise on your shelves; compare their sales with sales of unknown competitive lines which may have In volume of sales per month they bring you ten times as much income.

Think again—if some morning you were to open up the store and decide to discard your entire stock of nationally-known merchandise—throw it all out! What kind of a store would you have? What kind of a business could you expect to do?

Would you for a moment dream of attempting to do business on such a basis? In addition to the monetary profit on each sale, there is of course the prestige for you; it makes satisfied permanent customers.

BROAD VIEW IN ADVERTISING COURSES.

SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM IN OKLAHOMA TEACHES ITS STUDENTS EVERY PHASE OF PROFESSION—FORECAST ATTEMPTED OF WHAT THE FUTURE WILL BE.

To give a broad general view of the whole field is the plan on which the advertising courses at the Oklahoma school of journalism are built, according to Arthur Hall, professor of advertising, who instructing at the school. In the past, men who learned advertising have been self taught. They have learned only the phase in which they grew up and gained their experience. They do not, as a rule, recognize the value of the other forms of advertising. Agency men think in terms of national advertising; newspaper men think in terms of their medium; printers can see only direct advertising; and so on. Advantages lie in a little like Lincoln's definition: All of it is good some of the time, some of it is good all of the time, but all of it is not good at all times or for all lines of business.

DIPLOMAT ADDRESSES NEW YORK AD MEN.

Luigi Criscuolo, plenipotentiary delegate of Montenegro, with rank of minister, and a writer on Italian-American economic affairs, and political subjects, spoke at the weekly luncheon this week of the Advertising Club of New York, on "What is the Situation Facing the New Nations of Europe." Mr. Criscuolo is a financial writer, publisher and diplomat. He was former financial editor of the New York Independent and has served as secretary to the United States Railroad Administration advisory committee on command. He was chairman of the Italian drive of the Liberty loan committee for 1917.

How much are permanent customers worth to you?

What percentage of your merchandise can you honestly list among the repeaters? How much of it do you have to spend on prize and effort in selling—while always at the back of your mind is an unexpressed fear of your competing with other mediums for the same thing; it may not be a measure up to his high expectations and your optimistic predictions.

Unadvertised goods are a menace; they steal your time; they curtail your profits; they jeopardize your reputation, says Los Angeles writer.

How many dealers realize the illimitable reward of selling such merchandise? First and foremost comes monetary profit. Go over in your mind the new lines of nationally known merchandise on your shelves; compare their sales with sales of unknown competitive lines which may have.

REGENERATION OF MR. BUSYMAN BY ADVERTISING.

HEAD OF JOURNALISM SCHOOL TELLS KANSANS HOW A SMALL TOWN RETAILER IMPROVED HIS BUSINESS BY STUDYING THE ART OF ADVERTISING.

Professor L. N. Flint, head of the department of journalism at the University of Kansas, addressed one session of the merchants' short course held last week in Hutchinson, Kan. Professor Flint spoke about "Mr. Busy Man and his local ad." He told of the small town retailer writing an advertisement against which all the newspapers had made several calls upon him.

"This is what he wrote," Professor Flint said:

"We carry the best goods in the market and afford the widest selection in all our lines. People who shop with us will find that our prices are the lowest. Satisfaction or your money back. James Busyman."

"He had succeeded fairly well in business but how much further along he might have been if he had known about advertising. He saw the important relations between his goods and the public which the great merchants of the country are using to build up their patronage.

"He asked himself, since this was a genuine heart searching session he was having with himself, what he had ever done toward finding out the principles of successful advertising and the possibilities that lie in the skillful handling of type and borders and cuts? How could he expect to do a thing well when he had never really worked at it or sought help in doing it? He regarded it as a necessity and not at all as the most important or interesting as well as the most valuable point of a man's business.

"Then began the advertising regeneration of James Busyman."

Professor Flint then told how he had written friends for books and how he had secured help from all sides.

WHY WE NEED NEWSPAPERS.

What would one do if there were no newspapers? I suppose one would get accustomed to it in time, but what a world it would be for most of us. How gloomy, how narrow, petty and parochial we would become. The newspaper revival is a reality.

It enlarges our horizons and stimulates our curiosity. It enables the ordinary man to keep his finger on the pulses of the world and to take part in its affairs.

There is not a department of life from which it does not enter, and whatever a man's calling or interests, the daily paper is part of his indispensable outfit. It is the most intimate friend of the busy man, the laborer, the farmer, the merchant, the professional man, the student, the lawyer, the doctor. It speaks to him of a world in which life would be unendurable. What were the dramatics of life? And so Mr. Busyman, shot and mortally wounded Lucy in her address contributed to a tale of unrequited love, murder, and suicide? Right here the Drifter proposes to give a little lesson in reporting. From Liberia he has received the following letter from the director of the news wires, city editors, copy men, and other destroyers of good taste and pertinence, something to do well with. With the simple beauty of language the account begins:

"On the evening of the 4th of September—Monrovia was alarmed at the notice that Faulkner's Hotel is on fire—crowds rushed to the scene but as there were no hopes of saving the hotel it was nothing of an unflinching nature in the cellar. That night Faulkner received a letter from Mr. Copeland, the manager, in which he stated that the hotel was safe and the mail on its way to London.

"Mr. Faulkner, the owner of the Hotel was not on the scene but he was away at the Bar Row where he was engaged in a debate with Mr. Batchelor. He came to the scene and attempted to fly into the flames. Mr. Batchelor stood on the platform and by God I am going to save him. This is a moral lesson to the全国人民. The Spanish Consulate also caught fire and burned to the ground. The English Consulate also caught fire and burned to the ground.

GALVESTON ADVERTISED AS WINTER RESORT IN NORTH.

Evidence that the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe Railway, as a part of the far-flung Santa Fe system, is boosting Galveston as a winter resort, is contained in an advertisement appearing in the newspapers. The advertisement is a reproduction of publicity which is appearing, and has appeared, in newspapers of numerous Northern and Western cities."

Mr. Saks was of the opinion that merchants generally are likely to recognize the principle for advertising according to value received.

HOW ONE SURVEY SERVES DOZEN PAPERS.

Every two weeks, representatives from the newspapers and from the bureau office meet at luncheon and go over the work that has been accomplished and discuss new angles to the problems. Suggestions are made and definite plans set toward taking up new work. Reports are made and completed data is accepted for distribution as the newspapers see fit. The newspapers use the completed reports in the manner for which they were designed.

The scope of the survey has been widened in one respect since first plans were made when the bureau began its work a year ago. The publishers decided upon route lists and Colonel Crall, who, it was said had been apparently in excellent health on the first few holes, made a fine brassie shot from the sixth hole, the ball landing on the green, when he fell to the ground and expired. He was born in Frederick, Maryland in 1890. Colonel Crall at once entered the advertising business founded by his father. He worked his way up to the presidency twelve years ago and became one of the best-known advertising men of the country. The Crall Company represents the Cincinnati Times-Stars in the Western field.

Colonel Crall commanded the 7th Regiment, New York Guard while the 107th Infantry was overseas, resigning the colonelcy shortly after the 107th Infantry returned from France. He enlisted in the 7th Regiment six months after his graduation from Yale. His skill as a marksman won his highest immediate notice. He was a member of the regimental team from 1910 to 1915, of the regimental team from 1893 to 1914 and of the state team in 1907, 1908 and 1909. His skill played a large part in the victory of the 7th Regiment team in the international match with the Queen's Westminster Volunteers.

In his thirty years with the regiment, Colonel Crall rose from private to lance corporal, corporal, sergeant, first lieutenant and captain and attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel October 11, 1917, his final promotion coming a year later.

DAUGHTERS OF SOUTHERN EDITOR ARE BURNED TO DEATH.

Selling the Investor, too.

LEADING financial and investment houses in the United States now realize that to maintain the market for investment securities and provide for the success of future issues it is essential to promote the absorption of securities by “ultimate consumers”—individual investors.

This is most efficiently and economically done by advertising in those mediums that most influentially reach the greatest consumer markets. In Chicago the medium is The Chicago Daily News,* which by reason of its large home circulation and influence in the “family councils” of financially competent Chicagoans most completely and effectively reaches the great outstanding consumer market in its territory.

Realizing this, the following representative financial houses have each placed in The Chicago Daily News, since January 1, 1923, more than 1,000 lines of financial display advertising.

NEW LEGAL MONSTROSITY A BLOW AT FREE SPEECH.

BILL BEFORE NEW YORK ASSEMBLY INCLUSIVE ENOUGH TO BRING PRESS ASSOCIATIONS UNDER REGULATORY AUTHORITY OF PROPOSED TRADE COMMISSION.

Only a master craftsman such as Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the Lockwood joint committee on housing of the New York legislature, could have included within ten loosely printed pages enough legal abracadabra to constitute a bill as mystifying as the proposed state trade commission for the printing industry is likely to be. Some idea of the inclusiveness of the regulatory and restrictive power over anything even remotely resembling an association which the measure would vest in the proposed commission may be gleaned from the indubitable fact that newsgathering organizations like the Associated Press, the I.N.S., the New York City News Association, and the United Press would be subject to its limitations and penalties.

Exercising his legal prerogatives, Mr. Untermyer may make something of this day going Noah Webster one better and inserting in the bill his own definition of the word "association," expanded as to apply almost invariably to any two human beings who happen to be in business and who find themselves in agreement on any subject that the proposed trade commission mightn't like. "Association," Mr. Untermyer makes plain, includes everything that tends to promote intercourse between business competitors, from one or more officers, directors or agents of such corporations up to, presumably, interlocking directorates and conspiracies to agree upon a gold standard par. In order not to make it too hard, however, Mr. Undermyer has provided that such "associations" as the proposed commission may deem worthy of a license can continue to exist, if they get the license.

But the problem of red tape is no problem for the newspapers. Under the good faith thereof and the deputees and such officers or employes as may be so delegated shall also be allowed free access to all places of business, buildings, carriages, via or vessels used in the production, manufacture, storage, sale, transportation, or distribution of any articles or commodities in common use. And "free access to all places of business or to which may be deemed advisable for the purpose of exercising any authority conferred by this chapter on the department."

The contention that news is not an "article or commodity in common use" does not hold in the face of Mr. Untermyer's thoughtfully inserted definition of the term. In Article 1. Paragraph 4, he provides that the term "news" includes "every object that may be made the subject of purchase, sale, barter, delivery, hiring, purchase, contract, other than where labor is the sole constituent, whether or not labor be the majority or minor factor in the cost or value of such article or commodity."

The right of access and the right to "publish and disclose" form another of the bill's definitions. It goes like this: "Duly delegated" employees of the commission "shall have full access to and the right to inspect and take copies of all books of account, documents, correspondence and other papers relating to the business and affairs of all such corporations," and "free access to all places of business, buildings, carriages, cars or vessels used in the production."

HAWAIIAN PAPERS COMBINED IN NEW DAILY.

HILO TRIBUNE AND HERALD PASS INTO CONTROL OF HONOLULU STAR-BULLETIN—NOW PUBLISHED EVERY AFTERNOON WITH SUNDAY MORNING EDITION.

The Hilo, Hawaii, Tribune and the Daily Post-Herald have passed into the hands of a group of Hilo and Honolulu men, and are being issued as one daily under the name of the Hilo Tribune-Herald.

The Honolulu interest in the new daily represents the ownership of the Honolulu Star-Bulletin, of which Governor W. R. Farrington was formerly publisher. Mr. Harry S. Hayward, general business manager, and Riley H. Allen, editor of the Star-Bulletin, closed negotiations for the purchase of the papers recently, plans for which have been under way for several weeks. The Star-Bulletin ownership is represented as majority stockholders in the new corporation.

The Tribune-Herald is an afternoon daily with a Sunday morning edition. The Tribune was, before the merger, a morning daily, published every day with the exception of Monday and the Post-Herald an afternoon daily, with no Sunday issue.

The reporting and editorial staffs of the two present newspapers have been combined. Charles Eugene Banks, a veteran newspaper man, has been made editor of the Tribune-Herald. Mr. Frank L. Cady is business manager. The new paper is being published from the present plant of the Star-Bulletin.

Riley H. Allen, editor of the Star-Bulletin, remained at Hilo for several days during which plans were perfected for the merging of the physics in the new and for the various features of the new daily.

REVILLE HONORED BY CIRCULATION CONVENTION.

INTERSTATE BODY SELECTS BALTIMORE MAN AS ITS PRESIDENT—GOV. RITCHIE ADDRESSES GATHERING—ATLANTIC CITY CHOSEN FOR NEXT MEETING.

Charles O. Reville of the Baltimore Sun was elected president of the Interstate Circulation Managers' Association at the semi-annual meeting of the organization held at the Philadelphia Hotel, Baltimore, Monday and Tuesday. Circulation men representing about fifty newspapers in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia were in attendance.

Atlantic City was selected as the place for the September meeting, and the circulators from that city said they would endeavor to select the location so that the convention would meet at the time of the big beauty pageant.

Other officers elected were: First vice-president, A. C. Findly, Atlantic City; Gazette-Review, second vice-president, Charles T. Ruck, Lancaster, Pa., Examiner, central, second vice-president, Howard Lee, Philadelphia Inquirer; J. H. Zechey, Jr., Potomac Republican; Harry W. Culvis, Chester Republican Times; directors for two years, Royal D. Welker, Allentown Call; William L. Lippincott, Atlantic City Press-Union; Paul Sergeant, Baltimore News-American.

Governor Albert G. Ritchie of Maryland and President Patterson, president of the A.A.P.A., addressed the members of the association at a luncheon given by the Baltimore Sun on Tuesday.

"No one can size up a man in public life more quickly or more accurately than the newspaper man," Governor Ritchie said. "Sometimes we don't agree with his judgments, but we must admit that if the estimates are generally accurate, it is at least honest.

"I admire rather than condemn newspapers. The public life is too intertwined with the press to denounce the press, but I think it is marvelous that more mistakes are not made, when one considers the speed with which they are made."

TEXTILE ADVERTISING AND NEWSPAPER INFLUENCE.

MANY MANUFACTURERS STILL WONDER WHY MAGAZINE COPY DOESN'T PUT TRADEMARK TEXTILES OVER — BUT FEW OF THEM HAVE TRIED NEWSPAPERS.

Reviewing the useful experiences of many large textile manufacturers in national advertising within the last twenty years, Francis A. Adams, president of the American Trademark Association, brings to light in a recent article in the New York Commercial a situation that is undoubtedly unique in the whole field of merchandising. Perhaps quoted by Mr. Adams to show that national publicity has failed to put textiles over as it has put other merchandise over, in spite of the fact that textile advertising has generally been of equal or higher quality, is the advertiser upon the amount of appropriate magazine copy that comprises what appear to be logical problems.

If the advertising problem of the textile manufacturer is unique—and there is no doubt it is—there remains to be done something more than mere description of its uniqueness. This is the laziest intent of confusing Mr. Adams having left his work for him, Mr. Adams has put into his article in the Commercial a wealth of fact and detail that probably are a measure of his progress.

The uniqueness of textile merchandising requirements is nothing new; it has always been but there have always been, and perhaps always will be, some Ajazes in textile merchandising who will try to defy it. "Make the name a household word" is a shibboleth that carries man upon to their ultimate disillusionment, attained, however, only after a parade of color pages and elaborate spreads in magazines costing hundreds of thousands of dollars. The plain fact of the matter is that success in making a trade name a household word amounts to nothing but dollars and cents return unless several other things are done beforehand.

Just the resolution to make a trade mark down the nation's throat—just to nothing—will have some gesture in textile merchandising, for several of the most obvious reasons. There is at least one institution in the dry goods business which has the answer to this problem charted, written and diagrammed. It has had it so analyzed and solved for a period of years that antedates even the earliest failures on Mr. Adams's casualty list. A great many of the textile advertisers are in the habit of putting "busts" that numerates entitled that class because they decided that, while others might be able to change the conditions mapped and charted for them, they themselves were powerful enough to create economic precedent by sheer advertising skill.

They flew in the face of the experience and out beyond the self-gratification obtainable from the appearance of their trade mark amid the moral and intellectual life. Frank L. Hopkins of Madison. He left the university to work on the INNER CIRCLE HAS GOV. SMITH FOR FIRST “GOAT.”

But “Al” and nine hundred other officials sit by and smile at satire — stunt dinner at Astor — goes down in newspaper lore as a "knockout."

The 1924 presidential possibilities of Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York were satirically portrayed by members of the Astor Hotel Reporters Association and the newly organized Inner Circle, comprising political reporters, at the eighth annual dinner in which the Citizens' Committee of New York City took part. The scope of the stunts were broadened this year because of the advent of the newspaper reporters organization, the Inner Circle, which includes members of the Legislative Correspondents Association and the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

The stunts were sandwiched between the dinner courses and kept the audience in lively spirits throughout. The book for the poignant tragedy was written by Charles G. Hambridge and Philip E. Smith, with the New York Times and the New York Evening Post lyrics by James A. Haggerty of the same paper. Frank A. Tierney of Alfred E. Smith's headquarters tabulated some of the data that were rendered, which he rendered.

PHOTOGRAPH SENT BY RADIO FROM NEGATIVES.
NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS AND SCIENTISTS WITNESS TEST OF APPARATUS WHICH PRINTS THEM IN ORDINARY WAY—SIMILAR TO BELIN'S.

Under the auspices of the North American Newspaper Alliance, an apparatus has been developed for the transmission of photographs by radio, and was demonstrated yesterday when photographs broadcasted from Washington were received in Phoenix, a distance of approximately 150 miles, using the method of C. Francis Jenkins, credited with the invention of the transmission machine.

The test, conducted in the presence of newspaper publishers, proved remarkably successful as the culmination of months of effort. Mr. Jenkins has been conducting between his home in Anacostia, a suburb of Washington, and the station in the capital city. The photographs were sent from the radio station in Washington and received by the radio receiving station of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

The success of the Jenkins method over a considerable distance, recalls the experiment under the auspices of the New York World, whereby, using the code method of Arthur Korn, a photograph was sent by radio from Rome, Italy, and received at Bar Harbor, Me., last June. The methods of Dr. Korn and Mr. Jenkins have nothing in common. Dr. Korn's method is to send by code, and photograph might go by radio, telegraph or telephone, an outline of dots which when copied on a specially prepared type writer, filled in the picture.

NEW ORGANIZATION FORMED IN DENVER WITH OBJECT OF PROVIDING REFUGE FOR AGED AND INCAPACITATED WRITERS—MAY OPEN CLUB HOUSE IN MAY.

The building of a home and club house for newspapermen and women who, after giving their best services to their profession, become incapacitated, is the object of the American Journalist Club, which has been formed in Denver. The executive committee of the organization is composed of Elias M. Ammons, former governor of Colorado, Frances Wayne, a newspaper feature writer, Halsted L. Ritter, Denver attorney, and John Brisben Walker, formerly editor of the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

The committee holds an option for the purchase, at a cost of $56,000, of a property near Morrison, Colo., which is admirably adapted in every way for a home and club house, with grounds large enough for a commodious building and twenty bungalows. The present dining rooms, kitchen, and lobbies will accommodate two hundred guests.

The building of forty-three bedrooms, handsomely furnished. A separate building has eight servants' rooms, a very attractive shrubbery, and there is a 100-foot swimming pool.

Each membership in the association, costing $1,000, entitles the subscriber to send two children clubs, who will occupy his room, free of charge, and have meals furnished at actual cost. A number of the large newspapers, according to the committee, have already signified their intention of subscribing to the club.

The executive committee hopes to bring together for a week in July next, in the club's mountain camp on Mount Evans, overlooking Denver, two hundred of America's leading publishers, editors, artists, and managers. At this meeting the executive committee will account for its stewardship and turn over the property to the board of regents, who will then appoint a new executive committee, the fifty members will be subscribed without delay, the club house and mountain camp will be opened next May.

Thirty years ago, Colonel A. K. McClore, in the conditions prevailing in the profession of journalism, made an effort toward a similar organization. In 1893 Henry Watterson, writing to John Brisben Walker on the same subject, said: "This movement has been too long delayed. If it could be carried through, it would be a noble and beneficent work.

Which road do your Customers travel?

If you have goods of high quality to sell, goods in the luxury class—pearl necklaces, oriental rugs, mahogany furniture, automobiles—you are interested in the purchasing power of the constituency to which you tell the story of your wares. As purchasing power increases numbers decrease, and below a certain capacity to buy you are not interested in numbers.

For example, the 1920 census of Chicago shows that there are in this city 7,929 men and women classified as "Bankers, brokers, etc.", and 74,045 men and women classified as "Laborers" in the major industries. This latter group, in human values, is no less important than the former, but it is no discredit to its worth of character to say that from the standpoint of purchasing power it does not enter into your calculations as a merchant of goods beyond its reach.

Your appeal is to the 7,000, not the 70,000—to the smaller group, whose ability to pay is a hundredfold that of the larger. When you pay for circulation which reaches the 70,000 you are paying for something which is of no value to you. THE POST carries no dead circulation for the quality merchant. Every reader is a potential buyer. You pay only for service in your own select and fruitful field.

Publishers Beat Townsend at Election.

Retired Michigan Senator at Adjournment Session of Congress Says Retired Senate Was Cause of His Defeat.

That the publishers of the country used their influence to prevent his re-election to the Senate was the charge of Senator Townsend, of Michigan, when he said in an adjournment session of Congress at the close of its 67th year that the publishing interests had worked to prevent his return to the Senate.

The charge was in connection with the testimony of the publishers of the country to secure the discontinuance of the last two war-time increases in second-class postal rates and to change the seating of the Senate, which they carried to a successful completion.

Senate Townsend is chairman of the Joint Post Office Commission which made that report to the Senate.

Senator Steenerson, of Minnesota, who also voted for the Senate, said:

"If there is a gentleman from Michigan present, I do not intend to touch this subject. If Senator Townsend wants to make this an issue, I will be here to vote with him if he desires it."
HEAD OF FAMOUS AYER AGENCY IS DEAD.

FRANCIS WAYLAND AYER WAS REAL PIONEER IN FIELD—FOUNDED BUSINESS IN 1869. WITH HIS FATHER'S NAME AT MASTHEAD—ILL ONLY TWO WEEKS.

Francis Wayland Ayer, senior member of the advertising firm of N. Y. Ayer & Son of Philadelphia and New York, one of the largest firms of its kind, and one of the pioneers of the advertising field in this country, died Monday at his country home, Arymont, Meridale Farms, Meredith, N. Y., following a brief illness. He was seventy-five years old.

Services for Mr. Ayer were held at Meredith Wednesday, the body being taken that night to Philadelphia. Funeral services will be held at Camden at 2 o'clock this afternoon at North Baptist Church. Burial will be at South Laurel Hill Cemetery and will be private. A large gathering of advertising folk from all over the country will attend the services.

Mr. Ayer went to Meredith from his home in Camden, N. J., a fortnight ago on the advice of his physician. A week ago he developed a severe cold which developed into influenza and finally into pneumonia. Saturday night his wife and his son and his private secretary were with him when he passed away.

Mr. Ayer was born February 4, 1848, at Lee, Mass. His father, Nathan Wheeler Ayer, a native of Preston, Ct., was a scholar and a teacher and himself directed the early education of his son. Later, Mr. Ayer spent some time as a student at Rochester University and spent some time subsequently as a teacher in the New York State district schools.

In 1869 he went to Philadelphia to join his father, who, at that time, was conducting a school there. During the same year, the younger Ayer took advantage of the opportunity to seek advertising for a religious publication and a few months later founded, with his father, the firm of N. W. Ayer & Son to conduct an advertising agency.

Who is Swift & Company

Perhaps you may think of Swift & Company as a one family affair. Many do.

It really consists of about 100,000 people, working together with a common aim.

45,000 of these own shares in the business.

Over 50,000 of them are workers in Swift & Company.

16,000 of the workers are shareholders.

And it tells of the organization that has made Swift's Premium Ham and Bacon, Brookfield Butter and Eggs, and Brookfield Causage,—household words for excellence.

and Fred Henney, city editor of the Hutchinson News, greeted the circulators in behalf of the Hutchinson newspapers.

Responses were made by President Sidney D. Long of the Wichita Eagle and Harold Hough of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

J. J. Lynch of the Cleveland Press, president of the International Circulation Managers Association, who was guest of honor at the Mid-West meeting, travelled one thousand miles to attend the convention. Mr. Lynch brought greetings home with a good number of new applications in the I.C.M.A.

Mr. Lynch was the principal speaker at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon given in honor of the Mid-West circulators, and emphasized the work among the newsboys by the circulation managers. He also addressed the luncheon given by the Hutchinson News and the Gazette.

A resolution was adopted by the majority of members to allow R.F.D. carriers the privilege of accepting newspaper subscriptions, the resolution having been brought up and urged by Ralph J. Seeman of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Crooked solicitations got a severe rap in Mr. Seeman's paper. "Let's get rid of fake solicitors," E. E. LANSTON WINS TEMPORARY INJUNCTION AGAINST USER OF ELROD.

Following the decision in January by Judge Buffington in the United States court of appeals for the third circuit, granting the Lanston Monotype Machine Company an injunction against the makers of the Elrod caster, the court on February 16 issued an injunction against the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, restraining its use of the Elrod machine. The injunction was granted on condition that the Bulletin post a $10,000 bond, pending the decision of the Lanston company's petition for a permanent injunction. The Bulletin has posted the required bond.

"We are continuing to use the machine unless and until a permanent injunction should be granted against us at the final hearing," William I. McLean, Jr., of the Bulletin says.

LARGEST RETAIL ACCOUNT CLAIMED FOR INDIANAPOLIS.

The largest retail advertising account in one newspaper in America is not in New York City, according to the Indianapolis News. The William H. Block Company of Indianapolis, Ind., is the store that claims the record and the News is the newspaper which claims the largest volume of copy used. The newspaper is equally as proud of the record as is the store and recently has used the fact as a sales talk for its advertising value. And naturally, Frank T. Carroll, advertising manager of the News, is equally proud.

The News says that the Block company does not stick its store with newspaper advertised goods nor use newspaper space to advertise itself just to be good fellows.

manufacture, storage, sale, transportation or disposal of any commodities in common use," even though such corporations never were, not have ever been, and can not be engaged in any agreement or understanding in restraint of trade, monopoly, monopsony practices, or unfair methods of competition, or parties to any trade combination, or members of any trade association.

According to the interpretation expressed by the Association of the Bar of New York City, which has recently "aggressively" disapproved the bill, nowhere does it protect trade secrets, or secret formulae, or lists of customers, or any confidential data from inspection or copying by any employee of the commission. "Free access" is granted to the commission and its employees wherever such access "may be deemed advisable for the purpose of effectively enforcing the provisions of this act." It thereafter confines to the bar association the duty of determining, by a process of evidence to be adduced before the commission, what is "free access." This introduces into the bill a standard of action that is not found in any other similar law in the country, and is considered outside the provisions of any of the measures that have dealt with the subject.

Judge Gilbert H. Montague, of the Federal Trade Commission, is in agreement with the view that the bill is not only unwise, but that it is an "unwise" bill.

The farmers' association, if it is to be maintained as a separate entity, must be able to collect and hold money, and to make contracts that are enforceable by law, and to finance, in the same way as other business organizations.

"Nothing can be done to force the farmer to sell his land at a price below the market price." The bill does not provide for any such provision. It merely makes the farmer, who is a member of the association, liable for the non-payment of the assessed membership fee, and thereby provides for the enforcement of the act by a court of law.

HUMBER PROJECT TO BE PUT TO REFERENDUM.

PROPOSAL TO TRANSFORM BIG TIMBER AREA INTO GREAT NEWS PRINT CENTER HAS STRONG BACKING, ALTHOUGH SOME CANADIAN INTERESTS PROVIDE OPPOSITION.

At a referendumelection to be held early next month, the people of Newfoundland will vote on the proposal of the Newfoundland Products Commission to transform the area into a news print plant in the Humber River district, as announced several weeks ago by Premier Richard A. Squires. The government will vote on ratification of a proposition for the development of vast water power and the erection of a large capacity pulp and paper mill. The territory is not in a position to supply newsprint, and a line of woodenenewsprint is not available for lumber because of the transportation difficulties, and it is estimated that the proposal is considered the logical solution to marketing the natural product of the area.

The proposal to be submitted to the people is backed by Premier Richard Squires, who recently returned from Europe, where preliminary plans with the government and the industry were completed. The governor of Newfoundland, at the request of Premier Squires, has already called for a general assembly of Newfoundland, in order that the industrial plan may be submitted for approval.

Premier Squires is said to have the approval of the government, as well as assurances of financial aid from Great Britain, for the carrying out of the plan. The plan is being bought by Canadian business interests, and the entry of Newfoundland into the pulp and paper business.

In the event the project is approved by the Newfoundland assembly, it is expected to act as a stimulus to the funds for these power dams. one-half by bond subscription and one-half by appropriations by the British government under the post-war industries act. All the power thus made available would practically be taken up for pulp and newsprint production.

THE JOURNALISM SCHOOL AS ONE EDITOR SEES IT.

MOST IMPORTANT TASK THAT OF REFINING GREAT MASS OF MEN AND WOMEN WHO AIM AT NEWSPAPER WORK—NATURAL QUALIFICATIONS REAL BASIS OF SUCCESS.

By C. B. Winter,
City Editor, the Minneapolis Journal.

I have been asked to outline frankly "a practical man's point of view regarding university dinner parties as it now is being carried on in the colleges and universities of the country.

My experience with students of schools of journalism have been two-fold:

(a) In employing them.
(b) In giving journalism students of a state university weekly assignments as a part of their practical work.

My attitude toward graduates of schools of journalism does not differ from that toward any other applicant for a position. The only idea in my mind regarding all applicants, whether high school, university or school of journalism graduates, is "Can he dig up news and write it after he gets it?"

In the following discussion of newspaper men and their qualifications I have in mind the type of men actually employed in such places as New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, St. Paul, New Orleans, Atlanta etc. They are flesh and blood creatures, not theoretical men and women. They possessing university qualifications ought rightfully to expect to attain.

Newspaper men must have certain fundamental traits of character. These include:

(a) Accuracy. Never make mistakes, especially in names and addresses. Never misquote a person or mis-state a fact.
(b) Initiative. Ability and eagerness to hunt for new ideas and convert them into news stories and features. The desire to hunt stories and features not given on assignment. (Such stories and features usually are exclusive).
(c) Energy. Willingness to work long hours and be "on call" at any hour of the day or night, regardless of emergency or dinner parties. Etc. They are newspaper men and news men, not literary men.
(e) Ambition. Desire to improve. Reading economics, history, sociology, biography, etc. Reading contemporary newspapers and giving the best ideas and styles of the "other fellow."
(f) Carelessness. In use of grammar, style. Learning to be mechanically perfect.

(g) Understanding the newspaper one works for. Backing the men one works with and works for.

My opinion of journalism ever can "make" newspaper men. I believe they can develop ability when the student possesses the basic characteristics mentioned above.

I believe schools of journalism can render their best services as "refining agencies"—taking from the mass of university pupils each year those who aspire to newspaper careers. Carefully selecting those who possess the qualifications enumerated above, developing them to the best of the school's ability and dropping as un-fitted those who lack the basic characteristics. (Many refuse to believe they are not qualified naturally for newspaper work).

I believe schools of journalism fail in the respect that they turn out too many graduates who, being marked "passed," are led to believe they are of repertorial timber when they are naturally un-fitted for such work. It seems to me such men should be set aside earlier in their careers and have their efforts, backed by their university education, guided into channels for which they are better."

The Quality of Hand Composition with the Economy of the Machine

The individual matrices which are to compose a line are assembled in a "stick" and held in plain view of the operator. Until he is ready to release it for casting, it remains perfectly flexible, subject to any revision of spacing or arrangement.

That is the reason why Linotype composition never looks stiff or mechanical. It has all the quality and character of the best hand composition, but costs much less.

NEW PROPAGANDA CLAIM AGAINST DRY FORCES.

"WETS" BRAND PAMPHLET ON NEW ZEALAND ATTITUDE AS WHOLLY MISLEADING—CAPTAIN STAYTON, HEAD OF "ANTI-ANTIS," ISSUES PUBLIC CRITICISM.

Charges of interchange of misleading propaganda, between the dry leaders of this and other countries, for the purpose of influencing the prohibition sentiment, have been made by Captain W. H. Stayton, founder and head of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, in a statement issued from the organization's headquarters at Washington.

Captain Stayton's charges were aimed primarily at a pamphlet issued in advance of the election to the Senate at Washington. The latter's activities in behalf of prohibition in Australia and New Zealand. An attack was particularly made against "Pussyfoot," Johnson in Washington, following the latter's activities in behalf of prohibition in Australia and New Zealand. An attack was particularly made against "Pussyfoot," Johnson in Washington, following the latter's activities in behalf of prohibition in Australia. Johnson has merely done what the Anti-Saloon league and other rabid prohibition organizations have been doing all along," declared Captain Stayton.

"They have their own way of interpreting statistics, pointing out certain names and ignoring others. In fact, the prohibition leaders throughout the world play the game both ways. They are afraid to go into the United States glowing accounts of alleged changes in sentiment in Europe and elsewhere, while the American 'drys' reciprocate with renascent literature describing the wonderful success of prohibition enforcement in America."

Captain Stayton buttressed his exceptions to the claims in the "Pussyfoot" pamphlet with an analysis of the December vote in New Zealand, and a description of conditions there. Almost made by Miss Nellie M. Scanlan, special field representative of the New Zealand Free Lance, the Dominions leading pictorial, who has had the advantage of observing the working of prohibition in America.

According to Miss Scanlan, prohibition has actually lost ground in New Zealand since the elections of 1919, when it was defeated by the narrow majority of 3,012 votes, whereas in the last election it lost by 13,000 votes. It has been in force for the first time in twenty years.

"During the recent election," Miss Scanlan continued, "America was quoted and misquoted. The cablos across the ocean were kept in motion. Both sides were quoting it, and next day a message had to be flashed to have the statement authenticated. Scripture was quoted, requested and misquoted. Statistics were compiled, added up, substracted, multiplied, and made to prove anything you wanted, but the result is expressed in the final figures.

"New Zealand evidently has yet to be convinced that prohibition is a better remedy for the evils of drink than educating toward a voluntary temperance, as indicated by these figures."

"Out there we know nothing of bootlegging; and the liquor trade is subject to government inspection, carrying heavy penalties for contraband."

"The position, however, is definitely stated. The prohibitionists did not gain, but actually lost ground—lost 13,000 votes—during the last three years. New Zealand has watched the American experiment, and expressed her opinion in rejections."

HOW A.P. DRAGNET COVERS THE NEWS IN THE RUHR.

PARIS, BERLIN AND LONDON BUREAUS DO FINE TEAM WORK IN HANDLING ALL ANGLES — COBLENZ SLANT ON ARMY RECALL REACHED U.S. WITHIN AN HOUR.

With the first indications that the French and Belgians intended to occupy the Ruhr on the declaration of Germany's default in her reparation obligations, the Associated Press made preparations and sent to Coblenz, the American headquarters on the Rhine, two correspondents, George D. Day and James P. Howe, and an assistant, Sergeant Frank W. Smith. With the German Army recall order, Mr. Day was recalled to Berlin for his former position, and Mr. Howe took over his duties. Mr. Smith was retained at Coblenz to continue his work as a correspondent.

The real heart of the Ruhr is Essen, seat of the gigantic Krupp establishment, and this vital center was covered in the earlier days of occupation by Clifford L. Day, Jr., of the Berlin office, who kept in close touch with the German industrialists and was able to reflect in his messages, with which he came through German sources in Berlin, the German attitude toward the occupation, as Mr. Topping and the Paris bureau in their despatches, reporting accurately the facts, also were enabled to present the French viewpoint as to the occupation move and its subsequent developments.

In the Rhineland the presence of Walter S. Hiatt, of the Paris office, at Coblenz, served for a time a double purpose. Mr. Hiatt was recalled to Berlin to cover the departure of the American troops, represented to the Associated Press in the Rhineland by Mr. Day, and he likewise found many occasions to send reports of events in the Rhineland in connection with the occupation which contributed not a little to the general understanding of the situation.

During February Mr. Day was recalled to Berlin for necessary duties and was succeeded by Mr. Howe, who had been assigned to Paris a short time previously. Mr. Howe is no stranger to the Rhineland, either, as he was for a long period in Coblenz while this was the American headquarters on the Rhine.

Another energetic worker in the Rhineland has been Sergeant Frank W. Smith of the Associated Press expeditionary force, stationed at Coblenz, and editor of the Amocc News, organ of the American occupational forces. Sergeant Smith was the local correspondent of the Associated Press during a long period preceding the recall of the American troops. It was Sergeant Smith who first heard of the recall through the Associated Press and who spread the big news through Coblenz to Major General Henry Allen and the doughboys.

When President Harding's order for the recall was issued, a special cable message was promptly sent, at 10:49 a.m., to the Paris bureau. That bureau, in turn telephoned Sergeant Smith at the Amocc News office. He in turn informed General Allen and the news was generally broadcast. Sergeant Smith's reply by telephone to the Army was promptly cabled to New York, so that a Coblenz news story on the withdrawal went out in the early service from the New York office at 11:49 a.m., in time for the early afternoon papers. It was a remarkable instance of quick action and cable communication, the news going over and the reply from Coblenz received in just one hour—with Coblenz more than 3,000 miles away.

In addition to the Associated Press men in the Ruhr and throughout the Rhineland, the London, Paris and Berlin offices have done fine work on the many phases of French, German and Belgian politics and on the business side, including the reparation program and the financial resources of their respective countries. It has fallen to the London office to do much of the coordinating.

The cable editors in New York also had placed showing in the excellent showing made by the report, welding together the many despatches from various sides, reflecting the different viewpoints and often conflicting, and keeping the day and night desk working systematically. They also wrote "leads without date" when despatches from many points required summation at some important juncture, and gave a smooth running finish to the raw material coming by cable and radio.

WASTE PAPER VALUABLE.

At a conference of Wisconsin paper manufacturers at Appleton, Dr. Hugh P. Baker, executive secretary of the American Paper and Pulp Association, told of the following unusual activities of the industry.

Organized a national campaign to bring out larger supplies of waste paper to be reworked into paper, one sere of pulp wood timber being saved by every six tons of waste paper that is reused. This waste paper campaign, he said, helped the housewife and a profitable market for the paper which otherwise had destined for the paper industry. Mr. Baker showed what $50,000,000 for waste paper reworked in 1922, and an equal amount was wasted by not being collected and sold.

MARYLAND PUBLIC UTILITIES HAVE ADVERTISING PLAN OUTLINED AT MEETING.

"Advertising is one of the fundamental factors of selling any commodity or service: and your companies are producing both a product and a service. J. Hampton Baumgartner, president of Baumgartner Advertising Company, told the recent meeting of the Public Utility Companies of Maryland at Baltimore. Therefore, let advertising in the newspapers be employed to sell your industry to the people of this state in a way that would create both better understanding and better business."

"The advertising should be done under the direction of a group of public utility executives in the interest of the industry as a whole. Such advertising, offering a public service, how indispensable good public service is to the happiness and prosperity of the people, the investment and intelligent thought necessary to insure it, etc., should be told to the public in the name of the Associated Public Utilities of Maryland."

"But you might say that this plan would be too general in its scope. In that event, the plan might be localized by the use of advertisements which would explain to the people of the different states what the home company's activities embrace and indicate the service that justifies the charges which the people are called upon to pay."

"These advertisements would be prepared under the direction of a group of executives representing the industry as a whole, with particular reference to conditions developing in different parts of the local situation."

"The public would welcome the information and the opportunity to have this proved in a community that underwent a complete reversal of its attitude toward the utility company as a result of its publicity."

"Educational publicity by the utility companies will take the sting out of complaints and forestall criticism. They would have fewer demands reduced to rates to the point of financial starvation and less opposition to applications for reasonable upward adjustment in rates."

NEWS PRINT PRICE INCREASE BY JULY IS HINTED.

News print for spot delivery is now quoted at $50 a ton, but the contract price is $75. In some cases consumers are assured of their requirements through 1923 at this price, although most of the contracts expire on July 1. The industry, therefore, said it would not be surprising if the contract price meets the current market price at the middle of the year. No immediate advance in price is expected.

TRADE SURVEY AS APPLIED TO CONSUMER.

Realizing that the sales possibilities of any city as a manufacturing market are based upon the consumption of products by home users, the Milwaukee Journal has undertaken a comprehensive study of the consumer market. In this endeavor, the Journal has employed a new method, which promises to be more accurate and less costly than previous surveys. The newspaper sent out 40,000 questionnaires in place of interviewing 300 to 400 retailers.

The survey involved the study of the consumption habits of 40,000 persons chosen at random from the city directory. The questionnaire contained questions on the weekly use of various products such as clothing, shoes, hats, tobacco, and other items.

The results showed that every product is consumed in a specified length of time, and that the consumption is based on the families' ability to purchase and use them. The Journal has successfully completed this comprehensive survey by using this new method.

The work was accomplished in a period of ten months, employed sixteen persons, and cost the newspaper $20,000. Three questionnaires were sent out to 40,000 persons, and the results were then analyzed to determine the sales possibilities of any city as a manufacturing market.

Employees and brother editors made the occasion one that should not be forgotten soon when they tendered a banquet in the publisher's honor on February 19. A FALSE USE OF REPUTABLE TRADE NAME DECLARED UNFAIR PRACTICE.

Representing goods to be of a well-known manufacture when such is not the case was declared this week by the federal trade commission to be unfair practice. The commission's order was the result of an investigation by which it was found that the Hutner company induced a retail merchant to purchase a number of coats under the assumption that the coats were made of Salt's Peco Plush, when such was not a fact.

Mr. Borland entered the newspaper business with a small amateur newspaper when he was in high school days. He was not long in the business before competition was set up. Always hard work and a good newspaper guided by Mr. Borland came out ahead. In forty-five years his Evening News was consolidated with the Venango Herald, which was established.

Two years ago, Mr. Borland was speaking about his newspaper career giving much credit to his forefathers. He said that The Fourth Estate that he was in the game for some years to come. WAYS TO IMPROVE NEWSPAPER ART WORK.

JUDGMENT SHOULD BE USED INSTEAD OF REDUCING CLASS, AND ART BOUGHT WITH PRINTING AS WELL AS ART IN MIND—USE DROP-OUTS IF POSSIBLE

By BEN DALICH
Advertising Production Department
The New York Times

Printing has become something more than merely making an impression.
"A newspaper isn't printed," says a prominent engineer, expert in newspaper production, "the paper is run over the cylinder, the stereotype is just flooded with ink and squeezed out of the paper—more or less printing—just a squeeze." And it is so.

Many thousands of dollars are spent each year on illustrations for newspaper production. Artists of unusual ability are engaged at great expense. They produce highly artistic illustrations. Yet when they ap-pPEAR in the newspaper their true artistic and attractive appearance, the very things that gives "pulling" power are gone. This condition is so general that production men are warranted in their constant fear that all the money, time and energy expended in preparing an advertisement will be wasted by a poor reproduction of a good piece of art.

There are two ways of bettering newspaper reproduction. One is to perfect the printing so that when an illustration is reproduced it will compare favorably with the original drawing, and eliminate all chance of poor printing results. This requires time not available under the present system. The art of producing a newspaper is not to reproduce an advertising illustration excellently, but to print a newspaper quickly, which is vastly more important than the advertising.

The strengths of a newspaper degenerate upon its newsworthiness and a newspaper can be printed the later the news and editorial staff can keep the pages open for late news. That is what its readers, who are also people, to whom a newspaper is directed, want. Of course, the progressive newspapers are making every effort to improve the appearance of the irregular columns, but they are working against almost insuperable printing difficulties.

The second way is to produce an illustration that will print under unfavorable mechanical conditions and yet be a good reproduction of the original. Since a newspaper is not to perfect its process so that it will overcome the defects of newspaper printing, we who make the drawings of expensive artists into cuts must produce cuts that will print under these conditions.

It can be done. Compare the process of job printing with that of newspaper printing. Tell the average job pressman, who has no knowledge of newspaper printing, that beautiful half-tones can be produced without any make ready, and he will laugh at you. Despite the fact that he goes good paper, comparatively slow presses and good ink, he dare not produce a half-tone without a make-ready. Yet it is a fact that beautiful half-tones, wood cuts, line cuts, illustrations of nearly all kinds ranged to reproduce newspaper presses.

HONOLULU NEWSPAPER MEN REALIZE CLUB FUND FROM SHOW.

Newspaper men of Honolulu between hills in the office are working on the street turned theatrical magazines a few weeks ago and staged a midnight frolic in a tent that would make New York producers envious. An all star bill was prepared by artists of the city. The advertising had been concluded or not, the fourth estate realized $2,000 which is to be applied toward furnishing a library for the working men of the city.

The show was called the "Fourth Estate Frolic" and it was typical of entertainments of a like nature which have been staged by the newspaper men in some of the larger cities of the United States. As in the States, the reporters and editors found artists with great reputations ready to lend a helping hand gratuitously. The entertainment was held in the Hawaii theater. Ivan Benkoff, a German director of one of the nation's most successful operations, took charge in staging the show and in addition to presenting his own act

NEWSPAPER MAN HEADS NEW FEATURE SERVICE.

C. E. Rogers, formerly an Oklahoma newspaperman, now a member of the industrial journalism faculty of Kansas State Agricultural College, announced the establishment of a new organization known as Country Weekly Features of Manhattan, Kan., which is offering to newspapers in the Far West, as well as to newspapers in the surrounding states a weekly cot-ture and philosophy in prose and verse.

The column is called "Backyard"
MEMORIES and the editors of the English department at the agricultural college. The service, which is to include other features, is restricted to one paper in a county.

CREATOR OF "THE GUMPS" VISITS OKLAHOMA CITY.

Sidney Smith, Chicago Tribune
cartoonist, creator of "The Gumps," was a guest in Oklahoma City recently during the annual automobile show. Mr. Smith's engagements in Oklahoma City included a luncheon with the Daily Oklahoman staff, with the Oklahoma City Rotarians.

A contest in drawing the Gump cartoons was held for school children, and Mr. Smith did the judging, to awards of $125 in prizes offered by the Oklahoma City Times. Mr.
Smith was accompanied to Oklahom by Arthur W. Crawford, manager of the Tribune syndicate.

TEXTILE SELLING THROUGH THE NEWSPAPERS.

certainly; but he will everlasting persist in employing the same, advertising methods. Nothing seems to discourage repeated mistakes of this kind, because they are the free public record on record of a concern which has made the same miscue twice. Baffled and disappointed, the merchant does retire within their shell with the bitter conviction that national advertising is a delusion and a snare that glib advertising agents can bait with attractive selling talks and perhaps a game of golf or two.

Meanwhile the retail merchant all over the United States is conscious that textiles of the same kind and quality as that offered under a trade name by the advertised manufacturer, in whose assortment of piece goods is just the same, and the truth is that the public, and a large portion of the public, has acknowledged its advertising, and now its national advertising makes little, if any, difference. There are two basic reasons for this, the first of which is that the national advertising, even at its peak, could not develop in the midst of his customer the same buying confidence that the local newspaper, radiating from the local crier, might. The second reason is that the national advertiser has paid too little attention to indexing the retailers to exert that confidence in his behalf.

The smaller may be only a formality in drugs, groceries, or tobacco, but in the textile field he is a major factor. The retail merchant here is not only a formality in drugs, groceries, or tobacco, but in the textile field he is a major factor. The retail merchant here is not only the ultimate consumer and the one most likely to be affected by the advertisement, but he is also the one who is in the best position to judge the quality of the goods advertised. The textile manufacturer is concerned with making the sale in the retail store; and he will not get the sale unless the judgment of both the retailer and the consumer coincide on that particular garment.

So here again we find the same situation, psychological if you like, but to call it such is to face the consumer's purchase of package goods. When she buys a piece of goods, the consumer gives testimony that judgment of the retailer in advising her as to whether the goods were of first quality, was correct. It is plain that the endorsement which he gives the retailer in advising her of the quality of the goods is based on her own personal judgment of quality, her own personal judgment of the goods. She has the goods in her hand. She is her own judge and her own consumer. She is not likely to let the goods out of her hand and touch them to her face, but she will hold them and lift them and judge them according to her own personal judgment.

This is not saying that the presence of a reputable trademark name, either of the garment maker or of textile maker, or both, added to a woman's or man's pride in possession. It is not fundamentally important, however, to template the degree of pride that a label will engender. What the textile manufacturer is concerned with is making the sale in the retail store, and he will not get the sale unless the judgment of both the retailers and the consumer coincide on that particular garment.

PUBLISHERS TAKE ACTION TO ELIMINATE FREE PUBLICITY.

An effort is being made to secure the cooperation of all press associations in the United States and Canada in a movement to kill the space-graft, as it is believed to be undermining the system of national advertising, the New York World reports.

Wil V. Tofford, secretary of the Inland Daily Press Association, told members of the Illinois Press Association at its meeting on March 8 that the movement was

The Illinois organization, which has a membership of 300, passed resolutions in support of the crusade against the space-graft.

The New England Press Association, and the Georgia Press Association, and other organizations which have agreed to do the same. Mr. Tofford said he was informed that one large appropriation for paid advertising was being held up until the effort to carry it forward as free matter.

The stamp system that the Inland has adopted, returning all free matter direct, means that it will be sent back to the advertiser so stamped, not to the agency sending it out, so it will go direct so the one benefited.

The Illinois members expect to have a headquarters at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York during the meeting of the Publishers' Printers Congress in April, with the secretary in charge, for the purpose of securing permanent information on this matter. The member in charge of the New England Press Association is in charge of the movement for the Central States and Canada with permanent headquarters in Chicago.

TEXAS DAILY MAKES MONEY ON "BEAUTIFUL HOME" STUNT AT LOW COST.

The interest of 30,000 people was commanded by the Fort Worth, Tex., Daily Record, a short time ago when the newspaper opened for public inspection a beautiful home built at the newspaper's discretion. The home, which is furnished from garies to call, of course, by the newspaper to the highest bidder.

In a special section of the Sunday edition of the public's usual details of the house and its furnishings were explained. Advertisements that contributed to the building of the home were attached to the advertisements.

The Record cooperated with a local contractor in building the home. The newspaper investing in the project to back the plan with a good amount of publicity. The sixteen-page "home beautifi" section contained about seventy-five per cent advertising. Previously the newspaper was doing an eight double page spreads in connection with the home.

HERALD-SUN SYNDICATE, 280 Broadway, New York
"It is a momentous, yes, a fearful truth, that millions have no literature, no schools and almost no pulpit but the press. Not one in ten reads books, but every one of us, except the few helpless poor, provides himself with a newspaper. It is parent, school, college, pulpit, theatre, examiner, stockholder, all in one. Every drop of our blood is colored by it. Let me make the newspapers and I care not who make the religion or the laws."

Wendell Phillips.

CARRIER BOY ENTHUSIASM AS CIRCULATION BUILDER.

Too few newspaper publishers and circulation managers are constantly alive to the fact that subscriptions cannot be taken on the delivery cart and that the year in which the paper is to gain ground considerably depends on the list made out at the beginning of the year. New carriers, if taken on the quarter or the year, are not likely to remain as such for more than twenty weeks, and what they will be next week or next month is even more important. Good ideas are worked out every day by circulation managers in the cities where cold circulation figures mean thousands and maybe millions in advertising contracts, but carrier and newsboy cooperation is seldom tried. The circulation manager who neglects to build up this kind of foundation is overlooking a big bet, however, and if his neglect becomes chronic he will find his town lacking carriers to end get enough contests to save the day.

There are any number of good stunts that are used effectively to get the pass out of carrier organizations. The basic requirement is that they offer an inducement for the paper to be delivered. Business prizes and bonuses are the most binding offering.

There is a tendency now to allow the carrier boy the same profit as the newspaper. In this method of distribution each route boy delivers a business man and is held responsible for the delivery. If he fails to make delivery he is a business man and is held responsible for the delivery. The profit is not a measure of anything but the mistake is interesting, for it makes the carrier boy work harder.

Experiments in editorial writing are steadily forging to the front as stimulators of public thought. The reasons are obvious, but a recent editorial in the Minneapolis Journal entitled "Five Modern Fears," is an ideal example of the possibilities for thought that any editor can create in a medium that has the greatest of dimensions in daily development. The list of "gift" prizes is almost inexhaustible.

AN EXAMPLE OF BREVITY'S POWER IN EDITORIALS.

"There is the biological fear that the day is coming when the race will crowd to the wane; the creative expression of individual thought. There is the economic fear that the modern industry has reached itself and is top heavy. There is the social fear that the modern industry cannot keep pace with the growing complexity of industrial problems. There is the moral fear that the younger generation is turning away from the ideals that gave them strength and society.

"It is a momentous, yes, a fearful truth, that millions have no literature, no schools and almost no pulpit but the press. Not one in ten reads books, but every one of us, except the few helpless poor, provides himself with a newspaper. It is parent, school, college, pulpit, theatre, examiner, stockholder, all in one. Every drop of our blood is colored by it. Let me make the newspapers and I care not who make the religion or the laws."

Miss Cather, who was born near Red Cloud, Nebraska, and who spent her childhood in the vicinity, has achieved international fame as a writer. Her novels "My Antonia" and "Youth and the Bright Medusa" are "Youth and the Bright Medusa."

ART IN ADVERTISING.

Use of more art in advertising was urged by W. D. Campbell, supervisor of art in the Columbus schools, at the Advertising Club luncheon in Columbus this week. He gave many examples of the development of artistic appreciation and said there was a larger place for artistic newspaper advertising. He emphasized that a man does not have to be effeminate to appreciate art.

Robert M. Mount, manager of the Columbus Better Business Committiee, analyzed furniture, clothing and optical ads which have been used locally recently. Chairman Tracewell of the "On-to-Atlantic City" committee gave details of the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Atlantic City in June.

WAYS TO IMPROVE NEWSPAPER ART WORK.

Consider the pains used in job printing. The paper is carefully selected to suit the particular job in hand. Its weight and type set are made up, made up and locked. The pressman places it expertly on the press and as the ink dries for the few days, it is spent in the making of forms ready for printing. All high lights and shadows of the type are increased with great patience. The pressman watches every movement of the printing, observing that the flow of the ink does not set off and that the inks maintain its proper color at all times.

Now, contrast with that the poor, newspaper stock of uncertain quality, the swift composition, the lack of care in selecting and using make-up, the jamming of the type in the form, the lock-up pressure from both sides, the stereotype (fancy called a lock-up) the rapid stereotyping (the poorest of duplicate plates), and the way the paper — no make-ready — just spring as it comes off the press is run faster than the eye can wink, adding to the poor printing quantities of dots, spaces between the dots of the half-tones and the halftones of the text and the paper, as it receives the ink, which adds a certain amount of ink and takes on a smudgy, unfinished appearance. So it is with other lines cut and halftones.

News print paper is not sized or calendered and so throws off flour or particulate matter on the paper as it runs on the press. The ink gets on the curved stereotyped plate, and the pressman must learn to quickly remove the ink. In doing this by removing the ink without changing the pressure of the inking surface, the pressman must do the job in most cases. Many advertising agencies, to solve the problem of an ad with a back drop, thinking that if they get a clean back drop, the same or better results will be obtained on the press, have their cuts printed on newspaper stock, thinking that if they get a clean back drop, the same or better results will be obtained on the press. Much softer effects can be obtained in close values on printing surfaces presented in most cases.

Many advertising agencies, to solve the problem of an ad with a back drop, thinking that if they get a clean back drop, the same or better results will be obtained on the press, have their cuts printed on newspaper stock, thinking that if they get a clean back drop, the same or better results will be obtained on the press. Advertising agencies even go further and print their entire schedules on newspaper stock, trying to obtain a similar effect. Both methods are misleading. Assuming that the conditions under which these proofs are printed are the same as when the newspaper is run, the proofs put out by the agencies stand that when several thousand impressions are made for proofs only, they will be satisfactory. In fact, when hundreds of thousands of impressions are run off the ink has a tendency to set in the type when the big job is on, and be absorbed by the news stock.

JOURNALISM CUBS EDIT HOME PROSPERITY ISSUE FOR EL RENO AMERICAN.

All the work except the mechanical part in connection with the "home prosperity" edition of the El Reno, Okla., American, Sunday, March 10, was done by the journalism students of the Oklahoma school of journalism at Norman.

Twelve of the students began work Wednesday of last week soliciting and writing advertisements. They were divided into four groups, each of which was given a certain line of work, and all together had to produce an issue for the college to have an advertisement in the contract, and the construction which respondent was entitled to put upon it is this: that in the event of failure to use the full space contracted for, the alternative condition, or the liquidated damage, or the penalty, whatever one wishes to call it, could not be claimed after a "拿到"gate line for display reader advertisement" in the Standard contract, and the absence in the Montreal Star contract.

"After having given careful consideration to the whole evidence, (for which I am indebted to the advertisement and press experts), the court, although believing that the petitioner intended to pass with respondent in the execution of the contract, the failure of respondent to fulfill same, the total amount recoverable should be the plates of the ads in the newspapers in use at the rate of 20 cents per line. All other compensation as might be due for reader advertisement, position and space in the paper. At the same time I hold that therefore the petitioner made its claim in perfect good faith; yet, the increasing cost of labor from the contract, and the construction which respondent was entitled to put upon it is this: that in the event of failure to use the full space contracted for, the alternative condition, or the liquidated damage, or the penalty, whatever one wishes to call it, could not be claimed after a "拿到"gate line for display reader advertisement" in the Standard contract, and the absence in the Montreal Star contract.

"The result is no doubt that, if respondent had not offered any advertisement at all, she might have had nothing to pay whatever; but such a result is foreign to the spirit of the Times contract, and no judgment could be given from the opinion which the court finally derives from the wording of the contract.

"The court also stated that its opinion was the "拿到"line of the petitioner's officers appeared to have interpreted the contract in that manner, as they sent accounts only for $12.

PROFESSOR GETS KNOWLEDGE OF VARIED CHARACTER FROM THE TIMES.

T. Sharper Knowlson of the Institute of Individual Psychology, who addressed the weekly conference of the advertising department of the New York Times, mentioned in an address that he had been analyzing the Times to see how many kinds of educational information he could classify in it, and had found that he could classify twenty-six. He said, "that newspapers are not valued to their full extent because the public does not know how to make use of it. Times is a newspaper that after reading it, studying it to find out what it is in what. My idea was to read through a complete education from the Times immediately after an article in education, and I was very much astonished that I could find twenty-six titles of Times articles on a complete and varied education from the Times immediately. They deal with psychology, ethics, fine art, and a great variety; for example, proper and proper, true, and advantageous knowledge, drawn exclusively from the times."

"It was possible to get from the Times much knowledge of a varied character. We, this is all put together I think you will find your work is something much more wonderful than you had imagined."

Textile Selling Through the Newspapers.

But the volume of textile advertising in daily newspapers has never been large; in fact, it has always been so small. Aside from a limited use of some of the existing newspaper sections by two or three of the big silk manufacturers, most of the newspaper circulation that has appeared within the last few years has been that of the Boot Mills, and the BT. and B. Knight's "Fruit of the Loom." Why, if the textile manufacturer has money to spend to plumb the depths of his advertising problem, has he not gone to the advertising agencies? Aside from a few cases, the textile manufacturer has always gone to the advertising agencies when he has been forced to carry dependable merchandise. There are two reasons for this: the first is the fact that there is no sufficiently frequent personal solicitation, and the second sufficiently frequent newspaper advertising. Sometimes sensible trade paper advertising.

Once the retailer is sold, the rest of the proposition becomes a matter of approaching the consumer in action-getting media. An advertisement in the newspaper is worth all that is worth. I'll strike the Jones store carries that," but an advertisement in the newspaper is more important than one in a trade paper. It is to be found that well developed, thoughtful, "Next time I go to the Jones store, I'll go there."

The advertising agency at its present stage of development can solve the textile manufacturer's problem if it will, just as it has solved merchandising and advertising problems for manufacturers in every other line of business. With agency efficiency at its present stage it is almost incredible that the textile industry has not been able to get something of the right kind of pressure from behind. The household word means nothing to the textile manufacturer. If a new product is advertised, it happens to be a household word, and the only way of overcoming this is to make the consumer to carry dependable merchandise. There are two reasons for this: the first is the fact that there is no sufficiently frequent personal solicitation, and the second sufficiently frequent newspaper advertising. Sometimes sensible trade paper advertising.

Right now more scrutiny than ever is being attached to national advertising by the firms who employ it. They are no longer dizzied by the egotism that goes with a national reputation built on advertising, unless they have a national distribution that leaves mighty few gaps. Plain common sense has shown them that while the magazine airpline that sweeps the whole map in one meteoretic leap is most spectacular and luxurious, it is in the newspaper, accommodating: making stops almost simultaneously at every city, town, village and hamlet, and even the smallest villages when the service is both needed and expected, and in the place where the product is to be found for sale. The retailer will talk turkey to any manufacturer who submits to him a reasonable and plausible scheme of cooperation within the territory which the retailer serves. It matters little to the merchant what advertising plan for other localities may be, so long as the "Process engraving," "Plate engraving," or "paperless engraving," the "Public good being exerted for his own particular benefit in his own community. He is in the textile merchandising proposition and must make the trade press the backbone of his approach to the consumer market at the outset deserting the straight and narrow path to success in favor of a more devious route that leads to doubt, disillusionment and disappointment.

Economic force as it applies to distribution in the textile field shows the same sort of pressure from the source, not one of suction from the mouth. Making a consumer believe, through advertising, that a particular textile manufacturer is the one that has the best or the latest or the only thing of the right kind of pressure from behind. The household word means nothing to the textile manufacturer. If a new product is advertised, it happens to be a household word, and the only way of overcoming this is to make the consumer to carry dependable merchandise. There are two reasons for this: the first is the fact that there is no sufficiently frequent personal solicitation, and the second sufficiently frequent newspaper advertising. were sold by carriers at double the price because of extra service in oil fields.

M. W. Hallmecher of the Oklahoma City Oklahoman and Times, urged an allowance to country dealers when papers are not received on time because of extra service caused by railroad companies.

There was a lively discussion on G. V. Allen’s paper, "Temporary cuts in circulation prices advisable?" Many of the members arguing in favor of giving premiums instead of making a fifty per cent cut in price.

Allen is with the Hutchinson News.

Other speakers were Will A. Butler of the Colorado Springs Evening Telegraph, Lloyd Smith, Kansas City Kansas; H. O. Sonderegard, Hutchinson, Kansas; Capper Publications, Topeka, Kan.; Grill R. Fuller, Pueblo, Colo., Chiettian; Claude B. Robinson, Wichita; Walter B. Reynolds, Fremont, Neb., Tribune.

The following round table talks were up for general discussion:

"Advantages and disadvantages of having athletic activities in connection with city carrier organizations."

"Does sampling pay? How long should samples be distributed to prospects before they are solicited? Is the best plan to follow in putting them out? City, evening, and morning.

"Price offers to carriers and newsdealers; newsstand length of time. What is the future? How is circulation profitable? Are prices delivered immediately or at the completion of the contract?"

"Features and their value. What percentage of the paper should be devoted to features? Daily and Sunday."

"Current events; what do you handle on your paper?"

"Get help from the clubs. How often do you handle them? Do you consider them profitable?"

"The newspaper’s organization—its value to a newspaper.

"The last fish offer. Does it have a tendency to lower prices in the long run?"

The next meeting is held at Pueblo the first week in September.

Sidney D. Long is president of the association; W. Boeshans of the St. Joseph Gazette, vice-president; Will E. Boeshans, secretary-treasurer.

The work in journalism is divided into a day course, which is academic and leads to a degree, and an evening course, which is preparatory for gaining next September, according to Mr. Donovan. The work of the course has been organized under the supervision of George N. Kramer, while the night course has been conducted by T. C. Greenwood, formerly managing editor of the Detroit Free Press, and will be in active charge of the night course.

Other members of the teaching staff will be Mr. B. H. Holsinger, editor of the Detroit Free Press, and J. P. Russell, editor of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Record, director of the day school.

INDIANA AD COURSES ARE EXPANDED.

A complete schedule of courses in display and direct-mail advertising is being given in the department of Journalism of Indiana University this semester by Mr. L. P. Pierson, head of the department, and Claude M. Bolier, assistant professor.

The courses include elementary advertising, layouts and copy-writing, direct advertising, house organ, advertising campaigns, research in direct and display advertising, and practical advertising, the last consisting of soliciting and writing advertising for Bloomington merchants.

Each student takes over the entire advertising work of a store or other business firm.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE DIRECTS ADVERTISEMENT TO LAND PROSPECT.

No better example of a newspaper's faith than the advertisement that can be given than that shown by the Chicago Tribune which recently used a full page spread in the Toledo Blade for the sole purpose of selling one firm on the market which the Tribune distributes its pages. The page ad was designed to attract the attention of the Champion Spark Plug Company of Toledo.

THE REASON EXPLAINED.

Why editors go crazy, says a contemporary: "There are over a thousand words in a column of a newspaper. If you don't believe it, count them. You would count them and write a column, then a column with a good fellow.

In New Orleans, it's the New Orleans Item..."

HEAD OF FAMOUS AYER AGENCY IS DEAD.

The father died in 1871, but the firm continued to function under the name with which it was started, and from its beginning in 1869 with one employee, Mr. Ayer lived to see it prospering, at least, according about 500, with offices located in most of the largest cities throughout the United States.

Mr. Ayer built into the foundation of his business an insistence on absolute integrity and never varied in his refusal of lottery advertising as well as other forms which he considered as questionable. It was in a large measure, observers say, through his injection of sound standards and methods into advertising that the business as a whole developed the high principles with which it is conducted in this country today.

PUBLISHED NEWSPAPER DIRECTORY

Because of the wide importance which Mr. Ayer demanded in the gathering of information, the firm was led early in its career to create the American Newspaper Annual and Directory, which it has issued for many years as a standard book of reference for newspapers and advertisers. It was created primarily to be of the best possible service to the advertisers seeking a medium for their products. Throughout his career, Mr. Ayer led a life of great activity, distinguished for its idealism and its ethical integrity. In addition to his efforts in the business advertising he was leader in the state and national affairs of both the Baptist Church and the Young Men's Christian Association.

In recent years Mr. Ayer devoted himself to philanthropic purposes. He continued until his death as senior partner of the advertising firm, but in the last years of his life, instructed its conduct to his partners, in order to give more time to his other activities.

Mr. Ayer was married in 1875, Miss Rhodena Gilman. There were two daughters, Miss Alice Beadle Ayer, who became Mrs. Hardin H. Wheat and died in 1904, and Miss Anna Gilman Ayer, now Mrs. Wilfred W. Fry. The first Mrs. Ayer died on October 3, 1913. Mr. Ayer was married again in 1919 to Miss Martha K. Lawson, who, with Mrs. Fry, survive him.

DEATH TAKES PUBLISHER OF CLOVER LEAF PUBLICATIONS.

L. V. Ashbaugh, for many years one of the most successful publishers in the United States, and proprietor of the Clover Leaf Publications, town. Ohio. He went to Kansas City about twenty-five years ago and, with F. W. Kellogg, now owner of a string of California newspapers, he founded the Clover Leaf Publishing Company. D. B. Butler, publisher of the Prairie Star, Chicago, was also associated with Mr. Ashbaugh in the organization of the Clover Leaf group.

For the last twelve years Mr. Ashbaugh had conducted the business of these newspapers alone. In 1903 he purchased the Minneapolis Republic, which he sold recently to the Perry-Lloyd-Jones Syndicate.

MEN OF OLD COMMAND FORM ESCORT OF HONOR AT AD MAN'S FUNERAL.

Many newspaper and business friends attended the funeral services for Colonel Howard E. Crall, formerly commanding officer of the Seventh Regiment, New York National Guard, held last Saturday afternoon in Holy Name Church, New York. Colonel Crall died suddenly Monday of last week in Bellesar, Fla. The body was brought to New York and taken to his home at 16 West Seventy-sixth street.

Colonel Crall was president of L. H. Crall Advertising Company. He succeeded his father, Leander H. Crall, a pioneer advertising man and one of the best known members of his profession, upon the death of the latter twelve years ago.

Members of the Seventh Regiment, in command of Colonel Wade Hayes, escorted the body from the Crall home to the church, where services were conducted. Non-commissioned officers of Colonel Crall's former command were honorary pallbearers. After the services, the body was taken by special train to Kenisco Cemetery for burial. He retired from the military service in 1919.

which comprises the St. Paul Daily News, the Omaha News, the Minneapolis Rural American and the St. Paul Rural Weekly, died Thursday at his home in St. Paul.

Mr. Asaugh was born in Youngsville, Texas, May 29, 1854, and was educated at the University of Minnesota. He entered the newspaper business in 1874 and was for many years general manager of the Minneapolis Tribune. He was also a member of the Minnesota State Senate and served as mayor of St. Paul. Mr. Asaugh was associated with the late Colonel Howard E. Crall in the establishment of the Crall Advertising Company, which conducted the advertising department of the Minneapolis Tribune and the Chicago American. He was a member of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and the Newspaper Association of America.

FORMER HEAD OF "BIG SIX" DIES IN COLORADO SPRINGS.

Marsden G. Scott, former president of the International Typographical Union, died Monday at Colorado Springs after an illness of ten days' duration. He had lived there two years.

Born in Elmira, N. Y., fifty-eight years ago, Mr. Scott was educated there and about thirty-eight years ago entered the printing trades. For eight years he was employed in various shops and newspaper offices, both as a compositor and typesetter. He was born in Youngsville, Texas, May 29, 1854, and was educated at the University of Minnesota. He entered the newspaper business in 1874 and was for many years general manager of the Minneapolis Tribune. He was also a member of the Minnesota State Senate and served as mayor of St. Paul. Mr. Asaugh was associated with the late Colonel Howard E. Crall in the establishment of the Crall Advertising Company, which conducted the advertising department of the Minneapolis Tribune and the Chicago American. FRED IRLAND, dean of the House official reporters, and known to more than a generation of Washington newsgatherers, died last Wednesday morning, from intestinal troubles following an attack of influenza.

Mr. Irland served through the congressional session just closed. He was sixty-three years old, and had been a member of the staff of official shorthand reporters for twenty-five years. He had been a member of the staff of the House of Representatives from the days of "Tom" Reed's speakership, under whose administration he was appointed. He had been studying for his professional service at the Capitol, where he had personally known every member of the lower house of the Fifty-first Congress in 1889.

A native of New York City, Mr. Irland was educated for the law. He was a member of the bar of his native state, of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, of the District of Columbia court of appeals and the United States supreme court. Among the most expert in his profession, Mr. Irland was also a scholar and linguist, speaking and writing Greek, Latin, German and French, and was an authority on the works of Shakespeare and Hurace. He was president of the National Shorthand Reporters Association and a member of the National Press Club. He is survived by a wife, son and daughter.

AN UNLIMITED MARKET FOR AUTOMOBILES

Day by day in every way, to paraphrase Dr. Coue, the Chicago automobile market is growing better and better. Business is good in Chicago and Chicago people buy all kinds of cars liberally.

Somebody is always buying a new car, a better car, another car, a truck, or fleet of trucks.

This tremendous and constantly growing market is reached most effectively through advertising in The Chicago Daily News, as is shown by the fact that The Daily News prints more automobile advertising than any other Chicago daily newspaper.

With its circulation concentrated 94 per cent in Chicago and its immediate suburbs, The Daily News is read by very nearly all the financially competent people in this great market, and they read it closely for buying information. The reader confidence and esteem it enjoys, the result of more than forty-seven years' efficient newspaper service, are shared by its advertisers. Its interesting and reliable automotive features are closely followed by Chicago car owners and users.

To get your advertising message effectively to the vast majority of Chicago automobile buyers, "join the procession" of experienced and successful automobile sellers in Chicago and place your advertising in

TWO MORE HUGE HOAXES ON BIG CITY DAILIES.

MOVING PICTURE PRESS AGENCY IN NEW YORK AND WASHINGTON FOOLS KEENEST OF EDITORS — EVEN THE WIRE SERVICES FELL FOR "FLIRT CLUB."

Two more surpassingly clever and embarrassingly effective publicity stunts were entered in the lexicon in New York and Washington this week as the result of crafty planning by motion picture press agents. The number of movie publicity hoaxes in the last few months in New York alone now amounts to a figure that can hardly be far short of the total issue of German marks. Even the most suspicious of city editors apparently fail to smell them, and the orgy of free space has even the press agents dizzy. The metropolis devoted a large portion of its time to appreciative reading of the newspaper stories about the Green Room club’s proposal to entertain Otto H. Kahn with a special private performance of “Reigen,” a play guaranteed to have all the qualities that make of it public relations fanon. From blank ignorance about the play’s merits and demerits, the public sprang into an excellently simulated familiarity with its history, virtues and possibilities. As the populace began to envy Mr. Kahn the entertainment arrangement he had made, and as suspicion Mr. Kahn’s sense of propriety, Story number five was what happened on the night of the entertainment. And a public as unsuspecting as the city editors seemed to be all awry, since it came around day after day for more. “Reigen,” it seems, has been made available and is about to be shown. The first story was the fact that the play was to go on, with Mr. Kahn’s presence as a stimulant. The second story was “Strong Protest Against Flirt,” told in detail by Mr. Kahn’s announcement that he thought he’d better not see the thing. The number four was the Green Room club’s decision to have the play, read, instead, of acted, so as to satisfy Mr. Kahn’s sense of propriety. The number five was what happened on the night of the entertainment. And a public as unsuspecting as the city editors seemed to be all awry, since it came around day after day for more. "Reigen," it seems, has been made available and is about to be shown."

INDIANAPOLIS STAR HAS NEW MANAGING EDITOR.

James A. Stuart, for the last two years editorial director of the Rocky Mountain News and Denver Times, has been appointed managing editor of the Indianapolis Star. Mr. Stuart, who assumed his new duties March 5, succeeded the late Ernest Bross, who for two years was managing editor of the paper. Advance comes to Mr. Stuart as the result of his exceptionally efficient service, and in line with the policy of the Shaffer papers to advance into principal positions the men who have proved their ability by performance in the organization. Mr. Stuart, Hoosier by birth, has been continuously with the Shaffer papers since his graduation from Indiana University in 1901, starting with the Muncie, Ind., Star, then going to the Indianapolis Star where he advanced through step, filling practically every position in the news department, including state, Sunday, and assistant managing editor. From the latter position he was called to the managing editorship. He has made a name for himself as a more than equalled the record made in Indiana.

The Shaffer Group, in addition to the Indianapolis Star, includes the following papers: Chicago Evening Post, Rocky Mountain News, Louisville Herald, Terre Haute Star, Denver Times and Muncie Star.

WASHINGTON POST "WET LIST" SETS CAPITAL AGOG.

Names of bootleg buyers, found in raid, provide hot news—protests by chagrined citizens fail to stop publication. Army men lead list.

It is ethical for newspapers to publish the names found entered in the captured list of a bootlegger’s patrons?

Volsteadism has rendered the question postivevless than it would have been, the the appearance of two recent issues of the Washington Post of a "Wet List." The names of more than fifty telegrams were sent during the course of the week to the publisher of the Post, who was in Florida at the time, where he was arrested several times at Mr. Harding and other notables.

The only tangible answer was the second and third names, together with an editorial in the Post, to the effect that the Washington Post has no special interest in such matters, that the Post is not a newspaper of the paper’s settled policy in such matters. The text of the editorial is of interest in connection with it:

There are many varying views as to what a newspaper should be and should not be, but we presume every newspaper in the United States, at least in chief with a function of a newspaper is to print the news. It would not be a true newspaper if it put out any news that was not considered legitimate, colored news or misrepresentations of events. Volsteadism, however, imposes the necessity of publishing the names of bootleggers and their patrons in order to injure private persons or the public welfare. A newspaper, to be true to the people and the public interest, must be fair to all, impartial and devoted to the public interest. There is nothing without fear of intimidation when it publishes the names of the people that they believe the public can support. Hence, if managed properly, it refuses to abuse the public confidence by suppressing true news, by distorting it or by

NEW YORK POSTAL CUT AVERTED TEMPORARILY.

BUT METROPOLIS IS NOT YET OUT OF THE WOODS OF RETRENCHMENT ORDERED BY WASHINGTON TO MAKE UP FOR DEFICITS CREATED ELSEWHERE IN COUNTRY.

Serious curtailing of the postal service in New York City, ordered early this week by the postmaster-general, has been averted, at least temporarily, by the rescinding of the order with the explanation that the post office department at Washington had discovered "extra funds." The retrenchment thus averted, New York was prescribed in spite of the fact that the New York post office is returning the Government a profit of $2,000,000 a month. The post office department declared it necessary to make up for deficits created in other parts of the country.

WON'T CLOSE STATIONS.

The change in the order means that there may be no cutting down of the mail deliveries in the New York district. After publication of the order Postmaster Morgan issued a statement which set forth that he had proposed closing of the various post office substations at 6 o'clock in the evening, but it had been rendered unnecessary.

Assistant Postmaster John J. Kiley said that the 1,800 so-called substitute or extra letter carriers, ordered out until July 1, in the early order, would not be laid off, but would be used on the "extra funds" if found, to perfect a plan of reducing the number of mail deliveries for two weeks, and many things may happen in two weeks.

MAY FIND MORE FUNDS.

The additional money that Postmaster-General New has found for the New York district is not sufficient to alleviate all of the trouble that Postmaster Morgan was contending with, but there are rumors that the delivery service too will be rescued within the near future.

The New York post office did a business of $5,016,592.84 last year, with a payroll of $29,000,000, and a fairly good operation.

The cutting down in the service means that New York will be forced to bear part of the burden laid upon the yearly deficit. The 1,800 men who are affected, while rated substitute carriers, are employed almost continuously because the 15,000 regular employees cannot possibly carry on the business.

A REAL EMERGENCY.

"I cannot tell the exact amount to which our expenditures will be limited until the end of the fiscal year, June 30," Postmaster Morgan declared, but we are going to get away with it something of a mystery. In January alone our business increased 17 percent.

"We must get the mail out and we will do it as fast as possible. There is no temporary readjustment of routes and timetables for deliveries and collections. We have a post office plan yet, but we shall do it at once.

"Mr. Morgan said a cutting down of deliveries may be necessary. If the 1,800 men were idle, it would mean that different parts of the city would be cut one, two, or three deliveries a day.

FAMOUS WALDORF LONG MECCA OF PUBLISHERS.

HOTEL'S CELEBRATION OF ITS THIRTIETH ANNIVERSARY WILL STIR MEMORIES OF MANY — RECEPTION THERE BY THE FOURTH ESTATE IN 1896 RECALLED.

Publishers all over the country, who have made the Waldorf-Astoria the center of their activities at conventions, shared the general interest aroused by the celebration this week of the thirtieth anniversary of the hotel. The linking of publishers' interests with the history of the Waldorf, however, began two years before the American Newspaper Publishers Association began holding its conventions there, by reason of a reception given by THE FOURTH ESTATE at conventions.

WIFE OF PUBLISHER WILL CHRISTEN BOAT NAMED IN HIS HONOR.

The William R. Hearst, the first of three steel ferryboats, the last word in the construction of such craft to be used by the city of New York between Cortlandt street, New York, and St. George, Staten Island, will be launched at the yards of the Staten Island Shipbuilding Company, Marinier's Harbor, at nine o'clock this morning. Mrs. William Randolph Hearst will christen the boat as it slides into the water.

The ferryboat, which is 210 feet long, sixty feet beam and twelve feet draught, will have cost $50,000 when completed. It will be in service in April.

The Hearst and the other two boats which are to be placed in ferry service to be operated especially for ferry service, and are equipped with four runways, instead of two, as on other ferryboats, will be particularly spacious and are also a spacious saloon deck above. The boats are to be electrically operated with turbo-electric engines.

OLYANOA PAPER CHANGES NAME AND OWNERSHIP.

NAME AND OWNERSHIP OF OAHOKA PAPER CAMPS CHANGED TO THE OKLAHOMA SUN WITH THE ISSUE OF MARCH 1, WHEN ONE OF THE BUSINESS MEN WAS ADOPTED TO A R. Garrett, former deputy postmaster at the state penitentiary, Mr. Garrett's brother, A. Garrett, is now the Sun. T. W. Hunter is business manager.

The Oklahoma State Journal, occupying the second floor of the Waldorf on the Fifth Avenue side.

On Wednesday of this week the ousous hotel's anniversary was observed at a luncheon given by L. M. Bloomer, president, and Roy Carruthers, managing director of the Waldorf. The famous Oscar, maître de hotel, and the only one of his staff who has been continuously connected with it since its start, was the lion of the occasion, and for the first time in his long career enjoyed the sensation of sitting through a Waldorf banquet as a guest. Practically the entire staff of the hotel were guests with him, and the affair reached the topnotch of Waldorf democracy, for the waiters and financiers, telephone girls and captains of industry, coat-room clerks and merchant princes sat side by side and swapped reminiscences with each other. Room clerks, dishwashers, silver polishers, "cold meat" men, and others connected with the hotel force for long periods of years were among the guests.

Robert Grier Cooke was chairman of the committee. He sent invitations to the 169 members of the hotel staff who had been a decade or more in its service, and are equipped with four runways, instead of two, as on other ferryboats, and is also a spacious saloon deck above. The boats are to be electrically operated with turbo-electric engines.

RELIABILITY—CHARACTER—ENTERPRISE
FOOD INFLUENCE OF NEWSPAPERS IMPORTANT.

NEWS THAT AIDS HOUSEWIFE BUILD COMMUNITY FAITH AND ADVERTISING VALUE—SIX PAGES OF FOOD COPY IN SINGLE ISSUE OF THE TRENTON TIMES.

Food news and food advertising are now established among the most important of the services that the daily newspaper renders its readers. The food influence that the newspapers is the natural result of the increased editorial attention which has been given to the housewife and her culinary problems.

One remarkable example of the food influence exerted by newspapers was furnished the other night by Dr. Royal C. Copeland, former commissioner of New York and now United States senator. He told of a section in New York that covers one square mile in area, in which 500,000 people are crowded together. Mexico City, on the contrary, in which in the infant mortality rate is only five per cent, as compared with ten per cent in a certain section in the Riverside Drive zone.

FAITH IN NEWSPAPERS.

This almost paradoxical situation was explained by Dr. Copeland by the faith that the mothers in the crowded tenements have in the food news and the food advertising furnished by their newspapers. His investigators frequently turned up the fact that these mothers, religious to a degree, guard the health of their children as carefully as possible in the face of the many obstacles offered by tenement life, that the newspaper food pages are read religiously.

One representative newspaper that has achieved remarkable results in the food news, cooking suggestions, recipes, etc., is the Trenton Times. In recent issue thirty-four separate food advertisements, representing 160 local food stores, were cut in. The Times makes Thursday its food feature day, and it has built into a feature that is read very regularly; five times, and in some cases, six times a week, as is described above, six pages are required.

NEWS DID IT.

Owen Moon, Jr., business manager of the Times, is convinced that the food news department and the food advertising are two of the strongest features in the paper. The detailed attention given to helping the housewives of the Jersey capital with their food problems is directly responsible for the present power of the Times as a food merchandising paper, Mr. Moon declares.

NORRISTOWN HERALD CHIEF RESIGNS.

Gilbert S. Jones, general manager of the Norristown, Pa., Herald, has resigned to go to California for a long vacation, intended to be a rest cure and to sort out the present newspaper financial situation. Mr. Jones expressed great regret at severing his long connection with Ralph Beaver Strassburger, who purchased the Herald in November, 1921.

MOTHER OF PAUL PATTERSON PASSES AWAY.

Mrs. J. March Patterson, mother of Paul C. Patterson, publisher of the Baltimore Sun and president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, died at her home in Chicago Thursday. She was born in Jacksonville, Ill., in 1851.

PUBLISHERS' REPRESENTATIVE OPENS COLUMBUS OFFICE.

Robert E. Ward, Inc., publishers' representative of Chicago and New York, has opened an office in Columbus with Harry B. Gramm, well-known merchandising man, in charge. Mr. Gramm will serve as Ohio sales manager and director of research, co-operating with advertisers and advertising agencies. The Ward agency represents the Ohio Select List of Newspapers.

PITTSBURG PRESS CLUB'S BANQUET BIG AFFAIR.

Pittsburg newspaper men, their families and friends, joined in making successful the annual banquet and dance of the Pittsburg Press Club, one of the oldest organizations of its kind in the country, held last week in the Hotel Chatham. More than 300 persons attended the affair.

Dinner was served at 6:30 p.m., when an issue of the Flaming Torch, the publication of the club was released. Reproductions of the front pages of the last issue of the Pittsburgh Dispatch and Leader, with photographs of the employees who were in the service when the newspapers sounded "30," were features of the club banquet. Kin Hubbard, who had been in the service, was in attendance.

Courses of the dinner were interspersed with numbers presented by actors and actresses - from local theaters.

Dancing and cards followed the dinner. A reception at the clubhouse in Fourth Avenue enabled actors and guests to see the first issue of the magazine that had attended the Hotel Chatham event.

STUNT INCREASES WANT ADS PULLING POWER.

To create greater interest in its classified pages the Detroit Evening Times each week offers readers $1.50 for letters, choosing "best" want ads and telling why. Each reader has a chance to submit seven choices of the best advertisements and their reasons why, one for each day of the week.

The first prize is $50, the second $30 and the third $20, with the next five best opinions receiving $10 each. The aim of the paper was to have readers peruse the want ads more closely, to get worthwhile information and to get more want ads.

LARGEST RETAIL ACCOUNT FOUND IN INDIANAPOLIS.

WM. H. BLOCK CO. USES MORE SPACE IN INDIANAPOLIS NEWS THAN ANY OTHER STORE USES IN ANY ONE NEWSPAPER—NEW RECORD LIKELY FOR 1923.

One of the many remarkable features of the advertising department of the Indianapolis News is the recent discovery of the News that, in the advertising space for the William H. Block Company, it has the largest department store account possessed by any one newspaper in the country.

Careful examination of all available records showed that the Block stores runs more copy every year in the News than any other store runs in any newspaper.

Under the direction of Frank T. Carman, advertising manager of the News, the company has developed a relationship with its retail advertisers that is remarkable. The company has meant to the News not only the procuring of information for the national advertiser, but the utilization of its position in the retailer's mind as a merchandising medium, and upon such a foundation that the largest retail account in the country has been built.

Non-cancelable advertising, backing up products either established in or entering into the Indianapolis market, has been placed by the News on a non-cancelable contract basis and with confidence and attention. The retailer realizes that there is not the slightest element of chance in buying in merchandise which has the pressure of assured localized copy behind it.

Mr. Carroll attributes much of the News' success to the non-cancelable contract. "All newspaper advertising has valuable dealer influence," he locates, "and definite promises of space to be used by the manufacturer should not be expected to get more than definite promises of support from the retailer."

The Block department store's merchandising methods have distinguished it among retail establishments. It has a list of regular dealers, with annual price lists and its own trade papers and other authorities as one of the most efficiently merchandised stores in the country. If it maintains its present pace, its 1923 advertising line-up in the News will eclipse that of 1922 by a considerable margin. Business in Indianapolis has been "back to normal" for a long time.

Good Pictures Wanted

The reader of yesterday has become the "looker" of to-day. He wants to see — to visualize the news — with just enough reading matter to cover the important points and to explain the pictures. He is in a hurry.

It is strange that America, where all worthwhile printing machinery and processes are invented and perfected, should be years behind European countries in the ability of its newspapers to print good pictures in their daily editions. But such is the fact. London and Paris have many dailies made up largely of good news pictures, beautifully reproduced, the poorest of which, typographically, is infinitely better than the best in America.

Why? Because in Europe, with minor exceptions, all newspapers use the dry mat process of stereotyping, which is admittedly superior to the old fashioned wet-mat steam-table system for reproducing pictures and to give sharp clean printing.

The WOOD DRY MAT (made in America) when tested recently in newspaper plants abroad proved to be as good and in many respects superior to the English and German dry mats, (none of the best of which come to this market) and in consequence WOOD DRY MATS are now being exported.

We stand ready to convince any newspaper publisher or mechanical superintendent that the WOOD DRY MAT, when used with the proper equipment, will reproduce pictures better and give sharper and cleaner printing than will any home-made steam table-dried wet mat.

The newspaper that fails to appreciate the value of good news pictures must soon slip backwards. The public wants pictures, well printed pictures, and plenty of them.

The WOOD DRY MAT is the medium.

ADVERTISING CONFERENCE WITH EXHIBITS AT BALTIMORE.

More than one hundred churchwomen and men, clergy and laity, gathered at Hotel Emerson, Baltimore, last Tuesday on the occasion of the church conference on advertising arranged by the Baltimore Advertising Club.

The conference was opened with invocation by Rev. L. E. McCarley of the Baltimore Federation of Churches. President W. Dwight Burroughs followed with a word of welcome to the church people, after which he turned the confererce over to Wilbur N. Van Sant, chairman of the church advertising committee of the club.

A helpful feature of the conference was the accompanying exhibit of church advertising. These covered many fields in which churches here and elsewhere have launched their activities in coming the highways and hedges. This exhibit occupied one end of the banquet hall of the Emerson, and taking up one-half of the wall space of the big hall.

PRESS NOT TO BE RULED BY STATE COMMISSION.

PROPOSED BODY WOULD HAVE NO JURISDICTION OVER NEWS ASSOCIATION IN NEW YORK STATE, SAYS LOCKWOOD COMMITTEE'S LEGAL ADVISER.

The state trade commission that would be created under the Lockwood committee's bill would have no jurisdiction over the news associations in New York state, Samuel Untermyer, the committee's legal adviser, made plain this week. The associations would not be required to have a license under the bill as they come under associations where labor is the sole constituent.

"The claim is preposterous; especially the grotesque assertion that the commission would have power to refuse a license to a newspaper or agency," Mr. Untermyer said yesterday, answering a query of the New York World regarding the matter.

"The commission's jurisdiction is expressly limited to associations dealing in commodities in common use. Associations where labor is the sole constituent, as with the news gathering associations, are expressly excluded. Even if such associations were required to have licenses, the penalties are not the requirement but are mere form under Section 30. They are not price fixing associations.

"If any man were to doubt this construction, he would gladly approve insertion in the bill of a clause to that effect," Mr. Untermyer said.

The Merchants' Association of New York following the statement of Mr. Untermyer declared that it stood by its opinion that the news associations come within the scope of the bill proposed in legislature. The association in its subsequent statements said:

"Sponsors of the State Trade Commission bill, now pending in the State Senate, have placed themselves in a dilemma as regards the application of the bill to associations of newspapers and magazines and similar matters vital to the publishing business," the committee said. The practice of co-operative advertising, which may be exercised by the proposed State Trade Commission, if it should have any jurisdiction regarding these matters, is very obvious and the sponsors of the bill have been full of explanations since this point was first raised.

AD MEN HEAR INTERESTING TALK ON DRAMATIC CRITICISM.

Alexander Woollcott, dramatic editor of the New York Herald, speaking before the members of the Advertising Club of New York last week, said that one of the first delusions is that dramatic critics work as a group to make or break a play.

This cannot be so. They haven't the time. To catch the morning papers the dramatic critics must, as rubbings about 10.26 p.m., beat it rapidly for the awaiting typewriter and crash the criticism with speed so as to get home as early as possible.

As a matter of fact, dramatic critics are often not on speaking terms and have a sort of prima-donna dislike for each other, Mr. Woollcott confided.

"This state of affairs leads to the second delusion that dramatic criticism is not worth while because it is so hurried. Most dramatic critics have about thirty minutes to decide as a fact, if it is good or not. Generally, however, these men are capable critics and make few mistakes," the speaker asserted.

"Another feeling on the part of the public is that the criticism should be filled with big words and long dissertations. In reality the criticisms that live longest are the terse expressions of opinions such as Eugene Field's on a performance of 'King Lear.' NEWSPAPER WORK OFFERS SPLENDID OPPORTUNITIES.

HEAD OF PUBLISHING FIRM DEFINES JOURNALISM AS VOCATION OFFERING "BEST TRAINING FOR ASPIRING AUTHORS AND GENERAL STUDENTS IN AMERICA."

"Journalism today offers greater opportunities to college men and women than almost any other profession," and "Journalism is one of the great liberal arts," said John B. Giblyn, head of the publishing firm of B. J. Giblyn and Company, at the annual banquet of the University of Arkansas journalism students on March 17.

Giblyn defined journalism as the vocation offering "best training for aspiring authors and general students in America."

"Journalism today offers greater opportunities to college men and women than almost any other profession," said Giblyn. "Journalism is one of the great liberal arts." He spoke of the opportunities offered by journalism to college students.

Giblyn also discussed the important role of newspapers in society and the responsibilities of journalists.

"The newspaper world offers as much opportunity for the woman as for the man," said Giblyn. "In journalism, as in any other profession, the important thing is to find the right place for the right person." He emphasized the importance of education and training in journalism.

CARTOONIST TELLS SERIOUSNESS OF BEING FUNNY.

MUCH THOUGHT MUST BE PUT ON WORDING OF CARTOONS; IDEA MUST BE PUT ACROSS IN SIMPLEST MANNER “RUBE” GOLDBERG TELLS AUDIENCE IN ROCHESTER.

“Some people have the idea that all we cartoonists have to do is sit down with pen in hand and the humor simply drop with the ink. I assure you that is not true. The trouble is that cartooning these days is not as simple as that. There are days when you don’t feel very funny,” he told a Rochester, N. Y. audience a few days ago in a talk on the “Seriousness of Being Funny—Laugh and the World Will Only Follow With You.” He demonstrated with crayon the method of developing his cartoon ideas.

“Being a cartoonist is a serious business, not too serious but serious enough. While the idea for all of our material comes from the study of human nature, its ups and downs and inconsistencies should prove that our work does not deal with the joys of life alone. And that is just where we get most of our material, from those around us.”

You know, I can’t help but feel that there is a good sized place in the world for the cartoonist. I don’t mean that in a conceited way, but we can say things that a minister can’t. People do not like to be lectured, but if you can make them see their little faults by portraying them in a humorous sketch that does not offend them as direct ridicule would be apt to do, they are not accomplishing some good. Our thoughts reach the people, they read them, or we wouldn’t be in the business.”

When asked whether he received many suggestions from persons through the mail Mr. Goldberg said, “a hundred and three, but very few. The great trouble with suggestions of that kind is that they are so often dependent on the humor of some local situation, while I draw cartoons for papers all over the country. I have many ideas but can’t be worked out in pictures.”

In explaining the method of developing Mr. Goldberg said that he drew a week’s work at a time. “A great deal of thought has to go into the wording of the cartoons,” he said. “The idea must be put across in the simplest manner. In the cartoons where there are 12 pictures in the story, it is the same as writing a playlet or scenario. It really is not as simple as one would suppose. Of course, we are greatly aided in our work by the seasons. They give us all kinds of opportunities. Christmas, the Fourth of July, and the like.”

Mr. Goldberg was born in San Francisco, Calif., in 1883, went to the University of California. There he studied mining engineering, but didn’t like it. He entered the cartooning field, and was put on the staff of the Evening Mail, staying with that paper until he left for the McNaught Syndicate. He originated “Foolish Questions.” He also did “Mike and Ike,” “They Look Alike,” “Gove Himself,” and “Life’s Little Jokes.”

SUNDAY AD COPY INCREASING IN FAVOR.

TO DISCONTINUE USING THE SUNDAY NEWSPAPERS STEP BACKWARD DECLARES ONE DEPARTMENT STORE AD MAN—PULLING POWER REGISTERS EVERY DAY IN WEEK.

Sunday department store advertising has been placed on a sound foundation in New York and other large metropolitan cities. Discontinuance of the Sunday space is regarded by some of the great department stores of New York, Boston and Philadelphia never have used Sunday copy and enjoy a large volume of business. Some of these same advertising men believe that greater success would reward these stores were they to use space on the seventh day.

The reaction of the Sunday advertising messages do not compare highly with the responses received years ago. Monday specials were offered, store advertising men have admitted. The advertising is equally as effective however as times have changed.

A CHANGE IN TONE.

Prestige building advertisements have given way in many respects in the old time department store advertisements. Evidence that the Sunday copy registers its pulling power is found during the week the Sunday papers have changed with the times and are along the “fancy” line. Many are being made up alone and is proof that the reproduction of Sunday copy and its pulling power is evident by the increases that are being made in the advertising space.

A large Fifth avenue department store recently gave serious consideration to the idea of discontinuing Sunday copy because of the rate. In analyzing the situation the store cited that thirty per cent of its appropriation went for Sunday advertising. This was an increase of twenty per cent over the week’s total. While the store has only 200 per cent of the advertising space it is as amounting to Just as much money.

One of the managers of a Sunday advertising space in New York said: “I see absolutely no reason on any basis to not advertise on Sunday except on the score of religious scruples.”

INDIANA ENROLLMENT JUMPS; FIFTY-FIVE ON STAFF OF COLLEGE DAILY.

For the first time the enrollment in the department of journalism at Indiana University has passed the 200 mark. Exactly 255 students enrolled in courses in journalism and advertising during the first semester.

Fifty-five are taking the course in practical newspaper work on the Indiana Daily Student. This paper, with its pony Associated Press report, serves as a morning paper for the city of Bloomington as well as the university daily.

One of the innovations in the department of journalism this year is a two-quarter course in the small college daily and the country weekly given by Associate Professor Norman M. Radder. The course covers the editorial, advertising, circulation, business, and mechanical problems of the smaller papers.

EMBRYONIC JOURNALISTS AT AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE ISSUE PAPER.

Publishing of an issue of a newspaper as a final exam was the assignment given to students in the journalism course at the North Dakota Agricultural College at Fargo, by R. O. Nafrager, instructor.

The embryonic journalists got out the March 9 issue of the Weekly Spectrum, college publication, and their marks for the term of work will be awarded according to the showing they made.

The students were required to secure and write up all the stories, write the heads, lay out the pages, read the proofs, and secure enough advertisements to pay expenses. An organizing editor was appointed who used the twenty-five members of the journalistic class as his staff and made special assignments to cover all important college news stories breaking at that time.

STOCKHOLDERS MEET.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Bemidji, Minn., Pioneer Publishing Company, G. E. Carson was re-elected president of the company, M. W. Pierce, vice-president, Louis Rudy, director succeeding E. H. Denu on the board of directors: A. J. Wilte, managing editor and secretary. Mr. Wilte was formerly superintendent of the Hibbing, Minn., Daily News. He was at one time owner of the Bagley Independent.

Fred Fraser continues as advertising manager. The few changes which were made in the company were brought about through the recent withdrawal of E. H. Denu as managing editor, secretary and manager, after an association of thirteen years.

NEW MEXICO NEWSPAPERS CONSOLIDATE.

Consolidation of the Las Cruces, N. M., Rio Grande Republic and Organized Farming has been effected, under the name of the Rio Grande Farmer. The publication claims the distinction of being a farmer’s newspaper controlled and supervised by farmers. It has for its slogan “To make the home farmer prosperous.”

Consolidation of newspapers in the state has been going on for some time. The Colorado Farmer and the Heart of the West, have already merged and the Colorado Farmer is now in its second year.

COLORADO SPRINGS FARM NEWS MOVES INTO MORE MODERN HOME.

The Colorado Springs Farm News, the publication of John Green and Judge W. C. Cunningham, has moved into its new home at 780 North Nevada avenue, a short distance from the location which it has occupied since 1910.

In the new location the Democrat Publishing Company has one of the best equipped and most modern printing establishments in the state of Colorado. Nearly twice as much floor space is available, as compared to that afforded by the old site.

The mechanical and editorial rooms have been so arranged as to make for increased efficiency. Better natural lighting facilities have been made possible by special building plans, the lighting system has been specially planned.
WHAT F. W. AYER DID TO BUILD ADVERTISING.

BEGAN LONG, CONSTRUCTIVE CAREER AT TIME WHEN BUSINESS MEN REGARDED ADVERTISING AS A SNARE—WON TRUST AND CONFIDENCE BY SINCERE DEALING.

A man who, untrumped, did much to make American business and particularly American advertising honest and responsible was F. W. Ayer. Ayer, writes B. C. Forbes, business editor of the New York newspapers, was John Wasamaker's more responsible man for an advertising business than any other man for bringing about honorable undertakings in high finance, and for being responsible than any other man for bringing about truth and honesty in every business.

BELIEVED IN ADVERTISING.

"Not long ago," says Mr. Forbes, "I spent a day or two with Mr. Ayer at his unique dairy farm and milk and butter factories in eastern New York, where he has, through many years' interest, revolutionized farming and brought prosperity in his hard work hardship to all farmers over a wide area. Mr. Ayer, he said to me, the first time he had ever done so, he declared."

"Here is how Mr. Ayer described to me his very first introduction to advertising by a publisher in Philadelphia:"

"'He beckoned me to come and look out of a window. As he pointed down to a business street he said with great conviction: 'All the way down the street people are engaged in business. They are buying, selling, dealing, providing, eating, clothing, entertaining. They have to buy, sell, deal, provide, eat, wear, entertain. All these occupations involve the carrying on of business, and that means advertising.'"

"'The man who, untrumpeted, has made the most of the advertising business, is the man who has done most to make advertising a recognized profession.'"

"'My dissatisfaction with the advertising agencies and the manufacturers and publishers is not with the agencies and the manufacturers and publishers, but with the man who is in business and in a community and who has not used advertising as a means of building his business and of being honest and of being responsible.'"

"'Advertising is the business of telling people what they want to know. It is the business of giving people the facts. It is the business of informing people.'"

"'My dissatisfaction with the advertising agencies and the manufacturers and publishers is not with the agencies and the manufacturers and publishers, but with the man who is in business and in a community and who has not used advertising as a means of building his business and of being honest and of being responsible.'"

SOVIET ECONOMICS AND AMERICAN NEWS PRINT.

RUSSIA WILL BECOME LARGE IMPORTER OF ALL KINDS OF PAPER WITHIN NEXT TEN YEARS — BOLSHEVISM HAS RUINED INDUSTRY IN AFFLICTED COUNTRY.

By F. T. Harris, Assistant Vice-President, International Paper Company.

As the new economic policy of the Soviet government of Russia will apparently in the not distant future affect either directly or indirectly every paper manufacturer on the North American Continent, it seems timely to survey briefly the Russian paper industry and its economic background, and then to determine what will be the effect of the new policy on our own industry.

Although before the war Russian paper mills supplied only eighteen percent of the total domestic consumption of all kinds of paper, yet it is obvious that Russia's enormous forest wealth and waterpowers will ultimately place the country among the great paper-producing nations of the world. This will not be realized, however, for over a decade, as the rebuilding of Russian industry must proceed by districts, and a return to normal industrial life on a national basis cannot possibly be expected within that period. Then, too, the eventual construction of paper mills can only be accomplished with the support of the government, as the greater part of the forest area is owned by the state.

During the next ten years Russia must therefore be an importer of paper on a vast scale. The latest authentic information available shows that imports of paper are consistently increasing monthly. Finland, as before the war, again leads; and Russia's paper supply, and the German, Czechoslovakia, and Estonian are showing a marked increase.

When one considers that before the war, in 1913, Russia produced 424,000 tons of papers of all kinds; of which 30,000 tons or one, one receives a vivid picture of how Bolshevism has ruined a large number of paper manufacturers and other industries. And the picture becomes more vivid when it is known that the production of all kinds of paper decreased from 34,688 pounds per man per year in 1920, to 20,000 workmen, or only twenty percent less, produced 40,800, ninety percent less paper. One of the causes of this lowered individual productivity is the inferior physical condition of the workmen. In addition to the physical hardships they must suffer, the workmen, as a good part of their wages, about forty percent being taken for the workman, have therefore been in the past unable to organize. We must not be surprised if in the coming years the Russian movement for labor conscription is increased. Workers, however, will fight for their own industry, for the greater part of the forest area is owned by the state.

HOW REWARDS OF NEWSPAPER WORK ARE REACHED.

REPORTERS URGED TO "READ, READ, READ," AND STICK TO SIMPLICITY AND TRUTH—MAN ON STREET PIVOT OF NEWSPAPER SUCCESS, AND TRAINING IS VITAL.

"Reporting at Home and Abroad" was the subject of an address by Philip Kinsley of the N. Y. Daily News to reporters in Columbus, Ohio. The address was given on March 17, 1923, and was published in the Columbus Dispatch on March 18.

Kinsley urged reporters to "read, read, read," and to stick to simplicity and truth. He pointed out that the man on the street is the pivot of newspaper success, and that training is vital.

Kinsley said, "The simple news story is best. Words must be second to a half knowledge. Credit your readers with imagination. Restrain the writer." He emphasized the importance of accuracy and fairness in reporting.

Kinsley also spoke about the importance of reading. He said, "You will not be a good reporter unless you read a great deal." He recommended reading the works of other good reporters, as well as books and other sources of information.

Kinsley concluded his address by saying, "Do not mislead your city editor. Be careful in money affairs. Stand up for yourself as a reporter. And read, read, read."

NEWS WRITING TO PUT OVER FUND DRIVE.

De Pauw University Sets Journalism Students at Work Pounding Out Copy for $1,500,000 Endowment A Hell to Alumni and Friends.

News writing at De Pauw University, Greencastle, Ind., will be one of the important factors in the $1,500,000 endowment drive that the college has just launched. C. W. Crist, campaign director, has entrusted the publicity end of the drive to the class in news writing editing under the direction of Professor E. Mitchell, head of the Journalism Department.

Through the news bureau that the class operates stories will be syndicated to newspapers and journals in different parts of the country. In this way alumni and friends of the university will receive timely information about the progress of the campaign.

Every two weeks the class appoints a managing editor and a city editor. These editors make up the daily public service, copy a scrap book of all stories written by the other students, and send out items to the various papers.

No city daily is too large.

Classes in feature writing and advertising will assist the news editing class in its publicity work.

To test the efficiency of this arrangement, the Journalism Department will keep a scrap book of all stories printed during the drive. At the close of the campaign this book will be displayed.

De Pauw's official publication in journalism courses has been rapid at De Pauw. Several years ago aspiring reporters had nothing to work with except a pad and typewriter or two. Now through the addition of a new printing press, a systematic bulletin board, and more typewriters, the little journalism laboratory has acquired the real newspaper atmosphere.

JOURNALISM SCHOOL TO GIVE STORY WRITING COURSE.

Magazine and short story writing will be features of the summer work of De Pauw University of Washington school of journalism next summer.

The courses will be taught by Nelson Omnipresent Crawford, head of the department of journalism at Kansas State Agricultural College. Mr. Crawford formerly was secretary of the American Association of Journalism Teachers, and has been a contributor to the Nation, the Bookman, the Dial and the Midland magazines.

During the last two years, students in these courses in the University of Washington have sold between twenty-five and thirty manuscripts.

WASHINGTON "DEADLINERS" TO HEAR LECTURES.

Members of the "Deadline Club" of the University of Washington have arranged a series of addresses on "The Newspaperman's Authority on News, Editorial, Libel Laws, Advertising, Circulation and Mechanical Equipment." The second lecture scheduled for next week, will be delivered by a prominent lawyer on the subject of "Local Law as it Affects Columbia." New members admitted at the last meeting were Walter D. Haight of the Washington Herald and Milton Mackaye of the Washington News.

SCARED NEWSPAPER WORST OF ALL 'FAIDY CATS, COLUMNIST OPINES.

Jay E. House, the versatile conductor of the "On Second Thought" column of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, doubts the infinite wisdom of the rival editorial column on his own paper, as also those of other papers. In the opinion of Mr. House, "His editorial boys" frequent the "straddle" serious public questions, not so much because they admit they don't know the answer as because they are afraid to take sides.

Mr. House was led to his dis- creetion by the refusal of as readers to be informed which set of newspapers was right about the penetration of the Ruehl by the French—those who approved or those who approved or those who condemned. Thus Mr. House in reply:

"We don't know much about the Ruehl—muddling—this for the editorial boys—and we shall probably make the fact apparent in discussing it. But we don't think it is a question officially frowned upon by this Government. It's something the Government can't do anything about.

"We haven't the slightest excuse or reason for muddying it, and so we did mess into it we could do nothing. It is not, in its present manifestation, a political question. It's a peculiar one.

"The gentlemen in Washington, who, in a manner of speaking, run this country, know it and they are, wisely, we think, keeping out of it. "We don't think, either, that the newspapers are one in condemning it. We know one—our favorite newspaper, by the way—that has come as far in the direction of the French as diplomacy warranted. The trouble with the newspapers that are against it is that they're afraid of self-scrapping. They are scared stiff they'll violate precedent and lose a couple of subscribers."

A scarred newspaper—and despising those who believe hundreds of them—is the biggest 'fraidy cat in the world. It's always scared of what the public is going to think. Whereas, our notion of the way to run a newspaper is to make the public think of what it is going to think. But we may be wrong. At any rate we own no newspaper."

BANKER TELLS DAKOTANS NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING BRINGS BEST RESULTS.

Competition in business is coming back into the world with a vengeance and the merchant, manufacturer or banker who expects to get ahead from this time must fight his way upward, declared George Woodruff of Chicago, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic, in an address before the South Dakota Bankers Association.

Advertising, he asserted, is the most effective of all weapons in the fight for business and among the various kinds of advertising, newspaper advertising is unquestionably the "big Bertha" of them all.

First, you must secure interest," he continued for the advertiser must be so well laid out, so attractive, advertising is unquestionably the "big Bertha" of them all.

Secondly, you must create in the mind of your prospect the desire to patronize your bank and make use of your facility. You must show how and why it is advisable from the reader's viewpoint to save money. "Granting that your advertisement has aroused interest and created desire, if it is to obtain maximum re-

WHAT THE AGENCY
WANTS SMALL PAPERS TO DO.

FOUR A's SECRETARY OFFERS VALUABLE SUGGESTIONS TO NEBRASKA PUBLISHERS — AUTHENTICATED FACTS, IN TELLIGENTLY PRESENTED,
WILL WORK WONDERS.

Wise and interesting counsel is furnished small town and country newspapers as to ways and means of selling advertising space in a letter from James O'Shaughnessy, executive secretary of the American Association of Advertising Agencies to Ole Buck, secretary of the Nebraska Press Association. Mr. O'Shaughnessy holds that there is a most encouraging future for the country papers in the field of national advertising, and makes several concrete suggestions that will tend to make the small canceller better understood by advertising agencies.

Making specific suggestions for Mr. Buck for members of the Nebraska association, Mr. O'Shaughnessy said:

"First, the weekly papers of Nebraska should be completely listed. Second, rates should be given. Third, circulation should be given. These three things done, and you then can offer the total country circulation or a purchasable quantity. That quantity is much more saleable than the same publications scattered and incompletely listed could ever be.

PROPER PRESENTATION.

"When your association can say here is every established country newspaper in Nebraska; here is the circulation; here is the rate per inch of each, and every member of our association endorses the circulation and the figures of every paper on the list"—when you can say that, then you have a splendid offer to make to the advertising agency placing national business.

"As you know, the trouble is in getting information to the country weeklies. We have trouble getting the rates; we have trouble getting the circulation figures; we even have trouble getting subscriptions of weeklies to verify the fact that the paper is still in existence.

"This is the association you how valuable would be such a list covering the entire state. That list should be placed in the hands of every agency. I am enclosing copy of our revised roster. We will supply this roster to all of your members. The work of handling orders is a big and complicated task for a list as large as yours.

PRIZES FOR READERS WHO GUESS CIRCULATION.

The Buffalo Times has begun a circulation estimating contest that has some new features. Readers are asked to estimate the average daily circulation for the period from March 5 to April 21. Blanks are numbered consecutively beginning with number one on March 5, and each contestant must turn in at least one blank from any one day's issue as he chooses, which gives him a chance to make the list more complete. The campaign was in charge of John C. Montgomery.

The Troy, N. Y., Times has started a similar contest, which is run under the direction of John C. Montgomery. Automobiles and cash prizes will be giveniffsuring the most votes issued in paid in advance subscriptions.

of safety, and it ought to go up one hundred per cent in every state while the legislature is in session.

THE ONLY WAY TO FIND THE ANSWER.

Discussing the irrepressible question as to whether American or British advertising writers are superior, the New York Evening Telegraph makes a very pertinent and diverting suggestion that an interesting group of ad writers might provide the answer. And the Telegraph goes on to indicate that it has the utmost faith in the home talent.

The statement is credited to Sir Charles Higham, well-known British advertising expert, on his last visit here. The writer of advertising put greater punch in the copy is open to argument, the Telegraph declares. Sir Charles specified that the English writer excels in clearness of expression, but the American art of picturization is superior.

"This is singular," the Telegraph comments, "not to say paradoxical, seeing that much of the advertising abroad is prepared by British copywriters. But this is the common complaint, the accompanying reading matter lacking in clearness or less attractive and appealing than that in the London publications?"

EDITORIAL VIRTUE AGAIN GOES UNAPPRECIATED.

Long-suffering newspaper editors have been subjected to a storm of criticism the other day when the "record fever" of 114 developed by Miss Emma Lyon's of San Francisco, who put the aid of a hot water bottle was found to be a fraud. Although this singular young woman had succeeded for three weeks in deceiving a dozen physicians, the more frequent ones were put upon the part of the public to blame the newspapers for giving space to her.

It is impossible to estimate intelligently how many newspaper readers would have been too useful for themselves and realize that this is the entire exposition of the alertness and thoroughness of the American press. It is safe to vent its spleen at the object that happened was small, for human nature tends to vent its spleen at the object that happened was large.

There was an example of the American newspaper right on the job to carry news of a happening of interest to the public. However, the proposition was small, for human nature tends to vent its spleen at the object that happened was large. It is safe to vent its spleen at the object that happened was small.

"What marvelous interest the newspapers have shown in his history," Mr. Smith declares. "If newspapers did not know what to do with the information they read, they would not be so interested in the information they read. But they read nothing but the newspapers these days. People are interested in the newspapers, and the newspapers are interested in people."

The papers could lift the nation if they would look for these cases."

One favorably disposed critic of the press has come forward in the person of Rev. Christian F. Reisner of New York, who has written: "The American press has the courage and the imagination to produce a national product..."

Encouraged by the result of the last year's advertising, the American Chicle Company has started an even stronger publicity campaign for 1923. Extensive newspaper campaigns are to be used in newspapers throughout the year, featuring brands that have already established a national reputation.

The newspaper campaigns will feature different brands in each territory, and the copy is to be supplemented with humorous pictures portraying the antics of the "Flavory Flour". These "Funniest" ads are designed to attract immediate attention.

THE FOURTH ESTATE

PURELY PERSONAL

James E. Pollard, director of the Ohio State University news bureau at Columbus, has been elected to membership in Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalistic fraternity at the university. Miss Mary Stein, formerly with the Charleston, S. C., News and Courier, is now advertising woman and will give special attention to advertising space for newspapers. She had been connected with the Book of Mormon's chamber of commerce publication. Dean H. Dickason and Harvey T. Sechman, graduates of the University of Colorado, and recently employed on the Rocky Mountain News, are members of a world touring party which is now in Italy. The young man became associated with Frank C. Clark of New York, who organized the tour, and secured enough Colorado members of the party for Mr. Clark in making them guests of his concern on the trip.

Mrs. George Sylvester Viereck, wife of the editor of the American Monthly, with her two children, returned this week from a visit in Europe. Former state senator James F. Allen, editor of the Dover, Del., State Sentinel, has been named in a bill pending before the legislature of Delaware as one of two commissioners to control the new state police force.

George Carter, editor of the William, Del., Evening Journal, has been appointed to the Young People's League of St. Thomas Episcopal Church, Newark, Del., which is holding a special series of Sunday night meetings in the church. Mr. workers with the J. Walter Thompson Company and after a time of leave of absence, during which they have been on a trip around the world. Particular interest in conditions in China led Miss Boughton to make a trip into the interior, 1,600 miles up the Yangtze River. They returned.

NEW YORK AD WOMEN BACK FROM WORLD TRIP

Miss Alice C. Broughton and Miss Margaret King have resumed their work for the New York Times. Miss Broughton has been appointed advertising manager of Columbia and Current Opinion.

STAFF CHANGES

James G. Ralston has been appointed advertising manager of the San Francisco Chronicle, succeeding Herbert B. Dyer, who has recently been with Foster & Kleiser, San Francisco. Mr. Dyer had been with the Butterick Publishing Company, and the advertising department of Foster & Kleiser, San Francisco, for many years. He is now with the Housewife, all of New York.

The San Francisco Journal has appointed Miss Mary Stein advertising manager in charge of advertising. She is no longer with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, which she left in 1919. She returns to the Journal after a stay in California.

Well-known woman writer going to Honolulu

Miss May Stranathan, editorial and feature writer on the Pittsburgh Dispatch, will join the staff of the Honolulu Advertiser.

PROPAGANDA FROM A CONGRESSMAN'S VIEWPOINT.

MONDELL INCLUDES PRESS IN CATEGORY OF THOSE WHO TRY TO EXERT PRESSURE ON CONGRESS—LONG LIST OF NAMES IN PETITIONS MEAN LITTLE, HE SAYS.

The relation of organized propaganda to legislative activity formed one of the themes discussed by Congressman Frank W. Mondell, Republican from Ohio, in his report on the 67th Congress.

Mr. Mondell touched on its various aspects, indicating what in his belief often inspired sincere appeals received by members of Congress in letters from their constituents. In many cases he traced the propaganda to "organized minorities," as the agitation against the use of ice men to be less difficult to conduct than getting an advertisement into any one of them.

"Gentlemen in public office do sometimes get their feelings tried. Sometimes they cry out about it. But in my own experience I have been pretty well convinced that the judgments of the press are apt to be just judgments, and that the malicious tone is a rarity.

The public officer who at least means to promote the public good, and who is interested to gain the good temper of the public, is apt to get along fairly well with the newspapers, and suffer nothing from their discipline.

I have seen the thing which happens so often in business, that the body of one of the city's great papers, with a little of public office on each side of that particular periodical enterprise, has a natural want of personal knowledge and to touch that the city's newspapers—I, for example, have in my experience—honest and fair in their methods of news-giving, that their editorial treatment is intended to be as impartial as the judgments of a court, and that when it comes to the business side, it would be less difficult to conduct a camel through the proverbial needle's eye than to get an advertising copy into any one of them.

SCRUTINY FOR AD COPY.

"Rare, indeed, are the cases in which even the news tone can be affected by advertising printed on the opposite side of a newspaper, and where this comes in good temper is apt to get along fairly well with the newspapers, and suffer nothing from their discipline.

NEW YORK TIMES BUSINESS STAFF HONORS MISS FLORENCE WEINBERG.

Miss Florence Weinberg, advertising manager of the New York Times business page, was guest of honor at a dinner given by friends and business associates at Stanley's Monday evening on the occasion of her twenty-fifth anniversary of her association with the Times. Miss Weinberg was for a number of years secretary to Louis W. Hamilton, business manager of the Times.

Hugh O'Donnell was toastmaster, and there were speeches by Miss Weinberg and Mr. Wiley, Arnold Sanchez and others. The committee in charge of the dinner were Miss Rose Hickey, Mrs. D. K. Purdy and William Penney. Messages were received from Adolph S. Ochs, Ben C. Frank, Dorothy Davy, Charles Hat and others unable to be present.

Scribes Would Reorganize

Range Press Club.

The reorganization of the Range Press Club, to mold it into one of the most influential of its kind in the Northwest, is suggested in a letter received by Hibbing, Minn., newspaper men from Phil Litman of the Queen City Sun staff of Virginia, Minn.

Range newspaper men have an organization which, although not functioning recently, nevertheless accomplished considerable good during its life. A bill recently passed by the state legislature, which makes it a misdemeanor to give a news writer information with malicious intent, was due to the efforts of the Range Press Club. The new organization would contain only bona fide newspaper men, men who are devoting all their time to the editorial end of the paper.

HEAD OF DETROIT AD AGENCY DIES AFTER SHORT ILLNESS.

William Ralston Batch, a newspaper man of wide experience in Europe and this country and author of the War Chronicle in the columns of the Boston Transcript during the world war, died in Boston Wednesday. He was 71 years old. He started newspaper work in the West and later served as resident head of the Central News Company, the Philadelphia subsidiary of the Associated Press. He was the brother of Patrick Farrelly, in 1904 he succeeded him as managing head of the company, with headquarters in New York, serving as active manager until he became ill last Sunday night. During all this time he was associated with Samuel S. Blood, now president of the company.

JEROME BONAPARTE LUCKE, 81 years old, a printer employed by the Columbus, Ohio, Dispatch about thirty years, died last week from complications resulting from a fall on the ice two years ago.

THOMAS E. YOUNG, 69 years old, died a few days ago at his home in Llanarch, Pa. He was a native of the late R. Henry Young, for many years superintendent of the Wilmington Every Evening.

JEROME BONAPARTE LUCKE, 81 yearsof age, and for forty years with the New Haven, Ct., Journal-Courier, died Monday at his home in that city. He had been manager of the Journal-Courier and New Haven Palladium, and reported the first election returns in shorthand in Connecticut. For many years he was New Haven correspondent of a number of New York dailies. He was a corporal in the Thirtieth Connecticut. Volunteering during the Civil War and wrote several historic volumes.

After the Civil War Mr. Luncle entered the newspaper profession although he prepared for the bar at Yale law school.

HENRY WILLIAMS, 81 years old, a printer employed by the Columbus, Ohio, Dispatch about thirty years, died last week from complications resulting from a fall on the ice two years ago.

THOMAS E. YOUNG, 69 years old, died a few days ago at his home in Llanarch, Pa. He was a native of Wilmington, Del, where he spent most of his life. He was one of the early newspaper publishers of that city. Later, for many years, he was cashier of the Bank of Wilmington, retiring a few years ago. He was a brother of the late R. Henry Young, for many years superintendent of the Wilmington Evening News.

JAMES J. GURNSEY, former publisher of the Rome, N. Y., Republican, died suddenly Thursday. He was a veteran of the Civil War and entered newspaper work at his close. He was one of the early newspaper publishers of that city. Later, for many years, he was cashier of the Bank of Wilmington, retiring a few years ago. He was a brother of the late R. Henry Young, for many years superintendent of the Wilmington Evening News.

STEPHEN FARRELLY, 80 years old, a vice president and general manager of the American News Company, New York, died March 5 of influenza. Mr. Farrelly was born in Ireland, coming to this country in 1843.

In 1866 Mr. Farrelly founded the National News Company, which two years later was merged with the American News Company. He became a director of the amalgamated company and later served as resident head of the Central News Company, the Philadelphia subsidiary.

EDWARD H. CLARK, the second oldest employee of the New York American, died last week at his home in New York. Mr. Clark, in conjunction with his wife, conducted the employes' restaurant of the paper.

JAMES LAWRENCE GARTLAND, for the last four years assistant city editor of the Salt Lake, Utah, Tribune, and at one time sports editor of the Rocky Mountain News, died suddenly at his home in Salt Lake City.

F. J. TERRY, 43 years old, well-known newspaper man of wide experience in Europe and this country and author of the War Chronicle in the columns of the Boston Transcript during the world war, died in Boston Wednesday. He was 71 years old. He started newspaper work in the West and later served as resident head of the Central News Company, the Philadelphia subsidiary.

All three papers carried stories on the first page of their final editions that day. Two of them spread big pictures of the stern young ladies across their pages.

"That evening the Daily News detected the odor of a rodent and dropped the tale of Anti-Flirts like a hot spud. But the next day a story ran that the city police had picked up the girls and jounced them in the back seat of a paddy wagon.

"Tomorrow the whole show will appear in the Rialto's advertisements for the coming week, ending one of the most successful publicity campaigns of press-agent history."

NEWSPRINT AND THE ADS.

(cont'd from Second Page)

"The person who throws away a newspaper or magazine after glancing over its pages probably has no conception of the enormous consumption of time its rejection involves. At least two hundred thousand words are printed on the single sheet of American type paper, corner and corner of the country.

"In a report sent from Montreal it is stated that last year the United States manufactured 1,489,000,000 tons of news paper, breaking all previous records. The total production on the continent of North America was 2,710,000 tons, including 60,000 tons made in Newfoundland and 4,000 tons produced by the lone paper mill of Mexico.

"The amount of news print paper used reflects the growing prosperity of the country. In advertising, larger Sunday papers, and a greater volume of circulation.

"One editor reports of newspapers to a far greater extent than magazines or books. This fact has made the newspapers a favored person as an indication of the responsibility which rests upon newspapers in educating the public.

"The increase in newspaper advertising in the leading cities of the United States during 1922 was reported "fair," but showed a decrease from 1920. Magazines suffered more than newspapers. It is stated that of $900,000,000 spent for advertising, larger Sunday papers, and a greater volume of circulation in 1922, newspapers received approximately $500,000,000, striking proof of the value placed on the press as a medium of publicity.

AN OLD-TIME NEWSPAPER.

The value of the newspaper as a preserver of history is well demonstrated again recently at Boulder, Colo., where the Boulder News office a copy of the Boulder County Chronicle published on December 31, 1873, almost a half-century ago. The paper was filled with the interesting news of that day, the language of the News-Herald, was preserved as though printed last week, attesting to the quality of print paper, which editors were able to get in those days without mortgaging their plants."

Orders to desist from the use of such labels and from advertising for sale were issued without any unusual protest, despite the proposition of zinc manufactured by the French concern, were issued by the commission.

Dear Mr. Cone:

We offer you our congratulations on the striking progress made by your agency, demonstrated by the volume of advertising placed in The New York Times in 1922,—$231,089.00.

We hope that the mutual good will which has distinguished our relations will be maintained in the future, and that continued prosperity will mark the career of your agency.

With cordial greetings,

Very truly yours,

Those advertisers who look for something beyond “good copy” should be economically interested in the specific knowledge and experience of an advertising agency that enables it to invest its clients’ appropriations on a merchandising basis.

Our agency has been giving sound merchandising service and placing intelligent advertising copy for 32 years.

Many of our national and local clients have endorsed the success of our service over a long period of years by continuously increasing appropriations.

A discussion of CONE SERVICE involves no obligation.

MAKING GOOD BUSINESS BETTER IN CHICAGO

As reflected in that infallible mirror of business in Chicago—the advertising columns of The Chicago Daily News—the "good business" of the latter half of 1922 is growing into better business in 1923.

Both in volume and in proportion of gains, advertising in The Chicago Daily News for the first two months of 1923 shows a tremendous increase over the same period of 1922. This is indicative of booming business in Chicago and reveals one of its great contributing factors—liberal advertising by shrewd and experienced business getters in that medium to which the greater part of Chicago and its suburbs looks for advertising information and guidance—The Chicago Daily News.

The following statement of display advertising for the months of January and February, 1923, is striking evidence of The Daily News' leadership, among the daily newspapers of Chicago, in the following important classifications:

BOOKS
- The Daily News First: 24,910 lines
- The Post next: 13,744 lines

CHURCHES
- The Daily News First: 11,563 lines
- The Daily Tribune next: 3,904 lines

CLOTHING
- The Daily News First: 317,623 lines
- The Daily Tribune next: 285,474 lines

DEPARTMENT STORES
- The Daily News First: 971,355 lines
- The Daily Tribune next: 442,903 lines

DENTAL
- The Daily News First: 5,288 lines
- The Daily Herald-Examiner next: 4,982 lines

EDUCATIONAL
- The Daily News First: 15,241 lines
- The Daily Tribune next: 14,892 lines

"OUT OF THE LOOP" STORES
- The Daily News First: 148,499 lines
- The American next: 53,411 lines

FOODSTUFFS
- The Daily News First: 131,942 lines
- The American next: 118,255 lines

FURNITURE
- The Daily News First: 147,249 lines
- The American next: 86,908 lines

HOUSEHOLD UTILITIES
- The Daily News First: 30,292 lines
- The American next: 18,772 lines

JEWELRY
- The Daily News First: 19,385 lines
- The American next: 15,403 lines

Total Display Advertising
- The Daily News First: 2,345,096 lines
- The Daily Tribune next: 1,794,334 lines

In these two months The Daily News gained 332,649 lines of display advertising over the same period of last year, as against a gain of 236,996 lines by the Daily Tribune, the newspaper having the next highest score.

These facts and figures confirm with emphasis the judgment of experienced advertisers in the Chicago field who today, as for many years past, rank

Post office department shortcomings, to which the attention of the whole nation was directed by the curtailment of service ordered in New York, seem to be growing more serious instead of being improved. Postmaster General New this week practically insisted that the department is hogtied and unable to provide anything like adequate service to meet the demands of American business, which have been and are increasing by leaps and bounds. Physical and financial resources of the department have been taxed to the utmost by this business revival, according to Mr. New, who says there is no way in which the additional postal revenues which have come into the department can be applied to extending service. It is also impossible under the budget act, he says, to re-appropriate the funds of the department from one account to another.

Postmaster General New, who has been in office only since March 4, is in an embarrassing situation requiring him to explain an anomalous situation without in any way reflecting upon his predecessor. The explanations and excuses which have come from the post office department have thus far been profuse and plausible, but they have not been sufficient, in Mr. New's opinion, to give the nation the satisfaction that is due from the post office department.

In a speech at Baltimore before the Merchants and Manufacturers Organization, Postmaster General New called attention to the helplessness of the post office department.

A business man or a corporation makes its estimates with the beginning of the year — so much for taxes, so much for insurance; so much for advertising; so much for many items necessary to the carrying on of the business. If an emergency arises as the result of which the public business concerns feel that it might expend more for any particular item than was originally estimated, its board of directors may provide for additional sums by mere resolution of authority, but the post office department had insufficient funds. If it had insufficient funds it was not able to pay for the service that was required. It will be necessary to reduce the service.

Post officedepartmentshortcomings, to which the attention of the whole nation was directed by the curtailment of service ordered in New York, seem to be growing more serious instead of being improved.

New York Postal Reduction Modified.

Curtailment, however, will be felt in Metropolis — Big Boom in Nation's Business Caught P.O. Short of Funds, New Explains.

After conferences with Postmaster Morgan, Postmaster New this week announced that it was impossible to make up for the deficits created elsewhere by closing all stamp, money order and inquiry windows in postal stations in New York and the Bronx except at the General Post Office and the City Hall branch, at six instead of eight o'clock, will not be carried into effect. Mr. Morgan told First Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett that these windows could be kept open until eight o'clock for the balance of the Government fiscal year, or until June 30, by an addition of $1,000 to the postal allotment, and he was authorized to expend $66,000 instead of the $65,000 allowed.

Mail delivery in residential sections of Manhattan and the Bronx will be curtailed by one delivery in the four downtown residential districts and three. It may be necessary to reduce delivery in the usual four districts to three.

GALVESTON NEWS, OLDEST TEXAS DAILY, SOLD.

J. L. Moody announced as purchaser of News-paper from Belo interests—paper owned in same family long period—eighty years old in 1921.

The Galveston News, the oldest daily newspaper in Texas and one of the most influential, has been sold by the Belo interests to J. L. Moody at that city, according to a message received by The Fourth Estate just at the time of going to press.

The News was established in 1842 and has been operated almost continuously by the same interests.

Thomas W. Dealey, who was its secretary and treasurer until his retirement in 1906, was thirty-six years in the publication and instrumental in its growth. The friendship which existed with the other interests of the paper at that time was emphasized when A. H. Belo, then president, made him an honorary director. Both Mr. Dealey and Mr. Belo died early in the same year. Mrs. A. H. Belo succeeded to the presidency.

DOLLARS INVESTED IN ADVERTISING YIELD MOST.

BUY MORE THAN ANY OTHER DOLLAR, BUSINESS MAN EXPENDS, O’SHAUGHNESSY TELLS BOSTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE — RATES OF PUBLISHERS SOUND.

A dollar invested for advertising buys more than any other dollar that the business man invests.

Such was the message that James O’Shaughnessy, executive secretary of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, delivered to several hundred Boston business men at the luncheon of the Boston Chamber of Commerce in the Copley Plaza Hotel Thursday noon.

Immediately after making this statement he added: "As for the newspapers of Boston, I say that with especial emphasis."

"His talk was the fourth in the series of talks under the heading of "Allies of Industry." He told of what a powerful ally advertising is for industry and emphasized the necessity for intelligent use of this ally.

"Advertising is that part of industry which has grown so rapidly and so large that its place and even its relation are not completely understood," Mr. O’Shaughnessy declared.

"The fundamentals of advertising are sufficiently known to every business man. It is the larger need for advertising and the wider use of it that makes ground for discussion.

"To ask a business man if he believes in advertising is to impugn his intelligence. To discuss with him the proper application of it to his business is to render service to him.

"Since the management of every business differs in ability, in finances and in outlook, even in the same lines, the form of advertising must shape to meet every variance. An advertising plan, however successful, cannot be borrowed and profitably used by another advertiser than the one for whom it was constructed."

"Every advertising campaign, however, helps to light the candle. Every advertiser is a support to every other advertiser."

NEW PROMOTION MANAGER FOR KING FEATURES.

C. M. Sheridan has been appointed promotion manager of the King Features Syndicate, and will have charge of the promotion and advertising of the various corporations of which the King Features is the selling agent.

Mr. Sheridan is not new to the Hearst organization, having formerly been promotion manager of Hearst's International.

He was engaged twelve years in the national advertising field, having been connected with the Wyckoff advertising agency and with the Frank Presley agency. He has been associate director of the department of public information, war department, and publicity director of the American Social Hygiene Association.

NEWSPAPERS OF WEST INDIES PROSPEROUS; FURAY FINDS; TWO NEW U.P. CLIENTS.

J. H. Furay, foreign editor of the United Press, who returned to New York this week from Porto Rico, closed contracts with two of the leading newspapers in the West Indies to take United Press service.

Mr. Furay reported that newspapers in the West Indies are enjoying unusual prosperity. El Mundo, he said, claims to have the largest circulation in Porto Rico and is now contemplating the erection of a six-story building which will be the largest to be occupied by a newspaper on the island. El Imperial.

Mr. Furay said, at present has the largest circulation in the United States, and, combined pleasure with business during his visit to Porto Rico.

PUBLICITY IN ANNUAL REPORT.

The American Sugar Refining Co.'s annual reports are appraised by the company as a valuable medium of publicity, says a writer for the Boston News Bureau. The reports are in the fact that they do not contain the least amount of statistical matter on sugar which each issue contains. President Babcock, in his annual report of the corporation, states that the reports are yet not easy of calculation. It is doubtless substantial, nevertheless. As an officer of the company he feels the cost to keep clean streams of information regarding the "industry".

RED TAPE ABROAD
NOW DELAYING
NEW CABLES.

BOTH FRANCE AND PORTUGAL
HAVE STILL TO ANSWER
COMMERCIAL COMPANY'S NEGOTIATIONS—LANDING OF TWO ATLANTIC LINES ON THIS SIDE ARRANGED.

Although the state department has come to an agreement with the Commercial Company regarding the landing in this country of cables from the Azores and France, the laying of the cables has not begun, owing to delays in the negotiations with the French and Portuguese governments for landing rights on the other side. The Commercial Pacific Cable Company's proposal to lay a Far East line has been rejected definitely by the state department.

The American cable to the Azores is planned to go from New York to Lisbon, now owned and operated by the German Atlantic Cable Company. The German Atlantic Cable would run from New York to France, via the Azores, and negotiations with both the French and Portuguese governments must be concluded.

The delay in securing these landing licenses has prevented the completion of the respective cables, which is to be regretted in view of the urgent need for new cables from the United States and Canada to foreign countries.

On August 11, 1922, a direct wire from London to Rotterdam, Holland was leased to the Commercial Cable Company by the British and Dutch governments, thus giving direct service from South America to Holland. The Commercial Company has opened an office at Rotterdam in the United Kingdom, and transmission of their cable business is to be transferred from Holland to the United States.

Many newspapers agree to wage increases.

NEW SCALES FOR HANDMEN AND OPERATORS CALL FOR RAISES RANGING FROM $1 TO $5—OKLAHOMA CITY PUBLISHERS DROP BONUSES AND GIVE ADVANCE.

Wage increases for newspaper handmen and operators, ranging from $1 to $5 a week, are reported from many cities. A pay raise of two dollars provided for in an agreement with newspaper workers at Hoboken and Jersey City, $25 for forty-six hours and $35 for fifty-four hours and fifty-five hours. This is the highest paid week work and forty-five hours. These increases are to be effective on January 1, with a wage of $35 for forty-six hours and $42 for forty-four hours.

An agreement with newspaper handmen and operators in Perkinsville, N. Y., for a two dollar week increase brings the wage rate to $35 for forty-two hours and $45 for forty-five hours.

A two dollar week increase for union members in Kenosha, Wisc., brings the scale to $36 for day and $44 for night work for a year and expires January 1, 1924.

A two year agreement between the publishers and handmen of the Minneapolitic, Enterprise, sets the scale at $41 a week. A proviso provides that a week work during the first six months of the year is to be paid at the rate of $44 per week, and the first six months of the year is to be paid at the rate of $44 per week.

A three year agreement at Barton, N. Y., sets the scale at $46 a week. A four week increase brings the scale to $50 a week, and after October 1 the scale is to be $48 a week.

REPEAT ORDERS ARE THE BEST RECOMMENDATION

The Cleveland Plain Dealer, after having used, for four years, Two Hoe Superspeed Octuples, equipped with the Hoe Patented Automatic Pump System of Ink Distribution, has given the best possible endorsement of Hoe Superiority by ordering Three Superspeed Decuple Presses, and two additional Superspeed Units to make the Octuples into Decuples, thus giving it a plant of Five Superspeed Decuples, all equipped with Hoe Patented Automatic Pump System of Ink Distribution. With this equipment the Plain Dealer will have the largest plant of up-to-date newspaper presses west of New York and Philadelphia.

The New York Times, after having used Hoe Superspeed Presses since 1915, has ordered Four more Superspeed Double-Sextuples, all of course equipped with the Hoe Patented Automatic Pump System of Ink Distribution.

The New York Times has also ordered Five more Hoe Double-Width Two-Roll Intaglio Presses to supplement the Five Hoe Intaglio Presses installed in 1917.

The San Francisco Chronicle, which recently ordered Ten more Hoe 16-page Superspeed Units, after having used a Hoe Superspeed Octuple for five years, has added to the order a Hoe Fifteen-Cylinder Universal-Unit Multi-Color Press.

The Columbus Dispatch, which has used a Hoe Straight-Line Octuple Press for four years, has just ordered a duplicate Hoe Machine.

The Oakland Tribune, for which we are rebuilding a Ten-Cylinder Universal-Unit Multi-Color Press and Two Decks for their present Hoe Presses, has added to their order a Hoe Five-Deck Decuple Press.

The Allentown Call, The Boston Globe, The Jewish Journal, The Newark Star-Eagle, The Montreal Gazette, The Ottawa Citizen, The Ottawa Journal, The Toronto Star, The Pittsfield Eagle, The Sydney Times, The Utica Press, The Wilkes-Barre News, The Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader, and many other papers, all of which have been users of Hoe Presses, have recently placed large repeat orders with us. All of these have been received in 1923 and are in addition to the tremendous volume of repeat orders taken in 1922.

For more than a Century R. Hoe & Co. have been the pioneers and leaders in the developing and perfecting of Printing Machinery, and practically every important invention and improvement that has made the modern Newspaper Press possible is the result of Hoe initiative and Hoe ingenuity. That this leadership is still maintained is evidenced by the fact that the volume of orders now in hand for Hoe Rotary Presses is larger than ever before in the history of the industry, and exceeds the total of all other manufacturers combined.

BUREAU SCRUTINY AFFORDS MANY SURPRISES.

MERCHANTS SOMETIMES FIND THAT THEY HAVE BEEN FOOLED THEMSELVES IN THEIR OWN ADVERTISING.

— HOW RETAILERS’ COPY IS CAREFULLY CHECKED.

The enforcement of honesty in the sale of securities and merchandise, and the prevention of fraud upon buyers, was discussed last week at a meeting in New York of the members’ council of the Merchants’ Association. This subject is rapidly acquiring great importance throughout the country. For the purpose of checking frauds, safeguarding the buyer, and preventing unfair competition through misrepresentation, machinery is being created in the form of better business bureaus in the larger cities.

How these bureaus work and the plans for the future were described by Seymour L. Cromwell, president of the Better Business Exchange and Louis E. Kirstein, vice-president of William Filene’s Sons of Boston.

Mr. Kirstein described the humorous vein of the experiences of his firm with the better business bureau of Boston, which is the one of that city that his firm was one of the first to subscribe for the carrying on of the work of the bureau. The experience, he said, was a happy one, even when he personally was much surprised and somewhat chagrined to be called upon so soon after his firm’s entrance on the bureau by Edward L. Green, the manager of the Better Business Bureau commission, who told him that he had called to check up his store.

Before making this statement Mr. Kirstein read a paragraph, evidently generally circulated throughout Filene’s, to the effect that no misrepresentation, no false statements, or no language should be used in any of the publications passed by his store.

The speaker then went on to tell the story of the Hudson seal fur, how trade names were given to the public as to the character of the fur sold under the name of Hudson seal and under others which was not the real Alaska seal, which is sold at double the price.

The better business commission employs a number of buyers, not expert buyers or others who have an expert knowledge of the products, but just people representing the average buyer, to go around among the stores and examine the merchandise offered and see if it checked up with the advertisements, which, after all, had been made, the firm was supposed to have made correct representations. The merchandise is not represented by a calling card, were sent to the store, to indicate that everything was to be on the square.

On the contrary, when advertising was found to have misrepresented the goods, an order was sent. In the case of Filene’s, during a stated period of 105 of these slips were received by the better business commission, fifty-two of which were pink. Mr. Kirstein said that no firm can check up itself on its advertising.

It requires the outside independent judgment of a witness to determine the fact. The firm had been delinquent in advertising in any one of the cases that it had ever been delinquent in advertising, but every effort was made to have the advertising absolutely straightforward and honest.

Herein, Mr. Kirstein affirmed, laid the value of the work of the better business bureaus of the country. Mr. Kirstein urged upon the merchants of New York to give a better business bureau every support possible to aid the managers in the work; that the more believable advertising is the greater the public good that will result. He said that the enforcement of honesty in advertising, and the prevention of fraud upon buyers, was the aim of all honest advertising.

Mr. Kirsten declared that statute books were being stuffed with useless laws in an endeavor to regulate business and prevent crime. There were enough laws on the statute books today, he asserted, to take care of every situation that needs judicial control that is liable to arise in business.

Mr. Cromwell declared himself as opposed to the idea of licensing brokers, on the ground that swindlers probably would be able to secure licenses through misrepresentation and be in a position to more safely prey upon the public than they can at present.

The speaker then outlined the functions that the Stock Exchange performs in the marketing of securities. Wash sales made by a name subject to that name that will be of the greatest possible advantage to the public, and that as the work progressed and more funds were needed, an effort should be made to secure what was necessary to further the interests of the bureau.

The real difficulty encountered by the army of newspaper reporters and photographers who covered the country with the Ku Klux Klan at Bastrop and Mer Rouge, La., was the lack of telegraph facilities. Almost immediate co-operation, however, was received from the telegram companies and temporary offices opened both in Mer Rouge and Bastrop. A telephone company opened headquarters in a home in the shoe repair shop. Some of the instruments were placed on the shoe repair machine, as room for them was none.

For almost twenty hours a day the instruments were kept busy. On the shifting of the scene to Bastrop, Hector J. Haddock, the Associate Press staff man from Memphis, obtained permission from the police jury of Bastrop to use the Associated Press wire to be cut into the courthouse. The judge gave the correspondence room a free hand, and L. E. Tinsley, A.P. operator at Monroe, La., arrived in Bastrop, ready to co-operate with Mr. Tinsley had much to do with the efficiency with which the news was handled.

During the early stages of the investigation of the Ku Klux Klan, the Associated Press presented the A.P. With the opening of the hearing January 5, he said, Mr. Haddock, of Southern division headquarters at Atlanta, Mr. Durward handling leads and Mr. Irvin the running testimony. The hearing convened daily at 10 a.m. The Associated Press offices were kept open 24 hours a day. From 5,000 to 7,000 words were moved during the hearing hours every day. The Associated Press had a key to the Mississippi-Louisiana circuit to New Orleans, where the hearings were held. After court recessed for the day, the night leads were cleared and the early morning stories ready.

The Associated Press is the most reliable news association in the world, and often goes far out of its way to see that a story is given to both sides of a controversy.

AD WOMEN GREET SPRING WITH FESTIVITIES.

DINE AND DANCE AT ANNUAL ENTERTAINMENT AMID GAY DECORATIONS — SPECIAL PROGRAM OF MUSIC AND SONGS — BEAUTIFUL FAVORS AWARDED.

More than six hundred guests attended the eleventh annual dinner-dance of the League of Advertising Women last Tuesday at the Hotel Pennsylvania, with the tip-top of expectation. Mrs. Grace Crainley Oakey, chairman of the dinner committee, and also publicity manager for the hotel, saw to it that the dinner was of unusual excellence.

It was impossible to obtain quiet when President Helen M. Hill introduced Kenneth Clark of the Recreation & Playground Association, who had come as a guest to lead the community singing. Several old favorites were sung, among them, H. H. Cooke, and C. D. Jackson were invited to the podium to help draw the numbers for the doors to be opened. There were seven prizes, four for the women and three for the men.

A silver flower holder, full of flowers, presented by Miss Ada Clarke, was awarded Miss Mabel McVilly. A ribbon corsage bouquet was won by Mrs. Mary Smith, and Mrs. Royal F. Smith won a string of pearls. Arthur Freeman was given an Auto Strop and two prizes were not claimed. A. J. Powers made the announce ment.

The book of the program, included a list of the members' names, their occupations and addresses, with a history of the league, officers' menu and entertainment list, and the Thank You for the many charming souvenirs.

This was the work of the William Green Press Company, designed by George J. Fisher. It was a bound book done in a blue-gray Japan paper covered with gold, and gold back, with a spring picture tipped on, twenty-four pages. One second page also having a tipped-on charming spring picture.

I.P. AND MERGENTHALER HEAD PROTESTS AGAINST STATE TRADE REGULATION.

Philip T. Dodge, president of the International Paper Company and the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, this week wrote Governor Smith of emphatic protest against the Lockwood bill to create a state trade commission. As he has been pointed out in The Fourth Estate, this is the measure so inclusive in terminolo gy as to bring publishing associations and newspapering organizations under the regulatory power of the proposed commission.

"As president of the International Paper Company and the Mergenthaler Linotype Company — both New York corporations employing many thousand men and having many millions of dollars invested in business, I beg to urge your opposition to the so-called state trade commission bill," Mr. Dodge wrote the governor.

"Industry, financially and politically, the whole world is disorganized and every man who is in his own capital or administering the capital of others is constantly asked as to what the future holds and what it is wise to do.

"It has happened to have do with the administration of industrial matters in Europe as well as in America. I have returned from a tour of inspection. There are very grave apprehensions ahead in Europe and it is more than possible that a war may be impending. These matters have a direct and increasing influence on American business conditions.

"We have already too much interference by incompetent, untrained officials with business matters. There should be laws holding business men to rigid integrity and reasonable control. Anything beyond this is injurious to the owners, to the public and especially to the workmen."

PROVIDENCE NEWS WINS BEECKMAN LIBEL SUIT.

"Beeckman and his staff caught in open bidtry with payment of $1,500 to Democrat." The grand jury also refused to indict Herve J. Lagace of Woosoommet, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses.

Former Governor Beeckman based his complaint on an article published in the News alleging payment to Lagace in the Providence Biltmore Hotel of $1,500 by J. Henry Reuter, manager of Mr. Beeckman's campaign against Mr. Gerry.

Mr. Beeckman also accused the publishing company and President Hennessey and Secretary Hamilton of criminal libel, and Messrs. Hennessey and Hamilton, Luke E. Keenan, business manager, and Lagace of conspiracy to commit criminal libel.

In the criminal libel charge mention was made of a heading in the newspaper which used the words: "Beeckman and his staff caught in open bidtry with payment of $1,500 to Democrat." According to the articles published in the News, Lagace, known as a Democrat, negotiated with Reuter and a meeting was arranged at which three $500 bills were paid to Lagace. It was represented, according to the newspaper, that the payment was made on the understanding that the money would be used to influence Democrat voters in Mr. Beeckman's favor.

PONY AUTOPLATE ANNOUNCEMENT

We beg to announce that we have just added an automatic plate cooling device to our Pony Autoplate Stereotyping Machine.

The Pony Autoplate now casts, finishes, and cools its printing plates, and delivers them ready for press.

It thus replaces all of the plate making apparatus in a foundry, from casting box to cooling tub, including finishing blocks. Hand finishing is no longer necessary.

It may be operated by one man. The price remains the same.
NEW YORK POSTAL REDUCTION MODIFIED

the number of deliveries in the business districts was cut to five. To meet the situation most, if not all, of the 1,800 substitute carriers and clerks employed by the company would be furloughed or placed on part time.

Department officials quoted by newspapers as saying that post offices generally would be required to put economies into effect by September 1, 1923, when new appropriations will be available. It was explained, however, that, on account of the importance of New York as the principal business center and the galaxy for foreign mail, every effort would be made to give that city preferential treatment in making the necessary economies.

According to Postmaster General New and other official statements, the reduction is unprecedented and could not have been foreseen.

A statement issued by Postmaster General New was directed primarily to complaints as to the contemplated curtailment of service.

The statement follows:

Articles published in some of the newspapers within the last day or two have caused some concern to the public concerning the purposes of the post office department with respect to the curtailment of service.

The truth is that the volume of business with the public has increased to such an extent that the existing facilities of the post office department are not sufficient to handle the increased volume of mail.

The department has been forced to cut down its service to meet the increased volume of mail.

The business of the country has never expanded with such suddenness and to such extent as it has within the last few weeks. Reports from the fifty largest cities for the month of January show a corresponding increase of about twenty per cent, and the indications are that this rate still continues.

There is nothing remarkable about the fact that the volume of business with the public has increased to such an extent that the existing facilities of the post office department are not sufficient to handle the increased volume of mail. The only question involved is whether the appropriations made by Congress are sufficient to meet the increased volume of mail.

It has been the experience of the department, the appropriations committee and the department itself to budget, anticipate any such growth, for, as before remarked, it is without precedent in the commercial history of the country.

In this situation the post office department is endeavoring to do all but perform the impossible. It has had to do the best it could to meet the demands of a great emergency. It may be necessary to forego some of the improvements that the department would like to do until the next year's appropriations are available. July 1: The department has already cut down by one-third in the number of carriers in each of the seventy-five principal post offices to meet the extraordinary situation.

There has been no reduction in rates of pay, although we have had to do instantaneous overtime to the extent of a great emergency. Though there is no policy to make up a deficiency at the expense of the service of the carriers or of the efforts of its employees, to whom every possible consideration is given and any talk to that effect is without foundation.

The deficiency appropriation made by congress amounted to $4,800,000, immediately available. The bill became a law on March 4. A month before that time curtailment of allowances for postal workers in San Francisco, Detroit, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, St. Paul, Minneapolis and several other cities had been ordered on account of lack of funds. This unprecedented delay in handling all classes of mail increased the volume of mail by about ten per cent added to the difficulties of the postal service.

BARTLETT TELLS HOW LIMIT IS IRRETRIEVABLY FIXED ON POST OFFICE FUNDS.

"Imprisonment, fine and removal from office are the punishments which stare in the face of any Government official who spends more money and time in wasteful contracts, purchase and operating expenditures,"

First Assistant Postmaster General John H. Bartlett told the American Postal Union in a speech at Charleston, W. Va. His explanation shows why the post office department was forced to economies in the New York post office, despite the big increase in business in the district and practically all parts of the country.

"It may be said further that this coming next month we have a new legal dead letter," said Mr. Bartlett, "since it has been pointed out to many of the public that the inordinate and exhausted appropriations, have been seeking additional funds to tide over the present fiscal year, namely, until July 1. This criminal act amounts to a crisis in the postal system of the country at the present time.

"The post office department has been allotted by Congress, in the form of an appropriation, a very definite and fixed amount of money, with each cent with which to pay its city letter carriers. This is an appropriation and if more is needed for their operation it is not associated with any other appropriation and no other appropriation can be added to it or mixed with it.

"Congress has adjourned and left the department an appropriation for city mail carriers which is proving inadequate to deliver the rapidly increased volume of mail.\n
We are not employed to speak beyond the limits of our budget, but if you will look into post offices of the country, you will see that the carriers are working long hours and to the extent heretofore done.

"Working carriers over time does not mean that the money is being spent, for in accordance with the statute. The public is not being the benefits of the amount of mail they can bring to our post offices for dispatch; in fact, no one would have the time, and yet, the capacity of the carriers is limited and the amount of money is limited. There is no flexibility in this appropriation whatsoever. Moreover, it is contrary to law to employ men and not pay them, or not pay them until next year. All that is provided for by the statute.

"There is no rule to make up a deficiency at the expense of the service of the carriers or of the efforts of its employees, to whom every possible consideration is given, and any talk to that effect is without foundation.

"There is no policy to make up a deficiency at the expense of the service of the carriers or of the efforts of its employees, to whom every possible consideration is given, and any talk to that effect is without foundation."
The importance of service above money making was stressed by William T. Mullally of the Mullally agency, New York and Boston, in an address before members of the New York Herald and Sun this week. He declared that the strongest selling force was to appeal to a man through pride in his business. Advertisers should get away from the idea of expecting immediate results, he said, and should look for results in a larger and more lasting sense.

“We need to get firmly fixed in our minds the fact, that distribution is the secret of commercial success,” said Mr. Mullally. “The Standard Oil Company did not make its money out of oil. They made their money out of a distribution of oil, from the possession of important and vital pipeline and well located distributing centers that accomplished the success of this great corporation.”

“A great many people will continue to associate the term advertising with nothing more than the writing of copy and the making of layouts whereas we might more truthfully term ourselves ‘Engineers of Distribution.’

“The advertiser's attitude.

“If we could only get advertisers away from the idea of expecting immediate results and get turned to look for results in a larger and more lasting sense we shall be doing a much better service for advertising and for advertisers themselves as well.”

“Any man who is interested in going into an auditorium and talk to the readers of the Herald and Sun every day has a little prospect of his making a direct sale to any one in that audience.”

“I am sure you have found it as true in your experience as I have in mine that those with really progressive forward-looking men we do not find them judging the results of their advertising by the actual number of inquiries traceable to each advertisement. The truly progressive business man is building for the future seeking to project himself and his name into the next generation.”

“If you will permit me, I should like to make a few criticisms of newspaper representatives—criticisms that apply to advertising agents as well. It is quite appalling how superficial and solicitations of a great many newspaper and magazine representatives are concentrated on fewer accounts, but studied them so thoroughly that when we talked with the prospect we knew something about his product, his markets and his marketing methods.

“It is surprising to sit on the other side of the table with one who does not know the true values of the newspaper medium, and who does not know his own publication. It always gives me a feeling of despair when I speak to me. ‘What have you got for me today?’

“The good salesman always keeps service in his mind as the first consideration, selling as simply the by-product of service.

“Buy-motives have been classified as a desire for profit, utility, caution, pride and weakness. It is always well to bear these in mind and to study your prospect and appeal definitely to one of these motives. In selling advertising we have the greatest appeal of all—the appeal of pride. To appeal to a man through his pride in his business is the strongest selling revolve I know of.

“Above everything else do not forget to see that the open door for a return visit is always to be preferred to the order gained, and resentment afterwards.

“You who represent the Herald and Sun have a particularly fine product to sell and a great tradition of service and ever-increasing good will behind you. They say that every business is the elongated personality of some great man. The Herald and the Sun have interwoven in their pages the great Bennett, the immortal Dana and the magnificent Munsey.

“Surely the idea of service which I have been trying to impress upon you can not be better exemplified than in the lives and example of these great men.”

REFORESTRY NEED ACUTE SENATE IS ADVISED.

Importations of wood and pulp care for only 14 per cent of all paper made in this country, Dr. Baker says—points out ways to remedy.

Testimony before the senate committee on reforestation at hearings recently held in Washington brought out the alarming state of the future of the paper and pulp industry of the country unless a definite policy of reforestation is shortly adopted.

The seriousness of the situation was emphasized to the committee by Hugh P. Baker, representing the American Paper and Pulp Association. Some relief is afforded by wood or pulp shipments from Canada, Mr. Baker said, but that represented only about fourteen per cent of the material made into paper by American mills, and he predicted that eventually this addition to the American supply would be cut off through an embargo.

"Here in the United States," he said, "is enough idle forest land east of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio, if it is producing a cord an acre per year, to make the country independent of importations.

"One-third of New England is not being farmed. In New York there are millions of idle acres. In Pennsylvania, out of 28,000,000 acres, we are farming only 10,000,000 acres. In Ohio there are 3,000,000 acres. In other words, we have plenty of forest land on which to grow the forest to take care of our needs."

Mr. Baker told the committee of experiments undertaken by the paper manufacturers in the Adirondacks, where spruce grows readily. Assistance of the Government and increased interest of private owners would be necessary, Mr. Baker said, to insure the maintenance of the paper industry, which, he declared, was "facing lean years" between the present and the time the newly planted forests began to give return.

"The difficulty with us," said Mr. Baker, "is that we tax upon what we consider the value of the standing timber each year. So the lumberman will say, 'I have to cut that timber if I get out on it all,' and he cuts it before it is ready, sometimes. I am not sure that a change in our tax laws in the timber-yielding states is not more vital than fire protection."

TO ISSUE JEWISH TRADE PAPER.

To assist advertising clients of the Jewish World to reach the Philadelphia Jewish market, its merchandising service department will begin April 2 the monthly publication of the Jewish World Trade News. The paper aims to teach modern sales methods, the value of selling advertised and branded products and how to "cash-in" on advertising campaigns. Paid welcomes will not be accepted in the new publication as it is issued in the interest of advertisers and prospective advertisers in the Jewish World.

NEW MAGAZINE SECTION.

The New York Herald has an innovation in its Sunday magazine sections with a twenty-four tabloid insert. Half of the section is devoted to illustrations and the other half to reading matter.

NEW YORK TIMES' NEW HOME IN MODEL.

Modeled to the scale of one-eighth of an inch to a foot, this plaster cast shows exactly how the New York Times Annex on Forty-third street will appear when completed. The model is three and a half feet high. Work on the building is progressing rapidly.

"The difficulty with us," said Mr. Baker, "is that we tax upon what we consider the value of the standing timber each year. So the lumberman will say, 'I have to cut that timber if I get out on it all,' and he cuts it before it is ready, sometimes. I am not sure that a change in our tax laws in the timber-yielding states is not more vital than fire protection."
NEWS PRINT PRODUCTION FOR 1922.

The following figures of news print paper produced in United States and Canadian mills for February, 1923, together with shipments and stocks on hand at mills, represent practically 96.6 per cent of the total produced by all mills and are taken from the News Print Service Bureau monthly Bulletin No. 62.

FIVE DOLLARS A TON RAISE FOR NEWS PRINT BODED.

Indications point to eighty dollars a ton news print after contracts expire July 1. The current market price is quoted at that figure but manufacturers are meeting contract orders at seventy-five dollars a ton. Since the first of the year demands have brought paper prices much higher in all grades. Book paper has advanced from five to ten dollars a ton, to twenty dollars a ton, according to the grade.

The absence of agitation in the labor situation in the industry is notable. Paper officials are reticent about predicting news print prices after the middle of the year but insist that it would not all be surprising if eighty dollars a ton would be the price for the last half of the year.

WHAT THE MUSIC CRITIC NEEDS TO KNOW.

EVERY THOROUGH NEWSPAPER MUST DEVOTE ATTENTION TO MUSIC-LOVING READERS—MERELY REPORTING WONT DO, AND REVIEWER MUST BE REAL AUTHORITY.

When one takes an inventory of the evidences of the public’s interest in music, there is one item often overlooked, and that is that every newspaper that aspires to a respectable reputation has someone to report on the musical doings of the community. In other words, while there may be many in the community who care nothing for music, those who do, make up a large enough constituency for the newspapers to consider it worth while to give the subject a regular place in their pages. Writer-Lindsay B. Longacre in the Denver Rocky Mountain News.

In spite of the authority which many readers attribute to anything appearing in print, these reporters are neither omniscient nor infallible. Some of the matters they are called upon to report are straightforward matters of fact which anyone could easily verify.

REPORTING VERSUS CRITICIZING.

With reference to a concert, for instance, he can state where and when it was held, whether the audience was large or small, and whether the program was straightforward or one that called for a certain amount of interpretation. He can report any changes in the program or in the persons announced for performance, whether there were bushels of flowers passed over the footlights, or whether a fire brought the concert to a sudden end, or anything else that simply happened. On such subjects there is no room for his opinions, they are matters of fact.

While these references belong to his report, however, it is not chiefly these that constitute his excuse for being. He is expected to make some comment upon the character of the performance and give some estimate of its excellence. Here the question is less of fact and more of opinion. Of course, some performances may be so wretched that there is a practical unanimity of opinion on the part of all present that it was a fiasco.

The important thing is to have something to say and an opinion to express. The reviewers equipment in this respect will depend upon several qualifications. For instance, the well-equipped man will know something about the form and structure of music; indeed, he ought to know a good deal on these subjects if his opinion is to have any value.

HOW MUSIC IS APPRAISED.

His estimate of the quality and character of an unfamiliar composition will depend largely upon his recognition of the way it is built up, the nature of its basic themes, whether they are used in the composition, whether they be in the strict manner of the classicalists or the free manner of the moderns; the character of the harmony; the instrumentation; and other elements that go to make up any composition worthy of serious attention.

In addition, to his knowledge of music as such, he should have a fairly wide acquaintance with the literature, that is he should be able to make a high score if he entered a "memory" contest such as was conducted in the schools last year in music week; only his contest should include ten times the number of works submitted to the school children.

EXHAUSTIVE STUDY REQUISITE.

In other words, he should have acquainted himself with as much as is possible of the all the good and great music that has been composed, and he must be so interested in the great classic dramas, by essays, novels, as well as with current literature, if his opinion is to have any real value. And, since in the realm of music, one opinion will have twice the weight of another, which is acquainted with the great works of that art, upon which alone standards can be set.

Again, the reviewer should know something about the essentials of a good performance by a singer, pianist, a violinist or an orchestra. Anyone who has worked in any of these fields knows that the study and development of any one of them is inexhaustible and subject, and the fact does not absolve the reviewer of the obligation to inform himself with as much accuracy as possible in all of them. The bowing and stopping of the violin, the tone production of the singer, the position of the touch of the pianist, the tone quality and expressiveness of the orchestra, are all matters on which a reviewer's judgment must be based.

A PLEA FOR 10-POINT TYPE.

The National Committee for the Prevention of Blindness, New York, is sending out an appeal to editors and publishers not to use type smaller than 10-point, on the ground that the use of such small type "not only has a harmful effect on the eyesight of the reader, but often defeats its own purpose by compelling the potential reader who realizes that the reading of such type hurts or tires his eyes."

The amount of money lost by advertisers and publishers through the wrong circulation that results from the use of type faces difficult to read because of smallness or design, the committee says, is probably greater than the cost of the extra space and paper stock necessary if larger type is used.

The committee says: "The ultimate abolition of the use of all 6-point and smaller types of any style is urged by the committee. Publishers, printers and the advertisers who have on hand large stocks of such small types are urged to use them only when their use is unavoidable, and to scrap such types at the earliest opportunity."

MANY LINOTYPES ORDERED.

More than 425 linotypes have been shipped recently by the Mergenthaler Linotype Company to newspapers all over the country, and hundreds of others have been received by publishers.

The Bridgeport, Ct, Post has ordered fourteen Model 8s; the Milwaukee Journal, ten Model 8s; the St. Paul, Minn., Advocate, five Model 1s; two model 14s and a model 22; the Trenton, N. J., Times, four model 8s; the Indianapolis Star, three model 9s; Jackson, Mich., Citizen-Patriot, five model 8s and a model 14; Cincinnati Times, four model 1s and a model 21; Washington Star, three model 8s and two model 21s. Seven more multiple-magazine linotypes, of model 6, four model 9s and two model 21s, making twenty-four new linotypes recently ordered by The New York Tribune, have been installed by that paper.

ADVERTISING THE BEST SELLING FORCE.

CONDITIONS, HOWEVER, MUST BE FAVORABLE TO BRING RESULTS EXPECTED.

FRANK LEROY BLANCHARD TELLS NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION.

"Admitting that advertising is the greatest selling force available in the marketing of merchandise, it is an established fact that unless conditions are favorable to the use of advertising it will not accomplish what is expected of it," said Frank Le Roy Blanchard, advertising manager of Henry L. Doherty & Co., New York, in an address to be before the National Institute of Business Administration at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

One reason why advertising sometimes fails to bring the results expected, is that those who are using it do not take the necessary pains to prepare themselves for the writing of the advertisement.

HOW CAMPAIGNS ARE PREPARED.

"It is to help assure the success of an advertising campaign that the system of market and consumer analysis now employed by the leading advertising agencies of the country, and by some of the far-sighted manufacturers, was introduced. No advertising campaign should be undertaken without thorough preparation. In putting a new article on the market it is absolutely necessary that we should find out what its probable sale will be, and this can be done if we go about it in the right way.

Among other things we must know if there is a demand for the article, or if a proposition to manufacture or a demand can be created as a result of an educational campaign. Of course, before taking this step it is necessary to ascertain whether the article we contemplate manufacturing is one that is likely to fit into the wants of the general public, or any portion of it."

PUBLICITY STUNT PLANNED TO CREATE INTEREST FOR MERCHANTS' CONVENTION.

A monthly publication giving news of interest to merchants and advance news of the market week was presented by W. F. Romans, secretary of the merchants' bureau of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce and as an original publicity "stunt" in explaining the program for the fourth annual merchants' convention last week.

The dates of the convention are August 14-16, and beginning April 10 the Spokane Market Week News will be published monthly and mailed to the merchants of the Inland Empire. It will be four pages, having six columns, twenty inches long, and carrying about fifty per cent advertising.

The chairman of committees already appointed are: J. W. Bailey, publicity; George Ketchum, program; Glenn Powell, exhibit; Frank Irvine, reception.

TIGER'S HUMOROUS PAPER ELECTS EDITORS.

Walden Pell 2d of New York has been elected managing editor of the Tiger, Princeton University's humorous publication. He will supervise the publication until next October, after which he will sail for England as a Rhodes scholar at Oxford.

AD MAN ADDRESSES JUNIOR CLUB ON “FACTS FIRST—THEN ADVERTISING.”

Joseph Richards, founder and head of the Joseph Richards Advertising Agency, New York, was the guest and speaker at the Junior Advertising Club's meeting last night. Mr. Richards spoke on "Facts First—Then Advertising," and explained his methods of market analysis and securing of preliminary data on which he bases the advertising of his clients. The meeting was open to all advertising men between the ages of twenty and thirty.

EUGENE FIELD HAD UNIQUE WAY OF WORKING.

HAD KEEN SENSE OF HUMOR BUT MANY OF HIS ECCENTRICITIES WERE AFFECTED FOR BENEFIT OF THOSE WHO WERE LOOKING FOR THE UNUSUAL.

Eugene Field had a way of working that was distinctly his own, says James C. Young in the New York Times Magazine. After he had settled down for his day's labor, he occupied a little cubby-hole off the editorial room, and his sanctum was a place worth hammering upon the tin with a ruler, on the theory that violence must overcome violence. He also used this method of summoning office boys. Field's first action on reaching the office was to take off his shoes and don a pair of big slippers, made to fit his expansive countenance, with deep blue eyes, surmounted by a big dome on a head which once had a thin covering of hair but became bald.

A great many writers believe that they work best in a certain position or according to a certain method. One of Field's was working in his shirtsleeves, without a collar. He had a strangely white, often coquettish face, blue eyes, surmounted by a big dome on a head which once had a thin covering of hair but became expansively bald.

Paul Dutcher, recently elected president of the South Dakota Press Association, has been active in the newspaper business for nearly thirty-three years and has been one of the heads of the Brookings, S. D., Register, weekly, of which he was also one of its original editors. With the other two, M. J. and J. E. Brooking have commanded much of Mr. Dutcher's attention but never to the extent that his newspaper was joked with life.

Field, above all else, was one who joked with life. He had many visitors and was enough of an actor to understand that they came to him to be in a certain position or according to a certain method. How London Sketch goes about job of doubling its circulation.

American circulation managers will be interested in the English method of intensive circulation stimulation, as exemplified in the London Daily Sketch. According to the Advertising World of London, it has been attended already by a very considerable measure of success.

The big circulation "drive" started on February 1, and in order to help the boom some splendid new features have been introduced. For instance, the paper has increased its circulation by 10,000 in free new paper offerings, and they are thus making a special appeal to the thousands of people who are delaying getting married because of the cost of living.

Secondly, the opening installment appeared the same day of a new serial, "The Loser's Cup," by Mary Roberts Rinehart, a story which has been very favorably received and which is in itself to increase considerably the circulation of the paper.

$5,000 was paid for the rights.

Thirdly, a large picture is put as "the world's loveliest woman" is now giving beauty hints to women, advertisers.

WHY MAKE NEW YORK POST OFFICE GOAT?

With astonishing resignation, New York has suffered its postal service to be seriously curtailed in order that the postal service at Washington may even up for deficits incurred by unprofitable operations in other parts of the country. The fact is that the New York post office is returning a profit of $500,000 a month. It is true that the New York post office has not been overworked, but the service has not been under worked. The task of the New York post office is to deliver mail to the people of New York, not to profit. Postal workers in New York, like those everywhere in the country, give the fullest possible measure of work in return for the pay and conditions that they have. They should not be expected to work harder or longer because the New York post office has been overworked.

BUSINESS CHANCES

Campaign for Circulation

On or about June 1 Nationwide newspaper publicity will start on a subject of the widest and deepest interest to all Women, and will continue indefinitely.

In order fully to utilize this valuable publicity the advertiser, as the result of long and continuous experience in attracting and holding readers, desires the cooperation of a Weekly or Monthly Magazine to start a better class in a Campaign for Circulation which he has worked out in detail.

The periodical entering into such an arrangement with the advertiser will be enabled to assure itself of full protection of its interests.

DOLLARS INVESTED IN ADVERTISING YIELD MOST.

than the investment he makes in his raw materials.

He has learned out of his experience that his advertising investment is the soundest for the protection as well as the growth of his investment. Witness the recent period of deflation, and you will find out of the tangibles of the properly advertised business there was left the advertising result of good will; the only unimpaired asset upon which to reorganize the business.

"Advertising over a wide market is a serious undertaking. The number of advertisers and the extent of advertising is increasing, and it is putting advertising out of the class of simple activities. Local advertising still remains a more or less primary operation."

"National advertising calls for much work of preparation. The thing to be advertised must be studied in order to determine whether it should be an advertisement. The market must be surveyed, whether present or potential, and it should be investigated. The time to be selected, the season to be advertised in, must be determined. All of the buying conditions must be explored, whether the time is one to be created or diverted, and the problems of delivery must be minutely studied."

"These must be predicated upon the knowledge of the factors, practices and methods in the selling channels in order to erect a productive plan. A technical, detailed knowledge of the media to be used for the advertisement is essential to their proper projection into a successful campaign. The character, the influence, the physical requirements of the media and the costs must be studied and analyzed. The circulation must be known as to quality and location, as well as to potential. All this which is made necessary by the highly developed conditions must be done by skilled hands.

It is in the execution of the campaign which is far along in the advertising operation, that we come to that point which is first in the inexperienced eye, the circulation or the advertisement, the thing the public must see."

"To meet the responsibilities that have devolved upon them, the agents have organized the American Association of Advertising Agencies, composed of the forward and competitive agencies of the country. They have large and small, who favored open competition, who wanted and who organized this association, in brief, is to safeguard the advertising dollar. The first efforts of this association have been to increase the efficiency of its members, to reduce waste costs in operations. As a result the advertising dollar buys more and produces more.

"The association has written ethics for this new business, establishing standards for the protection of every fair interest."

"The ethical rules of the agencies, are, therefore, in a position to assure the business men of America that advertising has its proficient counselors in every considerable city."

"The members of the association are handling advertising appropriations of five thousand of the leading national and local newspapers for the current year aggregate upwards of a quarter of a billion dollars, or about one-tenth of the amount of the desirable total."

"Each one of these advertisers is spending in the average, fifty thousand dollars a year."

"The advertising agency must make the advertising appropriation profitable to the advertiser when he passes out of the scene."

"Our business profession, therefore, is one that must account for every cent devoted to it and in addition to that, for every cent the advertiser expects to get in profits."

"The advertising agency is a tollaising business, it is raising interest and informing of all mistakes. But it is wonderful, because it is always the work of building; building fortunes, reputation and advancing civilization by developing the wants of the people."

PUBLISHER’S ESTATE VALUED AT "MORE THAN $50,000." L. V. Ashbaugh, publisher of the St. Paul Daily News, who died March 8, left an estate valued at "more than $50,000." according to a petition to prove his will filed in probate court by his widow, Mary McCurdy Ashbaugh, who is named executrix of the will. Widow and daughter, Mary Louise Ashbaugh, sixteen years old, are the only heirs.

After a bequest of $10,000 to the daughter, the remainder of the estate is left to the widow for life and at her death it goes to the daughter.

CALCUTTA DAILY’S ADVERTISING INCLUDES NUMEROUS AMERICAN PRODUCTS.

Many kinds of merchandise from the United States are finding a market in India through newspapers advertising. Automobiles, typewriters, fountain pens, lanterns, automobile tires, photographic machines, books, soaps and ointments, and moving pictures are a few of the items found advertised in a recent issue of the Calcutta Englishman. Copy is distinctively American and is conspicuously illustrated in American style.

The heaviest advertising in India appears to be that of american made automobiles and tires. Pleasure cars are advertised with the same zeal that characterizes their presentation here. Listed among the used automobiles for sale are many American made cars that are not so widely advertised in the newspapers.

Moving pictures made in California and other states are popular in appeal to the residents of India, both the natives and English speaking. In a recent issue of the Englishman was found a large advertisement of a movie that had a popular run on Broadway several months ago.

Apartments, which have ceased to be advertised extensively in the United States since the advent of electricity, are brought to the attention of India residents in good sized advertisements. Fountain pens and pencils of a well-known American manufacturer are advertised in that country as strongly as it appears, as in the United States and the firm is finding India a good market for its wares.

Walter Smith of London, England, is advertisement manager of the Englishman, and is well-known among advertising men in this country where he has made numerous visits. Mr. Smith is in attendance at the 1923 convention of the A.A.C.W. in Milwaukee and is contemplating attending this year's sessions in Atlantic City. He was for many years stationed in India in charge of the local advertising of the newspaper he now represents in the foreign field.

GOVERNMENT CIRCULATION STATEMENTS OFTIMES DECEIVE ADVERTISERS.

If the proprietor of a store decided to buy a new piano, in the classified advertisements of a newspaper a list of pianos might be found. If he should find the right piano for him, it would be a simple matter for him to make sure that he got all the space he had paid for. The advertisement would state the number of the instrument, the name and address of the dealer and the price. When the advertiser in a newspaper, hears a problem arises, says the Spokesman, Wash., Chronicle. He has no way to reckon how many of his advertising dollars he is losing except by knowing the circulation of the paper. Under the present system circulation figures are no more than a state-ment of circulation, under the law of the nation; but no system of checking up is employed to see whether his sworn statement is true or false. Whether he tells the truth or commits perjury the government neither knows nor cares.

The awards it for granted that the semi-annual statements are subject to federal investigation and therefore made to the line is left to have unconfirmed in dishonest publications. The federal system is an improvement of the present one, and then leaves him unprotected. It is an aid to fraud.

NEGRO EDITOR GETS NOTE SIGNED "K.K.K.

John E. Robinson of Freeport, L. I., formerly editor of the New Amsterdam News, a negro newspaper, has received a letter signed by "K.K.K." In January Mr. Robinson started a movement in Nassau county to work for the uplift of the negro. A meeting was held in Freeport on February 12, attended by a large number of colored people. The letter he received was signed by "K.K.K." and it was presumed that he had been placed by the Ku Klux Klan as a means of intimidation.

In the letter received by Mr. Robinson, the writer adverse the impression that the Klan planted the cross opposite the auditorium in which he made a speech, and in a vacant lot, and it was assumed that they had been placed by the Ku Klux Klan as a means of intimidation.

The letter says it appreciates Mr. Robinson's efforts to better the standing of the race.

AD WOMEN GREET SPRING WITH FESTIVITIES.

The A. J. Fowlers Reproduction Company made the color plates for these pictures. In addition to this lovely souvenir, at each place was a dinner list and collecting the money. There was special electric lighting during the Spring Dance and during the dancing the lighting effect was reminiscent of spring evenings.

Miss Jane J. Martin, former president of the league, was the guest of honor at a big table made up of Mrs. Louise Rogers, Miss Frances Buente and Miss Ethel McCune. There were many out-of-town guests, and several of the special and advertising agencies and newspapers were represented in large groups.

WHEN YOUNGSTERS PRINTED THEIR OWN PAPERS.

Fossils Were One of First Amateur Organizations and Had Many Prominent Publishers as Members — Other Similar Associations Formed.

Do you remember way back when the boy's printing press was comparatively new, and to own one of them was the paramount ambition of many a boy in those days?

The owner at once went into the printing business, generally combining the printing with a literary career in order to have something to print. Of course, he had a staff of a publication, filing such offices as editor, business manager, reporter, printer's devil and newsboy.

It was from the ranks of the amateur publishers that an organization known as the "Fossils," formed with the singular purpose of keeping sacred the traditions of the boy's printing press and the boy editors of fifty years ago. Included among the charter members were Cyrus H. K. Curtis, owner of the Philadelphia Public Ledger and other publications; former Governor William C. Sprague, publisher of the Chester, Pa., Times; Joseph Daniels, owner of the Raleigh, N. C., News & Observer; Thomas A. Edison; Charles Scribner and Son; George Higgins Moses, formerly president of the American Publishers' and Statesmen, Co., were also included among the charter members.

The Fossils is a worldwide organization, and at least six hundred amateur papers printed. Two of the most successful of these publications were Young America, published at Dyerville, Iowa, by Anton F. Klinker, now of Dubuque, and the Commentator, published for many years by L. J. Cohen, both of Des Moines.

While the Fossils are still active, other similar association have, in the meantime sprung up, and an organization known as the "Pioneers," formed with the singular purpose of keeping sacred the traditions of the boy's printing press and the boy editors of fifty years ago.

The "Pioneers" is a nationwide organization, and at least six hundred amateur papers printed. Two of the most successful of these publications were Young America, published at Dyerville, Iowa, by Anton F. Klinker, now of Dubuque, and the Commentator, published for many years by L. J. Cohen, both of Des Moines.

TRAYMORE TO BE NEW YORK HEADQUARTERS OF A.A.C.W. AT ATLANTIC CITY.

The New York advertising folk who attend the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in Atlantic City June 3 to 7 will make those headquarters arrangements. A convention committee, composed of members of the Chicago Advertising Club, has been formed to take care of all the arrangements. The convention will be held at the Traymore Hotel and is to be in charge of the Advertising Club of New York, which is to be the chairman of the convention.

MODEST PUBLISHERS.

Sedro-Woolley Courier-Times. Editor Beaumont of the Mt. Vernon Herald is noted for his bashful-ness and retiring disposition. In the recent issue of his paper he states in big type that the Herald has "reached a peak of publicity." The saturetation of any country paper in Washington is this, he says. The Courier-Times does not wish to appear as bashful as this, so the editors are planning to increase the circulation of the Courier-Times has more bonds paid upon subscribers in Sedro-Woolley, Bellingham and Vancouver, Wash., than any other newspaper published on this earth or any other planet.

Lampson Family Has Been Publishing Paper for Forty Years.

The Jefferson, Ohio, Gazette has been in the Lampson family since 1883, when it was bought by E. L. Lampson, later governor of Ohio. The present owners are C. E. Lampson, editor, and R. D. Lampson, business manager. The Gazette has no reporters and no office assistant, the partners attending to all of these details. The paper employs four men and five women, six of whom can operate linotype machines. Editor Lampson says he can never have any labor trouble, and has paid wages in full every Saturday night for the past quarter century.

Now newspaper is considered to be a newspaper which has no advertising, but in the United States, according to Dr. Oris Caldwell, school principal of New York, said:

"We clipped 3,061 stories upon biological subjects from 492 newspaper offices during a period and out of that number only fourteen articles contained an inaccuracy. That is a record for most books can show."

Indeed it is; and also it is a record of how a man can make his name! for, none more aware than he of the eccentricity and church, and of all men, knows the score of perils a single fact must traverse in the sanctuary of the printed page. Error in transmission, poor typewriting, improper startling are the main staples of most books.

MONEY AND ADVERTISING.

"The only man who makes money without advertising in the newspaper is the fellow who coins it in the United States Mint," says J. H. Mc-

DEAN OF MUSIC CRITICS, WHO SERVED ON THE TRIBUNE FORTY-THREE YEARS, DIES.

Henry Edward Krehbiel, dean of American musical critics and for forty-three years music critic of the New York Tribune, died suddenly out the winter. But ten days previously he had entered his seventieth year. The veteran critic had spent forty-three years on the pages of the Tribune. His published books comprise more than twenty-five volumes, and he has written, in correspondence, various occasional pamphlets, annual series of lectures at the Institute of Musical Art and twenty years' writing of the program notes of the New York Philharmonic Society.

Mr. Krehbiel was born March 10, 1854, at Ann Arbor, Mich. He was educated in the public schools of his native state and in Ohio, where he studied law—1877-79—in Cincinnati. There, too, he took violin lessons and studied musical theory and harmony. From 1874 to 1889 he was a reporter on the Cincinnati Gazette, rapidly becoming a special writer on music, though in later years he told of many experiences as a general news editor along the Ohio River front.

Coming to New York in 1889 as music critic of the Tribune, he had for the past twenty-five years contributed daily and weekly articles to that paper with only an occasional interruption. He wrote as late as two Sundays ago a discussion of "American Native Choruses," following his last public appearance as a guest with Mme. Sembrich and Dr. Walter Darnoch on March 3 at the Intercollegiate Glee club contest in Carnegie Hall.

His vigorous denunciation of tendencies he believed to be of ill effect in the musical world were well-known. In the last days of his life they resulted in a libel suit brought against him by Mme. Gandakski-Tanscher, based on an article in which allusion was made to her in connection with German rejoicing over the sinking of the Lusitania. She asked $125,000 each from the Tribune and its music critic.

Mr. Krehbiel was twice married. Mrs. Krehbiel, who died in 1919, was married to the critic in 1886.

to which the department would gladly conform were it not for the fact that there is a statute making it a criminal offense, with imprisonment as the punishment, for expending money in excess of the appropriations. And it is perhaps well enough that this should be so.

"We have lately adopted the budget system and the postmaster general cannot legally spend more money in any line of postal activity than is estimated by the budget and appropriated by congress for that specific line. For instance, the appropriation for the railway mail service is adequate, but not a dollar of it may be diverted to the payment of post office clerks or for letter carriers, for either or both of which the appropriation may be inadequate, and there are specific appropriations for each of these items."

"The great rapidity in the business revival that is now everywhere manifest has resulted in very greatly increasing the volume of mail that has to be handled. This is not the first time that this has occurred, but it has never occurred so early in the year and never anything like as sharply as at the present moment."

"The post office can get money in but one way and that by appropriation by the congress. Congress has adjourned, leaving the sum subject to our check until the end of the fiscal year—June 30."

without exception, to this situation and insist that they shall help it by practicing the strictest economy and doing all they can to meet the demands of this year's emergency.

"We positively must get along with the amount appropriated. There is no other way. In addition to the appropriation for clerks and carriers, there is given us an auxiliary, or emergency fund, and that may be employed as emergency requires but it, too, is limited and does not aim to meet the demands of this year's emergency.

"All this being the case, it has been necessary for the postmaster general to direct attention of the postmasters all over the country to which the department would gladly conform were it not for the fact that there is a statute making it a criminal offense, with imprisonment as the punishment, for expending money in excess of the appropriations. And it is perhaps well enough that this should be so.

"We have lately adopted the budget system and the postmaster general cannot legally spend more money in any line of postal activity than is estimated by the budget and appropriated by congress for that specific line. For instance, the appropriation for the railway mail service is adequate, but not a dollar of it may be diverted to the payment of post office clerks or for letter carriers, for either or both of which the appropriation may be inadequate, and there are specific appropriations for each of these items.

"The great rapidity in the business revival that is now everywhere manifest has resulted in very greatly increasing the volume of mail that has to be handled. This is not the first time that this has occurred, but it has never occurred so early in the year and never anything like as sharply as at the present moment.

"The post office can get money in but one way and that by appropriation by the congress. Congress has adjourned, leaving the sum subject to our check until the end of the fiscal year—June 30.

ADVERTISERS NOT INDEMNIFIED BY PUBLISHER.

RESORT HOTEL LOSSES ACTION TO RECOVER DAMAGES OF $3,000 FROM THE BROOKLYN EAGLE—CHARGED ERRORS IN COPY AND INSERTION CAUSED BUSINESS LOSS.

The Brooklyn Daily Eagle has just emerged from a legal controversy as novel and unique as it has ever affected the business of any newspaper.

A summer resort advertiser of long standing forwarded his insertion order by typewritten letter at the Eagle's solicitation, during May, 1922. He quoted his advertisement in a local newspaper of a like type, requesting a "Catskill Mountains" classification and agreed to four insertions a week to September 15. He has a fine hotel at Eddycove, N. Y., and enjoys prosperous years previously due primarily to the direct results obtained from Eagle advertising.

This advertisement was published during the summer of 1922 and through a series of errors, was incorrect approximately on fifteen different occasions. Some of these errors were placing the advertisement under the incorrect classification, others in the manner of the advertisement, and perhaps the most serious was the fact that on numerous occasions the advertisement was entirely omitted.

Suit was commenced against the Eagle for claiming damages of $3,000 from the Brooklyn Eagle—charged errors in copy and insertion caused business loss.

CONFERENCE RECOMMENDS TO HOOPER OPENING UP OF WAVE LENGTH LIMITATIONS—EXTENDED FIELD, 222 TO 545 METERS ALLOWED FOR BROADCASTING.

The opening up of a new wide band of waves by the Government and the Congress for radio communication to broadcasting stations was recommended to Secretary of Commerce Hoover today by the National Radio Conference as a solution to growing difficulties encountered in radio already depression the country, following the close of the 89th Congress at Washington at the end of last week.

The following was the report of the conference.

NEWSPAPERS IN CLASS A.

Proposition for newspaper stations is made in the recommendations for the highest power Class "A" stations, which will use wave lengths between 288 meters and 545 meters.

Newspaper interests scored another victory through the concurrence of the committee in their contention that the reading of letters and telegrams by broadcasting stations, permitting where the signer is not addressed in the name and text is of general interest.

Many of the large newspapers' concerns in broadcasting services are affected by this concession, it is much as they have built up "censored" lists which they turn over to the paper in the hands of his sister, William Goddard, while he moved north to establish a postal system, which was the germ of the great postal system of today. She continued in control for ten years.

SAME CHANGED IN 1795.

Early in 1795, William Pechin of Philadelphia bought the Journal and changed its name to the Baltimore American and Commercial Intelligencer. In 1799 it became the property of Alex. Martin, and on May 13 of that year it appeared as the American. In 1815 the paper was transferred to F. P. Hemmings, which continued in control until 1853, when the late C. C. Fulton obtained a controlling interest and made his management the paper prospered.

When he died, in 1883, General Felix Agnus, his son-in-law, became the publisher, and he had conducted the American up to the time it passed into Mr. Munsey's control.

The American took a conspicuous part in the Revolutionary War. During the civil war, it was a Union paper, and subsequently always a staunch advocate of principles of the Republican party. The history of the nation is written in the records of the American. To its agitation and recommendation were due the establishment of the Maryland Historical Society, the Maryland Institute for the promotion of mechanical arts, the foundation of public schools for colored children, and educational enterprises.

SPRINGFIELD UNION SOLD TO GEO. VON L. MEYER.

COL. A. P. Langtry and J. D. Plummer sell entire capital stock — LATTER REMAINS AS PUBLISHER, WITH BURT L. HUNT REPRESENTING NEW OWNER.

The Springfield, Mass., Union, morning, evening and Sunday, has been sold and the capital stock, except for three voting proxies, has been transferred by John H. Plummer and Colonel A. P. Langtry, the former holders, to George von L. Meyer of Hamilton, Mass.

The announcement issued by the new company and printed in the Union was:

"Mr. George von L. Meyer of Hamilton has acquired a controlling interest in the Springfield Union Publishing Company, and will take the place of A. P. Langtry as president of the company besides serving as treasurer. Mr. J. D. Plummer will continue as publisher of the Union. M. S. Sherman as editor, and H. N. Bowman as assistant treasurer. There will be changes in the policies of the paper."

Mr. von Meyer becomes president and treasurer of the new company, and with Mr. Plummer, Mr. Bowman and Mr. Sherman and formulate the board of directors.

Mr. von Meyer's accession to the Springfield Union Publishing Company occurs to the surprise of many people, but it is understood that the sale price was considerably below that figure.

Mr. Plummer, who has been the publisher, has been retained by the new owner, in the same active capacity; H. N. Bowman, who has been managing business manager for many years, has been made assistant treasurer; and M. S. Sherman, who has been editor, continues in that capacity.

COMMITTEE APPOINTED FOR CONVENTION OF ROCHESTER ADVERTISING AFFILIATION.

The Advertising Club of Rochester, N. Y., has voted to hold its annual convention at the Statler Hotel in Rochester, N. Y., on Saturday, September 21 and 22, to the annual convention of the Advertisers Club of Cleveland, Buffalo, Toledo and Hamilton, Ohio.

William A. Smith is chairman of the general committee which will include the following members of the club, appointed by President Samuel R. Parry:

It is expected that time will also be saved in delivering the newspaper onto the streets and to the railroad terminals from the new site. The old building is not being entirely abandoned, however, as the Tribune will maintain a business office there for the convenience of its old neighborhood.

The sale was negotiated by Burt L. Hunt of Boston, representing Mr. Meyer, and he will, temporarily, be Mr. Meyer's representative on the paper.

Mr. Meyer, the new owner, is the only son of the late George von L. Meyer and was born in 1891, and was prominent in Harvard social and club life, and from which institution he graduated in 1913.

Mr. Meyer is a member of the wool firm of Linder and Meyer of Boston. He is a member of the board of governors of the Boston City club, director of the Boston Maune Pitching Club, Boston and Lowell railroads, a member of the corporation of the Boston Lying-in hospital, a member of the board of managers of the Boston Children's home, a member of the Essex Republic club, director of the Old Colony Trust Company and the Puritan Mortgage Company.

Mr. Meyer is active in the Republican party in Massachusetts. He TRIBUNE TO MOVE BIG PLANT IN 21 HOURS.

ORGANIZATION PERFECTED WITH MILITARY PRECISION TO PERFORM RECORD RUSH ORDER—POLICE ENLISTED TO KEEP TRAFFIC LINES CLEAR FOR TRUCKS.

The entire plant of the New York Tribune will be transferred from its old home on Nassau street to its new home on West 13th street on Saturday, April 14. Plans have been made to accomplish the feat in 21 hours, and the organization for the task along military lines has been perfected.

The first edition will still be running off the presses in the old building at about 1 a.m. when the three hundred workmen employed for the final shift begin moving the presses and loading it onto trucks drawn up to the back door.

Ten seven-ton trucks, working on exact schedule, will be employed to move the machinery, fixtures and furniture; and these trucks will follow a route mapped by the police in order to insure the least possible delay in transit. The work must be completed by six o'clock Saturday night as the Monday morning editions must be composed and printed from the new plant.

This building is ready for occupancy, with three of the new presses ready in advance of the process of being installed. Twenty four new linotype machines are in order, and the paper will be moved from the old plant.

Several tons of type matter are in the paper storage room, elevators are in operation, telephone, telegraph and newspaper tinker instruments will be in working order before the paper begins to move.

It is apparent from its enlarged equipment that the coming Tribune expansion will be so great that the capacity of the press room will be increased more than fifty per cent with its three new presses, and moving belts running under the long tables in the delivery room make that part of the paper specially important.

While chutes will conduct the bundles of papers from the right where they are sorted to the trucks.

It is expected that time will also be saved in delivering the newspaper onto the streets and to the railroad terminals from the new site. The old building is not being entirely abandoned, however, as the Tribune will maintain a business office there for the convenience of its old neighborhood.

Mr. Howard Davis, business manager of the Tribune, will be in charge of the moving. Assisting him will be George A. Barger, superintendent of the composing room, and Jack Lynch, superintendent of the press room.

What Influences the Dealer in Buying Your Merchandise?

The retailer is interested primarily in a profitable volume. He must meet the demands not only of varying seasons and styles, but for new brands which are constantly coming on the market. The Wm. H. Block Company do not stock a newspaper-advertised product just to be good fellows. Primarily they are interested neither in the success of a manufacturer nor a newspaper. But they will stock a product or reorder an old one for which adequate advertising has been scheduled in The News on a non-cancellable basis because they know that there will be a demand for it. They know that it would be bad business not to be able to meet that demand. No successful retail merchandiser, however, will carry the "gamble" on a new product. He will not stock it on a promise of advertising that is contingent upon a certain volume of goods being absorbed by the market. Newspaper advertising has a valuable dealer influence, but the indefinite promise of space should not be expected to get more than an indefinite promise of support from the retailer.
JULY 9, 10, 11 DATES FOR CONVENTION OF S.N.P.A.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS TO BE HOST TO PUBLISHERS—ROOMS WITH PRIVATE BATH QUOTED AT RATE OF TWELVE DOLLARS PER DAY BY HOTEL AT RESORT.

The Southern Newspaper Publishers Association is to hold its twenty-first annual convention at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., July 9, 10, and 11. This is the same week as that in which various conventions have been held—the week after the Fourth of July. An effort was made to co-ordinate the S.N.P.A. convention with the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World by holding the convention during the last half of the week of June 27 and the following week. Other conventions scheduled for White Sulphur Springs made it impossible to secure adequate accommodations during these weeks.

The last week in May was available, but it was thought that this would be a bad week, and it took close after the A.N.P.A. convention. The management of White Sulphur Springs has been assured that the convention of the S.N.P.A. would be well taken care of during the second week of July.

It was recognized that July is a vacation month with the association and as the conventions of previous years have been held during this month, it is expected that many will plan their vacations in connection with the S.N.P.A. convention.

John H. Perry interviews automobile maker and says answer will be yes if nation calls—Jacksonville Journal has real scoop.

If the people of the United States want him, Henry Ford is sure to be a presidential candidate in 1924. That is the conclusion of John H. Perry, president of the Perry-Lloyd Johnson campaign, who has visited the president, in response to an invitation from the secretary of the interior and the governor of Alaska, the Brooklyn Eagle is organizing an Alaskan tour this summer. The chief purpose of the trip is to dedicate Mt. McKinley National Park, a state tourist travel over the new Alaska railroad, and to serve as a business man and newspaper man. The Eagle has organized a group of sixty easterners, and has stabilized Brooklyn to make the trip. The party will leave for the coast near the Canadian Railroad on June 22.

Canadian government authorities have invited the Eagle to Jasper National Park in the Canadian Rockies, and have invited the dedication of the new Jasper Park Lodge.

Secretary of the Interior Hubert Work expects to be with the Eagle party in Alaska to represent the State Department at the dedication at McKinley National Park, which will take place on July 12 or 13.

This will be the Brooklyn Eagle’s third national park tour. Eagle parties having dedicated Grand Canyon National Park and Hawaii National Park in 1921. This tour is being organized and will be managed by H. V. Kaltenborn, editor, who has been in charge of all recent Eagle tours.

The governor of Alaska is Scott C. Bone, a former newspaper man.

DISTRIBUTION THE THEME FOR AD CLUB CONVENTION AT ATLANTIC CITY.

Distribution will be one of the main points of discussion at the Atlantic City convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, according to present plans.

The department of commerce, other federal departments, and many leading authorities of the country admit that the foremost problem in American business life is distribution, and the advertising fraternity, being the principal factor in this field, is taking up the burden of undertaking its obligations, the statement says.

President Lou E. Holland, during the last year has undertaken many plans, all of which will be toward the solution of the distribution problem of American business, and the twenty-three different associations of the associated advertising, such as the American Association of Advertising Agencies, the American Newspaper Executives, the Association of Retail Advertisers, Financial Advertisers’ Association, Direct Mail Association, Graphic Arts, etc., will all bring the best minds of their business there prepared to solve present difficulties in the United States.

The national advertising commission, headed by W. Frank McClure, will make a report on the plans which the various associations in the commission have to recommend to the government the burden, and officers from the department of commerce of agriculture, and other Government units are expected to be present to lend their aid in the meetings of the convention.

The personnel of the Galveston Daily News, the oldest daily newspaper in Texas, which was sold by A. H. Belo & Co., publishers of the Dallas News and Journal, to William J. Neves of Galveston, will remain practically unchanged.

George B. Dealey, president and general manager of A. H. Belo & Co.; Thomas Fitz, Jr., editorial advisor, and Walter Dealey, assistant general manager, all of Dallas, and Ennis Cargill of Houston, a director, concluded the deal.

Louis C. Neves, whose entire business career of twenty-three years has been spent in the service of the Belo Company, was named general manager of the paper under the new ownership. Until the sale of the paper he was editor.

The new owner of the News is a native of Galveston Parish, Freestone County in 1863, and from infancy Galveston has been his home. He is large and various interests greater in that city. He has been a member of the firm of W. L. Moody & Co. and Tompkins, Jr., a editor, editor, and treasurer, Galveston Cotton Compress and Warehouse Company, president of the City of Galveston. He is also interested in a number of other prominent organizations.

Mr. Moody expects to conduct the paper upon a business-end that has been maintained at all times throughout its long career, a period of eighty-one years, and the seeming necessity of making the Galveston Daily News practically a duplicate of the Dallas Morning News so long as common ownership subsisted, notwithstanding the disparity in the potentialities of the respective cities.

The Galveston Semi-Weekly Farm News was not included in the sale to Mr. Moody, and on April 1 it will be consolidated with the Dallas Semi-Weekly Farm News.

John F. Rubben, who from 1906 has been manager of the Galveston Daily News, will assist in the reorganization. The treasurer of A. H. Belo & Co., will remain in his present position, and the company, going to Dallas with the removal of the Belo home office. J. H. Lorentz will continue to represent the News in the East and W. J. If the subscriber paid direct Suppose that every Monday morning all the people who have a hand in furnishing your telephone service came to your door for your share of their pay. From the telephone company itself, would come operators, supervisors, chief operators, wire chiefs, linemen, repairmen, inspectors, installers, cable splicers, test-boardmen, draftsmen, engineers, scientific and bookkeeping personnel, commercial representatives, stenographers, clerks, conducting men and many others, who daily serve your telephone requirements, unseen by you.

There would be tax collectors to take your share of national, state and municipal taxes, amounting to over forty million dollars. There would be men and women coming for a fair return on their money invested in telephonestocks and bonds—money which has made the service possible.

Then there are the people who produce the raw materials, the supplies and manufactured articles required for telephone service. They would include hundreds of thousands of workers in mines, smelters, steel mills, lumber camps, farms, wire mills, foundries, machine shops, rubber works, paint factories, cotton, silk and paper mills, rope works, glass works, tool works, and scores of other industries.

When you pay your telephone bill, the money is distributed by the company to the long line of people who have furnished something necessary for your service. The Bell System spares no effort to make your service the best and cheapest in the world, and every dollar it receives is utilized to that end.

SAVANNAH STARTS PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

FLORIDA NEWSPAPERS, IN ADVERTISEMENTS, TELL ADVANTAGES OF GEORGIA CITY AND TRAVELERS ARE URGED TO RETURN VIA SAVANNAH.

Capping the efforts of the various civic bodies to advertise Savannah and its advantages to the traveling world so that a large number of tourists may be induced to go to Savannah, the board of trade has placed in operation what promises to be a very effective advertising plan by buying space in more than a dozen Florida newspapers to induce the Florida tourists to stop at Savannah on their return trip.

This advertising was released in most of the Florida newspapers a few days ago. The advertisements, which were written by the Savannah board of trade management and told in a very concise form the numerous advantages offered at Savannah for tourists, are expected to be expeditious for all travelers, whether moving by boat or auto, to stop there. The first advertisement appeared in the Jacksonville Journal, Tropic, Orlando Sentinel, St. Augustine Record, St. Petersburg Independent, Lakeland Reporter, Tallahassee Tribune, West Palm Beach Post, Bradenton Herald, Clearwater Sun, Oakland Eastside Leader, Pensacola News, and the Fort Meyers Press.

The advertisements were written by the Savannah board of trade management and told in twenty inches, single columns. All the ads stressed that Savannah is a place that will prove attractive to travelers seeking accommodations. In addition to advertising that appeared in Florida newspapers mentioned in the newspaper and not mentioned the effort to bring tourists from Florida to Savannah is augmented by a board of trade press service. The city of Savannah will furnish these newspapers with live news stories about Savannah. Arrangements have been made for the city to supply such stories for publication through the papers and it is thought that this part of the plan in conjunction with the press campaign will bring the desired results—more visitors to Savannah.

WHY CAMPAIGN IS LIMITED.

In speaking of the plan E. B. Walker, board of trade manager, said that two reasons why the advertising is being limited to Florida newspapers were given. The first idea is to get the bulk of returning automobile tourists looking towards Savannah as a place where the same attractions are offered as in Florida.

The National Advertising Commission will meet April 24 and 25. Officers of the Advertising Club of Cleveland are now cooperating with Chairman W. Frank McCullough of the commission in arranging for the meeting.

Plans have been made for a big program for the public on one day and a big program for the business world on the other day. Dr. Christian F. Reiser of New York, president of the club and past president of the Advertising Club of Cleveland, will be the principal speaker.

The plan in conjunction with the regular advertising is to conduct the cheering service conference on the second day. The ministers of Cleveland are to cooperate in this movement.

BRITISH GODFATHER OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS IS LUNCHEON GUEST — TALKS OF VIEWS TO GATHERING REPRESENTING WHOLE OF NATION'S JOURNALISM.

Newspaper publishers and editors were guests Thursday at a luncheon given by Frank A. Munsey, publisher of the New York Herald and Sun, at the Ambassador Hotel, in honor of Lord Robert Cecil, champion of the League of Nations, and British member of its committee on disarmament, who arrived in this country Tuesday on the Majestic, as the guest of the Foreign Policy Association.

At the luncheon were present about seventy-five newspaper publishers and principal heads of staff of the newspapers and trade papers of the city, representing the owners and principal heads of staff of the New York dailies, representatives of the press associations, trade papers, and others.

In a remarkably graceful speech, Mr. Munsey presented former Ambassador John W. Davis to his guests. As a former representative of Lord Robert's personal friends, Mr. Munsey will be editor of the New York City News, at which the guests will be editors of journals of opinion. A dinner for Lord Robert's personal friends will be given at the home of Thomas W. Lamont on April 8.

A BUSY PROGRAM.

On Thursday evening he was honored at a dinner given by Art Page to meet owners and editors of national weeklies and monthly periodicals at the University Club. Tomorrow Mrs. Willard Straight will give a luncheon for Lord Robert at which the guests will be editors of journals of opinion. A dinner for Lord Robert's personal friends will be given at the home of Thomas W. Lamont on April 8.

Lord Robert's program is arranged by Mr. Munsey in accord with his policy of giving the readers of his newspapers whatever they properly wish to have. Although the Herald and Sun have opposed the League of Nations, Mr. Munsey undertook to give his readers the best thought on the other side of the question by thus communicating with the man who, with the possible exception of Woodrow Wilson, did more than any other to establish the league as a working body in the interests of world peace.

The volume of advertising to be presented to the public this year promises to set a record. Advertising programs worked out by advertising managers throughout the country, announcements by agencies handling national newspapers and individual newspapers to the American Association of Advertising Agencies indicate that the volume of advertising appeared in New York newspapers last year. This made a total of 3,000,000 lines and more than 10,000,000 more lines than were used in 1921. The record set in 1920 was 77,108,253 lines. It was doubled, however, in many matters as well as in total.

Advertising in New York city advertising in 1920 was due solely to a healthy business condition. Many belief that advertising in 1921 will be at least as large as that in 1920.

Thomas W. Lamont, former owner of the New York Evening Post, Hamilton Holt, former publisher of the New York Independent, greeted Lord Robert with a luncheon at the White Star pier. During his visit in New York he is the guest at the Lamont residence in last Seventh street.

Although besieged by reporters in- tent upon obtaining the impressions of his first visit to America, Lord Robert subjected himself willingly and affably to the American custom of interview or conversation.

The round of formal duties that has been arranged as part of Sir Robert's program in furtherance of the League of Nations began Thursday with Mr. Munsey's luncheon and does not end until he sails for England on April 8.

An editor's questions.

In a brief speech, Lord Cecil outlined the purposes of his visit and the present status of the League of Nations questions as he understood it. Lord Cecil then announced the visit to the American press associations, trade papers and others present. The number of meetings in various cities is increasing.

Havana Spanish Newspapers Suspend.

Removal of Subsidy Puts Four Publications Out of Existence—Havana Telegram, operated by Americans, is Finding Profitable Field.

Withdrawal of government subsidies ranging from $500 to $4,000 a month has resulted in the suspension of the Spanish language newspapers in Havana suspending within the last six months. In a city of Cuba a government budget for newspapers was not yet implemented.

PUBLISHERS CO-OPERATE IN LABOR NEGOTIATIONS.

To obtain co-operation in negotiating with the various printing trades unions, the Texas Newspaper Publishers Association has evolved a labor plan which calls upon G. J. Palmer, commissioner of the association, to attend and assist in the negotiation of every contract with the unions. Mr. Palmer is familiar with every condition in the various cities and is able to answer every claim or question raised by the unions as to bonus, time measurement or other working conditions not apparent on the face of the contract.

In this manner every publisher knows just why any concession in wages or working conditions is made in any other place, though the conditions justifying these conditions might not apply in his city. The plan, likewise, prevents the insertion of "jokers," intentionally or unintentionally, in the contracts.

INDIANA NEWSPAPER ADDS ANOTHER WIRE SERVICE.

The South Bend News-Times, within the last month, has added the United News Service to the three direct wires it had been carrying. The announcement of the addition to its news gathering facilities is the result of history and acknowledgment of the need to add to its news gathering facilities. They are the Associated Press and the United Press for the morning edition of the News-Times; and the United Press and the International News Service for the afternoon edition of the News-Times. The News-Times also maintains one page of comics daily, and on Sunday it has a four-page colored comic section and a rotogravure supplement. All of its editorials are written by Floyd Gurley, editor. Joseph W. Stephenson is publisher of the News-Times, which is represented by Lorenzen & Thompson.

Lands O'Lakes Board to Start Advertising.

An advertising campaign of $10,000 will be started by the Wisconsin Lands O'Lakes Association to bring the beauties and opportunities of upper Wisconsin to the attention of millions of people in the middle western states. The purpose is to "sell" upper Wisconsin's resort, agricultural and industrial opportunities. For the initial campaign, newspaper advertising will be used exclusively. James W. Martin of the Kooch Agency, Milwaukee, is in charge of the advertising.

WOODWORTH BUYS INTEREST IN NEW YORK BUREAU.

Melvin J. Woodworth, for more than twenty years associated with the New York News Association, has purchased a substantial interest in the newspaper advertising business. He has been elected chairman of the executive committee and executive head of the association. In making an official announcement of the entrance of Mr. Woodworth into the organization the bureau said:

"The same officials of the New York News Bureau as heretofore will continue in their present capacities.

Payne Heads Committee Considering Means for Advertising Washington.

Pledges in advertisements must be kept, Sylvan King of King's Palace, Washington, told the Washington Advertising Club at its weekly luncheon last Wednesday. The essence of every job lies in solving the difficulties of the position, Mr. King said. "The ambitious advertising man, therefore, does his best to get best results from his ads by turning up store service. "The merchandise must be good, and the display must be truthful. Courtesy is the watchword, and satisfaction is the creed."

A committee headed by G. Logan Payne of the Washington Times and Washington Herald, to consider means for advertising Washington nationally, was announced at the luncheon. The committee will be a clearing house for suggestions from members of the club.

"One-time" programs and similar advertising mediums of questionable value are to be investigated by a committee of the club, headed by J. O. Martin.

ADVERTISING AGENTS TO BE GUESTS OF ASSOCIATED BUSINESS PAPERS.

Members of the American Association of Advertising Agencies will be guests at a luncheon meeting to be given at the Hotel Astor, New York, on April 10, by the Associated Business Papers, at which A. D. Backer, president of the latter association, will speak.

Among the speakers will be Harry Tipper, chairman of the association's relations committee; John Benson, president of the A.A.A.A., and M. L. Wilson, chairman of the A.A.A.A.'s committee on advertising business papers.

In short, illustration, properly used, can be made to harmonize with the entire plan, but—"The heat" is scored.

ADVERTISING GETS MANY GIFTS FOR ORPHANAGE.

BUSINESS PRINCIPLES ARE APPLIED TO CHARITY — MANY BEQUESTS MADE IN WILLS AND CONTRIBUTIONS RECEIVED FOR BETHESDA ORPHAN HOME.

That advertising pays, even when the object advertised is something that cannot bring tangible returns measured by dollars and cents, is proved by the campaign to interest people in the Bethesda Orphan Home, which George A. Mercer, president of the Union Society of Savannah, Ga., has been in charge of for the past two years.

Mr. Mercer, who believes that if you have anything worth selling you can sell it on the basis of liberal advertising, measured the idea two years ago of advertising Bethesda just as he would advertise investments. He had advertised Bethesda and its needs, he thought, if they began to think about this home on the liberal terms, and were made to feel that the opportunity of giving to the privilege of its support and progress would be a good investment for their money into it even though it brought no profit to themselves except the satisfaction of doing a generous thing in a worthy cause.

STARTED WITH $1,000.

So Mr. Mercer began to advertise Bethesda at his own expense. He took regular advertising space every Sunday in the Savannah Daily News. The first year he spent $1,000 in “selling” Bethesda to the world. It paid. The second year he felt so strong a response had been made that he decided to continue the advertising. He was assisted the first year by Fred C. Cockrell, who contributed half the amount needed, $500. Bethesda in the Morning News every Sunday has become familiar to everyone. There, with occasional pictures of the boys themselves, are heart-to-heart talks about Bethesda.

People first read the story about Bethesda, with its human appeal, and then they read the paragraph in fine print which tells them what to do about it.

The practical results of the advertising has been that numbers of people in Savannah and out of it, have added a bequest to their will, leaving Bethesda a substantial amount. The bequests vary from $500 to $1,000, $2,000 and even $50,000.

THE SPONSORS.

How he came to undertake the advertising campaign which he has found so profitable it is told by Mr. Mercer in his last annual report.

"During the year, I decided to make a trial advertising campaign of advertising to raise funds for Bethesda and to educate people to feel that they should recognize this most worthy charity in their last will and testament. The advertising has produced excellent results in both cash donations and a number of wills being drawn in which Bethesda is specified. The money for the purpose was not charged to current funds of the association, but was contributed by two friends of Bethesda. The success of the plan is so evident that I deem it advisable to continue along the same line for a year and possibly put it into permanent effect. It keep Bethesda constantly before the public and will result in many donations and legacies in favor of the home."

Department of Commerce is Making Extensive Survey to Aid Sales Campaigns — Plans to Broader Scope of Domestic Service.

Extensive investigations into advertising conditions abroad are now being made by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the United States department of commerce. The object of the bureau, according to Dr. Julius Klein, director of the bureau, is to be able to advise against casually neglecting foreign and domestic markets which might yield profit to American manufacturers.

Finds Value of Media.

Dr. Klein points out that the facts may show that in some countries and from some commodities motion picture advertising is better or poorer than billboards or that certain newspapers are more effective. The data may show that the competitor from another country is using the best advertising methods available to him. The advertising managers of large American companies are free to work out their own advertising policy.

Ruhr Presses Silenced as French Expel Editors, Put Ban on Newspapers.

One important feature of civilized life has almost completely disappeared from the Ruhr. The press no longer exists. In its present form. The French general in command at Buer held a "paper chase" on March 21. Sixty citizens and a number of newsboys in possession of the forbidden papers were rounded up. All were arrested and have been ordered court-martialed.

Advertise Ban Unfair, Shields Declares.

At a meeting of the Salt Lake City Advertising Club, Attorney General Dan B. Shields of Utah declared that the advertising ban was unfair to local and state newspapers, inasmuch as out-of-state publications circulating within the state carried these same forbidden advertisements.

Editors Disapprove Press License Bill.

Disapproval of the bill to license newspaper editors introduced by Senator Chilton W. Eustis, is expressed by D. M. Stivers in the Grand Forks, N. D., Herald. Mr. Stivers writes: "Just to get in an editorial. A proposed bill to 'license' newspaper editors and reporters, seeking to deny the civil rights of such 'dipломats' and the ostensible object of eliminating the newspaper in the cheapness of the news is a profession," this column has to say first. That the first and cardinal qualification of a newspaperman is his training to learn what is libel is so that he may avoid it; and, secondly, that a newspaperman is a professional, except in a few sparse settlements like Eufaula, the editor of newspapermen may be rightly regarded as a profession for 200 years.

After explaining the provisions of the bill, the editorial says: "The bill aims to redefine the law of libel so that only number plates by those sucessfully passing Mr. Nichols' test of journalism may be 'licensed.' The publication of a libelous article in a newspaper with a libelous defamatory character, treating a person in such a manner as to create a false impression of his character, is a libelous article in the United States. The object of the bill is to increase the public advantage out of every legal proceeding, and to increase the public advantage out of every libelous article it may be necessary to test the law of libel in a court of law."

Editors' Address.

W. P. Davies, editor of the Grand Forks, N. D., Herald, spoke on the "personality of the editor" at a meeting of the Press Club of the University of North Dakota last week. Mr. Davies told of the "unfair" treatment of the newspaper from the inside viewpoint, of the "infrequent function" of the modern newspaper, and also told of the Associated Press and its service. His address was inititated into active membership.

PAPER MADE FROM GRASSES TOO COSTLY.

In the current issue of the bulletin of the American Paper and Pulp Association, W. G. MacNaughton, secretary of the technical association of that body, reviews the question of the practicality of using the fibre of various grasses for the manufacture of paper. He states that, while paper is being made from a variety of grasses in other countries, the determining factor here would be the cost of production. Generally speaking, the lower grades of paper would be in competition with those now made from mixed waste paper, and quoted in the New York market at from twenty-five dollars a ton; while in the higher grades, the California forest service, for example, would have to compete with soda pulp, quoted at eighty-five to ninety dollars a ton.

Mr. MacNaughton believes that, due to the high cost of collecting the grasses, and the relatively low percentage of fibre obtained from the raw grasses, the paper pulp from any material other than waste papers is not likely to be a commercial success as long as the materials are available.

PULP TIMBER IN TONGASS FOREST, ALASKA, ADVERTISED FOR SALE.

Announcement of the advertising for sale of 334,000,000 cubic feet of pulp timber on the Tongass National Forest, Alaska, has been made by the forest service of the agricultural department.

Involved in the proposed sale are the largest timber belts one 260,000,000 cubic feet and the other of 74,000,000 cubic feet. The smaller belt lies within a 3.5 miles on Cascade Creek, one of the best waterways in Alaska. The larger belt is forty miles distant on Kupreanof and Kuliu Islands. Navigable and sheltered waterways are said to afford cheap and ready means of towing the logs to Cascade Creek without hosts. The largest belt is primarily Sitka spruce and the other Sitka spruce and hemlock.

The advertisement states that low priced timber that can be considered are sixty cents per hundred cubic feet for Sitka spruce and thirty cents per hundred for hemlock and other species. Three-fourths of the pulp wood is Sitka hemlock and the remainder Sitka spruce.

NEWS PRINT PRODUCTION GAINS.

Total news print production for February showed an increase of eleven percent over February, 1921, while standard showed a gain of ten percent. The production of total news print for February, 1922, was the same as for February, 1921.

Both total news print and standard news print showed a decrease of about one percent. In February, 1922, standard news shows a decrease of about one percent. In February, 1922, standard news shows a decrease of about one percent. In February, 1922, standard news shows a decrease of about one percent.

LIONS CLUB GIVEN FIVE ESSENTIALS IN ADVERTISING.

VALUE OF ADVERTISING AND TIME AND HOW BUSINESS MEN MAY TAKE THE WASTE TIME OUT OF EVERY UNIT OF BUSINESS ACTIVITY IS DISCUSSED BY A. SWENSEN.

"We must advertise," the efficacy of advertising cannot be questioned," Mr. E. Swensen, district commercial manager of the Western Telephone Company, Minneapolis, told members of the Lions Club in that city. Mr. Swensen and his Basel heard a speaker declare that out of the 10,000 business failure 84 cents of time, then was not used or advertising.

"Business conditions have sown a discouraging seed of doubt about the future. When we ask how much the work being done in high schools in journalism writing is of the opinion of H. Elmer Harrington, director of the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern University, expressed to the American Association of Teachers of Journalism.

"We come to see that every unit of our time and how business men may take the waste time out of every unit of business activity is discussed by A. Swensen.

University and college instructors in journalism can no longer sit in the comfortable position that they can afford to do. They must adapt themselves to the actual business of the world. Great efficiency in business means nothing more nor less than making the best possible use of time. Time is money."

Our High Schools Should Teach Journalism.

DIRECTOR OF MEDILL SCHOOL WELCOMES AID TO SECONDARY SCHOOLS CAN FURNISH—a GOOD PLACE TO START TRAINING, BUT THEY CAN'T DO THE WHOLE TASK.

"The purpose of the high school instructor in journalism should be to direct students interested in journalism into right methods of writing, to be reflected in the making of the school paper and in the English composition courses. Journalism in the high school should be considered as a matter of a new approach, not as vocational preparation for the newspaper office. Its larger purpose is to vitalize the high school English by compositions by giving students the urge to use their own ideas, not to follow a law of composition. This has been given an incentive; the teacher should have a flair of teaching. It is for us to face it, not to attempt to annihilate the fact with cross-grained criticism," Mr. Harrington declared.

"It is not our feeling that these courses should, however, train for vocational ends, since we recognize that to that end the writers need ample mental reserves, well known facts and methods of the trade. No high school boy is ready to be graduated into the newspaper office, for he needs acquaintance with college and men to broaden his experience."

"The school paper has 300 copies printed each week, which are given to members at the Sunday morning service. The local newspaper also has an interest in the high school and can use the paper to supplement the work. It is ready to be graduated into the newspaper office; he needs acquaintance with college and men to broaden his experience.

"Journalistic writing courses are displacing the old-fashioned composition courses to make of them narrative, conversational terms and to the making of literary essays, disassociating the writer from the paper. The school paper gives students an interest in their work through the prospect of seeing it in print.

"Students learn the value of getting news straight and writing it as they see it, to be red by people they know and actual situations and happenings that interest them and that they have taken across of their horizon of experience. The larger reservoir of their personal lives has served them well. They have learned how to work to make the world a better place to live in."

"But the high school teacher in English is a well-trained and appreciative by their fellows in the form of printed information. They know and of actual situations and happenings that interest them and that they have taken across of their horizon of experience. The larger reservoir of their personal lives has served them well. They have learned how to work to make the world a better place to live in."

"The fifth is the biggest element of all, in it, the idea of a good business man. Greater efficiency in business means nothing more nor less than making the best possible use of time. Time is money.

REPORTER IN THE SENATE FIFTY-FIVE YEARS.
VETERAN ENGAGED BY NEW YORK HERALD BY SENIOR BENNETT IN 1866 AND HAS REPORTED EVERY SESSION OF CONGRESS SINCE THAT TIME; 78 YEARS OLD.

Theodore F. Shuey, who has just completed fifty-five years as a member of the stenographic reporting corps in the senate, sees nothing unusual in his long record in the senate, nor in the fact that at all times he has not been compelled to absent himself for a single day cause of illness. At seventy-eights he is as alert as most men of fifty; he is fitly dressed, his face is ruddy and his hair is only tinged with gray. He is confident that he will be on hand for many more sessions of congress.

Mr. Shuey went to work on the senate reporting staff in 1866, soon after the civil war, when twenty-three years old. He has reported every session of congress since that time, on the floor with his notebook, taking notes on the daily floor, getting an actual transcript of the proceedings later to be printed in the Congressional Record. He is just as active today as he was on the first day, full of ideas, new discoveries, and doing a full day's work without a break. Among many men, he is widely known as a man of his work and a man of business.

When I joined the reporting corps in the senate, says Mr. Shuey, "there were fewer reporters, but there were just as many who went to work full time. The work was harder, and the money was better. The memory of those old days is a great asset to me. I have been reporting since the days of the late Senator D. O. Lewis, who was one of the states which had left the Union at the time of the civil war and had not returned. Among them were Louisiana and Virginia. Those days were not so long ago. In Alabama, Mississippi and the Carolinas, their problems with the soldiers and the carpetbaggers. The membership of the senate was a little more than sixty, as compared with ninety-eight today.

It is impossible to say with accuracy how the membership of the senate in the days when I first went there as a reporter was of higher calibre than today. The memory of those days is somewhat of a different type, however. There were fewer members in the senate, and I am inclined to think that, while there seem to be fewer outstanding figures, man for man the average is superior now.

The truth is that the senator of today has much more to do than the senator of earlier times. The rush of business has been reflected in elections just as in everything else; there is a greater attention to politics. I doubt if there is a senator who is not willing now to let a letter go unanswered, or in writing to his constituents, recognizing the fact that he is dealing with the electorate. The written word is required to be read by his constituents, even though it means that he devotes less time to the study of public affairs.

In the old days when the members were elected through the legislature, the senator did not have the necessity of keeping up a great political organization and the many public offices that are wanted by a senator. The old days were the days of the party boss, where the party controlled all the offices, where the party was the boss. The people who wanted to get into the legislature had to do so by choosing a legislature that would turn in the control of the state to the party of their choice. Today that is not the case, inasmuch as the voter is the boss.
AD MAN AEXPLAINS IMPORTANCE OF SERVICE.

USE NEWSPAPERS TO BUILD UP GOOD WILL, PROSTIGE AND CONFIDENCE. INAIN THIS WAY GET CUSTOMERS EDWIN B. WILSON TELLS ATLANTIC CITY CHAMBER.

Personal newspaper advertising, combined with informative booklets, followed up by sales letters and personal solicitation, are assured methods by which financial institutions, as well as any other lines of business, can build up their business by telling the public what they have to offer, declared Edwin Bird Wilson, head of the New York newspaper advertising agency bearing his name, in an address before the Atlantic City Chamber of Commerce and the Advertising Club.

"Service, intangible, yet as real as personality, is one of the most valuable things in the world," said Mr. Wilson. "It is an appraisable commodity of commercial value, and can be bought by advertising. People want it, are willing to pay for it, and the success of any endeavor to build up good will is measured largely by the number of persons it serves and the quality of its service."

"Service is all that the banking and fiduciary institutions have to sell, but the customer will not buy many of those who do not sell it. They let the public by in and it is all the public buys only a little of it. This class of an institution either confines itself to the public announcement of an attractive card, without selling value, or else it does not advertise at all. Naturally, the public gets nothing.

"But the service-rendering kind of banking concerns that desire to be called great and are selling their services to the public are doing so, not of all, by advertising in their local newspapers persistently, humanly, interestingly and sincerely. And they are adding to the list of such institutions.

"The soundest advice that I can give to those who are in the service of financial institutions or other businesses is to put themselves to the task of becoming advertising agents they can find. Rely on his advice as you would on the advice of your lawyer, architect, or your engineer. Follow his recommendations. Have him make a budget, and lend him to stick to it, avoiding the temptation to spend for every this-or-that advertising scheme that comes along.

Use the newspapers, by all means, to build up local interests with purpose and confidence, and to get new customers. If your business is of national or international scope, use a selected list of the best magazines. Supplement this with the newspapers, with interesting, attractive, informative booklets, and distribute them judiciously.

"Follow up your leads with good, friendly, sincere letters and personal calls. Keep up your good work. You will sell your service if it's worthy of the name of service."

NEWSPAPER MAN LEAVES ESTATE OF $88,500.

John B. Smallwood, news manager of the Washington Evening Star, who died at his home at 1410 Rhode Island Ave. on March 19, left an estate valued at $88,500, according to a petition for letters testamentary filed in the court by his widow, Lola E. Smallwood, this week. Mrs. Smallwood was named as sole beneficiary.

IRISH JOURNALIST ADVISES STUDENTS TO WRITE SIMPLY AND SINCERELY.

Students in the University of Washington school of journalism, as guests of Dean M. L. Spencer, at his home in Seattle last Saturday, were treated to a lecture by Jack Goddard, journalism student, and who spoke informally on "The Writing Game." He was accompanied with a lecture tour.

"Journalism is a field for original thinkers," Mr. Desmond told the journalism students. "Creative writing is the test for original thinking. Journalism comes next."

"Write sincerely. Write your own ideas. Get the interest in the opening paragraph. Don't allow your staff to run into long paragraphs. Keep your ideas in your story. Study. Human nature. Learn the little stories of the people you meet. Don't be afraid of being simple. When you are simply, it is a single aspect of daily life, focused on a single screen."

IRISH JOURNALIST ADVISES STUDENTS TO WRITE SIMPLY AND SINCERELY.

Eric Palmer, president of the Brooklyn Press Club, this week issued a warning to businessmen and especially lawyers against a young man who has been calling on Brooklyn lawyers and asking money to "aid a broken-down newspaper man."

"His story is that his newspaper has tuberculosis and that money is needed to send him to Southern California for treatment."

"The man is a fraud," said Mr. Palmer. "I was substantially the same story wherever he calls, and he has victimized a dozen or more Brooklyn lawyers. He represents himself as a member of the Brooklyn Press Club and says that the broken-down reporter is a member of the club. He should be handed over to the police."

EDITOR TO BE TRIED AGAIN.

Harry Sutphin, editor of the borough Bulletin, a weekly newspaper published in Queens, N. Y., must appear in Queens supreme court before Justice Dike on April 2 to face a charge of second degree assault on an indictment, charging manslaughter in the first degree. Notice of the trial was served on his attorneys Tuesday.

Mr. Sutphin, 38, last year was tried for manslaughter in the first degree in the death of Miss Betty Williams, 11, daughter of Misses Louise and Henry Williams, of Jamaica, shot and killed in the rear of a garbage cart in a quarrel. He was tried for manslaughter in the first degree last December, but the jury disagreed. He has been out on bail since.

A STITCH IN TIME THAT CAN SAVE THOUSANDS.

"If you could be around this office and see how often someone wants to know what the country papers are saying about matters of importance, it would be a good thing for every newspaper. Whether the retailer does it or the publisher does it, it cannot be brought about too soon."

James C. McNally.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

In the last six years there have been twenty-nine suspensions and consolidations among the larger newspapers of the country, and according to figures compiled by the Cleveland Citizen, at the lowest calculations, a total of 289 newspapers in the United States. The old-time press, in the hands of the International Typographical Union, has been thrown out of employment in many cases. But Mr. Rorke, the Typographical Journal, observes that these figures do not really mean that a thousand newspapers have been eliminated, but rather that the merged papers through the provision of business absorbed many of those affected.

American and British newspapers will be the first to make practical use of radio telephony. Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of the wireless, declared recently in London that radio telephony might be used for newspaper work. "Until messages can be sent in the daytime," he said, "regular commercial service is hardly practicable. Business men will not get up at five o'clock in the morning to send messages. But it could be used for newspaper work at night. Editors on both sides of the water could then send in the first edition and the reporter in New York could be sent instructions to correspondents.

"God bless the newspaper men," declared Professor Robert W. Rogers, Orientalist from Drew University, and Princeton, in discussing the discovery of a tomb at a dinner of the Essex Club in Newark.

"Lord Carnarvon put the news in telegrams to the press, then came to dinner and announced that the professor said, 'They did more for the study of the ancient world than all the scholars could do. The discovery of Tutankhamen caught the imagination of the world.'"

"If you could be around this office and see how often someone wants to know what the country papers are saying about matters of general interest, you would be more apt to think of editorial page in every newspaper," declared Field Secretary Ole Buick of the Nebraska Press Association. "A printed editorial page cannot help but have more prestige than those that never express any opinions at all. I know that I am not asked some such questions, but it is embarrassing to me to have to say that most of the papers have not said anything.

"His nose for news.

His nose for news, an organ wondrous wise. Made him a rare, young "cub", and bound to rise;

He covered Hicksville haunts by night and day,

And cornered many a "scoop" of giantsize.

He saw life's bliss and woe with clear, blue eyes; looked its gold and gray, its changing guise;

And kept quite clean, along the narrow way.

His nose for news.“

Henry Waddington, Jr., formerly with the Philadelphia Record, and more recently in the advertising department of the Philadelphia Telephone Directory, has become associated with Powers & Stone, publishers’ representatives, in their New York office as solicitor of national advertising.

NEWSPAPER WOMAN TO WED GENEOSE LAWYER.

The engagement of Miss Betty Adler, well known Iowa newspaper woman, and Henry Waterman, prominent attorney of Western Illinois, has been announced. Miss Adler has been associated with the Davenport, Iowa, Times, of which her brother, E. P. Adler, is publisher, editor of the society page and women’s clubs, and feature writer. Her work took her overseas as special correspondent for the Lee Newspaper Syndicate in 1919 and on her return home she published an interesting book of her letters. She is a member of the Iowa Press and Authors’ Club.

Following her marriage in the early spring, Miss Adler expects to edit the book review page of which she was recently had charge, and some special feature writing, incidental to the newer duties of housekeeping. Miss Agnes Abrahamson of Moline, who has been society editor for several years on the Times-Rock Island page, will take Miss Adler’s work in the Davenport office.

Mr. Waterman was graduated from Cornell University, taking a law course at Yale. He received his degree of doctor of civil law from Illinois College of Law. After practicing for six years in Chicago, he became in 1922 President of the Kiwanis Club, and now is district trustee of the club.

FELT BASE ADVERTISING FOR YEAR PLANNED BY ASSOCIATIONS.

The Floor Covering Association of America, which is limited exclusively to manufacturers of felt base goods, is planning for a comprehensive advertising campaign covering the period April, 1923, to April, 1924.

The policy of this association is not to seek mere memberships, but to make each member who joins take an active part in the programme. The Floor Covering Association of America has outlined a program which will include a complete study of trade customs, and under this general term is included all facts relative to nomenclature as it affects this industry in the naming of fabrics, the coming of descriptive phrases and the establishing of distinctive trade marked names or coined phrases. They could give a product the inferred right to be known as a felt base floor covering. It will be the work of the association to act promptly against any trade infringements.

The Felted Products Corporation, Congoleum Company, Bilt and the Bilt-Lap Company, and other companies, constituting the leaders in the Floor Covering Ass.-cia of America, will conduct independent lines of technical research in the various phases of the production of their covering declared.

WHAT GRAVEYARD OF LEGISLATIVE ORATORY COSTS.

CONGRESSMAN KAHN'S VISIT TO REPORTERS' SESSION WITH HUGHES LEADS TO INTERESTING DISCUSSION OF COST OF RUNNING CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Congressman Kahn of California called at the state department one day not long since at the hour in which Secretary Hughes was then present. In his daily interview to the members of his district he said:

"Walk right in, Mr. Kahn," breathed Mr. Hughes. Gentlemen, Mr. Kahn is one of the professors he contributes to the greatest of all American newspapers—the Congressional Record.

"Yes," admitted Congressman Kahn, adding gravely, "and the least read."

The esteemed Congressional Record has temporarily suspended publication, it has been stated, in order to settle its own outstanding arrears. A comeback will hopefully be made by it on April 4 at the hour in which Mr. Kahn was present that Monday of next month, however.

John Greene, deputy public printer, has stated that the cost of a number of the Fourth Estate some statistics regarding this "greatest of all American newspapers" is about $1,058,750. The average size of the Daily Record is about 80 pages. An average issue takes about 9,000 pounds of paper, which costs $425.

The Congressmen are the most costly publication printed in the quiet offices of the Government printing office. There are 3,000 copies of the daily and 4,000 of the bound permanent issue in the Reference Library. The Congressmen are rapidly perished. From thirty to one hundred of them are delivered in twelve hours from 7 p.m. and 1 a.m.

The fiscal year 1922 the Record totaled 27,050 pages. The cost of the daily bound and unbound numbers for that year was $71,015.97. The total cost for the years 1919 to 1922, inclusive, was $2,644.104.21, or an average cost of $424.362.14 per year.

The Congressional Record and index for the fourth session of the Sixty-seventh congress, ended March 15, will cost nearly $300,000, a comparison for one for the relatively short third session of the same congress. The total number of pages in the Congressional Record for the record session was 6,200 as compared with 5,000 for the short session.

The longest speech ever made in congress was by Senator La Follette on May 4, 1914. It occupied 366 pages in the Daily Record, most of it being tabulated matter.

The average size of the Daily Record is about eighty pages. An average issue takes close to 9,000 pounds of paper, which cost $425.

EDITORS APPROVE INVASION OF RUHR BY LARGE MAJORITY.

Of 332 editors of Associated Press newspapers throughout the State who have responded to a mail questionnaire sent out by the district attorney of New York, now explaining the invasion of the Ruhr by the German National Intelligence, which was not long ago engaged in the publication of a report of the debates. Mr. Shuey had a soldier in Virginia, looking for a job. Mr. Shuey had been a soldier in the service of the United States.

The practice of the Senate reporters is to divide the time on the floor into two divisions, the reporter taking his turn in the debate. When his turn is up he goes to the reporters' office, just around the corner from the senate chamber to read his notes into a recording disk, which later is placed in a machine for a typist.

The completed manuscript is then returned to the reporter, who is free to make notes. He takes full liberties with the copy and is thanked for being bound on the record. Some few Senators insist on seeing copies of their speeches, but not on having them read. They appear to stand by the judgment of the reporters. It is not free to alter the verbatim as they desire, so long as the sense of the speech is retained, nevertheless, the reporters of the Congressional Record just as they are delivered the Congressional Record just as they are, delivered to the reporters of the speech.

Mr. Shuey said in describing the word "taxpayer" to his audience that, "I am just as fit to-day as when I started in with the work," said he. "I have become a part of the organization of the taxpayers of the District of Columbia." An old-line member of Congress, Mr. Shuey was described as a hard worker for the taxpayers of the District of Columbia. Of the Senate reporters in addition to Mr. Shuey—five of them—have figured prominently. Three of them are not dead. The most prominent of these, Mr. Shuey, became a reporter there in 1848 at the age of twenty-five, and is the only one of the five who is still living.

EDUCATION TALKS ON LIBEL LAWS.

A lecture on the libel laws of the state of Pennsylvania was delivered before a Deadline Club, an organization of newspapermen, by William J. Lambert, attorney. The lecture followed by a quiz on the part of his audience. The lecture is the first of a series of education talks to be given this year.

REPORTER IN THE SENATE FIFTY-FIVE YEARS.

in making the change the people departed from one of the fundamental purposes of the original system of government—that of a balance weight in popular legislation.

"The day of oratory in the senate— oratory as we knew it in the past—seemingly has gone. The speeches today are less studied, far less of a popular appeal. They are far too long for the general average size of the Daily Record is about eighty pages. An average issue takes close to 9,000 pounds of paper, which cost $425.

the Advertising Club strives to point out to the business men.

"It wasn't long ago that almost any one who advertised and the public fleeched. Fake medicines, bogus oil stocks, fake gold and stocks, etc., were unloaded on the unsuspecting public today. Advertising is not legitimate or the would-be purchaser of advertising space experimented in buying it.

"This is especially true in regards to high grade newspapers and magazines. A great deal has been reached at the point where a newspaper can be judged by the class of advertising carried. Many publishers carry advertisements that they themselves don't advertise or buy it generally due to the fact that the local merchants don't give the paper enough. But, if the buyer doesn't enable the local merchants to come in and make it profitable to advertise, the local merchant should be even more profitable. The reason the mail order man and the mail order man, are the schoolmen, many times fail to combat the mail order man's selling arguments.

"The systems of business are so closely tied up with advertising that it is almost imperative that business men be given the opportunity to learn more about advertising.

"Here is where the advertising club does its best work. It offers an opportunity for busy business men to attend a weekly afternoon course in advertising. In Indianapolis we have speakers every week who are in active advertising and selling. Not only is the advertiser benefited by this active and practical course, but he is enabled to serve the public because of the knowledge gained.

"Truth In Advertising" is the slogan of advertising clubs throughout the world, and it has had its effect on the community by making advertising believable or else it doesn't pay.

"Truth-in-advertising and business integrity are now recognized as the principles that are embodied in the code of business management. But, there are big fellows who cannot be intimidated by a club, but who have been striving to respect the aims of the combined clubs of the A. A. C. W. for instance.

"In unity there is strength. Every advertising club should belong to the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

BUCKET'S THE TRUTH ESSENTIAL

IN ADVERTISING, SAYS HUNTER.

BUSINESS MEN ARE BOUND TO VERACITY IN THEIR INTERESTS, INDIANAPOLIS SECRETARY DECLARES—TELLS OF VALUE OF AD CLUBS IN CHECKING FRAUDS.

Business men who protect their own interests are bound to use advertisements that carry the truth, declared Edward W. Hunter, secretary-manager of the Advertising Club of Indianapolis, in telling a group of business men at Kokomo, Ind., Tuesday what the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World are doing to wipe out freeloading advertising. Mr. Huler emphasized the value to every community of having an advertising club that offers an opportunity for busy business men to learn more about advertising and act as a check on fake promoters.

"Advertising is a market builder and a market insurer," Mr. Hunter said. "Those who sell merchandise are bound by their own best interests to see that advertising is properly and truthfully presented. There should be no ambiguous or misleading statements made. This is more important in advertising than it is in oral salesmanship, because there are no chances for explanations. The advertisement is there and its message cannot be changed afterwards for that reason. If for no other, advertisements should be written in plain understandable English. It is just such lessons that BUSINESS EDITORS HEAR TALKS ON TRANSPORTATION. Publishers and editors of business papers in New York city to the number of about 100 attended an luncheon at the McAlpin Hotel recently to hear a presentation by Colonel A. C. Barber, chairman of the transportation subcommittee of the Committee of Commerce of the United States, as to the plans that are being worked out for the convention of the chamber in New York city, May 7 to 11.

Judge Andrew C. Pearson, treasurer of the United Publishers Corporation and chairman of the Associated Advertising Clubs Conference, presided at the luncheon. In addition to Colonel Barber, an address was made by Col. George A. Post, chairman of the Transportation Committee of the American Chamber of Commerce, and G. A. McDevitt, secretary of the Associated Advertising Clubs.

"Judging by the results which are shown whenever quizzes on current events are attempted, it would seem that our younger generation stands in need of some instruction on how to read.

"The quiz just cited is only a symptom of a widespread state of mind. The importance of the newspapers in the checking of contemparaneous is not sufficiently comprehended. We hope that educators will give more time and thought to the problem of how they can turn out a group of students trained and equipped to read newspapers properly.
