Marshall Scholarships Given For Further Study in Britain

By William H. Honan

Dec. 14, 1998

Three New York students are among this year's winners of the Marshall Scholarships, it is to be announced today by the British Ambassador to the United States, Sir Christopher Meyer.

Two of the three, Tara Helfman and her classmate Joseph Stern, share the honor of receiving the first two Marshall Scholarships awarded to Queens College seniors.

A history major at Queens College, Ms. Helfman plans to study for a doctorate in history at Cambridge as preparation for an academic career in history and a legal career in constitutional law.

Mr. Stern, with a double major in mathematics and philosophy, plans to study pure mathematics at Imperial College, London, in preparation for doctoral work in the United States after he completes his Marshall scholarship.

Eric Nelson, a history major at Harvard, is the third New Yorker to win the scholarship this year. He expects to study political thought and intellectual history at Cambridge.

The Marshall Scholarships -- often equated in prestige with Rhodes Scholarships -- were established in 1953 by the British Government as a gesture of thanks to the people of the United States for the assistance provided by the Marshall Plan after World War II.
The scholarships provide an opportunity for American students who have demonstrated academic excellence and leadership potential to continue their studies for two or three years at a British institution. Twenty-eight American colleges and universities are represented in this year's list of recipients. Following are the other Marshall Scholars:
