AMBASSADOR BARZUN EXAMINES THE FULL MEANING AND SIGNIFICANCE OF THE UK/US SPECIAL RELATIONSHIP

A capacity dinner audience of Pilgrims and guests filled the Ballroom at the Four Seasons Hotel, Park Lane on 26 September to welcome Ambassador Matthew Winthrop Barzun.

*Ronald M Freeman, Mrs Barzun
Ambassador Matthew W Barzun,
Admiral Lord Boyce*

After an introduction by Pilgrims' Chairman Ronald Freeman, Ambassador Barzun began by expressing his and his wife's great pleasure at attending this Pilgrims' dinner of welcome. He recalled the advice given to him by a veteran New York Pilgrim before taking up his Ambassadorial role. Having made his first public speech to the British Pilgrims, he would then have to deal with the notorious British popular press which would first build him up, and then pull him down. Ambassador Barzun pointed to the recent front page of The Sun, announcing the death of the Special Relationship with the funeral rites to be held at the French Embassy - this being shortly after the House of Commons vote against Britain being involved, with the French, in armed intervention in Syria. Clearly The Sun and other such newspapers had conveniently forgotten the role played by the Special Relationship in the Second World War; post-war reconstruction; the Cold War; the current war against worldwide terrorism, or key areas such as climate change, international trade, aid to underdeveloped countries, and the rule of international law.

Ambassador Barzun was wary about nostalgia about the Special Relationship and trying to paper over differences that might exist between our two countries. He drew illustrative images of the Relationship: the painting and re-painting of white fences, to keep the Relationship in good repair; and the three vital components of the whisky manufacturing process - fermentation, distillation and maturation - all comparable to the making of the Relationship over a long period of time. 1776 had been a family feud, 1812 a kind of retribution, but since 1814 we had been the best of friends despite occasional differences of opinion.

Ambassador Barzun paid a generous tribute to one of his greatest predecessors, John Winant, who became Britain's best-ever friend during his Ambassadorial tenure of 1941-46. At the Pilgrims' luncheon of welcome held at the Savoy on 18 March 1941, with 455 Pilgrims and guests present, including Churchill and most of the Cabinet, Winant made very clear that he wanted the USA to come into the War as soon as possible. Throughout the remainder of the War he remained very close to Churchill and his government, and did his utmost to maintain the closeness of the two countries' relationship.

In his warm vote of thanks Admiral Lord Boyce, the President of the Pilgrims, paid full tribute to Ambassador Barzun as a very worthy successor to his Ambassadorial predecessors, in a tradition going back over a century of Pilgrims' welcoming dinners.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE LETTER

Dear Pilgrims,

Warning! This will not be a traditional Letter from the Chairman, the President or the Chairman of the Programme Committee. Our Chairman has asked some of the other Executives of the Pilgrims to volunteer to contribute. He's a brave man - in my case.

As an American who married a Brit 43 years ago, I believe that the Pilgrims of Great Britain and other Anglo-American organisations serve an important purpose. And, it seems to me that this purpose grows more important with the challenges that surround us.

What do we make of what is going on in Washington, D.C.? What is happening on the streets of America where guns continue to divide opinion while continuing to wreak havoc, and why are politicians powerless to change the gun laws?

Equally, what do Americans make of what is going on here? Many of my American friends cannot understand why we do not share their attitudes to Wikileaks and now to Snowden. What does freedom of information mean on both sides of the Atlantic in this climate when fanaticism is alive and kicking? I would like more debates between the visiting Pilgrims of America and us.

On this side of the ocean, we are grappling with voter apathy, a growing distrust of our police force and wariness (at best) of politicians and political systems.

We live in an extraordinary world of progress with technological geniuses who create unbelievable new worlds. Is there a difference between the way Americans and British deal with “progress” with both the positive and negative effects?

Shouldn't we, as Pilgrims, have more activities that relate to all the arts, inviting visiting American talent when we feel they are of particular interest?

Yes, we should have debates about upcoming elections, but I hope The Pilgrims will also continue to have British and American speakers debating the difficult issues that don't go away. Sometimes these issues fall into the category of “right versus right” but we should still debate them even if there is no “right” answer. This is not to become a lobbying force but to become more informed and better thinkers. Members of The Pilgrims on both sides of the ocean join because they have a curiosity and often an insight into the two different outlooks, gained through their individual experiences. Some of our best talks have been from fellow Pilgrims.

Over the last four years that I have been an active Pilgrim, I have hugely enjoyed the events. And, no, I don't go to all of them by any means. This year Baroness Manningham-Buller talked to us about intelligence and her experiences when heading up MI5. In September, shortly after his arrival, the new (and I dare add, young) US Ambassador spoke in a hugely thoughtful way to the packed dinner of 300 people. Jeremy Paxman, wearing a very different hat from his Newsnight one, will talk to us in December about the real, day-to-day experiences of British people during the entire course of World War I.

What is my reason for writing this letter: I would like even more members of the Pilgrims to “rise up”, become vocal and send suggestions to the Programme Committee about the topics that would make you want to brave weather, traffic, and to pay the cost of the ticket to come. For Americans and Brits to be together, listening, then exchanging views is the raison d'être of who we are.

Debbie Owen

LADY MANNINGHAM-BULLER LOOKS BACK ON A LONG AND DISTINGUISHED CAREER IN THE SECURITY SERVICE

Following the Annual Meeting on 30 September, Pilgrims and their guests attended the 20th Sir Harry Brittain Memorial Lecture as guests of KPMG LLP in the atrium at 8 Salisbury Square. Baroness Manningham-Buller DCB, Director-General of the Security Service 2002-07, achieved distinction as a counter-terrorism specialist working against the IRA and international terrorist groups.

Baroness Manningham-Buller, Admiral Lord Boyce

Following an introduction by Sir Peter Bottomley MP, Lady Manningham-Buller admitted that she had never set out to run the Security Service, which she regarded as a great privilege, and had involved her in some most interesting work. This included a two-year posting to Washington, from which she was recalled to deal with the IRA terrorist threat on the British mainland. Following the terrible events of 11 September 2001 she flew to Washington with colleagues from GCHQ and MI6. Lady Manningham-Buller took over the leadership of the Service in the autumn of 2002. The following year the government doubled the Service's budget, to address the increased terrorist threat.

Lady Manningham-Buller stressed the importance of working in concert with the intelligence services of other countries, despite the difficulties, since the threat was global. An important part of the Government's counter-terrorist strategy was to try to prevent the radicalisation of younger people and their recruitment into terrorist groups. She touched on the instant rush to judgment of a 24-hour media. She also emphasised that the security and intelligence agencies needed public support to operate effectively. They were fully accountable to government and operated strictly within the law.

During questions Lady Manningham-Buller dealt skillfully with such topics as security in public places; the role of women in the security services; the resources devoted to combating terrorism; the Snowden affair; the granting of powers to the Intelligence and Security Committee of Parliament; the impact of technological advances on intelligence work; dealing with regimes less scrupulous about moral and legal considerations, and the comparison between the threat posed by the IRA and the current Al-Qaida-related terrorist threats.

The Pilgrims' President, Admiral Lord Boyce, gave a very warm vote of thanks to Lady Manningham-Buller for her illuminating and absorbing lecture.

VISIT TO BLETCHLEY PARK

The achievements of the people at Bletchley Park, the world's largest code-breaking centre during the Second World War, have passed into legend. Pilgrims and their guests visited Bletchley Park on 10 July.

Fellow Pilgrim Sir Francis Richards, Chairman of the Bletchley Park Trust 2006-11 and a former Director of GCHQ, talked about the code-breakers' contribution to winning the War and saving hundreds of thousands of lives. The breaking of the Enigma and Lorenz codes led to the creation of Colossus, the prototype of today's computers, and the torch has been passed on to succeeding generations of code-breakers and intelligence analysts at GCHQ. The Chief Executive of the Bletchley Park Trust, Iain Standen, spoke about the efforts made to save Bletchley Park from demolition in the early 1990s and the current restoration and development plans to create a full-scale heritage site and learning centre.

Excellent volunteer guides gave us a guided tour, and after a most enjoyable lunch we were given practical demonstrations of the Enigma and Bombe code-breaking machines.

Our thanks go to Iain Standen and his staff for making us so welcome and giving us such a memorable day.

Re-elections to the Executive Committee, September 2013

Mrs Deborah Owen was born in New York City and worked in publishing until 1968 when she married David Owen and moved to London. In 1971 she set up her own literary agency, which now represents Delia Smith, Amos Oz and David Owen. Following the serious illness of their eldest child in the early 1970s, Deborah Owen helped to set up The Sick Children's Trust. Her other involvements have included the Fulbright Scholarship, Relate, the London Symphony Orchestra, Wilton's Music Hall and the SDP (while it lasted!). Mrs Owen serves on the Programme Committee.

David Skidmore OBE FRCS is a consultant surgeon who has worked in Kent and Central London over the last thirty years. Trained at Cambridge and Birmingham Universities, he has spent time in the USA as a student and research fellow. He was a Conservative Parliamentary candidate, with a particular interest in the politics of healthcare. He was a Cambridge University swimming coach and continues to swim competitively. Mr Skidmore serves on the Programme Committee.

SIR CHRISTOPHER RICKS SPEAKS TO THE PILGRIMS ON 4TH JULY

At the invitation of Sir Peter Bottomley MP, the Pilgrims were privileged to host esteemed literary critic and Boston University's Professor of Humanities, Sir Christopher Ricks. Aptly calendared on 4th July, Sir Christopher spoke to an impressed audience about T S Eliot's key works including The Wasteland, as well as detailing the writer's fascinating working relationships with literary leaders such as Ezra Pound, W H Auden and W B Yeats. The imposing Portcullis House served as a perfect setting for the stimulating talk and discussion that followed.

Professor Sir Christopher Ricks's academic career, teaching in universities including Oxford, Cambridge, Bristol and America's Stanford, has led to him being named the most important living literary critic of our time. The audience was treated to a tour of Eliot's most famous poems and Sir Christopher's references to Eliot's poetic precursors, such as Tennyson, Dryden and Milton, enriched our understanding and provoked some interesting questions. A lively discussion, led by Sir Christopher, featured questions about Eliot's lesser known plays, inquiries about Sir Christopher's personal opinions on literature and literary theory and the significance of Eliot's socio-political contexts. Sir Christopher's witticisms and sharp sense of humour added colour to his account of the interesting friendship between the poet and ground-breaking economist, John Maynard Keynes, and the Pilgrim audience left the talk stimulated, engaged and almost ready to plunge head first into The Wasteland.

Dr Barbara Lauriat proposed the vote of thanks. A dinner after the talk at the nearby Red Lion with Professor Sir Christopher Ricks concluded a memorable 4th July evening.

EVENSONG AT ST PAUL'S CATHEDRAL

For Evensong on 17 October, St Paul's Cathedral kindly placed the Pilgrims in the stalls beyond the fine male choristers. The music director made his stately progress to the organ loft for the hymn and for the post-service piece.

Our guides' enthusiasm was much appreciated as we ascended the gentle steps to the triforium, the majestic upper 'road' where great beams and massive storage share space with the Trophy Room displays of Wren's Great Model and designs the authorities expected to be delivered, rather than the design Sir Christopher Wren kept hidden until a new set of monitors were in place.

The view from the 'BBC gallery' at the West End down the nave to the Altar and the American Chapel beyond is well known from televising great Cathedral events. The Geometric Staircase, held up apparently by hope as the physics looks improbable, is not a place for anyone dizzy. The Library and its Keeper hold treasures of special interest to Pilgrims, including the letter from Richard Nixon after his visit as Vice President.

We crossed the road to the kind drinks reception held by William and Susannah Garnett at Bates, Wells & Braithwaite, solicitors of good repute.

Sir Peter Bottomley MP

Sulgrave Manor Trust

In 1914 Harry Brittain, one of the founders of The Pilgrims, helped to rescue Sulgrave Manor, the ancestral home of George Washington's family in Northamptonshire. He was a member of the British Peace Centenary Committee which bought the Tudor Sulgrave Manor to commemorate the centenary of the signing of the Treaty of Ghent, the agreement ending the war of 1812 between Britain and the US. The house was restored and opened to the public as a symbol of the abiding friendship between the two nations. Harry Brittain sat on its Board of Governors.

The purchase and restoration was made possible by donations from some of the most influential people of the day, with the donor list headed by King George V and significant donations from Lord Rothschild, Lord Beaverbrook, Lord Cadogan, Gordon Selfridge and many more. In the US, the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America provided strong financial backing.

Now Sulgrave Manor is once again in need of support. Its endowment fund has not kept pace with the cost of maintenance and urgent repairs are needed. As a member of the Pilgrims and a trustee of the Sulgrave Manor Trust, I have a special interest in seeing this vivid, solid symbol of the deep ties between Britain and the United States preserved. We need at least £3,000,000 to repair the Manor, protect its collections and improve the site. Please consider donating to this cause.

I invite Pilgrims both in the US and the UK to visit Sulgrave Manor and see at first hand how well this building and its contents illuminate the historical influences which shaped the character of the Washington family. Private tours are available, and Sulgrave Manor can be hired for meetings and parties. Sulgrave Manor, Sulgrave, Banbury, OX17 2SD; 01295 760205.

For more information on visiting and donating, please visit: www.sulgravemanor.org.uk

Passion for Snow: Pilgrim member Stephen Waterhouse recently completed this award-winning documentary, based on his acclaimed book, Passion for Skiing.

The film highlights how enthusiasts from a single area of New Hampshire, and Dartmouth College, led the development of the modern alpine ski industry, helped create some five hundred major ski areas worldwide, supported the Winter Olympics and led the development of the Paralympics. The British ski historian, Dr John Allen, explains ski history. It is being shown in the US at film festivals, special screenings and via the PBS television network, and in Russia during the 2014 Winter Olympics and Paralympics. Stephen Waterhouse seeks contacts to show the film in London and on UK cable channels during 2014.

Queen Elizabeth II September 11th Garden is an oasis of green in the heart of Lower Manhattan which serves as a memorial to the citizens of Britain and the Commonwealth who lost their lives on 9/11 and celebrates the historic ties between the US, the UK and the Commonwealth. The Garden was intended to help revitalise the downtown area and provide a space for reflection close to Ground Zero. English landscape designers Julian and Isabel Bannerman, with adaptations by Lynden Miller, aimed to create a park for all seasons, where plants would capture the spirit and peace of an English garden.
